MOTHER AND DAUGHTER REFLECT ON OMAHA BEACH.

Dear UCLA Alumni and Friends,

To fully comprehend World War II, one needs to understand its origins. In Europe, the journey to war began in the private meeting rooms and raucous public stadiums of Germany where the Nazis concocted and then promoted their designs for a new world order, one founded on conquest and racial-purity ideals.

As they launched the war by invading Poland on September 1, 1939, Hitler and his followers unleashed a hell that would cause immense suffering and leave the country vulnerable to Stalin's post-war ambitions for Soviet expansion. Through the German occupation and the following decades of Soviet oppression, the Polish people held strong in their push for freedom. World figures such as Ronald Reagan, Margaret Thatcher, and Pope John Paul II gave their support for a free Poland and bolstered the internal efforts of Lech Walesa, Władysław Bartoszewski, and many others inside Poland.

I invite you to join one of The National WWII Museum's most unique travel programs, Poland: Genocide, Resistance, and Uprisings. This poignant journey will trace the history of Poland from 1939 to the fall of communism and the rejuvenation of a country and its people. Our guests will travel through Poland, exploring historical sites and reflecting on how the Nazis rose to power and then brought destruction and misery to Europe. Visiting battlefields, museums, memorials, and interacting with locals, this tour immerses you in the expert storytelling of top local guides. Learn about World War II, European History, and Global Politics on this educational tour!

THE EXPERIENCE Kraków

Explore Kraków, which was included on UNESCO's first World Heritage list in 1978. Since the Tatar raids in the 13th century, the Old Town has remained mostly intact, making it the only large Polish city to escape the destruction of World War II. The tour day begins at St. Mary's Basilica followed by free time for an independent lunch in the Old Town Square. Rynek Główny in Polish, the square is known for its quaint cafés and excellent shopping. The afternoon includes a visit to the Wawel Castle, the seat of Polish kings for hundreds of years, and the gothic Wawel Cathedral, where Polish kings were crowned and buried for centuries. During the war, Hans Frank, Governor General of the occupied Polish territories, installed himself in the Wawel Castle. Calling himself the "King of Poland," he surrounded himself with stolen art including Leonardo Da Vinci's Lady with an Ermine and wielded his terrifying power over the population. Continue on a walking tour to Jagiellonian University, founded in 1364 by Casimir III the Great. Over the centuries, the university has educated some of Europe's most respected figures, including Nicolaus Copernicus, Pope John Paul II, and Nobel Prize-winning poet Wisława Szymborska. Take a stroll through the university's lovely botanical garden, which is more than 200 years old. Return to Old Town to visit Cloth Hall, which historically functioned as the main marketplace of the town. The evening is free to explore Kraków.

THE EXPERIENCE Auschwitz

Thirty-miles west of Kraków is the Polish town of Oswiecim, known to history by its German name: Auschwitz. The German occupiers took over this former army barracks in 1940 and populated it with Polish political prisoners. As the war continued, the Nazis expanded and refined the camp, imprisoning Jews from all over Europe or sending them on to their deaths at nearby Birkenau. The Martyrdom Museum at Auschwitz is a ghastly reminder of the inhumanity which humans are capable of. An evening on your own allows for reflection on today's touring.

THROUGH THEIR EYES

WŁADYSŁAW BARTOSZEWSKI
1922-2015

The Economist magazine called him “The Great Survivor,” others referred to him as the “Polish Schindler.” He is one of the only people in the world to have been commemorated twice at Yad Vashem as a “Righteous Gentile.” Whatever the label, Władysław Bartoszewski was a remarkable figure. He witnessed some of the worst horrors of World War II, and yet he dedicated his life to the goals of reconciliation between former foes with humor, empathy, and compassion.

Bartoszewski was born in Warsaw, Poland, in 1922. The son of a Roman Catholic banker, he grew up next to the Jewish Quarter with both Catholic and Jewish visitors to the house. On September 1, 1939, he awoke to the sound of bombs falling on Warsaw. Hitler had ordered the first mass terror bombing of the war, and 20,000 civilians died. Bartoszewski volunteered to work as a stretcher-bearer for the Red Cross.

Bartoszewski’s formal schooling ended with the German invasion. Nazi rule in Poland was highly oppressive: schools and universities were closed, along with newspapers, publishing houses, and virtually all other Polish institutions. Bartoszewski continued to work for the Red Cross as a clerk. In September 1940, the Germans began random roundups of men between the ages of 18 and 65. Bartoszewski was 18 years old when the Nazis arrived at his house. They stormed in, grabbed him, and put him on the second-ever transport to a small town in southern Poland where a new camp, Auschwitz, was being built. There, he was photographed, put in striped prison uniform, and given the number 4427.

Life in Auschwitz was intolerable. He watched as friends were beaten to death in front of him; he was forced into slave labor pulling a gigantic concrete roller; food was scarce. By the end of the first year, he had become desperately ill. The Red Cross intervened and arranged for Bartoszewski and a number of other prisoners to be released—something which would have been impossible later in the war. He returned to Warsaw sick and too weak to function. His old friend Hanka Czaki, who worked for the Polish Underground, came to see him as he recovered, and over some weeks wrote down his testimony about Auschwitz. It was sent to London and published in April 1942 by the Home Army as “Memoir of a Prisoner.” It was the first-ever eyewitness testimony published about Auschwitz, and it was the first warning to the Allies about what was happening to the victims in the new concentration camps in German-occupied Poland.

In the spring of 1942, Bartoszewski was interviewed by Jan Karski, a later recipient of the American Presidential Medal of Freedom. As a result of this meeting, Bartoszewski was invited to join the Polish Home Army in August 1942. Disturbed by the increasing brutality directed against the Jews, he became a founding member of The Council for Aid to Jews, code-named “Żegota.” This operation was funded from London and helped approximately 50,000 Jews in occupied Poland. The exact number of those aided who survived the war is unknown, but it is thought to be less than 20%. During the course of his work Bartoszewski and the Żegota organization supported well-known activists, including Irene Sendler, who saved 2,500 Jewish children, and the “Zookeeper” Jan Żabiński, who saved Jews by hiding them at the Warsaw Zoo. Aside from his work at Żegota, Bartoszewski personally saved dozens of Jews. As a result, he was honored at Yad Vashem both for his work with Żegota and for his own individual contributions. He was also made an honorary citizen of the State of Israel.

After the war, Bartoszewski was arrested and spent seven years in a Stalinist prison. Between 1963 and 1989, he worked in secret for Radio Free Europe. Given his links with the Solidarity movement activists, he was arrested again on December 13, 1981, when the Polish Communist Government declared martial law. When Poland finally threw off the communist yoke in 1989, Bartoszewski became Polish Ambassador to Austria, and then was twice made Polish Foreign Minister. He served as Secretary of State in the Polish Prime Minister’s Office until his death on April 24, 2015.

Władysław Bartoszewski suffered through the horrors of Nazism and Stalinism, and as a result, he was determined to be a witness to history. He wrote hundreds of books and articles, gave countless interviews, and supported initiatives to remember the war. He was Chairman of the International Auschwitz Committee, and he worked tirelessly to promote ties between Poland and Israel, and between Poland and Germany. He was truly a “great survivor.”

HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE

THE KATYN MASSACRE

Ten days before the German invasion of Poland and the start of World War II in Europe, Germany and the Soviet Union formalized a non-aggression pact. Embedded within the agreement was a partition of Poland. The Soviet Union would gain control of eastern Poland, Latvia, Estonia, and Finland. Nazi Germany would control western Poland, Lithuania, and Danzig. Free from the threat of Soviet intervention, Germany invaded Poland on September 1, 1939. The Red Army invaded Poland from the east on September 17, 1939. Poland's sovereignty was gone. The future of the Poles was now in the hands of two brutal dictators.

During the initial invasion, the Germans and Soviets captured thousands of Poles and sent them to various prisons and POW camps. Stalin, always paranoid and suspicious, knew there would be resistance to his regime, so he acted quickly against the Polish military prisoners. In March 1940, Stalin, along with five other members of the Politburo, ordered the execution of 25,000 prisoners.

Over the next two months, the Soviets executed tens of thousands of Polish prisoners and buried them in mass graves. The shootings took place in various areas; however, these executions became synonymous with the Katyn forest where a German officer discovered the first mass grave in 1943. The Nazis would then seize on the Katyn Massacre as a way to grow mistrust among the Allies.

Questions about the missing began in June 1941 during Operation Barbarossa when the Soviets and the Poles agreed to combat the Germans together. Polish General Władysław Anders, recently freed from prison, was assembling a force to counter the German advance. Anders asked the Soviets where he could find his fellow Polish officers. Stalin assured both Anders and Polish Prime Minister Władysław Sikorski that all of the Polish captives had previously been set free. Their whereabouts were simply unknown.

By 1943, the German gains in the east were crumbling, but Nazi propagandist Joseph Goebbels used the Katyn Massacre as an opportunity to wedge a divide between Poland, the Western Allies, and the Soviet Union. Goebbels gave strict instructions to broadcast the Katyn Massacre everywhere in Germany, and did so for weeks. The massacre was a useful opportunity to show the German people the horrors of the Bolsheviks while making Western Allies guilty by association.

Stalin vehemently denied the execution claims. Both Winston Churchill and Franklin Roosevelt felt that the more important issue was not the relationship between the Poles and the Soviets but instead, the relationship between the Western Allies and the Soviet Union. Sikorski met with Churchill privately to share proof that Stalin had ordered the executions. Churchill believed in the capacity of the Soviets to murder the Polish prisoners but assured Stalin that he would oppose any investigation into the killings. On the American side, Navy Lieutenant Commander George Earle produced a report that claimed that the Soviets were responsible for the Katyn Massacre, but President Roosevelt rejected the report and declared that Germany was responsible for the executions. There was a war to win, and the common enemy was Hitler.

The Katyn Massacre was a low point in Poland's history, but the country would endure more executions, ethnic cleansings, and massacres before the end of World War II. After the war, the Poles adjusted to an existence as a puppet state dominated by the Soviet Union. Under Soviet influence, responsibility for the Katyn Massacre still fell to Germany. For over four decades, the Poles suffered behind the Iron Curtain before they threw off their Communist government and transitioned to democracy. In 1990, the crumbling Soviet Union announced that its own forces carried out the killings. In 2010, the Russian Parliament officially condemned Stalin and his government for the Katyn Massacre.

Westerplatte

Poland's maritime city on the Baltic Sea, Gdańsk was first mentioned in historical documents in 997. In its millennium of existence, this venerable port city has changed hands numerous times – the prize in a long game of tug-of-war between Germany and Poland. This morning, visit Westerplatte, the place where the Germans fired the first shots of what became World War II. On September 1, 1939, a German battleship paying a “courtesy call” on Danzig began firing shells at the Polish garrison here. After lunch on your own and the option to take a walking tour of Gdańsk, visit the Museum of the Second World War. After ample time to explore the museum, your evening is free to enjoy dinner independently.

THE EXPERIENCE

Solidarity

Explore the post-war history of Poland during a visit to the European Solidarity Center. During World War II, Polish troops fought with distinction in Normandy, Italy, and throughout the Western and Eastern Fronts. However, the end of the war saw the country fall under the domination of the Soviet Union. By 1980, a string of protests against Soviet policies led to a strike in the Gdańsk Shipyard. The recognition of this strike led to a growing Solidarity movement that eventually sparked negotiations with the communist government of Poland. In 1989, elections resulted in a new government led by a Solidarity coalition. Lunch this afternoon is in the beachside resort of Sopot featuring the world's largest wooden pier. After exploring this picturesque resort, return to Gdańsk for an evening at leisure.

HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE WESTERPLATTE

ADOLF HITLER REVIEWING THE BATTLESHIP SMS SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN, HAMBURG, GERMANY, 1936.

By September 1939, signs of war signaled throughout the world. Japan's ambitions in China, Italy's conquest in Ethiopia, and Germany's territorial demands in Europe set the stage for the larger battles to come. Poland's leaders watched the world abandon Czechoslovakia at the negotiating table when Hitler demanded Czech territory. Taking steps to avoid a similar fate, Poland joined a military alliance with Britain and France in March 1939. Any attack on Poland would result in Germany going to war on two fronts.

Danzig proved to be the main point of contention between Germany and Poland prior to the outbreak of war. At the start of World War I, Danzig was part of the German Empire. Following Germany's defeat in World War I, Poland's borders shifted to the west, but Danzig did not transfer to Poland. With a population that was 90% German, Danzig became a free city. Feeling a connection to the citizens of Danzig, Germany petitioned Poland for a new highway across a Polish corridor to connect the Germans in both places. The population of Danzig began to emphasize their German ethnicity through politics.

In the 1930s, the Nazi Party in Danzig was growing rapidly. Citizens of Danzig resented the new Polish city of Gdynia to the north and felt that the Poles were shifting business and money away from Danzig. The Danzig Senate followed many of the policies laid out by Nazi Germany including the Nuremberg Race Laws. The Polish government felt that giving Germany easy access to Danzig would lead to increasing demands for territory from Hitler.

In August 1939, both sides prepared for conflict. Poland constructed fortifications and stationed sentries near Danzig. The German battleship SMS Schleswig-Holstein sailed into Danzig Harbor under the guise of a courtesy call on August 25. A series of false flag operations undertaken by Nazi Germany in late August led to the Schleswig-Holstein firing on a Polish garrison on the Westerplatte Peninsula. The first rounds hit just before 5:00 AM on September 1, 1939.

After the first shots, German marines ran from the Schleswig-Holstein and encountered an ambush by the Poles. After 30 minutes of action, the Germans withdrew. The Schleswig-Holstein fired for several more hours as the Germans regrouped. A second German attack failed to breach the Polish defenses. For the next six days, the Germans bombarded the Polish positions with naval, artillery, and air attacks. The Poles continued to resist the Germans in Westerplatte, even as the Germans were on the outskirts of Warsaw. On September 7, 1939, Polish Major Henryk Sucharski surrendered the garrison to the Germans.

Over 750,000 people were murdered at Treblinka, a total second only to Auschwitz. During an uprising inside the camp on August 2, 1943, approximately 200 prisoners managed to escape and several buildings were set on fire. The Nazis liquidated the camp in November 1943, and the grounds were made to look like a farm. In 1955, Treblinka became a memorial site paying tribute to all who died on the grounds.

SPOTLIGHT ON JANUSZ KORCZAK

On August 5, 1942, one of the most horrific scenes of the Nazi's assault on Warsaw's Jewish population took place. A line of 200 orphan children, with their caretaker Janusz Korczak leading the way, marched out of the Warsaw Ghetto to the Treblinka Extermination Camp. For the 64-year-old Korczak, this was the fulfillment of his promise to never abandon the children in his care.

Janusz Korczak was born Henryk Goldsmit, but took on his new name during his burgeoning career as a writer. As a child, he experienced a prosperous family life, but he contemplated as early as the age of five that he “was bothered by the thought of what I could do that there should be no dirty, hungry, ragged children like the ones with whom I was not allowed to play in the yard.”

As an adult, Korczak entered a life of service as a doctor, writer, and educator. In 1912, Korczak founded the Jewish orphanage Dom Sierot, a building he designed himself to promote his progressive educational ideals. Jewish orphans stayed for free and attended Polish public schools and Jewish Sabbath Schools. Many of the children Korczak cared for had come from rough backgrounds. Survival in the slums without parental figures had left them distrusting of authority and with many fears and anxieties. Korczak ran his orphanage upon a philosophy of mutual respect with the children, avoiding the rules and regulations that were more appropriate for a military barracks. He wrote, “too much worrying about one’s own peace-and-quiet or convenience leads to a proliferation of orders and prohibitions that are only ostensibly issued for ‘the good of the child.’”

After the Germans occupied Warsaw, life for the orphans was a constant struggle. Korczak moved the orphanage to several different addresses as the Ghetto boundaries narrowed. Sympathetic Poles tried to move Korczak to the “Aryan” side of Warsaw, but he refused to leave his children behind. When the Nazis came to place the children on the train bound for Treblinka, Korczak led them onto the train with his head held high. One eyewitness described the march, “it was a silent but organized protest against the murderers, a march like which no human eye had ever seen before.”

A monument to Janusz Korczak and his children is located within the Warsaw Jewish Cemetery.

Specific room/cabin assignments are within the sole discretion of the hotel or cruise line.

The Museum reserves the right to change the itinerary or trip features at any time and for any reason, with or without notice, and the Museum shall not be liable for any loss of any kind as a result of any such changes.
