Charges to be dropped against suspected murderer Due to mental illness, Yates unable to assist in own defense

BY DAVID RUPKALVIS The World

A man police believe murdered his own grandmother last year may never face criminal charges after he was determined to be mentally ill and unable to assist in his own defense.

District Attorney R. Paul Frasier announced Monday that Keven Lee Yates had been evaluated by the state hospital and a private mental health expert hired by the DA, and both agreed that due to Yates' mental illnesses, he would never be able to assist in his own defense.

Under state law, in that case the district attorney's office is required to drop the charges.

However, Yates will not be free man yet.

Frasier said after it was determined Yates would never be able to assist in his own defense, he filed a petition with the court asking that Yates be declared an "extremely dangerous person with a mental illness." The court agreed with Frasier and ordered Yates to be hospitalized at the state hospital for two years. The Psychiatric Security Review Board will be responsible for supervising and providing care during that time.

Frasier said the commitment is

Major project completed on Coos Bay Rail Line

BY DAVID RUPKALVIS The World

The first of many repair projects planned on the Coos Bay Rail Line has been completed.

The International Port of Coos Bay announced over the weekend that a new rail bridge over Coalbank Slough has been finished and the bridge was reopened to rail traffic.

The port used grant funding to completely replace the aging bridge, a major step in upgrades along the 120-mile rail line used to carry goods from Florence to Eugene. The first train to cross the bridge was delivering goods to GMA garnet.

The repair work at Coalbank Slough as well as several other bridge repairs planned along bridges in the rail line was funded through a combination of grants. The port received a $20 million federal grant through the Better Utilizing Investments to Leverage Development program and additional $5 million grant from the state or Oregon.

The replacement of the bridge over Coalbank Slough is the biggest project using those grant funds, but the port plans several more repairs to bridges along the rail line in the near future. This projects include improvements to 10 steel bridges in the Wild Cat Creek area, rehabilitation of all three swing span bridges along the line, including the bridge over the bay in North Bend, and significant improvements to the Vaughn Viaduct bridge near Noti.

Margaret Barber, director of external affairs and business development with the port, said the remaining work on bridges would not include replacement of any structures. Instead, the bridges will all be rehabbed to ensure they are safe and ready to use for decades to come.

Barber said replacing the bridge over Coalbank Slough was necessary because of the age and style of bridge that was built in the early 1900s.

The former bridge structure was a non-operating deck plate girder swing-span bridge. Bridge repairs conducted by the previous owner of the rail line included the removal of the swing mechanism and the addition of intermediate bents to support the center section of the bridge, making it essentially a fixed continuous deck plate girder structure for more than 30 years.

The construction process for the project began on December 13, 2021, and concluded in mid-April. Legacy Construction was the prime contractor for the project.

"We finished it in around three months, which is really good time," Barber sad.

The new Coalbank Slough bridge connects the last 16.5 miles of the rail line to the north end of the CBRL and access to the National Railway Network through the Union Pacific rail yard in Eugene. Replacement of the bridge will be instrumental in facilitating rail traffic to the port owned Terminal One facility, or former Georgia Pacific Mill site.

The Terminal Once facility is eyed as a possible home to a container shipping facility in the future. The port's vision is to have goods brought into Coos Bay via shop, offloaded in Coos Bay and moved via rail throughout Oregon and the entire Northwest.

Rail cars sit on the Coos Bay Rail Line. The International Port of Coos Bay, which owns the rail line, is doing work on many of the bridges along the 120-mile line.

But before any goods can be moved, the rail line must be stabilized, projects the port is already working. The rail line has multiple tunnels on the 120-mile line, and Barber said one of the biggest challenges will be increasing the size of the entrances to the tunnels so they can handle the larger loads expected if the container port is opened.

Physics and Astronomy Lecture: Illuminating the Extreme Cosmos through Astroparticle Astronomy

Southwestern Oregon Community College's Physics and Astronomy Lecture Series welcomes Tonia Venters with her lecture "Illuminating the Extreme Cosmos through Antiparticle Astronomy." This will be a virtual lecture to provide insight into antiparticle astronomy. The lecture will be at 5:30 p.m. Monday, April 25, and will be streamed live at https://livestream.com/swocc/physicsandastronomy2021-22.

Venters is a research astrophysicist at NASA Goddard following academic studies at Rice University and the University of Chicago. Venters shares this description of her talk:

"For ages, astronomy has relied on light in order to learn about the universe, but light isn't the only cosmic messenger. Recent developments have brought about the dawn of an exciting new era of multi-messenger astronomy, a discipline that combines observations in gravitational waves and astroparticles, as well as light, to get a more complete picture of the universe and the astrophysical systems within it. Of the different messengers, perhaps the most mysterious are two of the astroparticles: cosmic rays and neutrinos. Cosmic rays are the messengers of the most extreme accelerators in the cosmos; however, efforts to identify their origins have been thwarted for over a century due the fact that they don't point back to their sources.

"On the other hand, even though neutrinos do point back to their sources, individual sources have yet to be confidently identified. In this talk, I will provide an overview of the recent developments in multi-messenger astronomy and then focus on the particular challenges of cosmic-ray and neutrino astronomy. Finally, I will set the stage for next generation facilities that will shed light on the universe through astroparticle astronomy."

For information about this lecture and future events, contact Aaron Coyner, associate professor of physics, at 541-888-7244 or aaron.coyner@socc.edu.

renewable and can be extended every two years as long as the courts continue to view Yates as extremely dangerous.

Police allege Yates murdered his own grandmother in April 2021. At that time, law enforcement was called to a home in North Bend, where the found the body of Teclutsa Margaret Sause. At the time, Frasier said it was obvious Sause died of "homicidal violence."

Yates was at the home when police arrived and was arrested at the scene on a charge of second-degree murder. Frasier said police learned quickly that Yates had suffered from mental illness for many years.

Under state law, a person can only go to trial if they are mentally competent to assist in their own defense. It became apparent quickly that Yates was not competent, and state law requires that prosecution be suspended while suspects receive mental health care to determine if they can get to the point where they can assist in their defense.

Yates was sent to the state hospital in 2021, but state law sets limits on how long a person can be committed while working to regain competence. For second-degree murder, that limit is three years. If it is determined a person can not regain the mental capacity to assist in their defense, charges must be dropped regardless of how long they are committed.

When both the doctors at the state hospital and the private expert hired by the DA's office agreed that Yates would never be able to assist in his defense, Frasier said he had no choice but to drop the murder charge without prejudice.

In dropping the charge without prejudice, the DA's office retains the ability to refile charges any time in the future if Yates is determined to be mentally stable enough to assist in his own defense.

$40,000 compensatory fine.

Rogers served with the Coos Bay Police Department for 22 years before he was arrested in 2021 for having a sexual relationship with a child that began before the victim was 12 and continued for at least six years.

> Rogers was indicted and later convicted by a Coos County jury on 20 charges, including 18 felonies. The charges were two charges on unlawful sexual penetration in the first degree, three charges of unlawful sexual penetration in the second degree, eight charges of sex abuse in the first degree, five charges of luring a minor and two charges of sex abuse in the third degree. Only the final two charges are misdemeanors.

Because Rogers was a Coos Bay police officer and worked closely with the district attorney's office and the court system, both District Attorney R. Paul Frasier and Judge Martin Stone recused themselves from the case.

The attorney general's office prosecuted the case, and Kristina Edmunson, communications director, confirmed Rogers was sentenced to a total of 63.5 years in prison.

Brown visits Coquille Tribe in Coos County stop

Gov. Kate Brown visited Coos County last week to view recent projects of the Coquille Indian Tribe.

After staying the night at the tribe's Mill Casino-Hotel & RV Park, Brown visited the Bandon Hatchery on Friday morning. There she learned about the tribe's salmon restoration partnership with the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife.

The governor heard about Oregon's increasingly rundown hatchery system, particularly the aging Bandon Hatchery at Ferry Creek.

"It was a wakeup call like, this place needs to be upgraded fast," she said.

Coquille Tribal Chairman Brenda Meade said her tribe and others are coming forward to help state and local authorities whose resources for such projects are scarce. Oregon's Fish and Wildlife Commission is considering the tribe's proposal for co-management of the Coquille River watershed.

"People have lived on this land since time immemorial, and we are the stewards," Meade said.

While touring the tribe's new Ko-Kwel Wellness Center near Charleston, Brown admired both the building and the tribe's holistic efforts to offer diversified care under one roof. The wellness center offers medical, dental and behavioral health care, as well as social services for tribal families and an inhouse pharmacy.

The governor also visited the Bandon waterfront and Bandon's Nasomah Memorial, which commemorates a village that flourished on the site for thousands of years.

Meade said. "We are so grateful to the governor for taking time to come here and see what we've achieved on wellness and the challenges we're facing with our salmon return

Spring prescribed burn season to begin

The Rogue River-Siskiyou National Forest is heading into its 2022 spring prescribed burning season. Public land managers use prescribed burning to reduce the risks of large wildfires, among other important land management objectives. By decreasing the amount of dry, flammable vegetation on the ground that can fuel large fire growth, fire danger to communities can be mitigated.

It is important to note that all burns are dependent on daily weather conditions. Although it is difficult to predict exactly when the burns will take place, a number of communities in southwest Oregon can expect to see smoke in the air soon as it is likely conditions will be right for prescribed burning. The RRSNF will issue updates on social media accounts as events take shape

This year, the RRSNF is hosting the Rogue Basin Prescribed Fire Training Exchange offering experiential training for local qualified wildland firefighters and supervised observation opportunities for interested public. Any of the planned prescribed burns on the RRSNF may potentially be utilized as a training opportunity for TREX participants.

"Prescribed fire is both an ancient and cutting-edge practice and is a key to restoring health in our forests and creating safer conditions for nearby communities, said Darren Borgias, Forest Conservation director for The Nature Conservancy. "TREX is building capacity, cooperation, and knowledge, all needed to get prescribed burning to a scale that can help reduce the destruction and prolonged smoke from severe summer wildfire," Borgias added. More information on TREX here: http:// www.conservationgateway.org/ConservationPractices/FireLandscapes/FireLearning-Network/Documents/FactSheet TREX.pdf

All prescribed burns are thoroughly planned and require a strict approval process for smoke management, fire safety, and ecological outcomes before professional staff light any fire on the ground.

During burning operations, fire personnel carefully monitor weather conditions to minimize smoke impacts and to keep the fire in control. The spring and fall seasons are the best times of year to light a prescribed burn, as the fuels are in the right condition to burn without the fire getting too intense. This is achieved by creating a "cool" fire that stays on the ground and burns slowly through the vegetation.

Landscapes maintained by "good" fire are typically better for wildlife and native plants, and therefore create landscapes that are "healthier" or more resilient, from an ecological perspective.

All prescribed burns are carried out by trained firefighters, who burn within "units" that have fire breaks along all their boundaries. Fire breaks can include natural and human-made features (such as pre-dug fire lines). Equipment is nearby to ensure the flames don't escape the unit. After ignition is complete, burn units are mopped up and patrolled until the burn is declared out.

Wildlife Fauxtography

BY TED WILLIAMS

I'm disgusted with American journalism. It's boring. I blame editors for assigning uninteresting stories, and people interviewed for being evasive. So, for a modest fee, I provide journalists with stories that could have happened and quotes that should have been uttered. Contact me at CustomFacts.org.

None of the above is true. But if it got your attention, recall that in most forms of journalism, lies are frowned upon.

Not so with wildlife photojournalism. Liars dominate. This galls me because I work with so many honest wildlife photographers who spend months getting shots the liars get in an hour.

Consider the story from Finland, viral in the U.S. and Europe with 759,000 page views, of a wild wolf and brown bear that constantly nuzzle each other. "Unusual Friendship," understates one title. "No one can know exactly why or how the young wolf and bear became friends," the photographer told the Daily Mail.

One person knows. That would be Melissa Groo, a soaring star in honest wildlife photojournalism, who co-chairs the International League of Conservation Photographers' Ethics Committee. "There's a huge business now in northern Europe baiting these animals (often with dog food) for photographers," she says. "I can't even look at photos of these animals from Finland anymore."

Then there's the epic
"wolf-grizzly brawl" over blood-stained snow in Montana documented by a "nature photographer."
The story was first reported by the Sun and Daily Mail, then recycled 11,000 times
on both sides of the Atlantic.
The photos are stunning.

The blood issued from a planted deer carcass. The grizzly and wolves were tame actors, incarcerated by Animals of Montana, an "animal training service" known for animal abuse, including illegal wildlife trafficking and Endangered Species Act violations. Before 2021, when the state shut down Animals of Montana, it was patronized by some of the world's most acclaimed "wildlife photographers." Its website still exists.

Photo-game-farm animals "spend much of their lives in small cages with concrete floors and only enough space to turn around," writes Groo in National Wildlife magazine. Some of these game farms, she learned from Freedom of Information requests, are analogs of "domestic puppy mills, breeding and selling wild animals such as wolves, foxes, and lynxes." Babies are taken from their mothers at early ages and sold to roadside zoos and exotic-pet dealers.

Twelve years ago, I considered an undercover visit to Animals of Montana. "Our grizzlies," proclaimed its website, "will amaze you by running towards the camera, standing on command, snarling viciously, or posing cutely." But the violations already on its record spooked me. If I had exposed this outfit, the game-farm industry would accuse me of cherry-picking.

So I tried Wild Eyes Photo Adventures in Columbia Falls, Montana. But it had been busted for violating the Animal Welfare Act.

Minnesota Wildlife Connection sounded interesting. But it had sold its tame black bear Cubby for $4,650 to country music star Troy Gentry, who then illegally "hunted" and killed Cubby inside his pen.

Letters to the Editor

Stay downtown

I have been trying to come up with the right things to say regarding the relocation of the Coos Bay Public Library. Then, I read Crystal Shoji's letter to the editor of April 15, 2022. She perfectly summed up my feelings about the history of the library and its importance to the downtown core of Coos Bay. Thank you, Crystal.

Now, for my personal feelings about the library. I got my first library card at the "new" library in 1967 when I was eleven years old. It was a memorable 6th grade-class field trip (and we walked there from Blossom Gulch Elementary). I have been a regular member of the library for 54 years. I have always loved the library and its great location.

I would, of course, like to see the library in a location that would be more convenient to more of the Coos County area. I live in Eastside, so the North Bend Public Library is closer for me to go to than the new proposed location in Empire. I also love the North Bend library, so that will be my new library home if this new location goes through. I think about the folks who live up the river and the folks who live south of town who would find the North Bend library closer for them as well.

I believe what Crystal said about there being other suitable land within Coos Bay that is outside of the tsunami and floodplain zones. I also recall fondly walking to the library from Blossom Gulch, Marshfield Junior High and Marshfield High back in the day. It seems a new location would remove that wonderful feature of being downtown.

Lynda Ellingsen Coos Bay

A wonderful idea

Thank you for stating the obvious so precisely and clearly Chrystal Shoji. The only good point that I might add is that once the library is moved to Topits Park, we are going to have a flat, downtown location close to all the services that Ms Shoji mentioned. Once razed, that piece of property not suitable for a permanent structure will be available and I go along with a proposal to paint stripes on it, add some nice flush toilets and a sewer dump station, a little grassy area for dogs and a dumpster.

An ample place for the homeless on wheels to form a community neighborhood of their own. Just added to the Devereaux Center is a local but stop; there is already one at the existing library. Everyone has to be somewhere and everyone has a story. We are spending money to chase these people from one spot to another and then back again seemingly with no real purpose.

Help wanted signs everywhere and lots of people spending their time and resources trying to find a place to be instead of focusing on becoming presentable and finding a job. On behalf of these people, I thank you Mr. mayor and our city council. What a wonderful idea to move the library from downtown.

Charlotte Koepke Coos Bay

Thank you so much

The Langlois Lions Club would like to publicly thank the local businesses and community members for their generous support of our recent take-out Spaghetti Feed and dessert sale event. This benefit dinner was a big success for helping to fund our Pacific High School scholarship program. The support came in form of donations of menu products, desserts, direct donations and/or volunteering for the event.

Kudos to McKay's, Ray's of Bandon, Langlois Market, Ray's of Port Orford, Community Harvest, Jean Stephenson, Catherine Kadlubowski, Vicki Kreutzer, Kate Henderson, Sue House, Megan Kalina, Jo Rieber, Susan Orbom, Marian Rose, Isaac Donaldson, Nancy Jensen, and PHS exchange students: Anna Seedorf of Germany and Chiara Scuteri of Italy.

At the risk of sounding trite, it does take a community to make such events not only possible, but provides a great way to bring the community together for a common cause. Again, our gratitude to all.

Don't abandon downtown

Voters, please vote no on the $20,000,000 library bond measure this May. Yes, we need a new library, but not in John Topits Park.

Hello, this is an open letter to the Coos Bay mayor, manager, council members and all the library trustees. As a resident of Coos Bay, I urge you to seriously reconsider the idea of building a new library at taxpayers' expense in John Topits Park. Destroying acres of this beautiful forested park does a terrible disservice to the citizens you are elected to serve. Moving a popular public resource to a remote and inaccessible location, far away from downtown Coos Bay, and even further from Eastside, is very inconsiderate of the needs of your constituents.

Abandoning downtown sends the wrong message to potential new business and development. Please rethink this entire proposal. There are many parcels, abandoned storefronts and vacant land that would benefit from this investment of public funds. Let's tear down these eyesores and build a wonderful new library where everyone can see it.

Why do you want to clear cut and bulldoze our park land!? Here's an idea. To best serve everyone from Charleston to Eastside, have two branches for our new library. One near downtown Coos Bay and one in Empire. Think about it.

Paul Poresky Coos Bay

Coos Bay needs a new library

I am a bookie. I love books. I live in Coos Bay, and at least once a week, the Coos Bay Public Library draws me through its doors.

The other day, I went to my on-line library account, clicked on my checkout history, and discovered that since 2010 I have checked out 1,515 items from the library: DVDs, audio books, a few music CDs, but mostly books. Books that I have read.

I consulted the Library Use Calculator on the library website and learned that those items would have cost me approximately $37, 872. I could not afford to purchase those items, and my house is too small to store them. Borrowing books from the library enables me to read as many books as I like and saves money and storage space.

Over the years, I found that the library offers much more than books, including CDs, DVDs, games, puzzles, meeting space for groups, craft takeout, Spanglish, computer use, author events, and more, activities for adults, teens, tweens, and younger children.

The library is part of the Coos County Coastline Library Network letting me access items from all the public libraries in Coos and Curry County. The interlibrary loan service gives me access to materials from libraries across Oregon and is free

How fortunate we are to have all of these resources available to us.

Now the Coos Bay Public Library needs our help. The building is showing its age, deteriorating at a rapid rate. Before long it will be unusable.

We, the people of Coos Bay, are called upon to save and preserve this wonderful resource for ourselves and future generations. The city council has chosen a beautiful site in John Topits Park, and architects have proposed a breathtaking library plan. You can view this at the Coos Bay Library website homepage by clicking on "See what our new library could be."

A public library is a concrete expression of a community's belief in the strength of a dynamic, informed, forward-looking public. Coos Bay deserves a library that reflects our pride in ourselves and our community.

Carol Sanders Coos Bay

Library needs to be downtown

Crystal Shoji is a professional land use planner and she knows whereof she speaks (Re: her letter to the editor April 15). She is opposed to the proposed relocation of the city Library and says that she cannot support its funding. I heartily agree, although I live 18 miles from town and have no vote in the matter. But the proposed move of the library to someplace three miles from the city center looks pretty stupid to an outsider like me. The SWOCC Library is already out there. The last thing that area needs is another one.

I have used the current Coos Bay City Library ever since it was built. I did much of my research there for five books of local history and as many journal articles. I have frequently arrived at the library in the morning and a dozen or more people are waiting for it to open. At closing time 15 or 20 people will be seen leaving. I don't know how many people come and go through the day, but it is a very well used and excellent facility where it stands.

It needs to be in downtown and I urge the citizens of Coos Bay to vote no on the $30 million boondoggle that is proposed. Those of us from out of town who rely on the library will be grateful to you.

A Word, Please: Indefinite articles

By June Casagrande

A while back, when office work was still a thing and I was surrounded by people called "colleagues," I wrote a sentence on a piece of paper then walked to several co-workers' desks. "Would you read this aloud?" I asked, then I held up the paper marked with the words "the 1,100-square-foot property is for sale."

They looked at me like I had a hidden agenda, which I did. But they indulged me anyway.

"The one thousand, one hundred square foot property," some said. "The eleven hundred square foot property," others said.

I had asked because I was editing an article with a similar, though not identical sentence. Instead of the definite article "the" in front of the number, the piece I was editing had an indefinite article, and I wanted to know whether it should be "a" or "an."

English has just two indefinite articles and the choice between them is usually easy. "A" precedes a consonant sound: a cat, a truck, a man. "An" precedes a vowel sound: an idea, an octopus, an intelligent octopus.

Usually, a word starts with a vowel sound because it starts with a vowel — an umpire —or it starts with a consonant sound because it starts with a consonant — a referee. But not always. The word "university," for example, starts with a consonant sound: Y. That's why you say "a university" and not "an university."

Even in these cases, "a" and "an" are easy for native English speakers.

Sometimes an indefinite article that comes naturally when you're speaking can make you second-guess yourself when you're writing. For example, some struggle with the question of which article to use before an abbreviation like "FBI." F is a consonant and it stands for a word that begins with a consonant sound, "federal." But when you say the letter F, you start with a vowel sound: "eff." That's why when you're speaking, you say "an FBI agent" and not "a FBI agent."

Whether speaking or writing, the rule is based on pronunciation. So you'd write "an FBI agent."

People disagree on how to handle "historic." But there's no wrong answer. If you treat the H as silent or nearly silent, you can use "an historic." People who prefer this method point out that, because "historic" puts the stress on its second syllable,

"stor," the first syllable is all but lost without "an" in front of it. People who pronounce the H use "a historic."

The Associated Press Stylebook, which I follow in my editing work, says it's "a historic." So that's how I do it. The guide for book and magazine publishers, the Chicago Manual of Style, is less rigid: "The word 'historical' and its variations cause missteps, but if the H in these words is pronounced, it takes an A (an hourlong walk at a historical society)."

Not interested in what the style guides say? You can take your cue from a dictionary.

Merriam-Webster says "historic" is pronounced with an audible H. You can hear it spoken aloud by pressing the little speaker button next to the word in its online dictionary entry.

My favorite a/an conundrum has also made the rounds to co-workers' desks on a piece of paper. I asked colleagues to read the sentence "Look for a hotel with a high rating from AAA." Most didn't say "a, a, a." They said "triple a." And because the rule about indefinite articles is based on pronunciation, not spelling, you'd write "a AAA-rated hotel." and not "an AAA-rated hotel."

I was curious how the automobile club did it, so I checked the California AAA website. There, down at the bottom, are the words "Become a AAA Approved Auto Repair facility." So they pronounce it with T, too.

Shirley Eunice Collver

November 26, 1932 - April 17, 2022

Shirley Eunice Collver was born on Saturday, November 26, 1932, in Tampa, Florida. She was the 13th and last child of Simeon and Ella Tilley. She attended Ballast Point Baptist Church and went forward to accept the Lord Jesus as her Savior when she was about 13 years old.

When she was 17 years old, she came to Oregon with her family for a season and attended Marshfield High School while here. There she met Donna Collver, and they became friends. Donna offered to have her brother, Linford, take them to the movies since he had a car. Linford fell head over heels for Shirley that first night. Soon they were engaged and were married on November 26, 1950, at Shirley's home in Tampa.

After they were married, they started building a home and a family in Eastside, Oregon. She was the loving mother of two boys, Daniel Everett (1952) and Gregory Lyle (1954); and one daughter, Cynthia Lynn (Lathrom-Heisen) (1956). She had twelve grandchildren whom she loved deeply, six boys and six girls; six born in Coos Bay, and six in Grants Pass, Oregon. She also had eighteen great grandchildren, nine boys and nine girls; and two step great granddaughters.

Her children remember her as a typical mom of the fifties and sixties, a housewife and mother, always loving and caring for her friends and family. We were blessed to always have her home for us while we grew up.

Shirley was a prolific letter writer. She would always observe who was missing at church and pick up extra bulletins to send to them along with a note. She enjoyed Gospel music and the preaching of men like Charles Stanley and David Jeremiah. Shirley went to be with the Lord on Easter Sunday, April 17, 2022.

Volunteers clean up around Coos Bay, North Bend

The American Legion Bay Area Post 34, Coos Bay Elks 1160, American Legion Auxiliary Unit 34, Voiture 316 of the 40/8 and the Boy Scouts of Troop 156 chose April 15 and 16 to celebrate Earth Day by cleaning up the community.

The endeavor was put into reality and with the help of Coos Bay and North Bend, the volunteers cleaned up various streets, including parking lots and planters. The desire to have a clean community was behind this project.

Organizers said they have noticed, as many have, lots of trash being left around the communities and with budget issues both cities are experiencing, which includes staffing to pick up trash, they felt it was time for their organizations to step up and help.

They hope to make this an annual event, but sad if it's necessary, they will come together and clean up whenever needed.

Those who participated said they are proud of their cities and want th cleanliness of the community to be what visitors notice, not the trash.

DEAR ABBY By Abigail Van Buren

FRIENDSHIP DERAILED OVER PANDEMIC-ERA PREFERENCES

DEAR ABBY: A dear friend of many years is currently not speaking to me. She recently moved from California to Denver and had invited me to visit. We agreed on the dates, and I took time off work and booked the flights. Less than two weeks before my arrival, she abruptly canceled the visit, expressing no regrets or concern for whether I would be able to get a refund from the airline.

She indicated that because I was not comfortable with the recently lifted mask mandates and other COVID precautions in her state and prefer to continue to avoid indoor dining, bars, etc., that she wanted to "postpone for a few months," when we might be able to enjoy more activities. When I expressed hurt feelings at being disinvited, she became angry and ceased communication. Is this friendship over? How should I proceed? -- RISK-AVERSE IN THE DEAR RISK-AVERSE: I am not sure why your friend became angry and canceled your visit, unless she had planned activities that would take place in restaurants, theaters, etc. I am also puzzled that she should end a friendship of many years over it. Because this is recent, give her a little more time to cool off. Then extend an olive branch and see if she has put this unfortunate episode in perspective.

DEAR ABBY: I have a former colleague whose company I enjoyed while I was working with him. He thought highly of my work ethic, and we worked well together. Because of this, he has asked me to be a professional reference for him sporadically over the years, which I always happily agreed to. The problem is we haven't worked together in six years. Because it has been so long, I no longer feel as though I'm a good reference for him. I also worry that recruiters will wonder why I was chosen after all this time. He reaches out to me only for reference requests, so it's not as though I'm damaging a long-term friendship, but I still care about him and his feelings. How can I politely decline his future requests? -- RELUC-TANT REFERENCE

DEAR RELUCTANT: In recent years, the amount of information that can be shared about former employees and colleagues is quite restricted. I believe it's limited to the dates you worked together. However, because you no longer wish to be a reference, you will have to bite the bullet and be honest about your feelings and the reason why

DEAR ABBY: The wife of a married couple my wife and I are friends with revealed a few years ago that before she met her husband, she had an affair that produced a child she immediately placed for adoption. This was 40 years ago. It surprised us all, including her husband. I believe she should have told her husband before they married. My wife says because it was before she met him, it was none of his business. Well, now it is his business because, through DNA ancestry sites, this "child" is now in his life, which has become an embarrassment for him. What do you think? -- HIS BUSINESS IN THE EAST

DEAR HIS BUSINESS: I think you should mind your own beeswax and stay resolutely OUT of his family business!

Artists' Statement from Jardin Kazaar:

"When I was an adolescent growing up in South Bronx NYC, my entire world was contained within 4 square blocks. That was a time when Jim Crow segregation was the norm and things seemed as they should be. Back then my parents were strict, but supportive and knew that education was as important as the ability to run fast. If I had showed interest in something, they made sure that I had all the resources to master it.

"By the time I was 10 years old and going in to the 5th grade, 'BUSSING' came to my South Bronx world and many of us kids were compelled to integrate and attend schools that were well outside of our ethnic, socio economic demographic. It was in that environment that my world exploded and re-appeared new, foreign with alien images and realities. This was my renaissance period. Going on to the 6th grade, I learned cartography, classical music, geography, art and lots of different foods. I believe that things learned as a child do certainly affect what we become psychologically, emotionally, intellectually, socially and economically. I learned from my father that we choose that which is important to us. I learned that I could expand my world beyond 4 blocks in South Bronx.

'All grown up, art, music, travel, jazz music and food tripped my light fantastic. And I knew that I had to possess a working knowledge of whatever life threw at me.

'My 1st applied interest in art started when I was at Chaffey College in California. I was a journalism major and needed to support myself. I was able to find a job as the 'Assistant' director of the Rex Wignall Art Museum on the college campus. That title meant that I was the 'gopher,' the runner. I painted the walls, installed all types of exhibits and wrote press releases.

"My major was journalism, but I was passively learning about art, all mediums, including textiles, 2 dimensional, graphic, sculpture and others. I switched my major to nursing and it was during this transition that I thought my right brain function had died. So, I took classes offered at the art museum. I was immediately drawn to pastels because of the texture and possibilities with shading and light.

"Over the years, I have experimented a lot with other mediums such as alcohol ink, glass, printing and etching, resins and acrylics. And often I find ways to make them play together. Those that collect my work appreciate that I don't stand on formality if something else can be created. Fascinated by 'Rakgaki,' a form of Asian graffiti, I make stencils and paint in reverse on glass. Keeps my right brain awake.'

(Jardin is an innovative percussionist and music producer, who mixes modern genres and styles to create danceable and easy listening grooves.)

Artist and businessman Jardin Kazaar will be in person for a reception honoring the opening of the quarterly art show at Southern Coos Hospital and Health Center.

AS I SEE IT: Prosper Homestead on the Coquille River

BY MARY SCHAMEHORN

The first picture I am sharing tells a very different story about the community of Prosper, which was a thriving town over 100 years ago as evidenced by a story in the Dec. 16, 1915. Western World.

"Prosper, on the Coquille River two miles and one-half above Bandon, is one of the busiest towns in the lower valley. Unlike the majority of the river towns, it derives little support from the surrounding farm lands and depends almost entirely for support upon the lumber mills, a shingle mill and two salmon canneries located there. The population is about 400. "Each year 50,000,000 feet of lumber is loaded on vessels at the wharves of the two Prosper mills, while 5,000,000 shingles and 20,000 cases of salmon critical condition, and fill out the cargoes of these ships. Supplying logs for the mills is another occupation which many of the residents follow. Connected with Bandon by jitney lines maintaining hourly service, most of the town's marketing and shipping is done in that city. "The mills, docks and other industrial plants are located on a long, narrow strip of land between a high bluff and the river. On top of the bluff are several pretty homes and the attractive $10,000 grade and high school building. Modern in every particular, Prosper's school building would be a credit to any community and very few districts are getting more for their money in the way of results, than are these people."

The second picture is a street scene of Prosper taken in 1913. Today there are still a number of homes along the river.

I've always wondered about this third picture, of the Racket Store, as although it looked like they must have sold clothing, I wasn't sure until I came across an ad in the Christmas section of the 1916 Western World. This picture was taken a few years earlier, as it appears they are advertising the 1913

White Cedar Festival. The ad read: "The Old Reliable Racket Store is the Only Place to Buy Your Christmas Presents. Our large assortment of TOYS including Dressed Kid body and the latest Unbreakable Dolls, Games, Books, Xmas Cards, Sewing Sets, Erectors, Electric Motors, Balls, Tops, Marbles and other things too numerous to mention, now on display. Our Hand Painted China is worthy of your consideration. Our Notion Department is extensive. Also a complete line of Groceries, Graniteware, Earthenware and Glassware at bedrock prices. Courteous treatment guaranteed. We solicit your patronage and will strive to please you. D. W. Carpenter, Manager."

In spite of the racks of clothing that can be seen through the window, there is no mention of it being a clothing store.

To the right, under the Racket Store sign, you can see the door to the Emergency Hospital. While going through my hundreds of pages of history stuff, I found some information about the Emergency hospital in the spring of 1919. An ad in the March 20 issue reads: "For Sale. Emergency Hospital, Bandon, fully equipped, seven patient rooms, operating room, kitchen, etc. A Good opening. $500 will take it. Want to sell before April 1. Address: K.E. McKenzie, Bandon, Ore."

The Racket Store was in the Oaks Building, on the corner of Alabama and Wall streets, in the area where Devon's Boutique is now located.

In those days, Wall Street ran east and west in front of the old Bank building (now Masonic building), which housed Western World, and ran below the hill over to Oregon Avenue and First Street.

A 29-year-old Langlois man, Kyle Lawrence, was life-flighted to OHSU in Portland last Monday morning after a pickup truck he was driving skidded on a hail-slickened Highway 101 near West Coast Game Park and struck a logging truck. The Jaws of Life were need to free Lawrence from the vehicle.

His three-year-old daughter Ella was in the back seat and was not iniured.

Kyle is married to Megan Lawrence, who formerly worked as a planner for the City of Bandon. He is the son of Jackie Lawrence of Bandon, and works for the Port of Bandon.

Kyle was listed in five days later was moved off the ICU floor, and "continues to make a little progress in the right direction each day, but its unclear how long we will be in Portland at this point," his wife posted on Facebook Saturday.

"Kyle has started physical therapy, but requires a lot of assistance and has a long way to go before we can think about going home and getting back to normal life. Being apart from our daughter is difficult for both of us," she said.

Thirteen years ago, while a senior at Bandon High School and a member of the Pacific High School soccer team, Kyle almost lost his life when he was struck by a vehicle on the highway in front of the Port Orford-area school. Kyle, who along with his brother Cody were both Eagle Scouts, was in a coma for several months as he recovered from his injuries, with his mother at his bedside.

Facebook has erupted with an outpouring of love and support for Kyle and Megan as they continue together on his journey of healing.

Pictures have been posted on Facebook of a smiling Hannah Gibson. 28, a Bandon native, who just completed 165 days of cancer treatment at Advent Infusion Center in Florida, where she has been living and working. Her mother, LeeAnn Remy McCradic, Director of Community Relations at Bandon Dunes, has been with her during the journey. She is the granddaughter of Ann Remy and the late Dr. Del Remy, and the daughter of Brian Gibson.

The post shows Hannah ringing the bell in celebration of her last chemo treatment...a celebration that was joined by a crowd of nurses and caregivers at the cancer center.

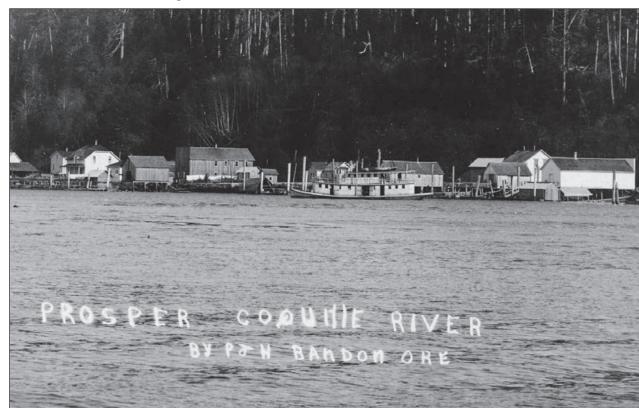

I had not heard about this until I read it on Facebook, but in mid-March, a man climbed over the fence into the back yard of a home at Fourth and Garfield and broke into the home through the sliding glass door shortly after 1:30 in the morning.

The homeowners Jennifer Myrick Young and her partner Bob Vile had heard a noise and checked out the house and their vehicles when they heard the sound of the sliding glass door breaking. Bob started to the back of the house and yelled "who are you?" Jennifer said she heard scuffling as she was trying to dial 9-1-1 for help, frightened for the safety of her partner, who is 70 years old. The man came at Bob, so he hit him twice in the head with the flashlight, and held him until police got there, she said.

The couple had high praise for the actions of the Bandon Police Department who arrived immediately on the scene and arrested a 30-year-old

Tigard man, Henry Jordan Wiidanen.

The man has not yet gone to court, but a check of the jail log shows that he is not in the Coos County Jail. He was charged with one count of criminal trespass in the first degree and criminal mischief in the second degree, both misdemeanors.

Jennifer said originally he was charged with trespass and breaking and entry, but apparently the DA reduced the charges to trespass and criminal mischief.

A check of his background indicates that this is not his first brush with the law as he had twice been charged with possession of cocaine, twice cited for oxycodone use. as well as second degree forgery, possession of a forged instrument and third degree theft.

This is the second incident in the last 30 days involving forced entry into a Bandon area home, with the other involving the use of a weapon.

Governor Kate Brown was in Bandon Friday visiting the Bandon State Fish Hatchery in a trip hosted by the Coquille Indian Tribe.

In Bandon, the governor "learned about the tribe's salmon restoration partnership with ODFW, and heard about Oregon's increasingly rundown hatchery system, particularly the aging Bandon Hatchery at Ferry Creek," said a press release from the Tribe.

"It was a wakeup call ... like this place needs to be upgraded fast," the governor is quoted as saying.

Coquille Tribal Chairman Brenda Meade, who accompanied the governor along with Tribal executive Mark Johnston of Bandon, said her tribe and others want to help state and local authorities when resources for such projects are scarce. The Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission is now considering a proposal from the tribe for co-management of the Coquille River watershed.

While in Bandon, the Governor and her entourage spent about 45 minutes visiting the Bandon waterfront, including time with Chamber president and Farm & Sea owner Lori Osborne.

People are reminded that the Southern Coos Hospital & Health Center is hosting an in-person reception for its new Art Show "Music of Life," featuring artist Jardin Kazaar of Coos Bay, who owns Black Market Gourmet, from 1 to 3 Sunday, April 24. Masks are required.

The annual Bandon Chamber dinner and election of officers was held last week at the Bandon Community Center, with the dinner catered by Wilson's market, Edgewaters, Farm & Sea, Coastal Mist and others. Speakers were Travel Southern Oregon Coast Executive Director Julie Miller, City Manager Dan Chandler, Bandon Dunes General Manager Don Crowe, Marie Simonds of Wild Rivers Coast Alliance, Mark Johnston of the Coquille Indian Tribe and Reg Pullen, chairman of the Port of Bandon. Chamber president Lori Osborne and the slate of officers were re-elected, and chamber executive Margaret Pounder was given a standing ovation for her work on behalf of the chamber and Bandon businesses.

NB gymnast caps career at regional meet this week

BY JOHN GUNTHER

For The World

Over the years, the Gymnastics Plus program has attracted a lot of young girls, many who begin learning skills before they become students in elementary school.

Few stick with the program, which is part of the Boys & Girls Club of Southwestern Oregon, into high school.

Aliyah White is one of those. The North Bend High School senior finishes her career with Gymnastics Plus this week when she competes in the Pacific Northwest Regional Championships in Vancouver, Wash.

During a break in one of her final workouts at the club last week, she said she is excited to do something new after spending hours and hours every week in the gym.

"I'm also sad," she said. "I know when I quit, I'm going to want to come back."

Gymnastics has been a big part of Aliyah's life since she started at the club as a 3-year-old. For the past several years, she's usually been in the gym five nights a week, for 2 ½ hours a night.

"My life is this and studying," she said. She enters the regional event on a roll, after placing a career-best fifth in the all-around for the Level 8 senior division at the Optional State Championships last month. Her division included 15 girls from 10 different gyms around the state. She also finished third on the uneven Gymnastics Plus head coach Roy Lans, who has worked with Aliyah for nearly 15 years, said the high state finish was the result of dedication.

"We have very few that are that committed," he said. "Senior year is hard by itself, let alone competing at a high level.

"She's competed at a high level all year. She's been our most consistent performer — rock solid."

Lans has enjoyed watching Aliyah grow

"She's been here since she was 3," he said. "She's part of the family."

It hasn't always been easy.

Lans remembers when Aliyah was first learning skills on the balance beam, which is 4 inches wide and 4 feet off the floor.

"When she was little, she would just shake on it," he said. "Now it's her favorite event.'

Aliyah has done well on all the events this year. She was ninth or better at state on each of the four implements — the beam, vault, bars and floor exercise.

"You have to be driven," Lans said of the commitment. "If you're not, it's difficult to do at a high level. That's true in any sport."

For Aliyah, it's always been gymnastics. "When I was young, Mom made me choose between dance and gymnastics," she said.

She stayed with it.

"It's been awesome (to watch)," said Amy White, Aliyah's mother. "She impressed me. She stuck it out."

Aliyah has had gymnasts to work with along the way, including fellow Level 8 competitors Ali Kirby and Kianna Thomas. But most of the girls leave before they get to their senior year.

"Her goal was to finish as a senior," Amy said. "Most kids drop out because of injuries or they do other sports.

'She never wanted to do other sports." Aliyah said her love for gymnastics drove her to stay involved.

Her favorite part has been learning new skills along the way.

"It feels really good," she said of the first time she accomplishes a new move.

She originally had a goal of reaching Level 10, the top level with the most difficult skills. That dream was sidelined when the COVID-19 pandemic hit and Gymnastics Plus had to close the gym for four months. Her mom said up to that point she'd never been out of the gym for more than a week.

When the gym reopened she got to the point where she was learning the skills required for Level 9, but after the time she lost she opted to stay at Level 8 and work on perfecting the various aspects of her routines for each implement.

The reward was the strong finish at the state meet and a second straight trip to the regional meet, where she will compete against the best girls from Oregon, Washington, Alaska, Hawaii, Idaho and Montana.

Last year, she went to Montana with Ali and Kianna.

"I think I had more fun at regionals than any other meet," she said. "It's really cool. They have really big skills."

She was the only Gymnastics Plus athlete to qualify for regionals this year. Ali didn't quite score well enough at the state meet in the Level 8 junior division and Kianna wasn't able to compete due to Aliyah is happy she was able to qualify for one more meet.

"I'm glad I did," she said. "If I didn't, I would probably be a little disappointed." Her goal this week?

"I just want to have fun," she said. Aliyah's favorite event is the beam.

"I fell it's the one thing I can stay consistent on," she said. "I like the skills I do on it."

For better or worse, she generally has her best results on the floor exercise.

"I think floor is my best event," she said. "I score best on it. I want beam to be."

Her coaches and mom hope she has a good experience in Vancouver.

"I'm proud of her for sticking it out," Amy White said. "She'll have no regrets." Aliyah's mom also is excited about her future.

"She's been here so long, I think she's ready to move on," Amy said.

Aliyah turns 18 in May.

After graduation, she hopes to go to cosmetology school. She's always loved the art of painting her nails and doing makeup and wants to turn that passion into a career.

"I'm really excited to finally move on to another chapter," she said.

Gymnastics Plus athletes shine in meets

A number of girls from Gymnastics Plus had high finishes in the team's home meet earlier this year and at other recent events around the state.

Gymnastics Plus is part of the Boys & Girls Club of Southwestern Oregon and had more than 25 girls compete in the Tumble By the Bay meet in February.

In Level 3 Group A, Henley Reeves, Ava Skeen and Kaiyan Carter had the top three spots in the all-around and all three won at least one of the four events the vault, uneven parallel bars, balance beam and floor exercise.

In Level 3 Group B, Lyla Davidson won the all-around, with Palyn Miller second. They each won two of the events and Lilly Stuhlmiller had a third-place finish.

In level 3 Group C, Elsa Villers and Sarah Daboling each won an event and Daboling was second in the all-around. In Level 4 Group B, Iona Speidel won two events and was second in the all-around and Ailey

In Level 4 Group C, Kayleigh Sampson won two events and the all-around and Olivia Washburn also won an event.

Barich was second in two events.

Shannon Young won three events and the all-around in Level 5 and Annabelle VanHoof and Ava Gauthier were the only entrants and had high scores in Level 6 and Level 7, respectably.

Aliyah White won the allaround for Level 8 and Ali Kirby won three of the four events, with Kianna Thomas also posting good marks and finishing second in two events and the all-around.

Several team members also competed in the Emerald Team Challenge, with Speidel and Young winning events and Sampson and Barich posting at least one top-three finish against larger fields of gymnasts.

Reeves, Carter, Davidson and Speidel also won events in the Adventure with AE meet.

Results for those various competitions are included below.

Pirates pick up baseball and softball wins

Marshfield's softball and baseball teams beat the weather Tuesday to get Sky-Em League wins over Elmira, one in Coos Bay and one at Elmira

The softball team was able to use the turf field at Southwestern Oregon Community College for the second time and beat the Falcons 14-10, overcoming a 7-4 deficit.

The Pirates got a good start with four runs in the first inning, but that lead didn't last, with the Falcons scoring seven runs in the second, with help from Marshfield's defense.

"The girls did a good job of coming out early and scoring some runs," Marshfield coach Chelsea Burns said. "Unfortunately, we let them back in it miscues defensively.

in the second inning on some "The one thing I have noticed about this team is they just don't seem to give up. That's really all we coaches can ask of them." Marshfield's bats came alive, with every player in the lineup having at least one hit or one run. Tatum Montiel put the Pirates in front again with a three-run home run in the fourth inning and also had a double and single, three runs and four RBIs. Alaina Sullivan had three hits and two RBIs and Gracie Peach had two hits, three runs and three RBIs. Makenna Johnson, Paige

Reigard and Paige Macduff all had two runs and Faith Hite had "Tatum pitched a solid game even when the strike zone was a little difficult to solidify," Burns said. "That can be frustrating for a young pitcher, but she is the type of competitor that doesn't make excuses and continues to work. "Peach did a great job behind the plate as well and Makenna took advantage of the opportunity to play second (base) by hustling to make some great plays. They all work well together." The Pirates improved to 2-2 heading into a big home doubleheader Friday against Junction City, which is 3-0 in league play. BASEBALL Marshfield's baseball team, meanwhile, had its best offensive performance of the year in a 19-5 win at Elmira. Dom Montiel had four hits, including a double, and drove in seven runs while scoring two. Every player had at least one hit and scored at least one run.

"Luke Parry and Joe Herbert hit well and Gannon Frost had his first varsity hit," Marshfield coach Floyd Montiel said, adding that both Parry and Drake Rogers did well on the mound for the Pirates. "It was a great bounce-back win after Marist," Floyd Mon-tiel said, recalling a double-league-leading Marist Catholic on Friday. Parry had two hits and three header sweep at the hands of RBIs and Frost drove in two runs. Cobin Bouska had a triple and scored twice, Rogers had two hits and three runs, Ryder Easton also scored three times and Herbert, Wyatt Peck and Max James each scored twice. Riley Murphy had a hit, a run and a sacrifice bunt.

Marshfield improved to 2-2 heading into Friday's home twin bill against Junction City, which is 2-0 in league play.

"I'm glad we got it in as most of the state was unplayable,"

Floyd Montiel said. REEDSPORT WINS: Reedsport's baseball team won at Toledo 12-7 to improve to 3-2 in the Sunset Conference. The Boomers fell to 3-3. The rest of the league's schedule was postponed.

Toledo won the softball game 15-0 to keep its league record perfect at 6-0. Reedsport fell to 2-3. TRACK & FIELD PIRATES COMPETE: Jonathon Parks won three events for Marshfield in a Sky-Em League meet at Junction City that also included Marist Catholic, Cottage Grove and Elmira on Tuesday.

Parks had new bests while sprinting to wins in the 100 (11.96 seconds) and 200 (23.74) and also won the long jump (19 feet, 8 inches).

Trent Summers won the pole vault 14-0 with Danner Wilson second (13-6) and Wilson won the triple jump (39-6).

Alie Clarke won the triple jump (29-5) and was second in the long jump $(14-8 \frac{3}{4})$ for Marshfield's girls. Keira Crawford won the high jump (4-8) and Kate Miles was second in the javelin (90-1).

Bella is super sweet, very friendly, and loves everyone. She is great with other dogs and we really think she should go to a home with another dog, because she loves to play! She's a "tank" - so hopefully you have a fairly big dog. The foster owners said she prefers stuffies to chew toys.

Judan and his brother Juno came to one of our foster moms without their own mom. A mom cat with one kitten helped take care of them. Since there is not enough time to socialize, they are not lap cats. In a patient home, with one on one, they would tame up quickly once they know humans are okay.

Threats to pets that roam outdoors

Domesticated pets may have evolved from wild animals, but it has been some time since dogs were needed to hunt like wolves or domesticated cats had to survive like wild leopards or tigers. While pets can enjoy time outdoors, it's important to avoid leaving them to their own devices for too long.

The following is a list of potential dangers that can affect pets outdoors.

- Pesticides and poisons: Pet owners may use petfriendly products in and around their homes. However, there's no guarantee that your neighbors do the same. Common lawn and garden products, including insecticides and pesticides, may cause anything from mild irritations to toxic poisoning.
- Weather: A fur coat does not offer complete protection from conditions like extreme weather. Pets can experience hypothermia or heat stroke if they are exposed to extreme weather for prolonged periods of
- Automobiles: Dogs and cats that wander can be struck by vehicles and/or ingest potentially harmful substances leaking from cars or trucks. Automotive coolant (antifreeze) is often sweet and brightly colored, which attracts curious pets. Ethylene glycol in coolant is fatal to dogs and cats if ingested. Outdoor cats may hide or seek warmth in car engines, putting them at risk
- Exposure to illnesses: Young animals should not
- spend prolonged periods of time outdoors before they are vaccinated. However, the American Veterinary Society of Animal Behavior recommends that pet parents begin taking puppies on walks and public outings as early as one week after their initial rounds of vaccinations (roughly seven weeks old) because this is the window of time when socialization skills are learned.
- Parasites: Bugs and parasites may be lurking outdoors. Parasitic worm larvae, fleas, mosquitoes, and ticks can be harmful to pets. Ask your vet about yearround flea/tick/heartworm preventatives if a pet spends time outdoors.
- Other animals: Wild animals pose a risk to domesticated pets. They can pass illnesses on to pets or engage them in scuffles that result in injuries or even death. If companion animals are not spayed or neutered, pet owners may have to confront unexpected pregnancies after pets spend time outdoors.

Pets that spend time outdoors should be supervised whenever they leave the confines of their homes.

Late on April 14, police arrested a 13-year-old boy who is a student in Reedsport Community Charter School in relation to the threats. The juvenile was sent to the Douglas County Juvenile Detention Center on multiple charge.

The police said after the arrest, they are "certain" the threats have been resolved, but they are continuing to investigate. After a trying week, the involved parents, the Reedsport School District, especially Superintendent Zwemke, and the Reedsport community for the information provided, as well as for the patience, cooperation, support and partnership demonstrated the investigation. The case involved social media platforms and was very time consuming and challenging. School Resource Officer

Josh Tipton led the investigation and Corporal Brent Snyder supervised the case. Officers Michael Snyder and Jim Wood were also involved in the multi-day investigation.

"In this era, it takes regionalization and partnerships to conduct and resolve investigations involving threats of violence against our schools," a press release stated. "The Reedsport Police Department would like to also thank the city of Florence Police Department, the city of North Bend Police Department, the city of Roseburg Police Department, the Safe Oregon Tip Line, the Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives and the Federal Bureau of Investigation for assisting and supporting this investigation. Chamber banquet celebrates excellence in 2021

Jamar Ruff named citizen of the year, Epuerto chosen as top business

BY TIMM SLATER

Guest Article

All enjoyed a great evening this past Saturday at the Bay Area Chamber of Commerce Awards Banquet—A Rising Tide Lifts All Boats. Wonderful food, entertainment featuring our friends at LTOB and David Aakre, and a variety of awards and recognitions truly made this a community celebration.

Citizen of the year is an honor given to a member of our community who, by consistently giving of their time, energy and resources, has made Oregon's Bay Area a better place to live. For 2021, that award was given to Jamar Ruff. Jamar is the definition of community service. He is involved in many organizations serving a variety of local needs. He serves as a homeless advocate, a networker and community connector, a youth mentor and so much more. Jamar was the facilitator for a partnership with the Coos Bay Library to host a cooking class that not only provides great cooking recipes where people learned cooking tips, but also made a connection to community in a time when people are experiencing a lot of isolation. If there is an community event you can count on Jamar

The Business of the Year award is given to a business that has exhibited excellence in products and customer service; contributed time, manpower and resources to community improvement projects; and excelled in employee relations and training. This year's recipient has an international team which develops cyberspace use to effectively meets the needs of business, organizations and independent operations. Beyond business, they have a strong dedication to community aiding non-profits in their effective online communications. Also they have a strong commitment to the area's youth, starting a wide variety of sports programs and constructing facilities for them. The 2021 award went to Epuerto, honoring their excellence in business and strong commitment to the community and its youth.

Chamber Member of the Year is given to that member, who through their efforts, has carried us to a new level of community service and impact.

In 2021 we recognized Brandy Thompson. Brandy has served in many roles within the chamber operations. Her most outstanding achievements and long-term dedication for many years has been to the Chamber's premier program Leadership Coos. While Brandy has served as chair from 2020 to present, she met the COVID challenge with outside the box thinking, focused enthusiasm and an unwillingness to accept anything but success. The result has been another seamless excellent Leadership Coos class.

Coos Health & Wellness was given the 2021 Community Award to honor their work in the forefront of our area's response to the pandemic over the last two

They provided solid and continuous information to us on every aspect of the COVID issue. They freely gave resources of masks, test kits, thermometers and more, to anyone who needed them. Most importantly was their calm and steady demeanor to steer us with confidence to steer us with confidence though this troubling pandemic. The President's Award is, most often, given to that individual who provided outstanding support to the President in making their year successful. For 2021 it was awarded to Amy Bailey and the Mill Casino Hotel. Amy was the spark plug behind ensuring events like the Mother's Day celebration, golf tournament and more came off successfully. Additionally, Kevin Bogatin, North Bend Superintendent of Schools, was recognized as Educator of

CREATE Center helps Hansel and Gretel delight audience

Times were tough for modern-day Hank (Harlan Morse) and Gretchen (Valorie Lambson), 'til they found themselves deep in the wondrous Wildwood world of Hansel and Gretel. The Missoula Children's Theatre presented an original musical adaptation of the Brothers' Grimm age-old tale of a journey, a secret and a grand adventure.

The CREATE Center arranged to bring to Coquille, two international tour directors who came in a red truck with the entire set, costumes, scripts and props for this production.

The synopsis: Poor Hank (Harlan Morse) and Gretchen (Valorie Lambson). All of their friends (Presley Bundy, Michelle Isley, Micah Lambson, Kiersten Fleshman, Jordan King, Rebekah Delyria, Gracie Gray, Ayana Mace and Estelle Greer), went off to summer camp and had left them behind.

While waiting for dinner, Hank and Gretchen fell asleep and dreamed their way to times gone by.

They woke with a start. Their clothes were so strange – and so were their names. Lost in the deep dark woods, Granny (Madison Pylant) led Hansel and Gretel on a search for the path which would lead them to better times at home.

But as evening approached and the moon rose above the trees, Hansel and Gretel were not

The Rascals (Olivia Shorb, Zach Pedrick, Toby Singer, Devlin Singer, Sam Lamson) darted from tree to tree as sweet little Wallybirds (Everly Bundy, Scarlett Schaffer, Harper Starks and Ruthie Scott) innocently munched on the cookie crumbs left as a map on the forest floor. Crafty cooks and Gingerbread Men (Bailey Gill, Brooklin Butt, Faith Delyria, Elianah Watts, Brylee Butts, Elizabeth Huff, Evelyn Gibbs), led the heroes to a colorful cottage concocted completely of candy and cakes, where Hansel and Gretel unravel the secret of the Wildwood Witch (Aurura Fabrizio).

Was she bad? Or was she good? Was she wicked...Or misunderstood? There was music and laughter and thrills and chills. Those who attended the Hansel and Gretel show learned the secret of the Wildwood - but, shhh - don't tell.

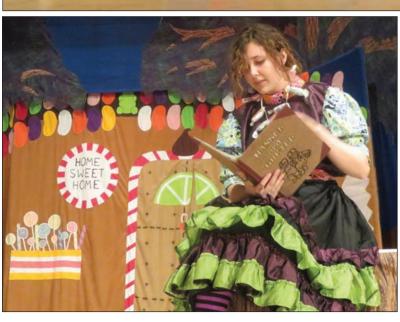

Thanks to Lara Dohner and Hayley Smith, the MCT touring directors for directing the local drama queens and kings and providing an awesome show that delighted the large audience. Thanks Sawdust Theater for your hospitality and opening your doors for this show.

Thanks Coos County Cultural Coalition for supporting this year's show. And thanks to our awesome actors and actresses who impressed the MCT touring directors.

Photos contributed by Dr. Nancy Keller Dozens of local children went on stage to perform a special production of Hansel and Gretel in a presentation by the Missoula Children's Theatre. The show capped a busy week of practice and training with two traveling directors, who were brought to Coquille by the CREATE Center. The show attracted big crowds and created many memories.

Myrtlewood exhibit opens at Coos History Museum

Visit the Coos History Museum starting April 26 for a new exhibit, Myrtlewood: Treasure of the Southern Oregon Coast. The exhibit is located in the Welcome Gallery of the museum and will be displayed through April 2023. All are welcome to view the exhibit during museum opening hours, Tuesday – Saturday from 11 a.m. - 5 p.m., included with museum admission.

The exhibit features the story of the myrtlewood

Coos County is often known for its connection to the timber industry, but the use of myrtlewood for handcrafted gifts, furniture and works of art, is what makes it unique. Not only cherished for its beauty, it was also used as a local form of currency during the Great Depression. View handcrafted myrtlewood creations and learn about the importance of this incredible tree on the Southern Oregon Coast.

As a special event, visitors are invited to attend a live woodworking demonstration by the South Coast Woodturners which will take place at the museum throughout the day on Saturday, May 7. Free handmade gifts will be available at the event while supplies last. There will also be opportunities to purchase handcrafted wooden creations during the event.

Established in 1891, The Coos County Historical Society is an Oregon 501(c)3 not for profit organization and the second oldest historical society in the state. For more information about the society and the Coos History Museum, visit cooshistory.org or email info@cooshistory.org.
