MAGIC-WASH MERINO

Magic-Wash Merino is dyed with a special process, mostly done by hand, to achieve natural highs and lows in color depth. Color shading and arrangement will vary from garment to garment, with differing shades on raised areas like seams, collars, and bindings. These dyes are vivid, vibrant, and long-lasting. Variations in garment appearance are intentional, as the goal of this process is to create a one-of-a-kind finish for each garment. Hand-wash, 100% merino wool, imported.

Long ago, the Pawnee built lodges with roof openings that gave a clear view of a constellation they called the Council of Chiefs. These stars represented wise elders watching over their people. The Council of Chiefs was led by the Chief Star, Tirawahat, primary deity of the Pawnee. Chief Star is also known as Polaris, and the Council of Chiefs is also known as Corona Borealis, or Northern Crown. Together, these guardian stars light the night skies with their wisdom.

In the Navajo way, ha'a'aah means "east," and refers to the rising sun. The Dine people wake before sunrise to watch the sky lighten, as dawn is a time for opening up to fresh thoughts and ways. Sunrise is seen as "white light," associated with free-thinking, creativity and enlightenment. Mesa Dawn shows the progression from night's darkness to clear morning light, where a band of butterfly symbols represent the mind taking flight with new ideas.

The plains of the Lakota Nation stretch to each of the Sacred Four Directions; North, South, East, West. The East brings sunrise, prayer, knowledge and new beginnings. The South holds Sun's warmth, growth, and summer winds. To the West, sunset falls in the direction of passing from this life to the next. The North brings winter's harsh winds, endurance and transformation. The Sacred Directions meet in the Horizon Cross, with the far horizon behind.

The Yavapai, or People of the Sun, lived long ago in central Arizona. Yavapai weavers made baskets that were so tightly woven, they could hold water. These light yet strong baskets were as beautiful as they were useful for storage, transport, even cooking. Basket making is similar to jacquard weaving, with strands of many colors creating vivid patterns. Diamond shapes and patterned bands work together to reflect the intricate and timeless art of Yavapai basketry.

They are called by many names: trail trees, prayer trees, signal trees, and more. These ancient pathfinders grow at right angles, their horizontal shapes standing out in the vertical world of the forest. Native Americans trained saplings to mark trails and resources for journeys from coast to coast. An uncountable number are lost to time, but more than 2,000 trees have been mapped. Their locations mostly kept secret, hidden in the forests that preserve them.
