REGULAR SEASON - WEEK 17

WASHINGTON REDSKINS (8-6-1) vs. NEW YORK GIANTS (10-5)

Sunday, Jan. 1 | 4:25 p.m. ET

REDSKINS PURSUE PLAYOFF BERTH IN WEEK 17

The Washington Redskins enter Week 17 in pursuit of a playoff berth as the team prepares to host the New York Giants on New Year's Day. Kickoff at FedExField is scheduled for 4:25 p.m. ET.

Last week, the Redskins pushed their 2016 record to 8-6-1, guaranteeing the franchise back-to-back winning seasons for the first time since 1996-97. This week, the Redskins will attempt to secure a playoff berth in consecutive seasons for the first time since qualifying in three straight seasons from 1990-92.

The path to the postseason for Washington is relatively straightforward. The Redskins can earn the NFC's second Wild Card berth with a victory against the Giants followed by any result in the Detroit/Green Bay prime-time game other than a tie. Washington's berth would give the NFC East three playoff teams for the first time since 2007.

Kicker Dustin Hopkins was one of the stars of the Redskins' 29-27 win against New York in Week 3, going 5-for-5 on field goal attempts. With his next field goal, Hopkins can break Mark Moseley's team record (33 in 1983) for field goals in a single season.

ALUMNI CENTER

Formally organized in 1958, the Washington Redskins Alumni Association was the first organization of its kind in the country. The organization spearheaded the alumni movement among former professional football players and was the model for other alumni groups that later formed in all NFL cities. Now entering its 58th year, the Alumni Association continues to celebrate those who have contributed to more than eight decades of Redskins football dating back to the team's inception in 1932.

The primary objectives of the Redskins Alumni are promoting a continuing interest in current and past players of the Washington Redskins, as well as promoting and fostering interest and funding for charitable purposes. With respect to the latter, the alumni conduct fundraising events to raise money that can be donated to charitable organizations or used in other ways to help improve the quality of life for youth in the Greater Washington community.

Today, Redskins alumni continue to make their presence known throughout the community. As a very active chapter of the NFL Alumni Association, their motto is "Caring for Kids." In addition to the numerous events and appearances Redskins Alumni participate in throughout the year, they hold two major fundraising events of their own — the Redskins Alumni Charity Golf Classic, now in its 38th year, and the annual Washington Redskins Welcome Home Luncheon, now in its 55th year.

The alumni have an office at Redskins Park and can be reached at 703-726-7488. Since his arrival in Washington in December of 2009, President Bruce Allen has made it a priority to build a bridge to the franchise's historic past. During the Redskins' NFC East title-winning season in 2012, that mission came to the forefront as the team celebrated its 80th anniversary.

"This year, the Washington Redskins will be celebrating our 80th anniversary season. I'm proud to be with the franchise in our nation's capital, one with such a rich tradition and gloried past on and off the field," Allen said in a July 2012 column filling in for Sports Illustrated's Peter King. "The current Redskins players, coaches, fans and staff owe a big debt of gratitude to the people who have made the Redskins one of the flagship franchises in sports."

Throughout the 2012 offseason, the Redskins traversed the Washington D.C./Maryland/Virginia area as part of the team's 'Thank You Tour,' which brought players, coaches, alumni, cheerleaders, team officials and more to fans throughout the entire region to help celebrate the team's historic heritage.

That heritage continues to be honored amongst the game's elite, as in August 2011, former Redskin great Chris Hanburger was enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio. He was presented by his son, Chris. Hanburger was voted into the Hall after being a nominee of the seniors committee. In all, he waited 28 years to be elected.

Hanburger joined Darrell Green (2008), Art Monk (2008) and Russ Grimm (2010) to make four players who spent the majority of their careers with the Redskins to earn the honor in a four-year span. In addition, former Redskins Bruce Smith (2009) and Deion Sanders (2011) have also been elected over that time. Hanburger said of his election to the Hall of Fame: "It's wonderful, I'm overwhelmed. It's just such a tremendous honor to even be nominated, let alone be voted in. You have to think about all of the men that played before I did, certainly the men that I played with and against, and then you look at the guys playing now. It's just a select few that make it in. I was fortunate to play with players on the Redskins defense that made it all work for me."

On Wednesday, Aug. 31, the Washington Redskins Charitable Foundation and Redskins Alumni Association hosted the 55th annual Welcome Home Luncheon at the Hilton McLean in Tyson's Corner. The annual event celebrates the burgundy and gold and kicks off each football season with Redskins players, coaches and alumni.

The Redskins Welcome Home Luncheon is typically the only annual event where fans and corporate partners have the chance to spend time with the entire Redskins team. Each table is usually guaranteed at least one player or coach seated with the attendees. Proceeds from the event benefit the youth programs of the Washington Redskins Charitable Foundation and Redskins Alumni Association.

This year, the Redskins used the event to honor their players for contributions both on and off the field. Quarterback Kirk Cousins earned 2015 Bobby Mitchell Offensive Player of the Year presented by STS International, defensive end Chris Baker earned the 2015 Sam Huff Defensive Player of the Year presented by comScore and kicker Dustin Hopkins received the 2015 Mark Moseley Special Teams Player of the Year Award presented by MGM National Harbor. Other presented awards included the Redskins Salute Award presented by Lockheed Martin for efforts with the military and the Redskins Community Man of the Year presented by Washington-First Bank.

Also among the Redskins Alumni Association's premier events is the team's annual Alumni Homecoming celebration, which the Redskins hosted in Week 10 this season against the Minnesota Vikings. Not including staff and coaches, players in attendance during the weekend represented more than 650 combined seasons of Redskins service, 110 combined Super Bowl appearances, 69 combined Super Bowl titles, 34 members of the 80 Greatest Redskins, 23 Redskins Ring of Famers and nine Pro Football Hall of Famers.

This year, the Redskins used their 2016 Alumni Homecoming weekend to honor former General Manager Bobby Beathard with induction in the Ring of Fame. The honor was announced by President Bruce Allen during training camp at the Bon Secours Washington Redskins Training Center in Richmond.

Beathard's illustrious career as an NFL executive included 11 seasons as General Manager of the Redskins from 1978-88. After taking the job on Feb. 24, 1978, Beathard guided the organization to three Super Bowl appearances, including victories in Super Bowls XVII and XXII. Many of the players he acquired remained on the roster for the team's Super Bowl XXVI victory as well.

In Beathard's 11 seasons as General Manager, the Redskins averaged 9.5 wins a year. The team posted a regular season winning percentage of .625 (105-63) in that time frame, best in the NFC and second-best in the NFL. No team in that time frame posted a better postseason winning percentage than the Redskins, who went 11-3 in postseason play in his tenure for a winning percentage of .786.

"This is a wonderful occasion for us, and a real honor to be brought back here by Bruce and Dan," Beathard said in August. "Of all the years I was in the NFL, this organization has been the most supportive and the most fun. I've never been with an organization who has done this much for the people in it at present and the people who were in it in the past."

PRO BOWL BOUND

On Dec. 20, the National Football League announced that linebacker Ryan Kerrigan, tight end Jordan Reed, guard Brandon Scherff and tackle Trent Williams have all been selected to the 2017 Pro Bowl. The annual contest of the NFL's best will take place Sunday, Jan. 29, 2017, at Camping World Stadium in Orlando, Fla.

In addition, returner Jamison Crowder, quarterback Kirk Cousins and cornerback Josh Norman were selected as alternates.

The Redskins' four selections for the 2016 season are the team's most since 2012 (five). With the selections this year, the Redskins have now had at least one Pro Bowl player for 23 straight seasons. The only year Washington has not had a Pro Bowler in the game's history was 1993.

Kerrigan's selection is the second of his career and his first since 2012. His selection marks the sixth season in the last eight years that at least one Redskins linebacker has earned Pro Bowl honors.

Kerrigan has started all 95 regular season games for Washington since being selected with the No. 16 overall pick in the 2011 NFL Draft. His 95 consecutive starts are the second-longest active streak among NFL linebackers, trailing only Pittsburgh's Lawrence Timmons.

For his career, Kerrigan has recorded 58.5 sacks, third-most by a member of the Redskins since the NFL adopted sacks as an official statistic in 1982. He is only the fifth player in NFL history to open a career with at least 7.5 sacks in each of his first six seasons, joining Jared Allen, Derrick Thomas, DeMarcus Ware and Reggie White.

This season, Kerrigan, 28, has recorded 11.0 sacks and two forced fumbles. With a 13.5-sack performance in 2013 and his 11.0 sacks in 2016, he became the fifth member of the Redskins to post multiple 10-sack seasons since 1982 (Dexter Manley, 4; Charles Mann, 4; Andre Carter, 2; Brian Orakpo, 2).

Reed's selection is the first of his career and the first by a Redskins tight end since Chris Cooley in 2008. Reed joins Cooley (2007-08), Stephen Alexander (2000), Jean Fugett (1977) and Jerry Smith (1967 and 1969) as the only Redskins tight ends to earn Pro Bowl honors since the game's inception in 1950.

In 45 career games with 22 starts since being drafted by the Redskins in the third round (No. 85 overall) of the 2013 NFL Draft, Reed has compiled 243 career receptions for 2,562 yards with 19 receiving touchdowns. In Week 4 this season, Reed recorded his 200th career reception in his 38th career game, becoming the fastest tight end to reach 200 career receptions in NFL history, surpassing Pro Football Hall of Famer Kellen Winslow.

This season, Reed, 26, has recorded 61 receptions for 646 yards with five touchdowns despite being limited to 11 games. Reed leads all NFL tight ends in receptions per game in 2016 (5.5).

Scherff's selection is the first of his career and the first by an interior Redskins lineman since guard Tré Johnson's selection in 1999. Including both Scherff and Williams, this year will mark the first time the Redskins have had multiple offensive linemen selected to the Pro Bowl in the same season since 1991 (tackle Jim Lachey and guard Mark Schlereth).

Scherff, 24, has started all 30 regular season games for Washington since being selected with the fifth overall pick of the 2015 NFL Draft. Scherff can join Jon Jansen and Chris Samuels as the only offensive linemen in team history to start 16 games in each of their first two NFL seasons.

Williams' selection is the fifth of his career and his fifth consecutive selection since 2012. His selection this season is the 18th by a Redskins offensive tackle since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger, including selections by Chris Samuels (2001-02, 05-08), Jim Lachey (1990-91), Mark May (1988) and Joe Jacoby (1983-86). Between Williams and Samuels, Redskins left tackles have been selected to nine of the last 12 Pro Bowls.

With his fifth consecutive selection, Williams joins safety Ken Houston (seven straight from 1973-79) and linebacker Chris Hanburger (five straight from 1972-76) as the only members of the Redskins since 1970 to earn Pro Bowl honors in five straight seasons.

Williams, 28, is in his sixth season as an offensive captain for the Redskins and has been among the league's top left tackles since being selected with the No. 4 overall pick in the 2010 NFL Draft. He has played 96 career regular season games with the Redskins with 95 starts.

This season, Williams and Scherff have helped anchor an offensive line that ranks third in the NFL in sacks allowed (19) and has helped the Redskins' offense average 6.46 yards per play this season. The duo have contributed to units that have allowed quarterback Kirk Cousins to set team records in passing yardage in each of the past two seasons.

WHAT TO WATCH FOR THIS WEEK

- » The Redskins earning their 25th postseason berth in franchise history.
- » The Redskins qualifying for postseason play in back-to-back seasons for the first time since a three-year streak from 1990-92.
- » The Redskins attempting to qualify for the playoffs after an 0-2 start for the second time in team history (1984).
- » The Redskins becoming the first team since the 2003 Philadelphia Eagles to qualify for the playoffs after opening a season 0-2 with both losses at home.
- » The Redskins winning their ninth game of the season to give the franchise nine wins in consecutive campaigns for the first time since a four-year stretch from 1989-92.
- » The Redskins recording their fifth home win this season. It would give the Redskins at least five home wins in back-to-back seasons for the first time since the 1996-97 seasons.
- » The Redskins improving to 4-2 in NFC East play this season. It would give the Redskins at least four division wins in consecutive seasons for the first time since 1996-97 (both seasons in which the team played eight divisional games). The Redskins would post divisional winning percentages of .667 or better in back-to-back years for the first time since the 1982-83 seasons.
- » The Redskins and Giants meeting for the 170th time, including postseason play. The Giants are the Redskins' most common opponent.
- » The Redskins scoring 20 points in an eighth consecutive division game, dating back to Week 16 of the 2015 season. It would be the team's first eight-game streak with 20 points or more against NFC East foes since a nine-game streak across the 1999-2000 seasons.
- » The Redskins sweeping a season series with the Giants for the first time since 2011.
- » The Redskins attempting to earn a second consecutive home victory against the Giants for the first time since winning two straight across the 2011-12 seasons.
- » The Redskins improving upon their 46-36-2 all-time in regular season finales.
- » The Redskins seeking victories in consecutive regular season finales for the first time since the 2004-05 seasons.
- » The Redskins (6,170) gaining 84 yards to break the franchise record for total net yards in a single season (6,253 in 1989).
- » The Redskins (6.46) setting a single-season team record for yards per play (6.17 in 2012). The Redskins' current yards per play average this season ranks ninth in the NFL since the 1970 merger.
- » The 2016 Redskins (411.3) attempting to become the first team in franchise history to average 400 yards per game. The Redskins can accomplish the feat with 230 more yards in Week 17.
- » The Redskins adding to their current team record by exceeding 300 yards of offense in a 20th consecutive regular season game, dating back to last season.
- » The Redskins setting a team record with their ninth 400-yard game of the season. The team's eight 400-yard games this year are currently tied with the 2013 squad for the most in a single season in team history.
- » The Redskins improving upon their team-record three 500-yard games this season.
- » The Redskins recording their fourth 500-yard game this season to tie for the sixth-most in a season in NFL history.
- » The Redskins (385) completing two passes to break the team record for completions in a single season (386 in 2015).
- » The Redskins (329) tallying 25 first downs to break the team record for total first downs in a season (353 in 1983).

- » The Redskins (212) recording six passing first downs to break the team record for passing first downs in a single season (217 in 1989).
- » The Redskins (572) attempting 40 passes to break the team record for pass attempts in a season (611 in 2013).
- » The Redskins attempting to feature multiple 1,000-yard receivers for the first time since 1999 (Albert Connell and Michael Westbrook). The Redskins have three receivers within 175 yards of the mark: DeSean Jackson (971), Pierre Garçon (945) and Jamison Crowder (831). If all three meet the mark, it would be only the second time in team history the Redskins have had three 1,000-yard receivers (Gary Clark, Art Monk and Ricky Sanders in 1989).
- » The Redskins' next 1,000-yard receiver recording the 29th 1,000-yard receiving season in team history.
- » The Redskins recording a sack in a 24th consecutive regular season game, dating back to last season. Washington's active streak ranks first in the NFC and second in the NFL (Cincinnati, 28).
- » The Redskins pushing a regular season sack streak to 24 games for the first time since a 30-game span across the 2008-10 seasons.
- » The Redskins recording a sack to give the team at least one sack in every game this season, the franchise's first such accomplishment since 2009. It would mark the seventh time the team has accomplished the feat since sacks became an official statistic in 1982 (1982, 1983, 1985, 1986, 1996 and 2009).
- » The Redskins (37) recording three sacks to record the team's first 40-sack season since 2011.
- » The Redskins posting multiple interceptions in consecutive games for the first time since Weeks 8-9 of the 2013 season.
- » The Redskins (+3) finishing back-to-back seasons with a positive turnover differential for the first time since a three-year stretch across the 1995-97 seasons. The Redskins were +5 in the category in 2015.
- » The Redskins turning the ball over zero times in back-to-back games for the second time this season (Weeks 11-12).
- » Head Coach Jay Gruden becoming the first Redskins coach to guide the team to consecutive postseason berths since Pro Football Hall of Famer Joe Gibbs in 1990-92.
- » Gruden joining Pro Football Hall of Famers Ray Flaherty, George Allen and Joe Gibbs as the only coaches in team history to guide the team to at least two postseason berths in the first three seasons of a head coaching tenure.
- » Gruden winning his 22nd game with the Redskins to take sole possession of eighth-most in team history.
- » Safety Will Blackmon picking off a pass in back-to-back games for the first time in his career.
- » Cornerback Bashaud Breeland adding to his career-high three interceptions this season.
- » Breeland intercepting a pass in back-to-back games for the first time since Weeks 5-6 of the 2015 season.
- » Breeland or Josh Norman picking off two passes to become the first member of the Redskins since Darrell Green (two in 1993) to record multiple games with two or more interceptions in a single season. He would become the first member of the Redskins to post consecutive multi-interception games since Paul Krause in Weeks 11-12 of the 1964 season.
- » Quarterback Kirk Cousins entering the game third in NFL history in completion percentage (65.9). Cousins reached the 1,500-attempt threshold needed to qualify in Week 16 at Chicago.
- » Cousins adding to his team record 4,630 passing yards this season.

» Cousins throwing for 370 yards to record the first 5,000-yard passing season in team history. Excluding other quarterbacks whose 2016 seasons may qualify pending the results of Week 17, it would be the ninth 5,000-yard season in NFL history.

» Cousins (308.7) attempting to become the first quarterback in team history to average 300 passing yards per game in a season. Cousins can accomplish the feat with 170 more yards in Week 17. The previous record was 269.1, set by Mark Rypien in 1989.

» Cousins setting a new team record with his eighth 300-yard passing game this season. Cousins holds the existing team record with seven 300-yard passing games in both 2015 and 2016.

» Cousins adding to his team records for career 300-yard passing games (19, including 18 in regular season play) and 400-yard passing games (three).

» Cousins (two) adding to his team record for 400-yard passing games in a single season.

» Cousins recording his third 400-yard passing game this season to tie Philip Rivers (2013), Tony Romo (2012), Eli Manning (2011) and Dan Marino (1986) for the third-most 400-yard games in a single season in NFL history.

» Cousins (24) throwing a touchdown pass to register the seventh 25-touchdown passing season in team history, joining Sonny Jurgensen (31 in 1967), himself (29 in 2015), Joe Theismann (29 in 1983), Jurgensen (28 in 1966), Mark Rypien (28 in 1991) and Sammy Baugh (25 in 1947).

» Cousins starting his 16th regular season game for a second consecutive season to join Jason Campbell (2008-09), Mark Rypien (1991-92) and Joe Theismann (1983-84) as the only quarterbacks in team history to start 16 games in back-to-back seasons.

» Cousins (nine) rushing for a touchdown to tie Joe Theismann (10) for the second-most career rushing touchdowns by a Redskins quarterback.

» Cousins rushing for a touchdown in consecutive games for the first time since Weeks 14-15 of the 2015 season.

» Wide receiver Jamison Crowder entering the game as the NFL's leader in punt return average (13.1). He will attempt to become the first member of the Redskins to lead the NFL in punt return average since Brian Mitchell in 1994 (14.1).

» Crowder (831) accruing 169 receiving yards in 2016 to become the fourth member of the Redskins to post a 1,000-yard receiving season within the first two years of an NFL career (Gary Clark in 1986, Charlie Brown in 1983 and Rod Gardner in 2002).

» Crowder (seven in 2016) becoming the first Redskins wide receiver with eight touchdown receptions in a single season since Santana Moss in 2012. (Tight end Jordan Reed had 11 touchdown receptions in 2015.)

» Crowder (seven in 2016) catching two touchdowns to become the first member of the Redskins to record nine touchdown receptions in a single season within the first two years of an NFL career.

» Crowder (nine) recording his 10th career touchdown reception to become the fifth member of the Redskins to compile 10 touchdown receptions in the first two seasons of an NFL career (Charlie Brown, 16; Chris Cooley, 13; Gary Clark, 12; Rod Gardner, 12).

» Crowder tying a single-season team record with his second punt return touchdown of the season (Brian Mitchell in 1991 and 1994, Mike Nelms in 1981, Bert Zagers in 1957 and John Williams in 1952).

» Tight end Vernon Davis (503) chasing Dallas Clark and Frank Wycheck (505 each) for 10th on the NFL's list of career receptions by a tight end.

» Davis adding to his 57 career touchdown receptions, eighth most of any tight end in NFL history.

» Davis catching three touchdowns to tie former Redskins great

Jerry Smith (60) for sixth-most touchdowns by a tight end in NFL history.

» Wide receiver Pierre Garçon extending his streak of consecutive regular season games played with a reception to 102, the fifth-longest active streak in the NFL (Larry Fitzgerald, 194; Brandon Marshall, 159; Steve Smith Sr., 142; Michael Crabtree, 110). Seventy-three of the games in Garçon's streak have come with Washington, the third-longest streak by a member of the Redskins since the 1970 merger.

» Garçon (945) gaining 55 receiving yards to reach 1,000 receiving yards this season.

» Garçon (21) chasing No. 11 Rod Gardner (22) and No. 10 Michael Westbrook (24) on the team's career receiving touchdowns list.

» Kicker Dustin Hopkins adding to his existing single-season career highs in field goals (33) and points (134).

» Jackson setting a Redskins record by recording a fourth consecutive 100-yard receiving game.

» Jackson [12] recording his 13th 100-yard receiving game with the Redskins to move past Michael Westbrook [12] for sole possession of seventh-most in team history.

» Jackson [46] scoring four receiving touchdowns to reach 50 career receiving touchdowns.

» Jackson [four] scoring his fifth career receiving touchdown of 80 yards or more to tie NFL records set by Derrick Alexander, Lance Alworth, Bob Hayes and Jerry Rice.

» Jackson [22] recording a 60-plus-yard touchdown (including returns) to tie Jerry Rice [23] for the most total touchdowns of 60 yards or more in NFL history.

» Jackson [26] recording a 50-plus-yard touchdown to tie Terrell Owens [27] for third in total touchdowns of 50 yards or more (including returns) in the NFL since the 1970 merger.

» Running back Robert Kelley [six] chasing Nos. 3 Don Bosseler and Robert Griffin III (seven each) and No. 2 Skip Hicks (eight in 1998) on the team's list of rushing touchdowns by a rookie.

» Kelley [671] staying atop the Redskins' leaderboard for rushing yards in 2016 to mark the third time in the last six seasons that a rookie has led the Redskins in rushing (Alfred Morris in 2012, Roy Helu Jr. in 2011).

» Linebacker Ryan Kerrigan becoming the first member of the Redskins to start all 16 games in each of the first six seasons of an NFL career since the adoption of the 16-game schedule in 1978. (Note: Jon Jansen started all 16 games in the first six seasons in which he played from 1999-2005 but missed the 2004 season with an injury).

» Kerrigan starting his 96th consecutive game, the second-longest active streak among active NFL linebackers. Kerrigan has not missed a start in his NFL career.

» Kerrigan [58.5] posting 1.5 sacks to become the third member of the Redskins to record 60.0 sacks since the NFL adopted sacks as an official statistic in 1982 (Dexter Manley and Charles Mann).

» Kerrigan [11.0] recording 2.5 sacks to tie his single-season career high of 13.5 sacks, set in 2014.

» Kerrigan [11.0] chasing Nos. 8 Dave Butz [11.5 in 1983] and Charles Mann [11.5 in 1991] and No. 7 Marco Coleman [12.0 in 2000] on the team's list of sacks in single season since 1982.

» Linebacker Trent Murphy adding to his career-high 8.0 sacks this season after entering the year with 6.0 sacks in his first two NFL seasons from 2014-15.

» Murphy [8.0] recording two sacks to give the Redskins multiple players with 10.0 sacks in a single season for the first time since 2009 (Andre Carter and Brian Orakpo, 11.0 each).

» Cornerback Josh Norman [three] tying his single-season career high with his next interception [four in 2015].

» Norman recording an interception in back-to-back games for the first time since Weeks 3-4 of the 2015 season.

» Norman [two] matching his single-season career high with his next forced fumble [three in 2015].

» Tight end Jordan Reed [243] catching two passes to move past Don Warren [244] in team history for third-most career receptions by a tight end and 12th-most career receptions by any player.

» Reed [243] recording seven receptions to become the 12th player to catch 250 career passes as a member of the Redskins.

» Reed [19] catching a touchdown to become the 16th player in team history to record 20 touchdown receptions with the Redskins.

» Reed [19] catching a touchdown to surpass Clint Didier [19] for sole possession of fourth-most by a tight end in Redskins history.

» Reed [19] chasing Jean Fugett [21] for third-most receiving touchdowns by a tight end in Redskins history.

» Reed [six] scoring multiple receiving touchdowns to move past Santana Moss [six] for sole possession of the sixth-most games with multiple touchdown receptions by a member of the Redskins since 1960.

» Guard Brandon Scherff starting his 16th game this season to join Chris Samuels (2000-01) and Jon Jansen (1999-2000) as the only Redskins offensive linemen to open their careers by starting 16 games in each of their first two NFL seasons.

A WIN WOULD

... improve the Redskins to 9-6-1 this season.

... potentially qualify the Redskins for their 25th postseason berth in team history and give them back-to-back berths for the first time since a three-year streak from 1990-92.

... give the franchise nine wins in consecutive campaigns for the first time since a four-year stretch from 1989-92.

... push the Redskins to 5-3 at home this season and give the Redskins at least five home wins in back-to-back seasons for the first time since the 1996-97 seasons.

... improve the Redskins to 4-2 in NFC East play this season and give them at least four division wins in consecutive seasons for the first time since 1996-97 (both seasons in which the team played eight divisional games).

... sweep the season series against the Giants for the Redskins for the first time since 2011.

... represent home victories for the Redskins against the Giants in back-to-back years for the first time since the 2011-12 seasons.

HEAD COACH JAY GRUDEN

Jay Gruden is in his third season with the Washington Redskins in 2016 after being named the 29th head coach in franchise history on January 9, 2014.

Previously a decorated quarterback in the college and Arena Football League ranks and a successful NFL assistant, Gruden showcased his offensive acumen honed from his diverse football background in his first two years with the Redskins.

In 2015, Gruden led the Redskins to an NFC East Championship, posting a 9-7 record to complete the second “worst-to-first” turnaround in team history. Gruden became the sixth coach in team history to lead the Redskins to a playoff berth within the first two years at the helm, joining Ray Flaherty, Dutch Bergman, Dudley DeGroot, George Allen and Joe Gibbs.

Under Gruden’s guidance, the 2015 Redskins featured one of the most prolific passing attacks in franchise history. Quarterback Kirk Cousins, named the starter in the middle of the preseason, set single-season team records for attempts (543), completions (379), passing yards (4,166) and 300-yard passing games (seven) while throwing 29 touchdown passes, including at least one in all 16 games. Cousins’ success coincided with the emergence of third-year tight end Jordan Reed, who finished the season with 87 receptions for 952 yards (both team records for a tight end) with 11 receiving touchdowns.

Gruden assumed control of the Redskins in 2014 and guided the team through a campaign in which three different quarterbacks (Robert Griffin III, Kirk Cousins and Colt McCoy) recorded victories as starters. He installed an offensive system that produced two Pro Bowlers in his first season as tackle Trent Williams and running back Alfred Morris earned repeat berths.

Excluding interim coaches, Gruden, 46 at the time of his hiring, became the team’s youngest head coaching hire since hiring eventual Pro Football Hall of Famer Joe Gibbs at 40 years of age in 1981. He became the first Redskins head coach hired directly from an offensive coordinator role on another team since Norv Turner in 1994.

Before joining the Redskins, Gruden spent his previous three seasons as offensive coordinator for the Cincinnati Bengals. In his tenure in Cincinnati, the Bengals averaged 10 wins a season, making three consecutive playoff appearances and earning an AFC North championship in 2013. Members of the Bengals’ offense accounted for seven Pro Bowl selections in his three seasons in Cincinnati.

Gruden was tasked with the development of quarterback Andy Dalton, a 2011 second-round pick. In three seasons together, Gruden helped Dalton to a 30-18 regular season record as a starter (.625), as Dalton’s 30 wins in that time frame ranked tied for fifth-most among NFL quarterbacks. Dalton’s 80 passing touchdowns rank third-most in NFL history for a quarterback in his first three seasons, trailing only Dan Marino (98) and Peyton Manning (85).

Prior to joining the Bengals, Gruden served two years with the Florida Tuskers of the United Football League from 2009-10. In 2009, Gruden served as offensive coordinator as the Tuskers compiled a 6-0 regular season record and earned a UFL championship game berth. In 2010, he assumed the roles of head coach and general manager and led the Tuskers to their second consecutive championship game appearance.

Gruden coached for seven seasons (2002-08) with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, earning a Super Bowl championship ring as an offensive assistant in 2002. There he worked under his brother, Jon (then the Bucs’ head coach), and current Redskins President Bruce Allen (the Bucs’ general manager from 2004-08). Gruden helped guide the Buccaneers to the team’s first league championship, a 48-21 victory in Super Bowl XXXVII.

Gruden also ranks among the most outstanding players and coaches in the history of the Arena Football League, having won six combined league championships – four as a quarterback and two as a head coach. Gruden played quarterback (2002-03) and served as head coach (2004-08) of the AFL’s Orlando Predators while simultaneously working as an offensive assistant with the Buccaneers. In all, Gruden served as head coach of the Predators for nine seasons (1998-2001 and 2004-08), leading the Predators to four championship game appearances and two league titles as a coach. During a two-year hiatus from coaching the Predators in 2002-03, he returned to the playing field as Orlando’s quarterback, leading the Predators to playoff appearances in both seasons.

In his eight seasons as a player in the AFL, Gruden completed 1,673-of-2,775 passes (60.3 percent) for 21,578 yards with 398 touchdowns and 99 interceptions. In addition to his time with Orlando, he spent six seasons (1991-96) at quarterback for the Tampa Bay Storm, winning four AFL titles and being named MVP of ArenaBowl VII in 1993. He was also named the 1992 AFL Most Valuable Player and was honored with induction into the AFL Hall of Fame in 1999.

Gruden played quarterback for four seasons for former Redskins draft pick Howard Schnellenberger at the University of Louisville (1985-88) and was a two-time team MVP.

Gruden was born March 4, 1967, in Tiffin, Ohio. He and his wife, Sherry, have three sons – J.J., Joey and Jack – and a grandson, Trey.

NOTES FROM LAST GAME

» The Redskins defeated the Chicago Bears, 41-21, in front of an announced crowd of 57,953 people at Soldier Field on Saturday.

» The Redskins improved to 8-6-1 this season and have secured a winning record in back-to-back seasons for the first time since 1996-97.

» The Redskins finished the regular season 4-3-1 on the road, giving Washington four road wins in a season for the first time since 2012 [five].

» The Redskins gained 478 net yards, including 270 passing yards and 208 rushing yards.

» With the performance, the Redskins (6,170) broke 6,000 net yards this season, reaching the mark for the fourth time in team history (1983, 1989 and 2012).

» The 2016 Redskins' 6,170 net yards this season rank second in team history and are 83 yards shy of matching the team record set in 1989 (6,253).

» The Redskins tied a team record with their eighth 400-yard game this season, matching the mark set by the 2013 squad.

» The Redskins added to their current team record by exceeding 300 yards of offense in a 19th consecutive regular season game, dating back to last season.

» The Redskins recorded their second 200-yard rushing game this season, joining a 230-yard effort vs. Philadelphia in Week 6.

» The Redskins rushed for a season-high four touchdowns, marking the team's first game with four rushing touchdowns since Week 9 of the 2013 season vs. San Diego.

» The Redskins (4,512) broke the team record for net passing yardage in a single season (4,349 in 1989).

» The Redskins' 41 points were one shy of their season high (42 vs. Green Bay) and marked the fourth 40-point performance of the Jay Gruden era.

» The Redskins held the Bears without a sack. The Bears entered the day ranking fourth in the NFL this season with 37 sacks.

» The sack-free game was the Redskins' fourth of the season, the team's most since 2006 [six].

» The Redskins finished the game with a plus-five turnover margin, the team's largest since a plus-five margin in Week 17 of the 2005 season at Philadelphia.

» The Redskins recorded five interceptions. The game marked the Redskins' first with multiple interceptions since Week 3 at the New York Giants.

» The Redskins' five interceptions were the team's most since Nov. 29, 1992, vs. the Phoenix Cardinals [five].

» Cornerback Bashaud Breeland recorded his first career multi-interception game, picking off Bears quarterback Matt Barkley twice.

» With his second and third interceptions of the season, Breeland became the first member of the Redskins since Fred Smoot (2001-03) to open a career with multiple interceptions in three straight seasons.

» After a second-quarter interception, Breeland recorded his second interception of the game – his career-high third of the season – on a deflected pass in the third quarter.

» Breeland also recorded his first career kickoff return in the second quarter, gaining 18 yards.

» Cornerback Josh Norman recorded his second interception of the season in the third quarter.

» Norman added another interception in the fourth quarter, marking his 10th career interception.

» Between Breeland and Norman, the Redskins had multiple players record multiple interceptions in a single game for the first time in records available dating back to 1960.

» Safety Will Blackmon recorded his first interception of the season – the fourth of his career – in the fourth quarter.

» Blackmon returned the interception a career-long 79 yards, the Redskins' longest interception since a 92-yard return by DeAngelo Hall in a game also played against the Bears at Soldier Field on Oct. 24, 2010.

» Quarterback Kirk Cousins completed 18-of-29 passes for 270 yards with one touchdown and no interceptions for a passer rating of 104.1. He also set career highs in rushing yards (30) and rushing touchdowns (two) on a career-high-tying five rushing attempts.

» Cousins pushed his team record for passing yards this season to 4,630.

» Cousins threw a touchdown pass in his 18th consecutive road game, tying Joe Theismann for the longest streak of road games with a passing touchdown (18 from 1982-85).

» Cousins scored his third rushing touchdown of the season on a nine-yard run in the second quarter and added his fourth on a one-yard plunge in the third quarter.

» With the two rushing touchdowns, Cousins tied Sammy Baugh (nine) for the third-most career rushing touchdowns by a Redskins quarterback.

» The performance by Cousins marked the first time a Redskins quarterback has rushed for two touchdowns in a game since Robert Griffin III in Week 6 of the 2012 season vs. Minnesota.

» Cousins became the second quarterback in NFL history to record 4,000 passing yards and four rushing touchdowns in consecutive seasons (Aaron Rodgers, 2008-09).

» On his 14th completion of the game, a 13-yard third down conversion to tight end Vernon Davis, Cousins (384) eclipsed his own team record for completions in a single season (379 in 2015).

» On his 15th completion of the game, Cousins became the sixth player in team history to record 1,000 career completions with the team.

» With his second pass of the game, Cousins broke his own single-season team record for passing attempts in a single season (543 in 2015).

» Cousins recorded a 13-yard rush in the first quarter, his second-longest rush of the season, trailing only a 19-yard touchdown run at Detroit.

» Wide receiver DeSean Jackson led the Redskins in receptions (five) and receiving yards (114).

» Jackson (10) recorded his 12th 100-yard receiving game with the Redskins to tie Michael Westbrook (12) for seventh-most in team history.

» Jackson tied the Redskins' team record by recording three consecutive 100-yard receiving games for the first time in his career. Prior to Jackson, the feat had been accomplished most recently by Santana Moss in Weeks 5-7 of the 2005 season.

» Jackson recorded a 57-yard reception in the first quarter. It was his 37th career reception of 50 yards or more, the most by any player since Jackson entered the NFL in 2008.

» The 57-yarder to Jackson came on Cousins' 1,500th career pass attempt. Cousins became the seventh player to attempt 1,500 passes with the Redskins.

» Wide receiver Pierre Garçon extended his streak of consecutive regular season games played with a reception to 101, the fifth-longest active streak in the NFL (Larry Fitzgerald, 193; Brandon Marshall, 158; Steve Smith Sr., 141; Michael Crabtree, 109). Seventy-three of the games in Garçon's streak have come with Washington, the third-longest streak by a member of the Redskins since the 1970 merger.

» Garçon recorded a 46-yard reception in the second quarter, his second-longest reception of the season, trailing a 70-yard touchdown reception vs. Green Bay.

» Running back Chris Thompson recorded the first multi-touchdown game of his career, rushing three times for 20 yards with a rushing touchdown and catching one pass for a 17-yard touchdown reception.

» Thompson recorded his third rushing touchdown on the season on a seven-yard run in the first quarter. He added his second receiving touchdown of the season on 17-yard catch and run later in the quarter.

» Thompson became the first member of the Redskins to score a rushing touchdown and a receiving touchdown in the same quarter since Kelvin Bryant in the second quarter at Dallas on Oct. 9, 1998.

» Running back Mack Brown recorded his first career rushing attempts, gaining a team-high 82 yards on eight carries including a 61-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter.

» With Brown's 61-yard run and running back Robert Kelley's 66-yard run against Green Bay in Week 11, the Redskins have now had multiple running backs record a 60-yard run in the same season for the first time in records available dating back to 1994.

» Linebacker Preston Smith blocked a 22-yard field goal attempt by Chicago in the first quarter.

» The field goal block was the first of Smith's career and the Redskins' first since Nov. 4, 2012 [DeAngelo Hall vs. Carolina].

» Smith added a five-yard sack in the third quarter, pushing his season total to 4.5.

» With Smith's sack, the Redskins have recorded a sack in 23 consecutive regular season games, dating back to last season. Washington's active streak entered Week 16 ranking first in the NFC and fourth in the NFL [Denver, 31; Oakland, 28; Cincinnati, 27].

» The Redskins pushed their regular season sack streak to 23 games for the first time since a 30-game span across the 2008-10 seasons.

» Kicker Dustin Hopkins converted 2-of-2 field goal attempts and four PATs, adding to his single-season career highs in field goals [33] and points [134].

» With his second field goal, a 20-yarder in the fourth quarter, Hopkins tied Mark Moseley's record [33 in 1983] for the most field goals in a single season in team history.

» With 11 points, Hopkins [134] passed No. 6 Terry Allen [126 in 1996], No. 5 Chip Lohmiller [128 in 1989] and No. 4 Lohmiller [131 in 1990] on the franchise's single-season scoring list.

» Hopkins' 29-yard field goal in the first quarter was the culmination of a nine-play, 88-yard drive that started at the Redskins' one-yard line. It marked the Redskins' first scoring drive after starting at their own one-yard line since a touchdown drive vs. Chicago on Oct. 31, 1999.

» Linebacker Ryan Kerrigan started his 95th consecutive game, the second-longest active streak among active NFL linebackers. Kerrigan has not missed a start in his NFL career.

» The Redskins gained 317 yards in the first half, tied for the third-most by the team in records available dating back to 1991 and the team's most since a 394-yard first half vs. New Orleans in Week 10 of the 2015 season.

» The Redskins' 24 first-half points were tied for the team's second-most in the Jay Gruden era.

» The Redskins forced a three-and-out on the Bears' first possession. The Redskins forced three-and-outs on opening drives against all four NFC North opponents this season (Week 7 at Detroit, Week 10 vs. Minnesota, Week 11 vs. Green Bay and Week 16 at Chicago).

» The Redskins are now 26-23-1 against the Bears all-time, including postseason play.

» The Redskins moved to 12-11 all-time against the Bears in games played in Chicago.

» The Redskins have won seven consecutive games against the Bears, Washington's longest active winning streak against any opponent.

» The Redskins have now won four straight games at Soldier Field for the first time since the 1986-97 seasons.

» The Redskins earned a third consecutive Saturday victory (including wins in 2014 and 2015) for the first time since the 2004-05 seasons (Week 15 in 2004, Week 16 and NFC Wild Card Round in 2005).

» The Redskins are now 26-24 all-time in Saturday games, including postseason play.

THE OPPONENT

The New York Giants enter Week 17 with a 10-5 record and locked into second place in the NFC East and the first Wild Card position in the NFC playoffs. The 10-5 campaign comes a year after a 6-10 season in which the Giants finished third in the NFC East. This season is the team's first under Head Coach Ben McAdoo.

Now in his 13th NFL season, quarterback Eli Manning has completed 360-of-571 pass attempts (63.0 percent) this season for 3,857 yards with 26 touchdowns and 16 interceptions. He has recorded a passer rating of 86.2 this season.

Running back Rashad Jennings leads the Giants in rushing attempts (163) and rushing yards (541) and is tied with running back Orleans Darkwa for the team lead in rushing touchdowns (two each). Rookie running back Paul Perkins ranks second on the team with 91 carries for 354 yards.

Wide receiver Odell Beckham Jr. leads the Giants in all receiving categories this season, adding 1,323 receiving yards on 96 receptions with 10 receiving touchdowns. Rookie wide receiver Sterling Shepard has contributed 62 receptions for 532 yards with eight touchdowns.

Safety Landon Collins has recorded a team-high 117 tackles (96 solo) this season, outpacing linebacker Jonathan Casillas, who has recorded 86 total tackles (58 solo). Collins also leads the Giants with five interceptions this season. Free agent signing Olivier Vernon has added a team-best 8.5 sacks this season.

Kicker Robbie Gould has converted 8-of-8 field goals and 19-of-22 PATs since joining the Giants midseason. Punter Brad Wing has averaged 46.3 yards on 85 punts this season.

Wide receiver Dwayne Harris has served as the team's primary return specialist in 2016. Harris has returned 22 kickoffs an average of 24.2 yards and has returned 23 punts with a 5.4-yard average.

BEN McADOO

Ben McAdoo is in his first season with the New York Giants after taking over the head coach position in January of 2016. He succeeded Tom Coughlin, who was head coach of the Giants for 12 seasons and won the franchise two Super Bowls. McAdoo is the 17th coach in Giants history.

McAdoo began his tenure with the Giants as the team's offensive coordinator prior to the start of the 2014 season. During his two seasons as offensive coordinator, McAdoo led the Giants to rank 10th and eighth in offense in the league.

Prior to joining the Giants, McAdoo spent eight years working with the Green Bay Packers. He spent six seasons as the tight ends coach and the last two seasons he held the position as the quarterbacks coach. McAdoo helped lead the team to six playoff appearances, winning four NFC North titles and a Super Bowl championship against the Pittsburgh Steelers (XLV).

Prior to Green Bay, McAdoo was the assistant offensive line and quality control coach for the San Francisco 49ers for the 2005 season. Within his role he also assisted the offensive line and tight ends.

McAdoo joined the Green Bay Packer in January of the 2006 season as the tight ends coach. He succeeded Joe Philbin who became the offensive line coach following the hiring of Mike McCarthy as head coach of the Packers. McAdoo quickly developed a more productive tight end core with new duties being assigned to the position. His unit helped assist their then young offensive line, allowing only 24 sacks for the season.

In the 2009 season, McAdoo coached one of the most productive seasons by the Packers tight end unit in franchise history. The team's tight ends would end that season posting a total of 99 receptions for 1,048 yards, setting franchise records in both categories.

During the 2010 season, under McAdoo's instruction, his tight end unit contributed significantly to the Packers journey from the NFC's sixth seed to Super Bowl champions (XLV).

Prior to his start with the NFL, McAdoo served as the offensive assistant at the University of Pittsburgh for their 2003 season. He helped the team go 8-5 for the season and compete in the Continental Tire Bowl. Immediately following his season with Pittsburgh, he was hired as the assistant coach for the University of Akron but left immediately following the 2004 recruiting period.

McAdoo also briefly served as the tackles and tight ends coach for Stanford University. He left just after the 2005 recruiting season to work with then offensive coordinator Mike McCarthy and the San Francisco 49ers.

McAdoo and McCarthy had formerly worked together when McAdoo started his career in the league as the offensive assistant and quality control coach for the New Orleans Saints. There too he assisted with the offensive line and tight ends.

Attaining his first coaching position in 2001, McAdoo served as the special teams and offensive assistant for Michigan State University. He had previously coached for four years at the high school level.

McAdoo attended Indiana University of Pennsylvania (IUP) where he earned his bachelor's degree in health and physical education. He then went on to earn his master's degree in kinesiology from Michigan State.

Native of Homer City, McAdoo and his wife, Toni, have a daughter, Larkin, and son, B.J.

SERIES HISTORY

Sunday's matchup between the Redskins and Giants will mark the 170th overall meeting between the division rivals. It will be the 168th regular season meeting between the two franchises. The Giants are the Redskins' most common opponent.

The Redskins trail the all-time series, 67-98-4. The teams have split a pair of post-season games, including a 28-0 Redskins victory in the 1943 Eastern Division playoff.

The Redskins are seeking their first season sweep of the Giants since 2011 and can win a third straight contest against the Giants for the first time since a four-game streak across the 1998-2000 seasons.

LAST MEETING

Redskins 29, Giants 27

Associated Press
Sept. 25, 2016

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. -- All the Washington Redskins needed to avoid a dreaded 0-3 start was a couple of fourth-quarter interceptions by backups and five field goals from a guy who had never made that many in a game.

Dustin Hopkins kicked a 37-yard field goal with 1:51 to play and the defending NFC East champion Redskins got a much-needed 29-27 win over the penalty- and error-prone New York Giants (2-1) on Sunday.

"We needed to get that first win bad," said cornerback Greg Toler, who played most of the game after starter Bashaud Breeland hurt an ankle early. "We couldn't lose the first three, and we hung in there and got some real contributions from everybody. You get everyone stepping up. The coaches treat all of us the same, coaches us up whether first- or second- or third- or fourth-string like we are starters."

The guys who really stepped up were linebacker Su'a Cravens and cornerback Quinton Dunbar.

After Hopkins put Washington ahead, the Giants got a first down at their own 39 with 69 seconds to play. On the next play, Manning went over the middle to Shane Vereen and Cravens dived in front of the halfback and picked it off.

Earlier in the quarter, Dunbar jumped a seam pattern pass to tight end Will Tye in the end zone and intercepted it, ending a Giants drive at the Washington 15 courtesy of an Odell Beckham catch-and-run. It kept Washington ahead 26-24.

Josh Brown would put New York ahead with a 30-yard field goal midway through the quarter, but Washington came back.

It was a game marked by Giants mistakes. They turned the ball over three times and had 11 penalties for 128 yards.

"Any time you lose against any team, no matter where they are at, it is a tough one to swallow," receiver Victor Cruz said. "Especially one like this where we had some opportunities to put some points on the board, but you win some and you lose some, you have to learn from the losses and move on."

The worst of the Giants' penalties was a third-down hit to the helmet by Olivier Vernon that kept the Redskins' game-winning drive alive.

"Everyone loves touchdowns. I love touchdowns," Hopkins said. "When they call on me, I do the best I can to put the team in a position to win, whether they send me out there five times or once, it's OK."

Shane Vereen scored on a 1-yard run, Manning threw a 23-yard TD to Shepard and Orleans Darkwa scored on a 2-yard run for New York.

Kirk Cousins threw touchdown passes of 44 yards to DeSean Jackson and 55 to Jamison Crowder as the banged-up Redskins handed new Giants coach Ben McAdoo his first loss.

This was an NFC East matchup that see-sawed the entire second half after Washington rallied from a 21-9 deficit.

BECKHAM VS. NORMAN: The fourth quarter was wild with the matchup of Beckham and Redskins cornerback Josh Norman, leading to big plays by Beckham, an ejection of Giants center Weston Richburg and a personal foul against Norman for a big hit on Sterling Shepard.

"We got it in us. We are fighters, fighters to the end. Scrapping. Savagery as they come," Norman said. "Real gritty, all the way down to the bone and gristle. Fight, fight, fight."

In the end, Washington made the big plays in avoiding the 0-3 start. Only three teams since 1990 have made the playoffs after losing three in row to start the season.

INJURIES GALORE: The Redskins lost four players to injuries in the game: C Kory Lichtensteiger (ankle), G Shawn Lauvao (calf), CB Bashaud Breeland (ankle) and S DeAngelo Hall (knee). The Giants had CBs Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie (groin) and Eli Apple (hamstring) leave.

SPECIAL TEAMS: It was an exciting day for the guys from specials. Crowder's 50-yard punt return and a 31-yard fourth-down pass by punter Tress Way to Dunbar set up two of Hopkins' field goals. Dunbar, however, muffed a punt that led to Vereen's TD early in the game.

The Giants had a blocked punt by Romeo Okwara nullified with just over 11 minutes to play by a personal foul against Andrew Adams, who was added to the roster Saturday.

NEAR-COSTLY GAMBLE: The Redskins lost a cheap [sic] shot field goal at the end of the first half when they elected to run a play from the Giants 4 with 6 seconds left. Jason Pierre-Paul had a sack and forced fumble on Cousins and the clock ran out.

NUMBERS: Cousins finished 21 of 35 for 296 yards. Manning was 25 of 38 for 350. The Giants gained 457 yards in failing to gain their 700th franchise win. The Redskins gained 403 yards and had the ball for 33:26.

HISTORICALLY EXPLOSIVE

The Redskins' 2016 offense has not only significantly out-paced any of its Washington predecessors, it has ranked among the game's most explosive units in terms of yards per play since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger.

YARDS PER PLAY (NFL SINCE 1970):

Team	Yds/Play	Yards	Plays
1. 2000 St. Louis Rams	6.98	7,075	1,014

AVOIDING THREE-AND-OUTS

In the Redskins' 162 offensive possessions during the 2016 season, defenses have limited the Redskins to only 20 three-and-outs. Washington's three-and-out percentage of 12.3 percent ranks first in the NFL this season.

THREE-AND-OUT DRIVES (NFL, 2016):

Team	Drives	3 & Outs	Pct.
1. Washington Redskins	162	20	12.3

3. New Orleans Saints	169	25	14.8
4. Carolina Panthers	180	30	16.7
5. Baltimore Ravens	182	33	18.1

The Redskins finished 23rd in the NFL in three-and-out percentage a season ago at 24.4 percent. The team's top figure in records available dating back to 2000 was a 17.5 percent mark in 2011.

THREE-AND-OUT DRIVES (REDSKINS SINCE 2000):

DIVISION PARITY

Parity has been a topic de jour in the National Football League in recent years, and the league-wide trends provide the evidence.

Each year since the 12-team playoff format was adopted in 1990, at least four teams have qualified for the playoffs after missing the postseason the year before.

No division has seen more turnover at the top in the last four years than the NFC East. Prior to the Redskins' division title in 2015, the NFC East held the distinction as the only division in the NFL to have had all four teams earn a division title in a four-season span from 2011-14. With their division title in 2015, the Redskins became the first NFC East team to win two division titles in the last five years.

FORCING FUMBLES

En route to every practice, Redskins players pass two tackling dummies. Each dummy has a football attached to its arm via velcro, and each day, Defensive Coordinator Joe Barry commands his players to knock the balls loose before stepping onto the practice field.

The exercise is meant to instill and reinforce a mentality for forcing fumbles, and Washington's performance in that category under Barry appears to support the process.

ICING THE PUNTER

This season, 41.4 percent of all drives in the NFL have resulted in punts. Meanwhile, Redskins punter Tress Way's season has been almost as notable for his work as a passer (1-for-1, 31 yards) as it has for his work as a punter.

The Redskins have punted only 42 times on 162 offensive possessions this season, boasting a 25.9 percent average, the lowest in the NFL.

PERCENTAGE OF DRIVES ENDING IN PUNTS (NFL, 2016):

RETURN OF THE RETURN GAME

The Redskins received limited contributions from their punt return unit in 2015, averaging 4.8 yards per return, the second-fewest in the NFL. It marked the fifth consecutive season the team had ranked in the bottom half of the NFL in punt return average.

Redskins coaches remained steadfast behind returner Jamison Crowder entering 2016, and early returns have justified their faith. The Redskins rank third in the NFL with a 12.7-yard team average on returns this season. The Redskins have not finished in the Top 5 in the NFL in punt return average since leading the league in the category in 1995.

A LOOK BACK AT LONDON

RECORD-BREAKER AT WEMBLEY

The Redskins made their European regular season debut at Wembley Stadium in London in Week 8, drawing the Cincinnati Bengals in an entertaining 27-27 tie.

The Redskins recorded 546 yards of total offense, including 446 net passing yards and 100 rushing yards. The 546 yards of offense were the fourth-most by the team in records dating back to 1950.

The performance in London was the Redskins' 15th game with at least 500 yards of offense since the 1970 merger, making the Redskins 10-4-1 in those contests since 1970.

The game featured 65 total first downs, shattering the Redskins' team record for combined first downs by the team and an opponent in a single game.

KIRK COUSINS

Kirk Cousins has repeatedly said he knows he has to prove himself in 2016. But for the fifth-year NFL quarterback, having to prove himself is nothing new.

Cousins entered 2016 following a record-setting 2015 campaign. In his first full season as a starter, he set single-season team marks for attempts (543), completions (379), passing yards (4,166) and 300-yard passing games (seven) in leading the Redskins to an NFC East title. Cousins threw a touchdown pass in all 16 regular season games in 2015, becoming the first player in team history to throw a touchdown in all 16 games in a season since the adoption of the 16-game schedule in 1978.

The year was temporary vindication for Cousins, who did not even earn the starting role until Head Coach Jay Gruden said "It's Kirk's team" on Aug. 31 that year.

"He's always in the meetings, he's on time, he's wanting to do extra work, he's studying the film, he's a gym rat, he's a film rat. That's just what you need to be a successful quarterback in this league," Gruden said in training camp in 2016. "The great quarterbacks are that way in their first year and in their 15th year, that's the way you have to be at the position, and he's got the mental makeup to be a great one."

The 2015 season was another opportunity for Cousins to prove himself in a football career defined by those moments. As a prep quarterback at Holland (Mich.) Christian H.S., he was lightly recruited, fielding a small handful of late scholarship offers, primarily from MAC programs. When Michigan State showed late interest, Cousins mentions that he took his official visit to East Lansing hoping to recruit the coaching staff rather than have the coaching staff recruit him.

That lightly regarded recruit would go on to earn Michigan State's starting role as a sophomore, beating out future NFL quarterback Nick Foles in the process. He became only the second player in Spartan history to be named team captain as a sophomore en route to becoming a three-year captain for the program. He set records in virtually every passing category in school history while appearing in 45 games, starting 39 of his last 40 contests.

Cousins once again had to prove himself upon transitioning to the NFL level. He was the second quarterback selected by the Redskins in the 2012 NFL Draft and entered the league having to compete with veteran Rex Grossman for backup duties. Cousins proved himself capable as a rookie that season in a couple of crucial situations, including leading a game-tying drive in an eventual overtime win against the eventual Super Bowl champion Baltimore Ravens in Week 14 and winning his first career start in Cleveland a week later to keep the team alive for its eventual NFC East title that season.

Now in his fifth season with the Redskins, Cousins has appeared in 45 games with 40 starts, completing 1,003-of-1,521 passes for 11,826 yards with 71 passing touchdowns. He ranks in the Top 10 in team history in completions, passing touchdowns and passing yardage. Cousins has also accrued 19 career 300-yard games (including 18 in the regular season), the most in franchise history.

So while some observers wait for Cousins to prove himself again, the quarterback has already garnered respect around the NFL.

"I don't know what people are looking for. He threw for over 4,000 yards and over 25 touchdowns [in 2015]. The last six games of the season his quarterback rating was over 100," Pittsburgh Steelers Head Coach Mike Tomlin said prior to Week 1 in 2016. "He needs no endorsement from me."

After his breakout campaign as a starter in 2015, the Redskins franchise tagged Cousins for 2016. Playing on the one-year franchise tag doesn't faze Cousins, who has viewed his entire football career as a series of one-day opportunities.

"In this league it's one year at a time - whether you're on a long-term deal, one-year deal or two-year deal. I mean, I had a four-year deal as a rookie but it didn't feel like a four-year deal, it felt like a one-day deal every single day I was here," Cousins said during training camp. "So I don't think things have changed a whole lot in that regard. I have got to go out there and prove myself each and every game of every season. When you do that, I think the rest will take care of itself."

"As I've said before and said every week, I don't know anybody who can guard that young man. When he's on, he's on, and it's tough to stop. He's the best receiving tight end in the NFL, hands down."

- Five-time Pro Bowl tackle Trent Williams on Jordan Reed in 2015, as told to Master Tesfatsion of The Washington Post

Reed led all Redskins players in receptions, receiving yards and receiving touchdowns in 2015, becoming the first Redskins tight end to lead the team in all three categories since Jean Fugett in 1977.

In addition to his 11 regular season receiving touchdowns a year ago, Reed added his first career postseason touchdown in the NFC Wild Card Round last season in the midst of a nine-catch, 120-yard afternoon. Reed's touchdown against Green Bay was his 12th total of the year, as he became the fifth member of the Redskins to record 12 combined receiving touchdowns across a single regular season and postseason (Gary Clark in 1991, Ricky Sanders in 1988, Jerry Smith in 1967, Charley Taylor in 1966 and Hugh Taylor in 1952; all had 12).

DeSEAN JACKSON

There was a familiar feel to the Redskins' pursuit and signing of "surprise" free agent cornerback Josh Norman in the 2016 offseason. Two years earlier, the Redskins made one of the biggest impact signings of the 2014 offseason when electrifying wide receiver DeSean Jackson unexpectedly hit the market and signed with the burgundy and gold.

Though perhaps diminutive in size, there has been nothing small about Jackson's performance in Washington, as the Cal product recorded 86 receptions for 1,697 yards with 10 touchdowns in his first two seasons with the team from 2014-15. His 19.7 yards-per-reception average across 2014-15 ranked first in the NFL among players with at least 40 catches.

Jackson made an instant impact in his first year with the team in 2014, finishing the year with an NFL-best average of 20.9 yards per reception, the fifth-best mark in team history. He became the first member of the Redskins to finish a season as the NFL leader in yards per reception since Henry Ellard (19.5 in 1996) and was the fourth player in team history to accomplish the feat (Ellard in 1996, Jim Podoley in 1957 and Hugh Taylor in 1950).

In 2015, Jackson was limited by injury to nine games but still recorded 30 receptions for 528 yards with four touchdowns. Despite limited opportunities, his explosiveness remained on display, as his four scores covered distances of 56 yards, 63 yards, 28 yards and 77 yards, chronologically. The shortest of the four was a game-tying touchdown in the final minute of the team's Week 13 contest on ESPN's Monday Night Football.

"When that ball is in the air, I'm going to track it down. I've practiced a long time, a lot of hours, many weeks, many days doing that."

- Wide receiver DeSean Jackson

The Redskins knew first-hand what kind of playmaking ability Jackson possessed prior to signing him in 2014. In six years as a Philadelphia Eagle, he caught 32 passes for 572 yards (17.9 avg.) with five receiving touchdowns, his most receiving touchdowns against any opponent, in 11 games against Washington.

"The guy gets downfield and can adjust to the ball like nobody else," Head Coach Jay Gruden said.

Jackson's explosiveness has turned heads since he entered the league in 2008. Jackson leads the NFL in receptions of 50-plus yards (37) and total touchdowns of 50-plus yards (26) in that time-frame.

"I think he's talented tracking the football. When the ball is in the air he does a really good job of tracking it and running underneath it," quarterback Kirk Cousins said. "He's obviously fast. He has a good skill in finding the football and locating it and making the tough catch."

50-YARD TOUCHDOWNS

PIERRE GARÇON

When the Redskins signed Pierre Garçon in the first hour of free agency during the 2012 offseason, the Redskins hoped they were getting an ascending 25-year-old talent with a Super Bowl appearance under his belt. What the Redskins have gotten from Garçon in four seasons since has been a reliable target, fierce competitor and tenacious blocker who played a significant role in the Redskins' division titles in 2012 and 2015.

Garçon has appeared in 73 games with 71 starts for the Redskins since 2012, recording 372 receptions for 4,453 yards and 21 receiving touchdowns in five seasons. His 372 receptions with Washington already rank in the Top 10 in team history.

9. Pierre Garçon	2012-16 (5)	372
10. Michael Westbrook	1995-2001 (7)	277

In 2013, Garçon rewrote a piece of Redskins history, catching 113 passes to break Pro Football Hall of Famer Art Monk's franchise record for receptions in a season (106 in 1984).

JAMISON CROWDER

Jamison Crowder entered his rookie season in 2015 with expectations of assuming the team's role at punt returner, but Crowder rapidly exceeded those limits and earned the team's top slot receiver role and became another weapon for the Redskins on third down.

"We had a penciled-in punt returner job for him, but for him to win the starting inside slot receiver is a testament to him and how quickly he picked it up and his production," Head Coach Jay Gruden said. "When you draft guys, you have high hopes for them, but you never expect them to be this much of a factor this early, especially fourth-fifth rounders."

In Week 5 of his sophomore campaign in 2016, Crowder ended the Redskins' 124-game punt return touchdown drought with an 85-yard touchdown at Baltimore. His punt return for touchdown was the Redskins' first since Oct. 26, 2008, when Santana Moss returned a punt 80 yards for a touchdown at Detroit.

At 23 years and 114 days old, Crowder became the youngest member of the Redskins to return a punt for a touchdown since Brian Mitchell (23 years, 35 days) at Cincinnati on Sept. 22, 1991, according to records provided by Pro Football Reference.

"He's one of those kids: You can put him in a phone booth and you probably wouldn't get a hand on him."

- Receivers Coach Ike Hilliard to The Washington Post's Liz Clarke

Crowder's 124 career receptions are the second-most by a member of the Redskins in the first two years of an NFL career.

YARDS AFTER CONTACT

Under General Manager Scot McCloughan and Head Coach Jay Gruden, the Redskins have prioritized finding tough runners with the ability to power through tackles.

The bulk of the Redskins' rushing yardage in 2016 has come from running backs Robert Kelley and Matt Jones. Kelley is a rookie free agent out of Tulane whom Gruden values for his ability to fall forward and avoid negative plays, while Jones is a 2015 third-round pick notable for his 6-foot-2, 232-pound frame. Even the diminutive yet deceptively tough Chris Thompson has contributed after contact this season.

The group has helped the Redskins rank among the league leaders in rushing yards after contact in 2016.

VERNON DAVIS

Washington, D.C. native Vernon Davis came home in free agency in 2016, and while the Redskins may not have known exactly what they were getting from the veteran addition, Davis has delivered with 42 receptions for 534 yards with two touchdowns.

"I have been actually surprised at the impact he's had on this football team both on and off the field," Gruden said. "He's a great guy, he works hard, he's good in the running game, he pays attention in meetings. He's obviously got the speed and skillset that you need at the tight end position. So I think he's been just awesome as far as his contributions."

Davis now ranks in the Top 15 in NFL history in career receptions, receiving yards and receiving touchdowns by a tight end.

RYAN KERRIGAN — #HBKERRIGAN

Call him “Heartbreak Kerrigan” [#HBKerrigan on Twitter] or call him “The Showstopper,” either way, Redskins fans can call Ryan Kerrigan their own for the foreseeable future.

On the day Redskins players reported to Richmond, Va., for training camp in 2015, the team announced it had reached a multi-year contract extension to keep the productive, reliable fan favorite in burgundy and gold. The extension came on the heels of a monster year for Kerrigan in 2014, as he started all 16 games for a fourth consecutive season and posted a career-high 13.5 sacks.

“To get to a moment like this where you get a chance to play out the rest of your NFL career with the team that drafted you, the team that you love, the city that you love, it hasn’t really hit me yet, but it’s an awesome feeling,” Kerrigan said on the date of his extension.

If patience is a virtue, the Redskins were virtuous in the first round of the 2011 NFL Draft, as the team opted to trade back from its No. 10 overall selection to the 16th overall pick. With the selection, the Redskins selected Kerrigan, the then-defensive end out of Purdue.

Named to his first career Pro Bowl following the 2012 season, the Muncie, Ind. native registered 8.5 sacks in each of the 2012-13 seasons after posting 7.5 in his rookie season in 2011 and exploded in 2014 with a career-high 13.5 sacks. But his productivity has been matched by his reliability, as he has started all 95 regular season games and two postseason games played by the organization since his selection in 2011. In 2016, he became only the fifth player in NFL history to open a career with at least 7.5 sacks in each of his first six seasons, joining Jared Allen, Derrick Thomas, DeMarcus Ware and Reggie White.

In Week 2 of the 2014 season, Kerrigan launched a simultaneous assault on Jaguars quarterback Chad Henne and the Redskins’ record book, tying a franchise record by becoming the fifth player in team history to record four sacks in a game. But more stunning than Kerrigan’s four-sack outburst was the way the normally subdued man celebrated.

“Will Compton has been kind of getting in my ear for a while to do the Shawn Michaels from wrestling — the HBK,” Kerrigan said of the inspiration for his celebrations. “All he kept saying was, ‘Hit the HBK, hit the HBK.’ Finally, I did right by him and hit the HBK a couple times. On the second and third ones, when I didn’t do it, he was giving me a bunch of hell on the sidelines, like, ‘Why didn’t you do it? You need to trademark it.’ I’m like, ‘Well, I can’t trademark it, it’s HBK.’ But that’s where it came from.”

The gesture resonated with wrestling fans and Redskins fans alike. The celebration was promoted by WWE on Twitter, and Redskins fans immediately began referring to the celebration as the “#HBKerrigan.”

Kerrigan is one of six players selected in the 2011 NFL Draft to have already reached 45 career sacks. Houston’s J.J. Watt (76.0), Denver’s Von Miller (73.5), Kansas City’s Justin Houston (60.0), Kerrigan (58.5), Los Angeles’ Robert Quinn (54.0) and Oakland’s Aldon Smith (47.5) have combined for 370.0 sacks since entering the league together in the 2011 NFL Draft.

The Purdue product ended his college career tied for the Football Bowl Subdivision record with 14 career forced fumbles, and his innate knack for knocking the ball loose has translated to the NFL. Kerrigan has been credited with 19 forced fumbles in his career, the most by a member of the Redskins since 1994 and among the most by any NFL player since 2011.

Kerrigan’s impact on the Redskins has transcended football, as he was honored with the team’s Walter Payton Man of the Year award in 2015. In addition to participating in numerous events through the Washington Redskins Charitable Foundation, Kerrigan welcomed 185 guests to the Grand Hyatt Washington in 2015 for his third Celebrity Waiter Night, raising more than $100,000 for his Blitz for the Better Foundation, which provides support to seriously ill, special needs and physically challenged children throughout the Greater Washington D.C. area.

CORNERBACK CORNER

JOSH NORMAN

When the Carolina Panthers rescinded cornerback Josh Norman's franchise tag and allowed the All-Pro defender to enter unrestricted free agency on April 20, roles instantly became reversed. The 28-year-old lockdown corner became the subject of teams trying to lock down his services.

The Redskins mobilized quickly, dispatching Defensive Coordinator Joe Barry and Defensive Backs Coach Perry Fewell on April 22 to pick up Norman and his family from his Carolina home and bring them to team headquarters. The group arrived back in Ashburn early that afternoon, and after the full press and a family vote, Norman was a member of the Washington Redskins by 9:30 p.m.

"It was an exciting 24 hours there and we're happy as heck to get him," Head Coach Jay Gruden said. "I think he's one of the premier corners in the National Football League. He can matchup with receivers, he can play inside/outside, he's got great ball skills, he's a ball hawk. You can't coach that – you really can't."

Norman joined the Redskins having previously appeared in 53 regular season games with 38 starts for Carolina, recording 178 tackles (136 solo), 36 passes defended, seven interceptions (two returned for touchdowns), four forced fumbles and three fumbles recovered from 2012-15.

"I'm very, very fortunate enough to be here with this magnitude of an organization. I can't say enough great things about them. The history here is 84-years-plus, so this is the golden age of football when you come down here to the NFC East. So I'm loving it."

- Cornerback Josh Norman

In 2015, Norman started all 16 regular season games and all three postseason games for the Panthers, recording career highs in interceptions (four), forced fumbles (three) and fumbles recovered (two) in addition to tying for the league lead in interceptions returned for touchdowns (two). His highly decorated 2015 campaign resulted in a myriad of honors, including All-Pro selections from both the Associated Press and Pro Football Writers Association in addition to sharing PFWA Co-Most Improved Player of the Year honors with new teammate Kirk Cousins.

Norman's accolades and productivity speak for themselves, but what kind of person were the Redskins getting? Barry learned immediately.

"Obviously to get a player of his caliber, I think anytime you add that on to your roster it's huge, but to get the type of work ethic, the type of character..." Barry said before transitioning into an anecdote. "The story I always tell people is that we walked out of the building with Josh and his family and all of us at about 10:30 on that Friday night, he was going back to the airport to fly back home and I was like, 'OK, bro, when do you think you're going to make it back?' He looked at me literally like I was crazy. He was like, 'What are you talking about? I will be back Sunday night and I will be in the building at 8:00 Monday morning to work.' So, that to me said a lot."

BASHAUD BREELAND

The Redskins believed they found a gem in the fourth round of the 2014 NFL Draft when they selected cornerback Bashaud Breeland out of Clemson. He rewarded their faith as a rookie in 2014, leading the team with two interceptions and starting 15 games – the third-most by a Redskins rookie cornerback in team history behind only Champ Bailey (16 in 1999) and Pro Football Hall of Famer Darrell Green (16 in 1983).

In 2015, the signing of Chris Culliver and the return of DeAngelo Hall from injury was supposed to allow Breeland to flourish in nickel role, but various injuries to the Redskins' secondary once again thrust him into a starting role. Breeland compiled 81 tackles (59 solo), a team- and career-high 16 passes defended, two interceptions, three forced fumbles and two fumble recoveries in 15 games, including a Week 9 contest in which he was limited by injury.

In Week 5 last season, Breeland posted four passes defended and his first interception of the season, playing a key role in helping limit Falcons receiver Julio Jones to only five receptions and no receiving touchdowns. A week later, Breeland turned in a career day, recording an interception, forced fumble and a career-high two fumble recoveries to become only the fifth NFL player since the turn of the century to record two fumble recoveries and an interception in a single game.

*Accomplished feat in first half

With picks in Weeks 5-6 last year, Breeland became the first member of the Redskins to record an interception in consecutive games since London Fletcher did so in three straight games across Weeks 14-16 of the 2012 season.

However, Breeland's biggest play of the 2015 season may not have even ended with the ball in his hands. In Week 7 against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, the Redskins had fought back from a 24-0 deficit to pull within three points. On a first down with slightly more than four minutes remaining, Tampa Bay running back Doug Martin broke free down the right sideline with a clear path to a game-clinching touchdown. Breeland – coming from the opposite side of the field – was able to push Martin out-of-bounds after 49 yards at the Washington 5-yard line for a touchdown-saving stop.

Breeland injured his hamstring with the monstrous effort, but the Redskins' defense responded by holding the Buccaneers to a field goal on the drive, allowing the Washington offense to drive down the field and score a touchdown to complete the largest comeback in franchise history.

After the game, Head Coach Jay Gruden noted the importance of Breeland's stop in the midst of the second-year cornerback's career-high 13-tackle day.

"At the end of the day, they score there, the game's over. That shows what kind of guy he is," Gruden said. "I talk about Breeland being an ultimate competitor. If he takes that one play off, or one instance and they go up by 10, the game's over, most likely. And he hustled, got them down at the five. We got a big stop, held a field goal, we go down and score."

SPOTLIGHT ON SPECIAL TEAMS

KICKER DUSTIN HOPKINS

The Redskins surprised many in Week 2 of the 2015 season when they elected to move on from kicker Kai Forbath, the franchise leader in field goal percentage among players with at least 50 attempts, in favor of signing kicker Dustin Hopkins.

The results were hard to argue with, as Hopkins supplemented his field goal kicking (25-of-28, third-best single-season percentage in team history) with his status as a much-needed weapon in the field position battle.

"You look at the total package of what a kicker needs to bring to your football team and we were looking for a little bit of a stronger leg, especially on kickoffs," Gruden said on the day the team signed Hopkins. "That's the bottom line."

Across the 2013-14 seasons, the Redskins ranked third-to-last in the NFL in touchback percentage, recording touchbacks on only 34.0 percent of kickoffs. In 2015, Hopkins registered touchbacks on 52-of-76 kickoffs (68.4 percent), the ninth-best percentage of any NFL kicker.

Hopkins is 33-for-40 on field goal attempts this season, tying Mark Moseley (33 in 1983) for the most field goals in a single season in team history. In Week 3, he tied a team record with five field goals in a 5-for-5 performance in a victory as part of an NFC Special Teams Player of the Week and Player of the Month performance.

Beyond Hopkins' ability to boot the ball through the uprights and through the back of the end zone, his ability to get it to stop and turn on a dime after 10 yards was vital to a Redskins' victory against Tampa Bay in Week 7 last season. After facing an early 24-0 deficit, the Redskins scored late in the first half and at the start of the second half to cut the lead to 24-14, at which point Gruden and Special Teams Coordinator Ben Kotwica turned to Hopkins to deliver a surprise onside kick early in the third. Receiver Rashad Ross batted the skidding ball to safety Trenton Robinson, ending a league-wide 0-for-24 skid on onside kick attempts to start the 2015 season. The onside kick helped jumpstart the Redskins en route to recording the largest comeback victory in franchise history.

"His onside kicks, they're like magic balls. I don't know how he keeps them in play."

- Head Coach Jay Gruden

It was only the fourth successful onside kick by the Redskins since 2000 and ended a streak of 18 unsuccessful onside kick attempts by the Redskins over the previous nine seasons.

PUNTER TRESS WAY

Since his arrival in January 2015, General Manager Scot McCloughan has stressed multiple desires. One was to create competition at every position, and another was for the team to reward its own players who performed at high levels.

Punter Tress Way is emblematic of both ideals.

The Redskins spent the majority of the 2014 offseason evaluating a punting battle between newcomers Robert Malone and Blake Clingan, but the race received a darkhorse candidate when the team claimed Way off waivers from Chicago on Aug. 20 that year. Way was given 10 days to stake a claim to the punting job.

Way accomplished the feat and has since posted historically relevant numbers, earned the special teams captaincy in 2015 and been rewarded with a multi-year contract extension in 2016.

In 2014, Way's punting numbers rewarded the coaching staff's faith. Way averaged 47.5 yards per punt, the 35th-best single-season average in NFL history and the highest by a Redskins player since World War II.

Way finished the season averaging 47.5 yards per punt to rank fourth in team history, trailing only Sammy Baugh's full-season NFL record (51.4 yards per punt in 1940) and Baugh's 1941 and 1942 campaigns (48.7 and 48.2). Way became the first member of the Redskins to lead the NFL in punting for a season since Sam Baker in 1958 (45.4). It marked the seventh time a Redskins player had led the league in punting average since 1939.

REDSKINS TO LEAD NFL IN PUNTING SINCE 1939:

Player	Season	Avg.
Tress Way	2014	47.5
Sam Baker	1958	45.4
Sammy Baugh	1945	43.3
Sammy Baugh	1943	45.9
Sammy Baugh	1942	48.2
Sammy Baugh	1941	48.7
Sammy Baugh	1940	51.4

While Way's left leg has been on display since 2014, the Redskins gave their third-year punter a chance to show off his right arm in Week 3 of the 2016 season. Locked in a tight, divisional road game against the New York Giants, Way threw a perfect spiral to cornerback Quinton Dunbar for a 31-yard gain on a fake punt to convert on fourth down. The fake punt was the Redskins' first successful fake kick of any kind since Week 10 of the 2009 season vs. Denver, when punter Hunter Smith connected with fullback Mike Sellers for a 35-yard touchdown.

Though Way was new to Washington in 2014, he was no stranger to playing for the Redskins. The University of Oklahoma product is a native of Tulsa, Okla., where he played his prep career for the Union H.S. Redskins. Part of the school's pregame traditions include chanting "All My Life I Wanted To Be A Redskin."

"I must've got 65, 'All my life I wanted to be a Redskin' texts," Way told multiple news outlets after making the team's roster.

FedExField (Landover, Md.)

STEELERS 38, REDSKINS 16

LANDOVER, Md. – The Washington Redskins fell to the Pittsburgh Steelers, 38-16, in front of an announced crowd of 79,124 people at FedExField in Week 1.

The Redskins opened the season on Monday Night Football for the 11th time since the introduction of the broadcast package in 1970. It was also the team's third straight opener against an AFC opponent, marking the first time the team opened with AFC opponents in three straight seasons since the formation of conferences following the 1970 AFL-NFL merger.

Washington ran out to an early 6-0 lead on two field goals by kicker Dustin Hopkins in the first quarter. Facing a fourth-and-1 at the Washington 29-yard line early in the second quarter, Steelers Head Coach Mike Tomlin opted to go for it, as quarterback Ben Roethlisberger connected with Antonio Brown for a 29-yard score to take the lead.

The Steelers added two more passing touchdowns and a field goal before the Redskins responded with 10 points on a Hopkins field goal and a one-yard Chris Thompson touchdown run in the second half to cut the Steelers' lead to eight points. However, the Steelers put the game away with two fourth quarter drives culminating in rushing touchdowns by running back DeAngelo Williams.

The game marked the end of a couple of noteworthy streaks for quarterback Kirk Cousins. With a third quarter interception on his 21st pass attempt of the game, Cousins snapped a streak of 252 consecutive regular season pass attempts at FedExField without an interception, dating back to Week 1 of the 2015 season. The streak – which extends to 298 consecutive attempts when including postseason play – was the longest streak of consecutive home pass attempts without an interception in team history.

The game was also Cousins' first without a passing touchdown since assuming the starting role prior to the 2015 season. His streak of consecutive games with a touchdown pass ended at 17, including postseason play, which ranked as the second-longest in team history [23, Sonny Jurgensen].

COWBOYS 27, REDSKINS 23

LANDOVER, Md. – The Washington Redskins fell to the Dallas Cowboys, 27-23, in front of an announced crowd of 80,612 people at FedExField in Week 2.

After facing an early 10-0 deficit, the Redskins rallied back to take a 17-13 lead on the first drive of the third quarter when quarterback Kirk Cousins connected with wide receiver Jamison Crowder for an 11-yard touchdown. This score was the first of four lead changes in the second half.

The Cowboys responded with a six-yard touchdown run by quarterback Dak Prescott to take a 20-17 lead, but kicker Dustin Hopkins responded with two field goals in the third quarter to give Washington a 23-20 lead entering the fourth quarter. However, the Cowboys retook the lead for good on an 11-play, 80-yard drive culminating in a touchdown by former Redskins running back Alfred Morris.

For the game, Cousins completed 28-of-46 passes for 364 yards with one touchdown and one interception. The 300-yard game was the 14th of Cousins' career, including postseason play, tying him with Joe Theismann (14) for second-most in team history. The game snapped Cousins' streak of nine consecutive regular season games with a completion percentage of 65.0 or better, dating back to 2015. The streak was tied for the second-longest in the NFL since 1960, trailing only Joe Montana (10 in 1989).

Running back Matt Jones recorded his first rushing touchdown of the season, the fourth of his career, on a 14-yard run in the second quarter. The rushing touchdown was his first since Week 5 of the 2015 season at Atlanta.

The contest was safety DeAngelo Hall's 100th career regular season game with the Redskins, joining Darrell Green (295), Brig Owens (158), Pat Fischer (126), Ken Houston (112), Mark Murphy (109), Reed Doughty (107), Fred Smoot (101) and Todd Bowles (100) as the only defensive backs to play 100 regular season games for the team.

MetLife Stadium (East Rutherford, N.J.)

REDSKINS 29, GIANTS 27

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. – The Washington Redskins earned their first victory of the 2016 season with a 29-27 win against the New York Giants in front of an announced crowd of 78,368 people at MetLife Stadium in Week 3.

The back-and-forth affair featured six lead changes, including five in the second half alone. The Giants stormed out to a 14-3 first quarter lead, but three Dustin Hopkins field goals and a 44-yard touchdown pass from Kirk Cousins to DeSean Jackson allowed the Redskins to cut the score to 21-16 at halftime. On his touchdown reception, Jackson surpassed 8,000 career receiving yards in regular season play, becoming the ninth active player to reach the mark.

The Redskins took their first lead of the game in the third quarter when wide receiver Jamison Crowder took a screen pass 55 yards for a touchdown on third-and-15. On the play, Pro Bowl left tackle Trent Williams – who spent the majority of the second half at left guard following a rash of injuries to the Redskins' offensive line – erased two Giants defenders with a single block. As the two teams traded field goals and exchanged the lead, the Redskins made a number of key momentum-shifting plays in the second half.

Punter Tress Way hit cornerback Quinton Dunbar for a 31-yard gain on a fake punt on fourth-and-12, leading to a Hopkins field goal. Early in the fourth quarter, Dunbar later came up with a highlight reel, one-handed interception in the red zone to deny the Giants points. In doing so, Dunbar became the first member of the Redskins to record a reception and an interception in the same game since cornerback Champ Bailey on Dec. 24, 2000, vs. Arizona.

Trailing by one in the fourth quarter, the Redskins engineered a 10-play, 56-yard scoring drive featuring eight runs and culminating in a 37-yard go-ahead field goal by Hopkins, his team-record-tying fifth of the day. On the Giants' final possession, Su'a Cravens picked off Eli Manning, securing the win for Washington.

REDSKINS 31, BROWNS 20

LANDOVER, Md. – The Washington Redskins defeated the Cleveland Browns, 31-20, and earned their first home win of the season in front of an announced crowd of 76,249 people at FedExField in Week 4.

The Redskins shot out to an early 14-0 lead, capping each of the team's first two offensive possessions with touchdown passes to tight end Jordan Reed. The first touchdown pass of the game, an eight-yard pass from quarterback Kirk Cousins to Reed, came on Reed's 200th career reception. With the catch, Reed became the fastest tight end in NFL history to reach 200 career receptions, reaching the milestone in 38 career games and surpassing the mark set by Pro Football Hall of Famer Kellen Winslow, who did so in 39 career games.

The Browns responded in the second quarter, tying the game at 14-14 with a rushing touchdown by running back Isaiah Crowell and a passing touchdown from quarterback Cody Kessler to wide receiver Terrelle Pryor Sr. Kickers Dustin Hopkins and Cody Parkey traded field goals at the end of the second quarter, evening the score at 17-17 at the half.

The Redskins defense responded in the second half with three takeaways, the franchise's first three-takeaway second half since forcing four turnovers at Denver on Oct. 27, 2013. The Redskins trailed 20-17 entering the fourth quarter, but running back Chris Thompson scored on a five-yard reception and running Matt Jones capped a 117-yard rushing day with a one-yard touchdown plunge.

With the comeback, the Redskins recorded come-from-behind victories in the fourth quarter in consecutive games for the first time since Weeks 13-14 of the 2012 season.

GAME 5

M&T Bank Stadium (Baltimore)

REDSKINS 16, RAVENS 10

BALTIMORE – The Washington Redskins defeated the Baltimore Ravens, 16-10, in front of an announced crowd of 71,318 people at M&T Bank Stadium in Week 5.

With the victory, the Redskins improved to 3-2 on the season and earned their first regular season win in the city of Baltimore since defeating the Baltimore Colts, 14-13, at Memorial Stadium on Oct. 23, 1955.

The Ravens opened the game with a nine-play, 75-yard touchdown drive to take a 7-0 lead less than five minutes into the contest. However, the Redskins' defense would stiffen the rest of way, holding the Ravens to 10 points during the contest, the Redskins' fewest points allowed since Week 2 of the 2015 season.

Wide receiver Jamison Crowder scored his first career punt return for touchdown on an 85-yard return in the first quarter. The punt return for touchdown was the Redskins' first since Oct. 26, 2008, when Santana Moss returned a punt 80 yards for a touchdown at Detroit. Crowder's touchdown snapped a streak of 124 regular season games without a punt return for touchdown for the Redskins, which had been the longest active streak in the NFL. However, swirling winds resulted in a missed PAT, leaving the score at 7-6 in favor of the Ravens.

After a 21-yard touchdown pass from Kirk Cousins to Pierre Garçon gave the Redskins the lead early in the second half, the game swung in later in the third quarter when Ravens linebacker C.J. Mosley intercepted a pass by quarterback Kirk Cousins and raced toward the end zone, only to fumble the ball for a touchback at the goal line. The Redskins responded with an 11-play field goal drive to pushed their lead to six.

The Ravens mounted a final drive that appeared to end with receiver Breshad Perriman hauling in a 23-yard touchdown pass with 30 seconds remaining. However, an official review revealed that Perriman's second foot landed out of bounds, erasing the score and allowing the Redskins to force a game-winning turnover on downs three plays later.

REDSKINS 27, EAGLES 20

LANDOVER, Md. – The Washington Redskins earned their fourth consecutive victory with a 27-20 win against the Philadelphia Eagles in front of an announced crowd of 78,934 people at FedExField in Week 6. With the victory, the Redskins improved to 4-2 through six games for the first time since 2008.

The Redskins dominated the Eagles in total yardage, 493-239. The Redskins took an early 14-0 lead on touchdown passes from Kirk Cousins to Jamison Crowder and Kirk Cousins. However, the Eagles tied the game at 14-14 without the benefit of an offensive play, scoring on an 86-yard kickoff return for touchdown by Wendell Smallwood and a 64-yard interception return for touchdown by Malcolm Jenkins.

The two Philadelphia scores led to an odd stretch in which the Redskins ran 39 consecutive plays from scrimmage across the second and third quarters without Philadelphia running an offensive play (excluding a kneel down to end the first half). According to the Elias Sports Bureau, it was the first such streak of 35-plus plays (excluding kneel downs) in the last 25 years. One hour and 16 minutes of real time elapsed between offensive snaps for Philadelphia.

The Redskins asserted their will offensively throughout the contest. Washington gained a season-high 493 yards, the team's most since accruing 510 yards vs. New Orleans in Week 10 of the 2015 season. The team tallied 230 rushing yards, its largest rushing total since Week 17 of the 2012 season vs. Dallas (274). Running back Matt Jones recorded a career-high 135 yards on 16 carries with one touchdown, sealing the victory with a career-long 57-yard run on the game's final drive.

Washington got to Eagles rookie quarterback Carson Wentz early and often, sacking him on the game's first offensive play as part of the team's five sacks on the day. In total, the Redskins held the Eagles to 239 yards, the fewest allowed by the Redskins since holding St. Louis to 213 yards in Week 2 of the 2015 season. The Redskins also held the Eagles to 94 rushing yards, snapping a streak of five consecutive games allowing 100-plus rushing yards this season.

With the win, the Redskins earned a fourth consecutive victory against the Eagles, their first four-game winning streak in the series since the 1985-87 seasons. They also secured their first three-game home winning streak vs. Philadelphia since the 1997-99 seasons.

Ford Field (Detroit)

LIONS 20, REDSKINS 17

DETROIT – The Washington Redskins lost to the Detroit Lions, 20-17, in front of an announced crowd of 60,461 people at Ford Field in Week 7.

The defeat snapped a four-game winning streak this season and also marked the team's first road loss since Week 11 of the 2015 season. The Redskins gained 417 yards of offense in the contest, exceeding 400 yards for a second straight game.

The teams entered halftime tied, 3-3. Halfway through the third quarter, the Lions scored the first touchdown of the game on a 1-yard touchdown run by running back Zach Zenner. The touchdown snapped the Redskins' streak of nine consecutive quarters without allowing an offensive touchdown. The Redskins went 152:53 between offensive touchdowns allowed (55:13 at Baltimore, 60:00 vs. Philadelphia and 37:40 at Detroit). The touchdown was also the first allowed by the Redskins in the second half of a game since Week 3 against the New York Giants.

After a Matt Prater field goal early in the fourth quarter pushed the Lions' lead to 10 points, the Redskins responded with running back Robert Kelley's first career touchdown on a 1-yard reception. Late in the quarter, quarterback Kirk Cousins kept the ball on a read option and scampered a career-long 19 yards for a go-ahead touchdown with 1:05 remaining. However, Lions quarterback Matthew Stafford engineered a six-play, 75-yard drive in the final minute, hitting wide receiver Anquan Boldin for an 18-yard touchdown with 0:16 to play.

Wide receiver Jamison Crowder recorded seven receptions for 108 yards, both season highs. The 100-yard receiving performance was the second of Crowder's career and his first since Week 17 of the 2015 season. Tight end Vernon Davis (6,064) became the 13th tight end in NFL history to record 6,000 career receiving yards on a 22-yard reception in the first quarter.

Wembley Stadium (London)

REDSKINS 27, BENGALS 27

LONDON – The Washington Redskins tied the Cincinnati Bengals, 27-27, in front of an announced crowd of 84,488 people at Wembley Stadium in London in Week 8. The game marked the Redskins' European regular season debut. It was the Redskins' second regular season game outside the United States all-time, joining the team's 2011 contest against the Buffalo Bills in Toronto.

The international stage illuminated an entertaining contest between cross-conference foes, albeit one that ended without resolution. The tie was the Redskins' 28th all-time but only their second since the NFL adopted overtime in 1974. The game marked the Redskins' first tie since Nov. 23, 1997, when the team tied the New York Giants, 7-7.

Washington opened the game with a methodical 15-play, 80-yard drive culminating in the first touchdown run of running back Robert Kelley's career. The Redskins outgained the Bengals, 226-82, in the first half but led only 10-7 at the break.

The Bengals scored the first 14 points of the second half to take a 10-point lead late in the third quarter. However, Cousins connected on touchdown passes to Jordan Reed and Jamison Crowder to retake the lead. Cincinnati responded with a six-play touchdown drive of their own. Eventually, the Redskins would send the game to overtime with a 40-yard field goal by Dustin Hopkins with 1:07 remaining and a late stop of the Bengals.

The seesaw affair continued in overtime. The teams traded punts on their first possessions of the extra frame. Cousins then drove the Redskins 62 yards in eight plays, but after a Cincinnati timeout, a potential game-winning field goal for the Redskins sailed wide left. However, with the Bengals driving with a chance to win, defensive lineman Chris Baker forced an Andy Dalton fumble that was recovered by defensive end Anthony Lanier II, who was making his NFL debut. A Redskins hail mary attempt on the final play landed out of bounds, sealing the 27-27 draw overseas.

The Redskins recorded 546 yards of offense, the fourth-most by the team in records dating back to 1950. It was the team's largest offensive output since a 559-yard effort vs. Atlanta on Nov. 10, 1991. The Redskins tied a team record by reaching 400 yards of offense for a third consecutive game.

Cousins completed 38-of-56 passes for 458 yards with two touchdowns and one interception. Cousins' 38 completions set a team record, and his career-high 458 passing yards were the second-most in a single game in team history, trailing only Brad Johnson's 471-yard performance on Dec. 26, 1999. The game was the second 400-yard passing game of Cousins' career, tying him with Mark Rypien and Sonny Jurgensen for the most 400-yard passing games in team history.

REDSKINS 26, VIKINGS 20

LANDOVER, Md. – The Washington Redskins defeated the Minnesota Vikings, 26-20, in front of an announced crowd of 78,216 people at FedExField in Week 10. With the victory, the Redskins improved to 5-3-1 in 2016 and earned their third consecutive home win.

After the Redskins defense opened the game with a three-and-out, the Washington offense ran out to a quick 14-0 lead with Kirk Cousins completing passing touchdowns to wide receiver Jamison Crowder and tight end Vernon Davis on the team's first two possessions. However, Minnesota's dormant offense awoke in the second quarter, scoring three touchdowns in the final six minutes. After tying the game at 14-14, a Chris Thompson fumble in the final minute of the half allowed the Vikings the field position to take the lead on the final play of the first half. A missed extra point by Blair Walsh left the Vikings' halftime lead at 20-14.

The Redskins' defense was the story of the game's second half, posting their second second-half shutout of the season. Offensively, the Redskins had four offensive possessions in the second half (excluding a kneelown to end the game), capping all four drives with field goals from kicker Dustin Hopkins.

Trailing 26-20, the Vikings received the ball with 2:31 remaining and promptly drove to the Redskins' 21-yard line. However, a sack by linebacker Trent Murphy on second down and a sack by linebacker Preston Smith on fourth down sealed the victory by giving the Redskins the ball on downs.

Smith tallied four tackles (two solo), two sacks and his first career interception during the game. Since the NFL adopted sacks as an official statistic in 1982, Smith became only the fourth member of the Redskins to record two sacks and an interception in a single game, joining Marcus Washington (Dec. 18, 2005 vs. Dallas), Shawn Springs (Dec. 26, 2004 at Dallas) and Monte Coleman (Dec. 19, 1993 vs. Atlanta).

The game was the culmination of the team's 2016 Alumni Homecoming Weekend. Not including staff and coaches, players in attendance during the weekend represented more than 650 combined seasons of Redskins service, 110 combined Super Bowl appearances, 69 combined Super Bowl titles, 34 members of the 80 Greatest Redskins, 23 Redskins Ring of Famers and nine Pro Football Hall of Famers. The Redskins have now won their last four Alumni Homecoming Weekend contests.

REDSKINS 42, PACKERS 24

LANDOVER, Md. – The Washington Redskins defeated the Green Bay Packers, 42-24, in front of an announced crowd of 77,137 people at FedExField on Sunday Night Football in Week 11.

The Redskins' 42 points were the second-most by the team since the arrival of Head Coach Jay Gruden in 2014, trailing only a 47-point performance in Week 10 of the 2015 season vs. New Orleans. The 42 points were also the second-most scored by the Redskins in the 36-game all-time series between the Redskins and Packers, trailing a 47-point game on Oct. 17, 1983.

The Redskins gained 515 yards of offense. It was the team's second 500-yard game of the season, tying the most 500-yard games in a single season in records dating back to 1950 (accomplished previously in 1950, 1981, 1989 and 1999). The 515 yards were the Redskins' most in a game that did not require overtime since a 559-yard effort in Week 11 of the 1991 season against Atlanta. The Redskins recorded a 546-yard game in Week 8 this season, a game that required a full 15-minute overtime period.

The Redskins finished with two 100-yard receivers (Pierre Garçon and Jamison Crowder) and a 100-yard rusher (Robert Kelley) in a single game for the first time since Sept. 12, 1999 vs. Dallas when receivers Michael Westbrook and Albert Connell and running back Stephen Davis accomplished the feat.

Quarterback Kirk Cousins completed 21-of-30 passes for 375 yards and tied his season high with three touchdown passes and no interceptions. Cousins set a team record with his 17th career 300-yard passing game, including postseason play. Sixteen of his 17 career 300-yard games to date had come in regular season play, passing Sonny Jurgensen for the most in team history. He also became the sixth quarterback in team history to record back-to-back 3,000-yard passing seasons (Sonny Jurgensen, 1966-67; Joe Theismann, 1983-84; Mark Rypien, 1991-92; Jason Campbell, 2008-09; Robert Griffin III, 2012-13).

Running back Robert Kelley recorded career highs in rushing attempts (24), rushing yards (137) and tied a team record with three rushing touchdowns. Kelley's performance marked the 25th time a member of the Redskins has recorded three rushing touchdowns in a single game and was the first since Darrel Young on Nov. 3, 2013.

AT&T Stadium (Arlington, Texas)

COWBOYS 31, REDSKINS 26

ARLINGTON, Texas – The Washington Redskins fell to the Dallas Cowboys, 31-26, in front of an announced crowd of 93,099 people at AT&T Stadium in Week 12. The game was the Redskins' ninth Thanksgiving Day contest all-time, joining Thanksgiving Day games in 1968, 1973, 1974, 1978, 1990, 1996, 2002 and 2012.

The Redskins gained 505 yards of offense and, in doing so, recorded 500 yards of offense in consecutive games for the first time in team history. The Redskins set a team record by recording their third 500-yard game of the season, passing the two 500-yard games recorded in each of the 1950, 1981, 1989 and 1999 campaigns.

Quarterback Kirk Cousins completed 41-of-53 passes for 449 yards with three touchdowns and no interceptions. His 41 completions broke his own team record set earlier in the season.

The 449 passing yards were the second-most in a game in Cousins' career, trailing only a 458-yard overtime game against Cincinnati in Week 8. He claimed sole possession of the most career 400-yard passing games in team history with his third career 400-yard effort, passing Sonny Jurgensen and Mark Rypien (two each). Cousins also became the first player in team history to record multiple 400-yard passing games in a single season.

Tight end Jordan Reed gained 95 yards on a team-high 10 receptions with two receiving touchdowns. During the contest, Reed passed Don Warren (2,536) for fourth-most career receiving yards by a tight end in team history and tied Clint Didier (19) for fourth-most receiving touchdowns by a tight end in Redskins history.

Wide receiver DeSean Jackson finished the game with a season-high 118 yards on four receptions, including a 67-yard touchdown. The touchdown was Jackson's 21st career total touchdown of 60 yards or more, tying Devin Hester for second-most total touchdowns of 60 yards or more in NFL history.

University of Phoenix Stadium (Glendale, Ariz.)

CARDINALS 31, REDSKINS 23

GLENDALE, Ariz. – The Washington Redskins fell to the Arizona Cardinals, 31-23, in front of an announced crowd of 64,939 people at University of Phoenix Stadium in Week 13.

The Redskins fell in an early hole following a 15-play, 75-yard touchdown drive by Arizona on the game's first possession. Field goals of 47 and 20 yards by kicker Dustin Hopkins would be Washington's only six points of the first half.

The Redskins took their first lead of the game on a one-yard touchdown run by quarterback Kirk Cousins in the third quarter. The score was set up by a 59-yard bomb from Cousins to wide receiver DeSean Jackson. On the play, Cousins surpassed Jason Campbell (10,860) for sixth on the Redskins' career passing yardage list.

After Arizona regained the lead on a short touchdown drive following a Cousins sack-fumble, the Redskins engineered an eight-play, 75-yard drive that culminated with a 26-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Jamison Crowder. Up one late in the game, the Cardinals converted a key fourth-and-one to extend a drive that ended with a 42-yard touchdown pass at the two-minute warning. A last ditch Redskins drive ended with an interception by Arizona's Patrick Peterson to seal the victory for the Cardinals.

Cousins threw 36 consecutive pass attempts in the game without an interception until his 37th and final attempt of the game. The interception snapped a career-long streak of 187 consecutive pass attempts without an interception, dating back to Week 8 vs. Cincinnati in London. Cousins' 187 consecutive pass attempts without an interception surpassed Joe Theismann (162 in 1983) for the second-longest streak in team history, trailing only Jason Campbell's stretch of 271 passes without an interception across the 2007-08 campaigns.

Linebacker Ryan Kerrigan recorded his 10th sack of the season in the contest to become the fifth member of the Redskins to post multiple 10-sack seasons since the NFL adopted sacks as an official statistic in 1982 (Dexter Manley, 4; Charles Mann, 4; Andre Carter, 2; Brian Orakpo, 2).

Lincoln Financial Field (Philadelphia)

REDSKINS 27, EAGLES 22

PHILADELPHIA – The Washington Redskins defeated the Philadelphia Eagles, 27-22, in front of an announced crowd of 69,596 people at Lincoln Financial Field in Week 14.

With the win, the Redskins earned a fifth straight victory against the Eagles for the first time since a six-game winning streak in the series across the 1981-84 seasons. It also marked consecutive road wins against the Eagles for the first time since the 2007-08 seasons. The contest feature five lead changes, as the Eagles held leads at various points in all four quarters. A touchdown in the final minute of the second quarter gave the Eagles a 13-7 halftime lead.

In the third quarter, quarterback Kirk Cousins connected with wide receiver DeSean Jackson for an 80-yard touchdown. The touchdown was Jackson's 22nd career 60-plus-yard touchdown, moving past Devin Hester (21) for sole possession of second-most total touchdowns of 60 yards or more in NFL history. It was also Jackson's 26th career 50-plus-yard touchdown, tying Steve Smith, Sr. (26) for fourth in total touchdowns of 50 yards or more in the NFL since the 1970 merger. The pass from was the longest by members of the Redskins since the duo connected for an 81-yard touchdown pass at Philadelphia in Week 3 of the 2014 season.

After a 15-yard touchdown pass from Cousins to Pierre Garçon appeared to give the Redskins control of the contest, Eagles cornerback Leodis McKelvin returned an interception of Cousins 29 yards to cut the Washington lead to two points after a failed two-point conversion. A 41-yard field goal by the Eagles gave Philadelphia a one-point lead with less than five minutes remaining.

Cousins engineered an eight-play, 77-yard touchdown drive that culminated in a 25-yard touchdown run by running back Chris Thompson. After the Eagles drove down to the Redskins' 14-yard line, linebacker Ryan Kerrigan sealed the victory with his 11th sack of the season, forcing a Carson Wentz fumble that was recovered by linebacker Trent Murphy.

With a 334-yard day, the Redskins tied a team record by exceeding 300 yards of offense for a 17th consecutive regular season game, dating back to last season, matching the mark set across the 1987-88 seasons.

FedExField (Landover, Md.)

PANTHERS 26, REDSKINS 15

LANDOVER, Md. – The Washington Redskins lost to the Carolina Panthers, 26-15, in front of an announced crowd of 76,689 people at FedExField in Week 15.

The Redskins gained 335 yards of offense, breaking a team record by exceeding 300 yards of offense in an 18th consecutive regular season game, dating back to last season. The stretch surpassed the 17-game mark set across 1987-88 seasons. The Redskins opened a season with 14 consecutive 300-yard games for the second time in team history (1987).

Quarterback Kirk Cousins completed 32-of-47 passes for 315 yards. On a 17-yard third down conversion to wide receiver DeSean Jackson, Cousins broke his own team record for passing yards in a single season of 4,166, set in 2015. In the process, Cousins tied his team record (seven in 2015) for 300-yard passing games in a single season.

Despite strong statistical advantages for the Panthers in the first half, the Redskins entered halftime trailing by only four points. However, the Panthers forced and recovered a Cousins fumble on the first play from scrimmage in the second half and promptly turned the turnover into seven points.

The Redskins cut the Panthers' advantage to a one-score deficit with a pair of second-half field goals by Dustin Hopkins, but the Panthers iced the contest with a late 41-yard field goal and a fumble recovery on the Redskins' subsequent possession.

Tight end Vernon Davis caught four passes for 23 yards. On his second reception of the game, an 11-yard gain, Davis became the 12th tight end in NFL history to record 500 career receptions. Davis (502) also passed Ben Coates and Todd Heap (499 each) for 12th on the NFL's list of career receptions by a tight end during the contest.

Soldier Field (Chicago)

REDSKINS 41, BEARS 21

CHICAGO – The Redskins defeated the Chicago Bears, 41-21, in front of an announced crowd of 57,953 people at Soldier Field in Week 16. The Redskins improved to 8-6-1 with the win and secured a winning record in back-to-back seasons for the first time since 1996-97.

The Redskins controlled the entire game, racing out to a 14-0 first-quarter lead on a rushing and receiving touchdown by running back Chris Thompson. Thompson became the first member of the Redskins to score a rushing touchdown and a receiving touchdown in the same quarter since Kelvin Bryant in the second quarter at Dallas on Oct. 9, 1998.

Quarterback Kirk Cousins completed 18-of-29 passes for 270 yards with one touchdown and no interceptions for a passer rating of 104.1. He also set career highs in rushing yards (30) and rushing touchdowns (two). He threw a touchdown pass in his 18th consecutive road game, tying Joe Theismann for the longest streak of road games with a passing touchdown (18 from 1982-85). He also tied Sammy Baugh (nine) for the third-most career rushing touchdowns by a Redskins quarterback.

The Redskins' defense intercepted quarterback Matt Barkley five times, the team's most since Nov. 29, 1992, vs. the Phoenix Cardinals (five). Cornerback Bashaud Breeland and Josh Norman recorded two interceptions each, marking the first time the Redskins had multiple players record multiple interceptions in a single game in records available dating back to 1960.

Kicker Dustin Hopkins converted 2-of-2 field goal attempts, and with his second field goal, he tied Mark Moseley's record (33 in 1983) for the most field goals in a single season in team history.

Linebacker Preston Smith blocked a 22-yard field goal attempt by Chicago in the first quarter. The field goal block was the first of Smith's career and the Redskins' first since Nov. 4, 2012 (DeAngelo Hall vs. Carolina).

The Redskins improved to 26-23-1 against the Bears all-time, including postseason play. The win was the Redskins' seventh consecutive victory against the Bears, Washington's longest active winning streak against any opponent. With the victory, the Redskins won four straight games at Soldier Field for the first time since the 1986-97 seasons.

GM SCOT MCCLOUGHAN

'Look at the film. It doesn't lie'

By Charles Robinson, Yahoo! Sports
June 15, 2016

ASHBURN, Va. – On many days, before most people were rubbing the sleep out of their eyes, Washington Redskins general manager Scot McCloughan was climbing a staircase around the corner from his office at the team's headquarters. Often, he would sit down and swivel his chair in the direction of a conference room where an endless stream of practice tape awaited his staff. On his left, a wall of televisions might be flickering with some form of NFL Films. Highlights of Jerry Rice or Joe Greene. A top-10 list of running backs. Maybe a documentary on quarterbacks.

It has been like this for McCloughan for a few years now. Visitors might come in and stare over their shoulder, making conversation about a particular player. But to McCloughan, he would always see teams in the footage, not players. He would see cultures. That's what commanded his attention. So while a visitor on Tuesday arrived and asked about cornerback Josh Norman, McCloughan's entry into the conversation was to speak about the team around him.

"We're quicker," McCloughan said Tuesday. "Bigger, younger, faster, more competitive."

He leaned forward.

"The culture is what I want to build," he said. "If we win a championship, that would be awesome. But I want guys to understand the importance of being a team. It's not about the individuals. It's the sum of the parts. ... We're not close to where we need to be yet, but it's going in the right direction. Definitely."

Make no mistake, the Redskins are better. But they are still a Josh Norman story. Rarely is a team gifted the unexpected opportunity to sign an All-Pro cornerback, especially one who was coming off a career season and a Super Bowl appearance. That said, Norman is only one point of light for a Redskins franchise that is suddenly looking remarkably intriguing heading into the offseason break. And McCloughan is at the center of that.

A little over 17 months ago, the Redskins hired him to revamp the talent base. And with his second training camp less than two months away, the results are already obvious. The NFL is no longer a league of three-year plans. Every position is basically an annual scholarship – and renewal is never a given. As McCloughan put it, "You've got to rock and roll." That, or the NFL tour moves on without you.

So here the Redskins are, with energy and airiness that is a departure from this time one year ago. Quarterback Robert Griffin is gone, taking with him an atmosphere of anxiety over what might be said next, what might be tweeted, whether or not the next day would feature an unexpected news conference or disjointed quote in the media. That alone has made the quarterbacks meeting room more manageable. Meanwhile, Griffin's presumed long-term replacement, Kirk Cousins, hasn't locked in a long-term deal – yet there is little worry on either side of the negotiating table that things will take a turn for the ugly. If Cousins gets his deal done, both sides will rejoice. If he doesn't, both sides still know it's in everyone's best interests that he take a step forward in his development. If that happens, everyone wins. It will cost the Redskins more, but the price tag will also come with some peace of mind.

As for Norman, he was an unexpected blessing. But one that Washington deserves some credit for reeling in. The New Orleans Saints were readying themselves to take their best shot at Norman in free agency, but never got their chance. Once they saw the red carpet treatment Norman was getting on his visit to Washington, they began shutting down some salary cap shuffling that would have allowed them to make an offer. The Saints saw it quickly. Once McCloughan got Norman into the building, he wasn't leaving without a deal in place.

HEAD COACH JAY GRUDEN

Jay Gruden defies the odds in winning over the Redskins' locker room

By Dan Steinberg, The Washington Post
September 11, 2016

Becoming head coach of the Redskins is something like appearing on "Bachelor in Paradise": The experience won't last long, it'll definitely make you famous, and yet it's hard to leave with your reputation intact.

Mike Shanahan still hasn't gotten another job after his meltdown in Washington, if you don't count his commercials for NFL Ticket Exchange. Jim Zorn was done in by a bingo caller. Marty Schottenheimer lasted one year. Steve Spurrier wrote in his new memoir that he knew he was sunk after his first season in Ashburn; "this has no chance of working," he remembers telling his wife before his second and final season.

A year ago, Jay Gruden appeared set to join that crew. After winning four games in 2014 and then benching the quarterback he had ostensibly been hired to rescue, Gruden felt like a short-timer, in charge of counting life vests as the ship went down yet again.

Gruden's response? He swapped out several of his assistant coaches, but he didn't change his approach, remaining the same player-friendly, wise-cracking, ball-chucking extrovert who got the job. If it worked, this approach would seem charmingly refreshing. If it didn't, he would be lumped in with Spurrier and Zorn: first-time NFL head coaches who were in over their heads in Washington. The latter felt like the betting favorite.

But for the 2015 season, at least, charm won out. Only two coaches in the Dan Snyder era have produced a winning record within two years: Joe Gibbs and now Gruden. Only two coaches Snyder hired have won a division title: Shanahan and now Gruden. Things that would have been used against him in a flailing campaign – labeling one game a "Code Red," chasing wide receivers around during practice, getting his nipple twisted on-camera by DeSean Jackson – became endearing instead. In the process, Gruden won not just the division, but the locker room.

"He's a real players coach, that's the only way I can describe it," as long snapper Nick Sundberg put it. "He's absolutely, 100 percent a players coach, and everybody on the team frickin' loves him."

Washington has had a flip-flop approach to head coaches: a Very Serious veteran (Schottenheimer, Gibbs, Shanahan) followed by an inexperienced fun-loving first-timer (Spurrier, Zorn, Gruden). Can you imagine Jackson grabbing Schottenheimer's nipple? Or Shanahan face-washing his biggest star during a locker room scum, as Gruden recently did to Josh Norman? But this is one-of-the-guys Gruden, so it apparently works. The atmosphere is professional, but not uptight. Business casual, call it.

"He hasn't changed since day one," said veteran Kedric Golston, who's on his fourth head coach in Washington. "He's not trying to fit into what some would say a 'disciplined' head coach is. He's a coach that will joke around with you. He lets his personality come out. But the expectation doesn't change, from one end of the spectrum to the next. He is who he is, he lets his personality come out, but he still expects great things out of the group."

"He's a players guy. In this league, a lot of coaches don't really have relationships with their players," Jackson added. "He's just staying himself and staying true to who he is."

[And that famous nipple pinch? "You know, he's a touchy guy; every time he walks by he wants to hit you and rough you up and stuff," Jackson explained, "so that was my little time to get him back."]

The next challenge for Gruden? To make that approach – more pal than dictator – work for a second straight year, with the Redskins facing not preseason scorn, but significant expectations. The past two seasons, there weren't enough hopes for anyone to be disappointed. Gruden's third season here will be the first in which a letdown is even possible.

If this weighs on Gruden, he does a terrific job covering it up. He still makes the same one-liners at his players' expense. [Asked recently about oft-injured rookie Josh Doctson's promise that it was "go time," Gruden publicly wondered if this meant "go back to the training room.") He still intentionally refers to players by the wrong names, smiling at them when they turn their heads in surprise. And he still takes the same relationship-building approach with his players, even the youngest ones.

2016 FEATURE CLIPS

"I didn't get the hard-nosed, angry-all-the-time vibe from him," said rookie Su'a Cravens. "It feels like he's like another one of your teammates. ... He handles his business, and he knows how to build relationships with his players."

Asked to explain Gruden's charm, one player pointed to lunch time at Redskins Park. Shanahan didn't show up much in the team cafeteria, and players assumed he was in his office, poring over videotapes to see how they had acted in team meetings. Gruden? He regularly joins different groups of players at lunch, asking about their families, making non-football conversation, telling jokes and busting [chops], as more than one player put it.

Some of this feels like more than just Jay Gruden being Jay Gruden. It feels like a coach who has apparently proved that the Redskins job isn't too big for him, that he won't be swept out of here in a year or two like some of his predecessors. Gruden said last week that "everybody is a lot more comfortable" in year three; include him high on that list.

"He's way more relaxed," said Jack Gruden, Jay's 19-year old son, who is often around the team. "I don't think he's changed in his coaching. I think he just got more confident working and being around the guys he's with now. He's just more comfortable being a head coach."

That Gruden advanced to this point feels like an upset. A year ago this week, he was listed by one oddsmaker as the second-most likely NFL coach to lose his job. But more than a dozen NFL coaches have been fired since his arrival in Washington. The Wizards and Nationals both made coaching changes. And the first-time head coach in Ashburn — sticking with his offense, his gut feeling and his unpretentious style — made it to year three. Asked to sum up his coach, Sundberg went with this: so [bleeping] smart at Xs and Os, and yet a blast to be around.

Last year's division title will still seem like a fluke if Gruden can't repeat the trick, and there are plenty of non-believers. Still, he'll have a chance to redefine what it is to be the head coach of the Redskins. Fate attempted to twist Gruden's nipple, in other words, and Gruden grinned and twisted it right back.

OFFENSIVE COORDINATOR SEAN McVAY

He's the NFL's Best Head Coaching Candidate. And He's 30. Meet Sean McVay.

By Andy Benoit, MMQB
August 2, 2016

It's a Tuesday night in June, and Washington's football headquarters are mostly empty. It's been a few hours since the second day of the team's final minicamp practice wrapped up, and offensive coordinator Sean McVay is in his spacious corner office, watching film on a flat screen. There's a light tap on the open door.

It's Bill Callahan, the coaching lifer who now oversees Washington's O-line. His eyes are twinkling. Really twinkling, like in a Disney cartoon. He has an idea for a new run play.

From behind his desk McVay leans forward as Callahan draws on a white board. "And so you know how we usually do this against these defensive fronts?" Callahan says. "Well, OK, OK, OK, follow me here. What if we, instead, were to do this?" He redraws the running back's path to the other side of the formation, and now his eyes are twinkling even more.

So are McVay's. "I love it," McVay says, adding that Washington could also use it as a check (an audible) at the line of scrimmage. For the next 10 minutes, McVay, the NFL's youngest coordinator at 30, and Callahan, a month shy of his 60th birthday, go back and forth, rapid fire, about when and how they can practice this new play; what they'll tell the guards and centers to do; what they'll tell the quarterback to look for; and how they'll instruct the running backs to set up the cut.

Callahan got his first coaching job, at the University of Illinois, six years before McVay was born. He was head coach of the Oakland Raiders in Super Bowl XXXVII, when McVay was 16. Asked whether he has any issue working under someone half his age, Callahan quickly answers no. "[He] is in this position for a reason... he's earned it."

And at this rate, McVay won't be in this position for much longer. Last season, his seventh as an NFL coach and first as a play-caller, he and head coach Jay Gruden took an unproven first-year starting quarterback and turned Washington into the league's sixth most efficient passing game and 10th highest scoring offense.

"I'm sure," says Gruden, "he'll be a head coach a lot sooner than people think."

After Callahan leaves, McVay restarts the film. There are no wife and kids to get home to. He watches spring practice and raves about Kirk Cousins' underrated quick release. "OK, OK, let's look at just one more throw," he says for a fourth time. Jordan Reed catches a touchdown. "Now that's a dime. Look at that throw! That's a dime!"

When the film ends, McVay puts on an old TV copy of the 1981 NFC championship, when Joe Montana and the 49ers defeated the Cowboys on a come-from-behind drive, culminating with The Catch. "Look at them march down the field," he announces. "People think it's Joe Montana winning this game. No sir. It's this [smashmouth run play] '18-19 Bob!' Look at all these extra bodies in the backfield. Here's '18-19 Bob' again!"

Dwight Clark makes The Catch. All done now, time for dinner?

"People also forget how much of an opportunity Dallas had after this play," McVay says, settling in to now watch the forgotten preceding Cowboys drive. [It ended with a lost sack-fumble on San Francisco's 44-yard line.]

McVay wasn't born until four years after the '81 Niners' Super Bowl run, but he has a special connection to the team: His grandfather, John McVay, was its VP/Director of Football Operations. That year produced the first of John's astounding five Super Bowl rings during his 20 years heading San Francisco's front office.

Sean, of course, grew up during the back half of his grandfather's tenure. He lived in Atlanta and played catch with Jerry Rice and Steve Young whenever the Niners made their annual trip to town.

"I can remember being around those guys, being around Jeff Garcia and Terrell Owens," he says. "They were always so great to me. At the time I was so young, you don't realize what a unique and neat experience it was."

McVay played soccer as a youth. He took up football formally in eighth grade and went on to be a star option quarterback at Marist High, in Georgia's ultra-competitive 4A class. "He was like a coach on the field," says Marist coach Alan Chadwick, who's been at the school for 30 years. "He saw things that a lot of players don't see. He felt things a lot of players don't feel. And he was able to adapt and make things happen on his own."

An elected captain, McVay after the season would take all of his offensive linemen to the Brazilian Steakhouse Fogo de Chão. "You don't hear about that very often in high school," says Chadwick. "You hear about it in college. Maybe in pros."

McVay grew up in a traditional two-parent household. His father, Tim, a veteran TV news executive, played safety for Lee Corso at Indiana. There Tim met Sean's mother, Cindy, who now owns an interior design business and helped her son buy and furnish his first town home after getting promoted to coordinator.

"Sean's mom and dad are very comfortable in their skin," says Chadwick. "And very comfortable in any atmosphere, any situation. Socially. In groups. Speaking in front of people. They're just such class individuals. And so much of that, you can tell, rubbed off on Sean."

When visiting with McVay, you notice the confidence and vibrancy. You also notice the uncanny similarities to Jon Gruden. From the eyebrow cocking to the affirmative nodding and exaggerated, slow-motion hand gestures; it can feel like McVay is flat-out impersonating the Super Bowl winning coach. "Everyone teases him that he's Baby Jon," says former Washington tight end Chris Cooley. "His mannerisms are more like Jon's than Jay [Gruden]'s are."

There's an explanation for that. In 2008, shortly before McVay graduated from Miami (Ohio), where his career as a receiver and return specialist was hindered by injuries, he went to the NFL combine in Indianapolis and interviewed for a job with Jon Gruden, a long-time family friend. Gruden hired him as an assistant wide receivers coach. McVay started immediately after graduating, skipping the graduation ceremony to get to the team's offseason program.

After that first year, Gruden and his entire staff were fired—something McVay calls a blessing in disguise. He spent the 2009 season with the UFL's Florida Tuskers, under head coach Jim Haslett (fired by the Rams after '08) and with a little-known offensive coordinator named Jay Gruden. The Tuskers started 6-0 and reached the championship, but really, what defined that season for the coaches was the creation of Jon Gruden's now famous Fired Football Coaches Association (FFCA). McVay spent hours each day in the classroom with Haslett and the Grudens. Reputed football experts from all over were flown in as speakers. Jon ran most of the meetings, and there was nowhere to hide. Attendees had to answer pop questions, get up and draw on the board and think miles outside the box. It was, as Cindy McVay puts it, like getting your masters in coaching.

Jay even says "I learned more about coaching football in those FFCA meetings than I probably did in seven years working for my brother."

In 2010, McVay got an opportunity to interview with Washington's Mike Shanahan for an offensive quality control job. The conversation transitioned from computers and data processing to actual football, and after a few hours Shanahan hired him on the spot. That year McVay worked quality control and also as an assistant to receivers coach Keenan McCardell. Then, with four weeks left in the season, tight ends coach Jon Embree left to take the head job at Colorado. McVay was promoted, and just like that, Washington had a 24-year-old running its tight ends meetings. In those meetings was the 28-year-old Cooley, a two-time Pro Bowler, and 24-year-old Fred Davis, who had been a second-round pick three years earlier.

"It didn't matter where Sean came from, how old he was—the dude knew it better than anyone else," says Cooley. "He was the best.

"I remember, in the first week that he took over, I was finally being coached intricately on some of the things that go into the tight end position. He taught every tiny nuance. I wish I would've gotten to work with him a lot longer. I loved all the coaches that I played for. I absolutely did. But I would've been better if I had worked with Sean for my entire career. I have no doubt about that."

Shanahan never had any concerns about appointing such a young coach. "Players want to be taught," he says. "If you can teach a player something that can keep him in the game, whatever it may be, they don't care about your age.

"Getting a chance to watch Sean coach and handle himself, I knew he was going to be a coordinator and eventually a head coach in the National Football League."

In 2014, Shanahan was fired and replaced by Jay Gruden, who had been the offensive coordinator in Cincinnati. At his introductory press conference, a reporter told Gruden there was a rumor that he would tab McVay as his offensive coordinator. "Nice, good for Sean," Gruden said. And that, essentially, was how people learned who the new offensive coordinator was.

As Gruden explains, "Sean was here with Robert Griffin before I got the job, and with Kirk. He kind of knew the players that we had and the system that they ran. So I could try to transform a lot of my stuff into their language and it would be a smooth process."

In 2015, Gruden quietly handed play-calling duties to McVay. Kirk Cousins was the new starting QB after spending the entire off-season working behind Griffin. [A lot of wasted practice reps those turned out to be.] In the second half of the season, Cousins threw for 2,212 yards, 19 touchdowns and two interceptions (passer rating: 126.1). Washington surged to an NFC East title.

What stood out again and again on film was how few plays the quarterback himself had to actually create. Washington's system, with its array of formations, intertwined route combinations and zone running game married to play-action, was often defining the plays for him. Schematically, there may not have been a better-designed offense in football. Cousins, to his credit, allowed it to function and prospered under the circumstances.

"I could be here a long time talking about Sean's help in my development and his ability to call plays for our offense and lead our offense," says Cousins. "In the 2015 offseason I was coming off a year when I had been benched halfway through and was going into the next year with the chance to really only compete as a backup. I was a little disappointed with that and Sean was a great encourager through that process, challenging me to stay the course. I think his belief in me and his support and his encouragement was what enabled me to eventually have the opportunities that I had."

From a pure strategic standpoint, Cousins explains that "part of the reason our offense has a lot of depth is because a lot of different guys get to touch the ball. That goes back to play-calling and the way Sean aligns players. You have to be creative with [weapons like] Jordan Reed, DeSean Jackson. That takes a lot of preparation and creativity and Sean does it on a week-in, week-out basis."

Jackson took the rare personal measure of sitting down with an unknown media member to laud his coach. "Sean's young but he's still one of those guys that wants everything done right," Jackson says. "He wants you to pay attention. He wants you to know what you need to do. And he's very detailed about it. He breaks everything down in meetings. There's nothing he doesn't notice. He hits every part of the game."

America wasn't introduced to McVay until last season's Wild-Card round, when FOX put him on full screen and analyst Troy Aikman sang his praises. Washington lost that day, scoring only 18 points, but that was not reflective of the game-planning. In the first quarter Jackson left a touchdown on the field by failing to explode to the front pylon on a crossing route. [Washington had first-and-goal from the one-yard-line and wound up kicking a field goal. McVay regrets running the ball twice on the first two downs that followed.] On the following series, a designed play-action deep shot got Jackson wide open over the top for a touchdown. However, the TV audience didn't see that because Green Bay's Julius Peppers beat offensive tackle Mike Compton around the edge to create a sack for Clay Matthews. People in the NFL noticed it on film, though. The score at that point would have been 12-0 Washington, if not for the sack.

Only two men in NFL history have become head coaches before age 32: Lane Kiffin with the 2007 Raiders and Harland Svare with the 1962 Rams. Both were short-tenured and neither had a season above .500. Perhaps that's why McVay is eager but not necessarily antsy to land a head job.

"What's absolutely incredible is Sean doesn't have any ego," says Cooley. "He will never say he believes he's great. He knows he's great at what he's doing, but he'll never tell you. He'll be a head coach. And it won't be long."

McVay frequently uses the word "process" and values the personal growth that "processes" can bring. But another strong season as a play-caller, and NFL executives could stop whispering his name and actually start knocking. Like Callahan did after that minicamp, they'll find the door open, McVay at his desk, ready to talk football.

OL COACH BILL CALLAHAN

A bright spot for the Redskins is the offensive line

By Liz Clarke, The Washington Post
December 9, 2016

They trudge into the locker room 30 minutes after their teammates have come off the practice field. Dripping in sweat regardless of the temperature, they're slow to peel off their jerseys, even slower to cut off the layers of athletic tape stabilizing the puffy ankles that improbably support their massive legs, trunks, shoulders and heads.

You won't find the Washington Redskins' offensive linemen playing ping-pong, foosball or shuffleboard after practice like so many of their peers huddled around the game tables installed in the offseason to foster team building. After Bill Callahan's extended workouts that follow each practice, the Redskins linemen move like giant tortoises, interested only in their next meal and a well-earned chance to get off their feet.

2016 FEATURE CLIPS

"They don't have time to play ping-pong!" said Callahan, the Redskins' offensive line coach, in an interview this past week, chuckling at the notion. "God bless 'em if they are [playing], but they don't have much time. They're pretty focused."

Amid the late-season push to make the playoffs, Redskins fans are embroiled in debates over quarterback Kirk Cousins's value and whether wide receiver DeSean Jackson or Pierre Garcon has made the stronger case for being brought back in 2017. Drawing far less notice is the offensive line's contribution to one of the NFL's most entertaining and productive offenses — a unit that, despite the team's defensive shortcomings, just might pave the Redskins' way to the playoffs after a two-game slide has left them 6-5-1.

The Redskins' passing game is the NFL's second-most prolific, with Cousins on track to shatter the single-season franchise record he set for passing yards last year (4,166). That's simply not possible for a pocket passer without terrific protection, and the offensive line has allowed just 16 sacks, tied for the second fewest in the NFL.

And while rookie Rob Kelley deserves credit for helping the running game get on track, credit the offensive line for punching the holes that have enabled the Redskins' yards per carry average to vault from 3.7 last season (30th in the NFL) to 4.5 (fifth) with four games remaining.

Mixing and matching

The line has stood tall, barring a play or two, despite a revolving cast forced by injuries at center and left guard and the suspension of Pro Bowl left tackle Trent Williams, who returns from his four-game exile for violating the league's substance abuse policy Sunday at Philadelphia (5-7).

Training his linemen at multiple positions is woven into the fabric of everything Callahan teaches. It starts in the classroom, drilling players in terminology that can be easily translated in any abrupt switch from tackle to guard, guard to center. It has paid off multiple times this season: In Game 3 at the New York Giants, when center Kory Lichtensteiger injured his calf and had to be replaced by guard Spencer Long. Later in the same game, left guard Shawn Lauvao went down, forcing Callahan to slide Williams inside to guard and tap backup Ty Nsekhe at left tackle.

Long filled his new role ably until a concussion sent him to the sidelines in last weekend's loss at Arizona. On Sunday, the Redskins will field their third starting center in NFL veteran John Sullivan, who stepped in seamlessly at Arizona.

With Williams suspended for Games 9 through 12, the 6-foot-8 Nsekhe did admirably at the line's most critical spot. Nsekhe did so well, in fact, that several former Redskins and a chorus of fans have called for keeping Nsekhe at left tackle and using Williams to supplant Lauvao, who gave up a sack that led to a momentum-changing turnover in the loss at Arizona.

Callahan said no serious consideration was given to re-purposing Williams.

"Well, he's a Pro Bowl player" Callahan said, asked about a switch to guard. "He's Trent Williams!"

That said, he didn't rule out shuffling the lineup if he deemed it in the team's best interest or injury dictates, saying, "That's always an option."

Callahan credits the work ethic and character of his linemen, whom he pushes and praises in equal measure each day, for the unit's success.

"They all play hurt; they're all banged up," Callahan said. "These are real men. After they've been pretty mangled, they get back on the field for each other; they don't want to let anybody down. And I respect that greatly."

The Redskins' linemen, in turn, credit Callahan, whose coaching career has spanned 15 years in the college ranks and nearly two decades in the NFL and included stints as a head coach, offensive coordinator and offensive line coach. Throughout, the art and skill of blocking has been his calling card.

A former Division III quarterback at a small Catholic school outside his native Chicago, Callahan, 60, is soft-spoken and not quite 6 feet tall, if that. In practice he is dwarfed by his linemen — all of his starters towering 6 feet 4 or more and weighing upward of 320 pounds. At times, their coach looks like a tourist at Big Sur gazing up at the giant sequoias as he issues instructions to his guards and tackles.

Yet Callahan commands total respect — not for his physical stature and certainly not by yelling, which isn't part of his repertoire. He gets players' attention through the clarity of directions, the specificity of his critiques and the utility of the myriad drills he devises to counter the specific challenges posed by upcoming defenses.

"Ready on the ball," he says after lining up his linemen for two-, four- and six-man drills, and then blurts something like a "Hut! or 'Ut!" to trigger the explosive burst he seeks. "Good! Good!" he responds, even as he makes a subtle correction on hand placement or footwork. Callahan's left hand clutches his script for the session; over his shoulder is an assistant coach video taping every drill for closer study that night, the basis for more corrections the next morning.

'Everything starts up front'

Callahan works quickly on the field and expects his players to keep up.

"The only time you have to really improve them is when you get on the grass," he explains. "As a coach, I try to really maximize the time that we're on the field, every minute, so that it counts — so it's meaningful, so they can see improvement. But to stand around and talk and crack jokes, there are too many things we've got to go through, whether it's stunts, blitz pickups, pressure pickups, individual techniques. I can go on and on."

No point is too fine to escape Callahan's notice, says right tackle Morgan Moses.

"He knows his stuff, man," Moses said. "It's almost like having a cheat sheet for the game."

"Technician" is how right guard Brandon Scherff sums up Callahan, a stickler for correct hand placement, footwork, leverage and quickness. "He picks out the positives and the negatives, and just tries to correct the negatives off the positives."

Asked about Lauvao's recent struggles, Callahan said it's easy for fans to fixate on a single bad play and overlook consistent, well-executed blocks that draw no notice.

Regarding Williams, who has been criticized in many quarters as "selfish" and "immature" for triggering the four-game suspension, Callahan has only praise for his left tackle, whom he calls "The Lion." The praise is unstinting.

"All I know is he is caring, passionate and a leader they all look up to," Callahan said of Williams. "He is a man that has done a lot for this organization and has done a lot for this line group. I respect him; I love him. He is one of the best players I have ever coached. He has great concern and care about the game. And he's a really, really smart guy with great intuitiveness."

Callahan's is accorded comparable respect in NFL circles, particularly among former players who revel in the blocking schemes that enable elite offenses to function.

Former Cowboys fullback Daryl Johnston, now an NFL analyst for Fox, marvels at the impact Callahan has had on the Redskins' offense since Coach Jay Gruden lured him away from Dallas after the 2014 season. "I'm a big believer that everything starts up front," Johnston said in a telephone interview, alluding to the Redskins' decision to invest in their offensive line and hire Callahan as its architect.

In Johnston's view, it stands in sharp contrast to the way Seattle has built its offense, depending on a mobile quarterback (Russell Wilson) to mask shortcomings on the line. In the long run, Johnston wonders whether the Seahawks' approach won't catch up to them in the playoffs. Meanwhile, he says, playoff hopefuls around the NFL are hoping the Redskins don't make the postseason expressly because of the strength of their offensive line.

Former Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann considers the offensive line the most important yet most underrated part of an offense. The quality of line play is how he handicaps teams' Super Bowl prospects. It's also why he regards Callahan, whose imprint still shows on the Cowboys' top-ranked line, as the Redskins' most significant acquisition under Gruden.

"Bill is basically responsible for two of the three best [offensive] lines in football right now — the Redskins and the Cowboys," Theismann says. "Coaches have to earn the respect of players, and Bill has no personal agenda. He's all about making every one of his players as good as they possibly can. Jay is a very smart football coach, and after his first year, he knew he needed to delegate re-

OLB COACH GREG MANUSKY

Greg Manuskay pushes Redskins outside linebackers with energy, zeal

By Anthony Gulizia, The Washington Times
August 23, 2016

ASHBURN | Practice had commenced for all of five minutes before Greg Manuskay was hurling agility bags at his outside linebackers' legs.

“I’m your fullback,” he bellowed. “Five bucks every time I cut you down.”

The drill was simple. The Washington Redskins’ outside linebackers coach instructed his players to engage the blocking sled, then charge at him as if they were pursuing the quarterback. Manuskay threw the bags at their feet to simulate a block from an oncoming running back or fullback in pass protection, challenging them not to break their stride.

“This is like taking candy from a baby,” Manuskay howled after the first two reps. “Cuttin’ ‘em down like lawn dogs today.”

On the third rep, Trent Murphy engaged the blocking sled and karate-kicked the bag when Manuskay tossed it, causing his fellow outside linebackers and the coach to nearly keel over with laughter. Murphy regained his concentration, restarted his rep and the drill continued.

Throughout the preseason, Manuskay, who’s in his first year as the Redskins’ outside linebackers coach, has buzzed around practices with unabated enthusiasm. On the field he’s as relentless as a jackhammer, pushing his players through drills with an energy more suited for gamedays than a sunny Tuesday in August.

“My heart’s probably going to explode, but I want enthusiasm,” Manuskay, 50, says with a grin. “The thing is, as a coach or as a teacher, you want them to be involved and have some excitement. The way you coach your players is the way they’re going to act and how they’re going to perform. I like energy and that’s what they’re giving me.”

In the meeting room Manuskay is sharp, keying in on what he wants to see from his outside linebackers as well as the rest of the defense, pointing out little nuances such as the expected safety rotations on a certain play.

The players have responded well to Manuskay’s presence, especially after not having an outside linebackers coach last season. The responsibilities were split among defensive coordinator Joe Barry and his assistants. During pass-rush meetings, the outside linebackers piled in with the defensive linemen and coach Robb Akey. Other times, they worked with inside linebackers coach Kirk Olivadotti

“It helps a lot because you have that individual attention,” said second-year outside linebacker Preston Smith. “He breaks down film only for us, only for the outside linebackers and it’s great because we sit down and get to break it down one by one.”

Manuskay swears that his energy on the field now is dialed down from his playing career. He played 12 NFL seasons with the Redskins, Minnesota Vikings and Kansas City Chiefs from 1988-99 after going undrafted out of Colgate. The hard hits he’d deliver to opponents matched his intensity.

“I was throwing up, psyched out, butting heads and stuff like that,” Manuskay said of his pregame routine when he was a player. “I’m downplaying it now as a coach, but I emphasize every [freaking] snap is important because it is, it can turn the tide and they’re in that position to turn the game around.”

What has helped the Redskins’ outside linebackers the most throughout the preseason is that Manuskay can break things down from different perspectives. He’s as intense as he is educated, having spent the last nine seasons as a defensive coordinator for the Indianapolis Colts, San Diego Chargers and San Francisco 49ers. He coached the Redskins linebackers in 2001 and moved on to the same position with the Chargers from 2002-06.

“He’s awesome, I haven’t been with him too long and he’s one of my all-time favorites ever,” said Trent Murphy, who had transitioned to defensive end this offseason but switched back to outside linebacker after Junior Galette tore his right Achilles tendon before training camp.

“He’s hilarious. He talks about it all the time, that it’s a long season with camp and preseason and postseason, so you’ve got to be able to get your work done and keep it light, take time for that too and he does a good job balancing it. I appreciate him a lot for that. He’s a damn good coach.”

Greg Toler, who played cornerback with the Colts from 2013-15 while Manuskay was the defensive coordinator, has had a first-hand look at the coach’s positive influence. Toler pointed to Manuskay’s ability to breakdown a defense through every assignment and how it helped him develop into a more consistent cornerback.

Toler was eager to sign with the Redskins this offseason and join Manuskay, even though he’d be working solely with the outside linebackers.

DL CHRIS BAKER

Baker’s Double: Chris Baker settles into comfortable roles with Redskins, family

By Anthony Gulizia, The Washington Times
April 14, 2016

Chris Baker waited anxiously at Reston Hospital Center. Hours later, on this early Thursday morning in January, his Washington Redskins teammates would be preparing for their playoff matchup against the Green Bay Packers. The defensive end was not going to be there.

His wife, Jamila, was ready to give birth to their daughter, Aria, and Baker was not going to miss it. He didn’t want to fall behind on the field, either, so he watched film of the Packers on his iPad while he waited.

The Packers’ offensive line, mangled by injuries, limped through the last two games of the regular season and allowed 13 sacks. Baker anticipated opportunities to get to quarterback Aaron Rodgers, which also meant a chance to dance, something Baker did frequently last season as he recorded a career-high six sacks.

“Man, it feels so good to really go out there and let loose,” Baker said. “Every time I get a big play, I need the people to know who I am, so I celebrate.”

If Baker sacked Rodgers — and he nearly did on the second play of the game — his fun-loving personality was going to take a backseat to the feelings of a proud, new father.

“I was going to rock the baby,” Baker recalled recently, his voice still bubbling with excitement at the idea of it.

Baker had to shelve the celebration — he never sacked Rodgers — but he hasn’t stopped enjoying what has been the best year of his life. He married Jamila on March 14, 2015, a perfect prelude to having a breakout season while playing alongside his childhood friend, nose tackle Terrance Knighton. The loss to the Packers was disappointing, but Baker was buoyed by the birth of his daughter and the excitement of spending the offseason with his new family.

Now, as Baker enters the final season of his three-year contract, he’s not stressed about what lies ahead. Instead, he is sharply focused on making sure his future, both on and off the field, just keeps getting better from here.

“They say a man that finds his wife finds favor in the Lord,” Baker said. “Ever since I’ve gotten married, it’s been a great story. I had my best season as a professional, now having my daughter. It’s just blessing after blessing.”

Earning his keep

The timing was too perfect to let the opportunity slip last offseason. The Redskins were originally interested in Knighton, then a free agent after two seasons with the Denver Broncos, and Knighton was in Washington to stand by Baker’s side as the best man in his wedding.

“I talked to anybody who would listen about bringing the guy in,”

Baker said.

Baker and Knighton had dinner on Thursday night, and Knighton signed a one-year deal with the Redskins the next morning, the day before Baker's wedding. Their childhood dream of playing in the NFL together, one that manifested from a friendship rooted at the intersection of Westland and Garden streets in Hartford, Connecticut, was coming true.

"I was extremely happy," Baker said. "I knew how good of a player Terrance is and I knew how good he could make me. To have a guy like Terrance take up two people, that had to leave me one-on-one with anybody."

Although the two were now teammates, it was unclear how often they'd actually see the field together. Baker had a strong season in 2014 — the first of a three-year, $12 million deal he signed that February — and anticipated being the starting left defensive end in 2015. There was a roadblock, though, and it was an expensive one. The Redskins signed defensive end Stephen Paea to a four-year, $21 million contract. After campaigning for his best friend to join the team, Baker was uncertain about his future.

In Week 3 of the preseason, the team's final dress rehearsal against the Baltimore Ravens, Baker had a sack and a forced fumble. However, Paea remained the starter on the depth chart to start the regular season, though Baker played more snaps than Paea and outperformed him in each of the first three games.

"It was just stressful for me," Baker said. "It was frustrating those first three weeks, because I'm [wondering], 'Why am I not starting? What didn't I do to earn my starting position?'"

Against the Philadelphia Eagles in Week 4, the Redskins opened in their nickel formation, which meant only two linemen, Knighton and Jason Hatcher, were on the field. Baker was finally going to get his chance. On the Eagles' third offensive play, Baker sacked quarterback Sam Bradford. He added another in the second quarter for the first multi-sack performance of his career.

"It's a performance-based business," Redskins coach Jay Gruden said the next day, explaining why he gave Baker the unofficial start. "In order to keep your job, you have got to perform at a high level. That's what we're expecting from all our guys."

The following week against the Atlanta Falcons, Baker started and recorded another sack. It became more obvious than ever that the starting job was his. Baker, once an undrafted free agent from Hampton and practice squad player for three teams, including the Redskins, went on to start nine of the next 11 games. He emerged as the Redskins' most consistent pass rusher along the defensive line.

"I understood what it was about, the business, but at the same time I'm a competitor," Baker said. "And when I earn something, give it to me. It's not like you're giving me something I didn't earn. I knew when the team pays a guy X amount of dollars, they're going to see if he works out and see what he can do, but I just always felt like all I needed was a chance."

That chance meant regular playing time together for Baker and Knighton, which was the way they always intended for it to be. Back in Connecticut, Ken Smith beamed with pride each week as the season unfolded. Before Baker and Knighton starred on the football field together — Baker didn't start playing until Knighton convinced him to do so his junior year at Windsor High School — they dominated opponents as bullish post players on Smith's basketball team.

Smith would drive his team along the East Coast in a ragged, gray van courtesy of the police department — the words "Police Athletic League" stamped on the side — each year to play the summer circuit. Once, Baker and Knighton made a promise.

"The both of them stopped and said, 'Coach, when we make it, we're gonna buy you a new van,'" Smith recalled. "And I said, 'Wow, that's nice of you,' but I didn't think nothing of it then. I'm just so glad that they made it."

Then Smith paused, before letting out a laugh.

"But I'm still waiting on that van."

'A valuable lesson'

Marion Baker always warned his son to run away from trouble, not toward it.

"Don't be the first one to get there and the last one to leave," he cautioned. "If something breaks out, you're going to be the last face they remember."

Baker could hardly help himself. With an infectious personality and an unmistakable laugh, Baker sought to entertain in any setting. That also meant telling juicy stories, letting nothing stop him from getting the details, which almost always lead him to trouble.

"If I saw a fight, I need to see it all," Baker said. "I needed to tell you who threw the first punch, who threw the last, who won, who said what. I was always that person."

That's why in April 2007, the spring after Baker's redshirt freshman season at Penn State, he ended up in downtown State College when a massive brawl broke out at an off-campus apartment. Baker and several teammates arrived after safety Anthony Scirrotto was involved in an altercation in the street, which started after somebody insulted Scirrotto's girlfriend.

Later in October, during a fraternity party at the university's student union, a fight began outside between linebacker NaVorro Bowman and another fraternity brother from another university. When police arrived, a group of football players was surrounding the fight. Baker, along with Bowman, was identified as a main suspect.

Baker initially received felony charges in both incidents, though he maintains he never threw a punch.

"When the [April] fight started happening, I realized there was no need for me to fight," Baker said. "The bad part was a fight happened and I went there. I was stuck in a bad position because I wasn't going to snitch on my teammates, but I wasn't going to go to jail for something I didn't do, either."

In the October incident, Baker tried breaking up the altercation and was misidentified as defensive tackle Phil Taylor, who was later charged for his role in the fight. Penn State's office of judicial affairs cleared Baker from the incident, but he was still being charged in Centre County Court.

According to public records, Baker ultimately pleaded guilty to simple assault, a misdemeanor of the second degree, in both incidents. He also pleaded guilty to defiant trespassing, a misdemeanor of the third degree, from the April incident. He was sentenced to two years probation in May 2008, and in two months later coach Joe Paterno kicked Baker and Taylor off the team.

"That was the hardest time of my son's life, but as a father, my words of encouragement were, 'It's going to be OK,'" Marion Baker said. "It was an unfortunate situation what happened, but it taught him a valuable lesson."

From that troubling moment, Baker's path to becoming a prominent NFL pass rusher was a winding one that tested his faith. After a year at Hampton in which Baker excelled, he declared for the 2009 draft but wasn't selected. There were short stints with the Denver Broncos and Miami Dolphins before Baker signed with the Redskins' practice squad in 2011.

After spending most of the year on the practice squad, he was signed to the active roster on Dec. 6. The next day, he tore his right quadriceps trying to dunk a basketball before a walkthrough, which ended his season and crushed his hopes of playing against the New England Patriots that week.

"When it happened, I was so embarrassed because I didn't want to get cut," Baker said. "For some reason, they kept me. I was supposed to be out of there. I never knew if I would be back in the league again."

Baker played in 29 games the next two seasons. In 2012, he was the backup nose tackle after Chris Neild tore an ACL in the preseason. Retained as a restricted free agent in 2013, Baker started the final three games of the season and was rewarded with his current three-year deal.

"That year, I didn't know what my worth was," Baker said. "In my mind, if I got a two-year deal for $4 million, I would've been happy with that. I just kept on praying. When my agent called me and said the Redskins offered three years for $12 million, I broke down crying."

For Baker, solidifying his role on the Redskins' roster required a feverish work ethic, but that was never an issue. In order for all this to happen, he had to mature as an individual. That was an equally gradual process, one that began in earnest his first day at Hampton and continued during his ascent to the top of the Redskins' depth chart in 2015.

Those close to Baker have seen him come full circle. Ohio State assistant head coach and defensive line coach Larry Johnson Sr. visited Baker during organized team activities last spring. Johnson, who coached Baker on the defensive line at Penn State, helped guide him to Hampton and supported him following the expulsion.

While Johnson has kept in touch with Baker, last year marked the first time that Johnson saw Baker in person since he was kicked off the team.

"When you face adversity early in your life, that changes you, and it changed Chris in the right ways," Johnson said. "When I saw him at camp, we just hugged like little kids. The first thing he said was, 'Thanks, Coach,' and I said 'No, thank you for being who you are.' That's what coaching is all about. You cheer for guys like that. I'm happy with where he's at in his life right now. I really am."

Embracing change

This offseason started the same as the last, with Baker making a spirited pitch to Knighton to remain with the Redskins. The nose tackle ultimately chose to sign with the Patriots, marking a bitter-sweet ending to their single season together.

With Hatcher gone as well, Baker expects an increased role in the locker room, one that began manifesting itself last season.

"I felt like I took on that leadership role," Baker said. "Just seeing the younger guys and giving them advice on how to become a professional, or what I did to last in this league as long as I've been in it as an undrafted guy."

Part of that longevity is finding ways to keep improving, which is why Baker has been working tirelessly with Tobe Stevens at Enhanced Training Champions in Largo, Maryland. The goal is for Baker to increase his speed off the line of scrimmage, something he struggled with last season. With a quicker jump, he can pressure the quarterback more consistently — the key to remaining a prominent defensive end.

Better pressure means more sacks — and most importantly — more chances for Baker to let loose and celebrate.

After all, he never did get to rock the baby in that loss to the Packers. Perhaps he'll save it.

QB KIRK COUSINS

Kirk Cousins says he won't change, even with $20 million deal

By Jim Trotter, ESPN.com
March 18, 2016

KAPALUA, Hawaii -- The thick beard has been replaced by stubble that comes from going a day without shaving. That might be the only thing different about Washington quarterback Kirk Cousins since he signed his franchise tender, a one-year contract worth nearly $20 million.

The intensity and drive that marked his surprising rise last year in his first full season as a starter are still evident when you speak to him. He insists that determination won't diminish despite being scheduled to earn nearly $17.5 million more than he did in his first four seasons combined.

"I never played football thinking about money, and going forward I never want to play football thinking about money," Cousins said. "That's why I think it's important for me to play with a salary that's just locked in. I don't want to be thinking about individual accomplishments or rewards that would boost my salary or up my numbers. I just want to go out and play football and try and win games. So whether I'm making what I made last year [$660,000] or this year, I just want to play football and treat it like I did back in high school and love playing. It's a tremendous blessing to be paid to play this game the way I will this year."

Cousins and Washington have until July 15 to negotiate a multi-year contract, but the former Michigan State star said he's comfortable playing under the franchise tag for 2016 if a long-term agreement fails to materialize.

"Discussions are always ongoing," he said. "You're never really finished. It's a process and I think much like the process of preparing for a football game, you're not ready to play the game on Wednesday; you prepare to get ready for Sunday. I think negotiations often work that way. You know that maybe it's not Sunday yet -- it's Wednesday in this negotiation -- and we're just taking steps toward what will eventually be Sunday. So we'll see. Obviously it gets more interesting as it gets closer to 'game day,' if you will.

"But I'm not too worried about it. I'm very content in the situation I'm in and love the opportunity to prove myself again next season. I feel like it's only fair if that's what's asked of me -- to go out and prove it, that I ought to be a starting quarterback. That's OK with me."

Many were stunned last year when Cousins was named the starter shortly before the season opener. The job was supposed to belong to Robert Griffin III, for whom Washington surrendered three first-round picks and a second-round selection to move up four spots and draft No. 2 overall in 2012. Cousins was taken three rounds and 100 picks later in the same draft.

Griffin started his career spectacularly, winning offensive rookie of the year after completing 65.5 percent of his passes for 3,200 yards and 20 touchdowns, with just five interceptions. He also rushed for 815 yards and seven scores. But injuries and inconsistency took hold from there, eventually prompting coach Jay Gruden to name Cousins the starter before Week 1 last season.

It was a bumpy ride early. Cousins had only limited opportunities to work with the starters in training camp, and the lack of chemistry showed. He threw multiple interceptions in four of his first six games, each contributing to a loss. Things got worse in Week 7, when Washington fell behind Tampa Bay 24-0 midway through the second quarter. Did Gruden make a mistake naming the starter? Was Cousins in over his head?

Cousins answered by leading the biggest comeback in franchise history, his 6-yard touchdown pass to Jordan Reed with 24 seconds to play producing a 31-30 victory that kicked off a march to the playoffs. Washington finished 7-3 over its final 10 games, with Cousins throwing for 23 touchdowns and only three interceptions during that time. It marked not only a tremendous finish to the season, but an interesting start to contract negotiations. In essence, Washington has said to him: We like you a lot, but we'd like you even more if you showed us you could do it again.

"There's no doubt that next year if I'm playing on the tag it's a great opportunity to prove yourself again, and that's OK," Cousins said. "I think that's part of playing in this league and being in a lot of pressure situations and facing a lot of scrutiny. ... I was a much better quarterback going into that playoff game than I was going into Week 1, and I guess that's why there's a lot of excitement going forward 'cause you feel like if that much growth could take place -- not just in me as a player, but in our offense and in our team in 17 weeks -- why can't we continue to grow and take steps forward in our offseason program and training camp and go into another season? I think a lot of us are excited, especially on the offensive side of the ball, for some of the chemistry we've been able to build and the future that lies ahead. I think the key is to not get complacent."

The team and the offense now belong to Cousins for the foreseeable future. Washington left no doubt when it released Griffin on March 7.

"It was a good relationship," Cousins said of his time with Griffin. "I go back to the very first day in Washington. He and I were roommates in the hotel at rookie minicamp and he had a laptop already and had already picked up some of the offense, and he sat me down and started showing me some of the plays he'd already learned and gave me the chance to continue to get a head start at rookie minicamp. That kind of relationship continued on from there for four years, and it wasn't a distraction at all in Year 4."

"He was a great teammate throughout the season and supportive, and he had a lot of experience having played a lot and was able to be a big help to me. So, it was a positive thing. ... It was a good relationship and I've always felt that way."

Cousins is in Hawaii for the NFL Players Association meetings. Executive director DeMaurice Smith repeatedly stresses the need for players to see football as a business and not just a game. Cousins took those words to heart during contract negotiations, acknowledging that he heard outside comments that he should take a lesser salary so the team could have more money to sign other players.

"I understand all perspectives on the issue," he said. "I, as a fan, would understand why you'd say 'take a discount.' It certainly opens up salary cap space; it's gonna make it a lot easier on a general manager, on a team, to be able to have success. I understand where they're coming from. It's a little more complicated than that, but everybody's entitled to their own opinion and I'm certainly not gonna tell them that they have to think a certain way."

Will money change Cousins? Those who know him doubt it. But the fifth-year veteran does admit that financial stability will bring about one change. That 2000 GMC van he drove to and from work in the past? It will be replaced -- or dare we say complemented? -- by a new vehicle.

"I'm gonna have that van as long as possible. Even when it dies I may just put a new engine in it and rebuild it for the sentimental value," Cousins said. "Whether I drive it to work or not on a daily basis, like I did last year, that probably won't happen. I'll probably get a car to go to work back and forth. But it becomes a great car when family comes to town for games. FedEx Field's an hour and a half away from where I live in Ashburn, Virginia, so it's a nice, comfortable ride for seven to eight people. They'll come into town and all need a way to go to the game and we've got a TV in there, we've got a lot of leg room. So the van will stay and, if nothing else, will be a great way to get to and from games.

"So if you come to FedEx Field you'll see me driving off in that. Hopefully after a big win."

It's time for Kirk Cousins to prove his play is as steady as his character

By Jerry Brewer, The Washington Post
July 28, 2016

RICHMOND — Kirk Cousins addressed the most pressing matter first.

No, he didn't drive his conversion van to training camp. What? Was there something else you expected him to discuss?

"The conversion van didn't make it down because I left it at Redskins Park for the summer, and I went to turn it back on, and the battery was dead," said the Washington quarterback, who is known to drive the 16-year-old van he bought from his grandparents around Ashburn. "I didn't even get a start at all."

So he drove his pickup truck here to begin the most important — and potentially the most illuminating — season of his career. It's the same truck that he photographed on Instagram last week with the bed wrapped in plastic.

"Rainproofing the truck bed for our drive back to Virginia," he wrote. "Investing in a cover when I get home."

That's Cousins for you. He will make $19.95 million this season, but he's still frugal. You might say he's pinching pennies, but he probably considers those too valuable even to pinch.

In just about every aspect of his life, there is little concern about whether Cousins will change. He'll always have a self-effacing grace about him. He'll always be a non-controversial face of the franchise. He'll always save — like, a lot — before he spends.

Still, despite setting franchise passing records a year ago and measuring off the charts in reliability, Cousins faces a 2016 season of necessary confirmation. He doesn't need to climb the depth chart and prove he can be an NFL starter anymore. He does need to show that the steadiness of his game matches his character.

Can Cousins repeat success? Does the quarterback who threw for 4,166 yards and 29 touchdowns in 2015 represent the true Cousins? Has the young player who lost seven of his first nine career starts and displayed shaky confidence evolved into the solution for Washington's long-standing quarterback problem?

It's easy to get sidetracked worrying about what Cousins is worth. He's playing under the franchise tag, a one-year contract, so that Washington can be certain of who he is. As you play armchair general manager, you can get carried away trying to figure out the best long-term contract for the player and the team. You can grow too concerned about the cost if Cousins performs as well or — crazy thought — better than he did in the final 10 games of last season, when he completed 72.4 percent of his passes and posted a 119.1 passer rating.

Take those thoughts too far, and you can wind up rooting against the team making progress because Cousins's performance is so crucial to results. It's far more important to Washington's future that Cousins, who exudes stability, provide the clarity that the team needs to do whatever's necessary to sign him to a multiyear deal. For a franchise that has endured a seemingly endless search for quarterback stability, this is an opportunity to remove another burden to this building process.

How much is Cousins worth?

Well, how much is it worth to have a dependable quarterback year in and year out?

For nearly 25 years, the team's quarterback situation has doubled as a trivia question. Heck, you could do a whole trivia night asking questions about the Washington players who have held that position since Mark Rypien made his last start in 1993. Twenty-four quarterbacks have started at least one game the past 23 seasons. When Cousins played all 16 regular season games in 2015, he became the first Washington quarterback to do so since Jason Campbell in 2009. Brad Johnson and Gus Frerotte are the only others to make 16 starts during that time. Campbell is the only one to start 16 in back-to-back seasons.

The Redskins have spent high draft picks, turned to accomplished veterans and rolled with the odd preferences of quarterback-guru head coaches. Nevertheless, they haven't had a quarterback start the majority of their games for five consecutive seasons since Rypien. They haven't had a quarterback hold down the starting job for longer than that since Joe Theismann (1978-85).

Cousins is the latest hope, and while he doesn't excite you like Robert Griffin III once did, there's something about Cousins's journey that makes his promise feel legitimate. It's the way he earned it, rising from a fourth-round pick, rising from early failure, seizing the opportunity last season when it was finally his. And it's the growing sense of stability that surrounds him, making it seem like there is support in place to help a quarterback grow.

Cousins has a good receiving corps, possibly a great one. There is a commitment to improving the running game and developing a potent defense. Cousins has solid relationships throughout the organization. He doesn't need to be a savior, but the front office is still open to paying him like an elite quarterback if he performs like one in a system designed to highlight his strengths and minimize his weaknesses.

He doesn't sound like a man under pressure to prove he's worthy of a big contract. The quarterback and franchise couldn't agree on a deal this offseason, but Cousins still sounds like the happiest man ever to get the franchise tag. Most players bemoan the lack of long-term security. Cousins welcomes the chance to bet on himself and show he's worth even more.

"I think the franchise tag says a lot," Cousins said when asked about the team's confidence in him. "They didn't have to tag me. No one forced them to do that. They chose to do that of their own accord. In this league, it's one year at a time — whether you're on a long-term deal, one-year deal or two-year deal. I mean, I had a four-year deal as a rookie, but it didn't feel like a four-year deal. It felt like a one-day deal every single day I was here. So I don't think things have changed a whole lot in that regard."

In case he wasn't clear enough about his approach, Cousins later added: "I'm okay. I'm not lying awake at night. I'm good. I feel comfortable. I got a pretty good raise this year."

Pretty good? Cousins made $660,000 last season. This is about a $19.3 million raise. Yeah, pretty good. It's just not enough for him to spare all costs to get the battery fixed in his van. Instead, when he realized it was dead, he called AAA. When he was told it would be a while before they could come, he abandoned the quick fix. He had to get to training camp. He had to go and show that last season wasn't a fluke.

"The van will be waiting for me when I get back," Cousins said. "Hopefully, my wife will be able to replace the battery while I'm gone."

The van will be fine. And if Cousins confirms that he is — finally — a quarterback that Washington can rely on, his contract will be resolved, too, no matter the cost.

Washington has had a quarter-century to understand how valuable dependability is at quarterback. The past is why the franchise was reluctant to go all-in long term this offseason. And the past is why, if Cousins thrives again, it can't be shy about rewarding a man who epitomizes dependability.

S SU'A CRAVENS

Redskins expect Su'a Cravens to man one 'position' — playmaker

By Mike Jones, The Washington Post
August 2, 2016

RICHMOND — Grab an ink pen and scratch out the 'S' next to Su'a Cravens's name on your Redskins roster.

Don't bother scribbling in ILB to represent inside linebacker, the position at which he has worked during offseason practices and the first week of training camp. He's more of that than he is a safety, the position at which the team listed Cravens shortly after drafting him in the second round in April. In truth, Cravens — a 6-foot-1, 222-pound Southern California product, who wears No. 36 to honor his idol, the late Sean Taylor — is probably too athletic and talented to confine to one position.

So, if you must list something in that column of the roster, just go with 'A' for athlete, or 'PM' for playmaker. Because that's the image of Cravens defensive coordinator Joe Barry has dancing in his mind.

"In college he changed positions almost every week. He played safety, he played rover, he played inside, he played outside linebacker," explained Barry, who recruited Cravens to USC but never got to coach him there. "But [GM Scot McCloughan], when we draft players, does a really good job of asking, 'Where will he play?' We don't get him and then figure out. So my approach from Day 1, was he's a linebacker. Does he have some traits where he could play safety, or a back-end position? Sure. But I think what would benefit him best was let him play dime linebacker, let's teach him and throw him into the fire and have him play inside linebacker — the hardest position — in base and see where it goes."

As Barry identified needs for the defense, which surrendered 380.6 yards per game last season, 28th in the league, he believed he needed a versatile player. One who could cover tight ends and running backs, run across the field to make a first down-saving tackle, blitz off the edge, or stonewall a ball carrier at the line. The player also needed the instincts to know when to remain disciplined, and when to break the rules and make a play.

Barry says that Cravens, who turned 21 last month, fits that bill and has all of the "God-given linebacker instincts that you just can't teach." However, the coach has lots of other things to teach his player: terminology, the tricks to reading quarterbacks and offenses, and how to react accordingly.

And so, to Cravens, outside observers and even some of his teammates, the going has seemed slow thus far. He spends some days limited to second- and third-string reps in the base 3-4 defense, playing outside linebacker. Other days, he receives a handful of snaps with the first team in its nickel package, where he plays weak-side linebacker. Other times, he has watched more than he has played. But it's all part of the education process, and Cravens understands that.

"I'm just getting used to the playbook right now. I'm a lot more familiar with the playbook. I'm just trying to be an athlete and make plays," Cravens said.

He has made some plays, like the forced fumble in last Friday's practice, or the impressive interception of Colt McCoy, where Cravens displayed a great vertical leap and snatched a throw over the middle.

But some days, Cravens has struggled. He'll overrun an assignment and find himself out of position to stop a running back in a cutback lane or get frozen in coverage by a pump fake and fail to recover in time.

"Unfortunately, some days you get discouraged because you're used to making plays. But I'll be all right," Cravens said. "Limited reps, it happens. What do you do? Just a lot of film work and a lot of mental reps. Even if I'm not in, I put myself in a place where I feel like I am because I stand there and assess guys as if I was on the field and take it from there."

Cravens never relents in his quest for knowledge. Barry said

"Over the summer, there wouldn't be three days that would go by that he wouldn't text me and say, 'Hey, I was thinking about in this defense, you know, where should my eyes be? Where should my hands be?' And as a coach, you love that because you know he's always thinking, 'Ball.'"

Said seventh-year veteran Perry Riley Jr.: "He has a knack for learning. He's always asking questions, always wants to know everybody's position — not necessarily just what they're telling him to know. But that's good, because it helps you learn more when you know everyone's responsibilities."

Barry said he's "insanely pleased" with the progress Cravens has displayed, and veteran Redskins like what they have seen too, even if they haven't yet fully visualized the finished product like Barry has.

"I haven't seen a lot," safety DeAngelo Hall said, "just whenever he's kind of out there with us, he's making a play. ... He's a 'tweener, but he can bang like a linebacker and he can run like a safety. So right now we're asking him to play a little linebacker for us. Who knows in the future where he might be playing. He might back there playing some safety too."

Cravens said, "I have no idea," when asked what the full-fledged job description will entail. "I'm just trying to use my athleticism and make plays. They said to expect to be used in a lot of passing situations."

Clarity will come. By the time the preseason concludes, Barry hopes to have molded Cravens into a smart, aggressive difference-maker. He might not start, and he won't be perfect, but Cravens still should make his presence felt.

"As a coach, I've come to a realization of 'let a guy go play.' You've got to give him a rule, a responsibility. But sometimes guys, especially like that, that have that instinct and awareness, they might go rogue and make a play. You'll be like, 'Now, dude, you know you were supposed to be over here.' And he'll be like, 'Yeah, but I just felt it and ran through the gap and made a play.' As a coach, you can't yell at him for that. You can't take that away."

"Monday night against Pittsburgh, Week 1, I want him making plays," Barry continued. "I don't ever say, 'I'm going to spoon-feed this kid along and hopefully by midseason he's ready to go.' Forget that. I'm greedy and putting the pressure on him right now. I want him to be a playmaker Week 1."

Redskins expanding role of rookie 'hybrid' Su'a Cravens

By Stephen Whyno, Associated Press
November 18, 2016

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) — Su'a Cravens figured out a few practices into his NFL career what life in the trenches was like.

"I was about 217 pounds playing [middle] linebacker with no pads on going against guys like [tackles Ty Nsekhe and Trent Williams]," Cravens recalled, "and I didn't know Trent was as fast as me so I got thrown out the club about three or four times in the first couple OTA practices before I was like, 'OK let me just make a decision and live with it.'"

The second-round pick out of USC who coach Jay Gruden wanted to list as a "hybrid" on the roster got his crash course and is now delivering hits. Despite being small for the position at 6-foot-1, 220 pounds, Cravens is working at linebacker and drawing attention from opponents for his versatility and how his role has rapidly expanded.

"You can just see the way they are using him," said Packers coach Mike McCarthy, whose team will face Cravens and the Redskins on Sunday night. "He's the pressure player in key moments of the game, so I think it tells you what the defensive staff thinks of him and just the confidence they have in him."

Gruden and defensive coordinator Joe Barry want to keep Cravens on the field as much as possible, and the 21-year-old played a season-high 55 percent of snaps last week against Minnesota. The coaching staff is challenging Cravens more and more, and he oozes the confidence to be able to handle the tasks and assignments thrown at him.

2016 FEATURE CLIPS

Cravens knew coaches trusted him when they left him in the game to defend a crucial Vikings drive late in the fourth quarter. He wasn't surprised to be out there, though.

"I know what kind of player I am," Cravens said. "I'm all about being humble, but I'm not a slouch. If a team wants to try me or a team wants to attack me in those late moments where the coaches do trust me and put me in the game, then so be it."

Cravens likely would've been an even bigger part of the Redskins' improving defense had he not missed two games because of a concussion. Barry conceded that stunted the plans for him, but Cravens said the different blitz packages and formations that were being worked on in Weeks 3 and 4 are now being implemented and will be built on.

"Su'a is a playmaker, and I think if we can be creative with putting him in different positions, whether it's standard just linebacker positions or other positions around the formation to be able to make plays," Barry said. "He's getting into a nice flow, a nice rhythm."

What makes Cravens valuable is his ability to pick up different positions with ease, something Gruden credits to instincts and football IQ. In a roundabout way, it helped having five different coaches in three seasons in college.

"It prepared me to play D-end, rush end, outside linebacker, corner, nickel, whatever — just athlete," Cravens said. "Being versatile isn't a bad thing these days."

Versatility isn't just about playing multiple positions. Cravens has the speed to play in the secondary, the willingness to engage in physicality to stop the run and go up against offensive linemen and the mindset to rush the passer.

All-Pro cornerback Josh Norman is "super impressed" with how Cravens has adjusted to doing all that in the NFL.

"He has that instinct in him," Norman said. "You sparkplug that, and you see what you see out there. I enjoy playing with him. He's one of the little dogs we can let off the leash here and there and let him go out there and crash-dummy some people. It's fun to see. It's fun for everybody to see. It gets everybody fired up. It electrifies people."

Cravens' electrifying personality shows through on the field and even on film. As impressed as McCarthy is in Cravens from video, Green Bay quarterback Aaron Rodgers is also well aware of him.

"He's moving around a lot," Rodgers said. "He's a very good blitzer, he's a good tackler, plays in space well. He's obviously the kind of guy who might not fit into one specific role for a team, but he's just so talented you have to find a way to get him out there."

LB WILL COMPTON

When opportunity arrived, Redskins linebacker Will Compton was ready

By Paul Woody, Richmond Times-Dispatch
July 29, 2016

Will Compton did what every young player should do, but few actually accomplish.

He studied.

He came to the Washington Redskins as an undrafted free agent out of Nebraska, which automatically meant he was a long shot to make the team.

Compton didn't spend a lot of time engulfed in a "Woe is me. What's the use?" attitude.

Instead, he got ready to play, not knowing if he'd ever get a chance to play.

But he knew if the chance came and he wasn't prepared, he'd regret wasting an opportunity.

So he studied the Redskins' offense. He knew what was coming as well as — and probably better than — some of the players who lined up when the second and third groups took the field in training camp.

"I did the same thing to our offense I do now to another team's offense so I could know everything, their verbiage, what they did when they lined up, I tried understanding all that," Compton said.

"When I got my few reps, I was able to be very loud, vocal and confident in what I was saying and very fast."

Coaches like confident players. They notice those who play fast, hard and correctly. Compton could do all that because he was informed. He was well-versed in the Redskins' offense.

And when his chance to play came in a regular-season game in 2014 because of an injury to inside linebacker Perry Riley Jr., Compton didn't have to think about what to do. He knew what to do.

"I got an opportunity, and I was prepared and took advantage of it," Compton said. "That creates more opportunity. There's definitely some luck involved, but the big emphasis was to control what I could control, and that was my attitude and effort every day and preparation away from here [practice]."

Compton stepped in as the starter in 2015 when inside linebacker Keenan Robinson was out with an injury. Compton stayed on the field. He started 10 games last season and enters the 2016 season as the starter and leader of the defense.

"He's a great communicator," said Redskins coach Jay Gruden. "He's a studier of the position. He's got natural instincts, and he helps people around him. He gets the calls out. He anticipates plays, he studies formations, he studies the game plan and gets people in the right spot and lined up.

"It can become chaotic out there with all the non-huddle teams, so communication is at a premium, and Will's excellent at it. He made our defense better once he was inserted into the starting lineup."

Compton, 26, is single.

"Married to the game," he said.

He studies film five to six days a week. He starts with the coming opponent's running game. Day 2, the focus is on the passing game. Day 3 is devoted to run and pass formations a team seldom uses but, "You've got to be ready for, just in case," he said.

Days 4 and 5 concern specific situations — what a team does on third and short and third and long; what a team prefers to run in the red zone.

By Sunday, "I hope I've got it all figured out," he said.

This exercise in film criticism isn't done in a matter of minutes. Some days, Compton arrives at the practice facility at 6 a.m. and doesn't leave before 8 p.m. He's not much for down time. His social life practically is non-existent during the season.

"I'm in bed at a good hour," Compton said. "I'm not up all night watching film. I'm a proponent of putting in good quality time, and it ends up working out for me."

It works out for everyone.

This would be pretty heady stuff for an undrafted free agent if Compton were the type to consider "heady" stuff. He's too busy preparing for the next walk-through, practice or game.

"I never doubted myself as far as being able to play in this league," Compton said. "It comes down to getting an opportunity and taking advantage of your opportunity. They're few and far between and depend on what happens. If everybody stayed healthy while I was here, the chances of me being here now are slim to none."

Compton is a case study in what can happen at the confluence of talent, opportunity and preparation. They form success.

More young players, and even a few older ones, would do well to study that formula.

Redskins' Will Compton still standing, and stepping to the fore

By Master Tesfatsion, The Washington Post
November 12, 2016

Ask the Washington Redskins' coaches about Will Compton, and they'll rave about his leadership. Ask the other inside linebackers, and they'll praise his raspy voice.

"He knows how to sing, but he don't tell nobody that side, though," linebacker Martrell Spaight said. "He's going to deny it, but he's got a little country singing in him."

As predicted, Compton refuted Spaight's claim after Thursday's practice, but Mason Foster and Su'a Cravens backed up Spaight, noting how often Compton sings in the car during trips to the team hotel before home games.

Compton finally caved and belted the chorus to Creed's "One Last Breath." The episode was illustrative: He can't sing, but that didn't stop his teammates from listening to an awful rendition of an awful song with mischievous grins.

Compton, a scrappy undrafted free agent who worked his way from the practice squad to full-time starter in four NFL seasons, is one of the most beloved players in the locker room, who will do anything to crack a smile.

"Nutjob on the field. Crazy. Team spirit 101," Cravens said. "Comp's a dude that'll paint his whole face a team color and go out and play a game. That's just how that man is."

The Redskins will need to rely on the 27-year-old now more than ever. As they open the second half of their season Sunday against the Minnesota Vikings, they'll be down to just two of their five captains. Left tackle Trent Williams began his four-game suspension for violating the league's substance-abuse policy this week, and tight end and special-teams captain Niles Paul was placed on injured reserve Monday because of a shoulder injury. A torn anterior cruciate ligament ended safety DeAngelo Hall's season in September.

That leaves Washington with just quarterback Kirk Cousins and Compton.

"Coach Jay Gruden was like, 'Comp, you better watch yourself, man. Them captains are dropping like flies out there,'" Compton said. "I'm like, 'I know, man. I was thinking about that.' It's just me and Kirk left. I never imagined being in a spot like this, but adversity builds character."

Compton was rated as the third-best player in Missouri coming out of high school and racked up 247 tackles at Nebraska. But after going undrafted in 2013, he signed as a free agent with Washington. He didn't make the team initially in Mike Shanahan's final season as coach, but after spending the first 16 weeks on the practice squad, he was promoted to the active roster in the season finale against the New York Giants.

He climbed the depth chart because of his goal-oriented mentality, his work ethic, his unmistakable enthusiasm and his natural leadership. Compton developed those traits at Nebraska and has drawn inspiration from future Hall of Fame linebacker Ray Lewis, motivational speakers Eric Thomas and Tony Robbins, and Kenneth Baum's sports psychology book "The Mental Edge." Players and coaches rave about Compton's football intelligence.

"I refer to the Mike linebacker on defense as the quarterback — no different than the quarterback on offense," defensive coordinator Joe Barry said. "You've got to play the mental aspect of it. You've got to play the chess match, and Will is outstanding with that: getting everybody lined up, communicating both to the D-line in front of him, the backers next to him, the [defensive backs] behind him. He does a wonderful job with that."

For an NFL player with an ordinary physique — Compton is 6 foot 1 and 238 pounds — praise for intelligence can be code for limited ceiling.

"No matter what, I'm going to battle the criticisms of an undrafted, Caucasian white guy playing and I'm good because of my work ethic, IQ and things like that," Compton said. "It goes really deep, and it starts with the mind because I'm not the biggest, the strongest, the fastest — none of that. I'm pretty exceptional at all of it, but that will never be at the surface of what my résumé is. It will always be an 'effort' guy and this and that."

The perception angers Compton, who ranks 14th in the league with 70 combined tackles and recorded his second career interception two weeks ago against the Cincinnati Bengals. He has often exchanged comments on social media with fans who have criticized his play.

"Every year I feel like I've went over the top on some barrier," Compton said. "But it's never been nothing that I haven't thought about on a daily basis to where I've made it a mission of mine — not against naysayers — but just for myself to know whenever I'm done, I know I put everything I had to max out my ability."

The latest challenge involves his leadership in a locker room that has lost three prominent voices. Compton has sensed a little more pressure as one of two captains available during this upcoming four-game stretch against NFC teams vying for a playoff spot: the Vikings, Green Bay Packers, Dallas Cowboys and Arizona Cardinals. He has received encouragement from other players in the locker room this week.

"Something that's unique about Will is that he can relate to everybody in the locker room," Cousins said. "He really has a relationship and connects with just about everybody. No matter what their background is, the demographic they're from, Will connects with them. I think that's a great sign of a leader. You want a few of those guys in your locker room to bring the team together and create chemistry, and I think Will's done that. He's a natural leader."

The inside linebackers occupy the most rambunctious corner in the Redskins' locker room. They're always cracking jokes on each other, and Compton always seems to be the ringleader. But he also has served as a mentor to Cravens and Spaight, two promising backups at the position.

"I'm just a result of what my daily standards and principles have always been," Compton said. "I think that kind of came into fruition and manifested this image that I am now, and it all goes back to what it took to get there."

"Now that I'm there, you stay in that same mentality. You just have more of a face, more of a voice and more of an image. Now you try to project it on other people."

Said Cravens: "It makes things fun. It makes things a lot less tense. Even in close games when you're tied up or up by two on the two-minute drill, it's like you're having fun because you've got your brother out there."

WR JAMISON CROWDER

Jamison Crowder has been overlooked, and he wants to keep it that way

By Master Tesfatsion, The Washington Post
August 1, 2016

RICHMOND — Washington Redskins wide receiver Jamison Crowder was one of quarterback Kirk Cousins's top targets last year. He set the franchise rookie record with 59 receptions and averaged 10.2 yards per reception in 16 games as the team's slot receiver. Still, he's been overlooked this offseason.

Former Redskins general manager and current NFL Network analyst Charley Casserly sparked an exhausting debate back in May about which team had the best wide-receiver unit in the league. Somehow, he didn't mention Crowder.

With DeSean Jackson, Pierre Garcon, Jordan Reed (who's technically a tight end but often lines up at wide receiver) and first-round draft pick Josh Doctson on the roster, Crowder has barely been mentioned ahead of his second season. And that's exactly how he likes it.

"I know we have some weapons, but for me I feel like it's good when I kind of go under the radar," Crowder said. "It's not any pressure. I don't have to live up to any kind of hype from the media or anything like that. I actually kind of like it when I'm not mentioned."

In Monroe, N.C., a town with almost 33,000 people, Crowder played 1A football and basketball before going to Duke. He was then taken in the fourth round of the 2015 NFL draft, with 14 wide receivers picked before him in a deep class.

"I've always kind of been overlooked to a certain point," Crowder said. "It really doesn't faze me. I just come out here and do what I can day in and day out. I guess some would say they'd use it as motivation, but for me, I don't really care about it. I just want to come out here and be the best player I can be and do my best to help out the team."

It's an ideal situation for him given the recognizable faces around him, but Crowder will still play a significant role once again in this offense. He finished third on the team in receptions and receiving yards (604) last year in 16 games (six starts). He has continued to show in training camp why he's a reliable target for Cousins, with good route-running and hands through three practices.

Crowder began to build confidence during his first camp, and he said he feels much more comfortable in his role now after his rookie results.

2016 FEATURE CLIPS

"I don't really pay attention to a lot of outside opinions," Crowder said. "It is what it is. My main thing is just to come out here and work. Whenever the ball comes my way or whatever assignment I have to do, I try to go out there and do it to the best of my ability."

Jamison Crowder showing those who only notice his height everything they miss

By Liz Clarke, The Washington Post

There's a quirk about Jamison Crowder's physique that Washington Redskins quarterback Kirk Cousins has come to appreciate. Just 5 feet 8, Crowder is blessed with longer arms than his height suggests, translating to a deceptively broad catch-radius. And that makes him what Cousins calls "a friendly target."

"I feel like sometimes he makes me a more accurate quarterback with the way that he chases down the football and brings it in," Cousins explained of Crowder, who midway through the season leads the Redskins' talent-laden corps of wide receivers in catches (40), receiving yards (498) and touchdown receptions (four).

But physical qualities go only part of the way toward explaining how Crowder, in his second NFL season, has carved out a role far bigger than the one Coach Jay Gruden envisioned when the team chose him with a fourth-round pick in the 2015 NFL draft.

As a prospect on their draft board, Crowder was viewed by Redskins officials primarily as a return specialist and inside slot receiver.

It was only after Crowder took the field during training camp his rookie season that the coaching staff began seeing broader possibilities for the Duke graduate, whose NFL scouting report, after listing upsides of acceleration, route-running and blocking effort, noted: "Lacks desired NFL size."

What stood out about Crowder from Day 1 was the way he went about his work, with uncommon professionalism for a 22-year-old rookie. There was a singleness of purpose in the way he approached meetings and practice. And he delivered virtually every chance he got in passing drills, scrimmages and games.

He ran precise routes. He secured the ball with sure hands yet exploded quickly enough to slip past defenders or fight through contact, if need be, for extra yards. And he showed qualities that aren't necessarily taught.

"He understands concepts — how to get there, when to get there, how to set up the defender, man, zone, all that stuff," Gruden said Thursday. "That's so crucial as far as a receiver is concerned. You can't really coach all the nuances of the coverages. But he just naturally sees it, feels it and reacts."

As the Redskins' fortunes have waxed and waned, both this season and last, other receivers have found ways of making their discontent known over balls that weren't thrown on target or on time — or didn't come their way at all.

Crowder, by contrast, has been as steady as the sun on a sweltering summer day. He is an old soul in a young man's body, confident that time, effort and patience will take care of most everything.

That quality was steeped in him as a child growing up in Monroe, N.C., a town of 34,000 about 25 miles southeast of Charlotte.

Neither a city nor a one-stoplight town, Monroe is a close-knit community with just enough things for young people to do to make few ever contemplate leaving. Crowder went to elementary school, middle school and Monroe High School with the same group of friends. No one in his crowd ever got in trouble because everywhere you went, somebody would know your mother or father.

To Crowder and the boys he grew up with, the year was divided into two seasons rather than four: basketball season and football season.

Crowder excelled in both, leading the Monroe Redhawks to North Carolina's 1A championship in basketball and three state playoff berths in football.

It was during a Redhawks basketball game, in fact, that a Duke football recruiter spotted him. The coach had made the trek to Monroe to scout Issac Blakeney, a 6-6 wide receiver who, like Crowder, also played basketball. In the game, Crowder got three dunks and scored 24 points. So after talking with Blakeney, the recruiter told Crowder how much he enjoyed watching him play, too.

Two days later, Crowder's high school coach, Johnny Sowell, called him in to inform him that Duke wanted to offer him a football scholarship.

Much as he would do four years later with the Redskins, Crowder stood out right away.

"We all thought, 'Who is this guy?'" former Duke safety Jeffrey Faris recalled. "He was outworking everybody, at 17, 18 years old."

Faris joined Duke Coach David Cutcliffe's staff after graduating and became Crowder's wide receivers coach. As their bond grew, Faris came to appreciate the relationship Crowder had with his younger brother, Jamaris, who was born with Down syndrome and is unable to communicate with words. Helping his parents rear Jamaris was a role Jamison treasured and a responsibility he shouldered with pride.

"It kind of forced him to grow up a little earlier than most of his classmates," Faris said. "Jamison always had this sense of maturity. And because of the person he was, he set the tone [among Duke's receivers]."

Though separated by 400 miles, the brothers are never far apart. They FaceTime during the week. And Jamaris makes the long car trip with his parents for nearly every Redskins home game to watch Jamison play.

"Dealing with my brother, it has made me a patient person," Crowder explained of Jamaris, who is 13 and attends a special-needs school in Monroe. "You have to take your time. But seeing him make strides and learn to do different things makes me proud and makes my family proud."

Jamaris is who Jamison thinks about when he suits up for games. "My brother is my inspiration. I try to do things that he can't do."

Crowder has been a bright spot in the uneven first half of the season, which has left the Redskins 4-3-1 heading into Sunday's game against Minnesota.

While fans have clamored for spectacular deep throws to DeSean Jackson, it is the short and midrange throws to Crowder that have proved so pivotal in keeping the offense moving. And on several occasions, he has spun them into gold.

With the Redskins staring at the prospect of an 0-3 start as the clock ticked down on their Week 3 clash with the New York Giants, Crowder caught a short ball on third and long and took off, getting key blocks from Trent Williams and Jordan Reed, then outran a safety up the sideline for a 55-yard go-ahead touchdown.

In the Week 7 tie with the Bengals, he showed his toughness boring in for a touchdown as a defender, committing a flagrant face-mask penalty, tried ripping his head off his shoulders.

"The guy just plays with all-out heart," said center Spencer Long, an unabashed Crowder fan. "Every time he touches the ball, it's a dangerous threat."

TE JORDAN REED

Vernon Davis enjoying career renaissance

By Stephen Whyno, Associated Press
December 1, 2016

ASHBURN, Va. [AP] — When Vernon Davis didn't produce like his young self, he understood the questions. "Everybody starts to worry," Davis said. "They're like: 'Hey guys, we need to figure it out: Can Vernon still play?'"

Quarterback Kirk Cousins wondered "what's left in the tank" for Davis when the Washington Redskins signed the veteran tight end off the scrap heap after the San Francisco 49ers and Denver Broncos decided they didn't need him. Those fears evaporated at an informal offseason session at a local Washington-area high school in April.

"We were throwing, and I realized right away this guy can still play," Cousins said. "I'm still trying to figure out what the catch is or why two teams let him go."

The catch is Davis is 32 years old and in his 11th NFL season, and he was limited to two touchdowns in 2014 and none last year. Back in his hometown, he's rejuvenated with 31 catches for 450 yards and two touchdowns through 11 games.

"I feel like the older I get, the better I get," said Davis, a D.C. native and star at Maryland. "I feel like I'm just starting, man. I'm just getting started. I tell everyone the same thing: When I lose my speed, then I'll hang it up. But I still have my speed. I can still run. With that, I continue to play this game."

Davis could be a big part of the Redskins' game Sunday at the Arizona Cardinals as starting tight end Jordan Reed's status is in doubt with a sprained shoulder. Davis already shouldered the load when Reed missed two October games with a concussion, and he has the speed and big-play ability for Cousins to turn to him.

Cousins said Davis could run the 40-yard dash like an "elite wide receiver."

"It's just been a joy to play with him and have him on the team," Cousins said. "And with the injuries that Jordan's sustained, he's become even more valuable needing to step up and be a difference maker."

Davis' days as a difference maker aren't that far gone. He had 52 catches, including 13 touchdowns, in 2013 for San Francisco.

On Wednesday, he lamented "mistakes" made along the way and expressed gratitude for playing and winning a Super Bowl with Peyton Manning. Davis remained optimistic, but perhaps most importantly he maintained his chiseled physique – which has receiver Pierre Garcon thinking: "When you get older, you definitely want to look like that."

Offensive coordinator Sean McVay said Davis is "a guy that takes care of his body, and I think we felt very comfortable that if he was put in this situation that there would be a chance for him to have success. And he's definitely done a great job. He's exceeded a lot of expectations."

Beyond the passing game, coach Jay Gruden sees Davis' influence on the run, too.

"I think that's where he has helped the most," Gruden said. "These 4.6 yards a carry that I think we are averaging right now, a lot of it is because of our tight end – blocking in the core, cut off on the backside or what have you – and he's a big part of that."

Blocking is one of Davis' skills, but Garcon is quick to point out that he's a "receiving tight end." Davis definitely feels like that again and is glad the Redskins took a chance on him.

"I'm always expecting the best and preparing for the worst," Davis said. "I wouldn't trade it for anything in the world, because being back home where I was born and raised, getting an opportunity to play in front of friends and family, can't trade that. It doesn't happen like that often."

DE ZIGGY HOOD

Redskins DE Ziggy Hood finds inspiration through son's journey

By John Keim, ESPN.com
September 11, 2016

ASHBURN, Va. -- Emotion overwhelmed Washington Redskins defensive lineman Ziggy Hood as he thought about his son's smile. It's not just a simple gesture for his son; it represents a moment others might take for granted. Hood dabbed at his eyes and lowered his head, ignoring teammates walking past him after a training camp practice in Richmond.

He paused for 10 seconds. And then 10 more.

"My goodness," Hood said, shaking his head.

Another 10 seconds. More dabbing at his eyes.

Forty-eight seconds passed before Hood could resume. You see, that smile means the world to Hood because his oldest son, Josiah, now 6, has autism, and he and his wife, Sara, had been told plenty of things their son would never do. So that smile -- just thinking about it -- represents the journey the Hoods have traveled. Dealing with career issues is one thing, but the Hoods have had much more to handle.

Here Hood is, starting for the Redskins at defensive end Monday night against the Pittsburgh Steelers, the same organization that drafted him in the first round seven years ago. Hood always has been known as a hard worker, but his oldest son provided a bump of inspiration in Hood's quest for a long career.

"It not only helped me become a better person, but it fed me to keep pushing," Hood said.

The Hoods have another son, James, who is one year younger than Josiah. Hood's wife and his mother typically take care of the kids during the season. Last season, after being cut by Jacksonville following an injured plantar fasciitis, Hood realized even more the daily challenges Josiah faced. Hood's daily presence at home with his sons while he waited to join another team created an inspirational experience.

"As Josiah pushed, Ziggy pushed harder," Sara said. "Our son never complains or fusses; he's the most incredible son you've ever met in your life. Every time Ziggy felt like it was getting too hard, he would stop and say, 'Baby Jo doesn't complain, I don't complain. If he's not fussing, I need to get through this.' Then our son James does something incredible and it's a huge milestone. Not that football doesn't matter anymore, but it's so much greater than that. The boys are his everything."

Hood wrote about Josiah and their experiences for the Players' Tribune last year. Hood admitted to having difficulties with the situation from the time his son was diagnosed.

"When you're 22 or 23 and you have your first kid, you have all these dreams and expectations," Hood said during training camp. "And then, boom, you get hit with this curveball. I wasn't prepared for it. I didn't know how to deal with stuff like that, and it took me some time. When I'd go to work, I'm thinking, 'Damn, what did I do wrong for this to happen? Was this God's intent for this to happen to me?' A lot of questions, a lot of whys."

Hood said it took him two or three years to accept the diagnosis.

"When I finally accepted it, I was like, 'What do I have to do to make sure everyone's comfortable,'" he said. "That's when I started getting involved and becoming more familiar with it, and instead of letting it hold me back I was able to push through it and let it be the fuel for what I need to do to make it work."

There have been victories throughout Josiah's life. The Hoods were told Josiah would never walk -- but he did, by age 2 and a half. The Hoods use cards with pictures on them so Josiah can let them know what he wants. Sara said one therapist told them this would never work with Josiah. Within three months it was working.

"Every time they say he can't do something, he masters it," Sara said. "I know these are small things for most people ... But he's amazing."

Sticking in the NFL

Hood's sons could be considered a big reason he's still pushing to stick around in the NFL. Hood became a solid player for Pittsburgh, though in the Steelers' 3-4 defense the linemen's job is to protect the linebackers so they can make plays. He did well enough that Jacksonville signed him to a four-year, $16 million deal in 2014. A year later, after Hood suffered plantar fasciitis, the Jaguars released him. Chicago signed him in October, only to release him two months later. Hood was an under-the-radar signing by Washington on Feb. 2, receiving a one-year deal that some with the Redskins say might have been one of their best in the offseason.

It helps that Hood never lost his work ethic. Hood, whose given first name is Evander, grew up in Amarillo, Texas. Later, at the University of Missouri, he gave up date nights with his now wife because he had to work out. That drive hasn't changed.

"He's an interesting guy," said Chip Smith, who trains NFL players in the offseason in Atlanta. "I've put over 1,600 guys in the NFL and have 250 clients on rosters. I've been doing this a long time, and he is by far the hardest-working player I've ever trained. His [workouts] were six hours. Most vets don't put in that kind of time. This year I saw some serious enthusiasm. He was very excited and had a renewed vigor."

Hood also worked on altering the way he attacked linemen after working with trainer Jay Caldwell for three years. After an OTA session this spring, Caldwell phoned Hood's agent, Andy Ross, to let him know it was finally clicking for his client.

"I've never seen him this dedicated or focused," Caldwell said.

Discovering motivation

2016 FEATURE CLIPS

A lot of that goes back to the journey with his family.

The Hoods see that Josiah shares a lot of the same qualities as his father, which has helped him reach milestones.

"He looks just like me but acts like Zig," Sara said. "Just as calm as can be, quiet as can be. Sometimes you forget Zig is in the room; if he wasn't so huge you wouldn't know he was there. That's how Josiah is. Never gets mad. Chill as can be, but works incredibly hard and does not complain."

When Hood was a free agent in 2014, he told Ross to research medical care in each city that showed interest; they were leaving Pittsburgh, where they had received good care for their son. In Jacksonville, they had 17 different doctors and six different therapists.

"It was more important than his contract," Ross said of the medical care. "That says a lot about him. He was prepared with all that information before he got to free agency."

While Hood found a home with Washington, there are still struggles. Hood doesn't open up much about his son's journey, though he and his wife aren't hiding from it, either. She didn't help him with the Tribune essay but said she cried after reading his words. They want others to know that they're human, too. Playing football makes you popular; it doesn't make you immune from life's issues.

"It's important for people to see us who we really are off the field," Sara said.

Not that everything is now easy. The struggles to accept also remain, though it's a battle that has decreased over time.

"I still pray that I wake up in the morning and he's standing there waving at me and everything's normal," Hood said. "But I love him."

When Hood comes home, that smile is waiting for him. Sara said Josiah is so happy, "he loses it" when he sees his father. They've all traveled a long way together, and for Hood, victories are seen all the time. He's back on the field as a starter. His son has taken steps that are just as monumental in their own way.

Perhaps one of the biggest? The Hoods were told that Josiah would never talk, but now he can repeat words that he hears. While in the car about two years ago, his wife heard him say something for the first time. That word? Da-da.

WR DeSEAN JACKSON

DeSean Jackson downplays his rejuvenation, but Redskins say he's sharper than ever

By Mike Jones, The Washington Post
August 24, 2016

DeSean Jackson will chuckle and deny it. But ask anyone around him, and they all agree something has changed.

Accurately or not, Jackson has always had a reputation for lacking zeal for offseason practices, training camp and the preseason.

His spotty attendance during voluntary practices in the spring sparks an annual debate about his commitment to his team and the game. Last training camp, he seemed to take his sweet time returning from a shoulder injury, missing the entire preseason instead of the anticipated week or two.

But that's the past. The Washington Redskins have seen a different DeSean Jackson from the start of this training camp until now — as they prepare for what will be the starters' final dress rehearsal for the regular season.

The wide receiver has displayed a different approach to the preseason and to football. Teammates say it's a renewed commitment and a stronger sense of determination.

"He seems a little motivated, man," said safety DeAngelo Hall, who matched up with the wide receiver regularly during Jackson's six seasons in Philadelphia and does so now in Redskins practices. "He's playing hungry right now. So I think he feels the pressure and the need to show everybody he's still got it and that joker still got it. ... This is the best I've ever seen him look."

Wide receivers coach Ike Hilliard said Jackson always has been highly motivated. But he did say Jackson has displayed a greater focus and attention to detail this preseason.

But Jackson?

"I don't really notice too much different," he said with a crooked smile. "Just enjoying being in the game, man."

Jackson is indeed enjoying the game after an injury-marred 2015 season in which he posted career-low numbers.

Now 29 and entering his ninth NFL season, Jackson established himself as a star in the NFL while recording three Pro Bowl and 1,000-yard campaigns in Philadelphia from 2008 to 2013 and another 1,000-yard year in Washington in 2014.

But last season, his star started to fade. The training-camp injury and prolonged recovery got things started on a bad note, and a hamstring strain in the regular season opener — an injury some attributed to inadequate preparation — cost Jackson seven games. He returned with nine games left and caught 30 passes for 528 yards and four touchdowns.

That marked only the second time in his career that Jackson hadn't played in at least 14 games and recorded at least 900 receiving yards. The diminished returns and a projected 2016 salary cap hit of $9.25 million raised questions about whether the Redskins would deem Jackson expendable either this season or next offseason when his contract expires.

But the team hung on to Jackson, banking on him returning highly motivated this season. And it looks like that's exactly what's taking place.

As was the case in years past, Jackson attended only a handful of offseason practices, forfeiting a $500,000 roster bonus. He deemed spending time with his family — including his baby son, who turns a year old this October — more important. But he kept working on his own with his trainer to prime himself for an effective preseason.

Discussing his offseason work a few weeks ago, Jackson said, "I think the physical part, first off, being able to add six pounds to me and not lose the speed ... just this offseason, I kind of triggered me being in the weight room, just working as far as getting stronger, eating a little more and things like that.

"But still not, not only just doing that and not sitting around, not triggering my speed and not working on my speed, I've stayed on the track. I stayed doing my cone drills and things like that, things that I've been doing since I've been young. That's the challenge about being 29 now, going on my ninth year. People might be like, 'He's almost 30. He's getting old.' But I still feel like my speed is a great threat that I use to my ability."

Jackson verified that from the start of training camp as he regularly won one-on-one matchups with talented cornerbacks Josh Norman and Bashaud Breeland while also displaying improved effectiveness on shorter routes.

"He's been a joy to watch this preseason," Hilliard said. "He's been detailed, he's been disciplined, he's worked on some things he maybe wasn't as good on, and I think D-Jack is getting better. His straight stem routes were lacking in detail to some degree in terms of angles that we come out and get separation.

"Of course, he's going to get separation on his own because of his speed, but ... understanding where we need him from a timing and spacing standpoint, it was a little different trying to get that down over the years. But there's been less harping on it this year, and he's been more detailed."

Hilliard added, "He's come here with a focus, there's no question about it. He looks great. He's happy. He gloats about his son any chance he gets, and he's been fun to be around."

It's only natural, both Hall and Hilliard agree, for Jackson's impending free agency to serve as the incentive behind the sharper form.

Jackson shrugs.

"It's just being a professional. Taking care of my business on my end. That's all," he said. "I don't really get too deep into that. I just really work to better myself and my career. I don't put too much extra pressure on myself. I'm just happy to be playing and playing at a high level. The rest will take care of itself."

Jackson will admit to wanting to avoid the injuries of a year ago. A fierce competitor, he wants to win, whether it's a one-on-one drill ("I don't think it matters if it's Josh or the 53rd man in the roster," Hilliard said) or actual games. Ever confident, Jackson believed that he could have gotten Washington another win or two had he not dealt with injury. So whether for contract, pride or record's sake, he's doing what he can now to lay the foundation for a big year. But Jackson plays it down, declining to make bold predictions.

"I'm just taking the necessary steps to get myself ready for a long season," he said. "I didn't get to play a full year, so I'm trying the best I can so I know I'm in the best shape I can be.

"But you can't predict how a season is going to go regardless of how big a camp or preseason you have."

DeSean Jackson is speaking out against injustices

By Mike Jones, The Washington Post
October 14, 2016

One after another, the reports gnawed at DeSean Jackson. Senseless killings. Lives snuffed out as a result of police brutality against unarmed African Americans. Lives cut short as a result of black-on-black violence.

The 29-year-old Washington Redskins wide receiver had conversations with people close to him, wondering what would put an end to it all. But he reserved those discussions for private settings — his home, on his phone with his brother in California, in the locker room with some of his teammates.

But finally, a month after San Francisco 49ers quarterback Colin Kaepernick's decision not to stand for the national anthem in protest, Jackson decided to take a public stance as well.

At MetLife Stadium in New Jersey on Sept. 25, just before the Redskins took on the New York Giants, Jackson, cornerback Greg Toler, tight end Niles Paul and wide receiver Rashad Ross stood in a row behind the rest of their teammates and coaches, heads down, right fists raised to the sky.

"It was just before the game," Toler, an eighth-year veteran and native of the District, recalled. "Me, D-Jack and Niles were talking about it, and we said, 'We don't want to disrespect any of our armed forces or any of the men or women in blue, anyone that protects our well-being. But at the same time, we want to stand up for injustice.'"

The move drew some attention, but caused little stir.

At home against the Cleveland Browns the following week, Jackson donned a pair of custom-made cleats — sky blue with yellow police caution tape painted on; it looked as if the cleats were wrapped in the tape. The Redskins released a statement on behalf of the wide receiver and another statement expressing support for his desire to see senseless killings end.

Initially, Jackson intended only to wear the cleats during warmups. He wound up deciding not to raise his fist during the national anthem but kept the cleats on the entire game, aware it would draw a fine from the NFL in the neighborhood of $6,000. Jackson did get fined, but he said this past week, "it was worth it." He didn't appeal the punishment.

"I just felt like I was silent enough," Jackson said after the game.

'Crisis in our society'

Asked about his motivations this past week, Jackson said, "Crisis in our society and community with the things going on, I just felt like my position, and the platform that we have as NFL athletes, there's a stand that needed to be stood.

"Colin Kaepernick obviously started by doing it on the national anthem," he continued. "But, I didn't really want to be disrespectful to our service members and things of that nature. I've tried to take a different stand by raising my fist and not taking a knee, then that kind of raised eyebrows and people still thought it was a sign of disrespect. I really didn't want to be a confusion, and I didn't want to disrupt. But I wanted to do it in a time that people would notice it, and I think I did that. That's where it starts."

That image contrasts starkly from the portrayal of Jackson two years ago, when the Philadelphia Eagles released him following an outstanding season — 82 catches, 1,332 yards and nine touchdowns — and even though he had another three years and $30.5 million remaining on his contract.

According to reports out of Philadelphia at the time, the Eagles cut the speedy, 5-foot-10, 175-pound receiver because of fears about him setting poor examples for his younger teammates and because of his alleged affiliations with Los Angeles gang activity.

Those close to Jackson call those depictions inaccurate. Jackson did have a reputation for a fondness for the Los Angeles party scene. But locker room trouble-maker? Not in Washington, people familiar within the organization have said both privately and publicly. And Jackson has had no run-ins with the law.

Jackson's social activism, those close to him say, is consistent with the person they know.

"It just shows how unselfish he is because he easily could go about his day and collect his check and not use his platform for anything or not even want that negative attention that speaking out brings," said left tackle Trent Williams, one of Jackson's closest friends on the Redskins. "It just shows how unselfish he is and how caring he is for other people. ... So, I commend him for speaking his mind, and I commend anyone for speaking up and asking for a better place."

Said Jackson's older brother, Byron, "DeSean has always been a guy that feels strongly about right and wrong. He sees something not being done the right way, he's not hesitant to voice his opinion. He's passionate about that. I think being a smaller guy, or smaller player, he's always had that mind-set of, 'Look, my stature may be small, but I'm not backing down,' and he's like that in life, too."

Those tendencies have something to do with the anti-bullying campaign that Jackson started in 2013 — he wrote a book on the topic — and preaching that message to children at his annual football camps.

Now Jackson has felt the urge to take on another problem area.

"I'm just tired of seeing caution tape, whether it's black-on-black crime or police brutality, or whatever," Jackson said. "I remember, growing up, someone was killed, or a shooting, or a violent crime, that's what you saw. I wanted to raise awareness to that for it to stop. We need to find a way to stop that. That's what my awareness was."

'I've got a son now'

Jackson said his desire to help spark change comes from a stronger source of motivation than seeing news reports or Kaepernick speaking out.

He became a father last year, and as his brother puts it, "fatherhood has definitely slowed him down, as it does most people, and he feels that sense of responsibility to his son."

Jackson said, "I've got a son now, and I want him to grow up in a different community or different society from what's going on now. I don't want to see him or anyone close to me go through what's going on now. There's a lot of hashtag-RIP's going around now. You don't want to continue to see it. You want to put a stop to it. Let's try to do it."

Jackson hopes to soon begin hosting community outreach events to curtail black-on-black crimes and to unite civilians and law enforcement members in a partnership.

Jackson and his brother also are in the planning stages to introduce a number of school districts in the Los Angeles, Philadelphia and D.C. areas to an after-school program curriculum that they initially began discussing in 2009. They have spent the last several years refining it and introducing it to education officials.

"It's a sports-based curriculum that also has an academic component," said Byron Jackson, a college football wide receiver who spent two years in the Kansas City Chiefs organization and now works as a freelance editor for Fox Sports in Los Angeles. "Its core values center on five points — desire, dream, vision, believe and power — and it's designed to teach character, ethics, help kids identify their passions and then help them pursue them.

"DeSean definitely knows he can have a strong impact because of his platform, and his gift of relating to kids. He just wants to help people make good decisions and never stop growing."

The Jackson brothers declined to reveal the school districts they're working with because the programs remain in the planning stages. But they hope to announce the localities later this year.

These efforts, according to the Jacksons, will ultimately have a greater impact than a raised fist during the anthem, or the caution tape cleats, which the wide receiver says he will not wear again.

"It's a lot that can be said, it's a lot of stances people can take. But you've got to take it a step further than that," Jackson said. "Donating money, starting nonprofits, really attacking the cause of what's going on. ... Having the youth and a lot of other children out there, and wanting them to live in a society of peace and not all these killings. If you can save some lives. You might not save 100 right away, but if you can save 10 or 20, then as long as you can start somewhere, that's doing something."

WR PIERRE GARÇON

Former John I. Leonard WR Pierre Garçon, now with Redskins, gives away four scholarships

By Jodie Wagner, Palm Beach Post
April 13, 2016

Former John I. Leonard football standout Pierre Garçon returned to his alma mater Monday to hand out college scholarship to four unsuspecting students.

Garçon, a wide receiver with the Washington Redskins, presented John I. Leonard seniors Frankeria Henderson, Cody Brown, Dayeel Dauphine and Daneyika Dauphine with scholarships worth $2,500 through his Helping Hands Foundation. The students were chosen for demonstrating growth and improvement both academically and socially.

The winners applied for the scholarships, but were not aware they were selected to receive them until Monday's awards presentation.

Garçon, 29, played football at John I. Leonard and later at Norwich (Vt.) University and Mount Union College in Ohio. As a senior in 2007, he caught 67 passes for 955 yards and 14 touchdowns. He was an Ohio Athletic Conference first-team selection.

The Indianapolis Colts drafted Garçon in the sixth round of the 2008 NFL Draft. He's played eight seasons in the NFL with the Colts and Redskins, catching 485 passes for 6,027 yards and 34 touchdowns.

He was the NFL's receptions leader in 2013, catching 113 passes for 1,346 yards.

Pierre Garçon and Ricky Jean Francois reflect on day trip to Haiti following Hurricane Matthew

By Master Tesfatsion, The Washington Post
October 11, 2016

Ricky Jean Francois was in the process of celebrating the Washington Redskins' victory over the Baltimore Ravens on Sunday evening when he received a text from his teammate, wide receiver Pierre Garçon. It had nothing to do with football. Instead, it was a sobering reminder of the world around them.

Garçon asked the defensive end if he wanted to travel to Haiti, an idea pitched to the wide receiver by Redskins owner Daniel Snyder in response to the devastation after Hurricane Matthew hit the island nation last week.

"Okay, sure," Francois responded. "Why wouldn't I?"

Garçon and Jean Francois, both of Haitian descent, made the trek on Snyder's private jet Monday morning to Port-au-Prince, a powerful 24-hour experience for both players. They landed just after 1 p.m. ET in the country's capital with medical supplies to provide to Hospital Bernard Mevs. Garçon said Snyder, who also sent a plane full of supplies to the Bahamas as well following the hurricane, had asked him about the hurricane and his family's safety prior to landfall.

The death toll of the Category 4 storm has reportedly risen to 1,000 people. The United Nations humanitarian agency said about 750,000 people in southwest Haiti will need "life-saving assistance and protection" over the next three months. It estimated that at least 2.4 million people have been affected by the hurricane in a country with a population of about 11 million.

Snyder asked Garçon, who was born in upstate New York but attended high school in South Florida, if there was anything he could do, then asked if he wanted to fly down to Haiti and help. Garçon agreed, and asked Jean Francois to tag along as they stocked up on IVs and saline.

"Port-au-Prince is definitely an eye-opening place where they actually didn't get hit as bad as they anticipated by the hurricane," Garçon said prior to heading back to the D.C. area. "There's different parts that were badly hurt, but there's still a lot of people in Port-au-Prince that need a lot of medical attention, and they flew in a lot of people from different parts of the country to Port-au-Prince to give them even more medical attention because that's where most of the better hospitals are at."

Garçon also went down to Haiti following a devastating earthquake in 2010 that left a death toll of more than 100,000. He said these natural disasters continue to set back Haiti, the world's first black republic, which declared its independence from France in 1804, but Garçon believes the people will bounce back with the same resiliency they've always displayed.

"We're from an area where you have to keep fighting to survive, keep fighting to live," Garçon said. "You have to keep working hard regardless and at some point your break will come. But that's where we get our mentality, our toughness, our grind and our hustle. It's where we're from. I guess it's instilled in us when we're born or the culture that we grew up in. You have to keep fighting regardless of what life throws at you. You have to keep working hard and keep living."

Jean Francois, a Miami native, said it felt like a normal day in the capital, given how much of the destruction occurred in the southwestern peninsula.

"I'm used to seeing big, great hospitals like massive hospitals the size of a college campus," Jean Francois said. "You come in here and got 20-30 beds in a room that's not even that big that can't actually fit all those in the room. You're seeing nurses work with what they have. They don't have the equipment we have. They don't have some of the things we have. Just sitting down to talk to one of the head ladies in the building with me asking her about certain things going on and just hearing her answers back, it gave me the reality check."

The experience of aiding the nation in need left Garçon and Jean Francois both thankful and hoping others step up and do the same over the next few months by giving their money, resources and time.

"I understand it's easy to pick up the phone and put your debit card down or your credit card down and donate $100 or $200, but what's really real to us, our people of Haiti, is to see your face here and seeing you put the time in, put the work in, put the sweat in to rebuild our country," Jean Francois said. "And it's a beautiful country. I understand in the media's eyes, they're going to show the disaster and all. Before the disaster struck, you've seen happy people. You've seen people with pride. You've seen people that had so much going for themselves, and they still have that right now. The money and stuff, that's okay. But you coming here, you giving supplies and bringing it here yourself, showing your face and knowing that you want to be a part of this to help other human beings — because if you was in the same position, you would like the same too — it's a blessing. The last 24 hours has been a blessing."

NT KEDRIC GOLSTON

By John Keim, ESPN.com
August 3, 2016

RICHMOND, Va. -- Washington Redskins defensive lineman Kedric Golston has spent the last 11 years feeling uncomfortable. The last thing he wanted to assume -- as a 2006 sixth-round pick who has rarely been a full-time starter -- was that he had a roster spot.

He watched three head coaches come and go. He watched his entire draft class from 2006 start and end their careers. He watched regime change in the front office. And, yet, here sits Golston: Entering his 11th season with the same team that drafted him.

During that time, he has started 51 games -- only eight since 2010 and none the past two years. Yet he's become an invaluable member of the franchise. It's not that they can't get rid of him; it's that they don't want to. So a fourth head coach now wants him to start at nose tackle. And the Golston Appreciation Tour continues.

"I think the best way to sum him up is he does whatever is asked of him and he does his job," Redskins coach Jay Gruden said. "We don't ask him to do a whole lot, but what we do ask of him, he's going to give it his best every snap, no matter what. That's Kedric's style. It's hard to separate yourself from a guy like that because he's such a great team player, he's a great leader, works extremely hard and does exactly what's asked of him."

That's one of the secrets to lasting this long with one team, something Golston understands. He's always in shape and professional. Even when he's not starting, he's a voice of reason in the Redskins' locker room, sought out by media and teammates. His nickname: Uncle Ked. That speaks to his experience -- Golston is 33 years old, close to a senior citizen in NFL years.

"He's a grinder, he's gritty," Redskins linebacker Will Compton said. "He's never been the big-name guy. There's a lot you can take from him. He's very big in his faith, a very disciplined individual. He has a lot of knowledge and wisdom and takes tremendous care of his body. The big thing with him is he's the same guy on and off the field. He's as much into his family as he is with football."

When Golston discusses his wife's growing real estate business -- she now has three offices -- his smile is wide, much bigger than it is when talking about his own career.

Still, it's not easy to last this long with one team. Joe Gibbs drafted him only to retire a second time and then came Jim Zorn for two years and Mike Shanahan for four. Vinny Cerrato was in the front office when the Redskins drafted Golston; Cerrato was fired during the 2009 season. Golston continues on despite now playing for his fourth defensive coordinator -- and a switch from a 4-3 to a 3-4 front.

Losing always brings about change and the Redskins have posted losing records in six of his 10 seasons, with three trips to the playoffs. Cleaning house, though, never included getting rid of Golston. He not only could serve a role along the line, but he also was excellent on special teams. In many ways, he's easy to keep around because of that and his approach. But Golston admitted he's never felt secure in his standing. Early in his career, he recalled former Redskins linebacker Marcus Washington reminding him of other players who had been cut.

"Whether you're comfortable or not in this business, you should never be comfortable," Golston said. "Jerry Rice got cut. Peyton Manning got cut. If they cut those guys they'll cut anybody."

Golston said he doesn't get caught up in what's being said about him. He just pushes forward.

"I knew I had an opportunity and it was up to me to make the most of it, no matter what role was asked of me," he said. "I tried to do my best, be a good teammate, always come out here and be professional. ... I was always confident in my ability, but a lot of things have to happen for a guy no matter where they started to be in the same place for 11 years."

Yes, it does. But it starts with his mentality.

"When you understand your coach is your boss and you do what you're asked, it makes life a whole lot more simple," Golston said. "It doesn't matter what the last coach or the last coordinator did, it's a new coach so you try to do what they ask and do it at a high level and let the rest take care of itself."

Gruden said Golston rarely makes mental mistakes and always knows the system "inside and out." That, too, is important. His wisdom can then be dispersed like he's the wise, old uncle. Hence, the nickname. Rather than shun it, perhaps as a reminder of his age, Golston welcomes the nickname. He hopes to keep it for another few seasons as his playing career continues -- not that he's thinking that far ahead.

"It's a sign of respect," he said. "These guys have been very good to me. I embrace it. Not many years ago I was calling Phillip Daniels 'Uncle Phil' and getting on his nerves. It's a good position to be in."

By Dan Steinberg, The Washington Post
October 20, 2016

Washington has its share of high-turnover jobs. GM of Metro. Wizards beat writer. Trump campaign manager.

But none of those can match the volatility of "Redskins place kicker." Over the last 22-plus seasons, the franchise has employed 21 kickers -- an average of one every 17 games. No other NFL team has used more than 15.

That's not all. Every team but one in that span has found a kicker who could last at least 80 games -- the equivalent of five full seasons. The 32nd team is the Redskins. More than two-thirds of NFL teams have asked a kicker to attempt at least 200 field goals since 1994. Shaun Suisham leads Washington with 101 tries.

This constant kicking churn isn't as important as Washington's revolving doors at quarterback or head coach. Still, it hints at the years of instability and change in Ashburn. Which is why the emergence of Dustin Hopkins in this latest rebuild seems like such a promising omen. For the first time in a generation, the Redskins seem to have found their franchise kicker.

[I know, I know. The parade starts at the corner of Pennsylvania and Third. Bring your kicking tees.]

Sure, Hopkins has been here just 21 games. That's barely longer than Cary Blanchard or Billy Cundiff lasted, barely more games than Ola Kimrin or Jose Cortez logged in Washington.

But look at the numbers. Since his arrival early last season, Hopkins has made 90.9 percent of his field goals. That's sixth in the NFL. He's knocked touchbacks on 77 percent of his kickoffs this season. [That's second in the NFL, although the new touchback rule has led some teams to change their strategy.] And he's supplanted predecessor Kai Forbath as the most accurate kicker in franchise history.

That's why GM Scot McCloughan has said -- in all seriousness -- that signing Hopkins was one of his best personnel moves in Washington. McCloughan's arrival was supposed to inaugurate a new era of personnel excellence. I don't think anyone imagined that would include discovering a kicker.

"Scot found him off the street," marveled safety Will Blackmon, another one of McCloughan's guys. "We got a steal."

Hopkins already had a sparkling resume before he arrived in D.C. last September. He was a high school all-American, set NCAA records for scoring and field goals made at Florida State, and was a Bills sixth-round draft pick in 2013. But he missed his rookie season with a groin injury, and had to restart his career, training with soccer balls and deflated footballs during a lengthy rehab. He didn't get a job in 2014, and was cut by the Saints last preseason after losing a competition with the since-released Zach Hocker, a 2014 Redskins draft pick. Less than two weeks later, Hopkins and Caleb Sturgis came to Redskins Park for a tryout.

"It's funny; we weren't necessarily looking to make a change at the kicker spot," Gruden said this week. "[But] we saw this guy work out. We heard the explosion off his foot. ... So we decided to take a chance."

Hopkins was supposed to fly home that same day; he had dinner plans with his wife and some friends. The Redskins instead told him to wait in Director of Pro Personnel Alex Santos's office. Hopkins sat there for hours, "twiddling my thumbs basically," while the team sorted out its plans. Before he heard anything from the front office, his wife read on social media that the Redskins were signing him. "Hey do we need to pack our bags?" she texted.

Gruden soon explained why the team was making the change. Forbath had once seemed like Washington's long-sought-after solution, making 87 percent of his field goals, many in clutch situations. But he had been erratic at kickoffs, with touchbacks on well below half of his attempts, a weakness that frustrated both fans and the coaching staff.

"It would be nice to kick the ball off through the end zone at a consistent rate," Gruden said after making the change. "That's really the main reason."

That's paid off rather nicely. Hopkins has recorded touchbacks on 69 percent of his attempts with Washington, regularly sending footballs into the FedEx Field stands. And Gruden hasn't been the only one struck by the noise when Hopkins makes contact. Long snapper Nick Sundberg even laid on the ground next to the tee during practice, so he could stare at the ball when Hopkins strikes it.

"It's just different," Sundberg said. "It's such a violent movement. ... He just crushes the ball when he hits it. I don't know how else to put it. The ball molds around his foot so much. I think that's what Jay's talking about. When his foot makes contact, the whole ball folds around his foot before it takes off. It's crazy-looking."

That's why the team brought him here, although it turns out he's been just as good at making kicks. Hopkins has converted 20 of his past 21 field-goal attempts, with the one miss a 56-yarder in the wind at Baltimore that Gruden said he probably shouldn't have tried. From 50 yards or less, he's made an eye-popping 97.4 percent of his kicks. That's tops among active kickers, and the best mark in NFL history of anyone who's tried at least 10 field goals, according to Pro Football Reference.

"The guy's a machine," said center Spencer Long. "I even told him that — 'You're a frickin' machine.' Just the same thing over and over: Boom, boom, boom."

Some of these things are likely taken for granted in other cities, where kickers can get comfortable and register to vote and maybe even buy a house. (Don't worry, Hopkins still rents.) Accuracy around the league is spiking, and you almost expect kickers to drill all their 50-yarders, like the one Hopkins made rather easily last week against the Eagles. [NFL kickers this season have made 53 percent of their attempts from 50 yards or longer.] We've thought before that the Redskins found their forever kicker: with Forbath, with Graham Gano, with Shaun Suisham.

So it's okay to be cautious. Just remember: over the past 12 months, there's been a new Metro GM, a new Wizards beat writer and more than one new Trump campaign manager. But there's only been one Redskins kicker.

RB MATT JONES

NFL teams trying to reduce fumbles with beeping footballs

By Stephen Whyno, Associated Press
June 25, 2016

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) -- Amid the hooting and hollering at Washington Redskins minicamp, there's a different sound in the air during running back drills.

Coaches whack at the football with Matt Jones carrying it, and it beeps. Then it beeps longer.

That's a good sign.

The Redskins are one of five NFL teams using so-called beeping or whistling footballs to emphasize ball security. When the ball is being held correctly with the fundamental five points of pressure, it emits an audible beeping sound at about 80 decibels to tell a player he's doing it right.

"If I had that ball in high school, I don't think I would've had a fumble," Jones said. "It's teaching me how to squeeze the ball at the point of contact. Everything has changed about me holding the ball."

Cutting down on fumbles is the goal of the ball, developed by Division II Northwood University assistant coach Tom Creguer and used by the Redskins, Dallas Cowboys, Indianapolis Colts, Baltimore Ravens, Tampa Bay Buccaneers and several college teams, including Tennessee and Michigan State. The San Diego Chargers plan to start using them at training camp.

Creguer said practicing with "High and Tight" footballs, which cost about $150 each, reduced Northwood's fumbles by 63 percent last season. Many NFL position coaches got the lowdown on them at the scouting combine.

"It basically reinforces the proper hold by teaching the athlete to put their forearm to the panel, their panel to the chest and to compress the ball evenly with equal distribution of pressure, therefore creating basically a vice around the football, creating that muscle memory of what it feels like to have the ball secured to their body at all times," Creguer said in a phone interview.

Coaches have taught ball security for decades, but this technology adds another element. Creguer said Cowboys running backs coach Gary Brown texted him that he'll use the beeping footballs as long as he's working.

That doesn't mean Cowboys players warmed up to them right away.

"They didn't like it at first," Brown said. "I think it was just the pressure you had to do it. They're not used to squeezing it that hard."

Players aren't the only ones adjusting to how to squeeze a football tight enough. During a presentation on ball security, Ravens running backs coach Thomas Hammock demonstrated and then tossed the ball to coach John Harbaugh, who couldn't get it to beep.

"I've been working out; I feel like I'm pretty strong right now," Harbaugh said with a laugh. "Found out later the battery was dead, for the record. I'm sticking to it, that's right."

On the field, though, it seems to be working. Brown said Cowboys running backs Ezekiel Elliott and Alfred Morris fumbled less during organized team activities and minicamp after working with the beeping balls in drills.

Morris said he got a cramp in his forearm the first day but thinks it'll help in games when there are defenders bearing down on him and trying to strip the ball. With so much to think about, he wants holding the ball to be second nature.

"It's easy to just, like, 'I got to make this guy miss.' You don't think about, 'I need to keep the ball tight too,'" Morris said. "So doing something like that can kind of reiterate like, hey, keep the ball tight."

Colts running back Robert Turbin has only lost one fumble in 281 career carries but is open to new ideas about how to get better. He had never seen anything like the beeping footballs.

"All running backs fumble, but as they say, iron sharpens iron, so just because you're good at something doesn't mean you can't get better at it," Turbin said.

For Jones and the Redskins it's about fixing a known problem. Jones lost four fumbles as a rookie, and with Morris gone he must improve in that area as Washington's top back.

Running backs coach Randy Jordan, who played nine seasons for the Raiders and Jaguars, struggled to get the football to beep at first. After he and his players figured it out, Jordan has noticed a major improvement, especially from Jones.

"It's got to a point now when he goes through his drills, he's looking for that football," Jordan said last week. "I can say when we're going through the drill, 'When you get collision or you get ready for somebody to strip the ball, I want to hear the beep.' So you go from kind of casually holding it to like gripping it really tight."

Jones doesn't want to let go. He's planning to buy a ball to use over the summer break in Florida before training camp begins to keep up the practice.

Other running backs may soon follow suit.

"Ball security, that's the most important thing on the field," Morris said. "That's one thing you don't want to do is turn the ball over."

Redskins running back Matt Jones believes he's finally gained an edge

By Mike Jones, The Washington Post
October 7, 2016

A vicious blow to the head lit the fire.

Redskins running back Matt Jones had taken a handoff late in the third quarter of Washington's game against the Giants on Sept. 25. He barreled through a hole on the right side of the line and picked up five yards before New York linebacker Devon Kennard got him by the leg and sent him stumbling to the turf. Then safety Nat Berhe flew in from the secondary and drilled Jones in the back of the head with his helmet.

Jones fumbled but, despite seeing stars, quickly recovered.

The hit — completely unnecessary in Jones's mind — didn't draw a penalty. But it did take some time for the running back to get up, and trainers tended to him before ushering him to the sideline against his will.

2016 FEATURE CLIPS

"I was so mad after that hit," Jones recalled. "It was — I kind of snapped. I was like, 'I've got kids, man! I love my little girls!'"

"J-Reed was asking me, 'Bro, you good?'" Jones continued, referring to tight end Jordan Reed. "I was so locked in on my family and my girls, and from that point on, I was like, 'I'm playing football for those girls. That's what my motivation is. That's what I'm playing for.'"

Jones returned in the fourth quarter a different back. After gaining 19 yards on seven carries during the first three quarters of the game, Jones accumulated 46 yards on 10 carries and helped lead Washington's 29-27 comeback victory.

Against Cleveland last Sunday, Jones ran with the same fire, rushing for 117 yards and a touchdown on 22 carries. The second half saw him produce his best work: 79 yards and the touchdown on 11 carries as the Redskins came from behind to beat the Browns, 31-20.

Jones finally looked like the back General Manager Scot McCloughan had touted so highly since drafting him in the third round out of Florida in 2015. It was the type of performance McCloughan and Coach Jay Gruden had hoped for when they let three-time 1,000-yard rusher Alfred Morris depart to the Dallas Cowboys via free agency last spring.

It was a welcome departure from the inconsistency Jones exhibited last season and the first 2½ regular season games this season. "I didn't have that edge," Jones acknowledged.

Jones paused as he sat on a plush leather couch outside the locker room at Redskins Park. The player whose jersey is No. 31 looked down at the football in his hands. It was labeled, "31 2 yd TD run 10/2/16 4th Qtr vs Browns" and will soon be shipped to his mother in Florida, who last week attended her first pro football game at FedEx Field.

'Fighting my tail off'

"You talk about needing to dig deep and fight out what you're playing for, and for me, I had nothing," Jones, 23, said. "I don't want to say nothing, but I just was like, I'm playing football because. You know how they have the speakers that come in and talk about motivation, and they say, 'Find why you're playing this game.' I'm always sitting in the back, just like, 'I don't know. I'm just good at it.' Now it feels good knowing why I'm playing football."

Jones doesn't know why it took so long for things to click. Daughters Aniyah, 4, and Katlin, 2, were born while he attended the University of Florida. But the hit to his head two weeks ago sent his thoughts to them, his stepdaughter and his unborn son, who is due in the spring. Suddenly, Jones said, he realized the importance of the opportunity at hand.

"I feel like I'm at the point of my life where I'm a starter right now, and I don't want to take it for granted because stuff can happen just like that," he said. "So, I'm fighting my tail off now to be great. Fighting my tail off for my girls and my family."

Jones is the youngest of three boys raised by their mother, Barbara Singleton, in Tampa. She got all three involved in youth football, and since Jones never knew his father, his brother Daryl Jones Jr., who is six years older, took him under his wing. (His oldest brother, Josh Jenrette, is nine years Jones's senior.)

Jones was 12 when his mother remarried, but those early years left a painful mark.

"Throughout my whole life, I watched my mama struggle. It took a toll on me," Jones said. "Sometimes I would just sit and cry to see my mama come home and working her tail off for me. Sometimes I couldn't get the shoes I wanted. I was still so spoiled to the point where I didn't understand, and I'd be like, 'Ma, why can't I get these shoes?' She'd tell me, 'I can't afford it right now.'"

He continued, "I didn't know my daddy. I look at my two little girls and I could never see myself walking away from them or saying, 'I don't have it right now.' So, it hurts me to my heart seeing what I had to go through for my mom, and it makes me a stronger dad today."

Jones's mother and brothers stressed to him that football could serve as his ticket to college, to the NFL and out of poverty. Daryl ran his little brother through training exercises and football drills that he himself had learned from high school practices.

"I challenged and pushed him because you could tell he had a chance to be something special," said Daryl, who played football for four years for the University of New Mexico and had a short stint with the Arena League's Tampa Bay Storm. "Every week, he'd go to my high school games on Friday nights, and Saturday mornings I'd get up and go to his games, and however many touchdowns I had scored the night before, Matt would try to double them. I might've score only one, but you could bet that he'd score three or five."

In addition to the training from his big brother, Jones had size on his side. Because he dwarfed his teammates and foes, his youth football coaches always had to provide officials a copy of Jones's birth certificate.

"I basically did whatever I wanted to do in Little League and high school," Jones recalled. "Run over kids, run around kids, had a bunch of crazy records."

A work in progress

Jones followed his brothers' footsteps and earned a college scholarship (Jenrette played football at Fordham). At Florida, he platooned at the running back position as a freshman and during an injury-shortened sophomore year and as a junior. His best season came as a junior when he averaged 4.9 yards a carry and scored six rushing touchdowns and one receiving touchdown.

Jones knows he remains very much a work in progress. When McCloughan drafted him, he compared Jones to former Seattle Seahawks running back Marshawn Lynch. But the 6-foot-2, 232-pound Jones still is learning how to use his size and strength to his advantage. Accustomed to outrunning opponents, Jones has had to learn and study how to run with a more physical style that will better suit him in the NFL, where defenders are just as fast — and in many cases the same size or bigger.

Washington running backs coach Randy Jordan also continues to work with Jones on being more decisive as a runner. Many times, Jones has gotten stopped for minimal games because he'd stutter-step instead of just running hard.

As Jordan has preached to Jones, second-guessing yourself proves costly in the NFL.

"Because he's still young, it's really important to remind him, 'Where's your eyes?'" the coach said. "But most importantly, whatever decision you make, put your foot in the ground, and you make it. We all succumb to once you make a decision, the decision is done,"

Jones admitted he still missed some opportunities against the Browns last weekend. He pointed to two carries in particular on which, after reviewing film of the game, he realized he could have turned decent runs into big gainers had he recognized openings more quickly.

Jones believes those kind of missed opportunities could soon become a thing of the past.

"Running like that, finishing, having fun doing it, it's kind of scary what I could do, but in a great way," he said. "I think I feel better about myself now that I know why I'm doing this, and what I'm capable of doing. I'll be more capable of getting downfield. I'll be a tougher load and will be a better asset for this team."

RB ROBERT KELLEY

Redskins rookie's 'Fat Rob' nickname isn't all about weight

By Scott Allen, The Washington Post
August 26, 2016

Redskins running back Robert Kelley was a guest on ESPN 980's "Inside the Locker Room" on Tuesday and, not surprisingly, the first question for the undrafted rookie out of Tulane was about the nickname that Redskins Coach Jay Gruden revealed to the world last week.

"Rob did a good job," Gruden said of Kelley's preseason debut against the Falcons. "'Fat Rob,' that's what is on his backpack. He did a nice job. ... That's his nickname in college if you didn't know that — 'Fat Rob' Kelley. But anyway, he was impressive. He's been impressive since we got him."

Kelley's simple explanation for how he got the nickname is about what you might expect.

"My senior year, my running backs coach brought me a backpack with 'Fat Rob' [inscribed on it], a nickname I actually earned in the offseason eating a lot of food," Kelley said this week. "I don't like to talk about it.”

The man responsible for giving Kelley the nickname — and the customized backpack — was happy to talk about it, and offered a slightly different take on the moniker’s origin.

“That’s what I would call him, ‘Fat Rob,’” former Tulane running backs coach David Johnson, who left New Orleans to join new Memphis Coach Mike Norvell’s staff in December, said Friday. “It had nothing to do with his weight, it was really about his heart. I would call him ‘Fat Rob’ all the time because his heart was so big.”

Okay, but the 20-plus pounds Kelley put on during his senior season weren’t all concentrated in his aorta, right?

“He did gain a little bit of weight his senior year because he wasn’t practicing during the spring, but he had a really big heart and sometimes he was loyal to a fault,” Johnson said. “For me it was more about his heart and his character. It kind of came a little true when he gained that weight.”

Kelley starred at O. Perry Walker High in New Orleans and was Tulane’s leading rusher as a sophomore in 2012. He was declared academically ineligible to participate in the spring 2014 and sat out the entire 2014 season. Kelley eventually earned his degree and returned to the team as a fifth-year senior last season, when he rushed for 232 yards on 65 carries. After the final game of his college career, Kelley said he weighed 249 pounds. By Tulane’s Pro Day in March, he was down to 225 pounds and called Johnson to let him know that he performed well in front of scouts.

“He said, ‘Coach, coach, I ran a good time and I kept running the ball hard,’” Johnson recalled. “He was so proud of himself and I was proud of him. It was really tough for him. Eighty or 90 percent of people would’ve quit if they were in his position. He didn’t have a stellar senior year, but even though he was the third-string running back on the depth chart, he was always the leader of that room.”

Kelley went undrafted, but signed with the Redskins as a free agent in April and rushed for 40 yards and a touchdown in his pre-season debut. With Matt Jones and Chris Thompson out for Friday’s game against the Bills, Kelley — listed at 228 pounds — is expected to split carries with seventh-round pick Keith Marshall. Johnson, who texts and talks with Kelley often, isn’t surprised his former pupil is making a serious push to be the Redskins’ third running back.

“I know what type of kid he is, I know his athletic ability,” Johnson said. “He’s one of the most athletic people I know and I knew he would make the most of his opportunity. He came from a pro-style offense, but the biggest advantage he has is he knows protection. That’s one of the things that we kind of stressed. A lot of guys can run and catch, but can you block and can you protect that million dollar quarterback?”

Johnson said he’ll cry if “Fat Rob” is on the Redskins’ sideline come Week 1 and could only laugh when Kelley contacted him recently to let him know that Gruden had outed his nickname.

“I told him, hey, you need a marker there,” Johnson said. “Everyone has a brand.”

Hurricane Katrina just one major hurdle for Redskins RB Rob Kelley

By John Keim, ESPN.com
December 8, 2016

ASHBURN, Va. -- He was just a kid when Hurricane Katrina devastated his city, starting Rob Kelley’s life on a nomadic journey. It destroyed his parents’ homes; it helped him grow and taught him how to overcome -- a trait he continues to use. He was a poor kid left with nothing except perspective and an opportunity.

Katrina altered the lives of many in New Orleans, including the Washington Redskins rookie running back. Thing is, for Kelley it was just another obstacle -- just like being from the Upper Ninth Ward’s Desire area -- and just like being suspended for a time at Tulane. It shaped his life and led him to where he is now, but it didn’t deter him. Several teammates from back in the day are dead; a few, like Kelley, made it to the NFL.

“His toughness, being from a tough environment, helped him to deal with anything anyone brought to him,” said Skip LaMothe, who coached Kelley for two seasons at O. Perry Walker in New Orleans. “That was one of the things that probably kept him from going in the wrong direction -- and he had a passion for football. He had a major passion.”

The Redskins are benefitting from that passion: Kelley, a tough runner, has rushed for 421 yards in five starts -- and gained 524 overall. Maybe few saw this coming, but others who have known Kelley a long time did. It goes back to Katrina.

Devastation

Kelley’s parents both lived in the Upper Ninth ward -- he said his father owned a house while his mom rented one. At the time, Kelley was a seventh-grader practicing with the varsity at the Desire Street Academy, a school run by former Redskins quarterback Danny Wuerffel. Before the flood, coaches gathered the players and told them to anticipate a brief shutdown. Kelley’s family evacuated before the storm.

“No one imagined it would turn out like it did,” said Brett Bonnafons, then a football assistant at Desire.

Kelley’s family, like everyone else in his area, was displaced. He went to live in Dallas with his mother and two of his sisters. Two other sisters traveled to Houston with his dad. They left a life behind.

“We lost so much stuff, our houses, our memories,” Kelley said. “I don’t have any baby photos.”

Thus began the nomadic tale: They lived in Baton Rouge for a couple weeks, staying with an aunt, before his mom found a house in Texas and sent for her kids. Thanks in part to Wuerffel’s connections, the school re-opened in October at a 4-H camp in Niceville, Florida. There were 10 cabins, a pavilion and shelter that served as classrooms and a building turned into a school. Of the original 150 boys, Bonnafons said school officials gathered approximately 90, finding them in several states -- Tennessee, Texas, Oklahoma -- and drove them to Florida.

“At that age, I wasn’t worried about a house and stuff like that,” Kelley said. “I always saw momma crying but I never understood what was going on. I should have, but I was worried about my friends. I was like, ‘I’ll never see my friends; I have to make new friends.’ But my momma cried all the time about it.”

In Florida, Kelley roomed with nine other boys in a cabin with a ceiling fan but no central air. Kelley was just a kid with other boys his age trying to enjoy life.

“It was hard on my parents. We lost everything and now their son is away in Florida,” Kelley said. “It was the first time I got a cell phone and they called me all the time. But I was just out there having fun, running around, playing football and going to school. ... When you get older, you see how it stressed out your parents and you’re like, ‘Now I understand what they were going through.’”

But one of his good friends from childhood, Jarred Micken, who was with him in Florida and is currently a high school assistant coach, said, “It’s kind of hard not seeing your parents all the time. We had the choice to leave on weekends if you wanted to, but it was still hard and being somewhere you’re not from.

“But a lot of people supported us and took care of us while our parents were wherever they were at. That helped us a whole lot. And football helped us, too. That kept us out of those negative things and that molded Rob into the man you all are seeing.”

Indeed, it forced Kelley and the others to mature in a hurry.

“I had to have people wire me money and the older guys were like, ‘Give me some money.’ They were hurting, too,” Kelley said. “Everybody was out for themselves and you had to watch yourself. People were stealing. It was a group of guys who lost everything out there and were trying to play football and chase their dream and ain’t really got nothing.”

Growing up fast

There were five-hour bus rides -- one way -- to every game as they continued to play in Louisiana. When Kelley visited his family in Texas, he traveled alone on a bus for 12 hours.

Kelley encountered situations that kids his age typically didn’t.

“One time they lost my luggage and I didn’t know how to handle it,” Kelley said. “My mom was like, ‘You’ve got to go fill out this form.’ We had to talk about this stuff over the phone. I’m like, ‘This is the stuff you should be doing.’”

“In my eyes, it’s like I’ve been on my own a long time. I had parents, but in reality I was always on my own because growing up, I’d be at my mom's or dad's or grandma's house. When Katrina happened, I left home for three years. It mentally prepared me. I had to learn to look after myself."

When Kelley was a seventh-grader, Bonnafons mistook him for a scrawny ninth or 10th grader and figured he was just practice fodder. A year later, Kelley had developed into a tough eighth-grader, pushed in part by the previous year's events.

By this time, the academy had relocated to Baton Rouge, but remained a boarding school. He became a backup to the starting varsity back. He improved in the classroom.

"I don't know if it was because of his upbringing or because of the stuff he went through during Katrina," Bonnafons said. "It was rough, not because there were all these problems and fights, but because kids were emotionally burned out. I don't know if that hardened him or not. But when he came back as an eighth-grader, he was running and working out and reading and doing everything he had with a purpose.

"People were scared to tackle him, even as an eighth-grader, because he's so physical. Even at 180 pounds, we had a 225-pound linebacker he was going to try to run over. He failed more times than not because that linebacker was very good, but he never quit."

Inspiration

It's a mindset he's carried with him ever since: at O. Perry Walker, a school on the west bank of New Orleans where he transferred for his last two years; at Tulane, where he was suspended because of academics and then after he was charged with simple battery and simple robbery. Charges were later dropped, but he ended up missing an entire season, sitting in the stands in tears before games when teammates would visit.

When Kelley returned for his final college season last year, he had lost his standing on the depth chart. Kelley stuck around, propped up by the belief of coaches and relying on his toughness. There were doubts about his ability to learn. He was told to cut his long hair. His response: Get to know me; don't judge me by the locks.

"Nothing made me more proud," Bonnafons said, "than when he called to say he was graduating from Tulane because of what he had to fight through to get to that."

The football success stories out of Desire include other NFL players DeAngelo Peterson, who once spent time on the Redskins' practice squad in 2012; and Lavar Edwards, now a linebacker with Indianapolis. Micken said for Kelley, playing in the NFL "is overwhelming for him now. I don't think it's hit him yet." Several players signed at Division I schools. And there are sad stories -- Bonnafons said he attended four funerals from boys at the school. Kelley said of former teammates, "a lot of them are dead."

"A whole bunch of teammates died off that [O. Perry] team, too," he said. "I kind of feel chosen. I had so many moments could be like, 'F--- it.' I could have graduated and said, 'F--- it, I'm not playing football anymore.' [But] I honestly think all that stuff was meant to happen and made me a way better person.

"People text me all the time like, 'man you are an inspiration.' I don't feel that. But people noticed."

Yes, they did.

"Rob is one of those ones the light went on for," Bonnafons said. "The thing I loved about Rob, even at Tulane, is that he knew, 'I'm not going to let anything else affect what I do' especially where he came from, bad things happened. It was a good place to learn how to be a man."

G ARIE KOUANDJIO

Clutching his tiny American flag, Redskins lineman becomes a U.S. citizen

By Dan Steinberg, The Washington Post
September 13, 2016

The latest story about an NFL player and a flag began Tuesday morning just after 11, in the great hall of the U.S. Department of Labor's Frances Perkins building. All 45 candidates for naturalization held miniature American flags as they sat in plastic chairs and listened to government officials deliver paeans to the power of immigration. Those included the first two candidates in the front row, perhaps the smallest and the biggest of the 45.

There was tiny Dahlia Lyons, a native of the Philippines and the only military spouse in the ceremony. And next to her was the 6-foot-5 and 325-pound Arie Kouandjio, a native of Cameroon and a reserve guard for the Redskins.

Kouandjio caressed his little flag as Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security Alejandro Mayorkas described the United States as a country "like no other, a country that always has been and forever will be a nation of immigrants." He held it as U.S. Labor Secretary Thomas E. Perez praised the assembled teachers and custodians and engineers and housewives (and professional athletes) for "adding such tremendous value to our nation." He held it when the candidates were asked to stand by their country of origin, 38 in all. [Cameroon came after Cambodia and before Canada.] And when Perez read out some of the comments the candidates had written down, Kouandjio heard his own words quoted.

"I'm the one who said that I can finally call myself an American," he said after the ceremony.

The 24-year-old came to this country with his family at the age of 6 and has spent three-quarters of his life here, mostly in the Washington area. His brother Cyrus, who plays for the Buffalo Bills, also plans on becoming a citizen, and Kouandjio talked about the new rights he now enjoys: He can get a passport, he can vote, he can run for office.

"Before, all I could do is just watch CNN or just watch Fox or just watch; I wasn't a participating member in all decisions," he said. "I [still] can't be the president, which is something that I've always wanted to do, but I can do other things, so it's awesome."

If you've ever seen clips of one of these ceremonies, you can probably guess what it was like: lots of hugs and happiness and family members snapping photos, lots of talk of melting pots and e pluribus unum, and if it didn't make you feel warm inside, you should probably fiddle with your thermostat. Do you still get those tingles if you've been to more than one of these events?

"Every single time," said Mayorkas, himself an immigrant. ["You've got to put me in; this is my only chance of getting in the sports page!" he also told me. Yes, we take requests.]

But seeing Kouandjio standing for the national anthem, and reciting the Oath of Allegiance and Pledge of Allegiance, and clutching his little flag, it was also impossible not to think about what's been happening in the NFL this fall. The same flag has provided an opportunity for athletes to express sometimes controversial opinions, and to start sometimes uncomfortable conversations. Now Kouandjio was being mobbed for photographs, and speaking into cameras, and posing with a U.S. cabinet secretary after pledging allegiance to that same flag.

"I was thinking about that yesterday, when everything was going on," he said, referring to the pregame ceremony at FedEx Field, when virtually the entire Redskins roster helped hold a massive flag.

Despite his line about running for office, Kouandjio — who has a Master's degree in applied economics — mostly steers clear of politics. So he paused often and spoke carefully when asked to put this ceremony in the context of current league events. His parents, he said, came to this country to give their children a better education and a better life. He said it was "only right" for him to become a citizen, and he said there was "a little pep in my step this morning" because of the occasion. Protesting during the anthem, as some of his NFL colleagues have done, is "not the way I'd go about it," he said.

But he also has been studying to become an American citizen.

"Like many people have pointed out, people fought for their rights to do that," he said of the protesters. "They have the right to do what they're doing. I mean, they're using their platform in a different way, to get their values across. That's part of what America is."

This was an event, in any case, that seemed to offer good feelings without reservations. And while there was a large hall full of immigrant stories — "45 people, 45 journeys," as the labor secretary put it — only one of them was surrounded by officials after the event.

Perez, a Bills fan, showed pictures on his phone of Arie's brother taken Sunday afternoon in Baltimore, and chatted with Kouandjio about the White Oak neighborhood where they both have spent time.

2016 FEATURE CLIPS

Labor Department employees who root for the Redskins streamed toward the stage, looking for photos. Deputy Labor Secretary Christopher Lu grabbed his Redskins hat from his office when he read the memo about the ceremony and presented it for an autograph.

“Look, even those of us here can be a little bit starstruck every now and then,” he said.

Kouandjio had adjusted some of his work schedule for interviews and appointments as he prepared for this event. His teammates, he said, gave him “a lot of congratulations and attaboys.” One even attempted to attend Tuesday’s ceremony, although he was foiled either by impossible traffic or impossible parking. A television reporter asked Kouandjio to compare becoming a citizen with potentially winning a Super Bowl. “Gosh, we’ve got to say both of them are as American as you can get, right?” he replied.

“It feels great,” Kouandjio said. “I’ve been waiting for this for a very long time, and I’m happy to finally be able to call myself an American.”

TY NSEKHE

Ty Nsekhe’s road to Redskins starter wound through lower leagues and odd roles

By Mike Jones, The Washington Post
November 9, 2016

Ty Nsekhe plopped down on the seat in front of his locker, his back turned to the rest of the room, and began peeling off his sweaty socks, completely unaware of the swarm of reporters that had just materialized.

At 6 feet 8 and 335 pounds, Nsekhe is impossible to miss. But any other day, the 31-year-old backup swing tackle, officially listed as a second-year pro, is an afterthought. However, with Pro Bowl left tackle Trent Williams suspended for the next four weeks for violating the league’s substance-abuse policy, Nsekhe suddenly had entered the spotlight.

Feeling eyes on him, Nsekhe stole a glance over his shoulder and almost jumped upon seeing his new friends. One reporter had such limited familiarity with Nsekhe that he had to ask how to pronounce his last name. [It’s en-SEK-he].

“Big Ty” swirled around on his stool and began answering questions with ease. After a trying road, Nsekhe sees himself as well prepared to handle whatever comes his way while stepping in for Williams.

“I always knew I was destined to be here,” Nsekhe said. “I’ve had a lot of peaks and valleys. It took me five, six years to get where I am now. I kept my faith in God and kept grinding and just won’t stop.”

Until catching on with the Washington Redskins last season, Nsekhe spent five years bouncing around the NFL, the Canadian Football League and the Arena Football League.

Undrafted out of Texas State in 2009, Nsekhe got his first pro opportunity in the Arena Development League. There, players played for roughly $100 per game and, if they won, would earn $50 bonuses.

Nsekhe got a tryout with the Miami Dolphins in 2011, and the team planned to sign him, he said. But then came the NFL lockout, which killed those plans.

In 2012, after stops with the AFL’s Dallas Vigilantes and Philadelphia Soul, Nsekhe started to wonder whether he should give up on football. He had started his own private-security business when the San Antonio Talons extended an offer, prompting him to give football one more shot.

Nsekhe played tackle for the Talons, but he went out for the occasional pass, recording three touchdown catches. He played well enough to catch the attention of the Indianapolis Colts. But he stuck around for only the offseason. Nsekhe appeared in two games for the St. Louis Rams in 2012 but got cut the following fall. The next offseason featured a stop with the New Orleans Saints, a brief stint with the Montreal Alouettes and then a return to the AFL with the Los Angeles Kiss. In 2015, Nsekhe got a tryout with the Redskins and wound up signing a two-year contract.

“It was some tough times that he went through,” says Chris Poux, Nsekhe’s best friend and Pop Warner, high school and college teammate. “But Ty never gave up. He’s always been that way. You tell him he can’t do something, and he’ll try to prove you wrong.”

In basketball, Nsekhe at times would neglect his position in the post to guard point guards, just to show his teammates he had the quickness to do so. He even tried to walk on to his college basketball team just to prove those coaches wrong.

Nsekhe’s ambition did get him into trouble in one instance, which Poux enjoys bringing up.

“We were in fourth grade, and Ty was a defensive end then, and I was a safety,” Poux recalled. “He always told me he was faster than me, if it was game speed. So I picked off a pass and was running it back. Ty is trying to race me to the end zone to prove he could run as fast as me at game speed. He wound up running into a guy and accidentally blocking him in the back. The touchdown got called back, and we lost by one point! I still have to remind him of that all the time.”

Nsekhe laughed and rolled his eyes when asked about that game.

“Yeah, that was the championship. Lost it by one point because of me. Second place,” he said.

The Redskins don’t plan on using him as a pass catcher, like in the AFL, and he will leave races to the end zone to someone else. But Nsekhe sees the next four weeks as a prime opportunity to display his blocking potential and the fruits of his growth in the past year and a half.

Although slotted behind Williams and right tackle Morgan Moses, Nsekhe appeared in 13 games last season. He played primarily on special teams but made two starts at tackle. This season, he has been used as an extra blocker in Washington’s “jumbo” packages, and three times he has finished out games for a hobbled starter [Moses twice, Williams once].

Nsekhe proved solid in that limited action, and now the Redskins turn to him for a role of great importance. General Manager Scot McCloughan has said he believes Nsekhe could start for half the teams in the NFL, and Coach Jay Gruden on Wednesday gushed over Nsekhe’s improvement.

“He was very raw when we got him,” Gruden said, “and [offensive line] coach Bill Callahan has done a great job with him. . . . He’s always working on his craft, whether it’s scout team, in the games he’s gotten opportunities. But he’s a physical specimen, and he’s always made up for his inefficiencies technique-wise with his size. But in the NFL, that’s not always easy to do. But now he’s got the technique. He’s working on his technique, and he’s very sound. Plus, he’s a huge man and, I think, a great tackle.”

Over the next four weeks, opponents figure to target Nsekhe, hoping his lack of experience will make him vulnerable. But the Redskins believe their big backup-turned-starter will play well.

“Ty’s a great ballplayer, man,” left guard Shawn Lauvao said. “I’m not worried at all. . . . He’s a tremendous player. I’m happy that we have him because that’s a tremendous loss with Trent. But Ty can play some ball. I’m not going to cry, even though my heart still hurts.”

CB JOSH NORMAN

Josh Norman is the ‘Dark Knight’ on the field, a son of rural South Carolina off it

By Master Tesfatsion, The Washington Post
July 22, 2016

GREENWOOD, S.C. — The line was unorganized, and it was all Josh Norman’s fault. He just can’t say no to children, especially those from his home town. The Washington Redskins cornerback already had spent a considerable portion of his fourth “Fun Day in the Park” signing autographs and posing for pictures. Still, there were about 50 people in line.

Keshia Walker, executive director of Starz24, Norman’s foundation that aims to support the community that raised him, attempted to establish two lines — one for autographs and one for photos. But the children kept swarming around Norman. And he kept signing.

“Josh, one per person, baby,” Walker said as Norman signed the brim of a little boy’s turquoise Kevin Durant snapback hat. “Everyone’s getting photos and autographs. See, you the one causing the trouble!”

They smiled. Norman finally gave in to her rules, though he bent them for a few kids. He wanted to leave a positive experience for the 1,213 children running around Brewer Field on this humid June day because, less than a mile away, his childhood memories have been boarded up and abandoned for the past seven years.

Seaboard Recreation Center once served as a safe haven for Norman, his four brothers and generations of Greenwood natives. Now it’s an asbestos-filled gym with an adjacent, uninhabited swimming pool. The only signs of life reside on the two outdoor courts, where locals play pickup basketball games with shards of glass scattered on the court, and in the pool, where weeds have bloomed through the cracks of the inert foundation.

This bulky red building and the caged-in swimming pool played a significant role, along with his supportive family, in shaping Norman into the 28-year-old man he is today. And he’s yearning to create another Greenwood sanctuary for the next generation.

“I can’t forget that,” Norman said. “It was a part of me when I was young coming up, and it’s stuck with me all the way up to now when I’m an adult. It’s still with me today. If I didn’t go to the rec center, I don’t know where I’d probably be at this point in time. If there was no rec center, we wouldn’t be here having this conversation.”

Before he was the highest-paid cornerback in the NFL, signing a five-year deal worth $75 million in April, before he was a first-team all-pro and before he was name-dropped by Jay Z on DJ Khaled’s “I Got the Keys” track, Norman was just another scrawny Greenwood kid. The second youngest of five brothers, nicknamed “5 Strong,” with two parents rooted in their Christian faith, Norman grew up 90 minutes west of Columbia in Greenwood, the town that now has a population of more than 23,000 people.

The family lived in a double-wide trailer on a few acres where Norman and his brothers shared a room sleeping on bunk twin beds. They had to twist around the antenna out back to get a signal strong enough to receive a few TV channels. Their first basketball hoop was a plyboard and a tire rim nailed to an oak tree. What the Normans lacked in material possessions, they made up in competitive spirit. It’s the same one Norman displayed for four seasons with the Carolina Panthers.

Everything was a game with bragging rights on the line. He received tough love from his older brothers playing “throw-up-tackle” football, an aggressive game they all loved, in which Norman had to outrun his siblings from one end zone to the other to avoid what was likely a brutal takedown.

“That’s why we call ourselves ‘5 Strong’ because we grew up in that trailer, in that environment, where we was right there on top of each other,” said Marrio Norman, the third-oldest brother. “Every man fend for themselves. That’s what gave us that mentality.”

The mind-set stems further than that, back to Norman’s grandparents, who grew up in the segregated South. They stressed the significance of education to Norman’s parents, Sandra and Roy, in a period when African Americans were typically limited to industrial or service jobs. Sandra felt a calling to become a nurse at 10 years old. Excelling at McCormick High School in the classroom while participating in track, she went to college and achieved her dream. Roy was one of two black students during desegregation to attend the all-white Northside Middle School in Greenwood. He was driven to prove himself while white students called him the N-word and threw biscuits at him. Roy felt a calling to get into ministry.

“Something happened to me at Northside Middle School that was sort of like a volcano that was building,” Roy Norman said. “Something was happening down on the inside that would eventually explode, but I knew that the only way I could ascend to the top was through the educational system. So I had to play the game.”

Sandra and Roy instilled that same spirit in their five sons, Renaldo, Orlando, Marrio, Josh and Phillip: Use the gifts God gave you. If you have faith, regardless of the circumstances, you will succeed.

From the ground up

Norman’s parents separated when Josh was about 11 years old. Roy still played a significant role in his sons’ lives, but they all lived with their mother in north Greenwood. She had to balance working long hours as a nurse while raising five boys, which became a financial burden.

“I can tell you about times when my mama was scrapping up pennies to put gas in a station wagon,” said Orlando, the second-oldest brother who works in real estate. “I feel like if nobody can reach out and understand what I’m saying with that, then they can’t understand nothing. It wasn’t like we were born with silver spoons. We had to work from the ground up.”

Instead of letting them wrestle with each other throughout the summer at the house, Sandra took the boys to Seaboard Recreation Center. Sometimes they would walk on their own. It was a staple in west Greenwood, a predominately African American area, where children swam and played basketball, football and baseball from dusk till dawn for free. While there is a YMCA in the town, many households can’t afford a membership. The average household income in Greenwood is currently less than $23,000.

“The rec center was the community that couldn’t afford to go to the Y,” said Renaldo Norman, the oldest brother who like his father is a minister. “So everybody got to go over there for free to the swimming pool, playing basketball. A lot of those hard-core basketball games, it’s where we got a lot of our toughness from really being at the rec.”

Trash talk was necessary, not optional, at Seaboard. People stepped on the court oozing confidence. At the time, Josh wasn’t the chatty individual he is on Sundays nowadays. His mother said he always loved attention in public, especially in the classroom, where he often distracted his classmates, but Norman was too busy as an 8-year-old fighting for a spot on the court. Norman had to play up to the level of those older than him who didn’t trust him or didn’t want to play with him. Every opportunity he received, Norman had to prove he belonged.

“It honed me to my skills and who I am today,” Norman said. “It did because I was always hearing, ‘No, no, no, no, no.’ And once I got that one ‘yes,’ it was like I couldn’t get off the court. Then I’d get a ‘no,’ then a ‘no,’ then a ‘yes.’ And it took off from there. So it was always going back and forth at first, and then finally I hit the court where they were like, ‘Okay, he can play.’”

A winding route

There have been doubters throughout Norman’s football career as well. Norman, a safety on the Greenwood High team, had aspirations of a state championship and visions of playing in the NFL. His junior season ended in disappointment in the playoffs. A year later, in 2006, he accomplished his first goal as the leader and best player on the school’s state championship team.

But Norman was searching for a plan after graduation, and he didn’t have any scholarship offers from Division I schools.

Georgia showed interest but moved on because of Norman’s academic record. The only offer Norman received was from Mars Hill, a Division II school in North Carolina that his high school position coach, Tony Temple, helped secure. Norman wasn’t interested. Instead, he followed his brother Marrio to Myrtle Beach, where he crashed on his couch with two other people living in the apartment. Norman worked on receiving a Spanish online credit to bridge his transition from high school to college and took a few college courses at Horry Georgetown Tech that year as well. From there, he planned to transfer to Coastal Carolina, where Marrio was a defensive back.

“I was worried because, as a coach, I witness so many kids leave high school, get out of playing and then they never get an education,” Temple said. “They never get back in it. I said, ‘Buddy, it’s just so hard to do that.’”

Norman persevered, but he gets emotional reflecting on that year. He slept in his green Toyota Camry with no door handles one weekend because he forgot to grab the apartment key from Marrio before a Coastal Carolina road game. He often spent his weekdays working out, attending class and working 40 hours a week as a mental health technician at Lighthouse Care Center, an inpatient psychiatric hospital. If he wasn’t scheduled to work on a weekday, Norman watched Marrio’s practices.

“He would stand like we’re standing right here and just watch,” Marrio said. “Just watch, waiting for his moment. I remember it like it was yesterday. That continued to keep that fire going in him, ignite that fire and kept it going. He just kept feeding it.”

Norman walked on the Coastal Carolina team and earned a scholarship before his sophomore year. Marrio's collegiate career came to end just as his younger brother was getting started when Marrio hurt his ankle during Coastal Carolina's 2008 season opener at Penn State. His brother's injury opened an opportunity for Norman. He started seven games that season, recording two interceptions. Norman ended his career with 13 interceptions, the second most in school history. He passed Marrio, who had 11.

“It was tough because that was my senior year, but it was bitter-sweet,” said Marrio, a freight broker who still hopes to catch on with an NFL team. “If I want anybody to do it, it'd be my brother. I always say that. One of those things where you can't be salty, especially if it's a family member doing everything you wanted to do. It's love at the end of the day, man.”

Norman graduated from Coastal Carolina with a degree in communication in 2012, the same year the Carolina Panthers selected him in the fifth round of the NFL draft.

His journey to the NFL is why Norman scoffs at skeptics. He has heard about how he wasn't worth the money. He has heard about how he will fall off now that he's the NFL's highest-paid cornerback. He has heard about how he won't succeed with a new team and defensive scheme in Washington.

Norman tilts his head sideways, releasing a devious grin in the empty Mt. Zion African Methodist Episcopal Church, where Renaldo preached an hour ago.

“Is that even a question to ask? Do you think I still got it?” Norman said. “I don't even feel like I've got 75 [million].”

“I don't even feel like I've made it yet. If somebody don't feel like they've made it, you might want to watch out because they'll do everything they can in their power to — regardless of what it is.”

The city stays with him

Norman's older brothers always set the bar for him. They showed him how to be ruthless in competition but respectful after the game, whether it involved family or other people at Seaboard.

The unwritten rules were simple — between the lines, anything goes. Phillip, who plans to live with Josh in Ashburn this season, said that included pushing, shoving, throwing an elbow or even a punch. If the physical altercation escalated into a fight, the initiator would usually apologize as a sign of respect. Grudges weren't held once everyone stepped outside the lines, and they would play again the next day like nothing happened.

“Every time I step on the field, that's what I bring — I bring Greenwood with me,” Norman said on stage to 1,800 people at his “Fun Day in the Park” event in Greenwood in June at which he received a key to the city. On display was Norman's American Saddlebred horse Delta, which he bought shortly after he was drafted — a nod to his father, Roy, who says his family owns 11 horses on three farms, one in Greenwood and two in Georgia.

“The thing is, I come from somewhere where hard work is all we know. It's all we ever know,” Norman said. “If you sit up there and look at the people you go against — Julio Jones, [Odell Beckham] and people like that. You sit in front of them, [Dez Bryant] and all those guys on the Cowboys. ... We sit in front of them, and we check them every time. Every time we look in their face, we like to see their heart. We really do because that's where we come from. Gritty, nose-grinding people.”

Seven months after a heated matchup between Norman and Beckham, the New York Giants' star wide receiver, last season, it's still a sensitive subject for Norman and his family. Norman threw Beckham to the turf after a play on the Giants' second drive, and Beckham attempted to retaliate throughout the rest of the game, earning a one-game suspension.

Norman's brother Phillip took issue with Beckham's actions and how he has responded since. “We weren't raised to respect that,” Phillip said. “Especially since he gave them no apology.”

Phillip continued: “I just see the things [Beckham is] doing — the dancing and the Michael Jackson stuff — and none of that is Greenwood. You can't do all that and then try to be this whole 'nother, different guy on the field. That's the different thing about my brother. He's always been a trash talker, so he's always been that guy. For him to take it to the field, it's okay. He can play through it. You see somebody that carry themselves and be somebody they not, they can't play through it. And you seen that in [Beckham's] play. He's not that guy. Don't be that guy. He wants to be Joker. Is he really the Joker to the Batman? That's what he wants to be.”

“Batman” refers to Norman's “Dark Knight” persona. It started in college and grew over time with his infatuation with the superhero and Christian Bale's performance in the movie of the same name. Norman becomes this alter ego when the lights turn on and the cameras watch his every move on the field, in the locker room and during an interview. A minor in dramatic arts, this is Norman's stage.

“The Dark Knight” also draws out his dark side on the field to break his opponent mentally between the lines.

“I see through people in a way that it's just the competitive side of me I guess that feeds off their bitter side,” Norman said. “Sometimes I get blood drunk, when I get drunk into the game. It's like I'm on a bottle of straight Adderall aggression and fire. I'm out of it. I'm seeing red. I see it and look at it, and it's just like, ‘Yeah, I know I got you today because of your armor or your flinch.’”

“It's just like Mike Tyson said. When you look at someone, you look at them and look at them, then they look down. You know you've got them.”

The broadcasters during the Giants-Panthers game last season noted in the second half how Norman was winning “the mental game” with Beckham, but Norman later told Temple that his emotions got the best of him as well. Norman is still attempting to learn how to turn off his alter ego, which has been more difficult than turning it on. He will have to be even more cautious now that he plays Beckham twice a season in the NFC East.

The rivalry shows every sign of continuing. Beckham told GQ magazine in its August issue that Norman's status in the NFL as one of its highest-paid defenders “is because of me.”

“I can go from having a conversation with you cool and quiet, but once you talk about something that hits a trigger, I go into a whole different phase and side of me,” Norman said. “That's what I mean by inside the white lines and outside of it. That switch automatically comes on, and if someone rubs me the wrong way, it's on until I go to sleep at night. I'm trying, trying to work on killing it after the game, but it's so hard.”

A fresh opportunity

You'll see “The Dark Knight” at FedEx Field, but you won't find him in Greenwood. The mask comes off when Norman is back home, and he's the caring person all the locals know him to be. Norman holds events like “Fun Day in the Park” to raise awareness and funds to build his own recreation center. There have been NFL players to come out of Greenwood — including defensive ends Gaines Adams and Sam Montgomery, wide receivers Robert Brooks and John Gilliam, tight end Ben Coates and current Arizona Cardinals safety D.J. Swearinger — but they haven't been as devoted to the community as Norman.

“It means so much not only just for the contributions that he's already made, but the spirit of the community,” Greenwood Mayor Welborn Adams said. “For those kids to know that there's somebody willing to come and give up their time, you can't put a price on that. It's so inspiring.”

Seaboard Recreation Center was shut down by Greenwood County in 2009 as part of the cutbacks during the recession. The building and swimming pool were given to resident Darlene Saxon, who changed the name to Beyond The Walls Family Restoration Center but hasn't done anything with the property. The neighboring community has suffered without the center that was a mainstay for almost 60 years.

“Growing up with my friends and playing with my friends, a lot of them grew up in single-family homes,” said Anthony Coates, a city native who now serves as the linebackers coach at Greenwood High. “They didn't see a lot of parent stuff going on. But growing up at the rec, you had the role models over there that would teach you the things that you couldn't get at home. That made me want to be a better person, want to be the better husband and father that I am today. I knew what it took to get from there to here.”

“If you go to the rec now, you don't see anything. That's because they don't have anything to do. So now, what are they doing? They're finding other stuff to do, and most of the time, it's not the right thing.”

Residents believe violent and property crimes rose during the recession in Greenwood, and there are many in the community who believe the absence of the center has played a role. While another center, Brewer Recreation Center, exists, residents say kids aren't going to it because of inconsistent open-gym hours. Seaboard kept the outdoor court lights on until 11 p.m., and by the time everyone left, the teenagers were too tired to do anything else.

"They go home, take a bath, go to bed and do it all over again tomorrow," said George Brennon, who was a volunteer coach at the center. "Now, he done slept all day or sat around the house all day. When it gets dark, he got more energy than a lift. He's ready to run the streets."

Norman has been trying to change the perception of Greenwood by starting Starz24 during his rookie season, and he believes a new complex will keep the kids occupied with an emphasis on athletics and academics.

"We have an opportunity as a ministry to talk to them and tell them what you can do instead of what you can't do," said Norman's mother, Sandra, who recently retired as a nurse and devotes her time to her grandchildren and Norman's foundation. "Just because your uncle was this or your brother was that don't mean that you have to be that. You can be something different. You are different. You're an individual. God gave you something different, and you don't have to settle."

Sandra oversaw the "Fun Day in the Park" with Walker, Starz24's executive director, in what was considered a success. They were all amazed by the turnout, which exceeded Sandra's expectations by more than 900 kids. Norman was proud that it brought the community together regardless of race or class.

"It's a town that is divided in a way," Norman said. "You can bring a strong force to come back and sever that gap and bring everybody together on common ground. It wasn't just black people out there. It wasn't just white people out there. They was all together and having a good time. That's what I want Greenwood to have."

A new center would bring it all back for that scrawny kid from Greenwood in a way that no play on the field could duplicate — a lasting impact to the people he can't forget, who know better than anyone else that Norman can make the most unfathomable dreams a reality.

"It's going to be the jewel of this town," Norman said. "It really will be, a state of the art. That's what it'll be. Something that nice where everyone there in the community will have a hand on it to call and say, 'This is mine.'"

TE NILES PAUL

Niles Paul, and his viking-style beard, is back to claim his spot on the Redskins

By Dan Steinberg, The Washington Post
August 1, 2016

RICHMOND — Here's how to find Niles Paul at Redskins training camp: Look for the cactus-sized beard surrounding the electric gold teeth. If the bearer of said teeth is throwing punches, you've probably found Paul.

"He's a grizzly man," starting tight end Jordan Reed said of his presumed backup. "That's the type of person he is. He's a hardcore dude."

"I think it's more like an Ice Age look," said linebacker Martrell Spaight, who attempted to punch that cactus and those teeth during this year's first training-camp skirmish. "He's got the caveman beard — but it just describes his personality."

"Like a barbarian, like a viking," Paul said. [That's a small-v viking, obviously.] "I mean, I'm an aggressive style of player," Paul added. "I think this look matches the way I play."

How Paul will play, though, isn't exactly clear. Last year at this time, Coach Jay Gruden surprised us all by announcing that Paul would be his starting tight end — ahead of Reed, perhaps Washington's most talented offensive player.

Since then? Reed had maybe the best season of any tight end in Redskins history, setting records with 87 catches and 952 yards. The team imported veteran Vernon Davis, who ranks in the top 10 in tight end receptions and yards over the past decade. And Paul missed the 2015 season with a broken and dislocated ankle. Instead of being asked about the starting job this week, Paul has been asked where he fits on this roster.

His response? Call it joy. Well, joy peppered with the occasional brawl.

"I feel so blessed and grateful just to be out here running again and to be 100 percent," he said on Monday. "Every practice is a blessing to me. I think I took that for granted last year — the practices, training camp. I'd be like 'Oh, it's a hot day.' Now I'm just happy to be here."

[Same, obviously. As usual, I am filled with happiness.]

Paul seemed set for a breakout last season, even if his starting designation may have been ceremonial. He set career highs in everything in 2014, and was one of the stars of last summer's training camp, when Gruden slathered him with praise. Did he think last year would be special?

"I knew last year was going to be something special for me," Paul said. "I thought I had everything right there for me. And it was taken away."

Paul went down in the first preseason game. He tried to walk the injury off, but instead fell over. Then he started crying. He mostly avoided going to FedEx Field last season — "it was really hard for me to go to games; it was painful," he said — and he felt both happy and empty during Washington's run to the playoffs.

"It was depressing, man," he said, a word Paul has used over and over in recent months. [Again, same!] "I was sad. I couldn't help that. You're talking to a guy who spent every year for the past 10-plus years playing football around this time of year, and to have that taken away from me like that, it hurt."

He wasn't the only one hurting. After the injury, tight ends coach Wes Phillips was so upset that he composed a handwritten note to Paul about his meaning to the team and how badly everyone felt, and then delivered it to Paul in his room.

"Better than me just trying to spit it out," Phillips explained on Monday. "I just wanted to kind of express how I felt about it in some way. ... Coaches love him. When you lose a guy like that, it's more than just what you lose on the field."

The note also assured Paul that he would be able to make it back onto the field in 2016. But in the meantime, the Redskins transformed into a team overflowing with pass-catching options. It isn't just Reed and Davis; there's slot receiver Jamison Crowder, and rookie wideout Josh Doctson, and fourth tight end Logan Paulsen.

Paul's counter is his versatility. He's starred on special teams. He might offer Washington's best combination of blocking and pass catching at the position. And he's also become the team's default fullback, after the offseason release of Darrel Young. You won't see Paul on many fantasy football draft lists, and the opportunity from a year ago might have drifted away, but a role remains.

"Niles is a football player," Phillips said, using GM Scot McCloughan's favorite term of endearment. "Any kind of guy like that, we're going to find ways to use him. He has played the [in-line] tight end, the [receiving] tight end, the fullback-type position. We can line him out wide, he can be in the core. We really feel like he can do just about anything."

He's also developed into something of a veteran leader on a roster that has churned for years. Paul is one of just eight Mike Shanahan draft picks who remain with the team. And he's one of just three Washington players to have earned reserved parking spots at Redskins Park two years in a row, based on their offseason work. [The others are Pierre Garcon and Ryan Kerrigan.] Paul visited the practice facility daily, Monday through Friday, throughout the spring. That's why his parking sign is the only one with an extra note, reading "Niles Paul is here everyday, please do not park in space."

Now, how much is all of this worth? After all, the team won a division title without Paul last year. Davis has far more accolades, and certainly attracts more attention. ["We weren't sure how Niles was going to come back from his injury, we had to protect ourselves, and Vernon was staring us right in our face," Gruden said.] The team's annual yearbook pictures five receivers over an "Aerial Assault" headline; Paul didn't make the cut. To teammates, though, Paul is

"He's a different guy this year," running back Chris Thompson said. "He's relentless, man. I mean, he's out there to just knock heads off."

Which is sort of the impression you'd get from the beard and the teeth. In truth, the beard arrived because Paul was losing his hair on top, and the grill came because it felt more comfortable than a mouthguard. Just don't tell anyone that. The look kind of works.

"That's all what makes Niles Paul what he is," Thompson said. "He's got the whole Rambo thing going on right now. That's just who he is. He's that type of player."

TE JORDAN REED

Jordan Reed's confidence increases, but steady work ethic key to his rise

By John Keim, ESPN.com
July 26, 2016

ASHBURN, Va. -- He shared a simple desire for the upcoming season with one of his trainers: stay healthy. That's what Washington Redskins tight end Jordan Reed wanted in 2015. He wanted to prove he was durable. If he did that, he was sure he'd also prove his worth.

Reed fell two games shy of his goal, but his season motivated him for this one. And he shared that motivation with one of the men who trained him, David Robinson.

"He's hungry. He really believes he has the chance to be the best tight end in the game," said Robinson, who trains players in Houston and has worked with Reed the past two offseasons. "Last year, he wasn't talking like that. This year he's saying, 'I want to make it to the Pro Bowl. I want to prove I'm the best tight end in the game.' You can tell the difference in his confidence."

Reed is coming off his best season, totaling 87 catches for 952 yards and 11 touchdowns in 2015. Quarterback Kirk Cousins owned a 130.1 passer rating when targeting Reed.

The Redskins rewarded Reed with a multiyear extension this offseason.

"I still want to be durable," Reed said. "I still haven't played 16 games. I want to be the best because last year I had a little taste of success and I feel I could keep improving. If I do that, then my name will be up there with some of the top guys."

To get there, Reed again worked out at various times in Houston with Robinson and in Miami with Pete Bommarito, before and after the Redskins' offseason work. Reed is a low-key player, so certain traits might get missed; his trainers witness his intensity and work ethic first-hand. It's why Bommarito recruited him to work out after Reed left the University of Florida. His first two seasons in Washington were a mix of production (95 combined catches) and injuries (12 missed games).

But Reed altered his workouts and his habits last offseason, changing his diet -- no bread, no fried foods -- and incorporated more stretching exercises. He said it helped him recover faster than in the past.

"Right now, we're finally realizing the true Jordan Reed," Bommarito said. "It's not like he wasn't good before, but here's a guy who hasn't yet reached his full growth potential. That's scary, with just how strong he is and how much muscle he can put on his frame and gain speed. You just don't see that type player built the way he's built who can move like he moves."

Robinson focused on creating more separation from defenders, something Reed already does well. Robinson would line up cones in tight spaces and have Reed focus on footwork and being under control going around the cone -- and as he comes out of the cone, as if breaking, he'd have him push forward. This was designed to help against players aligned several yards off him.

"He has to make the move on the run rather than at a standstill position," Robinson said. "We worked on not being lackadaisical and still run full speed out of cuts and create more separation."

him different release techniques and different moves at the top of his routes."

Bommarito said earlier in Reed's career they did not want to overstress his joints after seasons in which he dealt with numerous injuries. But, in the past two offseasons, they've worked more on building strength. Also, Bommarito said Reed has listened to his suggestions for acupuncture, nutrition and supplements.

"He does every single thing we ask him to do," Bommarito said. "Usually it takes a few years and then players get their act together. With Jordan, he learned at a young age and implemented it into his lifestyle. Now we can train him the way we really want to. And he's just so genetically gifted."

During drills, Reed impressed his trainers with his ability to cut.

"We're watching him make these sharp cuts off the outside edge at tremendous speed and he gains speed out of his cuts," Bommarito said. "We're looking at each other shaking our heads like, 'How did he do that?'"

Bommarito said Reed moves more like a running back than a tight end.

"It's hard to find a guy that tall who gets that low," Bommarito said. "It's not like he's super fast. He's just fast when he cuts because he's so strong in and out of breaks and gets so low."

That's what the coaches see on the field, too. That's why they're excited about what Reed can continue to do, and the matchup problem he'll remain for defenses. He worked on making his cuts strong regardless of the direction.

"I noticed in practice where one side wasn't as strong as the other on certain cuts," Reed said. "That's when I knew I could improve, to make sure both sides are as strong and explosive. I was able to do some routes that I had stopped doing because of knee injuries."

Which is why Bommarito has touted Reed to anyone calling for fantasy football advice. In the past, Bommarito has recommended other clients such as Le'Veon Bell, Antonio Brown and Lamar Miller.

"When people call [now], I always refer back to Jordan Reed," Bommarito said. "I know tight ends aren't fantasy football gods, but what I anticipate him doing based on his work ethic is tremendous."

Jordan Reed, driven by more than money, thinks he can top his breakout season

By Mike Jones, The Washington Post
August 8, 2016

RICHMOND — As he watched Washington Redskins tight end Jordan Reed tear through secondaries en route to a career year last season, Trent Williams sensed that his friend had something special fueling him.

Reed, who had always flashed loads of potential during his first two seasons in the NFL, had financial incentive. He wanted to finally avoid serious injury and stay healthy long enough and play well enough in 2015 to earn a contract extension during the offseason.

But Williams had seen plenty of financially motivated guys before. This was something different.

"He was so intense, man, I never felt like it was about the money for him," Williams said. "I always felt like he wanted to leave his legacy on this game. I'm real close friends with him, so I see the fire in his eyes every day."

Reed impressed, recording 87 catches for 952 yards and 11 touchdowns. Last spring, he earned a five-year, $46.75 million deal, which made him the third-highest-paid tight end in the league behind Seattle's Jimmy Graham and Kansas City's Travis Kelce.

Although the pay day proved gratifying, the tight end confirmed Williams's suspicions of a stronger driving force throughout his 2015 season. Actually, there are two, Reed said.

"One thing that I always think about is my last name on my back, representing my family," he said. "And, I'm a very competitive person. I always want to be the best at whatever I do. That's what drives me."

Because of those two factors, Reed hasn't felt a true sense of satisfaction while reflecting on last season nor his offseason pay day.

He still wants to meet the expectations of his family members. He still feels the lingering presence of his grandfather and grandmother.

"It's just a love for my family and the pride that we all have," Reed explained. "My grandfather was a great man, my grandmother a great woman. I think about those people when I go out and play, and I carry them with me. I try to make them proud and make my family proud. It doesn't put pressure on me at all. They're gone. I ask for them to be with me, and when I do that, I feel more comfortable, like there are angels with me or something like that."

For some, just reaching the NFL would be rewarding enough. But the Reed family already has witnessed one of their sons make it. Reed's older brother, David, enjoyed a record-setting career as a wide receiver at Utah and then reached the NFL as a fifth-round pick by Baltimore in 2010. Primarily a special teams player, David Reed (three years older than Jordan) played three seasons for the Ravens and one for Indianapolis and was a member of Baltimore's Super Bowl-winning team in 2012.

"He always helps me out," Reed said. "He's my big brother so I look up to him in a lot of ways. We both know how hard it is to be successful in this league."

Avoiding complacency is one of the biggest keys to achieving success in the NFL. After a season like last, Reed feels like he has a target on his back. He expects more attention from defenses than he already commanded. In an effort to continue growing, Reed keeps his sights on players such as Graham and New England's Rob Gronkowski and tries to implement their strengths into his game.

"Seeing guys like Gronkowski and the things he's been able to do makes me believe I can do those kinds of things, too," Reed said. "That's the mind-set that I take: 'If someone else can, why can't I, too?'"

Reed also spent the offseason working to become stronger and more explosive. He also continued to glean knowledge from position coach Wes Phillips and veteran teammates Vernon Davis, Logan Paulsen and Niles Paul in an attempt to improve his blocking techniques. Reed's teammates and coaches have already started to notice a difference.

"I think he's stronger. He was a puppy when he came in here physically; now he's filling out and he's a bigger guy," Coach Jay Gruden said. "He's playing with a ton of confidence. Now he's been in the same system with the same route tree. We can move him around and do a lot of different things with him. He's a smart player. He can see coverages, he can work off leverage of the defenders, he's got big strong hands and he's excellent after the catch. Really, the sky is the limit for Jordan."

Reed continues to strive for perfection, however, and says he can still improve every aspect of his game.

Thanks to that drive, teammates believe Reed can have a greater impact this year than he did last year.

"I can't wait to watch him play this year," inside linebacker Will Compton said. "Jordan is really one of the best receivers in the whole league, in my opinion. I mean, the dude, his routes, his stems and stunners, he's very polished when it comes to running routes, and he's really athletic. ... God willing, he stays healthy a full year, and he's really going to emerge as the best tight end in the NFL."

Jordan Reed could have been a statistic. Now, he's on the verge of being the NFL's best tight end.

By Thomas George, SB Nation
August 31, 2016

Watch Jordan Reed practice and there is guts to his work that is absolute. Watch Jordan Reed play and there is an inferno that is furious. Look at his eyes when he speaks and there is natural power that oozes severity.

There is no clown in Jordan Reed.

His on switch is always on.

He is not a flippant talker. The Washington tight end sat near his home here last week and surprised himself with what he was willing to reveal from his past and where he was willing to navigate about his future. It was an atypical, in-the-moment acknowledgment for Reed where he affirmed that his NFL career and life justly have reached elusive stature.

As the 2016 NFL season approaches, Reed is a pinnacle player. He is a tight end with wide receiver-like skills, with a recent contract worth nearly $50 million. He is the freshest face among the NFL's supreme. He could become an exciting architect of this entire season. He is a core in his team's bid to defend its NFC East crown. He will be a taxing matchup for defenses because of his athleticism, his growth and his will.

At age 26, with his 6'3, 240-pound edge, he is intent on proving that his team-best 87 receptions, 952 yards and 11 touchdowns last year in his third pro season were only a taste of what's next.

"I always shy away, stay to myself, keep my head down," Reed said. "I'm still playful. I have fun with my teammates. But even with them, I sort of keep to myself. When you are all out there in the open, more distractions, more negative things come. I don't want to really focus on me too much."

"I am humble, I'm not cocky, but I do feel like on the field, I'm going to win matchups. Make plays. Last year God blessed me with that kind of opportunity. I'm even more hungry, determined and focused. You still have to earn a contract. If you don't, you won't see your entire contract. You've got to keep performing. I see guys all around me who want to compete, want to be No. 1 and that is our mindset. Whenever I do something, I work like a champion in it. I hope to really emerge as the best tight end in the league this year. That is definitely motivation. Play all 16 games. Bring the best. I learn to see what works and what doesn't. I'm not perfect. But I see."

Reed spent his earliest years in New Britain, Conn. His brother, David, who is three years older, was more like his father. David played wide receiver at Utah and was a member of the Baltimore Ravens' 2012 Super Bowl championship team. Jordan played at the University of Florida before being drafted by Washington in 2013.

Jordan Reed said New Britain was full of challenges, full of danger. He could have been a statistic, a victim of the prevalent gun violence. He escaped.

"Once my brother made the NFL," said Reed, "I was 19, and he got me a gold chain with diamonds and a cross. I was home from Florida one weekend and me and my boys were walking up a street. A car swerved at us. A guy from inside says, 'Yo!' I thought it was a friend. I looked closely. Not one of our friends. They asked, 'Where's the weed at?' We said we don't know, we're just walking to the crib. The street light hit my chain. It was shining. He asked me if the chain was real. Then he said, 'Give it to me!' I tucked it inside my shirt. Another guy in the car pulled a gun out. He was getting ready to cock it. We took off. We ran into an area where there were trees. We stayed there for about 15 minutes. We knew the area and they didn't. That helped save us."

And then at age 21 ...

"I was home from Florida again and went to a party. I could quickly see it was a trash party. I thought, let me get out of here. There were five guys at the door who weren't going to let me leave. I didn't back down. A guy pulled out a gun. It was only a few inches away from me. He talked a lot of junk. But I just walked away. And he let me."

Jordan Reed realizes it only takes an instant to change a life. For his lifetime, he has been watching, absorbing, seeing what works and what doesn't. He sees.

His mother, Karen, and his father, David Lott, are from Dubuque, Iowa. So were his grandparents, Robert and Emily Lott and Lyle and Dorothy Reed. He would often visit the farms there in Iowa up until age six. He even had his own tractor there, where he was allowed to climb it and play as if he were driving it. His grandparents called him "scud missile." Even then, Reed was assertive. His uncle Roscoe from Watts was a drug kingpin, Reed said. There were models, all types of models. There were men like Jack Cochran, his high school football coach, too.

"Coach Cochran started out in New Britain but then got a job in New London (Conn.), about 45 miles away," Reed said. "He asked my mother if we could move to New London, if he could continue to coach us. I was 14 when me and my brother moved there. My mother stayed back and was transitioning and we moved into a house in New London, me and my brother. This is how he became more like my dad, the man of the house, like a father to me.”

Reed was a quarterback. He threw touchdown passes to David. In his best season Reed threw 38 touchdown passes and only two interceptions. David went off to college and Reed stayed behind in high school in the house. Alone.

“When David went to college, he had some trouble before that and some trouble after, and all the while I was learning from him and learning from his mistakes,” Reed said. “Nobody was there to lead him. He had to learn from his own. When he left for college, I was there by myself. The electricity was off for a couple of weeks. One of my friends, Tyler, came by with his mom, Mrs. Major, to pick me up. She saw the electricity situation and said, ‘No, uh-uh, this won’t do.’ She insisted I come to live with them. I did. Her husband, Coach Major, was coach of the defense. I was a sophomore. They made a huge impact on me.

“Coach Major was a very serious person. He was not a clown. He was a man of service. He took care of his family. Those kinds of people have molded me. My brother helped mold me. My mother is a positive, caring person who is close by now. My father is in contact with me now and we are building our relationship. I have a friend here, Vinny Fur, a retired master chief of the Navy, who was a neighbor. He has taught me how to run the business of owning a home, how to be organized. I watched him. I admired him. He taught me what works.”

This is what Reed says about the coach who drafted him, Mike Shanahan, in the third round, pick No. 85 of the 2013 draft:

“Mike Shanahan helped me mature. One day after practice after a preseason game, I didn’t know the plays. I had some mental errors. He walked off the field with me.

“He said, ‘Jordan, I know you can play, but we’re not going to let you play if you don’t know the plays. You just can’t.’ He was calm and stern. I looked at him. He really got to me.

“I said, ‘I promise you, I will learn the plays.’ And he said, ‘Okay.’ And he walked off. And I thought, man, I really have to learn these plays. This coach just took my word and trusted my word. It was the ultimate spirit of coaching. I will always have a place in my heart for him. That was a big step in me becoming a real pro.”

At Florida, Reed was lost in the shuffle early, waffling back and forth from quarterback to tight end, but for his last two seasons there he insisted on playing tight end. And he did.

Think about the 84 players drafted before him -- including EJ Manuel and Geno Smith and Montee Ball and Damontre Moore -- and it is clear that Reed has already risen far above most of them.

Consider that he has only played tight end for two college and three pro seasons. That’s five total seasons, barely a blip for learning the nuances of the position. But being a former quarterback, he says, is a benefit.

“I can feel what the defense is thinking,” Reed said. “In zone coverages, I know where to flatten to the soft spot. Where to get open against the safety. Where to make it an easy throw for the quarterback. I know more about pre-snap reads than most tight ends. I know who’s going to cover me and that helps me decide how to get leverage. Leverage is all about positioning. Both make the difference in winning matchups.”

He enjoys the bond he is building with quarterback Kirk Cousins. It is still raw, he reminds all. They have played only one season together. But he envisions and hopes for a long union, the one like, he said, San Diego’s Philip Rivers and Antonio Gates share.

He fought through injuries at his career start but is healthy now. He knows he can become a better blocking tight end. That has been a focus of his offseason work. But this team wants Jordan Reed to run free, to catch the ball short and catch it deep, to catch it in the end zone and become the dominant tight end in today’s NFL game.

Jordan Reed’s answer is no clowning -- he wants that, too.

“My daughter, Jada, is almost 2,” Reed said. “I was married to her mother for a brief time. We separated. But we are back together now. I’ve got to be there for my daughter every day. I’ve got to get that right. And I am.”

That’s because, said Reed, he has learned to see what works and what doesn’t.

He sees.

Preston Smith eager to assume Redskins’ pass-rush burden after Junior Galette injury

RICHMOND — In the midst of Washington Redskins Coach Jay Gruden’s first training camp news conference Thursday, pass rusher Junior Galette fired off a tweet at 1:51 p.m. Galette tends to use social media as often as a Gen-Z high school student, but the tweet wasn’t about him.

Galette is out for the season with a torn Achilles’ tendon for the second straight year, and the Redskins are caught in the same situation they were in this time last year, losing a valuable pass rusher. They remain optimistic because their success at outside linebacker now hinges on Smith, who has made strides over the past year.

“He’s bigger, he’s stronger, and he’s faster this year,” Gruden said. “I think he’s going to be a heck of a pass rusher for us here for a long time, but out here it’s going to be real important for him to get even better.”

The Mississippi State product led all NFL rookies in sacks last season, but five of his eight came during the final three weeks of the regular season. Everything started to click for Smith during December, when he sensed the need for consistency. He entered the league as a second-round pick in 2015 and placed an ample amount of pressure on himself to succeed immediately, although his work ethic from college didn’t necessarily change.

“You kind of assume the success you had in college you can roll over in the NFL and have some similar type of success, but it’s not that easy,” Smith said. “You’ve got to realize that you’ve still got to work hard or work harder to take it to another level.”

Smith’s teammates and coaches wanted to get the most out of him, too. They spoke out privately and publicly about how Smith was lethargic at practice during the first half of the season. The Redskins saw his potential and, even though he was a rookie, believed he had more to give.

“We all knew the ability he had once he came in with his size and strength,” defensive end Chris Baker said of Smith. “He just had to learn how to become a true professional, so we stayed on him all year to help him continue to get better and better. With the loss of Junior, he has to step up even more and be a vocal leader and a great player out there on the field.”

Listed at 6 feet 5 and 268 pounds, Smith wasn’t treating his gifted physique properly. He continued to rely on sweets for nourishment, and it produced sluggish performances during practice. Smith credited former Redskins defensive end Jason Hatcher for teaching him how to treat his body, and he cut out certain sugary treats, such as candy bars, that he has been consuming his entire life.

“It was kind of hard at times, but I’m just trying to stop and cut it down,” Smith said. “I had to realize that this was my job, and I’ve got to be more disciplined so I can continue to do great things on the field.”

The nutritional change, along with an improved work ethic, produced some much-needed results for a Redskins front seven that had an inconsistent pass rush. Smith recorded three sacks and a forced fumble in Week 16 against the Philadelphia Eagles to help Washington clinch the NFC East title. Smith also had the team’s only sack — which resulted in a safety — during Washington’s first-round playoff loss to the Green Bay Packers.

Smith continued to build his work ethic during the offseason, which featured multiple workouts with Galette. The two got together often and participated in on-field pass rushing drills if they were both in town. Smith learned some tips about the art of pass rushing from Galette, and he was disappointed to receive a text earlier this week from Galette about the season-ending injury.

But Smith knows Galette, like the rest of the organization, is in his corner as a full-time starter this year.

"That was a great shoutout from him," Smith said of Galette's tweet. "He saw how hard I worked, and we always talked about the things we want to do this season, how great the team was going to be having a great pass rush and a lot of weapons in the pass rush. The great things we was looking forward to this season and having high sack numbers as a group and just working hard together.

"Nothing is going to change [with Galette gone]. I'm just going to continue to work hard, work on our pass rush and continue to get pressure on the quarterback."

LB MARTRELL SPAIGHT

Redskins' Martrell Spaight gets education on playing inside linebacker

By Master Tesfatsion, The Washington Post
December 16, 2016

All season long, Will Compton has been made aware of Martrell Spaight's desire to become a better inside linebacker. Spaight peppers his Washington Redskins teammate with questions in text messages: How do you understand route concepts? What do you look at?

Such complex questions are difficult to answer with your thumbs, but Spaight, the backup, is constantly looking to pick up tips and hints from Compton, the starter at the "Mike" position. But when Compton explained that a knee injury he suffered in Sunday's victory over Philadelphia meant that Spaight would be making his first career start Monday night against Carolina, the younger player's later text was even more direct.

"I'm going to stick to you like fly is to [expletive]," Spaight recalled. "It's an old phrase I used to hear in movies. What better way to put it than that?"

It has been a season-long study session for Spaight, a fifth-round selection in the 2015 draft who has been a special teams asset but didn't receive significant reps until Compton was hurt in the third quarter against Philadelphia.

In a road division game crucial to the Redskins' playoff hopes, Spaight had to be the "quarterback" of the defense for the rest of the second half. Coaches and players praised the way Spaight handled the stressful scenario, one he began preparing for months earlier.

Spaight's rookie season was washed away because of a concussion he suffered during the season opener that landed him on injured reserve. He felt isolated from his teammates during the recovery process and didn't overcome his loneliness until he was cleared to work out again. Spaight was able to rest his body and understand defensive coordinator Joe Barry's scheme better last season, and he returned to the field hungrier.

Spaight tediously asked Compton to share everything he knew because "it's apparent that Will Compton is pretty much the smartest guy on the team when it comes to football, and I just wanted to dissect his brain," Spaight said.

"He's got a very humble approach to his preparation," said Compton, who is in his first full season as a starter. "He tries a lot of different ways to prepare, figures out what he likes and what he doesn't like. He's always asking questions, so he's somebody that you always enjoy being around him because you know that he's just a good dude to be around."

Compton has told Spaight throughout the season, "You see a little; you see a lot. You see a lot; you see a little."

The advice reminds Spaight to focus on his keys because those small details will tell him more about the play than gauging the entire field. Offenses want defenders to have their eyes wander at players in motion or other forms of trickery meant to create confusion.

"Next thing you know, you're in the wrong gap or didn't see a puller, didn't see the fullback slipping across," said inside linebacker Mason Foster, who intends to be more vocal against the Panthers to help Spaight point out certain play recognitions.

Among Spaight's 38 snaps, Redskins Coach Jay Gruden and Barry raved about his pursuit on a fourth-quarter wide receiver screen. Compton had told Spaight, who played through a shoulder injury suffered in the game, to be aware of a certain formation the Eagles ran that would result in a screen. On second and 15, Spaight dropped back in coverage and immediately broke on the designed screen to Nelson Agholor. Despite being chop-blocked, Spaight popped back up to make the tackle after a 12-yard gain.

On the following play, the Redskins made a rare third-down stop to force a field goal.

"He made a game-saving tackle on a screen," Gruden said. "... We like his athletic ability. Mentally, is he as far along as where Comp is? We'll see, but he didn't have any trouble communicating the calls, so I feel very confident in Spaight. I think he's a good linebacker. He's tough, he's physical, and we've just got to make sure health-wise he gets to where he can be productive."

Barry still views Spaight as a rookie because he played only one game last season, and rookies tend to make mistakes. But Gruden believes in him. Barry believes in him. And the starter he's replacing — and regularly texting — believes in him, too.

"I've been doing this all my life," Spaight said. "I've been a leader all my life, from high school to junior college to Arkansas. The game never changes. Just got to go out there as a band of men, make sure they believe in me, play technique football, be physical and just go get the job done."

RB CHRIS THOMPSON

Chris Thompson is easy to overlook. Redskins opponents find him hard to stop.

By Liz Clarke, The Washington Post
December 15, 2016

With the Washington Redskins trailing by one as the two-minute warning sounded, left tackle Trent Williams turned to running back Chris Thompson after a jet sweep was called in the huddle and said, "C.T., follow me! I'm going to get you there!"

Thompson took the pitch, and Williams cleared a path like a Chicago snowplow. Seeing only green turf ahead, Thompson streaked 25 yards for the touchdown that supplied the winning margin in Sunday's 27-22 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles. But the exhilaration of the moment — the pride in what he had accomplished with Williams and the rest of the offense — was under fire even before he boarded the team bus.

Why hadn't he gotten to the ground before scoring so the Redskins could run down the clock and kick an easy field goal with seconds to spare, denying the Eagles a last-gasp comeback?

"I've never been so unhappy about a touchdown in my life because of that," Thompson said Thursday, recounting the barrage of second-guessing that followed. "I can't even be happy that it was a game-winning touchdown."

With four days to reflect, Thompson remains proud of the touchdown. He was confident in the Redskins' defense, even if few others were. And in a season in which yards have come more easily than points, he didn't stop mid-sprint to calculate contingency plans.

Nor did Williams, who said he was thrilled to turn around after knocking an Eagles cornerback out of the way to see Thompson crossing the goal line.

"You give him a little crease, and he's pretty much gone," Williams said. "I didn't think twice about him scoring, to be honest. I was very happy. In that position, you're not even really thinking about sliding down."

The world of sports talk radio and social media may be teeming with second-guessers, but the Redskins' locker room teems with fierce defenders of Thompson, their versatile third-down back enjoying the most productive season of a four-year NFL career that could easily have been derailed by injuries and setbacks.

"He has been a constant playmaker for us this whole year. I don't think we get to where we are if we don't have him," Williams said of Thompson, who has contributed 321 rushing yards, 269 receiving yards, two touchdowns and several clutch first downs for the Redskins (7-5-1).

At 5 feet 8 and 195 pounds, Thompson is easy to overlook — particularly on an offense with playmakers such as wide receivers DeSean Jackson and Pierre Garcon and tight end Jordan Reed. You won't find him flapping his arms when he feels he's open. He doesn't scowl if quarterback Kirk Cousins misses a throw. He just goes about his job, throwing himself into whatever role the offense demands.

This season, he has been especially valuable on third downs, often catching defenses by surprise with his sure hands and quick feet. He's a natural complement to rookie running back Rob Kelley, who's built to withstand contact at 6 feet, 228 pounds.

Said quarterback Colt McCoy, who has worked with Thompson for three seasons: "He's shifty; he's quick. But the biggest thing C.T. brings to the table is on third down — his ability to catch the ball out of the backfield on third and two or third and three when we want to chance up tendencies, to pick up protections. He has got a very good grasp of how the game is supposed to be played, seeing defenses and getting in the right spot if it's zone coverage and he's running a route. From a quarterback's perspective, you really trust a guy like that. It expands your offense."

Without pads, Thompson looks like anything but a football player. He is soft-spoken, with a gentle manner and easy smile. And he's so disinterested in fame that he finds himself having to convince people he's actually Chris Thompson, the Redskins running back. The issue arises not because he's trying to impress anyone; he's just trying to clear up confusion among fans who expect someone bigger, with more swagger.

It happened last week at Best Buy, when he swiped his credit card to buy a computer. "Wow!" was the sales clerk's response. "You look smaller than you do on TV!"

And it happened again Monday, when he was buying shoes for his girlfriend's son at Kids' Foot Locker.

The low-key demeanor is rooted in his rearing in the small north Florida town of Greenville. The smile and happy outlook are conscious.

"I just try to keep a smile on my face all the time just because I notice people and I feel their spirit," Thompson explained. "Somebody might need to see that smile; somebody might be having a bad day. If they see me down, that might bring them down a little bit. And I never want to do that."

As a child, all Thompson dreamed of was playing in the NFL. But his road to the Redskins, who chose him with a fifth-round pick in the 2013 draft, was nearly derailed several times.

Injuries cut short his final two seasons at Florida State: a broken back in 2011, followed by a torn anterior cruciate ligament in 2012. With surgery not an option for the broken back, he was forced to spend months in a brace. The pain nearly convinced him to quit.

"I grew up in a small town, and everybody back home looked up to me and who I am as a person," Thompson explained. "So I just thought, if I give up now, what would that mean for the kids that look up to me. 'Chris has some injuries, and then he gave up?' I knew I couldn't let my people back home down."

As a rookie, he lost his job as a punt returner after struggling in the role and finished the season on injured reserve, without a carry or catch — but with a torn labrum.

Heading into his second NFL season, he was cut just before the start of the season, then signed to the practice squad.

Each setback was followed by a comeback. Thompson and Reed are the only remaining members of the seven-player Redskins 2013 draft class. What convinced Coach Jay Gruden to stick with Thompson, as much as the elusiveness and sure hands, are his toughness and smarts in pass protection.

"He picked up on it. He was physical. He wasn't afraid of any contact whatsoever," Gruden said. "Some of those guys shy away from contact, but Chris — if you really watch him in pass protection and only pass protection — he's as good as there is as far as picking up the right people, getting his body in position, center of gravity,

Says Williams: "What goes unnoticed about him is his ability to pick up blitzes and protect the quarterback from some pretty vicious hits. He's selfless. He throws his body in the way, more often than not. Players like that — that's what makes a team go. You need those unselfish players like him."

T TRENT WILLIAMS

Washington's Trent Williams hosts Hogs 2.0 workout in Houston

By Aaron Wilson, Houston Chronicle
July 14, 2016

In the old tradition of the legendary Hogs, Pro Bowl offensive tackle Trent Williams organized a series of workouts and team-bonding exercises in Houston.

Williams gathered the majority of the Washington offensive line — including Morgan Moses, Cody Booth, Spencer Long, Austin Reiter, Josh LeRibeus, Nila Kasitati, Al Bond, Takoby Cofield, Kevin Bowen, Arie Kouandjio, Shawn Lauvao, Ty Nsekhe — for a Hogs 2.0 workout.

The workouts were held at O Athletik, a new state-of-the-art, 35,000-square foot training facility in The Heights that includes a boxing gym, a sand pit, hot yoga, indoor artificial turf surface, a steep man-made running hill covered in artificial turf, organic juice bar and underwater treadmills. The gym is owned by Williams, Minnesota Vikings star running back Adrian Peterson and four partners.

"Hogs 2.0 is an attitude we're trying to bring back," said Williams, a Longview native who played collegiately at Oklahoma. "We had one of the most legendary offensive lines in the Hogs. That's our tradition. We're trying to pay our respects to them. We can probably never live up to those standards, but we've got our goals set high and we try to live up to those standards. As long as we chase the stars, maybe we'll land on the moon."

Williams and the other linemen along with tight end Jordan Reed and linebacker Perry Riley worked out in Houston under the direction of trainer and O Athletik partner James Cooper for the past three days.

"I think it's amazing that Trent thought to reinvent it, and a lot of it comes back to the mentality and the culture that has changed in Washington," said Vince Taylor, Williams' Dallas-based agent. "It's going to be an exciting season. Moving forward, they can leave their imprint on the game. It's a good thing."

"It was a lot of fun getting to do this," Moses said. "Just to be able to get some time together before training camp, this was outstanding."

That included hot yoga, conditioning drills, weightlifting, running up the hill, working in the sandpit and doing drills. The linemen also feasted on a big dinner at Steak 48.

"We got some pretty good work in," Williams said. "We got everybody brushed up and knocked the rust off. The biggest thing for me is as guys we can bond. It's been a great experience."

A former Alabama standout, Kouandjio enjoyed his time in Houston.

"Trent looked out for us, had all of us come out here," Kouandjio said. "Just to be around each other for a few days was awesome. The workouts were no joke. Hot yoga was pretty tough. We did some good drill work, a bunch of cardio, ran up the hill backwards. And we had an awesome steak dinner. It was a great time all-around."
