“LOPEZ”

The lofty frontiers of Spain incorporate the foundations of the esteemed family name Lopez. The earliest frameworks of ancestral surnames in Spain were the patronymic surnames, which are extracted from the father's given name, and metronymic surnames, which are obtained from the mother's given name. Spanish patronymic names appeared as early as the mid-9th century. The name Lopez is composed of two elements: the given name Lope, which is itself originated from the Latin word "lopus," which means "wolf," and the Spanish patronymic suffix "-ez." The “-ez” ending in Spanish surnames is indicative of personal name origin, the meaning of the family name Lopez may be interpreted as “Son or descendant of

Our History

Marcos Alonso de la Garza y Arcon (son of Marcos Alonso and Constanza de la Garza) was born in Lepe, Huelva, Spain, and died 1635 in Nuevo Leon, Mexico. He married Juana Quintanilla Trevino, the daughter of Diego Alejo de Trevino, Capt. and Beatriz de Quintanilla 1580 in Mexico City, D. F., Mexico. The inquiry of the pedigree of our great great grandfather Jesus Lopez was begun with Marcos Alonso de la Garza y Arcon, who arrived in Ciudad de Mexico about the year 1550 and whose blood line is traced through five of his offspring through eight lines. (Captain Francisco de la Garza, Pedro de la Garza, Blas de la Garza Falcon, Alonzo de Trevino, and Juana de Trevino) to Jesus Lopez over the course of a couple of centuries.

NOTE: Francisco, Pedro de la Garza and Blas de la Garza Falcon each had two different branches that lead to Jesus Lopez. Francisco has one line through Sebastian and one through Elena. Pedro de la Garza had one line through Capt Pedro and one through his Elena. Blas de la Garza has one line through Sgt Mayor Francisco de la Garza Falcon and one branch through Lazaro de la Garza Falcon.

A Royal Connection comes to us through Juana Quintanilla Trevino, the daughter of Diego Alejo de Trevino, Capt. and Beatriz de Quintanilla. See Booklet “The Royal Connection to the Starr Connection.”

Our Ancestral Heritage

By Linda Lopez Olivarez

Having searched for our roots, going back as far as the early 1500s, I have discovered that we have a tremendously rich heritage of which we can be extremely proud. Most of our ancestors came from the different parts of Spain, Honduras, and Mexico City.

One of our earliest ancestors was Marcos Alonso de la Garza y Arcon. According to records available, he came from Lepe, a Providence of Huelva, Spain. The name de la Garza (“of the Herons”) is rare in Spain, according to Julio Atienza, in his Dictionary of Names. Garza originated in Galicia, however, the original emigrant lists his birth place as Huelva, Spain. One of the first emigrants into Mexico, he was born about 1540 and died about 1610 in Nuevo Leon, Mexico. Another ancestor, (Ramon Guerra Canamar) came from Llanes Asturias, Spain. (Juan Bautista Schiapapria - Chapa) came from Villa Albisola, Italy. Others came from Cordova, Spain, Valverde, Estremadura and Madrid. I will attempt to integrate them into the family tree as I go migrated into beginning as early they made their way Cerralvo, Mier, Camargo, Mexico. military people (the Guerras) who took colonization of with Jose de Sierra Gorda, Spain. families already northern Mexico Nuevo Leon and acquainted with the dangers. This trek was known as the conquest of the last Spanish frontier. Some of the families that arrived in Camargo, with Escandon, in 1750 were given government aid. There were those who did not need any help, but they were all instrumental in establishing Mier, Camargo, Tamaulipas, Mx., Reynosa and other border towns.

Our ancestors forged the history of South Texas through their contributions in the field of religion, government, mining, surveying, ranching and farming. We come from very good stock and have a great heritage that we can be proud of as you will see under “Historical Roots”. This part of our story begins with (1) Alonzo de la Garza y Arcon, born about 1540 in Lepe, Huelva Spain, Reino De Castilla (now Spain). He was a Spanish nobleman, native of Lepe, province of Huelva, Spain who arrived in Mexico City about 1560. There he courted and married 1st. Dona Juana de Trevino around 1565. She was the daughter of Diego de Trevino and Dona Beatriz de Quintanilla, a very prominent family in Mexico City. His second wife was Catalina Martinez Guajardo. Two girls were born to this union, Isabel and Juana.

Children of the first wife were:

1. Alonzo de Trevino, who married 1st. Anastacia González Hidalgo 2nd. Mayor de Renteria
2. Josef de Treviño, who married María Navarro Rojo
3. Blas de la Garza Falcón I, B: 1591 in Mapimi, married Beatriz González Hidalgo
4. Juana de Treviño, who married Juan Olivares
5. Pedro de la Garza, (born circa 1580 in Guadiana, now Durango) married Inez Rodríguez.
6. Francisco de la Garza

Note: They say that “all roads lead to Rome”. The same can be said of our families; we all join with one or the other of the ancestors above, as they all weave and intertwine each other down through the years. We are descendants of five of the six children from the first marriage of Marcos Alonso and Juana de Trevino; Captain Francisco de la Garza, Pedro de la Garza, Blas de la Garza, Alonzo de Trevino, and Juana de Trevino. Marcos Alonso de la Garza y Arcon was a miner by trade. He and his family arrived as settlers at Real de Mapimi, Nueva Galicia, a mining town in the province of Viscaya, (Durango). Their daughter, (2) Dona Juana de Trevino, and Blas de la Garza (the two younger ones from the first marriage) were born there. As was the custom of the time, the children could take on the mother’s last name if it was a more prominent name. In this case three of them did (not all listed.)

In 1603 he moved his family to the Hacienda de San Francisco in the jurisdiction of Monterrey, Mexico. Two of his sons bought the Hacienda for him and moved them along with all their possessions extended family and servants.

Blas Maria de la Garza Falcon, great grandson of Marcos Alonzo de la Garza was very influential in colonizing South Texas. Blas Maria and his sons served in the Spanish army and occupied many positions, some as soldiers, some as Sergeants others as Army captains; they also held governmental positions as Alcaldes, Justices, and Prosecutors in the province of Nuevo, Leon. Blas Maria was not only very influential in establishing South Texas, they also very quickly proliferated the area. The de la Garza coat of arms depicting the heron from which they took their name seemed truly to depict their dedication to family and country. Nearly all de la Garza’s prospered, as did their Indians.

When the Porciones were granted along the Rio Grande, several generations after Don Blas, there were more grantees in this name than any other name.

About de la Garza y Arcon, Marcos Alonzo

Capitan Marcos Alonso de la Garza y Arcon was born in 1550 in Lepe, Huelva, Spain. He died in 1635. The Nuevo Leon origin of the surname Garza goes back to Captain Marcos Alonso de la Garza y Arcon, originally from the town of Lepe in the province of Huelva of the Spanish Kingdom. This ancient conqueror and Andalucian settler entered the New Kingdom of Leon at the beginning of the XVII century. His first wife was Juana de Trevino, citizen of the City of Mexico. Marcos Alonzo Garza is the forefather of many that carry the last names of Garza, de la Garza, Falcon and Trevino. What is known about Captain Marcos Alonso de la Garza y Arcon is that he was the son of Marcos Alonzo and Constanza de La Garza. He also went by the names, Marcos Alonzo Arza y del Arcon, Marcos Alonzo Garza del Alcon and Marcos Alonzo. He was from Lepe, Huelva, Spain. It is estimated he was born about 1550, came to New Spain serving the military and married in 1585 to Juana de Trevino from a prominent Mexico City military family. His assignments took the family to Durango and Zacatecas where his duties were supervising the mining of silver and gold. His whole family ended up in Nuevo Leon in the time period between 1596 and 1603, after completion of his military career. The family of Marcos Alonzo is included in the list of the 12 original founding families of Monterrey N.L. Mexico, which was founded in 1596. It is not known where the "del Arcon" or "del Alcon" part of the last name came from. However, this ending had an impact on his son, Blas, for he used as his last name, de la Garza-Falcon. (Alcon is the ancient form of the word Halcon, Falcon) At the time it was common to use wither paternal or maternal last names. The children of Marcos Alonzo Garza never again used the paternal last name of Alonzo. Instead his sons Francisco and Pedro used the last name of "de la Garza," Blas used the last name of "de la Garza Falcon," and Diego, Alonzo, and Jose used their maternal last name "Trevino." As to why the last name Alonzo was totally abandoned by the family is a mystery, but it may have to do with the fact that Alonzo last name of Lepe, Huelva, Spain was associated with the Jews. Hernando Alonzo financed and aided Hernan Cortez in his actions. After the conquest of Mexico City, Hernando Alonzo, a well known Jew in the New World, was becoming too wealthy and powerful, and thus a threat. Hernando Alonzo was burned alive under orders of the Inquisition. While no link has been established between Hernando Alonzo and Marcos Alonzo, the name may have been changed for protection. Only to add to the speculation is the fact that Marcos took his family to Monterrey where many other families with Jewish roots had settled. The Trevino's which Marcos married into were known to be converts from Jews to Christians. Today many people go by the surname Garza having dropped the "de la" many years ago. There is also the surname Falcon having dropped the "de la Garza," de la Garza and Trevino, and all come from the same common ancestor. For more information on this very topic refer to Tomas Mendirichaga Cuvee's book "Origin of the Surname Garza and Trevino in Nuevo Leon <http://www.vsalgs.org/stnengenealogy/biblio.html>". Source of Bio: The Monitor, Page 8E, June 24, 2001 Capitan Marcos Garza Arcon ALONSO and Juana DE TREVINO were married in 1563. Children were: Commander Jose de TREVINO. Pedro de la GARZA was born in 1589/90. Capitan Blas de la GARZA was born in 1591 in Real de Mapimi, Durango. He died on Feb 21, 1669 in Monterrey NL Mexico. Captain Blas de la Garza was born in Real de Mapimi, in the present state of Durango, around 1591 and died in the city of Monterrey February 21, 1669, "having confessed and received all the holy sacraments..." He was given a Christian burial in the church of the Franciscan convent of that city. The account of the burial says that he made a will before Captain Juan Cavazos, assistant mayor, but this will is not known. He entered the conquest of Nuevo Reino de Leon "around the year one thousand and six hundred and seven. ... " He was alderman of the municipal government of Monterrey in 1613, 1625, 1627, and 1628; procurer in 1638; assistant mayor in 1630, 1642, and 1657; lord chief-justice and chief magistrate of Monterrey from 1644 until 1653. He contracted matrimony before 1626 with Beatriz Gonzalez Hidalgo, originally from the town of Santiago del Saltillo, legitimate daughter of Captain Marcos Gonzalez and, probably, of Mariana Navarro. From this union 5 sons and 12 daughters were born: Juan, Bias, Lazaro, Miguel, Francisco, Leonor, Margarita, Beatriz, Juana, Maria, Ines, Francisca, Isabel, Melchora, Luisa, Antonia, and Apolonia. All contracted matrimony. The males adopted the surnames De la Garza Falcon and the females the De la Garza surname, except Beatriz, who, in order to carry her mother's name, used the first maternal surname, that is to say, Gonzalez. Captain Francisco de la Garza lived at the Hacienda de San Francisco (today Apodaca, Nuevo Leon) "from the time he entered this Kingdom until he died around the year 1660. Diego de Trevino it is probable, could also have been the son of Captain Marcos Alonso Garza and Juana de Trevino, since, as we have already said, Marcos Alonso, the Younger calls him "my brother". But also he could have been a brother-in-law or the patriarch, or be it brother of Juana de Trevino. Governor Diego de Montemayor granted several favors of land and water to Marcos Alonso, the Younger and Diego de Trevino at the end of the XVI century or the beginning of the XVII. Surely they are the ones, who figure as witnesses in a document dated September 24, 1610, which we have already cited, in which they declared being "citizens of this city". This Diego de Trevino, could very feasibly be the one who acted as alderman of the municipal government of Monterrey in 1624 and 1630. Perhaps he is the same one who appears as witness in a writing dated April 2, 1624, and also in the list of settlers of Nuevo Reino de Leon, levied in 1626, among the "citizens that live outside the city (of Monterrey), in the dwellings..." and already "widower". And the one, who was married to Maria Martinez, from which union they had at least one daughter: Maria de Trevino, who contracted matrimony in 1630 or 1631 with Lazaro Gonzalez. Capitan Alonso de TREVINO was born in 1594/95. He died in Dec 1654. He entered into the conquest of Nuevo Reino de Leon "around the year one thousand six hundred and three. .."(56) He shows up "married" in the census of citizens of 1626. He was assistant mayor of Monterrey in 1629, 1632, 1636, and 1639. He contracted marriage twice: with Anastasia Gonzalez and Mayor de Renteria, from which unions at least fifteen legitimate children were born. Besides that he procreated two sons and a daughter outside of matrimony: the "mestizos" Marcos Alonso and Mateo de Trevino and Juana de Trevino. Captain Alonso de Trevino had more than seventy-five grandchildren. Captain Alonso de Trevino was widowed from Anastasia Gonzalez in the middle of 1636. Captain Alonso de Trevino had fifteen children from his two matrimonies with Anastasia Gonzalez and Mayor de Renteria who died August 7, 1690.

About CHAPA, Juan Bautista

Juan Bautista Chapa (B: circa 1627 - April 20, 1695) was born Giovanni Bautista Schiapapria in 1627 in Albisola, Italy, a small town just outside Genoa, Tuscany. He was the son of Bartolome Schiapparia and Batistina Badi. The family was of middle class landowners. They owned and operated a vineyard and did their duty in the Italian wars. For her two eldest sons the mother had greater things in mind; she tried to bend them toward the priesthood. Apparently theirs was a highly literate family that respected learning and both young men seemed to have been convinced. A brother, Juan, did in fact go on to be ordained in Spain. As his mother wished, young Juan Bautista Chapa arrived in Spain and began studying for the priesthood; however, two years later he decided to go to Mexico and continue his studies there. After a while he decided that the priesthood was not for him. Chapa went on to do clerical work for de Leon and to ride out on expeditions against the Indians. It is very likely that he also assisted in ranch work and directed the workers. He served under nine Spanish Governors over forty years, taking leave of absence only to ride on all the major campaigns against the Indians and to go into Texas hunting the French. On two trips into Texas, he acted as second-in-command as well as Secretary. He made maps locating the major features of the route with observed latitude calculated for longitude. He was very accurate, even by today's standards. Chapa was a well educated man who knew Italian (including the Genoveses dialect), Spanish, Latin, and Tuscan. He left behind a perceptive and well-crafted historical work. He translated the Internal and External Wars of Rome from the original Latin to Spanish, as well as some books from Tuscan Italian to Spanish, but perhaps his greatest writing achievement was to write his History of Nuevo Leon from 1650-1690. He did not put his name on it in any way. In his manuscript, he said that he wanted to remain anonymous and cited his reasons for doing so. Chapa was given to dedication in his work and to entertaining himself by reading the classics, studying history, and doing some writing on his own account. While he was not a money-maker, he was always independent and productive. He was a very generous person. He left his part of the Schiappapria Vineyard to his uncle, for his own benefit and had never claimed and did not expect to claim any part of his inheritance. There was no forgiveness in his makeup, only duty and productivity. In true equality, he asked first of himself and then of everyone else, even Indians, and so it was at the tip when he was part of the government of the realm. Chapa's Last Will and Testament was very touching. For the sake of brevity, I will include some, but not all of it in its entirety. Will: Testament; of Juan Bautista Chapa, citizen of the Realm, legitimate son of Bartolome Schapparia and Batistina Badi, natives of the Town of Albisola, in the Ribera of Genoa. I direct that I be buried as decided by my executors. I do not have the wealth to have a Mass sung over my body. I hereby testify that I was married to Beatriz de Trevino, now dead. Sons: Nicolas + Inez de Benavides, Jose, Jose Maria, Juan, Gaspar, Maria and Juana. I declare that I was the administrator of Juan de Olivares and Juana Trevino, my parents-in-law. The latter died in July 1693. Possessions: My house, of four rooms, left to me by Juan de Olivares, a lot given to me in appreciation by the Governor, Alonso de Leon. Of the lots to the north (Cerralvo), one I gave to Juan Garcia and one to Juan de Leon, and another to a daughter of Francisco, slave of the beneficiary Priest. That

I also mark as my possessions, one jinete saddle, and rigging, some spuds, and a bridle. Item: A well used curry comb, an old dagger, a bed of boards with sides and an old mattress, a blanket, half a bed sheet and two pillows; One table, a bench and three old stools. One writing desk, much misused, and a small trunk in which I keep my papers, a large chest with its key and a chair with back piece and a picture of St. Jerome. Also: Thirty heads of cattle (Ganado mayor) and eight caballerias of land in the Jurisdiction of Cerralvo (La Piedra Parada), two lot in the same town, two metates, a case of ten books, another small house, a headpiece of copper, (armor), which is to be given to Juan, two silver spoons with my name and those of my wife, one on each, which are to be given to Gaspar. I declare that Maria married Juan de Trevino, and that I gave her a dowry and that they give her the St. Francis and Virgen de Guadalupe. My clothes I leave to Gaspar. The Italian books to Francisco C. Risso, of Mexico, a nephew of Juana de Vargas, surgeon; and the books in Latin, some of which are very valuable, are to be sold and Masses said to my soul. As we can see by his last will and testament, Juan B. Chapa was not a materialistic person, yet very generous with his possessions. I strongly believe that having studied for the priesthood helped to shape and mold his character. Chapa lived out his life in Nuevo Leon and died in 1695 in Nuevo Leon and is recognized as the ancestor of the very numerous Chapa families of northeastern Mexico and South Texas. In his nearly forty years of administration, he served under nine Spanish Governors. The life and works of Juan Bautista Chapa were integral to the forming of Nuevo Leon, its government under Martin de Zavala, and those of succeeding Governors. (For more information on the life of Juan B. Chapa, see pages 229-234, which includes his last will and testament.) Juan or Giovanni Schiapapria (Chapa) 1627-1695, was born in Villa Albisola on the coast of Genoa, Italy. He migrated in 1647 to Mexico. There he shortened the family name to Chapa. In 1651 he served as Secretary to the Governor and published a book on the history of the state of Nuevo Leon. A very influential and well educated person, he served nine Governors during a span of forty years. Juan was the son of Bartolome Schiapapria and Batistina Badi from Italy. He was one of eight children. He died April 20, 1695 in Nuevo Leon.

About de la GARZA Y GUERRA, Julian

Notes for Julian de la GARZA Y GUERRA: Julian de la Garza was owner of Porcion 84 and 1/5th of Porcion 85. His brothers Gregorio, Apolinario, Manuel, and Antonio de la Garza were owners of 4/5ths of Porcion 85, jurisdiction of Camargo. Porcion 84 had Ventura Vela as original grantee and it was sold to his son Refugio Vela who sold it to Julian de la Garza on May 26, 1818. The heirs of latter have said they still own same. Julian left a Will done November 7, 1825 in which he states his 1st wife died March 14, 1822 and that this property was acquired during that marriage. (He) Sets out names of 1st 9 children (another child of 1st marriage, Maria Eugenia died an infant). (He) Declares that his 1st wife was a daughter of Richard Vela and Maria Josefa Garcia and that his second wife was a daughter of Jose Ignacio de Benavides and Maria Matiana de Villareal.
