The Great War Memorial in St Martin's Chapel

In November 2014 an Anzac Working Group was convened by the Vicar, the Reverend Canon Dr Colleen O'Reilly SCP to identify as far as possible all of the men and women of the Parish listed on the Memorial in St Martin's Chapel

The Chapel was dedicated to St Martin of Tours because Armistice Day, 11 November 1918, coincided with his feast day.

The Chapel was designed by Rodney Alsop.

The foundation stone was laid by the Governor of Victoria, the Earl of Stradbroke, on Sunday 25 September 1921.

The completed Chapel was dedicated by the Archbishop of Melbourne, Dr Harrington Clare Lees, on Sunday 21 October 1923.

The windows in the Chapel were designed and made by William Montgomery.

They represent:

- St George, martyred at Lydda (Diospolis) in Palestine c.303, our Patron;
- an Australian interpretation of the James Clark painting of 1914 'The Great Sacrifice' (a copy is on the north wall of the chapel) which replaces the cap of the British Tommy with the Australian slouch hat, and includes the corn poppies adopted in 1921 as a symbol of remembrance and sacrifice;
- St Martin (316–397) Bishop of Tours. As a soldier in the Roman army he met in wintertime an ill-clad beggar outside the gates of Amiens. Having no money to offer, he cut his military cloak in two, and gave one half to the beggar. In a dream he saw Christ wearing the half cloak, and he was moved to be baptized.

The Anzac Working Group consisted of Rebecca Allard, Brian Corless OAM, Helen Gilbert, John Lane, Raelene Lane, Heather Norwood, and Jenifer St John.

What follows is a work in progress.

The Working Group would welcome any comments, including corrections or expansions, which should be directed in the first instance to Mrs Maria Green, Parish Business Administrator, office@stgeorgesmalvern.org

A Note on Decorations and Awards

The 1914-15 Star

Awarded for service on the establishment of a ship or unit in a theatre of war.
A member awarded the 1914 Star could not be awarded the 1914-15 Star.

The British War Medal 1914-20

Awarded for service as follows:

- Navy - for 28 days mobilised service or to those who lost their lives in active operations before completing that period, between 5 August 1914 and 11 November 1918.
- Army and Air Force - entry into a theatre of war on duty, or who left places of residence and rendered approved overseas service between 5 August 1914 and 11 November 1918.
- Mercantile Marine - at least six months service between 5 August 1914 and 11 November 1918.

The Victory Medal

Awarded for service as follows:

- Navy - those who were mobilised and rendered approved service either at sea between 5 August 1914 and 11 November 1918 or on the establishment of a unit within a theatre of military operations.
 - Army - those who served on the establishment of a unit in a theatre of war.
 - Air Force - those who served on the establishment of a unit in a theatre of war outside the UK, served with an operational unit in the UK or overseas and had been actively engaged against the enemy, been employed in flying new aircraft to France or served on the complement of aircraft-carrying ships.

Almost all of those named on the Memorial were awarded the above three medals.

Mentioned in Dispatches

A member Mentioned in Dispatches for service during World War 1 was awarded a miniature spray of five oak leaves which was worn on the ribbon of the Victory Medal.
Only one spray was awarded, no matter how many times a member might have been 'mentioned'.

None of the awards listed above entitled the bearer to post-nominal letters.

Some who are named on the Memorial received the following Imperial and foreign decorations.

CMG

The Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George was instituted in 1818 by Prince George, The Prince Regent, later King George IV.

It is named in honour of two military saints, St Michael and St George.

The Order was originally awarded to those holding commands or high position in the Mediterranean territories acquired in the Napoleonic Wars, and was subsequently extended to holders of similar office or position in other territories of the British Empire.

The Order consists of the Sovereign, the Grand Master, and three classes of members, who are entitled to the post-nominal letters as indicated ;

Knight Grand Cross (GCMG) or Dame Grand Cross (GCMG)

Knight Commander (KCMG) or Dame Commander (DCMG)

Companion (CMG)

CB

The Most Honourable Order of the Bath was instituted in 1725 by King George I. The name derives from the medieval ceremony for creating a knight, which included bathing (as a symbol of purification) as one of its elements. Members belong to either the Civil or the Military Division.

Recipients of the Order are usually senior military officers or senior civil servants. Appointments to the Military Division are restricted by the minimum rank of the individual: GCBs must hold the rank of rear admiral, major general or air vice marshal. KCBs must hold the rank of captain in the Royal Navy, colonel in the Army or Royal Marines, or group captain in the Royal Air Force. CBs must be of the rank of lieutenant commander, major or squadron leader, and in addition must have been mentioned in dispatches for distinction in a command position in a combat situation. Non-line officers such as engineers and medic may be appointed only for meritorious service in war time.

The Order consists of the Sovereign, the Great Master, and three classes of members, who are entitled to the post-nominal letters as indicated:

Knight Grand Cross (GCB) or Dame Grand Cross (GCB)

Knight Commander (KCB) or Dame Commander (DCB)

Companion (CB)

MC

The Military Cross was instituted by King George V in 1914 for commissioned officers of the substantive rank of Captain or below, and for Warrant Officers. In August 1916 bars were awarded to the Military Cross in recognition of the performance of further acts of gallantry meriting the award.

The Military Cross is the third-level military decoration awarded to officers and (since 1993) other ranks of the British Armed Forces; and formerly also to officers of other Commonwealth countries.

The Military Cross is granted in recognition of 'an act or acts of exemplary gallantry during active operations against the enemy on land to all members, of any rank in Our Armed Forces'.

Recipients of the Military Cross are entitled to use the post-nominal letters MC.[[]

MM

The Military Medal was instituted in 1916 by King George V and was (until 1993) a military decoration awarded to personnel of the British Army and other services, and formerly also to personnel of other Commonwealth countries, below commissioned rank, for bravery in battle on land.

It was for the other ranks the equivalent of the Military Cross, which was awarded to commissioned officers and, rarely, to warrant officers, although warrant officers could also be awarded the Military Medal. The Military Medal ranked below the Distinguished Conduct Medal, which was also awarded to non-commissioned members of the Army.

Recipients of the Military Medal were entitled to use the post-nominal letters MM.[[]

DSO

The Distinguished Service Order was instituted in 1886 by Queen Victoria, and was typically awarded to officers ranked major (or its equivalent) or higher, but the honour has sometimes been awarded to especially valorous junior officers.

The Order was established for rewarding individual instances of meritorious or distinguished service in war. It was a military order, until recently for officers only, and normally given for service under fire or under conditions equivalent to service in actual combat with the enemy, although it was awarded between 1914 and 1916 under circumstances which could not be regarded as under fire (often to staff officers, which caused resentment among front-line officers). After 1 January 1917, commanders in the field were instructed to recommend this award only for those serving under fire.

Prior to 1943 the order could be given only to someone mentioned in dispatches.

Recipients of the Distinguished Service Order are entitled to use the post-nominal letters DSO.

DCM

The Distinguished Conduct Medal was instituted in 1854 by Queen Victoria as an award to Warrant Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men for 'distinguished, gallant and good conduct in the field'.

For all ranks below commissioned officers it was the second highest award for gallantry in action after the Victoria Cross, and was for the other ranks the equivalent of the Distinguished Service Order. Prior to the institution of this medal there had been no medal awarded by the British government in recognition of individual acts of gallantry in the Army

Recipients of the Distinguished Conduct Medal were entitled to use the post-nominal letters DCM.¹

VD

The Volunteer Officers' Decoration was instituted in 1892 by Queen Victoria to reward 'efficient and thoroughly capable' officers of the Volunteer Force in Great Britain who had served for twenty years, with half of any time during which a Volunteer Force officer had served in the Regular Army to be counted as qualifying service towards the twenty years required.

In 1894 the grant of the decoration was extended to officers of Volunteer Forces throughout the British Empire

The Volunteer Officers' Decoration was superseded in the colonies in 1899 by the Colonial Auxiliary Forces Officers' Decoration and the Indian Volunteer Forces Officers' Decoration.

Recipients of the Colonial Auxiliary Forces Officers' Decoration were, as with the previous award, entitled to use the post-nominal letters VD.

ARRC

The Royal Red Cross was instituted in 1883 by Queen Victoria to reward exceptional services in military nursing. The award originally had a single class of Member: a second and lower class, Associate, was added in 1917.

The award is made to a fully trained nurse of an officially recognised nursing service, military or civilian, who has shown exceptional devotion and competence in the performance of actual nursing duties, over a continuous and long period, or who has performed some very exceptional act of bravery and devotion at his or her post of duty. This decoration had the distinction of being conferred exclusively to women until 1976. It is conferred on members of the nursing services regardless of rank. Holders of the second class who receive a further award are promoted to the first class, although an initial award can also be made in the first class. Holders of the first class who receive a further award are awarded a bar.

Recipients of the Royal Red Cross are entitled to use the post-nominal letters RRC or ARRC for Members and Associates respectively.

The Croix de guerre 1914–1918 (English: War Cross) is a French military decoration—the first version of the present Croix de guerre. It was created in 1914 to recognize French and allied soldiers who were cited for their service during World War I, the citation being similar to the British 'mentioned in dispatches'. It has a Belgian equivalent with the same name.

There is no post-nominal abbreviation for the Croix de guerre.

Awarded the Military Medal:

'On 23 April 1918 the town of Aubigny [Somme, France] was subject to hostile gas bombardment. The 5th Australian Division Advanced Dressing Station in the town received a share of this. Corporal C G Court, a motor driver, remained at his post during the shelling, beside his car, till a wounded patient, who had been dressed, was carried to his car for evacuation to the Main Dressing Station. One shell struck a hind wheel of his car, disabling it. He at once placed another wheel in position on the car, drove his car and patient clear of the town, and awaited other casualties which he took along to the Main Dressing Station at Daours. His prompt action and courage in changing his damaged wheel under fire saved his car for immediate usefulness (and it was greatly needed afterwards) and enabled him there and then to evacuate a full load of patients. At all times he has shown that his patients are his first care.'

for Bravery in the Field London Gazette 12 March 1917

Awarded the Croix de guerre:

'This man is a bandsman, also a stretcher-bearer. On the night of July 19th/20th 1916 at Petillon, Pte Keir carried bombs and ammunition to the German trenches, which were being held by our men, until the wounded started to come in. He then took up his own work and continued during the whole of the next day, going out into No-Man's land in daylight, securing wounded. While assisting Pte Hayes, who was mortally wounded, he was also wounded, but refused to leave his post; this man showed wonderful endurance. He was always at his post no matter under what conditions. He came under notice again on 5th October 1916 by bringing in two men who had been wounded by snipers, on the tram line leading up to the subsidiary line, while still under fire.'

Mentioned in Dispatches

The Queenslander Saturday 22 April 1916, Page 6:

"NOT FORGOTTEN."

A VICTORIAN SISTER'S THANKS.

Sister Ada Ford, of the 17th General Hospital, Alexandria, writes to the hon. secretaries of the Brisbane Girls' Club:— "It was so awfully good of the Girls' Club to think of us, and send us those nice boxes. We only got ours last week (towards the end of February), but still tin delight of feeling that we are not forgotten is very sweet. I am a Victorian, and much appreciate the thoughtfulness of the Girls' Club. Will you kindly convey to the members of the B.G.C. my heartfelt thanks, and may God bless you all. I am wondering if you would be so good as to see if some of the members could send me washers or socks? The Red Cross (British) here is very good, but as our hospital takes in over 2000 patients the demands on it are very heavy, and they cannot always meet the necessities of the patients. This is a British hospital (Victoria College converted into a hospital), and we also have Queensland sisters here on the staff. Of course we get Australian patients from all parts, as well as New Zealanders. I am asking my Victorian friends to forward me their work, and already I have received washers and soap, which are most acceptable."

Nurse Sends Request

Mrs L. Williams, of "Waiora" private hospital, Malvern, recently received the following letter from Sister Ada Ford, who is attached to the 17th General Hospital, Victoria Base, M.E.F., Alexandria: —

"Today I received a parcel of soldiers' comforts from you, and very welcome they were. We are often short of many things the soldiers need, such as socks, washers, and other articles. It is comforting to be able to supply their needs. They deserve everything we can give them. My one request now is for a gramophone. I am sure that if the Australian people only knew how it would be appreciated, and could see the immense delight the men derive from music, they would soon supply it."

Sister Ford was trained at the Melbourne Hospital. The hospital at which she is now stationed has accommodation for more than two thousand patients.

The Argus Wednesday 23 August 1933, Page 6:

Sister Ada Amelia Ford, who died on August 16 at her home in Glenferrie road, Malvern, after a long illness, served during the Great War on the hospital ships Assaye [Wandilla] and Esmeralda [Essequibo] at the landing of Gallipoli [incorrect], and afterwards at the 17th and 19th [21st] British general hospitals at Alexandria, Egypt, and at Aldershot, England. The funeral at the Brighton Cemetery on August 18 was private.
