The new dress code allows a bit more individuality without losing the "I work here, so ask me your questions" appearance. And we can be cooler in the extreme heat we experience 9–10 months a year here in the desert.

Beth Loutzenheiser, overnight IMS associate, Store 2922, Tucson, Ariz.

The new dress code is great, but register associates are the ones who really need the T-shirts! Collared shirts and a vest are too hot! It's too hot at the registers with all those [soda] coolers and computer towers blowing warm air. Just too hot!

Jenny Jones, cashier, Store 5296, Barboursville, W.Va.

What do you think about Walmart's new dress code?

I think we, as associates and representatives of Walmart, should look professional in our attire. Any company that is in service of the public should have a standard that is above those it serves. We need to remember that we are there to serve our customers in a manner that causes them to feel as if they are the most important person, each and every one of them.

Christopher Nicholson, sales associate, wireless, Store 3874, Dawsonville, Ga. I like the vest. I feel a sense of pride in making myself look good. I think the vest is a nice-looking accessory.

Behind the App

The Global eCommerce team helps enhance the customer's shopping experience.

Customers who use Walmart's gift registries now have everything they need in the palm of their hand—and they can thank our Global eCommerce (GeC) team for the convenience.

Now customers can use their smartphones or other mobile devices to quickly create and access a wedding or baby registry. Why build the feature into Walmart's Mobile App (which has been downloaded and is used by millions of customers each month)? The GeC team's research shows that more and more customers are using the app on their smartphones while cruising the aisles, says Michelle Kim, senior business manager of Planned Shopping, which handles wish lists and gift registries. So it made sense to tailor the technology to expectant parents and engaged couples. Bill Dainusco principal product

Bill Rainusso, principal product manager for Registries and Lists, led the spring release of the gift registry feature, along with a team of more than 50 developers, designers, and engineers, which worked for five months to create it. Since the launch, the team continues to make enhancements.

In addition to creating apps, this Global eCommerce team, which is based in San Bruno, Calif., is responsible for the online shopping side of local assortment and fulfillment, plus shipping options like Site to Store and Pick Up Today. "We're always looking at how we can improve the experience. It's definitely an evolution," says Michelle.

Creating More Spectacles

Walmart already sells more eyeglasses than any other retailer. So why spend millions upgrading optical lab equipment? To keep a winning edge, of course.

ere's a statistic to note next time you're standing in a crowd: 64 percent of U.S. adults—more than 157 million of your fellow citizens—wear prescription eyeglasses. And since Walmart is the nation's largest producer of finished prescription eyewear, there's a good chance many of those glasses came from Walmart. In fact, it's the only product that the company produces start to finish in-house.

Earlier this year, the company announced it has invested $10 million to upgrade the manufacturing equipment at the Fayetteville, Ark., optical lab. Similar upgrades are slated to occur at facilities in Crawfordsville, Ind., and Dallas in the next few years. Clearly, the company is taking steps to maintain leadership in the optical market, which has grown more than 25 percent over the last 10 years, to $38 billion.

The ultimate goal, both with Walmart's eyeglasses and with the upgrades, is to serve more customers, more quickly, with even better quality, says Scott Pickering, senior director, optical manufacturing and distribution.

Looking Back to Look Ahead

When Walmart first entered the optical business in 1991, Walmart was known for its affordable prices on lenses that were similar to other big box stores and eyeglass chains. Then, in 2000, Walmart started offering premiere lenses like Carl Zeiss. Customers noticed the difference and the company's efforts to become a leader in eyeglass quality continued from there.

Opposite page: ① Scott Pickering, senior director, optical manufacturing and distribution, and associate Latoya Stratton inspect lenses before the anti-reflective coating process. ② New surface machines at the Walmart Optical Lab cut lenses into the shape/magnification of the prescription. ③ A lab associate puts lenses into rings. Lenses are then loaded into a vacuum chamber to receive an anti-reflective coating.

"Walmart was at the forefront of putting anti-reflective and anti-scratch coating on lenses," says Ed Greene, the recently retired CEO of The Vision Council and past president of Carl Zeiss Optical Inc., the maker of Carl Zeiss Lenses. When Walmart first invested in anti-reflective equipment in 2001, Ed says, other large retailers didn't have the coatings or were using noname or store-brand products. From the beginning, Walmart took steps to offer the best products on the market—products at a level of quality that exceeds industry standards and that our retail competition simply can't match. The upgrades happening now continue the commitment.

A View of the Lab

The Walmart Optical Lab in Fayetteville, Ark., stands next to a highway on-ramp. The sign outside is small, and the brick building looks relatively unremarkable—a notable contrast to what happens inside.

Production at the lab runs 24 hours a day, with more than 620 associates working in rotating shifts. The record for a single day of eyeglasses production at the lab: 11,000 pairs.

A single pair of glasses starts its journey on a conveyor belt where the lenses are shaped to the appropriate thickness and curve by a generator and polisher before going through several coating processes for premium scratch resistance and antireflection. From there, the lenses are placed into frames by hand by "mounters." (Quality control happens throughout; if any flaws are discovered, the process starts over.) It takes about eight hours from start to finish. So where do the upgrades fit in? $38 Starting price for a new pair of glasses at Walmart

Walmartworld.com 19

The company is replacing all of its antireflection equipment (remember, this is the first key differentiator for the optical business) with newer machines so end users will experience better coatings. Surfacing machinery and edgers are also being replaced to enhance quality and improve capacity so the lab will be able to produce more glasses and serve more customers.

Seeing the Customer Experience

The real difference, of course, is what customers experience—and are able to purchase—in 3,000 Vision Centers at Walmart stores and Sam's Clubs. Along with Walmart-produced lenses, Vision Centers sell premiere lenses like those from Nikon, Seiko, and Zeiss. The frame selection is huge and includes designer frames like Drew Barrymore's just-released Flower line.

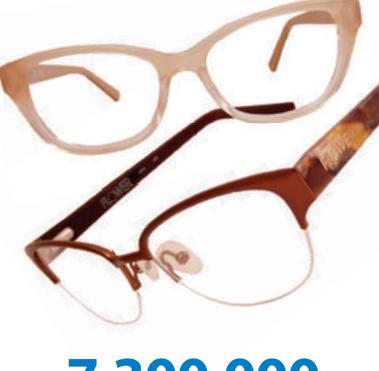

What customers might not notice: Vision Center associates don't work on commission, so customers aren't pressed into buying items that are more expensive than required, says David Puchala, New York state–licensed optician and Vision Center manager at Store 1744 in Webster, N.Y. (At most other eyewear retailers, pay is based on commission, or bonuses are given for upselling customers).

What customers certainly do notice, according to David: Walmart's low price. Walmart's glasses start at $38 for a complete set of eyewear and come with a one-year warranty—something that competitors charge extra for. Given that the average cost of prescription eyeglasses in 2014 was $274.20, according to The Vision Council, shoppers can save big at Walmart. (Associates can save even more, thanks to an associate-only 20 percent discount in the Vision Center.)

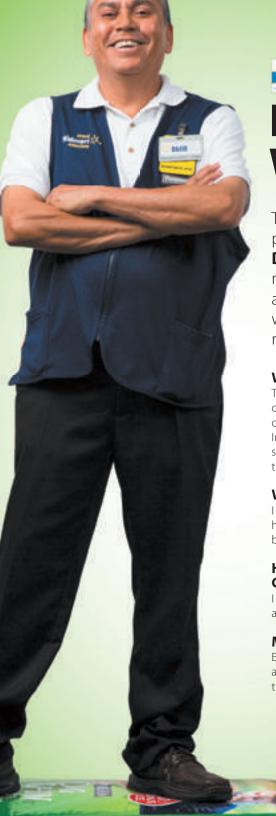

"The biggest reward," David says, "is seeing the smile on mom's face when she is quoted $200 or more for her child's first pair of glasses somewhere else, and then comes to us and pays less than $70."

Can being a superfan help you succeed at Walmart? These associates say yes.

I change lives as a stormtrooper.

The Force is strong with Barry Benecke II, an assembler at Store 1737 in Villa Park, Ill. He's been a Star Wars fan since age 12, but he acquired the prize of his collection as an adult: a stormtrooper uniform, which he assembled from a kit he purchased.

Barry puts the suit to good use. He often wears it to raise money for charities like Relay For Life as a member of the 501st Legion, a nationwide organization of costumed fans. He also dons it to promote sales of Star Wars merchandise in events that take place at his store. To Barry, the suit is much more than a chance to get into character. He sees it as his chance to do something special for others. "I get a little teary when I see kids' faces glow when they meet a stormtrooper," he says.

That wish to help others is what makes Barry's fandom so interesting. In 2009, he donated a kidney to a fellow Star Wars fan—someone Barry met on an online Star Wars toy forum and who he only knew by a screen name. That fan repaid Barry by flying him and his wife to Star Wars Celebration VII in Anaheim, Calif., a gathering of roughly 50,000 Star Wars fans, where Barry had his photo taken with the Luke Skywalker (actor Mark Hamill) and the Emperor (actor Ian McDiarmid). Experience of a lifetime? Possibly. But so is saving someone's life.

David Clapp, a garden center sales associate at Store 2043 in Warsaw, N.Y., owns every album produced by country music legend Loretta Lynn (more than 100) and has seen her perform live more than 300 times. So what was it like for this fan to meet Loretta during a visit to her ranch in Hurricane Mills, Tenn.? "I could hardly talk to her because I was too starstruck," he says. "She's so true and so real. There's nothing phony about her."

David says that Loretta's nature inspires him every day to be as genuine and caring with his Walmart customers as she is with her fans. "It makes a strong connection," he says.

I become a zombie for the sake of my customers.

There's no mistaking Lisa Bowling's department at Store 1080 in Johnson City, Tenn., in late October. Just look for the zombie.

For the past five years, Lisa has used Halloween to show her love of the popular TV show The Walking Dead by transforming into an undead ghoul—and decorating her department to match. Formerly the manager of the meat department ("You can imagine what I wanted to do with decorations there," she says, laughing), Lisa now manages stationery and celebrations, where she's looking to try some new decorating ideas.

Lisa brings her fandom to work with one goal in mind: Connect with customers, who love to get their pictures taken with Store 1080's own walking dead.

l see a Walmart connection in my child's TV performance.

Nervous. That's how Roger Louderman, operations manager at Distribution Center (DC) 6069 in St. James, Mo., felt when he watched a live showing of Peter Pan on TV last Dec. 4. His daughter Taylor played Wendy Darling opposite Allison Williams' Peter Pan and Christopher Walken's Captain Hook. "I was thinking there's the possibility of 17 or 18 million people watching my daughter do a live performance," he says. "I was nervous all the way through it and glad when it was over!" Roger sees similarities between Taylor's acting and his work at the DC. In both, he says, effort breeds success. "We take pride in how we work and how hard we work," he explains, "and we enjoy it."

Peter Pan Live! This Walmart-sponsored show got the second-highest 18–49 ratings for NBC on a Thursday (excluding sports) in three years. Get your copy at Walmart.com.

l visited pit row, and the lessons work in my store.

Last year, Angela Moore, pharmacy OTC department manager at Store 199 in Lincoln, III., won a trip to a NASCAR Sprint Series race in Fort Worth, Texas. Along with meeting drivers Regan Smith and Dale Earnhardt Jr. ("They were very polite," she says), she also got to visit the pit during the race. The teamwork Angela observed there reminded her of what makes for success at Walmart. "It takes more than one person to run a store," she says. "Things are better when we work as a team."

I made my love of Walmart permanent.

Jeff Atkins, assistant manager at Store 643 in Myrtle Beach, S.C., has the Walmart spark tattooed on his forearm. "I've always wanted to get tattoos that mean something to me," he says.

The tattoo serves as a conversation starter customers love to take pictures—and a reminder of Walmart's principles. "It keeps me thinking about the beliefs and core values of the company. I plan on being with Walmart for a long time to come."

l sat ringside and l bring that joy to my job.

Dwayne Thompson, a

customer service manager at Store 1268 in Whiteville, N.C., has been a fan of professional wrestling for 30-plus years. His favorite experience? Sitting ringside for this summer's Total Nonstop Action Wrestling world heavyweight championship match between Kurt Angle and Ethan Carter III (EC3).

"It was so loud, it was like a roar," says Dwayne, who volunteers at charity wrestling events. "The atmosphere was amazing. I was close enough to interact with the wrestlers." How does this wrestling fan put his fandom to use at Walmart? "Wrestling takes the stress away. I bring that joy to work and pass it on to everyone," Dwayne says. We connect customers with their favorite team.

When your store is less than three miles from Lambeau Field, home of the National Football League's Green Bay Packers, you're going to host some rabid fans. "It's crazy during home games," says Scott Rothe, manager of Store 1453 in Green Bay, Wis. "And when the Packers are doing well, it amps it up a little more." So Scott and his team, supported by the Home Office, buyers, and vendor partners, have worked with the Packers organization to nurture a fan culture. That's helped the store create pregame sidewalk events with special Packers merchandise, autograph opportunities, and community-building events like Shop With a Jock, where local underprivileged kids go Christmas shopping with the players.

Scott says that connecting with local fans can help any store succeed. "Think about what's important to your customer," he says. "If you understand them, it'll help you connect to them. I know that the more that we do, the better—because customers love it."

VALUES IN ACTION Respect for the Individual: Value and recognize the contributions of every associate.

Big Pride

For many years, Chris Armendariz, office associate at Store 2985 in Fresno, Calif., has been a fan of (and participant in) the Fresno Pride parade. But this year, inspired by the Walmart World article "Showing Our Pride" (February 2015), Chris decided to combine his passions—Walmart and the LGBT community and get Walmart and his fellow associates involved. "I know how proud I am to work for Walmart; I know how huge our LGBT community is here in Fresno; and I knew how monumental it would be for our community to see us," Chris says. "I had to reach out."

Chris contacted Amelia McLear, director of Walmart Public Affairs and Government Relations for the Northern California, Utah, and Nevada regions, who promptly agreed to have Walmart become a corporate sponsor of the parade. Chris then reached out to 15 stores in communities around Fresno, recruiting 112 associates to march. Joined by family and friends, the Walmart group was 150 people strong, the largest the event has seen to date.

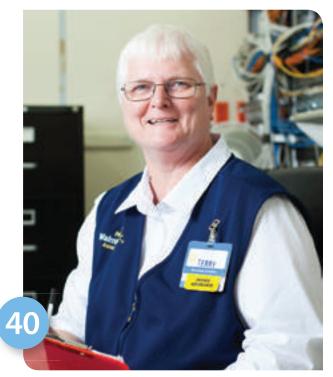

Walmart

It was an emotional experience for Chris, a 23-year associate. "I was 18 when I started at Walmart and came out at 21, and now I'm marching in a gay pride parade with the man I've loved for more than 18 years, surrounded by my fellow associates, their families, and friends," he says. "It was and still is an overwhelming feeling of joy."

Terry found a lifelong career right down the street.

They had built a new store at the end of my road, and I went out to get my mail and thought I'd peep in and see what was going on. My hair was in rollers, and I had on shorts. The store manager was peeking back at me, and he came out and said, "If you want to work, show up Monday morning." I started in receiving and did claims and layaway. I really enjoyed it, and I enjoy working with people. I've had a lot of good friends.

Message From Sam

"We've got many, many folks in our company who deserve special recognition for the great job they've done to help write this Walmart success story month after month." Message From Sam Walton, Walmart World, September 1975

Beth Hopkins

Beth's job at Walmart allowed her to stay in her hometown.

When I started at Walmart, I not only got a job, but I also got a family. I've lived in Newport my whole life, and Walmart has allowed me to live in this area and have a the work and love Walmart's technology. I really good job with good benefits. I enjoyed was here when they put in the first computer, so I know where we've come from and how far we went. The technology the company employs now makes a huge difference.

Marchita celebrates the "get 'er done" attitude at Walmart.

At my old store, for different holidays and fundraisers, everybody would dress up and participate. No one ever seemed above iteverybody was willing to work together to reach our goal. At Walmart, we have a sense of teamwork and an attitude of "get 'er done!" There are times when you think you may not be able to accomplish a task, and Walmart gives you the opportunity to succeed or fail. And if you fail, the next time you will do better!

Time Capsule: September 1975

- ► There were 123 Walmart-owned stores in eight states as of Sept. 16.
- ▶ Walmart stock closed on Sept. 30 at $12.25.
- ▶ NASCAR driver Jimmie Johnson born Sept. 17.

BOB RIGG | DEPARTMENT MANAGER, PRODUCE | STORE 197 | MACOMB, ILL.

Umpire in the Aisles

Growing up, Bob Rigg, department manager, produce, at Store 197 in Macomb, Ill., spent a lot of time playing baseball, but he found his real passion for the sport on one fateful evening more than 26 years ago.

Toward the end of his career in the U.S. Air Force, Bob happened to stop by a Little League ballpark on Reese Air Force Base in Lubbock, Texas, when a coach yelled out and asked if he would umpire their game. He hadn't umpired before, but he volunteered—and he fell in love with it.

Bob has come a long way since then. After years of umpiring—and a rigorous application process—Bob was invited to umpire the 2014 Little League World Series.

"It was a dream come true," Bob says, "I still get choked up about it." He and 15 other umpires from around the U.S. and worldwide traveled to South Williamsport, Pa., for the tournament. "I umped 13 games that aired on TV," Bob says. "Family, friends, and my entire store were going nuts! They knew this was my dream and that very few achieve this."

A Walmart associate for almost nine years, Bob credits his store management and fellow associates, who have always offered their support. "Walmart has been great to me," Bob says. "I have Saturdays off during baseball season because they know how devoted I am to volunteering. It's not about me—it's about the kids. And that's Walmart's way of helping the community. too."

JOYCE KENEBREW | CASHIER | STORE 214 | JASPER, TEXAS

The Collector

For decades, Joyce Kenebrew, a cashier at Store 214 in Jasper, Texas, has celebrated her passion for Walmart with an ever-growing collection of Walmart memorabilia. It started in the early 1990s with collectible toy trucks, and, she says, "It went from there." She has acquired more collectible items every year, and her fellow associates helped, even bringing her souvenirs from Shareholders' Meetings. One of her most valued items: a model of Sam Walton's pickup truck, given by Sam himself to a manager who passed it on to Joyce.

Joyce also proves her Walmart pride through her efforts in her store, including her work as a mentor. She's encouraged many associates who have gone on to build rewarding careers, like Amy Arrant, personnel manager, who thought Walmart would just be a part-time job, until she met Joyce. "She makes you want to know all that she knows," Amy says. "She's something else."

Joyce has even spread her Walmart love to her sisters. Lillie Kenebrew, an IMS associate, and Shirley Williams, a garden center cashier, both veterans of the store, owe their careers to their older sister's influence. "I've never seen someone so dedicated to her job as my sister," Shirley says. "Walmart is her life."

Sam Walton, the tennis ace? Read about the time he beat one young associate at walmartworld.com/

Bud Walton (center) graced the cover of the men's basketball program for 1993-1994.

Waltons Longtime Fans of University of Arkansas

Bud Walton's generosity helped build the Razorbacks' basketball arena. But the family's support of the college goes further.

Ties to the University of Arkansas run deep for the Walton family. Two of Sam's sons, Jim and Rob, graduated from the state school in Fayetteville. And Sam's brother Bud—a Razorback basketball fan-donated $15 million toward the building of the arena that opened in 1993 and bears his name. But the family's biggest form of support came in 2002 when the Walton Family Charitable Support Foundation gave a $300 million gift to the university, earmarked to establish and endow an undergraduate honors college and endow the graduate school. At the time, the gift was the largest ever given to a public university in the U.S. See more on the Waltons at WalmartMuseum.com.

In Abilene, a regular, elderly customer came in highly upset. His wife was in a nursing home and needed supplies that we didn't have. I said, "Let me know what you need, and I'll have it waiting." We ordered the supplies in bulk, and I made sure he got them. Every month he came and got his stuff from his own corner of the pharmacy.

Dress for Your Team

Sales for college football and NFL merchandise at Walmart start to increase in July and peak in September, says Danner. That means your favorite team merchandise is in stores right now. Here's how to wear your team colors proudly—on the field and off.

RECIPE OF THE MONTH

Favorite Chicken Nuggets

This appetizer from Chex™ is perfect for a crowd.

Prep time: 10 minutes Cook time: 20 minutes

- 3 cups Corn Chex™ cereal
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1/2 tsp salt
- <sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> tsp seasoned salt
- <sup>1</sup>⁄<sub>4</sub> tsp paprika
- 1/8 tsp garlic powder
- 3 tbsp butter or margarine, melted
- 1 tbsp milk
- 1 lb boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into 1-by-1-inch pieces Cooking spray
- 1. Heat oven to 400 F. Line cookie sheet with foil. Place cereal in plastic bag, and crush with rolling pin.
- 2. In medium bowl, stir together crushed cereal, cheese, salt, seasoned salt, paprika, and garlic powder. In small bowl, stir together melted butter and milk. Dip chicken into butter mixture and roll it in cereal mixture to coat. Place on foil-lined baking sheet coated with cooking spray.
- 3. Bake 9 minutes; turn nuggets over. Bake about 8 minutes longer or until coating is light golden brown, and chicken is no longer pink in center.

Celebrity Q&A Drew Barrymore

Drew Barrymore is the mind behind Flower, a line of cosmetics (and now eyewear) that's only available at Walmart. Here, Drew answers an associate's question on inspiration and shares what she's a fan of, how she feels about her fans, and more.

My [business] partner Nancy Juvonen. I love that she always keeps a cool head. I've always admired people who were amazing in their reactions to things. They have a lack of chaos in the way they function. What I would say to younger women is to find people who have those admirable qualities and follow them, imitate them, and learn from them.

Drew Says

I'm a secret fan of ...

Hip-hop aerobics dance classes. My girlfriend is a dancer, and she turned me on to these amazing underground hip-hop dance classes. You feel like you're walking into the set of Fame.

When I talk to my biggest fans... I feel honored, humbled, and very grateful.

My guilty pleasure ...

Tons of takeout food, my couch, and my TiVo. There's nothing a pizza and Game of Thrones can't cure.

My favorite part of being a mom...

I just love the amount of constant grace that is required of you, and I love the challenge of how important it is to be present when you're with [your kids].

Why I partnered with Walmart for my Flower line ...

I want to do things of really high quality that you'd find at prestige and department places, but provide them at a totally different price point. That's how I shop myself.

Why I think Walmart customers will really appreciate Flower eyewear...

I think people really do want something that's chic and timeless but modern and current and of really high quality.

Laugh It Off

Store 1453 in Green Bay, Wis., is full of Green Bay Packers fans. Here, a few of the associates share their tales of when fandom turns funny.

It was Christmastime about three years ago, and I came walking out of this store, making sure I had my receipt, when I bumped into someone. I stopped and looked up and was face to face with Aaron Rodgers. He had the whole offensive line with him. I couldn't speak. I was starstruck—and I'm never tongue-tied. He smiled at me, and that was all it took. He has a beautiful smile.

Nancy Lindley, department manager, accessories

> If you hold stock in the Green Bay Packers, you can order merchandise that has the word "owner" on it. Because I own stock, I have a shirt with "owner" on it. One day at a practice game, a kid saw my shirt and thought I was the real owner of the team. He yelled to his buddies, and the next thing I know I have 50 kids surrounding me, asking for autographs!

Scott Rothe, store manager

Are You Obsessed?

Take this quiz to gauge your fandom, then check the advice from Dr. Richard Sinacola, licensed psychologist and adjunct professor of clinical psychology and MFT at the Chicago School for Professional Psychology in Los Angeles.

When it comes to your hobby, you own ...A) One to two small keepsakesB) Collectible memorabiliaC) A secret shrine

Others might think of you as ...

A) A hobbyistB) PreoccupiedC) A fanatic

You talk about your hobby... A) Rarely

B) Only when it's relevantC) To anyone who will listen

Would you make a collage for your hobby?

A) No way B) Maybe C) Absolutely!

Has your hobby ever interfered with work or relationships? A) Never B) Seldom C) Sure, it's happened

Answers

Mostly A's: Casual fan. Everyone should have something they are passionate about, says Richard.

Mostly B's: Dedicated. "Be honest and ask yourself, 'Does my hobby affect my ability to work and my relationships?" says Richard. If it does, consider taking a break to focus on finding more balance.

Mostly C's: Obsessed. Your hobby is interfering with the rest of your life! It's time to figure out how to scale back.

SAM WALTON TAUGHT ME: How to be passionate about business and compassionate about people.

HOW HE WAS AN INSPIRATION: At a store grand opening in Tennessee, Mr. Walton learned that electric razors were being stolen faster than the thieves could be caught. So he walked to the service desk; called David Glass, Walmart's then-CEO; and gave the order to lock up electric razors at all stores. Within hours, stores were buying supplies and constructing locked showcases until more professional ones could be ordered. It was that "do it now" mentality and a message to management—if you identify a problem, then you don't waste time. You fix it.

PUTTING IT TO USE: I have to drive associates to go beyond what they think they can do, but at the same time, I have to be compassionate about their feelings and how the message is delivered.
