- ✓ Handling patient complaints

Communicating Care and Love

Keys to Communicating Care and Love

- Words are important as they contain the information and facts that we are wanting to communicate.
- But... our body language and tone of voice as we speak those words are even more important to effective communication.

The Way Our Messages Are Conveyed

- Words
- Tone of voice
- Body language

OSF
HEALTHCARE

Posture and Body Orientation

Standing erect and leaning forward communicates that you are approachable, receptive and friendly.

Speaking with your back turned or looking at the floor or ceiling should be avoided as it communicates disinterest.

Eye Contact and Tone of Voice

- It signals interest in others and increases the speaker's credibility.
- People who make eye contact open the flow of communication and convey interest, concern, warmth, and credibility.
- Tone of Voice accounts for 38% of what is Communicated

Managing Up

- Managing Up - creating a good impression of others before the patient or family meets them.
- Demonstrates teamwork and our confidence in the next caregiver.

*“ This is Mary, she’s a great nurse –
you are in good hands tonight!”*

- Benefits to Those We Serve

Increased patient trust and reduced anxiety.

Increased perception of teamwork and coordination of care.

Co-workers have a head start in gaining the patient’s confidence.

Builds relationships with Those We Serve

Key Points for Managing Up

- Avoid negative comments regarding processes or technology. This causes patients to lose confidence.
- Focus should always be on the patient's experience and healthcare needs.
- Remember, everything you say should be positive.

You are OSF!

Yours are the eyes patients look into when they're anxious and lonely.

Yours is the voice they hear when asking for help.

Yours are the comments people hear when you don't know they're listening.

Yours is the intelligence and caring that people expect to find at OSF Healthcare.

When You are Wonderful – so is OSF Healthcare!

Our Spirit to Serve Touches Lives... and Fulfills the OSF Mission
