Speech and Arrested Development rock the Pabst Brewery grand opening

Milwaukee native and rapper Speech returned home with his Grammy Award-winning hip-hop group, Arrested Development recently to perform at Pabst Milwaukee Brewery's grand opening street festival at the Pabst development near downtown Milwaukee, on Juneau Avenue between 10th and 11th street. Arrested Development was one of several musical acts, the majority local, that performed at the free outdoor event. The festival included games, activities, food and (of course) beer.

Bader Philanthropies breaks ground for new headquarters in city's Harambee Neighborhood

Bader Philanthropies, Inc. recently hosted a groundbreaking event at the site of its new global headquarters located at 3318 North MLK Drive. Mayor Tom Barrett, Alderwoman Milele Coggs, and Bader Philanthropies' President and CEO Daniel J. Bader, among others, spoke to commemorate the occasion. A large 6'x10' rendering of the completed facility was unveiled prior to the ceremonious shoveling. Bader Philanthropies announced last August its plan to relocate from the Third Ward to Milwaukee's Harambee neighborhood to build on its existing commitment in the neighborhood. The new space will include more than 22,000 square feet of meeting rooms and offices. The new meeting facility will accommodate up to 120 people, which doubles the Foundation's current capacity for convening. In addition to the building itself, there are plans for nearly 50 guest parking spaces and green space. A Black-owned construction firm, JCP Construction has been selected as the general contractor for the project.

County Sheriff David Clarke stepping down to accept Homeland Security position

Compiled by MCJ Editorial Staff

Milwaukee County Sheriff David Clarke announced Wednesday he will step down from his current position to become an assistant secretary in the Department of Homeland Security (DHS).

Interviewed on a morning radio talk show, Clarke said he'll be the assistant DHS secretary in charge of the Office of Partnership and Engagement.

Clarke said in his new position, he will focus on being a liaison between the DHS and state, local and tribal law enforcement agencies.

On the radio show, Clarke admitted the position presents him with a huge learning curve. "I'm going to get in there and figure out the landscape; learn the people."

"I'll be developing who I have interplay with. And then, after I talk with Secretary (John) Kelly, figure out a strategy to create this better liaison between the Department of Homeland Security and our state and local partners."

Rumors had been rampant about Clarke joining President Donald Trump's administration since he was elected in November.

More recently, Clarke was among several names mentioned for the FBI director job to replace fired bureau director James Comey.

Though he has run for election and reelection as a Democrat, Clarke identified himself as a Republican.

Lawmakers call on state to focus on "front end" investments to reduce need for incarceration

Compiled by MCJ Editorial Staff

Members of the Common Council are asking state lawmakers to consider several alternative approaches to public safety they've developed focusing on "front end" investments so more Wisconsin citizens can avoid incarceration and contact with the corrections system.

"I believe that individuals who commit crimes need to be sanctioned, but I also believe we need to do a much better job preventing the conditions and/or paths that lead people to consider poor choices in the first place," said Ald. Chantia Lewis.

Lewis is one of seven aldermen who sponsored a resolution that counters the state's proposed Republican "Prevention Last" legislation, which contains a package of bills that would incarcerate more youth for longer periods of time and takes the focus off of prevention and evidence-based solutions.

The Common Council resolution calls for the introduction and passage of legislation at the county, state and federal levels to both reduce incarceration of Milwaukee residents and to reduce violence in the city.

Said Democratic state Rep. David Bowen following a recent public hearing in Milwaukee on the legislation: "The bills we heard today would move the state in a terrible direction for both youth and adult populations."

"Regardless of the offense committed, the Republican Prevention Last legislation takes a one-size-fits-all approach, revoking supervision and re-incarcerating anyone who commits any crime, regardless of severity, while on supervision."

Bowen added the legislation doesn't take into account evidence-based practices that show education and treatment in or near one's home community is the best approach to restoring troubled youth and ensuring a positive transition back into their communities.

"Instead, this legislation would increase the likelihood of Wisconsinites getting stuck in the expensive revolving door of the corrections system."

TALKING POINTS...

- The number of adults incarcerated in Wisconsin State correctional facilities increased from 6,967 in 1990 to 22,729 in 2016, a 226% increase, while the overall population of Wisconsin increased during the same period by only 17%
- Wisconsin has the highest incarceration rate in the United States
- African Americans comprise 6.6% of Wisconsin's population but 42% of the men and 24% of the women incarcerated in Wisconsin State correctional facilities
- As of the 2010 U.S. Census, 12.6%, or one in 8, African-American working-age men in Wisconsin were incarcerated, nearly double the 6.7% average rate in the United States, while at the same time the rate of incarceration of working-age Caucasian men in Wisconsin was virtually identical to the average rate across the United States, at 1.2%
- Sixty-nine percent of the African-American residents of Wisconsin reside in Milwaukee County;
- According to a report by the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, between 1990 and 2012, 26,222 African-American men from Milwaukee County were incarcerated in Wisconsin State correctional facilities

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: "How do you think Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.--if he were still alive--respond to Donald Trump's America?"

"I would think that the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. would want all tools available to advance the cause of African Americans. If Donald Trump can advance our cause, than by all means, may God be with him!"

Michael Holmes

"I think Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. would say: 'Evil flourishes when good men do nothing.'"

Lezard White

"I think Dr. Martin Luther King would be very disheartened with the election of Donald Trump. That America had not made much progress with the values that he holds near and dear. He (King) would be disappointed that America selected someone who is an isolationist wanting to close our borders; someone who is arrogant, disrespectful and places his own interests above the interests of the American people."

Patricia Adams

"Dr. King would still hold hope for our nation. At the heart, we are still a republic of dreamers, doers, healers and activists. He would challenge us to dig a lot deeper as individuals, though. We are great, not Trump or his lost nation. Dr. King would remind us fiercely that our voices carry power. He would still hold hope for us, the real America."

Lincoln High civics class learned about Brown vs. Board of Education

By Richard G. Carter

"Up in the morning, out to school. The teacher is teaching the Golden Rule. American history and practical math..." Chuck Berry, "School Days" (Chess Records-1957)

This week marks the 63rd anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court's landmark decision outlawing racial segregation in America's public schools. Its landmark Brown vs. Board of Education ruling in Topeka, Kansas reverberated nationwide -- including Milwaukee, where I was a history-conscious high school student.

Indeed, it seems only yesterday when, seated in my civics class on May 17, 1954, I was transfixed when our teacher -- the late, great Andrew Dunar -- happily imparted the historic news. And I also recall the conversation with my mother that day after school.

She asked if I'd heard about public school segregation in America having

GUEST COMMENTARY

Cornell William Brooks, NAACP president and CEO

The mythology of voter fraud

The recent executive order establishing the Presidential Commission on Election Integrity represents yet another veiled attempt to disenfranchise people of color. Citing false and unfounded claims of widespread voter fraud, President Trump has perpetuated this mythology of "voter fraud," as justification for support of laws and policies that promote voter suppression.

This Commission poses a very real and direct threat to our electoral system and democracy. Clearly designed to bar millions from exercising their democratic birthright, through a jumbo of alt-facts, stereotypes and dog whistle politics, the NAACP as this nation's first-responder on civil rights will fight back with every resource at our disposal against any assault on the vote. Without a doubt, the enemy of the vote will seek to utilize whatever findings the committee produces as ammunition for the continuing assault on voting rights.

While we cannot predict what the commission will report, its makeup gives us reason to worry. Vice Chair of the Commission, Kris Kobach, is one of the principal disseminators of the mythology of widespread voter fraud, despite no statistical proof to validate this claim.

In a 2015 study, The Washington Post found that out of 1 billion votes cast between 2000 and 2014, there were 31 alleged incidents of voter fraud. More recently, of the 134 million votes cast during the most-recent presidential election, The Post found a mere 4 incidents of voter fraud.

Despite any evidence of voter fraud, this administration is expending public funds to address an issue which, quite simply, does not exist. There is simply no evidence of widespread voter fraud. The appointment of Kris Kobach as Vice Chair of the Commission is a clear signal of the ultimate purpose and intent of the Commission which is to provide justification for making it more difficult, if not impossible, for African-American and Latino citizens to exercise their right to vote.

The NAACP is committed to defend against any attack on the voting rights of our fellow citizens, no matter what their color or political persuasion.

Rather than burdening participation in our democracy, we should all be working to increase the degree of civic participation throughout this nation. There is no integrity in denying American citizens their right to vote.

This Commission on Election Integrity is a sham and should not be allowed to give any credibility to the mythology of widespread voter fraud.

been outlawed. I told her yes, I'd heard the news that afternoon in my civics class, and how happy was our teacher, Mr. Dunar -- who is White -- when announcing it.

He told us that at 12:52 p.m. -- in a case involving the Topeka school board -- a ruling had been handed down that, from that day forward, both races would attend the same school as we had been doing at Lincoln High.

And then Mr. Dunar's elation became my elation as I thought of my friends Theotis and Bobby and Ray and Mildred and Annie and all the others at majority Black schools would have a chance to know, as I did, that there were good and bad among Whites, just as among our people. And they'd learn this by going to school with them and, in some cases, doing better.

Now this was not to say that all of the millions of other Black children who attended segregated schools before May 17, 1954, were not properly educated, or never learned to relate to Whites. Many had gone on to respectability as citizens and breadwinners for their families. Some had distinguished themselves in their chosen fields.

And as everyone knows, there is something special about being among your own kind, something that encourages you to let your hair down and be yourself. If truth be known, I was not able to do that in the beautifully integrated Palmer Street elementary and Lincoln Junior-Senior high schools of my day. Not really.

Yet, when I think back to what I learned about life going to school with Whites, Latinos, Asians and Native Americans -- as well as other Black kids -- well, it's an experience I wouldn't trade. I was, truly, one of the lucky ones.

I also mentioned to my mother how some of my classmates -- Black and White -- responded when our teacher asked our opinions. Each said they understood how important it was for "colored and white" to be able to go to school together, get to know one another and learn about America together.

I told her I'd said "This gives smart colored kids a chance to show just how smart they are." And I remember her reply: "That's just wonderful."

Then she asked if I knew that all of the United States Supreme Court Justices who handed down the decision were White men. I told her I hadn't thought about that. She smiled broadly and asked if I knew what organization worked so hard to get the decision "for our people."

That one was easy. It was the NAACP, to which our family proudly belonged and whose Crisis magazine I always looked forward to reading. My mother, Juanita Carter, later would become the first paid secretary of the Milwaukee branch, at N. 9th and W. Center Sts., under the leadership of retired Circuit Court Judge Clarence R. Parrish.

And then she mentioned the roles played by Roy Wilkins, Walter White and Thurgood Marshall (who went on to serve as the first Black Supreme Court Justice) in the events leading to the historic decision. She explained the years of behind-the-scenes legal legwork that those men -- and other less well-known -- had put in.

These days, when I think of Brown vs. Board of Education, I also think of my mother and the night in 1967 during the inner-city riots in Milwaukee,

URBAN My DIALOGUE...

By Torre "ToeJoe" Johnson

Self-discovery Leads to Happiness

Have you ever heard the saying 'It's lonely at the top?' I experience the lonely daily by being at the top of my life. I work on shaking the feeling as it is felt.

I do that because I know that I am not lonely. I am not saying that I am at my highest point in my life either, but I've discovered that when you're doing what's needed to be done for personal growth, you seem to find yourself alone.

It's like everyone moves away and you begin feeling like the kid on the playground that's not invited to play because of your differences. Since I no longer participate in many activities, I've had to fill the voids with positive situations. On many occasions, that means that I have to do things that I've never experienced.

Now I have those that will applaud my growth, while at the same time keep their distance. They're some of the same people who act as if they were willing to assist me only in a professional way. It's funny, but I won't laugh knowing that when I was on bull I couldn't shake the constant attention I once received. When you change for the better, you have to search to know your still accepted.

It's almost like being punished for doing good. Like, being punished for doing what's right. The decision to change one's life comes with many sacrifices, including the loss of relationships with those you were once tight with. I guess that's why I cherish the powerful few that push, guide and support me. I cherish the ones that take time out of their lives to remind me that I am appreciated.

Over the years, I have remained focused by repeating my 'Agent of Change Vows' daily. I stay focused by doing what prevents me from going backwards. I also remember that misery loves company and happiness erases loneliness.

I am happy that I can be happy amongst many. I know it may seem lonely at the top of your life sometimes but you must and I must continue climbing to self-discovery.

Self-discovery allows you to understand the importance of the need for personal companionship. Self-friendship is a gift that will take forever to unwrap. Continue loving yourselves.

MILLENNIAL MAGIC

Millennials Share Why College is Not for Them

What are some words that come to mind when you hear the word 'college'? Let me guess, are they success, opportunity or achievement? How about debt, waste of time and what's the point? This is what millennials feel when it comes to abiding by the pressure of getting a college degree.

Being a college student is enough hard work without having to worry about debt and math class. As graduates' debt get higher, parents are more frequently having to take on the burden of their child's college expenses.

Now don't get me wrong, college graduates are loved, respected and appreciated but while there are many job occupations that require college degrees, Forbes magazine says that more than half of millennials say they would have been able to get where they are now without a college degree.

Can you imagine that? More than half of the world's most misunderstood generation believe that a college degree is not needed in order for them to be successful. This survey also found that 37% of former students regretted going to college given the amount of debt they now have.

We are taught from birth that college is the 'way to go.' Everything is set up to where you are taught that in order to make it in life, you need to obtain a college degree. Of course, everyone wants to be somebody, so what happens? We all start enrolling in college courses.

Once again, there is nothing wrong with making the decision to further your education, but millennials feel like the process isn't totally vital to the progression of our future careers or establishments.

Between obtaining $30,000+ in school debt and not finding a job suitable for your degree, millennials have noticed that college is not all it's cracked up to be. Research has shown an unbelievable increase in the proportion of graduates working in career fields that have nothing to do with what their intended major was in school.

Pew research says that in 2001, 37% of graduates worked in jobs that were totally irrelevant to their major. In 2013, the study also showed that there was a 47% increase on graduates working in jobs that were not what they went to school for. (Pew)

Market Watch, a database that provides business news, analysis and stock market data has deemed millennials as the most educated, but surprisingly just 13% of the young adults say that the higher education is fine while the remaining 87% disagree.

This particular survey, released by Washington D.C., also shared that despite millennials' negative feelings towards the higher education system, millennials seem to realize that it is much better to have a college degree than not to have one.

Do you agree?

Sheriff Clarke stepping down to assume Homeland Security post

ifies himself as a neo-conservative, gaining national notoriety as an outspoken supporter of hard right conservative positions and for being critical of liberal and progressive ideas and organizations, most notably the "Black Lives Matter" movement.

A strong supporter of President Trump during the election, Clarke spoke at the GOP convention in Cleveland last summer.

He will leave for Washington in June to assume his new role.

Responding to Clarke's new job, Milwaukee County Executive Chris Abele, who has locked horns with Clarke since he was elected to the top county job, said he looks forward to having someone in the top position of the county's law enforcement agency he can work with.

"For the county I love and am privileged to serve, I am genuinely excited about the prospect of a sheriff I can work with to find evidence-based solutions that will improve public safety and safely reduce our jail population," said Abele in a statement following Clarke's announcement.

"(Someone) who actually cares about addressing the indefensible racial disparities that everyone in Milwaukee should have as their first priority."

"For the country I love, the last thing America needs is another loud voice angrily and unproductively telling you who to blame and who not to trust.

"The appointment of Sheriff Clarke to a position intended to build partnership and engagement is not a decision made by someone interested in partnership or engagement."

Earnell Lucas, a candidate for the sheriff's position, said he'll submit his name to Gov. Scott Walker for appointment to fill the remainder of Clarke's term.

"It would be an honor to be selected and I believe that I am the right person to fill this critical role," said Lucas in a statement.

"I have a deep and abiding commitment to this community," said Lucas, a former Milwaukee police captain and former head of security for Major League Baseball. "Strong leadership is needed as the office looks to the future."

Regardless if he's picked to fill Clarke's tenure, or not, Lucas said he will continue to be a candidate for a full term as sheriff in 2018.

"I look forward to earning the trust of Milwaukee county voters."

State called on to find ways to reduce the need for incarceration

whether as youth or as adults.”

The Council also supports a set of guiding policies as a means of accomplishing its goals. They include:

1. Doing away with mandatory minimum sentences and returning to sentencing discretion, which allows judges to bring the full force of the criminal justice system to rehabilitate offenders, rather than to lock offenders away regardless of circumstance.
2. Treating youths who offend, especially first-time offenders, as deserving of compassion, help and intervention rather than as hardened criminals deserving of being locked up.
3. Reforming the juvenile justice system in Milwaukee County to ensure that youths are receiving sufficient and appropriate counseling, rehabilitation, alternative rehabilitation and other supportive measures prior to and after adjudication, as well as minimizing any procedural delays between initial arrest and adjudication.
4. Ending the practice of sending Milwaukee’s serious juvenile offenders to Lincoln Hills School, a troubled facility more than 200 miles away from Milwaukee youths’ families, communities and support networks, and instead detaining serious juvenile offenders in a local setting for rehabilitation.
5. Increasing cooperation and information-sharing between the Police Department, other City agencies and Milwaukee County partners to ensure that the Police Department is supported in its mission; this should include information-sharing between:
  - Trauma-informed care specialists
  - Public health professionals
  - The Office of Violence Prevention
  - Mentor programs
  - Educators
6. Re-prioritizing the State budget to decrease the share of funding that is sent to the Wisconsin Department of Corrections and re-direct those funds into departments and programs that work to prevent crime and violence, including health, education, housing, public transit expansion and job development.
7. Re-focusing State and local bodies, including the Wisconsin Economic Development Corporation, on recruiting and growing businesses that provide family-supporting jobs in the Milwaukee area, rather than along the Milwaukee-Kenosha I-94 corridor.
8. Expanding and improving public transit options for Milwaukee residents between Milwaukee and family-supporting jobs located in the surrounding counties.
9. Increasing the amount of shared revenue returned to the City from the State to a level which would cover the City’s police and fire department budgets, as was historically the case.
10. Increasing federal Community Development Block Grant funding, which helps the City to expand economic opportunities for residents, and creating a state fund to supplement federal Community Development Block Grant funding.
11. Reforming the State of Wisconsin’s voucher school program so that voucher schools are held to the same quality of education standards as public schools, ensuring that the City’s children attending voucher schools receive the quality education that they are entitled to, and that will allow them to achieve their highest potential.
12. Bringing back a full complement of courses in music, the arts, and technical training to public schools in the Milwaukee area so that youths receive a complete, well-rounded education.

The other aldermen who signed onto the resolution were: Nickolas Kovac, Russell Stamper, II, Ashanti Hamilton, Cavalier Johnson, and Bob Bauman.

Remember when...

when the NAACP office was bombed. And the abject terror I felt.

I remember calling her from Cleveland, where I was a reporter with The Plain Dealer, and doing a phone interview I turned into a news story -- prominently published the following morning. And how the accolades poured in from my editors and co-workers.

Later in that memorable year for me in Cleveland, I was fortunate enough to interview the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., for a second time. And one of the topics of our discussion was the positives of the momentous Brown vs. Board of Education ruling.

And now, 63 years have passed since May 17, 1954. Many millions of Black boys and girls have attended integrated public schools all over the nation as a result of what happened on that historic Spring day in Kansas. And it is well-worth remembering.

It is because of my late mother, who helped me understand the significance of Brown vs. Board of Education -- and because of how well my own children have turned out -- that this ruling means so much to me and, I’m sure, to millions of other Black Americans. I shudder to think where our nation would be without it.

ASK THE LAWYER

Who Is Responsible for an UBER ACCIDENT?

Dear Attorney Hupy,

My friends and I often take UBER when attending festivals, going out to see bands, or really, any time alcohol is involved. From some of my experiences, it seems like anyone can be employed as a driver for these services. I’m curious — if I’m riding in an Uber, and involved in an accident, who will pay?

- Uber-Curious

Dear Uber-Curious,

“Ride-sharing” is a thriving new industry — passengers seeking a ride simply need to log into the services app and they will be connected with a driver nearby.

Unlike a taxi, the transaction takes place via smartphone and nearly anyone can become employed as a driver. But, the massive looming question surrounding this new industry really seems to be about insurance. Who is liable in the event of an accident — the driver, the ride-sharing company or the passenger?

Who is Covered?

For the most part, ride-sharing services like Uber state that once their app has been turned on and a passenger has been picked up, that its insurance would shift coverage to cover the driver. When the app is off, coverage is supposed to be relied on by the drivers PCI (Personal Car Insurance). It is the gap in between those two periods, when the Uber app is on, but there’s no passenger in the vehicle, when problems arise.

This “insurance-limbo” places much of the insurance burden on the drivers, who are using their personal vehicles and PCI. What these drivers may not know, however, is that their PCI policy may not cover them if they’re driving for Uber, Lyft or any other “ride-sharing” app. This is because most insurance companies see them as commercial drivers when providing rides.

What Do I Do As a Passenger?

As a passenger, you should be covered by the ride-sharing company’s insurance policy. But in the event that the driver’s insurance company pushes back, you may be denied compensation for your injuries if your ride-sharing drivers’ PCI doesn’t cover driving-for-profit, or he or she hasn’t obtained a commercial drivers license.

Since your driver may only have minimal coverage, you would expect the remaining costs to fall to your insurance provider. However, many people do not have large underinsured policies, and the costs may be too great for your policy.

The attorneys at Hupy and Abraham will gladly help you contact your insurance provider to see about changing your underinsured policy.

This is a complicated and confusing new industry that is difficult to navigate. The experienced attorneys at Hupy and Abraham are skilled in complicated litigation involving automobile accidents, as well as dealing with insurance companies. If you or a loved one have been injured in an accident, while participating in a ride-share service, please contact us at 800-800-5678.

As I raise my head and start to slowly focus my eyes, the stench tells me that I am on familiar ground - but I don't know how I got here.

My emotions start to overwhelm my corpse and the sick feeling of disgust is the only pulse that lets me know that I am still alive.

I stand to gain my composure and to adjust my disheveled clothing. I feel a chill, so I put my hands in my pant pockets, but my frigid fingers were not obstructed, this consciousness created a crushing feeling of remorse and shame that confirmed what I already knew - I was out of drugs and out of money. So I started my long walk home.

It must be Sunday, because the church folks are in their best and the traffic seems calmer than I remember when I left my apartment Friday morning on my way to work - now it all started to come back to me.

It was a brisk fall morning and I awoke with good intentions. It was payday, and things were going to be different.

I had a slight pep in my step and a crooked smile on my face. I told myself that I might stop at the bar for a quick drink after work, but that anxious to start my weekend, or if it was a divine delay created by the Universe, that I purposely ignored. Either way, I grabbed my coat and pushed my way through the line of workers waiting to finalize their work day with the swipe of a badge.

The wind caught the door as I opened it, but I held it tight to allow the person behind me to exit safely. I said my see you later, before I made a small turn to go down the stoop and that's when I was greeted by my Friday welcome wagon. The two people who I could always count on.

The two people currently in my life that never let me down. With a fake smile on my face and a fabricated sense of confidence, I weakly shook hands with Loan Shark and Dope Man.

They both were waiting patiently for me on the sidewalk, because like them, they could also count on me...

C.H.I.L.L. program creates community safe zones initiative

Compiled by MCJ Editorial Staff

C.H.I.L.L. (Creating Hope, I Love Life) program, Inc., a local nine-year-old non-profit organization that promotes peace and reduces violence in Milwaukee's central city, has unveiled a revolutionary new community surveillance program.

Called the C.H.I.L.L. Community Safe Zone Initiative, the surveillance program works with residents of neighborhoods and business owners.

"Using a combination of community support and accountability, along with both existing and newly installed top of the line surveillance cameras, these community blocks and business locations will be designated as areas where crime is not tolerated," reads an outline of the plan provided by C.H.I.L.L. founders Dante and Shannon Chestnut.

C.H.I.L.L. Community Safe Zone locations will also be safe havens so that anyone who feels in danger can go and seek assistance.

Combining community cooperation and 24-hour video monitoring, the initiative's objective is to reduce crime rates starting first in statistically high crime areas and expanding block by block.

The program will focus on Milwaukee police districts numbers seven and five. "Many communities already have city-placed surveillance cameras at major intersections and on more commonly travelled streets," the outline reads.

"But based on our research, many crimes happen outside of these areas, we will target both residents and businesses located off these main streets and intersections.

The C.H.I.L.L. founders noted in 2015, a 13.3 mile area within the MPD's seventh district had almost 40 homicides and over 2,000 violent assaults. There were also approximately 2.8 murders per mile in the district, which experienced more than 25 percent of the total homicides in the city.

The Chestnuts are asking businesses to give their support by making a tax-deductible donation on a weekly, quarterly, or annual basis towards the project. The donations will be used to purchase, install and maintain the surveillance cameras and monitoring systems.

For more information about the program, call C.H.I.L.L. at (414)-687-3927, or (414)-687-3940. Only serious inquiries will be responded to.
