Director's Note

"The call to adventure is the point in a person's life when they are first given notice that everything is going to change, whether they know it or not."

— Joseph Campbell,
The Hero's Journey

The journey from childhood to adulthood, the adventure of simply growing up, takes courage and tenacity. The challenges of parenting require grace, patience, and incredible fortitude. Into the Woods posits that, to make these journeys, you must leave your everyday life and go into the woods, where you adventure, lose, and learn, only to return to your regular life a different person. And just when you think you've got it all figured out, you have to go to the woods again to learn a new lesson, slay a new giant, or make a new friend.

To me, this play is about heroic optimism. In a world with an absence of absolutes, for a person to hope—or to wish—can often be a brave, and life-altering choice. Into the Woods is made up of wishes and their consequences, and that pattern is a big part of what makes fairy tales tick.

Fairy tales must generate wonder. Through magic or supernatural characters or events, these stories teach us how to survive, by surprising us with events that would not occur in our world. Additionally, almost all fairy tales offer hope, either within the bounds of the story ("And they lived happily, ever after") or beyond it, teaching the story's audience a lesson so that misfortune is not repeated.

At its heart, I believe it's a play about community and hope. If, as scholar Marina Warner writes, "[fairy tales are] stories that try to find the truth and give us glimpses of greater things," then Into the Woods presents a truth I hope is true: that to survive this life, we need to keep wishing, and keep going into the woods, together.

— Kathryn Van Meter

WISHING TREE, JAPAN

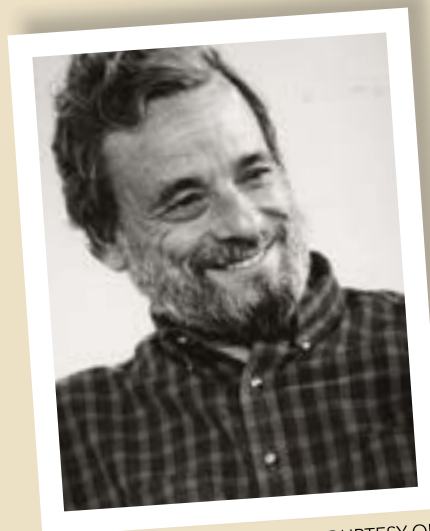

“Make a Wish Upon a Tree”

At the base of a tree in Seattle, there is a humble metal bucket filled with slips of paper, pens, and string. Above the bucket, in the branches of the tree, you’ll see hundreds of wishes. This wishing tree was started by the Hanisko family, in memory of their mother and grandmother, Judy Gregory, who loved nature and loved to connect with people. Through this tree, people — and their wishes — are all connected.

The tradition of wishing trees is timeless and global. In Japan, people write hopes and poems on slips of paper called tanzaku and hang them from trees to celebrate Tanabata, or the Star Festival. In England, travelers wedge coins or rolled pieces of paper into the cracks in trees to make a wish.

In Into the Woods, the characters each start the show with a wish. Even though they each wish for something different, the impact of their wishes affects one another. As is the case in our world, what we wish for ourselves can have an effect on the people around us — especially if the wish comes true.

As a lyricist and composer, Stephen Sondheim has shaped the modern American musical and challenged an entire generation of musical theatre artists. Sondheim has won dozens of prestigious awards and even has a Broadway theatre named after him. Sondheim’s works as composer and lyricist include such greats as: Follies, A Little Night Music, Sweeney Todd, Sunday in the Park with George, Into the Woods, Assassins, and West Side Story.

LISTENING SYSTEM The Francis J. Gaudette Theatre and the Everett Performing Arts Center have hearing loop systems which are compatible with most hearing aids. Headsets are available in both venues on a first-come, first-served basis from the House Manager and are free of charge with a valid ID.

THE SHOW MUST GO ON Whether it rains, sleets, snows or blows, only a power outage or building destruction will prevent a performance from taking place as scheduled.

PATRON CONSIDERATIONS Please arrive on time. Check your tickets for your performance time. Late arrivals are very disruptive to fellow patrons and to the artists onstage. Please give yourself plenty of time to get to the Theatre. Patrons arriving late will not be seated until a suitable pause in the performance at the House Manager's discretion. Please turn off all pagers, cellular phones and watch alarms before entering the Theatre. No text messaging is allowed during the performance. No photography, video or sound recording of any performance is allowed based on royalty and union agreements.

Be aware that talking, humming and tapping feet during a performance is also disruptive to the patrons around you. Before the overture begins, please turn off playbill flashlights and unwrap cough drops. In intimate auditoriums like the Francis J. Gaudette Theatre and the Everett Performing Arts Center, even the actors can hear these seemingly small noises. Please use moderation in applying perfume, cologne or lotion, as many people are allergic to scents.

In consideration of your fellow patrons and the actors, please do not leave the performance during the curtain call.

“The Bean Theme”

Into the Woods deals with repeated “themes”. The repetition helps tell the story and point to the ideas we can track throughout the show. While some of these patterns are in the words, other patterns emerge through the music.

An example of a repeated musical theme is what Sondheim calls “the bean theme”. The clearest time you’ll hear the bean theme is when the Baker gives the magic beans to Jack – each bean is one note of the theme. But keep an ear open and you’ll hear it again as it plays underneath Jack’s emotional goodbye to Milky White and when the Baker’s Wife sings “And maybe they’re really magic, who knows?” You’ll also hear both Rapunzel and the Witch sing the bean theme during the show. Those with a keen ear will hear the bean theme again when the beanstalk grows and in “Your Fault” – but only for a second.

What story does the bean theme tell? It helps us track the magic of the beans, the same magic that starts with the Witch’s mother’s garden and spreads to the Baker’s father, the Baker and his wife, Rapunzel, Jack, and, eventually, everyone in the Kingdom. The musical theme helps us follow the magic in the play.
