LINKING VERBS

Many important verbs do not express action; some verbs can link a noun or an adjective to the subject. This type of verb is called a linking verb. The linking verb connection between the subject to the noun or adjective is something like an equal sign. She is tall. -- She = tall.

A predicate noun is located in the _____ and it _____ the _____.

A predicate adjective is located in the _____ and it _____ the _____.

	LINKING VERBS INCLUDE:
Forms of "To Be"		Vorbs P	elated to the Five Senses	Verbs That Have to Do with States of Being –
	Forms of To be	Verbsin	elated to the Five Senses	Remaini	ng the Same or Changing is	were	feel	smell	grow	become am	be	taste	appear	remain	seem
are	being	look	sound	stay	prove
was	been			turn

Examples

I am calm. The be verb am links I and calm. Calm describes my state of being.

George Washington became the first president. Became links George Washington and president.

Check by saying, Washington = president, or substitute the linking verb with a form of "to be" as in: George Washington was president.

Helping Verb Confusion

The forms of to be can also be used as ______ such as in the following sentence: T

Terry is looking.

In the sentence above, "is" does not function as a linking verb. "Is looking" tells what Terry is doing (the action), not what Terry is being.

_ _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _

Is the Verb used as Linking or Action?

Some verbs can be used either as linking verbs or action verbs. We need to be able to determine the function of the verb to tell the difference. The following sentences contain verbs that are used as either linking or action verbs.

Linking:	Action:
The monkey looked hungry.	The monkey looked for food.

	adverb; omit the adverb. That leaves the sentence, "The bugle sounded."

Checklist for S-LV-PA or S-LV-PN sentences:

- 1. Eliminate all prepositional phrases.
- 2. Circle the main verb of the sentence.
- 3. Determine if the verb is from the linking verb list.
- 4. Determine whether the verb is really being used as a linking verb or if it is being used as a helping verb or action verb.
- 5. Determine whether the verb is linking the subject to a noun that renames it (PN) or an adjective that describes it (PA).

LINKING VERB PRACTICE – Label the verbs as linking, action, or other.

- 1. The orchestra sounded beautiful.
- 2. Stop and smell the roses.
- 3. The geometry teacher proved the theorem.
- 4. Winning against Collins Hill proved to be hard.
- 5. My parents became smarter when I turned 21.

Again, because gerund phrases are generally integral parts of the sentence, they are not separated from the rest of the sentence by commas.
GERUND PRACTICE - Underline the gerund phrases in the sentences below. Write the noun function of the gerund in the blank following the sentence. Noun functions include: subject (S), direct object (DO), indirect object (IO), appositive (APP),

1.	The store manager's greatest responsibility is scheduling the workers.

3.	He enjoyed reading Into the Wild more than his friend did.
4.	After running the marathon, Emily was tired.

Inf

and object of the preposition (OP).

1. Infinitive phrases always begin with "to," but some prepositional phrases begin with "to" as well. The trick is to determine whether the "to" is followed with a noun or a verb.

She would like to drive her car to the mall after school.

2. Gerund phrases always use -ing ending verbs, but participial phrases can use -ing ending verbs as well.

The trick is to remember that a gerund phrase takes the place of a noun and will therefore be an integral part of the sentence such as the noun or direct object; if you remove a gerund phrase from a sentence, it won't make sense anymore. On the other hand, a participial phrase will be used as an adjective and can generally be removed from the sentence; the sentence may not be as detailed anymore, but it should still be a complete sentence.

Propping up your injured ankle will help reduce	Leaning against the wall, the athlete stretched his swelling.	muscles.
Gerund as subject.	Participial as adjective. CAN be removed – You'll
Cannot be removed from sentence.	still have a sentence without it.
