Title:	Red Ribbon Week
Objective:	Create drug/alcohol/dating abuse awareness
Indicate Target Group:	MHS Students and Faculty
Resources Used:	loveisrespect.org, teens in the drivers seat, Red Ribbon Week national campaign
Description:	MHS Student Council gives students candies, bracelets, pencils, stickers and other small items that each have an encouraging message to stay away from drugs and alcohol as well as stay away from dating abuse. One of our unique activities we do annually each Red Ribbon Week is the "Dead Man Walking" event. This project involves students from each grade level to "die" during the school day, in which their faces are painted white and bloody by the theatre club to represent how many people die each day from drugs/alcohol/dating abuses problems. This activity really brings a new perspective to many students in Mabank High. MHS also participates in dress-up days, reading statistics over the announcements each morning and during lunches.

Title:	"I Promise."
Objective:	To encourage students to stay drug and alcohol free especially during the weekend
Indicate Target Group:	Student population
Resources Used:	Posters, paint, paintbrushes, markers and tape.
Description:	Due to the numerous amount of accidents and deaths as a result of peer pressure and poor decisions, we decided to make posters and inform our student population about making wise decisions. We encourage students to make a promise that can stay drug and alcohol free throughout the weekend. Promises were made by the students stating their promise to stay above the influence during the weekend. Examples of student promises included " I promise not to drink alcohol." I promise not to get in a vehicle with a person who has been drinking.

Title of Project: Tolerance: Our Past Does Not Have to be Our Future

Date: October 1-9 2015

Objective: To promote tolerance and understanding for each other in the student body

Target Group: AHS Student Body

Number of Persons Reached: 2,800

Resources: AHS Theater, butcher paper

Description: We created a huge banner that read "Our Past Does Not Have to be Our Future." The first part of the banner, where it said "Our Past," was accompanied with pictures of bullying victims and their stories. The middle part, where it said "does not have to be," was a bridge that was filled with bricks. On the bricks, students wrote what their idea of tolerance was. On the last part, where it said "our future," people wrote messages on multicolored hands, promising to be accepting, loving, caring, respectful, and tolerant. This was done in conjunction with the AHS Theater's production of "The Laramie Project", the story of bully victim Matthew Shepard, so students could have a better idea of how to be tolerant of the differences of others.

Title:	The Walking Dead
Objective:	To promote D.A.S.H to all of our students and make them aware about the different scenarios that put our lives in danger.
Indicate Target Group:	Irvin's student body
Resources Used:	Computer, printer, announcements, fake blood, cardboard, P.A system, cafeteria, brushes, paint, cups, string, and student volunteers
Description:	“The Walking Dead” project primarily focused and promoted D.A.S.H towards the whole school. We had several students represent victims of the different areas that D.A.S.H falls under. For example, victims of relationship abuse, victims of drunken accidents, and victims of bullying. The students dressed according to their "past situation" as they also carried signs that explain their “death” for a whole day. Throughout the week, we had different dress up days according to the different sceneraios. At the end of the week,students walked for one whole day showing others the unhealthy reasons of the situations that there is and why they should be more aware of the consequences that they lead to. Also, there we had a small presentation towards the whole campus that provided an informational skit on why several deaths can come to cause and how to prevent them.

Objective:	Encourage students to consider the benefits of living a drug free life
Indicate Target Group:	High School Students
Resources Used:	Paper forms, 8'x2' piece of butcher paper, paint, paintbrushes, tape
Description:	On the first day of Red Ribbon Week, an assembly for high school students was held. During this assembly, student council members passed out a paper form which said "I am drug free because..." to every student. Students wrote their personal reasons for being drug free on the forms. The forms were taken up at the end of the assembly. Prior to the assembly, student council members created an 8'x2' banner out of butcher paper which said "I am drug free because..." along the top. The forms filled out by students were taped to this banner and displayed in the entryway of the high school. The banner was posted for the duration of Red Ribbon Week.

Title:	"I Promise."
Objective:	To encourage students to stay drug and alcohol free especially during the weekend
Indicate Target Group:	Student population
Resources Used:	Posters, paint, paintbrushes, markers and tape.
Description:	Due to the numerous amount of accidents and deaths as a result of peer pressure and poor decisions, we decided to make posters and inform our student population about making wise decisions. We encourage students to make a promise that can stay drug and alcohol free throughout the weekend. Promises were made by the students stating their promise to stay above the influence during the weekend. Examples of student promises included " I promise not to drink alcohol." I promise not to get in a vehicle with a person who has been drinking.

Title of Project: Tolerance: Our Past Does Not Have to be Our Future

Date: October 1-9 2015

Objective: To promote tolerance and understanding for each other in the student body

Target Group: AHS Student Body

Number of Persons Reached: 2,800

Resources: AHS Theater, butcher paper

Description: We created a huge banner that read "Our Past Does Not Have to be Our Future." The first part of the banner, where it said "Our Past," was accompanied with pictures of bullying victims and their stories. The middle part, where it said "does not have to be," was a bridge that was filled with bricks. On the bricks, students wrote what their idea of tolerance was. On the last part, where it said "our future," people wrote messages on multicolored hands, promising to be accepting, loving, caring, respectful, and tolerant. This was done in conjunction with the AHS Theater's production of "The Laramie Project", the story of bully victim Matthew Shepard, so students could have a better idea of how to be tolerant of the differences of others.

Title:	Getting to Know You
Objective:	To make students feel welcome during the first week of school.
Indicate Target Group:	Students who eat in the cafeteria.
Resources Used:	Students in our Student Council class.
Description:	The objective of this project was to make everyone feel welcome at the school and for the students to meet new people. During all lunches the first week of school, the StuCo class went to the cafeteria and met five new people every lunch. The objective was to learn the person's name and five things about them. We focused on people who were sitting alone so they would feel welcome in the school. The resources used were the students in our StuCo class and we targeted the students we eat lunch in the cafeteria. This project encouraged unity within the school and students to make friends with new people to discourage cliques and bullying.

Objective:	To encourage students to live a drug free life during red ribbon week.
Indicate Target Group:	1834 Student Body, 218 Faculty and Staff
Resources Used:	Paper, paint, tape, bucket, ball and candy
Description:	Students were wearing anything animal print to show their support during red ribbon week. A banner that said "Don't Be Wild About Drugs" was made by student council members during the weekly meeting. During both lunches the D.A.S.H. committee played the game "Walk the Line" with drunk driving goggles on and having to shoot a ball in a bucket while still on the line. This was a competition between grade levels, and who ever scored the most balls in the bucket received a candy bag. This was to remind students the effects of how hard it is to do simple everyday tasks while under the influence of drugs.

Objective:	To remind students to say no to drugs
Indicate Target Group:	1824 Student Body
Resources Used:	paper plates, plastic cups, tables, and red candy
Description:	Students go to school wearing their clothes backwards to symbolize them turning their backs on drugs. A contest was held during lunch. We played "A Minute to Win It" with red plastic cups and paper plates. Students had to stack the cups and plates without any help or listening to others direct them, showing the students courage to say no to drugs. A red ribbon prize such as a piece of red candy was given out to all students that wore their clothes backwards to school that day.
