Stretch Your Strengths

Idea for Action: Circles of Stretch

Think about 1 thing you want to be known for at work and 1 way you use that strength today. Now think about a bigger circle of impact, how could you use that strength to help your department? Go bigger, how could you use the strength to support your organisation. Go even bigger, how could you stretch your strength and use it outside of work.

Keep thinking about bigger and bigger circles that could help you find new opportunities to develop and demonstrate your strengths.

Manage Your Mindset

Idea for Action: Growth Mindset Magnets

Think about when have you been most open to learning and most comfortable with challenge in your career so far. Answer these questions to identify your growth mindset magnets:

-  Who were you working with?
-  What were you working on?
-  Where were you working?

Use these insights to help you spend time with people and in places that help you to manage your mindset and be at your best.

Build Your Belief

Idea for Action: Reframe Beliefs That Hold You Back

Start by writing down any thoughts or beliefs that stop you from taking action.

Example: I don't know enough or If I say what I think, people won't like me.
Restate the beliefs so they can help you to move forward.

Example: How I grow is more important than what I know or Saying what I think means people know where I stand.

Invest In Your Career Community

Idea for Action: Personal Board

Your Personal Board are the people who are supporting and challenging you in your career. You don't need lots of people on your personal board but you do want people to play different roles.

Who do you know who plays any of these roles for you today?

Spot Your Success

Idea for Action: Very Small Successes

Shine a spotlight on your very small successes to give you perspective about what you are doing well and maintain your motivation.

For 2 weeks, write down 3 very small successes at the end of each day.

After 2 weeks, look back at your 42 small successes and see what themes emerge about the things you're proud of and where your efforts had a positive impact.

Focus on Active Rest

Idea for Action: Reflect on Rest

Active rest is when we take a break from work by occupying our brains with a different activity that fully absorbs our attention and requires us to be fully present. This could be cooking, painting, computer games, playing sport or music.

Experiment with Active Rest. Identify 2 or 3 activities which you enjoy and that hold your attention. Plan time for them into your week. Reflect on how they made you think and feel during and after.

Habits To Help You Grow

Idea for Action: Sticky Habits

Habits that connect to our sense of self are much stickier than ones that feel like a task on a to do list. To create stickier habits, think about a habit you'd like to build:

Example: I want to read more books. Now think about how this connects to your identity:

Example: I'm a person who loves to learn. Reading more keeps me curious.

Identity-based habits are much harder for us to give up.

Maximise Your Motivation

Idea for Action: Design Your Drive

In Daniel Pink's work on motivation, he talks about the importance of purpose, mastery and autonomy in creating drive.

Reflect on these prompts to think how you could design drive into your days.

 Purpose: What feels most meaningful about the work you do?

 Mastery: How could you make your strengths stronger?

 Autonomy: What one thing would give you more control over when, where or how you do your work?

Be The Change

Idea for Action: Change Mind Map

Effective change comes from a clear view of what you want things to look like (Projection), knowing why it matters to you (Personal), thinking about who can help you (People), how you'll know things are moving forward (Progress) and what the ultimate outcome will be of your efforts (Positive Impact).

Mind map your thoughts on each of these areas or download our template to use as a prompt.

Work In Progress

Idea for Action: Even Better If

Success rarely happens overnight and is much more likely to be the result of continual and incremental improvement.

For 1 week, at the end of every day think about one action you can take that could help you to be even better tomorrow. That could be to listen more in a meeting, to start a project you've been procrastinating on, to take a break and go for a walk at lunchtime. If you commit to this consciously for a week you will build your 'even better if' mindset muscle.

Reframe Your Failures

Idea for Action: Fear Setting

A fear of failure can limit our learning as we avoid situations that could stretch us beyond what we know and do today. Tim Ferris's 'fear setting' technique can help to prime you for failure.

Define the fear

Write down how you could prevent it

Think about how you would repair it

Fear setting helps you go into new situations with confidence about the risks you might face and how to respond to them if they are realised.
