The “Swiss Family Hotels & Lodgings” accommodation label stands for stress-free family holidays. Besides first-rate facilities, children really are welcome here.

Family-friendliness guaranteed.

Here family friendliness is a given

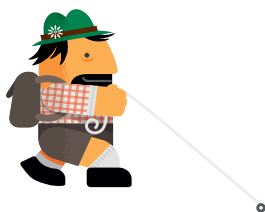

Family-friendliness means so much more than just a playground with a slide in the garden. Where families are really made welcome, parents are just as much of a priority as their children. Family-friendly facilities and a diverse array of activities ensure that family holidays are unforgettable.

While one family's idea of a perfect holiday is a camping adventure on a lakeshore, others prefer more luxury in hotels with huge playgrounds and children's clubs. The Swiss Family Hotels & Lodgings cover the entire spectrum, catering to every guest's needs and wishes. Whether it's to be a simple mountain guesthouse, a pleasant Reka Holiday Village, a comfortable holiday apartment or a luxurious hotel – all have one thing in common, namely family-friendly appeal and an approach that makes both children and their parents feel instantly at ease.

Picture-book Lower Engadin.

Guarda is not only one of the Engadin's prettiest villages, but also the home of the little mountain boy Schellen-Ursli, the great Swiss picture-book hero. A two-day excursion takes you into his world – and reveals a particularly authentic slice of Switzerland.

Schellen-Ursli is alive. He has a long white beard, a weather-beaten face and a mischievous look. The friendly 73-year-old goes by the name of Not Schlegel. As a boy, he was the little hero who inspired the pen of children's author Selina Chönz. Aged 10, he played the role himself in the first Schellen-Ursli film, which now gathers dust somewhere in the Hollywood archives and was never shown in Switzerland.

His family received 200 Swiss francs for it, the equivalent of two month's salary for a humble worker in the picturesque Engadin village of Guarda, where Not still lives today. The son of a farmer, he has never ventured into the big wide world, not even on holiday. "I'm on holiday here every day," he laughs. "Guarda is the most beautiful place on earth."

On the trail of Schellen-Ursli. Kids pay a visit to the goats in a meadow in Guarda.
© Dominik Täuber

That's also what he tells the little visitors who he whisks through the Schellen-Ursli Experience every week. It's a part of the family package with the same name: a two-day adventure in the footsteps of Switzerland's most famous picture-book hero (Heidi excepted), which includes a two-night stay in a family hotel and many extras.

During the high season, Not takes the children to the museum first, where he kits them out in traditional shirts, hats and neckerchiefs – Schellen-Ursli style. Then he leads the colourful group through the village, stopping at the Schellen-Ursli House, the bellsmith and the goat barn.

Not Schlegel gets a helping hand from his 83-year-old hunting colleague Jachen Andri Caviezel. Together they are the Schellen-Ursli dream duo – there is no question about the book, its history and the village Guarda they can't answer.

While the kids are entertained, parents can take time out for spa treatments in one of the partner hotels, or find their own fantasy world on a sunny panoramic terrace, from which the enchanting landscapes of the Lower Engadin unfold – the reality is every bit as captivating as how author Selina Chönz portrayed it in her 1945 book Schellen-Ursli.

A taste of life on the farm.

From feeding cows to riding a tractor and sampling local specialties – spend a couple of days on Tschannen family farm in Illighausen and you'll get a real feeling for country life.

Swap your bed for a barn and you can hit the hay at Tschannen farm – in a room full to the rafters with luscious straw. The cluck of chickens is your alarm clock. Maurin and Kim are no early birds ordinarily, but they love the fact it gives them more time to experience farm life. The pair are spending a couple of days with their parents at the Tschannen family farm in Illighausen. While they help farmer Daniel Tschannen feed the cows, groom the horses and stroke the rabbits, their parents enjoy a leisurely breakfast prepared with farm-fresh ingredients, with views of glittering Lake Constance in the distance.

Maurin, Kim and their father Kaspar are going to discover the fields surrounding the farm on horseback this afternoon, while their mother and Claudia Tschannen take a relaxing break in the tree shade. In the evening, Daniel Tschannen fires up the barbecue, Claudia dishes up delicious salads, and everyone eats, drinks and makes merry well into the night.

Just after 9pm, Maurin and Kim close their eyes – they go to their bed of hay willingly, for once. Their parents linger a while longer to enjoy the starry night sky and heavenly peace.
