History & Hospitality

Harbour Island is located on the North-eastern (Atlantic) side of North Eleuthera, which is itself due East from Nassau. Eleuthera separates the rough waters of the deep blue Atlantic Ocean from the calm turquoise of Exuma Sound. It's dramatically showcased at the Glass Window Bridge. Dunmore Town, the only town on Harbour Island, was once known for shipbuilding and sugar (and rum smuggling during prohibition) but now boasts a hospitality economy—which is perfectly suited to the hospitable nature of its residents.

Long known for its beautiful pink sand beaches, Harbour Island is equally well-known for fabulous sport fishing, amazing diving and snorkeling, and quality of boating.

Harbour Island (“Briland” to locals) is famous for having the friendliest people in the Bahamas—residents proudly maintain the island’s original welcome sign that states “Home of Friendly People.” The residents are welcome communicators, warm and authentic people, and the neighborhood has a rustic beauty. The island is dominated by pedestrian traffic and most people get around by walking or using golf carts for longer trips. There are few automobiles on the island.

Of course, the warm culture matches the warm climate, with exceptional weather year-round—average high temperatures in the 70s and 80s and average lows in the 60s and 70s. There is very little rain in the prime season and there are constant ocean breezes.

Scenic adventures

A short walk from Valentine's one can find natural or cultural adventures. Climb the hand carved "Hill Steps" or visit the "Titus Hole" cave overlooking the bay. Lighthouse Church of God, famous for its voluminous singing and music, is welcoming to island visitors.

When you're ready to take a little excursion the Glass Window bridge displays a separation of the Atlantic on the west and Exuma Sound on the east. The striking differences in color between the two sides, and the power of the Atlantic pouring through the lower separations, is a natural marvel.

Valentine's marina is the largest and most complete marina on Harbour Island, and one of the largest in Eleuthera. That's why so many yacht owners make us their home port of choice. The marina is full service with fuel, electric, water, and Wifi.
