After being rushed to the ICU with a brain tumor, he slips into a coma. Tony isn't the kind of guy people would truly miss.

“He was determined and ever in search of the next advantage. That often required an outgoing and gregarious presence, broad smiles, eye contact and firm handshakes, not because of any true consideration, but because everyone potentially held information that would be valuable. . . . After a few halting attempts, he has concluded that friends of any depth were a bad investment. So little return.”

Waking up in a wasteland, Tony is greeted by a man claiming to be Jesus, and an old woman, the Holy Spirit. They help him discover who he truly is by sending him to experience life through others' eyes. Can people who normally would be useless to Tony be the key to his healing? Can his barren heart return to a lush garden? 304 pages, hardcover, FaithWords.
