Introduction

From the day of the establishment of CogniAstro, Founder Mr. Punit Pandey has made it his mission to always help people in taking the right decisions with the exact science of Astrology as his guide. CogniAstro is created to answer one of the most common questions that trouble people of all ages - career. Our career is an essential decision in life, and choosing the wrong one becomes not only a source of frustration but also impedes one's success. The most crucial suggestion; "do what you like to do"; is not always helpful since it is not easy to know precisely what one wants, especially at a young age. People often resort to various psychological tests for the answer but mostly they cause more confusion than giving clear directions. Mr. Pandey has followed the research of famous Swiss psychologist & founder of analytical psychology, Carl Jung to come up with the perfect blend of psychology and astrology for one of the most concise models of personality analysis and career counselling report.

“Astrology represents the sum of all the psychological knowledge of antiquity”

~ Carl Jung, Founder - Analytical Psychology

According to him,

"In my 30 years of experience in this field, I have realized that Astrology gives much more specific directions than any other method like psychology-based tests. Carl Jung understood the importance of Astrology early on, but, unfortunately, no scientific research has followed Jung's early studies.

Following his research, I have developed a model which gives a much better insight into an individual's personality and cognitive abilities. Without understanding these aspects, it is impossible to help somebody with Career Counselling. I believe this is ground-breaking research, and our CogniAstro Career Counselling tools will be the most accurate tools in this area in the future. [sic]"

Appendix-B: How To Search Your Top Career Choices

Now that you know your personality type and CogniAstro's recommendations for you, the next thing you need to do is to decide upon the field, in which you want to move forward. To do so, you will need to thoroughly research your top five recommended career choices and make the best career decision. And you need to give ample time for your research. Your career is one of the most significant decisions of your life. After completing your graduation at around 21 years of age, you spend more than 40 next years of your life working. Therefore, you need to be sure of your next steps and investing time into exploring what you think is going to pay you for years is a worthy investment.

Continually switching your career is not only a black mark in your resume, but it also leaves you unsatisfied, confused, and with a feeling of unrest. To attain success, stability, and monetary gains, you need to stick to one career option that helps you thrive. This report was created primarily to help those in need of proper guidance so that instead of wasting time in changing careers, they invest it in detailed research?

It makes much more sense to put effort into something that's going to cost you in the long run. There are three main ways to investigate your future career, and you should use all of them in order to take the best career decision for yourself. If you skip on these steps, you might waste several years of your life.

- Talk to people who are in the same field of your choice, and figure out if this is what you want.
- Visit the companies and workplaces where you can be spending years
- Do detailed research on each career choice over the internet, at a bookstore, or in the library

Talking to People in The Same Field

What is one of the best ways to find out which career suits you best? Speaking with the people already in that field, of course! You can talk to the people whom you know are already pursuing the career that you are hoping to be a part of. Learn from their experiences, list the pros and cons of the profession, and discover whether this is for you.

The method above is considered to be one of the fundamental forms of career research. The more you talk to people, the better you plan your career decision. If you are a little bit hesitant as to where to start, then you can speak with someone from your family, relatives, or acquaintances who have better knowledge about the profession you want to pursue in your life. People love to talk about their career or the work they do. You should speak with at least ten people who are successful in what they are doing or satisfied with their profession.

While conversing with these people, ask them what the challenges they face in this profession as well as be receptive to any advice or suggestion they offer, that you may need to keep in mind while considering that career.

Research on Internet, at a bookstore or in the library

One of the best places for research is either the internet or books. There is a myriad of websites on the internet, available on your fingertips, with ample information on all career clusters, options, and any relevant details that you may need concerning the same. Moreover, creating a profile on particular professional networking sites can help you connect with experienced people from your field, and you can talk to them, ask for suggestions and guidance on which specific jobs you should go after, what domains you should pursue, what obstacles and hurdles you can face in life, and how to overcome them.

In the same vein, there are numerous guide books available, that can help you understand your career better. You can refer to them and learn about the demands of the jobs that you are looking into, their scope, salary, your future in the field, and so on.

Appendix-C: The Six Fundamental Career Types Explained

In the diagram below, career types that are physically closer to each other show that your interests are closely aligned. Career types that are on the opposite side from each other or far apart show that you have interests in different areas. Such a combination could cause confusion, distraction, or obstacles, or it could also provide you with a unique career.

The Artistic and Conventional Conflict

The Conventional and Artistic career types are contrasting to each other and hence, can cause obstacles in looking for a job that suits both personality types. It seldom happens that someone achieves high scores in both of these career types because the career interests are so different.

Think of a person who has a keen interest in art, music, poetry, or dance - such a person is more of an artistic type. They may want to become a painter, writer, dancer, poet, musician, or so on. They possess self-expression, freedom, and creativity and prefer free schedules, no restrictions, no deadlines, and unstructured jobs. Showing up for work on time may be a challenge for them as they prefer uniqueness and spontaneity. Moreover, repetitive work becomes a cumbersome task for them. This (the artistic type) is the exact opposite of a Conventional person.

A Conventional type individual's interests lies in being a secretary, office manager, or accountant. They enjoy structured, repetitive work with stringent deadlines. For them, showing up for work on time is not an issue as they prefer keeping their world organized and structured. Such people are skillful, efficient, and dependable.

Realistic and Social: Minimal Conflict

The Realistic and Social career types are also opposites on this chart. However, this usually does not cause conflict because, despite a difference in their mode of approach, they both take a keen interest in working with people, which is useful in almost any line of work.

Investigative and Enterprising: Conflicts & Opportunities

The Enterprising and Investigative career types are the opposites of each other. The same is visible in the chart and obtaining high scores in both of these types is not a very common scenario. However, one should note that you will find such people (I & E type) creating new technologies and forming new companies. They can combine their knowledge of technology, science, and their business mind, a rare combination, and create and reach new heights while taking the world along with them.

People who score high in Investigative career types have a sharp technical mind. But, it is rare to find a person with excellent technical knowledge as well as a keen business intellect.

Appendix-D: Additional Career Planning Insights

- Having four to six different career interests is acceptable.
- We see many people looking for better jobs and better careers in their mid 20's, mid 30's, and mid 60's. Changing career interest is a normal part of life.
- Your interests change with time, as change is the only constant in life. However, since the CogniAstro Career Counselling Report depends on one's natal chart (kundali), hence though your career interests may change, your report won't.
- You can choose the profession you like, out of the cluster suggested to you. This way, even if you think of changing your job years down the road, you will still have a lot of alternatives to choose from, which suit you, and in which you will flourish.
- Changing a job or career can be a bit easier when you are at the age of 20's and 30's, it gets much more difficult as you grow older. Therefore, you should ponder and take your time before choosing.
