[4] The Rule permits a sale of an entire practice attendant upon retirement from the private practice of law within the jurisdiction. Its provisions, therefore, accommodate the lawyer who sells the practice upon the occasion of moving to another state.

[5] This Rule also permits a lawyer or law firm to sell an area of practice. If an area of practice is sold and the lawyer remains in the active practice of law, the lawyer must cease accepting any matters in the area of practice that has been sold, either as counsel or co-counsel or by assuming joint responsibility for a matter in connection with the division of a fee with another lawyer as would otherwise be permitted by Rule 1.5(d). For example, a lawyer with a substantial number of estate planning matters and a substantial number of probate administration cases may sell the estate planning portion of the practice but remain in the practice of law by concentrating on probate administration; however, that practitioner may not thereafter accept any estate planning matters. Although a lawyer who leaves a jurisdiction or geographical area typically would sell the entire practice, this Rule permits the lawyer to limit the sale to one or more areas of the practice, thereby preserving the lawyer's right to continue practice in the areas of the practice that were not sold.

Sale of Entire Practice or Entire Area of Practice

[6] The Rule requires that the seller's entire practice, or an entire area of practice, be sold. The prohibition against sale of less than an entire practice area protects those clients whose matters are less lucrative and who might find it difficult to secure other counsel if a sale could be limited to substantial fee-generating matters. The purchasers are required to undertake all client matters in the practice or practice area, subject to client consent. This requirement is satisfied, however, even if a purchaser is unable to undertake a particular client matter because of a conflict of interest.

Client Confidences, Consent and Notice

[7] Negotiations between seller and prospective purchaser prior to disclosure of information relating to a specific representation of an identifiable client no more violate the confidentiality provisions of Rule 1.6 than do preliminary discussions concerning the possible association of another lawyer or mergers between firms, with respect to which client consent is not required. Providing the purchaser access to client-specific information relating to the representation and to the file, however, requires client consent. The Rule provides that before such information can be disclosed by the seller to the purchaser written notice must be mailed to the client at the client's last known address. The notice must include the identity of the purchaser, and the client must be told that the decision to consent or make other arrangements must be made within 60 days of the mailing of the notice. If nothing is heard from the client within that time, consent to the sale is presumed.

[8] [No Colorado comment.]

[9] All the elements of client autonomy, including the client's absolute right to discharge a lawyer and transfer the representation to another, survive the sale of the practice or area of practice.

Fee Arrangements Between Client and Purchaser

[10] The sale may not be financed by increases in fees charged the clients of the practice. Existing agreements between the seller and the client as to fees and the scope of the work must be honored by the purchaser.

Other Applicable Ethical Standards

[11] Lawyers participating in the sale of a law practice or a practice area are subject to the ethical standards applicable to involving another lawyer in the representation of a client. These include, for example, the seller's obligation to exercise competence in identifying a purchaser qualified to assume the practice and the purchaser's obligation to undertake the representation competently (see Rule 1.1); the obligation to avoid disqualifying conflicts, and to secure the client's informed consent for those conflicts that can be agreed to (see Rule 1.7 regarding conflicts and Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of informed consent); and the obligation to protect information relating to the representation (see Rules 1.6 and 1.9).

[12] If approval of the substitution of the purchasing lawyer for the selling lawyer is required by the rules of any tribunal in which a matter is pending, such approval must be obtained before the matter can be included in the sale (see Rule 1.16).

Applicability of the Rule

[13] This Rule applies to the sale of a law practice by representatives of a deceased, disabled or disappeared lawyer. Thus, the seller may be represented by a non-lawyer representative not subject to these Rules. Since, however, no lawyer may participate in a sale of a law practice which does not conform to the requirements of this Rule, the representatives of the seller as well as the purchasing lawyer can be expected to see to it that they are met.

[14] Admission to or retirement from a law partnership or professional association, retirement plans and similar arrangements, and a sale of tangible assets of a law practice, do not constitute a sale or purchase governed by this Rule.

[15] This Rule does not apply to the transfers of legal representation between lawyers when such transfers are unrelated to the sale of a practice or an area of practice.

Rule 1.18. Duties to Prospective Client

(a) A person who consults with a lawyer about the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship with respect to a matter is a prospective client.

(b) Even when no client-lawyer relationship ensues, a lawyer who has learned information from a prospective client shall not use or reveal that information, except as Rule 1.9 would permit with respect to information of a former client.

(c) A lawyer subject to paragraph (b) shall not represent a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the lawyer received information from the prospective client that could be significantly harmful to the prospective client, except as provided in paragraph (d). If a lawyer is disqualified from representation under this paragraph, no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter, except as provided in paragraph (d).

(d) When the lawyer has received disqualifying information as defined in paragraph (c), representation is permissible if:

(1) both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed consent, confirmed in writing; or

(2) the lawyer who received the information took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more disqualifying information than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client; and

(i) the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and

(ii) written notice is promptly given to the prospective client.

COMMENT

[1] Prospective clients, like clients, may disclose information to a lawyer, place documents or other property in the lawyer's custody, or rely on the lawyer's advice. A lawyer's consultations with a prospective client usually are limited in time and depth and leave both the prospective client and the lawyer free (and sometimes required) to proceed no further. Hence, prospective clients should receive some but not all of the protection afforded clients.

[2] A person becomes a prospective client by consulting with a lawyer about the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship with respect to a matter. Whether communications, including written, oral, or electronic communications, constitute a consultation depends on the circumstances. For example, a consultation is likely to have occurred if a lawyer, either in person or through the lawyer's advertising in any medium, specifically requests or invites the submission of information about a potential representation without clear and reasonably understandable warnings and cautionary statements that limit the lawyer's obligations, and a person provides information in response. See also Comment [4]. In contrast, a consultation does not occur if a person provides information to a lawyer in response to advertising that merely describes the lawyer's education, experience, areas of practice, and contact information, or provides legal information of general interest. Such a person communicates information unilaterally to a lawyer, without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship, and is thus not a ''prospective client.'' Moreover, a person who communicates with a lawyer for the purpose of disqualifying the lawyer is not a ''prospective client.''

[3] It is often necessary for a prospective client to reveal information to the lawyer during an initial consultation prior to the decision about formation of a client-lawyer relationship. The lawyer often must learn such information to determine whether there is a conflict of interest with an existing client and whether the matter is one that the lawyer is willing to undertake. Paragraph (b) prohibits the lawyer from using or revealing that information, except as permitted by Rule 1.9, even if the client or lawyer decides not to proceed with the representation. The duty exists regardless of how brief the initial conference may be.

[4] In order to avoid acquiring disqualifying information from a prospective client, a lawyer considering whether or not to undertake a new matter should limit the initial consultation to only such information as reasonably appears necessary for that purpose. Where the information indicates that a conflict of interest or other reason for non-representation exists, the lawyer should so inform the prospective client or decline the representation. If the prospective client wishes to retain the lawyer, and if consent is possible under Rule 1.7, then consent from all affected present or former clients must be obtained before accepting the representation.

[5] A lawyer may condition a consultation with a prospective client on the person's informed consent that no information disclosed during the consultation will prohibit the lawyer from representing a different client in the matter. See Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of informed consent. If the agreement expressly so provides, the prospective client may also consent to the lawyer's subsequent use of information received from the prospective client.

[6] Even in the absence of an agreement, under paragraph (c), the lawyer is not prohibited from representing a client with interests adverse to those of the prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter unless the lawyer has received from the prospective client information that could be significantly harmful if used in the matter.

[7] Under paragraph (c), the prohibition in this Rule is imputed to other lawyers as provided in Rule 1.10, but, under paragraph (d)(1), imputation may be avoided if the lawyer obtains the informed consent, confirmed in writing, of both the prospective and affected clients. In the alternative, imputation may be avoided if the conditions of paragraph (d)(2) are met and all disqualified lawyers are timely screened and written notice is promptly given to the prospective client. See Rule 1.0(k) (requirements for screening procedures). Paragraph (d)(2)(i) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.

[8] Notice, including a general description of the subject matter about which the lawyer was consulted, and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.

[9] For a lawyer's duties when a prospective client entrusts valuables or papers to the lawyer's care, see Rules 1.15A and 1.15D.

COUNSELOR

Rule 2.1. Advisor

In representing a client, a lawyer shall exercise independent professional judgment and render candid advice. In rendering advice, a lawyer may refer not only to law but to other considerations such as moral, economic, social and political factors, that may be relevant to the client's situation. In a matter involving or expected to involve litigation, a lawyer should advise the client of alternative forms of dispute resolution that might reasonably be pursued to attempt to resolve the legal dispute or to reach the legal objective sought.

COMMENT

Scope of Advice

[1] A client is entitled to straightforward advice expressing the lawyer's honest assessment. Legal advice often involves unpleasant facts and alternatives that a client may be disinclined to confront. In presenting advice, a lawyer endeavors to sustain the client's morale and may put advice in as acceptable a form as honesty permits. However, a lawyer should not be deterred from giving candid advice by the prospect that the advice will be unpalatable to the client.

[2] Advice couched in narrow legal terms may be of little value to a client, especially where practical considerations, such as cost or effects on other people, are predominant. Purely technical legal advice, therefore, can sometimes be inadequate. In a matter involving the allocation of parental rights and responsibilities, a lawyer should consider advising the client that parental conflict can have a significant adverse effect on minor children. It is proper for a lawyer to refer to relevant moral and ethical considerations in giving advice. Although a lawyer is not a moral advisor as such, moral and ethical considerations impinge upon most legal questions and may decisively influence how the law will be applied.

[3] A client may expressly or impliedly ask the lawyer for purely technical advice. When such a request is made by a client experienced in legal matters, the lawyer may accept it at face value. When such a request is made by a client inexperienced in legal matters, however, the lawyer's responsibility as advisor may include indicating that more may be involved than strictly legal considerations.

[4] Matters that go beyond strictly legal questions may also be in the domain of another profession. Family matters can involve problems within the professional competence of psychiatry, clinical psychology or social work; business matters can involve problems within the competence of the accounting profession or of financial specialists. Where consultation with a professional in another field is itself something a competent lawyer would recommend, the lawyer should make such a recommendation. At the same time, a lawyer's advice at its best often consists of recommending a course of action in the face of conflicting recommendations of experts.

Offering Advice

[5] In general, a lawyer is not expected to give advice until asked by the client. However, when a lawyer knows that a client proposes a course of action that is likely to result in substantial adverse legal consequences to the client, the lawyer's duty to the client under Rule 1.4 may require that the lawyer offer advice if the client's course of action is related to the representation. Similarly, when a matter is likely to involve litigation, it may be necessary under Rule 1.4 to inform the client of forms of dispute resolution that might constitute reasonable alternatives to litigation. A lawyer ordinarily has no duty to initiate investigation of a client's affairs or to give advice that the client has indicated is unwanted, but a lawyer may initiate advice to a client when doing so appears to be in the client's interest.

Rule 2.3. Evaluation for Use by Third Persons

(a) A lawyer may provide an evaluation of a matter affecting a client for the use of someone other than the client if the lawyer reasonably believes that making the evaluation is compatible with other aspects of the lawyer's relationship with the client.

(b) When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the evaluation is likely to affect the client's interests materially and adversely, the lawyer shall not provide the evaluation unless the client gives informed consent.

(c) Except as disclosure is authorized in connection with a report of an evaluation, information relating to the evaluation is otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

COMMENT

Definition

[1] An evaluation may be performed at the client's direction or when impliedly authorized in order to carry out the representation. See Rule 1.2. Such an evaluation may be for the primary purpose of establishing information for the benefit of third parties; for example, an opinion concerning the title of property rendered at the behest of a vendor for the information of a prospective purchaser, or at the behest of a borrower for the information of a prospective lender. In some situations, the evaluation may be required by a government agency; for example, an opinion concerning the legality of the securities registered for sale under the securities laws. In other instances, the evaluation may be required by a third person, such as a purchaser of a business.

[2] A legal evaluation should be distinguished from an investigation of a person with whom the lawyer does not have a client-lawyer relationship. For example, a lawyer retained by a purchaser to analyze a vendor's title to property does not have a client-lawyer relationship with the vendor. So also, an investigation into a person's affairs by a government lawyer, or by special counsel employed by the government, is not an evaluation as that term is used in this Rule. The question is whether the lawyer is retained by the person whose affairs are being examined. When the lawyer is retained by that person, the general rules concerning loyalty to client and preservation of confidences apply, which is not the case if the lawyer is retained by someone else. For this reason, it is essential to identify the person by whom the lawyer is retained. This should be made clear not only to the person under examination, but also to others to whom the results are to be made available.

Duties Owed to Third Person and Client

[3] When the evaluation is intended for the information or use of a third person, a legal duty to that person may or may not arise. That legal question is beyond the scope of this Rule. However, since such an evaluation involves a departure from the normal client-lawyer relationship, careful analysis of the situation is required. The lawyer must be satisfied as a matter of professional judgment that making the evaluation is compatible with other functions undertaken in behalf of the client. For example, if the lawyer is acting as advocate in defending the client against charges of fraud, it would normally be incompatible with that responsibility for the lawyer to perform an evaluation for others concerning the same or a related transaction. Assuming no such impediment is apparent, however, the lawyer should advise the client of the implications of the evaluation, particularly the lawyer's responsibilities to third persons and the duty to disseminate the findings.

Access to and Disclosure of Information

[4] The quality of an evaluation depends on the freedom and extent of the investigation upon which it is based. Ordinarily a lawyer should have whatever latitude of investigation seems necessary as a matter of professional judgment. Under some circumstances, however, the terms of the evaluation may be limited. For example, certain issues or sources may be categorically excluded, or the scope of search may be limited by time constraints or the noncooperation of persons having relevant information. Any such limitations that are material to the evaluation should be described in the report. If after a lawyer has commenced an evaluation, the client refuses to comply with the terms upon which it was understood the evaluation was to have been made, the lawyer's obligations are determined by law, having reference to the terms of the client's agreement and the surrounding circumstances. In no circumstances is the lawyer permitted to knowingly make a false statement of material fact or law in providing an evaluation under this Rule. See Rule 4.1.

Obtaining Client's Informed Consent

[5] Information relating to an evaluation is protected by Rule 1.6. In many situations, providing an evaluation to a third party poses no significant risk to the client; thus, the lawyer may be impliedly authorized to disclose information to carry out the representation. See Rule 1.6(a). Where, however, it is reasonably likely that providing the evaluation will affect the client's interests materially and adversely, the lawyer must first obtain the client's consent after the client has been adequately informed concerning the important possible effects on the client's interests. See Rules 1.6(a) and 1.0(e).

Financial Auditors' Requests for Information

[6] When a question concerning the legal situation of a client arises at the instance of the client's financial auditor and the question is referred to the lawyer, the lawyer's response may be made in accordance with procedures recognized in the legal profession. Such a procedure is set forth in the American Bar Association Statement of Policy Regarding Lawyers' Responses to Auditors' Requests for Information, adopted in 1975.

Rule 2.4. Lawyer Serving as Third-party Neutral

(a) A lawyer serves as a third-party neutral when the lawyer assists two or more persons who are not clients of the lawyer to reach a resolution of a dispute or other matter that has arisen between them. Service as a third-party neutral may include service as an arbitrator, a mediator or in such other capacity as will enable the lawyer to assist the parties to resolve the matter.

(b) A lawyer serving as a third-party neutral shall inform unrepresented parties that the lawyer is not representing them. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that a party does not understand the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall explain the difference between the lawyer's role as a third-party neutral and a lawyer's role as one who represents a client.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] Alternative dispute resolution has become a substantial part of the civil justice system. Aside from representing clients in dispute-resolution processes, lawyers often serve as third-party neutrals. A third-party neutral is a person, such as a mediator, arbitrator, conciliator or evaluator, who assists the parties, represented or unrepresented, in the resolution of a dispute or in the arrangement of a transaction. Whether a third-party neutral serves primarily as a facilitator, evaluator or decision maker depends on the particular process that is either selected by the parties or mandated by a court.

[2] The role of a third-party neutral is not unique to lawyers, although, in some court-connected contexts, only lawyers are allowed to serve in this role or to handle certain types of cases. In performing this role, the lawyer may be subject to court rules or other law that apply either to third-party neutrals generally or to lawyers serving as third-party neutrals. Lawyer-neutrals may also be subject to various codes of ethics, such as the Code of Ethics for Arbitration in Commercial Disputes prepared by a joint committee of the American Bar Association and the American Arbitration Association or the Model Standards of Conduct for Mediators jointly prepared by the American Bar Association, the American Arbitration Association and the Society of Professionals in Dispute Resolution.

[3] Unlike nonlawyers who serve as third-party neutrals, lawyers serving in this role may experience unique problems as a result of differences between the role of a third-party neutral and a lawyer's service as a client representative. The potential for confusion is significant when the parties are unrepresented in the process. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer-neutral to inform unrepresented parties that the lawyer is not representing them. For some parties, particularly parties who frequently use dispute-resolution processes, this information will be sufficient. For others, particularly those who are using the process for the first time, more information will be required. Where appropriate, the lawyer should inform unrepresented parties of the important differences between the lawyer's role as third-party neutral and a lawyer's role as a client representative, including the inapplicability of the attorney-client evidentiary privilege. The extent of disclosure required under this paragraph will depend on the particular parties involved and the subject matter of the proceeding, as well as the particular features of the dispute-resolution process selected.

[4] A lawyer who serves as a third-party neutral subsequently may be asked to serve as a lawyer representing a client in the same matter. The conflicts of interest that arise for both the individual lawyer and the lawyer's law firm are addressed in Rule 1.12.

[5] Lawyers who represent clients in alternative dispute-resolution processes are governed by the Rules of Professional Conduct. When the dispute-resolution process takes place before a tribunal, as in binding arbitration (see Rule 1.0(m)), the lawyer's duty of candor is governed by Rule 3.3. Otherwise, the lawyer's duty of candor toward both the third-party neutral and other parties is governed by Rule 4.1.

ADVOCATE

Rule 3.1. Meritorious Claims and Contentions

A lawyer shall not bring or defend a proceeding, or assert or controvert an issue therein, unless there is a basis in law and fact for doing so that is not frivolous, which includes a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law. A lawyer for the defendant in a criminal proceeding, or the respondent in a proceeding that could result in incarceration, may nevertheless so defend the proceeding as to require that every element of the case be established.

COMMENT

[1] The advocate has a duty to use legal procedure for the fullest benefit of the client's cause, but also a duty not to abuse legal procedure. The law, both procedural and substantive, establishes the limits within which an advocate may proceed. However, the law is not always clear and never is static. Accordingly, in determining the proper scope of advocacy, account must be taken of the law's ambiguities and potential for change.

[2] The filing of an action or defense or similar action taken for a client is not frivolous merely because the facts have not first been fully substantiated or because the lawyer expects to develop vital evidence only by discovery. What is required of lawyers, however, is that they inform themselves about the facts of their clients' cases and the applicable law and determine that they can make good faith arguments in support of their clients' positions. Such action is not frivolous even though the lawyer believes that the client's position ultimately will not prevail. The action is frivolous, however, if the lawyer is unable either to make a good faith argument on the merits of the action taken or to support the action taken by a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law.

[3] The lawyer's obligations under this Rule are subordinate to federal or state constitutional law that entitles a defendant in a criminal matter to the assistance of counsel in presenting a claim or contention that otherwise would be prohibited by this Rule. See A.L.L. v. People ex rel. C.Z., 226 P.3d 1054, 1060 (Colo. 2010) (addressing obligations of court-approved counsel for a respondent parent in a termination of parental rights appeal).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''Out of Bounds: Boundary Issues in the Practice of Law'', see 43 Colo. Law. 57 (Dec. 2014).

Annotator's note. Rule 3.1 is similar to Rule 3.1 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The constitutional right to petition the government for a redress of grievances protects appeals from court decisions unless the sham exemption applies. Therefore, an attorney may not be disciplined unless the filing of an appeal is objectively without merit and the attorney subjectively intended an ulterior motive. In re Foster, 253 P.3d 1244 (Colo. 2011).

Public censure was appropriate where the attorney failed to cooperate in a disciplinary investigation, made frivolous motions, and made a statement with reckless disregard as to its truth or falsity concerning the qualifications or integrity of a judge. People v. Thomas, 925 P.2d 1081 (Colo. 1996).

A violation of this rule must be proved by clear and convincing evidence in a disciplinary proceeding. Therefore, the fact that a district court had found by a preponderance of the evidence that an attorney had made a frivolous motion did not preclude the hearing board from determining that the attorney had not violated this rule. In re Egbune, 971 P.2d 1065 (Colo. 1999).

Nine-month suspension stayed upon the requirement to pay restitution to clients is justified when violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules, particularly given the substantial and continuous incompetence, advancement of meritless claims, and significant financial harm conduct caused clients in this case. People v. Bontrager, 407 P.3d 1235 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2017).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. Matter of Olsen, 2014 CO 42, 326 P.3d 1004.

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Robinson, 853 P.2d 1145 (Colo. 1993); People v. Maynard, 238 P.3d 672 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2009).

Constitutionality upheld. This rule is not unconstitutionally vague on its face or as applied. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Standards used in determining a constitutional challenge to a statute are used in determining a constitutional challenge to this rule. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Presumption of constitutionality attaches to such enactment, and the burden is on the party challenging an enactment to demonstrate its unconstitutionality beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Since a disciplinary rule is promulgated for the purpose of guiding lawyers in their professional conduct, and is not directed to the public at large, the central consideration in resolving a vagueness challenge should be whether the nature of the proscribed conduct encompassed by the rule is readily understandable to a licensed lawyer. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Attorney's psychological problems considered as aggravating and mitigating circumstances in arriving at a recommendation for discipline. The presence of psychological problems, however, does not automatically prevent the attorney from assisting in his own defense where evidence is shown to the contrary. People v. Belina, 765 P.2d 121 (Colo. 1988).

Attorney's conduct was so careless or reckless as to constitute sufficient showing of knowledge for violation of subsection (A)(4) of this disciplinary rule. People v. Rader, 822 P.2d 950 (Colo. 1992).

In order to find that attorney engaged in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation in violation of this disciplinary rule, it must be shown that attorney had culpable mental state greater than simple negligence. People v. Rader, 822 P.2d 950 (Colo. 1992).

Failure to respond to inquiries from referral service, to pay consultation charges and forwarding fees to service, and to return case status reports to service constitutes a violation of sections (A)(1), (A)(4), and (A)(6). People v. Taylor, 799 P.2d 930 (Colo. 1990).

Attorney's conduct violated section (A)(4), (A)(5), (A)(6), and DR 2-106(A), where the attorney's multiple billing practice resulted in the charging or collection of a clearly excessive fee because the compensation claimed bore no rational relationship to the work performed and exceeded the compensation authorized by law. People v. Walker, 832 P.2d 935 (Colo. 1992).

Attorney's conduct violated sections (A)(4) and (A)(5) where the attorney failed to file applications for approval of fees in a bankruptcy case, did not seek court approval of compensation after the bankruptcy petition was filed, and left the state while the case was pending without providing his client means of contacting him. These actions, aggravated by a previous public censure, warranted a 60-day suspension. People v. Mills, 923 P.2d 116 (Colo. 1996).

Hearing board should not have found violations of sections (A)(4) and (A)(5) where board absolved attorney of the charges the complaint advised him to defend. By failing to find a violation for the failure to disclose certain payments until ordered to do so, the board should not have proceeded with finding that attorney committed misconduct in not detailing the sources of the disputed income. In re Quiat, 979 P.2d 1029 (Colo. 1999).

Board erred in concluding that attorney's representation of individual client with whom he had a business relationship constituted conduct adversely reflecting on attorney's fitness to practice law. Neither complainant's expert nor hearing board paid sufficient attention to the specific and unusual facts of the general and limited partnerships' actual or potential liabilities. The record does not support the board's findings that an actual conflict existed among the general and limited partners, including the attorney, or that potential for conflict was likely. In re Quiat, 979 P.2d 1029 (Colo. 1999).

An attorney's appearance as counsel of record in numerous court proceedings following an order of suspension constituted a violation of DR 1-102(A)(4). People v. Kargol, 854 P.2d 1267 (Colo. 1993).

Attorney's effort to cause suppression of relevant evidence at driver license revocation proceeding in a manner not authorized by statute or other law constitutes conduct prejudicial to administration of justice and contrary to DR 1-102 (A)(5). People v. Attorney A., 861 P.2d 705 (Colo. 1993).

Attorney's effort to condition settlement of a malpractice claim upon client's agreement not to file a grievance against him constituted conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice in violation of paragraph (A)(5). People v. Moffitt, 801 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1990).

Adopting a conscious scheme to take ownership of homes, collect rents from tenants, make virtually no efforts to sell the homes, and permit foreclosures to occur on which the department of housing and urban development (HUD) would absorb the losses constituted equity skimming in violation of § 18-5-802 and constitutes a violation of sections (A)(4) and (A)(6) for which suspension for one year is appropriate. People v. Phelps, 837 P.2d 755 (Colo. 1992).

As officers of the court, lawyers are charged with obedience to the laws of this state and to the laws of the United States, and intentional violation by them of these laws subjects them to the severest discipline. People v. Wilson, 176 Colo. 389, 490 P.2d 954 (1971).

The crime with which an attorney is charged is one of serious consequences denoting moral turpitude and he is found guilty of such a crime, he cannot, in good conscience, be permitted to practice law in this state. People v. Wilson, 176 Colo. 389, 490 P.2d 954 (1971).

It is unprofessional conduct and dishonorable to deal other than candidly with the facts in drawing affidavits and other documents. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

By filing false documents, an attorney perpetrates a fraud upon the court. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

Where an attorney receives as a fee from one of his clients stolen property, then even though he does ask the client whether the item was stolen and receives a negative answer from him, he should make further inquiry as to the actual source of the item, and failure to do so constitutes a breach of his obligations as a member of the bar. People v. Zelinger, 179 Colo. 379, 504 P.2d 668 (1972).

License to practice law assures public that the lawyer who holds the license will perform basic legal tasks honestly and without undue delay, in accordance with the highest standards of professional conduct. People v. Witt, 200 Colo. 522, 616 P.2d 139 (1980); People v. Dixon, 621 P.2d 322 (Colo. 1981); People v. Kendrick, 646 P.2d 337 (Colo. 1982).

An attorney must adhere with dedication to the highest standards of honesty and integrity in order that members of the public are assured that they may deal with attorneys with the knowledge that their matters will be handled with absolute propriety. People v. Golden, 654 P.2d 853 (Colo. 1982).

Client has right to expect competency and integrity from lawyer. A client has every right to expect that conduct taken on its behalf will be carried out with that competence and integrity ideally shared by every lawyer who is licensed to practice law in the jurisdiction. Williams v. Burns, 463 F. Supp. 1278 (D. Colo. 1979); People v. Pooley, 774 P.2d 239 (Colo. 1989).

Public expects appropriate discipline for misconduct. The public has a right to expect that one who engages in professional misconduct will be disciplined appropriately. People v. Witt 200 Colo. 522, 616 P.2d 139 (1980); People v. Dixon, 621 P.2d 322 (Colo. 1981).

Most severe punishment is required when a lawyer disregards his professional obligations and converts his clients' funds to his own use. People v. Kluver, 199 Colo. 511, 611 P.2d 971 (1980); People v. Kendrick, 646 P.2d 337 (Colo. 1982); People v. Bealmear, 655 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1982).

Conversion of client funds is conduct warranting disbarment because it destroys the trust essential to the attorney-client relationship, severely damages the public's perception of attorneys, and erodes public confidence in our legal system. People v. Radosevich, 783 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1989).

Where attorney, as trustee, withdrew $13,100 from the trust without the client-settlor's knowledge and refused to repay the money when given the opportunity by the client-settlor, attorney's conduct was sufficient to warrant disbarment. People v. Whitcomb, 819 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1991).

Conversion of client funds cannot be tolerated regardless of the apparent fact that the attorney did not use such funds for personal gain but to pay the costs and expenses incident to handling a large practice that included many non-paying clients. People v. Franco, 698 P.2d 230 (Colo. 1985).

Fitness to practice law adversely reflected upon by attorney's business judgment and violations of the code of professional responsibility although his legal competence was not questioned. People v. Franco, 698 P.2d 230 (Colo. 1985).

Failure to represent a client also adversely reflects upon an attorney's fitness to practice law. People v. Coca, 732 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1987).

Attorney should never obstruct justice or judicial process. An attorney has a high duty as an officer of the court to never participate in any scheme to obstruct the administration of justice or the judicial process. People v. Kenelly, 648 P.2d 1065 (Colo. 1982); People v. Haase, 781 P.2d 80 (Colo. 1989).

Submission of false transcript to obtain admission to law school and to qualify for admission as a member of the bar is a violation of this rule and requires that respondent's admission to the bar be voided. People v. Culpepper, 645 P.2d 5 (Colo. 1982).

Failure to disclose a misdemeanor conviction in another state when applying for the bar and subsequent disbarment from the other state constitutes conduct involving fraud, deceit, and misrepresentation prejudicial to the administration of justice. People v. Mattox, 639 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982).

Lawyer owes obligation to client to act with diligence in handling his client's legal work and in his representation of his client in court. People v. Bugg, 200 Colo. 512, 616 P.2d 133 (1980).

Failure to take any action on behalf of his client after he was retained and entrusted with work and in making representations to his client which were false, an attorney violates the code of professional responsibility and C.R.C.P. 241.6. People v. Southern, 638 P.2d 787 (Colo. 1982).

Fact that attorney informed client that workers' compensation hearing was cancelled due to attorney's illness when attorney was actually abandoning practice constituted conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation in violation of this rule. People v. Felker, 770 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1989).

Fabricating documents to justify conduct breaches attorney's ethical obligations to his client and to the bar. People v. Yost, 729 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1986).

Falsification of an adoption decree with the original intent to use it for a fraudulent purpose is forgery in violation of § 18-5-103 and is a violation of DR 1-102 and DR 7-102 whether of not the attorney who falsified the decree actually used or attempted to use the decree. People v. Marmon, 903 P.2d 651 (Colo. 1995).

Absence of contempt finding by trial court concerning attorney's willful failure to pay child support is a non-dispositive factor to be considered when imposing discipline. People v. Kolenc, 887 P.2d 1024 (Colo. 1994).

Trial court's finding in child support hearing that attorney willfully violated child support order should be accorded collateral estoppel effect before the hearing board as long as court makes finding by clear and convincing evidence or beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Kolenc, 887 P.2d 1024 (Colo. 1994).

Attorney violated this rule and C.R.P.C. 1.1 when he prepared and filed child support worksheets that failed to properly reflect the new stipulation concerning custody. People v. Davies, 926 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1996).

Lawyer may not secretly record any conversation he has with another lawyer or person. People v. Selby, 198 Colo. 386, 606 P.2d 45 (1979).

Telephone conversation, which attorney initiated and recorded without the permission of other party to conversation established unethical conduct on attorney's part. People v. Wallin, 621 P.2d 330 (Colo. 1981).

Inherent in the undisclosed use of a recording device is an element of deception, artifice, and trickery which does not comport with the high standards of candor and fairness by which all attorneys are bound. People v. Selby, 198 Colo. 386, 606 P.2d 45 (1979); People v. Smith, 778 P.2d 685 (Colo. 1989).

Suspension from practice in tax court is a determination of misconduct in another jurisdiction constituting grounds for discipline under these rules. People v. Hartman, 744 P.2d 482 (Colo. 1987).

Unfounded assertion of attorney's lien violates professional code. The assertion of an attorney's lien in circumstances where the attorney has no statutory or legal foundation for a lien and, in fact, has only an uncertain claim to the fee on which the purported lien is founded violates the code of professional responsibility. People v. Razatos, 636 P.2d 666 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed, 455 U.S. 930, 102 S. Ct. 1415, 71 L. Ed. 2d 639 (1982).

Willful and knowing failure to make a federal income tax return is an offense involving moral turpitude. People v. Emeson, 638 P.2d 293 (Colo. 1981).

Both the charges and the well pleaded complaint are deemed admitted by the entry of a default judgment. People v. Richards, 748 P.2d 341 (Colo. 1987).

Continued representation of clients with conflicting interests violates this rule and warrants discipline. People v. Awenius, 653 P.2d 740 (Colo. 1982).

Attorney's representation of two estates where the beneficiaries of the estates had conflicting interests and the attorney fails to obtain waivers from the beneficiaries is a violation of this rule. People v. Gebauer, 821 P.2d 782 (Colo. 1991).

Attorney violated this rule by lying to grievance committee counsel regarding the return of client's files. People v. Felker, 770 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1989).

Conduct found to violate disciplinary rules. People v. Bugg, 635 P.2d 881 (Colo. 1981); People v. Sachs, 732 P.2d 633 (Colo. 1987); People v. Ross, 810 P.2d 659 (Colo. 1991).

Conduct held to violate this rule. People v. Goss, 646 P.2d 334 (Colo. 1982).

Applied in People v. Spiegel, 193 Colo. 161, 567 P.2d 353 (1977); People v. Schermerhorn, 193 Colo. 364, 567 P.2d 799 (1977); People v. Pittam, 194 Colo. 104, 572 P.2d 135 (1977); People v. Good, 195 Colo. 177, 576 P.2d 1020 (1978); People v. McMichael, 196 Colo. 128, 586 P.2d 1 (1978); People v. Susman, 196 Colo. 458, 587 P.2d 782 (1978); People v. Harthun, 197 Colo. 1, 593 P.2d 324 (1979); People v. Cameron, 197 Colo. 330, 595 P.2d 677 (1979); People ex rel. Aisenberg v. Young, 198 Colo. 26, 599 P.2d 257 (1979); People v. Pacheco, 198 Colo. 455, 608 P.2d 333 (1979); People ex rel. Gallagher v. Hertz, 198 Colo. 522, 608 P.2d 335 (1979); People ex rel. Silverman v. Anderson, 200 Colo. 76, 612 P.2d 94 (1980); People v. Hilgers, 200 Colo. 211, 612 P.2d 1134 (1980); People v. Lanza, 200 Colo. 241, 613 P.2d 337 (1980); People v. Meldahl, 200 Colo. 332, 615 P.2d 29 (1980); People v. Hurst, 200 Colo. 537, 618 P.2d 1113 (1980); People v. Kendrick, 619 P.2d 65 (Colo. 1980); People v. Gottsegen, 623 P.2d 878 (Colo. 1981); People v. Luxford, 626 P.2d 675 (Colo. 1981); People v. Rotenberg, 635 P.2d 220 (Colo. 1981); People v. Wright, 638 P.2d 251 (Colo. 1981); People v. Kane, 638 P.2d 253 (Colo. 1981); People v. Archuleta, 638 P.2d 255 (Colo. 1981); Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982); People v. Whitcomb, 676 P.2d 11 (Colo. 1983); People v. Tucker, 676 P.2d 680 (Colo. 1983); People v. Bollinger, 681 P.2d 950 (Colo. 1984); People v. Underhill, 683 P.2d 349 (Colo. 1984); People v. Simon, 698 P.2d 228 (Colo. 1985); People v. McDowell, 718 P.2d 541 (Colo. 1986); People v. Smith, 778 P.2d 685 (Colo. 1989).

II. DISCIPLINARY ACTIONS.

A. Public Censure.

Violation of election laws sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Casias, 646 P.2d 391 (Colo. 1982).

Bigamy, an offense of moral turpitude, warrants public censure. People v. Tucker, 755 P.2d 452 (Colo. 1988).

An attorney's inaction in response to the grievance committee's request concerning informal complaint filed, considered with other circumstances, justified public censure. People v. Moore, 681 P.2d 480 (Colo. 1984).

Where an attorney repeatedly issued checks from his law office account knowing that they would not be paid by the bank, such conduct, considered with other circumstances, justified public censure. People v. Moore, 681 P.2d 480 (Colo. 1984).

Public censure warranted where attorney kept the first lump sum check obtained in settlement as a lump sum payment of his contingency fee and reimbursement of costs even though he knew the settlement might later be reduced by the social security disability award and the client's union award. People v. Maceau, 910 P.2d 692 (Colo. 1996).

Adjudicating, as a judge, the criminal case of a person who is his client in a divorce proceeding warrants public censure because it is the duty of an attorney-judge to promptly disclose conflicts of interest and to disqualify himself without suggestion from anyone. People v. Perrott, 769 P.2d 1075 (Colo. 1989).

Conduct was prejudicial to the administration of justice and warranted public censure where, during the course of criminal proceedings, attorney made an offer to the deputy district attorney to dismiss a related civil action if the criminal charges against his client were dismissed. People v. Silvola, 888 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1995).

Use of racial epithet by prosecutor in discussing case with defense counsel for two Hispanic defendants constituted a violation of this section warranting public censure. People v. Sharpe, 781 P.2d 659 (Colo. 1989).

Neglect of a legal matter ordinarily warranting a letter of admonition by way of reprimand requires imposition of public censure when such conduct is repeated after three letters of admonition. People v. Goodwin, 782 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1989).

Public censure was appropriate where an already suspended attorney was the subject of prior discipline for misdemeanor convictions of assault and driving while impaired and where an additional period of suspension would have little, if any, practical effect and would not have afforded a meaningful measure of protection for the public. People v. Flores, 871 P.2d 1182 (Colo. 1994).

Evidence sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Hertz, 638 P.2d 794 (Colo. 1982).

Public censure was appropriate where lawyer's actions involving criminal activity did not seriously affect the lawyer's fitness to practice law and mitigating factors were present in the absence of any aggravating factors. People v. Fahselt, 807 P.2d 586 (Colo. 1991).

Public censure was appropriate where multiple representations and neglect caused no actual harm and attorney was cooperative during disciplinary proceedings, had no prior discipline, and was relatively inexperienced at the time the misconduct occurred. People v. Ramseur, 897 P.2d 1391 (Colo. 1995).

Threatening to invoke disciplinary proceedings against judge in anticipation of adverse ruling warrants public censure. People v. Tatum, 814 P.2d 388 (Colo. 1991).

Failure to timely file a paternity action constitutes neglect of a legal matter that warrants public censure. People v. Good, 790 P.2d 331 (Colo. 1990).

Public censure was warranted where attorney made false statements in the course of discovery in cases where the attorney was the plaintiff. Evidence showed that the attorney was suffering from a psychiatric condition at the time, and the assistant disciplinary counsel could not prove that the attorney's false statements were knowing, but only that they were negligent. People v. Dillings, 880 P.2d 1220 (Colo. 1994).

Public censure was appropriate where attorney failed to provide a critical document to opposing counsel after agreeing to do so and failed to reveal relevant information at the time of trial. People v. Wilder, 860 P.2d 523 (Colo. 1993).

Failure to inform arbitrators of errors in expert witness' testimony constituted violation of DR 7-102 warranting public censure because attorney did not disclose that expert had informed attorney of mistakes in writing, and attorney made closing arguments based on uncorrected expert conclusions. People v. Bertagnolli, 861 P.2d 717 (Colo. 1993) (decided under DR 7-102).

Public censure was appropriate where attorney's failure to appear at three hearings violated subsection (A)(5) and, in aggravation, there was a pattern of misconduct. People v. Cabral, 888 P.2d 245 (Colo. 1995).

Public censure warranted where attorney engaged in sexual relations with client attorney represented in dissolution of marriage action even though client suffered no actual harm. People v. Zeilinger, 814 P.2d 808 (Colo. 1991).

Discharging firearm in direction of spouse while intoxicated, although not a crime involving dishonesty, goes beyond mere negligence and public censure is appropriate. Mitigating factors, although present, were insufficient to warrant making censure private. People v. Senn, 824 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1992).

Public censure is appropriate for attorney's negligence in closing estates in an untimely manner and for representing two estates where the beneficiaries of the estates have conflicting interests and the attorney fails to obtain waivers from the beneficiaries. People v. Gebauer, 821 P.2d 782 (Colo. 1991).

Attorney's unlawful assertion of charging lien against client's share of estate proceeds following client's demand for return of property is subject to public censure. People v. Mills, 861 P.2d 708 (Colo. 1993) (decided under DR 1-102 (A)(5)).

Public censure is appropriate where lawyer's predominant mental state was one of negligence and there was an absence of actual harm to the client. People v. Hickox, 889 P.2d 47 (Colo. 1995).

Public censure is appropriate if attorney's course of behavior exhibits a serious error in judgment going beyond simple negligence. People v. Blundell, 901 P.2d 1268 (Colo. 1995).

Public censure was appropriate where the attorney failed to cooperate in a disciplinary investigation, made frivolous motions, and made a statement with reckless disregard as to its truth or falsity concerning the qualifications or integrity of a judge. People v. Thomas, 925 P.2d 1081 (Colo. 1996).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Ashley, 796 P.2d 962 (Colo. 1990); People v. Mulvihill, 814 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1991); People v. Smith, 819 P.2d 497 (Colo. 1991); People v. Richardson, 820 P.2d 1120 (Colo. 1991); People v. Dalton, 840 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1992); People v. Vsetecka, 893 P.2d 1309 (Colo. 1995); People v. Wollrab, 909 P.2d 1093 (Colo. 1996); People v. Fitzgibbons, 909 P.2d 1098 (Colo. 1996); People v. Cohan, 913 P.2d 523 (Colo. 1996).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Bollinger, 648 P.2d 620 (Colo. 1982); People v. Driscoll, 716 P.2d 1086 (Colo. 1986); People v. Mayer, 716 P.2d 1094 (Colo. 1986); People v. Carpenter, 731 P.2d 726 (Colo. 1987); People v. Schaiberger, 731 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1987); People v. Horn, 738 P.2d 1186 (Colo. 1987); People v. Stauffer, 745 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1987); People v. Barr, 748 P.2d 1302 (Colo. 1988); People v. Dowhan, 759 P.2d 4 (Colo. 1988); People v. Fieman, 778 P.2d 830 (Colo. 1990); People v. Stayton, 798 P.2d 903 (Colo. 1990); People v. Brinn, 801 P.2d 1195 (Colo. 1990); People v. Moffitt, 801 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1990); People v. Barr, 805 P.2d 440 (Colo. 1991); People v. Shunneson, 814 P.2d 800 (Colo. 1991); People v. Reichman, 819 P.2d 1035 (Colo. 1991); People v. Gebauer, 821 P.2d 782 (Colo. 1991); People v. Dillings, 880 P.2d 1220 (Colo. 1994); People v. Wollrab, 909 P.2d 1093 (Colo. 1996).

B. Suspension.

Preparing false carbon copies of correspondence to a client and testifying falsely to grievance committee of the supreme court concerning these letters warrants suspension from practice of law for period of at least three years, but not disbarment. People v. Klein, 179 Colo. 408, 500 P.2d 1181 (1972).

Suspension is generally appropriate when a lawyer knows that false statements or documents are being submitted to the court, or that material information is improperly being withheld, takes no remedial action, and causes injury or potential injury to a party to the legal proceeding, or causes an adverse or potentially adverse effect on the legal proceeding, or when a lawyer knows that he is violating a court order or rule and there is injury or potential injury to a client or a party, or interference or potential interference with a legal proceeding. People v. Walker, 832 P.2d 935 (Colo. 1992).

One-year suspension warranted where attorney failed to promptly respond to discovery requests, failed to inform client of case progress after custody hearing, failed to withdraw upon client's request, failed to advise client of child support modification hearing, misrepresented to the court that he was unable to contact client, and had been previously suspended for similar misconduct. People v. Regan, 871 P.2d 1184 (Colo. 1994).

Fraud, jury tampering, and excessive fees are basis for indefinite suspension. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

Attorney suspended for three years for repeated neglect and delay in handling legal matters, failure to comply with the directions contained in a letter of admonition, failure to answer letter of complaint from the grievance committee, and conviction of a misdemeanor. People v. Hebenstreit, 764 P.2d 51 (Colo. 1988).

By commingling trust funds with his own, failing to maintain complete records of his client's funds, and failure to render appropriate accounts to his client, the attorney's conduct adversely reflected on his fitness to practice law, justifying suspension from practice. People v. Wright, 698 P.2d 1317 (Colo. 1985).

For commingling of funds in trust account warranting suspension from practice, see People v. Calvert, 721 P.2d 1189 (Colo. 1986).

Recommendation of prosecution without legitimate interest warrants suspension. Where an attorney took advantage of his position of respect and status in a district attorney's office by repeatedly urging criminal prosecution in matters where his only legitimate professional interest could be in related civil matters, such actions are prejudicial to the administration of justice in violation of paragraph (A) (5). People ex rel. Gallagher v. Hertz, 198 Colo. 522, 608 P.2d 335 (1979).

Actions taken by attorney contrary to court order violate this rule and justify suspension. People v. Awenius, 653 P.2d 740 (Colo. 1982).

Suspension is appropriate discipline given number and severity of instances of misconduct, including pattern of neglect over clients' affairs over lengthy period and in variety of circumstances and misrepresentation in dissolution case to client who wished to remarry concerning the filing of a dissolution petition. Considering proper mitigating factors such as attorney's lack of experience, absence of prior discipline, attorney's willingness to undergo psychiatric evaluation and accept transfer to disability inactive status, suspension without credit for time on disability inactive status is appropriate. People v. Griffin, 764 P.2d 1166 (Colo. 1988).

Suspension is appropriate for a lawyer addicted to alcohol and cocaine and who neglected a client's case resulting in the entry of default judgment, but who entered into an uncompelled restitution agreement and successfully completed substance abuse treatment. People v. Richtsmeier, 802 P.2d 471 (Colo. 1990).

Attorney misconduct of neglecting a guardianship matter and engaging in conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice warrant 90-day suspension when aggravated by history of five prior instances of disciplinary offenses for neglect, pattern of misconduct, refusal to acknowledge wrongful nature of conduct, vulnerability of victim, and substantial experience in the practice of law. People v. Dolan, 813 P.2d 733 (Colo. 1991).

Conduct manifesting gross carelessness in representation of clients is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Roehl, 655 P.2d 1381 (Colo. 1983); People v. Fahrney, 782 P.2d 743 (Colo. 1989).

Attorney's neglect of dissolution case and misrepresentation to client concerning the filing of dissolution petition was especially egregious in view of client's desire to remarry. Such conduct in addition to number and severity of other instances of misconduct, taking into account mitigating factors, is sufficient for suspension. People v. Griffin, 764 P.2d 1166 (Colo. 1988).

Felony theft held sufficient grounds for suspension. People v. Petrie, 642 P.2d 519 (Colo. 1982).

Photocopying another attorney's securities opinion letter and presenting it as one's own, refusing to comply with discovery rules and court orders in litigation to which one is a party, and continuously failing to answer grievance complaint without good cause warrants suspension. People v. Spangler, 676 P.2d 674 (Colo. 1983).

An attorney's conduct in borrowing money from his former clients and in failing to record deeds of trust on their behalf to be used as security constitutes professional misconduct and justifies his suspension. People v. Brackett, 667 P.2d 1357 (Colo. 1983).

Where attorney engaged in a pattern of neglect, obvious conflict, and caused injury to his clients, suspension is warranted. People v. Belina, 765 P.2d 121 (Colo. 1988).

Evidence sufficient to justify suspension from the practice of law. People v. Belfor, 197 Colo. 223, 591 P.2d 585 (1979); People v. Stineman, 716 P.2d 1079 (Colo. 1986).

Both the charges and the well pleaded complaint are deemed admitted by the entry of a default judgment. People v. Richards, 748 P.2d 341 (Colo. 1987); People v. McMahill, 782 P.2d 336 (Colo. 1988).

Suspended attorney must demonstrate rehabilitation for readmittance to bar. Actions of a suspended attorney who took part in a complex real estate transaction and engaged in the practice of law by representing, counseling, advising, and assisting a former client warranted suspension until he demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence that (1) he has been rehabilitated; (2) he has complied with and will continue to comply with all applicable disciplinary orders and rules; and (3) he is competent and fit to practice law. People v. Belfor, 200 Colo. 44, 611 P.2d 979 (1980).

Where a practicing attorney breached fiduciary duties to his client in misrepresenting his dealings and in handling of funds given to him in trust, his conduct warranted disbarment, and before he may seek readmittance to the state bar association, he must first demonstrate to the grievance committee that rehabilitation has occurred and that he is entitled to a new start. People ex rel. Buckley v. Beck, 199 Colo. 482, 610 P.2d 1069 (Colo. 1980).

Attorney's payment to inmates for referrals to attorney for the provision of legal services justifies 60-day suspension. People v. Shipp, 793 P.2d 574 (Colo. 1990); People v. Whitaker, 814 P.2d 812 (Colo. 1991).

Three-month suspension appropriate where attorney intentionally misrepresented that he possessed automobile insurance coverage to automobile accident victim, police officer, and grievance committee investigator, and where attorney was previously publicly censured for engaging in lengthy delay tactics. People v. Dowhan, 814 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1991).

Reckless disregard for the propriety of submitting multiple and duplicative billing in court-appointed cases constitutes knowing conduct warranting a 90-day suspension. People v. Walker, 832 P.2d 935 (Colo. 1992).

Repeated drawings of checks upon insufficient funds and misuse of trust account moneys constituted grounds for suspension. People v. Lamberson, 802 P.2d 1098 (Colo. 1990).

Attorney's failure to file personal state and federal income tax returns and to pay withholding taxes for federal income taxes and FICA, and use of cocaine and marijuana constitute conduct warranting suspension for one year and one day. People v. Holt, 832 P.2d 948 (Colo. 1992).

Suspension for one year and one day warranted where attorney misrepresented to client that a trial had been scheduled, that continuances and new trial settings had been made, that a settlement had been reached, and where the attorney's previous, similar discipline, was a significant aggravating factor. People v. Smith, 888 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1995).

Suspension for one year and one day warranted for attorney who "represented" client for a period of 19 months without that person's knowledge or consent, even asserting a counterclaim on his behalf without talking to him; who did not communicate with him in any manner for an extended period of time and then did not withdraw within a reasonable time after being unable to contact him; and who failed to answer discovery requests, resulting in the entries of default and then a default judgment against him. People v. Silvola, 915 P.2d 1281 (Colo. 1996).

Suspension for one year and one day is warranted for commingling and misuse of client funds. The hearing board found that the respondent acted recklessly, rather than knowingly, in misappropriating client funds. People v. Zimmermann, 922 P.2d 325 (Colo. 1996).

Suspension of one year and one day necessary where lawyer engaged in sexual relationship with client, had been previously disciplined, and submitted false evidence to the hearing board concerning the sexual relationship. People v. Good, 893 P.2d 101 (Colo. 1995).

Suspension of one year and one day warranted in light of the seriousness of attorney's misconduct in conjunction with his noncooperation in the disciplinary proceedings and his substantial experience in the practice of law. People v. Clark, 900 P.2d 129 (Colo. 1995).

Suspension for one year and one day warranted where attorney billed for time that was not actually devoted to work contemplated by contract and for time not actually performed. People v. Shields, 905 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1995).

Suspension for one year and one day was warranted for attorney who violated this rule and C.R.P.C. 1.1 by preparing and filing child support worksheets that failed to properly reflect the new stipulation concerning custody and where aggravating factors included a previous disciplinary history and failure to appear in the grievance proceedings. People v. Davies, 926 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1996).

Mental disability that caused misconduct is a mitigating factor which, when considered in conjunction with other factors, justifies suspension of attorney for conversion of funds that would otherwise warrant disbarment. People v. Lujan, 890 P.2d 109 (Colo. 1995).

District attorney's failure to prosecute personal friend for possession of marijuana violates paragraphs (A)(1), (A)(5), and (A)(6) of this rule and warrants three-year suspension. People v. Larsen, 808 P.2d 1265 (Colo. 1991).

Suspension of lawyer for three years, which is the longest possible period for suspension, is appropriate where there was extensive pattern of client neglect and intentional deception in client matters over a period of years. Anything less would be too lenient. People v. Hellewell, 811 P.2d 386 (Colo. 1991).

Suspension justified where respondent violated federal and state laws by failing to file personal income tax returns, failing to pay withholding taxes, using cocaine, and using marihuana. People v. Holt, 832 P.2d 948 (Colo. 1992).

The fact that no specific client of the respondent was actually harmed by the respondent's misconduct misses the point in proceeding for suspension of an attorney. While the primary purpose of attorney discipline is the protection of the public and not to mete punishment to the offending lawyer, lawyers are, nonetheless, charged with obedience to the law, and intentional violation of those laws subjects an attorney to the severest discipline. People v. Holt, 832 P.2d 948 (Colo. 1992).

Felony convictions warrant suspension for attorney convicted of violating California Tax Code where numerous mitigating factors were found to exist. People v. Mandell, 813 P.2d 732 (Colo. 1991).

Three-year suspension appropriate where attorney was convicted for felony distribution of cocaine, but had no record of prior discipline, there was no selfish or dishonest motive associated with crime, and the attorney successfully participated in interim rehabilitation programs. People v. Rhodes, 829 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1992).

Failure to communicate with clients, court, and opposing counsel, misrepresentation of the status of the proceedings to client, and failure to investigate clients' case justifies three-year suspension. People v. Wilson, 814 P.2d 791 (Colo. 1991).

Abusive, insulting, and unprofessional conduct towards deponent and opposing counsel during deposition and repeated instances of using health as an excuse for continuances when respondent was ill-prepared for trial warrants six-month suspension. People v. Genchi, 824 P.2d 815 (Colo. 1992).

Adopting a conscious scheme to take ownership of homes, collect rents from tenants, make virtually no efforts to sell the homes, and permit foreclosures to occur on which HUD would absorb the losses constituted equity skimming in violation of § 18-5-802 and constitutes a violation of sections (A)(4) and (A)(6) for which suspension for one year is appropriate. People v. Phelps, 837 P.2d 755 (Colo. 1992).

Attorney who employed devices to defraud, made untrue statements of material fact, and engaged in acts which operated as fraud or deceit upon persons in violation of the Securities and Exchange Act violated DR 1-102 (A)(4) and DR 1-102 (A)(6) for which suspension of two years is appropriate, considering mitigating factors. People v. Hanks, 967 P.2d 141 (Colo. 1998).

Attorney who conveyed real property to defraud creditors suspended from the practice of law. In mitigation, the attorney had fully cooperated with the board. People v. Koller, 873 P.2d 761 (Colo. 1994).

Respondent's multiple acts of violence are indicative of a dangerous volatility which might well prejudice his ability to effectively represent his client's interests. Although respondent had taken major steps towards rehabilitation the acts committed were of such gravity as to require a public censure and a three-month suspension. People v. Wallace, 837 P.2d 1223 (Colo. 1992).

Third-degree sexual assault of wife adequate basis for one-year and one day suspension. People v. Brailsford, 933 P.2d 592 (Colo. 1997).

Suspension for 180 days is warranted based upon conviction of third degree assault charges. People v. Knight, 883 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1994).

Willful nonpayment of child support and failure to pay arrearages after ordered by court to do so are violations of sections (A)(5) and (A)(6) and constitute adequate basis for six-month suspension. People v. Tucker, 837 P.2d 1225 (Colo. 1992).

Where deputy district attorney was convicted of possession of cocaine under federal law, one-year suspension is appropriate due to seriousness of offense and fact that attorney had higher responsibility to the public by virtue of engaging in law enforcement. People v. Robinson, 839 P.2d 4 (Colo. 1992).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Murphy, 778 P.2d 658 (Colo. 1989); People v. Hodge, 782 P.2d 25 (Colo. 1989); People v. Masson, 782 P.2d 335 (Colo. 1989); People v. Chappell, 783 P.2d 838 (Colo. 1989); People v. Moya, 793 P.2d 1154 (Colo. 1990); People v. Creasey, 793 P.2d 1159 (Colo. 1990); People v. Schmad, 793 P.2d 1162 (Colo. 1990); People v. Wilbur, 796 P.2d 976 (Colo. 1990); People v. Baptie, 796 P.2d 978 (Colo. 1990); People v. Schubert, 799 P.2d 388 (Colo. 1990); People v. Taylor, 799 P.2d 930 (Colo. 1990); People v. Barber, 799 P.2d 936 (Colo. 1990); People v. Garrett, 802 P.2d 1082 (Colo. 1990); People v. Sullivan, 802 P.2d 1091 (Colo. 1990); People v. Rhodes, 803 P.2d 514 (Colo. 1991); People v. Flores, 804 P.2d 192 (Colo. 1991); People v. Crimaldi, 804 P.2d 863 (Colo. 1991); People v. Dunsmoor, 807 P.2d 561 (Colo. 1991); People v. Bennett, 810 P.2d 661 (Colo. 1991); People v. Hall, 810 P.2d 1069 (Colo. 1991); People v. Koeberle, 810 P.2d 1072 (Colo. 1991); People v. Gaimara, 810 P.2d 1076 (Colo. 1991); People v. Dash, 811 P.2d 36 (Colo. 1991); People v. Honaker, 814 P.2d 785 (Colo. 1991); People v. Anderson, 817 P.2d 1035 (Colo. 1991); People v. Redman, 819 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1991); People v. Rader, 822 P.2d 950 (Colo. 1992); People v. Hyland, 830 P.2d 1000 (Colo. 1992); People v. Smith, 830 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1992); People v. Driscoll, 830 P.2d 1019 (Colo. 1992); People v. Raubolt, 831 P.2d 462 (Colo. 1992); People v. Regan, 831 P.2d 893 (Colo. 1992); People v. Southern, 832 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1992); People v. Denton, 839 P.2d 6 (Colo. 1992); People v. Hindorff, 860 P.2d 526 (Colo. 1993); People v. Brown, 863 P.2d 288 (Colo. 1993); People v. Cole, 880 P.2d 158 (Colo. 1994); People v. Smith, 880 P.2d 763 (Colo. 1994); People v. Swan, 893 P.2d 769 (Colo. 1995); People v. Davis, 893 P.2d 775 (Colo. 1995); People v. Miller, 913 P.2d 23 (Colo. 1996); People v. Calvert, 915 P.2d 1310 (Colo. 1996); People v. Sigley, 917 P.2d 1253 (Colo. 1996); People v. Boyer, 934 P.2d 1361 (Colo. 1997).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Yaklich, 646 P.2d 938 (Colo. 1982); People v. Craig, 653 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1982); People v. Kane, 655 P.2d 390 (Colo. 1982); People v. Vernon, 660 P.2d 879 (Colo. 1982); People v. Pilgrim, 698 P.2d 1322 (Colo. 1985); People v. Convery, 704 P.2d 296 (Colo. 1985); People v. C. Disbarment.

Disbarment is discipline for lawyer guilty of crimes of moral turpitude. People v. Wilson, 176 Colo. 389, 490 P.2d 954 (1971).

Attorney disbarred for continued pattern of conduct involving neglect and misrepresentation and for failure to cooperate in investigation by grievance committee. People v. Young, 673 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1984); People v. Coca, 732 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1987); People v. Johnston, 759 P.2d 10 (Colo. 1988).

Continuing pattern of neglect, including failure to timely file tax returns on behalf of personal representative of estate, failure to file timely notice of alibi, failure to notify opposing counsel, and failure to be adequately prepared for argument, coupled with similar behavior resulting in previous suspension, warrants disbarment. People v. Stewart, 752 P.2d 528 (Colo. 1987).

Misappropriation of funds, failure to account, and deceit and fraud in handling the affairs of a client necessitate that an attorney be disbarred. People v. Bealmear, 655 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1982).

A lawyer's knowing misappropriation of funds, whether belonging to a client or third party, warrants disbarment except in the presence of extraordinary factors of mitigation. People v. Lavenhar, 934 P.2d 1355 (Colo. 1997).

Lawyer's encouragement of a client to enter into a business transaction with said lawyer in which the two had differing interests and lawyer's failure to disclose relevant facts warrant disbarment. People v. Martinez, 739 P.2d 838 (Colo. 1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1054, 108 S. Ct. 1003, 98 L. Ed. 2d 970 (1988).

Convictions for crimes of theft, theft-receiving, and conspiracy to commit theft are serious, involve moral turpitude, and are grounds for disbarment as opposed to an indefinite suspension. People v. Silvola, 195 Colo. 74, 575 P.2d 413 (1978).

Conviction of two counts of sexual assault on a child warrants no less a sanction than disbarment. People v. Grenemyer, 745 P.2d 1027 (Colo. 1987).

Disbarment warranted by attorney's conviction of conspiracy to deliver counterfeited federal reserve notes, serious neglect of several legal matters, unjustified retention of clients' property, failure to respond to the grievance committee, and previous disciplinary record. People v. Mayer, 752 P.2d 537 (Colo. 1988).

False testimony and counselling of such conduct warrant disbarment. When a lawyer counsels his client to testify falsely at a hearing on a bankruptcy petition and the client does so, and the lawyer gives a false answer to a question asked of him by the bankruptcy judge, his misconduct warrants disbarment. People v. McMichael, 199 Colo. 433, 609 P.2d 633 (1980).

Misrepresenting the status of a dissolution of marriage action with knowledge of impending remarriage and then forging the purported decree of dissolution is conduct involving moral turpitude deserving of disbarment. People v. Belina, 782 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1989).

Where an attorney demonstrates an extreme indifference to the welfare of his clients and the status of their cases and an extreme insensitivity to his professional duties in the face of adverse judgments due to neglect, client complaints, and repeated disciplinary proceedings, disbarment is the appropriate sanction. People v. Wyman, 782 P.2d 339 (Colo. 1989).

Abandoning clients sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Sanders, 713 P.2d 837 (Colo. 1985).

Abandoning clients without notice, causing them financial losses, and failing to cooperate with grievance committee justified disbarment despite lack of any prior professional misconduct. People v. Lovett, 753 P.2d 205 (Colo. 1988).

Abandoning law practice, engaging in multiple acts of misconduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, and misrepresentation grounds for disbarment. People v. Greene, 773 P.2d 528 (Colo. 1989).

Converting estate or trust funds for one's personal use, overcharging for services rendered, neglecting to return inquiries relating to client matters, failing to make candid disclosures to grievance committee, and attempting to conceal wrongdoing during disciplinary proceedings warrants the severe sanction of disbarment. People v. Gerdes, 782 P.2d 2 (Colo. 1989).

Use of license to practice law for the purpose of bringing into being an illegal prostitution enterprise renders disbarment the only possible form of discipline. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Theft of client's money, misrepresentations, representation of multiple clients with adverse interests, and failure to respond to informal complaints warrants disbarment. People v. Quick, 716 P.2d 1082 (Colo. 1986).

Felony theft held sufficient grounds for disbarment in Colorado where respondent was convicted of crime and disbarred in another jurisdiction. Unless the disciplinary proceedings conducted in the foreign jurisdiction involved a denial of due process or other infirmity, or the imposition of the same discipline would result in a grave injustice, or the attorney's conduct warrants a substantially different discipline, the court is required to impose the same discipline. People v. Bradbury, 772 P.2d 46 (Colo. 1989).

Altering authentic dissolution decrees coupled with past attorney misconduct sufficient to warrant disbarment. People v. Blanck, 713 P.2d 832 (Colo. 1985).

Continuing to practice while suspended is conduct justifying disbarment. People v. James, 731 P.2d 698 (Colo. 1987).

Disbarment in another state warrants disbarment. People v. Montano, 744 P.2d 480 (Colo. 1987); People v. Brunn, 764 P.2d 1165 (Colo. 1988).

Attorney's failure to disclose felony conviction and subsequent disbarment in another state is sufficient for disbarment. People v. Brunn, 764 P.2d 1165 (Colo. 1988).

Facts sufficient to justify disbarment of attorney for failure to comply with registration requirements of C.R.C.P. 227, misappropriation of funds, and improper withdrawal from employment. People v. Scudder, 197 Colo. 99, 590 P.2d 493 (1979).

A lawyer who enters into a conspiracy to violate the law by importing narcotic drugs for distribution should be disbarred. People v. Unruh, 621 P.2d 948 (Colo. 1980), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1171, 106 S. Ct. 2894, 90 L. Ed. 2d 981 (1986).

Where a lawyer's conduct not only constitutes a violation of the code of professional responsibility, but also involves felonious conduct, clearly and convincingly proven by testimony of sheriff's officers, the grievance committee is justified in requiring disbarment. People v. Harfmann, 638 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1981).

Total disregard of obligation to protect a client's rights and interests over an extended period of time in conjunction with the violation of a number of disciplinary rules and an extended prior record of discipline requires most severe sanction of disbarment. People v. O'Leary, 783 P.2d 843 (Colo. 1989).

Attorney's continued practice of law while under an order of suspension, with no efforts to wind up the legal practice, and the failure to take action to protect the legal interests of the attorney's clients, warrants disbarment. People v. Wilson, 832 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1992).

Convictions for conspiring to commit fraud against the United States and impeding an officer of a United States court warrant disbarment. People v. Pilgrim, 802 P.2d 1084 (Colo. 1990).

Disbarment was the proper remedy where the attorney was afforded multiple opportunities including two suspensions and court ordered rehabilitation and where attorney's conduct demonstrated (a) neglect of legal matters entrusted to him; (b) misrepresentation to the client and the grievance committee; and (c) a pattern of neglect followed by the respondent that had the potential of causing serious injury to his clients. People v. Susman, 787 P.2d 1119 (Colo. 1990).

A lawyer's continued practice of law while under an order of suspension, with no efforts to wind up the legal practice, and failure to take action to protect the legal interests of the lawyer's clients, warrants disbarment. People v. Wilson, 832 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1992).

Likewise, disbarment was appropriate where attorney removed $5,000 from a client's trust account, refused to return money upon several requests by the client which ultimately resulted in a suit against the attorney, and the attorney lied about the transaction to the attorney with whom he shared office space. Factors in aggravation included a history of prior discipline, including suspension for conversion of client funds, the dishonest motive of the attorney in removing and not returning the client's funds, the attorney's refusal to acknowledge the wrongful nature of his conduct, the vulnerability of the client, and the attorney's legal experience. Mitigating factors were insufficient for disciplinary action short of disbarment. People v. McGrath, 833 P.2d 731 (Colo. 1992).

Disbarment is essentially automatic when a lawyer converts funds or property and there are no significant factors in mitigation. People v. Lujan, 890 P.2d 109 (Colo. 1995).

Entering guilty pleas to multiple counts of bank fraud evidences serious criminal conduct warranting disbarment. People v. Vidakovich, 810 P.2d 1071 (Colo. 1991).

Payment of restitution required prior to petition for readmission. Where, in proceedings to enforce a debt, attorney fails to pay debt, appear for deposition, produce documents requested by subpoena duces tecum or appear at an examination pursuant to C.R.C.P. 69 and on separate occasions writes insufficient funds checks and fails to comply with requests for investigation, restitution is a proper condition of readmission and is to be made prior to petition for readmission. People v. Koransky, 830 P.2d 490 (Colo. 1992).

Where money was accepted for investment plans which were false, fictitious, and fraudulent and the presence of aggravating factors, including substantial experience by attorney, prior disciplinary offenses, dishonest or selfish motive, presence of multiple offenses, refusal to acknowledge the wrongful nature of conduct, and an indifference to making restitution, disbarment of attorney for violation of legal ethics was proper. People v. Kramer, 819 P.2d 77 (Colo. 1991).

Disbarment appropriate where attorney accepted fees from a number of clients prior to terminating her legal practice, failed to inform her clients of such termination, failed to refund clients' retainer fees, failed to place clients' funds in separate account, and gave clients' files to other lawyers without clients' consent. People v. Tucker, 904 P.2d 1321 (Colo. 1995).

Disbarment warranted where attorney was convicted of two separate sexual assaults on a client and a former client and attorney's previous dishonest conduct was an aggravating factor as well as findings of the attorney's selfish motive in engaging in the sexual misconduct, the two clients' vulnerability, the attorney's more than 20 years practicing law, and the attorney's failure to acknowledge the wrongful nature of his conduct. People v. Bertagnolli, 922 P.2d 935 (Colo. 1996).

Notwithstanding the entry of attorney's "Alford" plea in sexual assault proceedings, for purpose of disciplinary proceeding, the attorney was held to have actually committed the acts necessary to accomplish third degree sexual assault and therefore the attorney knowingly had sexual contact with a former client and with a current client without either woman's consent. Rule 3.2. Expediting Litigation

A lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to expedite litigation consistent with the interests of the client.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] Dilatory practices bring the administration of justice into disrepute. Although there will be occasions when a lawyer may properly seek a postponement for personal reasons, it is not proper for a lawyer to routinely fail to expedite litigation solely for the convenience of the advocates. Nor will a failure to expedite be reasonable if done for the purpose of frustrating an opposing party's attempt to obtain rightful redress or repose. It is not a justification that similar conduct is often tolerated by the bench and bar. The question is whether a competent lawyer acting in good faith would regard the course of action as having some substantial purpose other than delay. Realizing financial or other benefit from otherwise improper delay in litigation is not a legitimate interest of the client.

Annotator's note. Rule 3.2 is similar to Rule 3.2 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Robinson, 853 P.2d 1145 (Colo. 1993); People v. Barr, 855 P.2d 1386 (Colo. 1993); People v. Maynard, 238 P.3d 672 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2009); People v. Staab, 287 P.3d 122 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2012).

Rule 3.3. Candor Toward the Tribunal

(a) A lawyer shall not knowingly:

(1) make a false statement of material fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer;

(2) fail to disclose to the tribunal legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to the lawyer to be directly adverse to the position of the client and not disclosed by opposing counsel; or

(3) offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. If a lawyer, the lawyer's client, or witness called by the lawyer has offered material evidence and the lawyer comes to know of its falsity, the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal. A lawyer may refuse to offer evidence, other than the testimony of a defendant in a criminal matter, that the lawyer reasonably believes is false.

(b) A lawyer who represents a client in an adjudicative proceeding and who knows that a person intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal.

(c) The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) continue to the conclusion of the proceeding, and apply even if compliance requires disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

(d) In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the lawyer that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse.

COMMENT

[1] This Rule governs the conduct of a lawyer who is representing a client in the proceedings of a tribunal. See Rule 1.0(m) for the definition of ''tribunal.'' It also applies when the lawyer is representing a client in an ancillary proceeding conducted pursuant to the tribunal's adjudicative authority, such as a deposition. Thus, for example, paragraph (a)(3) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures if the lawyer comes to know that a client who is testifying in a deposition has offered evidence that is false.

[2] This Rule sets forth the special duties of lawyers as officers of the court to avoid conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process. A lawyer acting as an advocate in an adjudicative proceeding has an obligation to present the client's case with persuasive force. Performance of that duty while maintaining confidences of the client, however, is qualified by the advocate's duty of candor to the tribunal. Consequently, although a lawyer in an adversary proceeding is not required to present an impartial exposition of the law or to vouch for the evidence submitted in a cause, the lawyer must not allow the tribunal to be misled by false statements of law or fact or evidence that the lawyer knows to be false.

Representations by a Lawyer

[3] An advocate is responsible for pleadings and other documents prepared for litigation, but is usually not required to have personal knowledge of matters asserted therein, for litigation documents ordinarily present assertions by the client, or by someone on the client's behalf, and not assertions by the lawyer. Compare Rule 3.1. However, an assertion purporting to be on the lawyer's own knowledge, as in an affidavit by the lawyer or in a statement in open court, may properly be made only when the lawyer knows the assertion is true or believes it to be true on the basis of a reasonably diligent inquiry. There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation. The obligation prescribed in Rule 1.2(d) not to counsel a client to commit or assist the client in committing a fraud applies in litigation. Regarding compliance with Rule 1.2(d), see the Comment to that Rule. See also the Comment to Rule 8.4(b).

Legal Argument

[4] Legal argument based on a knowingly false representation of law constitutes dishonesty toward the tribunal. A lawyer is not required to make a disinterested exposition of the law, but must recognize the existence of pertinent legal authorities. Furthermore, as stated in paragraph (a)(2), an advocate has a duty to disclose directly adverse authority in the controlling jurisdiction that has not been disclosed by the opposing party. The underlying concept is that legal argument is a discussion seeking to determine the legal premises properly applicable to the case.

Offering Evidence

[5] Paragraph (a)(3) requires that the lawyer refuse to offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false, regardless of the client's wishes. This duty is premised on the lawyer's obligation as an officer of the court to prevent the trier of fact from being misled by false evidence. A lawyer does not violate this Rule if the lawyer offers the evidence for the purpose of establishing its falsity.

[6] If a lawyer knows that the client intends to testify falsely or wants the lawyer to introduce false evidence, the lawyer should seek to persuade the client that the evidence should not be offered. If the persuasion is ineffective and the lawyer continues to represent the client, the lawyer must refuse to offer the false evidence. If only a portion of a witness's testimony will be false, the lawyer may call the witness to testify but may not elicit or otherwise permit the witness to present the testimony that the lawyer knows is false.

[7] The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) apply to all lawyers, including defense counsel in criminal cases. In some jurisdictions, however, courts have required counsel to present the accused as a witness or to give a narrative statement if the accused so desires, even if counsel knows that the testimony or statement will be false. The obligation of the advocate under the Rules of Professional Conduct is subordinate to such requirements. See also Comment [9].

[8] The prohibition against offering false evidence only applies if the lawyer knows that the evidence is false. A lawyer's reasonable belief that evidence is false does not preclude its presentation to the trier of fact. A lawyer's knowledge that evidence is false, however, can be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule 1.0(f). Thus, although a lawyer should resolve doubts about the veracity of testimony or other evidence in favor of the client, the lawyer cannot ignore an obvious falsehood.

[9] Although paragraph (a)(3) only prohibits a lawyer from offering evidence the lawyer knows to be false, it permits the lawyer to refuse to offer testimony or other proof that the lawyer reasonably believes is false. Offering such proof may reflect adversely on the lawyer's ability to discriminate in the quality of evidence and thus impair the lawyer's effectiveness as an advocate. Because of the special protections historically provided criminal defendants, however, this Rule does not permit a lawyer to refuse to offer the testimony of such a client where the lawyer reasonably believes but does not know that the testimony will be false. Unless the lawyer knows the testimony will be false, the lawyer must honor the client's decision to testify. See also Comment [7].

Remedial Measures

[10] Having offered material evidence in the belief that it was true, a lawyer may subsequently come to know that the evidence is false. Or, a lawyer may be surprised when the lawyer's client, or another witness called by the lawyer, offers testimony the lawyer knows to be false, either during the lawyer's direct examination or in response to cross-examination by the opposing lawyer. In such situations or if the lawyer knows of the falsity of testimony elicited from the client during a deposition, the lawyer must take reasonable remedial measures. In such situations, the advocate's proper course is to remonstrate with the client confidentially, advise the client of the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal and seek the client's cooperation with respect to the withdrawal or correction of the false statements or evidence. If that fails, the advocate must take further remedial action. If withdrawal from the representation is not permitted or will not undo the effect of the false evidence, the advocate must make such disclosure to the tribunal as is reasonably necessary to remedy the situation, even if doing so requires the lawyer to reveal information that otherwise would be protected by Rule 1.6. It is for the tribunal then to determine what should be done—making a statement about the matter to the trier of fact, ordering a mistrial or perhaps nothing.

[11] The disclosure of a client's false testimony can result in grave consequences to the client, including not only a sense of betrayal but also loss of the case and perhaps a prosecution for perjury. But the alternative is that the lawyer cooperates in deceiving the court, thereby subverting the truth-finding process which the adversary system is designed to implement. See Rule 1.2(d). Furthermore, unless it is clearly understood that the lawyer will act upon the duty to disclose the existence of false evidence, the client can simply reject the lawyer's advice to reveal the false evidence and insist that the lawyer keep silent. Thus the client could in effect coerce the lawyer into being a party to fraud on the court.

Preserving Integrity of Adjudicative Process

[12] Lawyers have a special obligation to protect a tribunal against criminal or fraudulent conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process, such as bribing, intimidating or otherwise unlawfully communicating with a witness, juror, court official or other participant in the proceeding, unlawfully destroying or concealing documents or other evidence or failing to disclose information to the tribunal when required by law to do so. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures, including disclosure if necessary, whenever the lawyer knows that a person, including the lawyer's client, intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding.

Duration of Obligation

[13] A practical time limit on the obligation to rectify false evidence or false statements of law and fact has to be established. The conclusion of the proceeding is a reasonably definite point for the termination of the obligation. A proceeding has concluded within the meaning of this Rule when a final judgment in the proceeding has been affirmed on appeal or the time for review has passed.

Ex Parte Proceedings

[14] Ordinarily, an advocate has the limited responsibility of presenting one side of the matters that a tribunal should consider in reaching a decision; the conflicting position is expected to be presented by the opposing party. However, in any ex parte proceeding, such as an application for a temporary restraining order, there is no balance of presentation by opposing advocates. The object of an ex parte proceeding is nevertheless to yield a substantially just result. The judge has an affirmative responsibility to accord the absent party just consideration. The lawyer for the represented party has the correlative duty to make disclosures of material facts known to the lawyer and that the lawyer reasonably believes are necessary to an informed decision.

Withdrawal

[15] Normally, a lawyer's compliance with the duty of candor imposed by this Rule does not require that the lawyer withdraw from the representation of a client whose interests will be or have been adversely affected by the lawyer's disclosure. The lawyer may, however, be required by Rule 1.16(a) to seek permission of the tribunal to withdraw if the lawyer's compliance with this Rule's duty of candor results in such an extreme deterioration of the client-lawyer relationship that the lawyer can no longer competently represent the client. Also see Rule 1.16(b) for the circumstances in which a lawyer will be permitted to seek a tribunal's permission to withdraw. In connection with a request for permission to withdraw that is premised on a client's misconduct, a lawyer may reveal information relating to the representation only to the extent reasonably necessary to comply with this Rule or as otherwise permitted by Rule 1.6.

It was inappropriate for counsel to file a motion and not mention contrary legal authority that was decided by the chief judge when the existence of the authority was readily available to counsel. United States v. Crumpton, 23 F. Supp. 2d 1218 (D. Colo. 1998).

An attorney will not be held responsible for failing to inform the court of material information of which the attorney is unaware. Waters v. District Ct., 935 P.2d 981 (Colo. 1997).

A lawyer representing his own interests and not those of any clients cannot be found to have violated section (a)(1). People v. Head, 332 P.3d 117 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2013).

An attorney cannot close her eyes to obvious facts, however, the duty to inform the court concerning her client's financial status does not obligate the attorney to undertake an affirmative investigation of her client's financial status. Waters v. District Ct., 935 P.2d 981 (Colo. 1997).

An attorney is not responsible for informing the court of every known change in a client's financial circumstances but she must inform the court of material changes that not disclosing to the court would work a fraud on the court. For the purpose of determining eligibility for court appointed counsel, material changes are those which clearly render the client capable, on a practical basis, of securing competent representation or reimbursing some or all of the expenses of court-appointed counsel and costs. Waters v. District Ct., 935 P.2d 981 (Colo. 1997).

Public censure is appropriate discipline for attorney who submitted falsified response to grievance committee's request for investigation, violated prohibition against engaging in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation, and revealed client confidences to district attorney without client's consent. People v. Lopez, 845 P.2d 1153 (Colo. 1993).

Public censure is appropriate discipline where attorney falsely testified that he had automobile insurance at the time of an accident, but outcome of case was not thereby affected. People v. Small, 962 P.2d 258 (Colo. 1998).

Attorney signing substitute counsel's name to pleadings in a style different from his own signature, without authority to sign in a representative capacity and without any indication that he was signing in a representative capacity, violated this rule and warranted a six-month suspension. People v. Reed, 955 P.2d 65 (Colo. 1998).

Thirty-day suspension appropriate where attorney failed to inform U.S. bankruptcy court in Colorado, in a hearing on a motion to remand the matter to U.S. bankruptcy court in Massachusetts, that an order of dismissal of the bankruptcy proceeding between the same parties had been entered in California. People v. Farry, 927 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1996).

Attorney conduct violating this rule, in conjunction with other rules, sufficient to justify suspension when violation did not arise from neglect or willingness to take advantage of client's vulnerability and is mitigated by her inexperience in the practice of law, her lack of any prior disciplinary record, the fact that she had already been held in contempt and punished by the district court, and the fact that there is no suggestion of selfish motivation. Attorney's failure to appreciate the serious nature of conduct and the jurisdiction of the hearing board to discipline her is a serious matter meriting a period of suspension and a redetermination of her fitness before being permitted to practice law again. In re Roose, 69 P.3d 43 (Colo.), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1053, 124 S. Ct. 815, 157 L. Ed. 2d 705 (2003).

Suspension for three years appropriate when attorney circumvented proper channels for the adoption of a child by falsely listing her own husband as the birth father on the baby's birth certificate, counseled her husband to engage in fraudulent conduct, and provided false information on a petition for stepparent adoption. People v. Ritland, 327 P.3d 914 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2014).

Aiding client to violate custody order sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Chappell, 927 P.2d 829 (Colo. 1996).

Attorney who knowingly violated rule but without intent to deceive court is justifiably sanctioned. People v. Trogani, 203 P.3d 643 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Rolfe, 962 P.2d 981 (Colo. 1998).

The participation of the district attorney and his deputy in an ill-timed radio interview which suggested a connection between the condominium fires and organized crime is not condoned. People v. Mulligan, 193 Colo. 509, 568 P.2d 449 (1977).

Rule 3.4. Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel

A lawyer shall not:

(a) unlawfully obstruct another party's access to evidence or unlawfully alter, destroy or conceal a document or other material having potential evidentiary value. A lawyer shall not counsel or assist another person to do any such act;

(b) falsify evidence, counsel or assist a witness to testify falsely, or offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law;

(c) knowingly disobey an obligation under the rules of a tribunal except for an open refusal based on an assertion that no valid obligation exists;

(d) in pretrial procedure, make a frivolous discovery request or fail to make reasonably diligent effort to comply with a legally proper discovery request by an opposing party;

(e) in trial, allude to any matter that the lawyer does not reasonably believe is relevant or that will not be supported by admissible evidence, assert personal knowledge of facts in issue except when testifying as a witness, or state a personal opinion as to the justness of a cause, the credibility of a witness, the culpability of a civil litigant or the guilt or innocence of an accused; or

(f) request a person other than a client to refrain from voluntarily giving relevant information to another party unless:

(1) the person is a relative or an employee or other agent of a client and the lawyer is not prohibited by other law from making such a request; and

(2) the lawyer reasonably believes that the person's interests will not be adversely affected by refraining from giving such information.

COMMENT

[1] The procedure of the adversary system contemplates that the evidence in a case is to be marshaled competitively by the contending parties. Fair competition in the adversary system is secured by prohibitions against destruction or concealment of evidence, improperly influencing witnesses, obstructive tactics in discovery procedure, and the like.

[2] Documents and other items of evidence are often essential to establish a claim or defense. Subject to evidentiary privileges, the right of an opposing party, including the government, to obtain evidence through discovery or subpoena is an important procedural right. The exercise of that right can be frustrated if relevant material is altered, concealed or destroyed. Applicable law in many jurisdictions makes it an offense to destroy material for purpose of impairing its availability in a pending proceeding or one whose commencement can be foreseen. Falsifying evidence is also generally a criminal offense. Paragraph (a) applies to evidentiary material generally, including computerized information. Applicable law may permit a lawyer to take temporary possession of physical evidence of client crimes for the purpose of conducting a limited examination that will not alter or destroy material characteristics of the evidence. In such a case, applicable law may require the lawyer to turn the evidence over to the police or other prosecuting authority, depending on the circumstances.

[3] With regard to paragraph (b), it is not improper to pay an expert or non-expert's expenses or to compensate an expert witness on terms permitted by law. It is improper to pay any witness a contingent fee for testifying. A lawyer may reimburse a non-expert witness not only for expenses incurred in testifying but also for the reasonable value of the witness's time expended in testifying and preparing to testify, so long as such reimbursement is not prohibited by law. The amount of such compensation must be reasonable based on all relevant circumstances, determined on a case-by-case basis.

[4] Paragraph (f) permits a lawyer to advise relatives and employees of a client to refrain from giving information to another party because the relatives or employees may identify their interests with those of the client. See also Rule 4.2. However, other law may preclude such a request. See Rule 16, Colorado Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Annotator's note. Rule 3.4 is similar to Rule 3.4 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

When section (b) of this rule and the rules of evidence overlap, the proper approach is for trial courts to balance the probative value of the evidence against the danger of unfair prejudice. Murray v. Just In Case Bus. Lighthouse, 2016 CO 47M, 374 P.3d 443.

In so doing, trial courts should not exclude testimony from improperly compensated witnesses unless they determine that the testimony's danger of unfair prejudice substantially outweighs its probative value. Murray v. Just In Case Bus. Lighthouse, 2016 CO 47M, 374 P.3d 443.

The trial court is best situated to decide on a case-by-case basis whether the testimony of a witness compensated under a contingent fee agreement so prejudices the fairness of the litigation that it requires exclusion of the improperly compensated witness's testimony. Murray v. Just In Case Bus. Lighthouse, 2016 CO 47M, 374 P.3d 443.

Calling a witness who was testifying in exchange for a contingency fee is contrary to section (b) of this rule. Just in Case Bus. Lighthouse v. Murray, 2013 COA 112M, 383 P.3d 1, aff'd, 2016 CO 47M, 374 P.3d 443.

Expressions of personal opinion, personal knowledge, or inflammatory comments violate ethical standards. A prosecutor cannot communicate his or her opinion on the truth or falsity of witness testimony during final argument. The use of any form of the word ''lie'' is improper. However, an attorney may argue from reasonable inferences anchored in the facts in evidence about the truthfulness of a witness's testimony. Domingo-Gomez v. People, 125 P.3d 1043 (Colo. 2005); Crider v. People, 186 P.3d 39 (Colo. 2008).

Attorney violated section (c) when he knowingly violated orders of Colorado supreme court suspending him from practice of law for failing to comply with continuing legal education (CLE) requirements and for failing to pay attorney registration fees. People v. Swarts, 239 P.3d 441 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2010).

Thirty-day suspension, petition for reinstatement requirement, and requirement of payment of costs of prior disciplinary proceedings justified where aggravating factors include attorney's previous public censure, refusal to acknowledge the wrongfulness of his conduct, substantial experience in the practice of law, and indifference to making restitution. In re Bauder, 980 P.2d 507 (Colo. 1999).

Ninety-day suspension justified where attorney's failure to respond to discovery requests resulted in default and entry of judgment against client for $816,613. People v. Clark, 927 P.2d 838 (Colo. 1996).

Ninety-day suspension and order of restitution as a condition of reinstatement was justified where attorney failed to pay court-ordered award of attorney's fees resulting from his filing of a frivolous motion, without regard to whether this debt was subsequently discharged in attorney's bankruptcy proceedings. People v. Huntzinger, 967 P.2d 160 (Colo. 1998).

Attorney who knowingly violated rule but without intent to deceive court is justifiably sanctioned. People v. Trogani, 203 P.3d 643 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008).

Attorney conduct violating this rule, in conjunction with other rules, sufficient to justify suspension when violation did not arise from neglect or willingness to take advantage of client's vulnerability and is mitigated by her inexperience in the practice of law, her lack of any prior disciplinary record, the fact that she had already been held in contempt and punished by the district court, and the fact that there is no suggestion of selfish motivation. Attorney's failure to appreciate the serious nature of conduct and the jurisdiction of the hearing board to discipline her is a serious matter meriting a period of suspension and a redetermination of her fitness before being permitted to practice law again. In re Roose, 69 P.3d 43 (Colo.), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1053, 124 S. Ct. 815, 157 L. Ed. 2d 705 (2003).

Suspension of one year and one day appropriate when attorney failed to comply with court orders applicable to monthly spousal support and refused to produce required financial disclosures in his dissolution of marriage case. People v. McQuitty, 371 P.3d 279 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2016).

Suspension for three years appropriate when attorney circumvented proper channels for the adoption of a child by falsely listing her own husband as the birth father on the baby's birth certificate, counseled her husband to engage in fraudulent conduct, and provided false information on a petition for stepparent adoption. People v. Ritland, 327 P.3d 914 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2014).

Attorney conduct violating this rule, in conjunction with other rules, sufficient to justify disbarment when attorney failed to comply with court orders applicable to his child support payments until after contempt citation was issued and attorney was ordered to report to jail to begin serving his sentence, and also committed numerous other violations consisting of knowingly commingling and misappropriating clients' funds, and neglecting multiple cases resulting in the entry of default judgments against attorney's clients. People v. Gonzalez, 967 P.2d 156 (Colo. 1998).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules, where mitigating factors were present, warrants public censure. People v. Davis, 950 P.2d 586 (Colo. 1998).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Barr, 855 P.2d 1386 (Colo. 1993); People v. Babinski, 951 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1998); People v. Blunt, 952 P.2d 356 (Colo. 1998); People v. Hanks, 967 P.2d 144 (Colo. 1998); People v. Rule 3.5. Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal

A lawyer shall not:

(a) seek to influence a judge, juror, prospective juror or other official by means prohibited by law;

(b) communicate ex parte with such a person during the proceeding unless authorized to do so by law or court order, or unless a judge initiates such a communication and the lawyer reasonably believes that the subject matter of the communication is within the scope of the judge's authority under a rule of judicial conduct;

(c) communicate with a juror or prospective juror after discharge of the jury if:

(1) the communication is prohibited by law or court order;

(2) the juror has made known to the lawyer a desire not to communicate;

(3) the communication involves misrepresentation, coercion, duress or harassment; or

(4) the communication is intended to or is reasonably likely to demean, embarrass, or criticize the jurors or their verdicts; or

(d) engage in conduct intended to disrupt a tribunal.

COMMENT

[1] Many forms of improper influence upon a tribunal are proscribed by criminal law. Others are specified in the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct, with which an advocate should be familiar. A lawyer is required to avoid contributing to a violation of such provisions.

[2] During a proceeding a lawyer may not communicate ex parte with persons serving in an official capacity in the proceeding, such as judges, masters or jurors, subject to two exceptions: (1) when a law or court order authorizes the lawyer to engage in the communication, and (2) when a judge initiates an ex parte communication with the lawyer and the lawyer reasonably believes that the subject matter of the communication is within the scope of the judge's authority to engage in the communication under a rule of judicial conduct. Examples of ex parte communications authorized under the first exception are restraining orders, submissions made in camera by order of the judge, and applications for search warrants and wiretaps. See also Cmt. [5]. Colo. RPC 4.2 (discussing communications authorized by law or court order with persons represented by counsel in a matter). With respect to the second exception, Rule 2.9(A)(1) of the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct, for example, permits judges to engage in ex parte communications for scheduling, administrative, or emergency purposes not involving substantive matters, but only if ''circumstances require it,'' ''the judge reasonably believes that no party will gain a procedural, substantive, or tactical advantage as a result of the ex parte communication,'' and ''the judge makes provision promptly to notify all other parties of the substance of the ex parte communication, and gives the parties an opportunity to respond.'' Code of Jud. Conduct, Rule 2.9(A)(1). See also Code of Judicial Conduct for United States Judges, Canon 3(A)(4)(b)(''A judge may. . . (b) when circumstances require it, permit ex parte communication for scheduling, administrative, or emergency purposes, but only if the ex parte communication does not address substantive matters and the judge reasonably believes that no party will gain a procedural, substantive, or tactical advantage as a result of the ex parte communication[.]''). The second exception does not authorize the lawyer to initiate such a communication. However, a judge will be deemed to have initiated a communication for purposes of this Rule if the judge or the court maintains a regular practice of allowing or requiring lawyers to contact the judge for administrative matters such as scheduling a hearing and the lawyer communicates in compliance with that practice. When a judge initiates a communication, the lawyer must discontinue the communication if it exceeds the judge's authority under the applicable rule of judicial conduct. For example, if a judge properly communicates ex parte with a lawyer about the scheduling of a hearing, pursuant to Rule 2.9(A)(1) of the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct, but proceeds to discuss substantive matters, the lawyer has an obligation to discontinue the communication.

[3] A lawyer may on occasion want to communicate with a juror or prospective juror after the jury has been discharged. The lawyer may do so unless the communication is prohibited by law or a court order but must respect the desire of the juror not to talk with the lawyer. The lawyer may not engage in improper conduct during the communication.

[4] The advocate's function is to present evidence and argument so that the cause may be decided according to law. Refraining from abusive or obstreperous conduct is a corollary of the advocate's right to speak on behalf of litigants. A lawyer may stand firm against abuse by a judge but should avoid reciprocation; the judge's default is no justification for similar dereliction by an advocate. An advocate can present the cause, protect the record for subsequent review and preserve professional integrity by patient firmness no less effectively than by belligerence or theatrics.

[5] The duty to refrain from disruptive conduct applies to any proceeding of a tribunal, including a deposition. See Rule 1.0(m).

Rule 3.6. Trial Publicity

(a) A lawyer who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter shall not make an extrajudicial statement that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know will be disseminated by means of public communication and will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding in the matter.

(b) Notwithstanding paragraph (a) and Rule 3.8(f), a lawyer may state:

(1) the claim, offense or defense involved and, except when prohibited by law, the identity of the persons involved;

(2) information contained in a public record;

(3) that an investigation of a matter is in progress;

(4) the scheduling or result of any step in litigation;

(5) a request for assistance in obtaining evidence and information necessary thereto;

(6) a warning of danger concerning the behavior of a person involved, when there is reason to believe that there exists the likelihood of substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest; and

(7) in a criminal case, in addition to subparagraphs (1) through (6):

(i) the identity, residence, occupation and family status of the accused;

(ii) if the accused has not been apprehended, information necessary to aid in apprehension of that person;

(iii) the fact, time and place of arrest; and

(iv) the identity of investigating and arresting officers or agencies and the length of the investigation.

(c) Notwithstanding paragraph (a) and Rule 3.8(f), a lawyer may make a statement that a reasonable lawyer would believe is required to protect a client from the substantial undue prejudicial effect of recent publicity not initiated by the lawyer or the lawyer's client. A statement made pursuant to this paragraph shall be limited to such information as is necessary to mitigate the recent adverse publicity.

(d) No lawyer associated in a firm or government agency with a lawyer subject to paragraph (a) shall make a statement prohibited by paragraph (a).

COMMENT

[1] It is difficult to strike a balance between protecting the right to a fair trial and safeguarding the right of free expression. Preserving the right to a fair trial necessarily entails some curtailment of the information that may be disseminated about a party prior to trial, particularly where trial by jury is involved. If there were no such limits, the result would be the practical nullification of the protective effect of the rules of forensic decorum and the exclusionary rules of evidence. On the other hand, there are vital social interests served by the free dissemination of information about events having legal consequences and about legal proceedings themselves. The public has a right to know about threats to its safety and measures aimed at assuring its security. It also has a legitimate interest in the conduct of judicial proceedings, particularly in matters of general public concern. Furthermore, the subject matter of legal proceedings is often of direct significance in debate and deliberation over questions of public policy.

[2] Special rules of confidentiality may validly govern proceedings in juvenile, domestic relations and mental disability proceedings, and perhaps other types of litigation. Rule 3.4(c) requires compliance with such rules.

[3] The Rule sets forth a basic general prohibition against a lawyer's making statements that the lawyer knows or should know will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding. Recognizing that the public value of informed commentary is great and the likelihood of prejudice to a proceeding by the commentary of a lawyer who is not involved in the proceeding is small, the Rule applies only to lawyers who are, or who have been involved in the investigation or litigation of a case, and their associates.

[4] Paragraph (b) identifies specific matters about which a lawyer's statements would not ordinarily be considered to present a substantial likelihood of material prejudice, and should not in any event be considered prohibited by the general prohibition of paragraph (a). Paragraph (b) is not intended to be an exhaustive listing of the subjects upon which a lawyer may make a statement, but statements on other matters may be subject to paragraph (a).

[5] There are, on the other hand, certain subjects that are more likely than not to have a material prejudicial effect on a proceeding, particularly when they refer to a civil matter triable to a jury, a criminal matter, or any other proceeding that could result in incarceration. These subjects relate to:

(1) the character, credibility, reputation or criminal record of a party, suspect in a criminal investigation or witness, or the identity of a witness, or the expected testimony of a party or witness;

(2) in a criminal case or proceeding that could result in incarceration, the possibility of a plea of guilty to the offense or the existence or contents of any confession, admission, or statement given by a defendant or suspect or that person's refusal or failure to make a statement;

(3) the performance or results of any examination or test or the refusal or failure of a person to submit to an examination or test, or the identity or nature of physical evidence expected to be presented;

(4) any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of a defendant or suspect in a criminal case or proceeding that could result in incarceration;

(5) information that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is likely to be inadmissible as evidence in a trial and that would, if disclosed, create a substantial risk of prejudicing an impartial trial; or

(6) the fact that a defendant has been charged with a crime, unless there is included therein a statement explaining that the charge is merely an accusation and that the defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.

[6] Another relevant factor in determining prejudice is the nature of the proceeding involved. Criminal jury trials will be most sensitive to extrajudicial speech. Civil trials may be less sensitive. Non-jury hearings and arbitration proceedings may be even less affected. The Rule will still place limitations on prejudicial comments in these cases, but the likelihood of prejudice may be different depending on the type of proceeding.

[7] Finally, extrajudicial statements that might otherwise raise a question under this Rule may be permissible when they are made in response to statements made publicly by another party, another party's lawyer, or third persons, where a reasonable lawyer would believe a public response is required in order to avoid prejudice to the lawyer's client. When prejudicial statements have been publicly made by others, responsive statements may have the salutary effect of lessening any resulting adverse impact on the adjudicative proceeding. Such responsive statements should be limited to contain only such information as is necessary to mitigate undue prejudice created by the statements made by others.

[8] See Rule 3.8(f) for additional duties of prosecutors in connection with extrajudicial statements about criminal proceedings.

Rule 3.7. Lawyer as Witness

(a) A lawyer shall not act as advocate at a trial in which the lawyer is likely to be a necessary witness unless:

(1) the testimony relates to an uncontested issue;

(2) the testimony relates to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case; or

(3) disqualification of the lawyer would work substantial hardship on the client.

(b) A lawyer may act as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is likely to be called as a witness unless precluded from doing so by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9.

COMMENT

[1] Combining the roles of advocate and witness can prejudice the tribunal and the opposing party and can also involve a conflict of interest between the lawyer and client.

Advocate-Witness Rule

[2] The tribunal has proper objection when the trier of fact may be confused or misled by a lawyer serving as both advocate and witness. The opposing party has proper objection where the combination of roles may prejudice that party's rights in the litigation. A witness is required to testify on the basis of personal knowledge, while an advocate is expected to explain and comment on evidence given by others. It may not be clear whether a statement by an advocate-witness should be taken as proof or as an analysis of the proof.

[3] To protect the tribunal, paragraph (a) prohibits a lawyer from simultaneously serving as advocate and necessary witness except in those circumstances specified in paragraphs (a)(1) through (a)(3). Paragraph (a)(1) recognizes that if the testimony will be uncontested, the ambiguities in the dual role are purely theoretical. Paragraph (a)(2) recognizes that where the testimony concerns the extent and value of legal services rendered in the action in which the testimony is offered, permitting the lawyers to testify avoids the need for a second trial with new counsel to resolve that issue. Moreover, in such a situation the judge has firsthand knowledge of the matter in issue; hence, there is less dependence on the adversary process to test the credibility of the testimony.

[4] Apart from these two exceptions, paragraph (a)(3) recognizes that a balancing is required between the interests of the client and those of the tribunal and the opposing party. Whether the tribunal is likely to be misled or the opposing party is likely to suffer prejudice depends on the nature of the case, the importance and probable tenor of the lawyer's testimony, and the probability that the lawyer's testimony will conflict with that of other witnesses. Even if there is risk of such prejudice, in determining whether the lawyer should be disqualified, due regard must be given to the effect of disqualification on the lawyer's client. It is relevant that one or both parties could reasonably foresee that the lawyer would probably be a witness. The conflict of interest principles stated in Rules 1.7, 1.9 and 1.10 have no application to this aspect of the problem.

[5] Because the tribunal is not likely to be misled when a lawyer acts as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm will testify as a necessary witness, paragraph (b) permits the lawyer to do so except in situations involving a conflict of interest.

Conflict of Interest

[6] In determining if it is permissible to act as advocate in a trial in which the lawyer will be a necessary witness, the lawyer must also consider that the dual role may give rise to a conflict of interest that will require compliance with Rules 1.7 or 1.9. For example, if there is likely to be substantial conflict between the testimony of the client and that of the lawyer the representation involves a conflict of interest that requires compliance with Rule 1.7. This would be true even though the lawyer might not be prohibited by paragraph (a) from simultaneously serving as advocate and witness because the lawyer's disqualification would work a substantial hardship on the client. Similarly, a lawyer who might be permitted to simultaneously serve as an advocate and a witness by paragraph (a)(3) might be precluded from doing so by Rule 1.9. The problem can arise whether the lawyer is called as a witness on behalf of the client or is called by the opposing party. Determining whether or not such a conflict exists is primarily the responsibility of the lawyer involved. If there is a conflict of interest, the lawyer must secure the client's informed consent, confirmed in writing. In some cases, the lawyer will be precluded from seeking the client's consent. See Rule 1.7. See Rule 1.0(b) for the definition of ''confirmed in writing'' and Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of ''informed consent.''

[7] Paragraph (b) provides that a lawyer is not disqualified from serving as an advocate because a lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated in a firm is precluded from doing so by paragraph (a). If, however, the testifying lawyer would also be disqualified by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9 from representing the client in the matter, other lawyers in the firm will be precluded from representing the client by Rule 1.10 unless the client gives informed consent under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7.

Annotator's note. Rule 3.7 is similar to Rule 3.7 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

A violation of section (a) of this rule ordinarily will require disqualification because the very purpose of the rule is to avoid the taint to a trial that results from jury confusion when a lawyer acts as both witness and advocate. Merrill Lynch Bus. Fin. Servs., Inc. v. Nudell, 239 F. Supp. 2d 1170 (D. Colo. 2003).

Section (a) is a prohibition only against acting as an advocate at trial. It does not automatically require that a lawyer be disqualified from pretrial activities, such as participating in strategy sessions, pretrial hearings, settlement conferences, or motions practice. Merrill Lynch Bus. Fin. Servs., Inc. v. Nudell, 239 F. Supp. 2d 1170 (D. Colo. 2003).

Disqualification from pretrial matters may be appropriate, however, where that activity includes obtaining evidence which, if admitted at trial, would reveal the attorney's dual role. Merrill Lynch Bus. Fin. Servs., Inc. v. Nudell, 239 F. Supp. 2d 1170 (D. Colo. 2003).

Section (a)(1) allows an attorney to testify only regarding an uncontested issue and does not allow an attorney to testify to undisputed facts to support a disputed issue. People v. Pasillas-Sanchez, 214 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2009).

A party seeking disqualification of any attorney as "likely to be a necessary witness" must show that "the advocate's testimony is necessary, and not merely cumulative". Religious Tech. Ctr. v. F.A.C.T. Net, Inc., 945 F. Supp. 1470 (D. Colo. 1996).

This rule does not mandate a hearing where there is a possibility of a conflict of interest on the part of an attorney called as a witness against his or her client. Taylor v. Grogan, 900 P.2d 60 (Colo. 1995).

This rule does not require the appointment of a special prosecutor for purposes of a hearing on a new trial motion when the jury has been excused and thus would never learn that members of the district attorney's office would act as both the prosecution and witnesses. People v. Ehrnstein, 2018 CO 40, 417 P.3d 813.

Rule requires that plaintiffs' counsel who is also their son be disqualified from appearing as an advocate because he is likely to be called as a witness at trial. Determining whether the moving party has demonstrated that opposing counsel is ''likely to be a necessary witness'' involves a consideration of the nature of the case, with emphasis on the subject of the lawyer's testimony, the weight the testimony might have in resolving disputed issues, and the availability of other witnesses or documentary evidence which might independently establish the relevant issues. The moving party's burden is complete if he proves that opposing counsel is ''likely to be a witness'' at trial. Here, the facts and circumstances demonstrate that plaintiffs' son who is also their counsel and who was endorsed by plaintiffs as a fact witness is likely to be a necessary witness on his clients' and parents' behalf. The statements of plaintiffs' counsel and son is that he spoke with the defendant-doctor after the procedure performed on his plaintiff father and that the defendant made certain admissions against interest. Fognani v. Young, 115 P.3d 1268 (Colo. 2005).

Rule permits a lawyer to maintain a dual role in the same proceeding if "disqualification would work substantial hardship on the client". Even if there is a risk of prejudice to both parties if the attorney is permitted to testify, court must balance the competing interests, affording ''due regard'' to the effect of disqualification on his clients. When determining whether disqualification would impose a substantial hardship on the client, court should consider all relevant factors in light of the specific facts before it, including the nature of the case, financial hardship, giving weight to the stage in the proceedings, the time at which the attorney became aware of the likelihood of his testimony, and whether the client has secured alternate representation. Here, considering the specific facts and circumstances, trial court did not abuse its discretion in rejecting plaintiffs' substantial hardship claim. In light of ample justification in the record, trial court did not abuse its discretion in disqualifying plaintiffs' counsel and son from his representation of his parents at trial. Fognani v. Young, 115 P.3d 1268 (Colo. 2005).

But trial court did not abuse discretion in disqualifying a lawyer where the lawyer was the sole source, other than the defendant, of potentially critical and outcome determinative information to be used to establish the defendant's defense and the court determined that allowing the lawyer to continue the representation would undermine the public's interest in maintaining the integrity in the judicial system. People v. Pasillas-Sanchez, 214 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2009).

Court declines to issue a rule that would permit automatic participation by disqualified attorney in all pretrial litigation. Upon assuring that the client has consented to pretrial representation by the disqualified attorney, trial court has discretion to determine whether participation by the attorney in a particular pretrial activity would undermine the purpose of the rule. If, for example the attorney's dual role in a deposition proceeding would likely be revealed at trial, trial court may properly limit attorney's role in that activity. Here, trial court was given opportunity on remand to fashion its orders in a way dictated by facts of the case. Fognani v. Young, 115 P.3d 1268 (Colo. 2005).

Rule does not impose automatic vicarious disqualification of the disqualified attorney's law firm. As such, the trial court must consider whether the requirements of C.R.C.P. 1.7 and 1.9 have been met. The inquiry is two-fold: (1) Whether the firm reasonably believes its representation of the plaintiffs will not be materially limited by its responsibilities to the attorney; and (2) the client's consent to the ongoing representation and whether that consent is objectively reasonable under the circumstances. The trial court has the authority to decline to honor the client's choice if the court concludes that the client should not agree to the representation under the circumstances of the case. In making that determination, the court may balance the clients' interests in the continuing representation against the nature of the anticipated testimony and the credibility issues that the testimony may pose. Here, record does not permit supreme court to determine whether trial court abused its discretion in disqualifying the law firm of plaintiffs' son from representing plaintiffs. Accordingly, remand is necessary to determine whether the requirements of C.R.C.P. 1.7 have been met. Fognani v. Young, 115 P.3d 1268 (Colo. 2005).

Trial court's conclusion that defendant would likely have a compelling need to call his attorney to testify within its discretion. Although prosecution failed to demonstrate a compelling need for testimony of defendant's attorney, thus creating a conflict under this rule and need for disqualification, the trial court did not rule arbitrarily, unreasonably, or unfairly when it ruled to disqualify defendant's attorney. People v. Hagos, 250 P.3d 596 (Colo. App. 2009).

Court of appeals uses abuse of discretion standard to review trial court's decision to disqualify counsel under this rule. Haralampopoulos v. Kelly, 361 P.3d 978 (Colo. App. 2011), rev'd on other grounds, 2014 CO 46, 327 P.3d 255.

Court did not abuse discretion in disqualifying counsel from representing plaintiff at trial but allowing counsel to participate in pretrial preparation and allowing counsel's firm to represent plaintiff at trial. Counsel had been deposed and could be called as a witness but exclusion of counsel from pretrial preparation could create a substantial hardship for plaintiff. Haralampopoulos v. Kelly, 361 P.3d 978 (Colo. App. 2011), rev'd on other grounds, 2014 CO 46, 327 P.3d 255.

Rule 3.8. Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor

The prosecutor in a criminal case shall:

(a) refrain from prosecuting a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause;

(b) make reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and has been given reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel;

(c) not seek to obtain from an unrepresented accused a waiver of important pretrial rights, such as the right to a preliminary hearing;

(d) make timely disclosure to the defense of all evidence or information known to the prosecutor that tends to negate the guilt of the accused or mitigates the offense, and, in connection with sentencing, disclose to the defense and to the tribunal all unprivileged mitigating information known to the prosecutor, except when the prosecutor is relieved of this responsibility by a protective order of the tribunal;

(e) not subpoena a lawyer in a grand jury or other criminal proceeding to present evidence about a past or present client unless the prosecutor reasonably believes:

(1) the information sought is not protected from disclosure by any applicable privilege;

(2) the evidence sought is essential to the successful completion of an ongoing investigation or prosecution; and

(3) there is no other feasible alternative to obtain the information;

(f) except for statements that are necessary to inform the public of the nature and extent of the prosecutor's action and that serve a legitimate law enforcement purpose, refrain from making extrajudicial comments that have a substantial likelihood of heightening public condemnation of the accused unless such comments are permitted under Rule 3.6(b) or 3.6(c), and exercise reasonable care to prevent investigators, law enforcement personnel, employees or other persons assisting or associated with the prosecutor in a criminal case from making an extrajudicial statement that the prosecutor would be prohibited from making under Rule 3.6 or this Rule.

(g) When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable probability that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted, the prosecutor shall within a reasonable time:

(1) disclose that evidence to an appropriate court or prosecutorial authority, and

(2) if the judgment of conviction was entered by a court in which the prosecutor exercises prosecutorial authority

(A) disclose the evidence to the defendant, and

(B) if the defendant is not represented, move the court in which the defendant was convicted to appoint counsel to assist the defendant concerning the evidence.

(h) When a prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence establishing that a defendant was convicted in a court in which the prosecutor exercises prosecutorial authority, of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor shall take steps in the appropriate court, consistent with applicable law, to set aside the conviction.

COMMENT

[1] A prosecutor has the responsibility of a minister of justice and not simply that of an advocate. This responsibility carries with it specific obligations to see that the defendant is accorded procedural justice, that guilt is decided upon the basis of sufficient evidence and that special precautions are taken to prevent and to address the conviction of innocent persons. The extent of mandated remedial action is a matter of debate and varies in different jurisdictions. Many jurisdictions have adopted the ABA Standards of Criminal Justice Relating to the Prosecution Function, which are the product of prolonged and careful deliberation by lawyers experienced in both criminal prosecution and defense. Competent representation of the sovereign may require a prosecutor to undertake some procedural and remedial measures as a matter of obligation. Applicable law may require other measures by the prosecutor and knowing disregard of those obligations or a systematic abuse of prosecutorial discretion could constitute a violation of Rule 8.4.

[2] In some jurisdictions, a defendant may waive a preliminary hearing and thereby lose a valuable opportunity to challenge probable cause. Accordingly, prosecutors should not seek to obtain waivers of preliminary hearings or other important pretrial rights from unrepresented defendants. Paragraph (c) does not apply, however, to a defendant appearing pro se with the approval of the tribunal. Nor does it forbid the lawful questioning of an uncharged suspect who has knowingly waived the rights to counsel and silence.

[3] The exception in paragraph (d) recognizes that a prosecutor may seek an appropriate protective order from the tribunal if disclosure of information to the defense could result in substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest.

[3A] A prosecutor's duties following conviction are set forth in sections (g) and (h) of this rule.

[4] Paragraph (e) is intended to limit the issuance of lawyer subpoenas in grand jury and other criminal proceedings to those situations in which there is a genuine need to intrude into the client-lawyer relationship.

[5] Paragraph (f) supplements the prohibition in Rule 3.6, which prohibits extrajudicial statements that have a substantial likelihood of prejudicing an adjudicatory proceeding, but does not limit the protection of Rule 3.6(b) or

Rule 3.6(c). In the context of a criminal prosecution, a prosecutor's extrajudicial statement can create the additional problem of increasing public condemnation of the accused. Although the announcement of an indictment, for example, will necessarily have severe consequences for the accused, a prosecutor can, and should, avoid comments which have no legitimate law enforcement purpose and have a substantial likelihood of increasing public condemnation of the accused. Nevertheless, a prosecutor shall not be subject to disciplinary action on the basis that the prosecutor's statement violated paragraph (f), if the statement was permitted by Rule 3.6(b) or Rule 3.6(c).

[6] Like other lawyers, prosecutors are subject to Rules 5.1 and 5.3, which relate to responsibilities regarding lawyers and nonlawyers who work for or are associated with the lawyer's office. Paragraph (f) reminds the prosecutor of the importance of these obligations in connection with the unique dangers of improper extrajudicial statements in a criminal case. In addition, paragraph (f) requires a prosecutor to exercise reasonable care to prevent persons assisting or associated with the prosecutor from making improper extrajudicial statements, even when such persons are not under the direct supervision of the prosecutor. Ordinarily, the reasonable care standard will be satisfied if the prosecutor issues the appropriate cautions to law-enforcement personnel and other relevant individuals.

[7] When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a person outside the prosecutor's jurisdiction was convicted of a crime that the person did not commit, paragraph (g) requires disclosure to the court or other prosecutorial authority, such as the chief prosecutor of the jurisdiction where the conviction occurred. Consistent with the objectives of Rules 4.2 and 4.3, disclosure to a represented defendant must be made through the defendant's counsel, and, in the case of an unrepresented defendant, the prosecutor must take the affirmative step of making a request to a court for the appointment of counsel to assist the defendant in taking such legal measures as may be appropriate.

[7A] What constitutes ''within a reasonable time'' will vary according to the circumstances presented. When considering the timing of a disclosure, a prosecutor should consider all of the circumstances, including whether the defendant is subject to the death penalty, is presently incarcerated, or is under court supervision. The prosecutor should also consider what investigative resources are available to the prosecutor, whether the trial prosecutor who prosecuted the case is still reasonably available, what new investigation or testing is appropriate, and the prejudice to an on-going investigation.

[8] Under paragraph (h), once the prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence that the defendant was convicted of either an offense that the defendant did not commit or of an offense that involves conduct of others for which the defendant is legally accountable (see C.R.S. §18-1-601 et seq. and 18 U.S.C. §2), but which those others did not commit, then the prosecutor must take steps in the appropriate court. Necessary steps may include disclosure of the evidence to the defendant, requesting that the court appoint counsel for an unrepresented indigent defendant and, where appropriate, notifying the court that the prosecutor has knowledge that the defendant did not commit the offense of which the defendant was convicted.

[8A] Evidence is considered new when it was unknown to a trial prosecutor at the time the conviction was entered or, if known to a trial prosecutor, was not disclosed to the defense, either deliberately or inadvertently. The reasons for the evidence being unknown (and therefore new) are varied. It may be new because: the information was not available to a trial prosecutor or the prosecution team at the time of trial; the police department investigating the case or other agency involved in the prosecution did not provide the evidence to a trial prosecutor; or recent testing was performed which was not available at the time of trial. There may be other circumstances when information would be deemed new evidence.

[9] A prosecutor's reasonable judgment made in good faith, that the new evidence is not of such nature as to trigger the obligations of sections (g) and (h), although subsequently determined to have been erroneous, does not constitute a violation of this Rule.

[9A] Factors probative of the prosecutor's reasonable judgment that the evidence casts serious doubt on the reliability of the judgment of conviction include: whether the evidence was essential to a principal issue in the trial that produced the conviction; whether the evidence goes beyond the credibility of a witness; whether the evidence is subject to serious dispute; or whether the defendant waived the establishment of a factual basis pursuant to criminal procedural rules.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Rule 3.8 is similar to Rule 3.8 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Paragraph (f)(1) is inconsistent with federal law and thus is invalid as applied to federal prosecutors practicing before the grand jury. As applied to proceedings other than those before the grand jury, paragraph (f)(1) is not inconsistent with federal law and does not violate the supremacy clause. Thus, paragraph (f)(1) is valid and enforceable except as it pertains to federal prosecutors practicing before the grand jury. U.S. v. Colo. Supreme Court, 988 F. Supp. 1368 (D. Colo. 1998), aff'd, 189 F.3d 1281 (10th Cir. 1999).

Paragraph (d) should be read as containing a requirement that a prosecutor disclose exculpatory, outcome-determinative evidence that tends to negate the guilt or mitigate the punishment of the accused in advance of the next critical stage of the proceeding, consistent with the materiality standard adopted with respect to the rules of criminal procedure. In re Attorney C, 47 P.3d 1167 (Colo. 2002).

Rule 3.9. Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings

A lawyer representing a client before a legislative body or administrative agency in a nonadjudicative proceeding shall disclose that the appearance is in a representative capacity. Further, in such a representation, the lawyer:

(a) shall conform to the provisions of Rules 3.3(a)(1), 3.3(a)(3), 3.3(b), 3.3(c), and 3.4(a) and (b);

(b) shall not engage in conduct intended to disrupt such proceeding unless such conduct is protected by law; and

(c) may engage in ex parte communications, except as prohibited by law.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] In representation before bodies such as legislatures, municipal councils, and executive and administrative agencies acting in a rule-making or policy-making capacity, lawyers present facts, formulate issues and advance argument in the matters under consideration. The decision-making body, like a court, should be able to rely on the integrity of the submissions made to it and on the candor of the lawyer. For this reason the lawyer must conform to Rules

3.3(a)(1), 3.3(a)(3), 3.3(b), 3.3(c), and 3.4(a) and (b) in such representation.

[2] Lawyers have no exclusive right to appear before nonadjudicative bodies, as they do before a court. The requirements of this Rule therefore may subject lawyers to regulations inapplicable to advocates who are not lawyers. However, legislatures and administrative agencies have a right to expect lawyers to deal with them as they deal with courts.

[3] This Rule only applies when a lawyer represents a client in connection with an official hearing or meeting of a governmental agency or a legislative body to which the lawyer or the lawyer's client is presenting evidence or argument. It does not apply to representation of a client in a negotiation or other bilateral transaction with a governmental agency or in connection with an application for a license or other privilege or the client's compliance with generally applicable reporting requirements, such as the filing of income-tax returns. Nor does it apply to the representation of a client in connection with an investigation or examination of the client's affairs conducted by government investigators or examiners. Representation in such matters is governed by Rules 4.1 through 4.4.

[4] This Rule recognizes that the lawyer's conduct and communications described in Rules 3.9(b) and (c) may be protected by constitutional or other legal principles.

TRANSACTIONS WITH PERSONS OTHER THAN CLIENTS

Rule 4.1. Truthfulness in Statements to Others

In the course of representing a client a lawyer shall not knowingly:

(a) make a false statement of material fact or law to a third person; or

(b) fail to disclose a material fact to a third person when disclosure is necessary to avoid assisting a criminal or fraudulent act by a client, unless disclosure is prohibited by Rule 1.6.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

False Statements

[1] A lawyer is required to be truthful when dealing with others on a client's behalf, but generally has no affirmative duty to inform an opposing party of relevant facts. A false statement can occur if the lawyer incorporates or affirms a statement of another person that the lawyer knows is false. Omissions or partially true but misleading statements can be the equivalent of affirmative false statements. For dishonest conduct generally see Rule 8.4.

Statements of Fact

[2] This Rule refers to statements of fact. Whether a particular statement should be regarded as one of fact can depend on the circumstances. Under generally accepted conventions in negotiation, certain types of statements ordinarily are not taken as statements of fact. Estimates of price or value placed on the subject of a transaction and a party's intentions as to an acceptable settlement of a claim are ordinarily in this category, and so is the existence of an undisclosed principal except where nondisclosure of the principal would constitute fraud. Lawyers should be mindful of their obligations under applicable law to avoid criminal and tortious misrepresentation.

Crime or Fraud by Client

[3] Under Rule l.2(d), a lawyer is prohibited from counseling or assisting a client in conduct that the lawyer knows is criminal or fraudulent. Paragraph (b) states a specific application of the principle set forth in Rule 1.2(d) and addresses the situation where a client's crime or fraud takes the form of a lie or misrepresentation. Ordinarily, a lawyer can avoid assisting a client's crime or fraud by withdrawing from the representation. Sometimes it may be necessary for the lawyer to give notice of the fact of withdrawal and to disaffirm an opinion, document, affirmation or the like. In extreme cases, substantive law may require a lawyer to disclose information relating to the representation to avoid being deemed to have assisted the client's crime or fraud. If the lawyer can avoid assisting a client's crime or fraud only by disclosing this information, then under paragraph (b) the lawyer is required to do so, unless the disclosure is prohibited by Rule 1.6.

Rule 4.2. Communication with Person Represented by Counsel

In representing a client, a lawyer shall not communicate about the subject of the representation with a person the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer or is authorized to do so by law or a court order.

Source: Comment amended and adopted June 17, 1999, effective July 1, 1999; entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] This Rule contributes to the proper functioning of the legal system by protecting a person who has chosen to be represented by a lawyer in a matter against possible overreaching by other lawyers who are participating in the matter, interference by those lawyers with the client-lawyer relationship and the uncounselled disclosure of information relating to the representation.

[2] This Rule applies to communications with any person who is represented by counsel concerning the matter to which the communication relates.

[3] The Rule applies even though the represented person initiates or consents to the communication. A lawyer must immediately terminate communication with a person if, after commencing communication, the lawyer learns that person is one with whom communication is not permitted by this Rule.

[4] This Rule does not prohibit communication with a represented person, or an employee or agent of such a person, concerning matters outside the representation. For example, the existence of a controversy between a government agency and a private party, or between two organizations, does not prohibit a lawyer for either from communicating with nonlawyer representatives of the other regarding a separate matter. Nor does this Rule preclude communication with a represented person who is seeking advice from a lawyer who is not otherwise representing a client in the matter. A lawyer may not make a communication prohibited by this Rule through the acts of another. See Rule 8.4(a). Parties to a matter may communicate directly with each other, and a lawyer is not prohibited from advising a client concerning a communication that the client is legally entitled to make. Also, a lawyer having independent justification or legal authorization for communicating with a represented person, such as a contractually-based right or obligation to give notice, is permitted to do so.

[5] Communications authorized by law may include communications by a lawyer on behalf of a client who is exercising a constitutional or other legal right to communicate with the government. Communications authorized by law may also include investigative activities of lawyers representing governmental entities, directly or through investigative agents, prior to the commencement of criminal or civil enforcement proceedings. When communicating with the accused in a criminal matter, a government lawyer must comply with this Rule in addition to honoring the constitutional rights of the accused. The fact that a communication does not violate a state or federal constitutional right is insufficient to establish that the communication is permissible under this Rule.

[6] A lawyer who is uncertain whether a communication with a represented person is permissible may seek a court order. A lawyer may also seek a court order in exceptional circumstances to authorize a communication that would otherwise be prohibited by this Rule, for example, where communication with a person represented by counsel is necessary to avoid reasonably certain injury.

[7] In the case of a represented organization, this Rule prohibits communications with a constituent of the organization who supervises, directs or regularly consults with the organization's lawyer concerning the matter or has authority to obligate the organization with respect to the matter or whose act or omission in connection with the matter may be imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability. Consent of the organization's lawyer is not required for communication with a former constituent. If a constituent of the organization is represented in the matter by his or her own counsel, the consent by that counsel to a communication will be sufficient for purposes of this Rule. Compare Rule 3.4(f). In communicating with a current or former constituent of an organization, a lawyer must not use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of the organization. See Rule 4.4.

[8] The prohibition on communications with a represented person only applies in circumstances where the lawyer knows that the person is in fact represented in the matter to be discussed. This means that the lawyer has actual knowledge of the fact of the representation; but such actual knowledge may be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule 1.0(f). Thus, the lawyer cannot evade the requirement of obtaining the consent of counsel by closing eyes to the obvious.

[9] In the event the person with whom the lawyer communicates is not known to be represented by counsel in the matter, the lawyer's communications are subject to Rule 4.3.

[9A] A pro se party to whom limited representation has been provided in accordance with C.R.C.P. 11(b) or C.R.C.P. 311(b), and Rule 1.2, is considered to be unrepresented for purposes of this Rule unless the lawyer has knowledge to the contrary.

Rule 4.3. Dealing with Unrepresented Person

In dealing on behalf of a client with a person who is not represented by counsel, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the unrepresented person misunderstands the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding. The lawyer shall not give legal advice to an unrepresented person, other than the advice to secure counsel, if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the interests of such a person are or have a reasonable possibility of being in conflict with the interests of the client.

COMMENT

[1] An unrepresented person, particularly one not experienced in dealing with legal matters, might assume that a lawyer is disinterested in loyalties or is a disinterested authority on the law even when the lawyer represents a client. In order to avoid a misunderstanding, a lawyer will typically need to identify the lawyer's client and, where necessary, explain that the client has interests opposed to those of the unrepresented person. For misunderstandings that sometimes arise when a lawyer for an organization deals with an unrepresented constituent, see Rule 1.13(f).

[2] The Rule distinguishes between situations involving unrepresented persons whose interests may be adverse to those of the lawyer's client and those in which the person's interests are not in conflict with the client's. In the former situation, the possibility that the lawyer will compromise the unrepresented person's interests is so great that the Rule prohibits the giving of any advice, apart from the advice to obtain counsel. Whether a lawyer is giving impermissible advice may depend on the experience and sophistication of the unrepresented person, as well as the setting in which the behavior and comments occur. This Rule does not prohibit a lawyer from negotiating the terms of a transaction or settling a dispute with an unrepresented person. So long as the lawyer has explained that the lawyer represents an adverse party and is not representing the person, the lawyer may inform the person of the terms on which the lawyer's client will enter into an agreement or settle a matter, prepare documents that require the person's signature and explain the lawyer's own view of the meaning of the document or the lawyer's view of the underlying legal obligations.

[2A] The lawyer must comply with the requirements of this Rule for pro se parties to whom limited representation has been provided, in accordance with C.R.C.P. 11(b), C.R.C.P. 311(b), Rule 1.2, and Rule 4.2. Such parties are considered to be unrepresented for purposes of this Rule.

Rule 4.4. Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(a) In representing a client, a lawyer shall not use means that have no substantial purpose other than to embarrass, delay, or burden a third person, or use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of such a person.

(b) A lawyer who receives a document relating to the representation of the lawyer's client and knows or reasonably should know that the document was inadvertently sent shall promptly notify the sender.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008; Comment [2] amended, effective April 6, 2016.

COMMENT

[1] Responsibility to a client requires a lawyer to subordinate the interests of others to those of the client, but that responsibility does not imply that a lawyer may disregard the rights of third persons. It is impractical to catalogue all such rights, but they include legal restrictions on methods of obtaining evidence from third persons and unwarranted intrusions into privileged relationships, such as the client-lawyer relationship.

[2] Paragraph (b) recognizes that lawyers sometimes receive documents that were mistakenly sent or produced by opposing parties or their lawyers. A document is inadvertently sent when it is accidentally transmitted, such as when an e-mail or letter is misaddressed or a document or electronically stored information is accidentally included with information that was intentionally transmitted. If a lawyer knows or reasonably should know that such a document was sent inadvertently, then this Rule requires the lawyer to promptly notify the sender in order to permit that person to take protective measures. Paragraph (c) imposes an additional obligation on lawyers under limited circumstances. If a lawyer receives a document and also receives notice from the sender prior to reviewing the document that the document was inadvertently sent, the receiving lawyer must refrain from examining the document and also must abide by the sender's instructions as to the disposition of the document, unless a court otherwise orders. Whether a lawyer is required to take additional steps beyond those required by paragraphs (b) and (c) is a matter of law beyond the scope of these Rules, as is the question of whether the privileged status of a document has been waived. Similarly, this Rule does not address the legal duties of a lawyer who receives a document that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know may have been inappropriately obtained by the sending person. For purposes of this Rule, ''document'' includes, in addition to paper documents, e-mail and other forms of electronically stored information, including embedded data (commonly referred to as ''metadata''), that is subject to being read or put into readable form. Metadata in electronic documents creates an obligation under this Rule only if the receiving lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the metadata was inadvertently sent to the receiving lawyer.

[3] In the circumstances of paragraph (b), some lawyers may choose to return an inadvertently sent document. Where a lawyer is not required by applicable law or paragraph (c) to do so, the decision to voluntarily return such a document is a matter of professional judgment ordinarily reserved to the lawyer. See Rules 1.2 and 1.4.

Rule 4.5. Threatening Prosecution

(a) A lawyer shall not threaten criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil matter nor shall a lawyer present or participate in presenting criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

(b) It shall not be a violation of Rule 4.5 for a lawyer to notify another person in a civil matter that the lawyer reasonably believes that the other's conduct may violate criminal, administrative or disciplinary rules or statutes.

Source: Entire rule and comment amended and adopted June 19, 1997, effective July 1, 1997; entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] The civil adjudicative process is primarily designed for the settlement of disputes between parties, while the criminal, disciplinary and some administrative processes are designed for the protection of society as a whole. For purposes of this Rule, a civil matter is a controversy or potential controversy over rights and duties of two or more persons under the law whether or not an action has been commenced.

[2] Threatening to use, or using the criminal, administrative or disciplinary process to coerce adjustment of private civil matters is a subversion of that process; further, the person against whom the criminal, administrative or disciplinary process is so misused may be deterred from asserting valid legal rights and thus the usefulness of the civil process in settling private disputes is impaired. As in all cases of abuse of judicial process, the improper use of criminal, administrative or disciplinary process tends to diminish public confidence in our legal system.

[3] The Rule distinguishes between threats to bring criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges and the actual filing or presentation of such charges. Threats to file such charges are prohibited if a purpose is to obtain any advantage in a civil matter while the actual presentation of such charges is proscribed by this Rule only if the sole purpose for presenting the charges is to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

[4] This distinction is appropriate because the abuse of the judicial process is at its greatest when a threat of filing charges is used as a lever to obtain an advantage in a collateral, civil proceeding. This leverage is either eliminated or greatly reduced when the charge actually is presented.

[5] Moreover, this Rule does not prohibit a lawyer from notifying another person involved in a civil matter that such person's conduct may violate criminal, administrative or disciplinary rules or statutes where the notifying lawyer reasonably believes that such a violation has taken place.

[6] While it may be difficult in certain circumstances to distinguish between a notification and a threat, public policy is served by allowing a lawyer to notify another person of a perceived violation without subjecting the notifying lawyer to discipline. Many minor violations can be eliminated, rectified or minimized if there is frank dialogue among participants to a dispute.

[7] Rule 4.5(b) provides a safe harbor for notifications of this type. Other factors that should be considered to differentiate threats from notifications in difficult cases include (a) an absence of any suggestion by the notifying lawyer that he or she could exert any improper influence over the criminal, administrative or disciplinary process, (b) consideration of whether any monetary recovery or other relief sought by the notifying lawyer is reasonably related to the harm suffered by the lawyer's clients. Where no such reasonable relation exists, the communication likely constitutes a proscribed threat. For example, a lawyer violates Rule 4.5 if the lawyer threatens to file a charge or complaint of tax fraud against another party where issues of tax fraud have nothing to do with the dispute. It is not a violation of Rule 4.5 for a lawyer to notify another party that the other person's writing of an insufficient funds check may have criminal as well as civil ramifications in a civil action for collection of the bad check.

LAW FIRMS AND ASSOCIATIONS

Rule 5.1. Responsibilities of a Partner or Supervisory Lawyer

(a) A partner in a law firm, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm, shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm conform to the Rules of Professional Conduct.

(b) A lawyer having direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the other lawyer conforms to the Rules of Professional Conduct.

(c) A lawyer shall be responsible for another lawyer's violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if:

(1) the lawyer orders or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved;

(2) the lawyer is a partner or has comparable managerial authority in the law firm in which the other lawyer practices, or has direct supervisory authority over the other lawyer, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] Paragraph (a) applies to lawyers who have managerial authority over the professional work of a firm. See Rule 1.0(c). This includes members of a partnership, the shareholders in a law firm organized as a professional corporation, and members of other associations authorized to practice law; lawyers having comparable managerial authority in a legal services organization or a law department of an enterprise or government agency; and lawyers who have intermediate managerial responsibilities in a firm. Paragraph (b) applies to lawyers who have supervisory authority over the work of other lawyers in a firm.

[2] Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a firm to make reasonable efforts to establish internal policies and procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm will conform to the Rules of Professional Conduct. Such policies and procedures include those designed to detect and resolve conflicts of interest, identify dates by which actions must be taken in pending matters, account for client funds and property and ensure that inexperienced lawyers are properly supervised.

[3] Other measures that may be required to fulfill the responsibility prescribed in paragraph (a) can depend on the firm's structure and the nature of its practice. In a small firm of experienced lawyers, informal supervision and periodic review of compliance with the required systems ordinarily will suffice. In a large firm, or in practice situations in which difficult ethical problems frequently arise, more elaborate measures may be necessary. Some firms, for example, have a procedure whereby junior lawyers can make confidential referral of ethical problems directly to a designated senior partner or special committee. See Rule 5.2. Firms, whether large or small, may also rely on continuing legal education in professional ethics. In any event, the ethical atmosphere of a firm can influence the conduct of all its members and the partners may not assume that all lawyers associated with the firm will inevitably conform to the Rules.

[4] Paragraph (c) expresses a general principle of personal responsibility for acts of another. See also Rule 8.4(a).

[5] Paragraph (c)(2) defines the duty of a partner or other lawyer having comparable managerial authority in a law firm, as well as a lawyer who has direct supervisory authority over performance of specific legal work by another lawyer. Whether a lawyer has supervisory authority in particular circumstances is a question of fact. Partners and lawyers with comparable authority have at least indirect responsibility for all work being done by the firm, while a partner or manager in charge of a particular matter ordinarily also has supervisory responsibility for the work of other firm lawyers engaged in the matter. Appropriate remedial action by a partner or managing lawyer would depend on the immediacy of that lawyer's involvement and the seriousness of the misconduct. A supervisor is required to intervene to prevent avoidable consequences of misconduct if the supervisor knows that the misconduct occurred. Thus, if a supervising lawyer knows that a subordinate misrepresented a matter to an opposing party in negotiation, the supervisor as well as the subordinate has a duty to correct the resulting misapprehension.

[6] Professional misconduct by a lawyer under supervision could reveal a violation of paragraph (b) on the part of the supervisory lawyer even though it does not entail a violation of paragraph (c) because there was no direction, ratification or knowledge of the violation.

[7] Apart from this Rule and Rule 8.4(a), a lawyer does not have disciplinary liability for the conduct of a partner, associate or subordinate. Whether a lawyer may be liable civilly or criminally for another lawyer's conduct is a question of law beyond the scope of these Rules.

[8] The duties imposed by this Rule on managing and supervising lawyers do not alter the personal duty of each lawyer in a firm to abide by the Rules of Professional Conduct. See Rule 5.2(a).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''The New Rules of Professional Conduct: Significant Changes for In-House Counsel'', see 36 Colo. Law. 71 (Nov. 2007).

Rule 5.2. Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer

(a) A lawyer is bound by the Rules of Professional Conduct notwithstanding that the lawyer acted at the direction of another person.

(b) A subordinate lawyer does not violate the Rules of Professional Conduct if that lawyer acts in accordance with a supervisory lawyer's reasonable resolution of an arguable question of professional duty.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] Although a lawyer is not relieved of responsibility for a violation by the fact that the lawyer acted at the direction of a supervisor, that fact may be relevant in determining whether a lawyer had the knowledge required to render conduct a violation of the Rules. For example, if a subordinate filed a frivolous pleading at the direction of a supervisor, the subordinate would not be guilty of a professional violation unless the subordinate knew of the document's frivolous character.

[2] When lawyers in a supervisor-subordinate relationship encounter a matter involving professional judgment as to ethical duty, the supervisor may assume responsibility for making the judgment. Otherwise a consistent course of action or position could not be taken. If the question can reasonably be answered only one way, the duty of both lawyers is clear and they are equally responsible for fulfilling it. However, if the question is reasonably arguable, someone has to decide upon the course of action. That authority ordinarily reposes in the supervisor, and a subordinate may be guided accordingly. For example, if a question arises whether the interests of two clients conflict under Rule 1.7, the supervisor's reasonable resolution of the question should protect the subordinate professionally if the resolution is subsequently challenged.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Rule 5.2 is similar to Rule 5.2 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The protection afforded by subsection (b) for a subordinate who acts in accordance with a supervisory lawyer's direction is not available to an attorney who failed to disclose his client's true identity in violation of Rule 3.3(b). However, a good-faith but unsuccessful attempt to bring an ethical problem to a superior's attention to receive guidance may be a mitigating factor in superior's determining punishment. People v. Casey, 948 P.2d 1014 (Colo. 1997).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Bennett, 843 P.2d 1385 (Colo. 1993).

Rule 5.3. Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants

With respect to nonlawyers employed or retained by or associated with a lawyer:

(a) a partner, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that the person's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer;

(b) a lawyer having direct supervisory authority over the nonlawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the person's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer; and

(c) a lawyer shall be responsible for conduct of such a person that would be a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if engaged in by a lawyer if:

(1) the lawyer orders or, with the knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or

(2) the lawyer is a partner or has comparable managerial authority in the law firm in which the person is employed, or has direct supervisory authority over the person, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008; Comment amended, effective April 6, 2016.

COMMENT

[1] Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a law firm to make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that nonlawyers in the firm and nonlawyers outside the firm who work on firm matters act in a way compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer. See Comment [6] to Rule 1.1 (retaining lawyers outside the firm) and Comment [1] to Rule 5.1 (responsibilities with respect to lawyers within a firm). Paragraph (b) applies to lawyers who have supervisory authority over such nonlawyers within or outside the firm. Paragraph (c) specifies the circumstances in which a lawyer is responsible for the conduct of such nonlawyers within or outside the firm that would be a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if engaged in by a lawyer.

[2] Lawyers generally employ assistants in their practice, including secretaries, investigators, law student interns, and paraprofessionals. Such assistants, whether employees or independent contractors, act for the lawyer in rendition of the lawyer's professional services. A lawyer must give such assistants appropriate instruction and supervision concerning the ethical aspects of their employment, particularly regarding the obligation not to disclose information relating to representation of the client, and should be responsible for their work product. The measures employed in supervising nonlawyers should take account of the fact that they do not have legal training and are not subject to professional discipline.

Nonlawyers Outside the Firm

[3] A lawyer may use nonlawyers outside the firm to assist the lawyer in rendering legal services to the client. Examples include the retention of an investigative or paraprofessional service, hiring a document management company to create and maintain a database for complex litigation, sending client documents to a third party for printing or scanning, and using an Internet-based service to store client information. When using such services outside the firm, a lawyer must make reasonable efforts to ensure that the services are provided in a manner that is compatible with the lawyer's professional obligations. The extent of this obligation will depend upon the circumstances, including the education, experience and reputation of the nonlawyer; the nature of the services involved; the terms of any arrangements concerning the protection of client information; and the legal and ethical environments of the jurisdictions in which the services will be performed, particularly with regard to confidentiality. See also Rules 1.1 (competence), 1.2 (allocation of authority), 1.4 (communication with client), 1.6 (confidentiality), 5.4(a) (professional independence of the lawyer), and 5.5(a) (unauthorized practice of law). When retaining or directing a nonlawyer outside the firm, a lawyer should communicate directions appropriate under the circumstances to give reasonable assurance that the nonlawyer's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer.

[4] Where the client directs the selection of a particular nonlawyer service provider outside the firm, the lawyer ordinarily should agree with the client concerning the allocation of responsibility, as between the client and the lawyer, for the supervisory activities described in Comment [3] above relative to that provider. See Rule 1.2. When making such an allocation in a matter pending before a tribunal, lawyers and parties may have additional obligations that are a matter of law beyond the scope of these Rules.

This rule does not apply to attorney special advocates. In re Redmond, 131 P.3d 1167 (Colo. App. 2005) (decided prior to 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct).

Attorney violated section (b) by failing to supervise non-attorney employee's work on a bankruptcy case to ensure that it was sufficient to satisfy his professional obligations and to generally be aware of the work the employee was doing regarding other matters. People v. Calvert, 280 P.3d 1269 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2011).

Trial court erred in ruling that the Uniform Debt-Management Services Act, part 2 of article 14.5 of title 12, regulates nonlawyer assistants in conflict with this rule. The rule requires that an attorney provide a nonlawyer assistant meaningful instruction and supervision. Likewise, the legal services exemption from regulation under the Act covers only nonlawyer assistants employed by a licensed attorney providing debt-management services in an attorney-client relationship. A nonlawyer assistant must act on behalf of an attorney to be covered under either the rule or the legal services exemption of the Act. Coffman v. Williamson, 2015 CO 35, 348 P.3d 929.

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Calvert, 280 P.3d 1269 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2011).

Rule 5.4. Professional Independence of a Lawyer

(a) A lawyer or law firm shall not share legal fees with a nonlawyer, except that:

(1) an agreement by a lawyer with the lawyer's firm, partner, or associate may provide for the payment of money, over a reasonable period of time after the lawyer's death, to the lawyer's estate or to one or more specified persons;

(2) a lawyer who undertakes to complete unfinished legal business of a deceased lawyer may pay to the estate of the deceased lawyer that proportion of the total compensation which fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased lawyer;

(3) a lawyer who purchases the practice of a deceased, disabled, or disappeared lawyer may, pursuant to the provisions of Rule 1.17, pay to the estate or other representative of that lawyer the agreed-upon purchase price;

(4) a lawyer or law firm may include nonlawyer employees in a compensation or retirement plan, even though the plan is based in whole or in part on a profit-sharing arrangement; and

(5) a lawyer may share court-awarded legal fees with a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommend employment of the lawyer in the matter.

(b) A lawyer shall not form a partnership with a nonlawyer if any of the activities of the partnership consist of the practice of law.

(c) A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays the lawyer to render legal services for another to direct or regulate the lawyer's professional judgment in rendering such legal services.

(d) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional company that is authorized to practice law for a profit, if:

(1) A nonlawyer owns any interest therein, except that a fiduciary representative of the estate of a lawyer may hold the stock or interest of the lawyer for a reasonable time during administration; or

(2) A nonlawyer has the right to direct or control the professional judgment of a lawyer.

(e) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional company that is authorized to practice law for a profit except in compliance with C.R.C.P. 265.

(f) For purposes of this Rule, a ''nonlawyer'' includes (1) a lawyer who has been disbarred, (2) a lawyer who has been suspended and who must petition for reinstatement, (3) a lawyer who has been immediately suspended pursuant to C.R.C.P. 251.8 or 251.20(d), (4) a lawyer who is on inactive status pursuant to C.R.C.P. 227(A)(6), or (5) a lawyer who, for a period of six months or more, has been (i) on disability inactive status pursuant to C.R.C.P. 251.23 or (ii) suspended pursuant to C.R.C.P. 251.8.5, 227(A)(4), 260.6, or 251.8.6.

COMMENT

[1] The provisions of this Rule express traditional limitations on sharing fees. These limitations are to protect the lawyer's professional independence of judgment on behalf of the lawyer's client. Moreover, since a lawyer should not aid or encourage a nonlawyer to practice law, the lawyer should not practice law or otherwise share legal fees with a nonlawyer. This does not mean, however, that the pecuniary value of the interest of a deceased lawyer in the lawyer's firm or practice may not be paid to the lawyer's estate or specified persons such as the lawyer's spouse or heirs. In like manner, profit-sharing retirement plans of a lawyer or law firm which include nonlawyer office employees are not improper. These limited exceptions to the rule against sharing legal fees with nonlawyers are permissible since they do not aid or encourage nonlawyers to practice law. Where someone other than the client pays the lawyer's fee or salary, or recommends employment of the lawyer, that arrangement does not modify the lawyer's obligation to the client. As stated in paragraph (c) such arrangements should not interfere with the lawyer's professional judgment on behalf of the lawyer's client. A lawyer should, however, make full disclosure of such arrangements to the client; and if the lawyer or client believes that the effectiveness of lawyer's representation has been or will be impaired thereby, the lawyer should take proper steps to withdraw from representation of the client.

[2] To assist a lawyer in preserving independence, a number of courses are available, For example, a lawyer may practice law in the form of a professional company, if in doing so the lawyer complies with all applicable rules of the Colorado Supreme Court. Although a lawyer may be employed by a business corporation with nonlawyers serving as directors or officers, and they necessarily have the right to make decisions of business policy, a lawyer must decline to accept direction of the lawyer's professional judgment from any nonlawyer. Various types of legal aid offices are administered by boards of directors composed of lawyers and nonlawyers. A lawyer should not accept employment from such an organization unless the board sets only broad policies and there is no interference in the relationship of the lawyer and the individual client the lawyer serves. Where a lawyer is employed by an organization, a written agreement that defines the relationship between the. Lawyer and the organization and provides for the lawyer's independence is desirable since it may serve to prevent misunderstanding as to their respective roles. Although other innovations in the means of supplying legal counsel may develop, the responsibility of the lawyer to maintain the lawyer's professional independence remains constant, and the legal profession must insure that changing circumstances do not result in loss of the professional independence of the lawyer.

[3] As part of the legal profession's commitment to the principle that high quality legal services should be available to all, lawyers are encouraged to cooperate with qualified legal assistance organizations providing prepaid legal services. Participation should at all times be in accordance with the basic tenets of the profession: independence, integrity, competence, and devotion to the interests of individual clients. A lawyer so participating should make certain that a relationship with a qualified legal assistance organization in no way interferes with the lawyer's independent professional representation of the interests of the individual client. A lawyer should avoid situations in which officials of the organization who are not lawyers attempt to direct lawyers concerning the manner in which legal services are performed for individual members, and should also avoid situations in which considerations of economy are given undue weight in determining the lawyers employed by an organization or the legal services to be performed for the member or beneficiary rather than competence and quality of service. A lawyer interested in maintaining the historic traditions of the profession and preserving the function of a lawyer as a trusted and independent advisor to individual members of society should carefully assess those factors when accepting employment by, or otherwise participating in, a particular qualified legal assistance organization, and while so participating should adhere to the highest professional standards of effort and competence.

Rule 5.5. Unauthorized Practice of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice of Law

(a) A lawyer shall not:

(1) practice law in this jurisdiction without a license to practice law issued by the Colorado Supreme Court unless specifically authorized by C.R.C.P. 204 or C.R.C.P. 205 or federal or tribal law;

(2) practice law in a jurisdiction where doing so violates the regulations of the legal profession in that jurisdiction;

(3) assist a person who is not authorized to practice law pursuant to subpart (a) of this Rule in the performance of any activity that constitutes the unauthorized practice of law; or

(4) allow the name of a disbarred lawyer or a suspended lawyer who must petition for reinstatement to remain in the firm name.

(b) A lawyer shall not employ, associate professionally with, allow or aid a person the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is a disbarred, suspended, or on disability inactive status to perform the following on behalf of the lawyer's client:

(1) render legal consultation or advice to the client;

(2) appear on behalf of a client in any hearing or proceeding or before any judicial officer, arbitrator, mediator, court, public agency, referee, magistrate, commissioner, or hearing officer;

(3) appear on behalf of a client at a deposition or other discovery matter;

(4) negotiate or transact any matter for or on behalf of the client with third parties;

(5) otherwise engage in activities that constitute the practice of law; or

(6) receive, disburse or otherwise handle client funds.

(c) Subject to the limitation set forth below in paragraph (d), a lawyer may employ, associate professionally with, allow or aid a lawyer who is disbarred, suspended (whose suspension is partially or fully served), or on disability inactive status to perform research, drafting or clerical activities, including but not limited to:

(1) legal work of a preparatory nature, such as legal research, the assemblage of data and other necessary information, drafting of pleadings, briefs, and other similar documents;

(2) direct communication with the client or third parties regarding matters such as scheduling, billing, updates, confirmation of receipt or sending of correspondence and messages; and

(3) accompanying an active member in attending a deposition or other discovery matter for the limited purpose of providing assistance to the lawyer who will appear as the representative of the client.

(d) A lawyer shall not allow a person the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is disbarred, suspended, or on disability inactive status to have any professional contact with clients of the lawyer or of the lawyer's firm unless the lawyer:

(1) prior to the commencement of the work, gives written notice to the client for whom the work will be performed that the disbarred or suspended lawyer, or the lawyer on disability inactive status, may not practice law; and

(2) retains written notification for no less than two years following completion of the work.

(e) Once notice is given pursuant to C.R.C.P. 251.28 or this Rule, then no additional notice is required.

COMMENT

[1] The definition of the practice of law is established by law and varies from one jurisdiction to another. In order to protect the public, persons not admitted to practice law in Colorado cannot hold themselves out as lawyers in Colorado or as authorized to practice law in Colorado. Rule 5.5(a)(1) recognizes that C.R.C.P. 204 and C.R.C.P. 205 permit lawyers to practice law in accordance with their terms in Colorado without a license from the Colorado Supreme Court. Lawyers may also be permitted to practice law within the physical boundaries of the State, without such a license, where they do so pursuant to Federal or tribal law. Such practice does not constitute a violation of the general proscription of Rule 5.5(a)(1).

[2] Paragraph (a)(3) does not prohibit a lawyer from employing the services of paraprofessionals and delegating functions to them, so long as the lawyer supervises the delegated work and retains responsibility for their work. See Rule 5.3. Likewise, it does not prohibit lawyers from providing professional advice and instruction to nonlawyers whose employment requires knowledge of law; for example, claims adjusters, employees of financial or commercial institutions, social workers, accountants and persons employed in governmental agencies. In addition, a lawyer may counsel nonlawyers who wish to proceed pro se.

[3] A lawyer may employ or contract with a disbarred, suspended lawyer or a lawyer on disability inactive status, to perform services that a law clerk, paralegal or other administrative staff may perform so long as the lawyer directly supervises the work. Lawyers who are suspended but whose entire suspension has been stayed may engage in the practice of law, and the portion of the Rule limiting what suspended lawyers may do does not apply.

[4] The name of a disbarred lawyer or a suspended lawyer who must petition for reinstatement must be removed from the firm name. A lawyer will be assisting in the unauthorized practice of law if the lawyer fails to remove such name.

[5] Disbarred, suspended lawyers or lawyers on disability inactive status may have contact with clients of the licensed lawyer so long as such lawyer and the licensed lawyer provide written notice to the client that the lawyer may not practice law. Written notice to the client shall include an advisement that the person may not give advice or engage in any other conduct considered the practice of law. Proof of service shall be maintained in the licensed lawyer's file for a minimum of two years.

[6] Separate and apart from the disbarred, suspended or disabled lawyer's obligation not to practice law, the licensed lawyer who employs or hires such person has an obligation to directly supervise that individual.

Disbarment appropriate for lawyer who practiced law without a license for more than three years, engaged in dishonest conduct, and failed to cooperate in disciplinary proceedings. Lawyer repeatedly violated this rule by holding himself out as a licensed attorney in the state, establishing multiple offices for his law practice, drafting legal documents, offering legal advice to or on behalf of clients, and engaging in the unlawful practice of law in another state. People v. Auer, 331 P.3d 136 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2014).

An attorney's appearance as counsel of record in numerous court proceedings following an order of suspension constituted conduct involving the unauthorized practice of law. People v. Kargol, 854 P.2d 1267 (Colo. 1993).

An attorney who is suspended for failure to comply with Continuing Legal Education (CLE) requirements is barred from practicing law under this rule and C.R.C.P. 241.21 (d), the same as if the attorney had been suspended following a disciplinary proceeding. Continuing to practice law after such an administrative suspension warranted an additional 18-month suspension. People v. Johnson, 946 P.2d 469 (Colo. 1997).

Public censure justified where, although the attorney failed to notify opposing counsel and appeared in one hearing after imposition of the suspension, the attorney's involvement was minimal, it occurred only upon request by the client, it did not result in any harm to the client, and the attorney did not receive any benefit from the appearance. People v. Pittam, 917 P.2d 710 (Colo. 1996).

Suspension of one year and one day warranted in light of the seriousness of attorney's misconduct in conjunction with his noncooperation in the disciplinary proceedings and his substantial experience in the practice of law. People v. Clark, 900 P.2d 129 (Colo. 1995).

Conduct violating this rule, in conjunction with other disciplinary rules, sufficient to justify disbarment where the attorney continued to practice law while on suspension, repeatedly neglecting his clients and failing to take reasonable steps to protect clients' interests. Rule 5.6. Restrictions on Right to Practice

A lawyer shall not participate in offering or making:

(a) a partnership, shareholders, operating, employment, or other similar type of agreement that restricts the right of a lawyer to practice after termination of the relationship, except an agreement concerning benefits upon retirement; or

(b) an agreement in which a restriction on the lawyer's right to practice is part of the settlement of a client controversy.

COMMENT

[1] An agreement restricting the right of lawyers to practice after leaving a firm not only limits their professional autonomy but also limits the freedom of clients to choose a lawyer. Paragraph (a) prohibits such agreements except for restrictions incident to provisions concerning retirement benefits for service with the firm.

[2] Paragraph (b) prohibits a lawyer from agreeing not to represent other persons in connection with settling a claim on behalf of a client.

[3] This Rule does not apply to prohibit restrictions that may be included in the terms of the sale of a law practice pursuant to Rule 1.17.

Rule 5.7. Responsibilities Regarding Law-related Services

(a) A lawyer shall be subject to the Rules of Professional Conduct with respect to the provision of law-related services, as defined in paragraph (b), if the law-related services are provided:

(1) by the lawyer in circumstances that are not distinct from the lawyer's provision of legal services to clients; or

(2) in other circumstances by an entity controlled by the lawyer individually or with others if the lawyer fails to take reasonable measures to assure that a person obtaining the law-related services knows that the services are not legal services and that the protections of the client-lawyer relationship do not exist.

(b) The term ''law-related services'' denotes services that might reasonably be performed in conjunction with and in substance are related to the provision of legal services, and that are not prohibited as unauthorized practice of law when provided by a nonlawyer.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008; Comment [9] amended and effective November 6, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] When a lawyer performs law-related services or controls an organization that does so, there exists the potential for ethical problems. Principal among these is the possibility that the person for whom the law-related services are performed fails to understand that the services may not carry with them the protections normally afforded as part of the client-lawyer relationship. The recipient of the law-related services may expect, for example, that the protection of client confidences, prohibitions against representation of persons with conflicting interests, and obligations of a lawyer to maintain professional independence apply to the provision of law-related services when that may not be the case.

[2] Rule 5.7 applies to the provision of law-related services by a lawyer even when the lawyer does not provide any legal services to the person for whom the law-related services are performed and whether the law-related services are performed through a law firm or a separate entity. The Rule identifies the circumstances in which all of the Rules of Professional Conduct apply to the provision of law-related services. Even when those circumstances do not exist, however, the conduct of a lawyer involved in the provision of law-related services is subject to those Rules that apply generally to lawyer conduct, regardless of whether the conduct involves the provision of legal services. See, e.g., Rule 8.4.

[3] When law-related services are provided by a lawyer under circumstances that are not distinct from the lawyer's provision of legal services to clients, the lawyer in providing the law-related services must adhere to the requirements of the Rules of Professional Conduct as provided in paragraph (a)(1). Even when the law-related and legal services are provided in circumstances that are distinct from each other, for example through separate entities or different support staff within the law firm, the Rules of Professional Conduct apply to the lawyer as provided in paragraph (a)(2) unless the lawyer takes reasonable measures to assure that the recipient of the law-related services knows that the services are not legal services and that the protections of the client-lawyer relationship do not apply.

[4] Law-related services also may be provided through an entity that is distinct from that through which the lawyer provides legal services. If the lawyer individually or with others has control of such an entity's operations, the Rule requires the lawyer to take reasonable measures to assure that each person using the services of the entity knows that the services provided by the entity are not legal services and that the Rules of Professional Conduct that relate to the client-lawyer relationship do not apply. A lawyer's control of an entity extends to the ability to direct its operation. Whether a lawyer has such control will depend upon the circumstances of the particular case.

[5] When a client-lawyer relationship exists with a person who is referred by a lawyer to a separate law-related service entity controlled by the lawyer, individually or with others, the lawyer must comply with Rule 1.8(a).

[6] In taking the reasonable measures referred to in paragraph (a)(2) to assure that a person using law-related services understands the practical effect or significance of the inapplicability of the Rules of Professional Conduct, the lawyer should communicate to the person receiving the law-related services, in a manner sufficient to assure that the person understands the significance of the fact, that the relationship of the person to the business entity will not be a client-lawyer relationship. The communication should be made before entering into an agreement for provision of or providing law-related services, and preferably should be in writing.

[7] The burden is upon the lawyer to show that the lawyer has taken reasonable measures under the circumstances to communicate the desired understanding. For instance, a sophisticated user of law-related services, such as a publicly held corporation, may require a lesser explanation than someone unaccustomed to making distinctions between legal services and law-related services, such as an individual seeking tax advice from a lawyer-accountant or investigative services in connection with a lawsuit.

[8] Regardless of the sophistication of potential recipients of law-related services, a lawyer should take special care to keep separate the provision of law-related and legal services in order to minimize the risk that the recipient will assume that the law-related services are legal services. The risk of such confusion is especially acute when the lawyer renders both types of services with respect to the same matter. Under some circumstances the legal and law-related services may be so closely entwined that they cannot be distinguished from each other, and the requirement of disclosure and consultation imposed by paragraph (a)(2) of the Rule cannot be met. In such a case a lawyer will be responsible for assuring that both the lawyer's conduct and, to the extent required by Rule 5.3, that of nonlawyer employees in the distinct entity that the lawyer controls complies in all respects with the Rules of Professional Conduct.

[9] A broad range of economic and other interests of clients maybe served by lawyers' engaging in the delivery of law-related services. Examples of law-related services include providing title insurance, financial planning, accounting, trust services, real estate counseling, legislative lobbying, economic analysis, social work, psychological counseling, tax preparation, and patent, medical or environmental consulting.

[10] When a lawyer is obliged to accord the recipients of such services the protections of those Rules that apply to the client-lawyer relationship, the lawyer must take special care to heed the proscriptions of the Rules addressing conflict of interest (Rules 1.7 through 1.11, especially Rules 1.7(a)(2) and 1.8(a), (b) and (f)), and to scrupulously adhere to the requirements of Rule 1.6 relating to disclosure of confidential information. The promotion of the law-related services must also in all respects comply with Rules 7.1 through 7.3, dealing with advertising and solicitation. In that regard, lawyers should take special care to identify the obligations that may be imposed as a result of a jurisdiction's decisional law.

[11] When the full protections of all of the Rules of Professional Conduct do not apply to the provision of law-related services, principles of law external to the Rules, for example, the law of principal and agent, govern the legal duties owed to those receiving the services. Those other legal principles may establish a different degree of protection for the recipient with respect to confidentiality of information, conflicts of interest and permissible business relationships with clients. See also Rule 8.4 (Misconduct).

PUBLIC SERVICE

Rule 6.1. Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service

Every lawyer has a professional responsibility to provide legal services to those unable to pay. A lawyer should aspire to render at least fifty hours of pro bono publico legal services per year. In fulfilling this responsibility, the lawyer should:

(a) provide a substantial majority of the fifty hours of legal services without fee or expectation of fee to:

(1) persons of limited means or

(2) charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters that are designed primarily to address the needs of persons of limited means; and

(b) provide any additional legal or public services through:

(1) delivery of legal services at no fee or a substantially reduced fee to individuals, groups or organizations seeking to secure or protect civil rights, civil liberties or public rights, or charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters in furtherance of their organizational purposes, where the payment of standard legal fees would significantly deplete the organization's economic resources or would be otherwise inappropriate;

(2) delivery of legal services at a substantially reduced fee to persons of limited means; or

(3) participation in activities for improving the law, the legal system or the legal profession.

In addition, a lawyer should voluntarily contribute financial support to organizations that provide legal services to persons of limited means.

Where constitutional, statutory or regulatory restrictions prohibit government and public sector lawyers or judges from performing the pro bono services outlined in paragraphs (a)(1) and (2), those individuals should fulfill their pro bono publico responsibility by performing services or participating in activities outlined in paragraph (b).

COMMENT

[1] Every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, has a responsibility to provide legal services to those unable to pay. Indeed, the oath that Colorado lawyers take upon admittance to the Bar requires that a lawyer will never "reject, from any consideration personal to myself, the cause of the defenseless or oppressed." In some years a lawyer may render greater or fewer hours than the annual standard specified, but during the course of his or her legal career, each lawyer should render on average per year, the number of hours set forth in this Rule. Services can be performed in civil matters or in criminal or quasi-criminal matters for which there is no government obligation to provide funds for legal representation, such as post-conviction death penalty appeal cases.

[2] Paragraphs (a)(1) and (2) recognize the critical need for legal services that exists among persons of limited means by providing that a substantial majority of the legal services rendered annually to the disadvantaged be furnished without fee or expectation of fee. Legal services under these paragraphs consist of a full range of activities, including individual and class representation, the provision of legal advice, legislative lobbying, administrative rule making and the provision of free training or mentoring to those who represent persons of limited means.

[3] Persons eligible for legal services under paragraphs (a)(1) and (2) are those who qualify for participation in programs funded by the Legal Services Corporation and those whose incomes and financial resources are slightly above the guidelines utilized by such programs but nevertheless, cannot afford counsel. Legal services can be rendered to individuals or to organizations such as homeless shelters, battered women's centers and food pantries that serve those of limited means. The term "governmental organizations" includes, but is not limited to, public protection programs and sections of governmental or public sector agencies.

[4] Because service must be provided without fee or expectation of fee, the intent of the lawyer to render free legal services is essential for the work performed to fall within the meaning of paragraphs (a)(1) and (2). Accordingly, services rendered cannot be considered pro bono under paragraph (a) if an anticipated fee is uncollected, but the award of statutory lawyers' fees in a case originally accepted as pro bono would not disqualify such services from inclusion under this section. Lawyers who do receive fees in such cases are encouraged to contribute an appropriate portion of such fees to organizations or projects that benefit persons of limited means.

[5] While it is possible for a lawyer to fulfill the annual responsibility to perform pro bono services exclusively through activities described in paragraphs (a)(1) and (2), to the extent that any hours of service remain unfulfilled, the lawyer may satisfy the remaining commitment in a variety of ways as set forth in paragraph (b).

[6] Paragraph (b)(1) includes the provision of certain types of legal services to those whose incomes and financial resources place them above limited means. It also permits the pro bono lawyer to accept a substantially reduced fee for services. Examples of the types of issues that may be addressed under this paragraph include First Amendment claims, Title VII claims and environmental protection claims. Additionally, a wide range of organizations may be represented, including social service, medical research, cultural and religious groups.

[7] Paragraph (b)(2) covers instances in which lawyers agree to and receive a modest fee for furnishing legal services to persons of limited means. Acceptance of court appointments in which the fee is substantially below a lawyer's usual rate is encouraged under this section.

[8] Paragraph (b)(3) recognizes the value of lawyers engaging in activities that improve the law, the legal system or the legal profession. Serving on bar association committees, serving on boards of pro bono or legal services programs, taking part in Law Day activities, acting as a continuing legal education instructor, a mediator or an arbitrator and engaging in legislative lobbying to improve the law, the legal system or the profession are a few examples of the many activities that fall within this paragraph.

[9] Because the provision of pro bono services is a professional responsibility, it is the individual ethical commitment of each lawyer. However, in special circumstances, such as death penalty cases and class action cases, it is appropriate to allow collective satisfaction by a law firm of the pro bono responsibility. There may be times when it is not feasible for a lawyer to engage in pro bono services. At such times a lawyer may discharge the pro bono responsibility by providing financial support to organizations providing free legal services to persons of limited means. Such financial support should be reasonably equivalent to the value of the hours of service that would have otherwise been provided.

[10] Because the efforts of individual lawyers are not enough to meet the need for free legal services that exists among persons of limited means, the government and the profession have instituted additional programs to provide those services. Every lawyer should financially support such programs, in addition to either providing direct pro bono services or making financial contributions when pro bono service is not feasible.

[11] The responsibility set forth in this Rule is not intended to be enforced through disciplinary process.

Recommended Model Pro Bono Policy for Colorado Licensed Attorneys and Law Firms

Preface. Providing pro bono legal services to persons of limited means and organizations serving persons of limited means is a core value of Colorado licensed attorneys enunciated in Colorado Rule of Professional Conduct 6.1. Adoption of a law firm pro bono policy will commit the firm to this professional value and assure attorneys of the firm that their pro bono work is valued in their advancement within the firm.

The Colorado Supreme Court has adopted the following recommended Model Pro Bono Policy that can be modified to meet the needs of individual law firms. References are made to provisions that may not apply in a small firm setting. Adoption of such a policy is entirely voluntary.

At the least, a pro bono policy would:

(1) clearly set forth an aspirational goal for attorneys, as well as the number of hours for which billable credit will be awarded for firms that operate on a billable hour system (the attached model policy uses the figure of at least 50 hours per attorney per year, which mirrors the aspirational goal set out in Rule 6.1);

(2) demonstrate that pro bono service will be positively considered in evaluation and compensation decisions; and

(3) include a description of the processes that will be used to match attorneys with projects and monitor pro bono service, including tracking pro bono hours spent by lawyers and others in the firm.

The Colorado Supreme Court will recognize those firms that make a strong commitment to pro bono work by adopting a policy that includes:

(1) an annual goal of performing 50 hours of pro bono legal service by each Colorado licensed attorney in the firm, pro-rated for part-time attorneys, primarily for persons of limited means and/or organizations serving persons of limited means consistent with the definition of pro bono services as set forth in this Model Pro Bono Policy; and

(2) a statement that the firm will value at least 50 hours of such pro bono service per year by each Colorado licensed attorney in the firm, for all purposes of attorney evaluation, advancement, and compensation in the firm as the firm values compensated client representation.

The Colorado Supreme Court will also recognize on an annual basis those Colorado law firms that voluntarily advise the Court by February 15 that their attorneys, on average, during the previous calendar year, performed 50 hours of pro bono legal service, primarily for persons of limited means or organizations serving persons of limited means consistent with the definition of pro bono services as set forth in this Model Pro Bono Policy.

Table of Contents

I. Introduction

The firm recognizes that the legal community has a unique responsibility to ensure that all citizens have access to a fair and just legal system. In recognizing this responsibility, the firm encourages each of its attorneys to actively participate in some form of pro bono legal representation.

This commitment mirrors the core principles enunciated in the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct:

> A lawyer should be mindful of deficiencies in the administration of justice and of the fact that the poor, and sometimes persons who are not poor, cannot afford adequate legal assistance. Therefore, all lawyers should devote professional time and resources and use civic influence to ensure equal access to our system of justice for all those who because of economic or social barriers cannot afford or secure adequate legal counsel. A lawyer should aid the legal profession in pursuing these objectives and should help the bar regulate itself in the public interest . . . A lawyer should strive to attain the highest level of skill, to improve the law and the legal profession and to exemplify the legal profession's ideals of public service.
> Preamble, Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct.

The firm understands there are various ways to provide pro bono legal services in our community. In selecting among the various pro bono opportunities, the firm encourages and expects that attorneys (both partners and associates or other designation) will devote a minimum of fifty (50) hours each year to pro bono legal services, or a proportional amount of pro bono hours by attorneys on alternative work schedules. In fulfilling this responsibility, firm attorneys should provide a substantial majority of the fifty (50) hours of pro bono legal services to (1) persons of limited means, or (2) charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters which are designed primarily to address the needs of persons of limited means. Rule 6.1. The firm strongly believes that this level of participation lets our attorneys make a meaningful contribution to our legal community, and provides important opportunities to further their professional development.

II. Firm Pro Bono Committee/Coordinator (see suggested change for small firms below)

The firm has established a Pro Bono Committee responsible for implementing and administering the firm's pro bono policies and procedures. The Pro Bono Committee consists of a representative group of attorneys of the firm. In addition, the firm has designated a Pro Bono Coordinator. The Pro Bono Committee/Pro Bono Coordinator has the following principal responsibilities:

1 encouraging and supporting pro bono legal endeavors;

2 reviewing, accepting and/or rejecting pro bono legal projects;

3 coordinating and monitoring pro bono legal projects, ensuring, among other things, that appropriate assistance, supervision and resources are available;

4 providing periodic reports on the firm's pro bono activities; and 5 creating and maintaining a pro bono matter tracking system.

Attorneys are encouraged to seek out pro bono matters that are of interest to them.

*[Small firms may wish to designate only a Pro Bono Coordinator and can introduce the above paragraph as follows: "The firm has designated a Pro Bono Coordinator responsible for implementing and administering the firm's pro bono policies and procedures" and then delete the next two sentences.]

III. Pro Bono Services Defined

The foremost objective of the firm pro bono policy is to provide legal services to persons of limited means and the nonprofit organizations that assist them, in accordance with Rule 6.1. The firm recognizes there are a variety of ways in which the firm's attorneys and paralegals can provide pro bono legal services in the community. The following, while not intended to be an exhaustive list, reflects the types of pro bono legal services the firm credits in adopting this policy:

A. Representation of Low Income Persons. Representation of individuals who cannot afford legal services in civil or criminal matters of importance to a client;

B. Civil Rights and Public Rights Law. Representation or advocacy on behalf of individuals or organizations seeking to vindicate rights with broad societal implications (class action suits or suits involving constitutional or civil rights) where it is inappropriate to charge legal fees; and

C. Representation of Charitable Organizations. Representation or counseling to charitable, religious, civic, governmental, educational, or similar organizations in matters where the payment of standard legal fees would significantly diminish the resources of the organization, with an emphasis on service to organizations designed primarily to meet the needs of persons of limited income or improve the administration of justice.

D. Community Economic Development. Representation of or counseling to micro-entrepreneurs and businesses for community economic development purposes, recognizing that business development plays a critical role in low income community development and provides a vehicle to help low income individuals to escape poverty;

E. Administration of Justice in the Court System. Judicial assignments, whether as pro bono counsel, or a neutral arbiter, or other such assignment, which attorneys receive from courts on a mandatory basis by virtue of their membership in a trial bar;

F. Law-related Education. Legal education activities designed to assist individuals who are low-income, at risk, or vulnerable to particular legal concerns or designed to prevent social or civil injustice.

G. Mentoring of Law Students and Lawyers on Pro Bono Matters. Colorado Supreme Court Rule 260.8 provides that an attorney who acts as a mentor may earn two (2) units of general credit per completed matter in which he/she mentors a law student. An attorney who acts as a mentor may earn one (1) unit of general credit per completed matter in which he/she mentors another lawyer. However, mentors shall not be members of the same firm or in association with the lawyer providing representation to the client of limited means.

Because the following activities, while meritorious, do not involve direct provision of legal services to the poor, the firm will not count them toward fulfillment of any attorney's, or the firm's, goal to provide pro bono legal services to persons of limited means or to nonprofits that serve such persons' needs: participation in a non-legal capacity in a community or volunteer organization; services to non-profit organizations with sufficient funds to pay for legal services as part of their normal expenses; client development work; non-legal service on the board of directors of a community or volunteer organization; bar association activities; and non-billable legal work for family members, friends, or members or staff of the firm who are not eligible to be pro bono clients under the above criteria.

IV. Firm Recognition of Pro Bono Service (see suggested change for small firms below).

A. Performance Review and Evaluation. The firm recognizes that the commitment to pro bono involves a personal expenditure of time. In acknowledgment of this commitment and to support firm goals, an attorney's efforts to meet this expectation will be considered by the firm in measuring various aspects of the attorney's performance, such as yearly evaluations and bonuses where applicable. An attorney's pro bono legal work will be subject to the same criteria of performance review and evaluation as those applied to client-billable work. As with all client work, there should be an emphasis on effective results for the client and the efficient and cost-effective use of firm resources.

B. Credit for Pro Bono Legal Work. The firm will give full credit for at least fifty (50) hours of pro bono legal services, and additional hours as approved by the Pro Bono Committee and/or Coordinator, in considering annual billable hour goals, bonuses and other evaluative criteria based on billable hours.

*[Small firms may wish to only include the following paragraph in lieu of the above provisions: The firm recognizes that the commitment to pro bono involves a personal expenditure of time. In acknowledgment of this commitment and to support firm goals, your pro bono service will be considered a positive factor in performance evaluations and compensation decisions and will be subject to the same criteria of performance review and evaluation as those applied to client-billable work. As with all client work, there should be an emphasis on effective results for the client and the efficient and cost-effective use of firm resources.]

V. Administration of Pro Bono Service (see suggested change for small firms below).

A. Approval of Pro Bono Matters. The Pro Bono Committee/Coordinator will review all proposed pro bono legal matters to ensure that:

1. there is no client or issue conflict or concern;
2. the legal issue raised is not frivolous or untenable;
3. the client does not have adequate funds to retain an attorney; and
4. the matter is otherwise appropriate for pro bono representation.

All persons seeking approval of a pro bono project must: (1) submit a request identifying the client and other entity involved; (2) describe the nature of the work to be done; and (3) identify who will be working on the matter. Once the firm undertakes a pro bono matter, the matter is treated in the same manner as the firm's regular paying work.

B. Opening a Pro Bono Matter. It is the responsibility of the attorney seeking to provide pro bono legal services to complete the conflicts check and open a new matter in accordance with regular firm procedures.

C. Pro Bono Engagement Letter. After a matter has received initial firm approval, the principal attorney on a pro bono legal matter must send an engagement letter to the pro bono client. Typically, the engagement letter should be sent after the initial client meeting during which the nature and terms of the engagement are discussed.

D. Staffing of Pro Bono Matters. Pro bono legal matters are initially staffed on a voluntary basis. It may become necessary to assign additional attorneys to the matter if the initial staffing arrangements prove to be inadequate, and the firm reserves the right to make such assignments.

E. Supervision of Pro Bono Matters. As appropriate, partner shall supervise any associate working on a pro bono legal matter and the supervising partner shall remain informed of the status of the matter to ensure its proper handling. In addition, it may be appropriate to use assistance or resources from outside the firm. The firm will assist attorneys in finding a supervisor if necessary.

F. Professional Liability Insurance. Attorneys may provide legal assistance through those pro bono organizations that provide professional liability insurance for their volunteers. The firm also carries professional liability insurance for its attorneys in instances where no coverage is available on a pro bono matter through a qualified legal aid organization. Before undertaking any pro bono legal commitments, the professional liability implications should be reviewed with the Pro Bono Committee or the Pro Bono Coordinator.

G. Paralegal Pro Bono Opportunities. Approved pro bono legal work for paralegals includes: (1) work taken on in conjunction with and under the supervision of an attorney working on a specific pro bono legal matter, or (2) work handled independently for an organization that provides pro bono legal opportunities, provided, however, that such participation does not create an attorney-client relationship and/or involve the paralegal's provision of legal advice.

H. Disbursements in Pro Bono Matters. The firm can and should bill and collect disbursements in pro bono legal matters where it is appropriate to do so based on the client's resources. The firm encourages attorneys to pursue petitions for the waiver of filing fees in civil matters (Chief Justice Directive 98-01) when applicable, and to use pro bono experts, court reporters, investigators and other vendors when available to minimize expenses in pro bono legal matters. The firm may advance or guarantee payment of incidental litigation expenses, and may agree that the repayment of such expenses may be contingent upon the outcome of the matter in accordance with Rule 1.8(e). The Pro Bono Committee/Pro Bono Coordinator must approve in advance any expense of a non-routine, significant nature, such as expert fees or translation costs. The supervising partner in a pro bono legal matter should participate in decisions with respect to disbursements.

I. Attorney Fees in Pro Bono Matters. The firm encourages its attorneys to seek and obtain attorney fees in pro bono legal matters where possible. In the event of a recovery of attorney fees, the firm encourages the donation of these fees to an organized non-profit entity whose purpose is or includes the provision of pro bono representation to persons of limited means.

J. Departing Attorneys. When an attorney handling a pro bono case leaves the firm, he or she should work with the Pro Bono Committee/Coordinator to (1) locate another attorney in the firm to take over the representation of the pro bono client, or (2) see if the referring organization can facilitate another placement.

*[Small firms may wish to title this section "Pro Bono Procedures" and include only the following paragraph in lieu of the above provisions: All pro bono legal matters will be opened in accordance with regular firm procedures, including utilization of a conflicts check and a client engagement letter. Pro bono matters should be supervised by a partner, as appropriate. The firm encourages its attorneys to seek and obtain attorney fees in pro bono legal matters whenever possible.]

VI. CLE Credit for Pro Bono Work

C.R.C.P. 260.8 provides that attorneys may be awarded up to nine (9) hours of CLE credit per three-year reporting period for: (1) performing uncompensated pro bono legal representation on behalf of clients of limited means in a civil legal matter, or (2) mentoring another lawyer or law student providing such representation.

A. Amount of CLE Credit. Attorneys may earn one (1) CLE credit hour for every five (5) billable-equivalent hours of pro bono representation provided to the client of limited means. An attorney who acts as a mentor may earn one (1) unit of general credit per completed matter in which he/she mentors another lawyer. Mentors shall not be members of the same firm or in association with the lawyer providing representation to the client of limited means. An attorney who acts as a mentor may earn two (2) units of general credit per completed matter in which he/she mentors a law student.

B. How to Obtain CLE Credit. An attorney who seeks CLE credit under C.R.C.P. 260.8 for work on an eligible matter must submit the completed Form 8 to the assigning court, program or law school. The assigning entity must then report to the Colorado Board of Continuing Legal and Judicial Education its recommendation as to the number of general CLE credits the reporting pro bono attorney should receive.

Recommended Model Pro Bono Policy for Colorado In-House Legal Departments

Preface. Providing pro bono legal services to persons of limited means and organizations serving persons of limited means is a core value of Colorado licensed attorneys enunciated in Colorado Rule of Professional Conduct 6.1. Colorado lawyers who work in in-house legal departments have, historically, been an untapped source of pro bono volunteers. Rule 6.1 applies equally to in-house lawyers; however, the Court recognizes that the work environment for in-house lawyers is distinct from that of lawyers in private law firms, and may limit the amount of pro bono work lawyers can accomplish while working in-house.

To encourage Colorado in-house lawyers to commit to providing pro bono legal services to persons and organizations of limited means, the Court has adopted rules to overcome some of the barriers impeding in-house counsel from performing pro bono legal work. For example, an in-house attorney who is not licensed to practice in Colorado may obtain a license to perform pro bono legal work, as a pro bono attorney under Rule 204.6. of Chapter 18, the Colorado Court Rules Governing Admission to the Bar. The attorney must pay a one-time fee of $50, and must act under the auspices of a Colorado nonprofit entity whose purpose is or includes the provision of pro bono legal representation to persons of limited means.

The following Model Pro Bono Policy can be modified to meet the needs of individual in-house legal departments. Adoption of such a policy is entirely voluntary. The model policy below is designed to serve as a starting point for in-house legal departments within Colorado that would like to put in place a structured program to encourage their lawyers to engage in pro bono service. The model policy should be adapted as needed to reflect the culture and values of the company or organization and legal department. No formal pro bono policy is needed to launch an in-house pro bono program (indeed, many of the most successful in-house pro bono programs have no policy at all); however, the model below reflects some of the issues that an in-house legal department may wish to consider before launching a program. In a few instances below alternative language is suggested. Additional resources and model policies are available from the Pro Bono Institute, Corporate Pro Bono Project: http://www.probonoinst.org/projects/corporate-pro-bono.html.

Recommended Model Pro Bono Policy for Colorado In-House Legal Departments

I. Introduction

Company recognizes the importance of good corporate citizenship, and supporting the communities in which it does business. Performing pro bono services benefits both the professionals who undertake the work as well as the individuals and organizations served. Pro bono work allows legal professionals to sharpen their existing skills, learn new areas of the law, connect more fully with their communities, and achieve a measure of personal fulfillment.

Rule 6.1 of the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct sets forth an aspirational goal that each lawyer render at least 50 hours of pro bono public legal services per year, with a substantial majority of those hours without fee to (1) persons of limited means or (2) governmental or non-profit organization matters designed primarily to address the needs of persons of limited means.

[Insert statement about Company's existing or planned community service work]

Company encourages every member of the Legal Department to assist in providing pro bono legal services. Company aspires to attain the goal of each Company attorney devoting a minimum of 50 hours per year to pro bono legal services, or a proportional amount of pro bono hours by attorneys on alternative work schedules.

II. Mission Statement

Through its pro bono program, the Legal Department intends to serve Company's communities by providing pro bono legal services to individuals and organizations that otherwise might not have access to them. In addition, the Legal Department seeks to provide opportunities for rewarding and satisfying work, to spotlight Company's position as a good corporate citizen, for Legal Department professional skills and career development, and for collaboration and teamwork across Company's Legal Department and within the community in general for our attorneys and other professionals.

III. Pro Bono Service Defined

Pro bono service is the rendering of professional legal services to persons or organizations with limited means, without the expectation of compensation, regardless of whether such services are performed during regular work hours or at other times. It is this provision of volunteer legal services that is covered by this pro bono policy. Because the following activities, while meritorious, do not involve direct provision of legal services to the poor, they are not pro bono services under this policy: participation in a non-legal capacity in a community or volunteer organization; services to non-profit organizations with sufficient funds to pay for legal services as part of their normal expenses; non-legal service on the board of directors of a community or volunteer organization; services provided to a political campaign; and legal work for family members, friends, or Company employees who are not eligible to be pro bono clients under an approved pro bono project.

IV. Pro Bono Service Participation

Every member of Company Legal Department is encouraged to provide pro bono legal services. The pro bono legal services should not interfere with regular work assignments and must be approved by the Pro Bono Committee/Coordinator. No attorney will be adversely affected by a decision to participate in the program; conversely, no attorney will be penalized for not participating in the program.

Optional language: The Legal Department encourages each member to devote up to 50 hours of regular work time per year toward providing pro bono services. Legal Department members may need to use paid time off for any pro bono services provided in excess of 50 hours per year. [Insert language for process of tracking those hours.]

V. Pro Bono Committee/Coordinator

To support Company's efforts to provide pro bono services, Company Legal Department has established a Pro Bono Coordinator/Committee. The Committee/Coordinator oversees the pro bono program, supervises and approves all pro bono matters, ensures that conflicts are identified and processes are followed, and ensures that all pro bono matters are adequately supervised. The Pro Bono Coordinator/Committee encourages all employees within the Legal Department to bring to the Coordinator's/Committee's attention any pro bono projects of interest.

VI. Pro Bono Projects

All pro bono projects must be pre-approved by the Pro Bono Coordinator/Committee. Individuals may not begin their pro bono representations in a particular matter until Coordinator/Committee approval is received. Individuals must obtain the approval of their supervisors to perform pro bono services during scheduled work hours. The Pro Bono Coordinator/Committee plans to offer, from time to time, group projects that have already been approved. In addition, members of the Legal Department may seek approval for a new project by submitting to the Coordinator/Committee a project approval request that contains: the name of the proposed client, the name of the opposing parties and other entities (e.g. opposing attorney or law firm) involved, a description of the project including the scope of work to be done, the names of the Law Department members who would work on the project, an estimate of the time required from each person, an estimate of any anticipated costs associated with the project, anticipated schedule of the project and/or deadlines; supervision or training needs, whether malpractice coverage is provided by the project sponsor, and any other relevant information.

VII. Insurance Coverage

Company's insurance carrier provides insurance coverage for employees in the Legal Department for work performed on approved pro bono projects. Members of the Legal Department must advise the Pro Bono Coordinator/Committee immediately should they learn that a complaint or disciplinary complaint may be filed concerning a pro bono matter.

OR

Company does not have malpractice insurance to cover pro bono work of its Legal Department members; however, many of the organizations that sponsor pre-approved pro bono projects carry malpractice insurance for their volunteer attorneys. The Pro Bono Coordinator/Committee will reject any project that does not provide malpractice coverage for the legal services provided. Members of the Legal Department must advise the Pro Bono Coordinator/Committee immediately should they learn that a complaint or disciplinary complaint may be filed concerning a pro bono matter.

[Note: The Pro Bono Institute has outlined additional options, such as self-insurance through the purchase of a policy from NLADA, in a paper available here: http://www.cpbo.org/wp-content/uploads/2012/09/Insurance-Paper.pdf]

VIII. Expenses and Resources

As with any other Company work assignment, individuals doing pro bono work may engage Legal Department legal assistants, paralegals and other support staff in a manner consistent with their job responsibilities. Legal Department members may use Company facilities, such as telephones, copiers, computers, printers, library materials, research materials, and mail, as appropriate to carry out pro bono work; however, in accordance with the section entitled ''Company Affiliation'' below, use of Company resources should not convey the impression that Company is providing the pro bono services. Ordinary expenses (e.g., parking, mileage, etc.) may be submitted for reimbursement. Expenses exceeding $250 should be submitted to the Pro Bono Coordinator/Committee for prior approval. Legal Department members should make every effort to control expenses related to pro bono work just as they would for any other legal matter.

IX. Expertise

Legal Department members providing pro bono services should exercise their best judgment regarding their qualifications to handle the issues necessary to provide pro bono services. Those providing pro bono services should obtain training on the legal issues they will handle. Training is available through various pro bono organizations, bar associations, law firms, and CLE offerings.

X. Company Affiliation

Although Company strongly endorses participation in the pro bono program, participants are not acting as Company representatives or employees with respect to the matters they undertake, and Company does not necessarily endorse positions taken on behalf of pro bono clients. Therefore, Company Legal Department members participating in such activities do so individually and not as representatives of Company. Individuals who take on pro bono matters must identify themselves to their clients as volunteers for the non-profit organization and not as attorneys for Company.

Individuals providing pro bono services should not use Company's stationery for pro bono activities or otherwise engage in any other acts that may convey the impression that Company is providing legal services. Individuals should use the stationery provided by the pro bono referral organization, or if no stationery is provided, blank stationery (i.e. no Company letterhead). Similarly Company business cards must not be distributed to pro bono clients.

Optional Language: Most client interviews or other meetings should take place at the offices of a partner organization. If this is not suitable, members of the Legal Department may host pro bono client meetings at a Company location with the prior approval of the Coordinator/Committee. The Company attorney hosting the meeting should take care to remind the pro bono client that, although the meeting is taking place at a Company location, the client is represented by the attorney and not Company.

XI. Conflict of Interest

Legal Department members may not engage in the provision of any pro bono service which would create a conflict of interest or give the appearance of a conflict of interest. This includes, but is not limited to, direct conflicts, business/public relations conflicts, and politically sensitive issues. Conflicts analysis must be ongoing throughout the course of any representation as an issue raising a conflict may present itself at any time during the course of representation. The Pro Bono Coordinator/Committee will review and resolve any potential conflict issues.

Rule 6.2. Accepting Appointments

A lawyer shall not seek to avoid appointment by a tribunal to represent a person except for good cause, such as:

(a) representing the client is likely to result in violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law;

(b) representing the client is likely to result in an unreasonable financial or otherwise oppressive burden on the lawyer; or

(c) the client or the cause is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the client-lawyer relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client.

COMMENT

[1] A lawyer ordinarily is not obliged to accept a client whose character or cause the lawyer regards as repugnant. The lawyer's freedom to select clients is, however, qualified. All lawyers have a responsibility to assist in providing pro bono publico service. See Rule 6.1. An individual lawyer fulfills this responsibility by accepting a fair share of unpopular matters or indigent or unpopular clients. A lawyer may also be subject to appointment by a court to serve unpopular clients or persons unable to afford legal services.

Appointed Counsel

[2] For good cause a lawyer may seek to decline an appointment to represent a person who cannot afford to retain counsel or whose cause is unpopular. Good cause exists if the lawyer could not handle the matter competently, see Rule 1.1, or if undertaking the representation would result in an improper conflict of interest, for example, when the client or the cause is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the client-lawyer relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client. A lawyer may also seek to decline an appointment if acceptance would be unreasonably burdensome, for example, when it would impose a financial sacrifice so great as to be unjust.

[3] An appointed lawyer has the same obligations to the client as retained counsel, including the obligations of loyalty and confidentiality, and is subject to the same limitations on the client-lawyer relationship, such as the obligation to refrain from assisting the client in violation of the Rules.

Rule 6.3. Membership in Legal Services Organization

A lawyer may serve as a director, officer or member of a legal services organization, apart from the law firm in which the lawyer practices, notwithstanding that the organization serves persons having interests adverse to a client of the lawyer. The lawyer shall not knowingly participate in a decision or action of the organization:

(a) if participating in the decision or action would be incompatible with the lawyer's obligations to a client under Rule 1.7; or

(b) where the decision or action could have a material adverse effect on the representation of a client of a lawyer provided by the organization whose interests are adverse to a client of the lawyer.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] Lawyers should be encouraged to support and participate in legal service organizations. A lawyer who is a director, officer or a member of such an organization does not thereby have a client-lawyer relationship with persons served by the organization. However, there is potential conflict between the interests of such persons and the interests of the lawyer's clients. If the possibility of such conflict disqualified a lawyer from serving on the board of a legal services organization, the profession's involvement in such organizations would be severely curtailed.

[2] It may be necessary in appropriate cases to reassure a client of the organization that the representation will not be affected by conflicting loyalties of a member of the board. Established, written policies in this respect can enhance the credibility of such assurances.

Rule 6.4. Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests

A lawyer may serve as a director, officer or member of an organization involved in reform of the law or its administration notwithstanding that the reform may affect the interests of a client of the lawyer. When the lawyer knows that the interests of a client may be materially benefited by a decision in which the lawyer participates, the lawyer shall disclose that fact to the organization but need not identify the client.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] Lawyers involved in organizations seeking law reform generally do not have a client-lawyer relationship with the organization. Otherwise, it might follow that a lawyer could not be involved in a bar association law reform program that might indirectly affect a client. See also Rule 1.2(b). For example, a lawyer specializing in antitrust litigation might be regarded as disqualified from participating in drafting revisions of rules governing that subject. In determining the nature and scope of participation in such activities, a lawyer should be mindful of obligations to clients under other Rules, particularly Rule 1.7. A lawyer is professionally obligated to protect the integrity of the program by making an appropriate disclosure to the organization when the lawyer knows a private client might be materially benefited.

Rule 6.5. Nonprofit and Court-annexed Limited Legal Services Programs

(a) A lawyer who, under the auspices of a program sponsored by a nonprofit organization or court, provides short-term limited legal services to a client without expectation by either the lawyer or the client that the lawyer will provide continuing representation in the matter:

(1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9(a) only if the lawyer knows that the representation of the client involves a conflict of interest; and

(2) is subject to Rule 1.10 only if the lawyer knows that another lawyer associated with the lawyer in a law firm is disqualified by Rule 1.7 or 1.9(a) with respect to the matter.

(b) Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2), Rule 1.10 is inapplicable to a representation governed by this Rule.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] Legal services organizations, courts and various nonprofit organizations have established programs through which lawyers provide short-term limited legal services — such as advice or the completion of legal forms that will assist persons to address their legal problems without further representation by a lawyer. In these programs, such as legal-advice hotlines, advice-only clinics or pro se counseling programs, a client-lawyer relationship is established, but there is no expectation that the lawyer's representation of the client will continue beyond the limited consultation. Such programs are normally operated under circumstances in which it is not feasible for a lawyer to systematically screen for conflicts of interest as is generally required before undertaking a representation. See, e.g., Rules 1.7, 1.9 and 1.10.

[2] A lawyer who provides short-term limited legal services pursuant to this Rule must secure the client's informed consent to the limited scope of the representation. See Rule 1.2(c). If a short-term limited representation would not be reasonable under the circumstances, the lawyer may offer advice to the client but must also advise the client of the need for further assistance of counsel. Except as provided in this Rule, the Rules of Professional Conduct, including Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c), are applicable to the limited representation.

[3] Because a lawyer who is representing a client in the circumstances addressed by this Rule ordinarily is not able to check systematically for conflicts of interest, paragraph (a) requires compliance with Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a) only if the lawyer knows that the representation presents a conflict of interest for the lawyer, and with Rule 1.10 only if the lawyer knows that another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is disqualified by Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a) in the matter.

[4] Because the limited nature of the services significantly reduces the risk of conflicts of interest with other matters being handled by the lawyer's firm, paragraph (b) provides that Rule 1.10 is inapplicable to a representation governed by this Rule except as provided by paragraph (a)(2). Paragraph (a)(2) requires the participating lawyer to comply with Rule 1.10 when the lawyer knows that the lawyer's firm is disqualified by Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a). By virtue of paragraph (b), however, a lawyer's participation in a short-term limited legal services program will not preclude the lawyer's firm from undertaking or continuing the representation of a client with interests adverse to a client being represented under the program's auspices. Nor will the personal disqualification of a lawyer participating in the program be imputed to other lawyers participating in the program.

[5] If, after commencing a short-term limited representation in accordance with this Rule, a lawyer undertakes to represent the client in the matter on an ongoing basis, Rules 1.7, 1.9(a) and 1.10 become applicable.

INFORMATION ABOUT LEGAL SERVICES

Rule 7.1. Communications Concerning a Lawyer's Services

(a) A lawyer shall not make a false or misleading communication about the lawyer or the lawyer's services. A communication is false or misleading if it:

(1) contains a material misrepresentation of fact or law, or omits a fact necessary to make the statement considered as a whole not materially misleading;

(2) compares the lawyer's services with other lawyers' services, unless the comparison can be factually substantiated; or

(3) is likely to create an unjustified expectation about results the lawyer can achieve.

(b) No lawyer shall, directly or indirectly, pay all or a part of the cost of communications concerning a lawyer's services by a lawyer not in the same firm unless the communication discloses the name and address of the non-advertising lawyer, the relationship between the advertising lawyer and the non-advertising lawyer, and whether the advertising lawyer may refer any case received through the advertisement to the non-advertising lawyer.

(c) Unsolicited communications concerning a lawyer's services mailed to prospective clients shall be sent only by regular U.S. mail, not by registered mail or other forms of restricted delivery, and shall not resemble legal pleadings or other legal documents.

(d) Any communication that states or implies the client does not have to pay a fee if there is no recovery shall also disclose that the client may be liable for costs. This provision does not apply to communications that only state that contingent or percentage fee arrangements are available, or that only state the initial consultation is free.

(e) A lawyer shall not knowingly permit, encourage or assist in any way employees, agents or other persons to make communications on behalf of the lawyer or the law firm in violation of this Rule or Rules 7.2 through 7.4.

(f) In connection with the sale of a private law practice under Rule 1.17, an opinion of the purchasing lawyer's suitability and competence to represent existing clients shall not violate this Rule if the lawyer complies with Rule 1.17(d).

COMMENT

[1] This Rule governs all communications about a lawyer's services, including advertising permitted by Rule 7.2 and solicitations governed by Rule 7.3.

[2] The touchstone of this Rule, as well as Rules 7.2 through 7.4, is that all communications regarding a lawyer's services must be truthful. Truthful communications regarding a lawyer's services provide a valuable public service and, in any event, are constitutionally protected. False and misleading statements regarding a lawyer's services do not serve any valid purpose and may be constitutionally proscribed.

[3] It is not possible to catalog all types and variations of communications that are false or misleading. Nevertheless, certain types of statements recur and deserve special attention.

[4] One of the basic covenants of a lawyer is that the lawyer is competent to handle those matters accepted by the lawyer. Rule 1.1. It is therefore false and misleading for a lawyer to advertise for clients in a field of practice where the lawyer is not competent within the meaning of Rule 1.1.

[5] Characterizations of a lawyer's fees such as ''cut-rate'', ''lowest'' and ''cheap'' are likely to be misleading if those statements cannot be factually substantiated. Similarly, characterizations regarding a lawyer's abilities or skills have the potential to be misleading where those characterizations cannot be factually substantiated. Equally problematic are factually unsubstantiated characterizations of the results that a lawyer has in the past obtained. Such statements often imply that the lawyer will be able to obtain the same or similar results in the future. This type of statement, due to the inevitable factual and legal differences between different representations, is likely to mislead prospective clients.

[6] Statements that a law firm has a vast number of years of experience, by aggregating the experience of all members of the firm, provide little meaningful information to prospective clients and have the potential to be misleading.

[7] Statements such as ''no recovery, no fee'' are misleading if they do not additionally mention that a client may be obligated to pay costs of the lawsuit. Any communication that states or implies the client does not have to pay a fee if there is no recovery shall also disclose that the client may be liable for costs.

[8] An advertisement that truthfully reports a lawyer's achievements on behalf of clients or former clients may be misleading if presented so as to lead a reasonable person to form an unjustified expectation that the same results could be obtained for other clients in similar matters without reference to the specific factual and legal circumstances of each client's case. Similarly, an unsubstantiated comparison of the lawyer's services or fees with the services or fees of other lawyers may be misleading if presented with such specificity as would lead a reasonable person to conclude that the comparison can be substantiated. The inclusion of an appropriate disclaimer or qualifying language may preclude a finding that a statement is likely to create unjustified expectations or otherwise mislead the public.

[9] Finally, Rule 7.1(c) proscribes unsolicited communications sent by restricted means of delivery. It is misleading and an invasion of the recipient's privacy for a lawyer to send advertising information to a prospective client by registered mail or other forms of restricted delivery. Such modes falsely imply a degree of exigence or importance that is unjustified under the circumstances.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Rule 7.1 is similar to Rule 7.1 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The relevant portions of the Colorado Consumer Protection Act (CCPA) are not inconsistent with the prohibition on misleading communications in C.R.P.C. 7.1. Attorney conduct that constitutes deceptive or unfair trade practices is not in compliance with the rules of professional conduct and is not exempted from CCPA liability. Crowe v. Tull, 126 P.3d 196 (Colo. 2006).

Lawyer advertisement containing false, misleading, deceptive, or unfair statements in violation of the rule warrants public, rather than private, censure. Respondent terminated referral service being advertised after the initial request for investigation was filed and cooperated in disciplinary proceedings but had received a past letter of admonition and had substantial experience in the practice of law. Respondent's conduct involved dishonesty and misrepresentation and, in conjunction with prior discipline, foreclosed a private sanction. People v. Carpenter, 893 P.2d 777 (Colo. 1995).

Rules 7.1 to 7.6 govern information about legal services and concern advertisements, direct contact with prospective clients, and law firm names and letterheads. They do not relate to communications with an existing client. Therefore, firm was not obligated to reveal an attorney's prior arrest and medical history when attorney was added to the attorneys on plaintiff's case. Moye White LLP v. Beren, 2013 COA 89, 320 P.3d 373.

Rule 7.2. Advertising

(a) Subject to the requirements of Rules 7.1 and 7.3, a lawyer may advertise services through written, recorded or electronic communication, including public media.

(b) A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services except that a lawyer may:

(1) pay the reasonable costs of communications permitted by this Rule;

(2) pay the usual charges of a not-for-profit lawyer referral service or legal service organization;

(3) pay for a law practice in accordance with Rule 1.17; and

(4) refer clients to another lawyer or a nonlawyer pursuant to an agreement not otherwise prohibited under these Rules that provides for the other person to refer clients or customers to the lawyer, if

(i) the reciprocal referral agreement is not exclusive, and

(ii) the client is informed of the existence and nature of the agreement.

(c) Any communication made pursuant to this Rule shall include the name and office address of at least one lawyer or law firm responsible for its content.

COMMENT

[1] To assist the public in learning about and obtaining legal services, lawyers should be allowed to make known their services not only through reputation but also through organized information campaigns in the form of advertising. Advertising involves an active quest for clients, contrary to the tradition that a lawyer should not seek clientele. However, the public's need to know about legal services can be fulfilled in part through advertising. This need is particularly acute in the case of persons of moderate means who have not made extensive use of legal services. The interest in expanding public information about legal services ought to prevail over considerations of tradition. Nevertheless, advertising by lawyers entails the risk of practices that are misleading or overreaching.

[2] This Rule permits public dissemination of information concerning a lawyer's name or firm name, address, e-mail address, website, and telephone number; the kinds of services the lawyer will undertake; the basis on which the lawyer's fees are determined, including prices for specific services and payment and credit arrangements; a lawyer's foreign language ability; names of references and, with their consent, names of clients regularly represented; and other information that might invite the attention of those seeking legal assistance.

[3] Questions of effectiveness and taste in advertising are matters of speculation and subjective judgment. Some jurisdictions have had extensive prohibitions against television and other forms of advertising, against advertising going beyond specified facts about a lawyer, or against "undignified" advertising. Television, the Internet, and other forms of electronic communications are now among the most powerful media for getting information to the public, particularly persons of low and moderate income; prohibiting television and other forms of electronic advertising, therefore, would impede the flow of information about legal services to many sectors of the public. Limiting the information that may be advertised has a similar effect and assumes that the bar can accurately forecast the kind of information that the public would regard as relevant. See Rule 7.3 (a) for the prohibition against the solicitation of a prospective client through a real-time electronic exchange initiated by the lawyer.

[4] Neither this Rule nor Rule 7.3 prohibits communications authorized by law, such as notice to members of a class in class action litigation.

Paying Others to Recommend a Lawyer

[5] Except as permitted under paragraphs (b)(1)-(b)(4), lawyers are not permitted to pay others for recommending the lawyer's services or for channeling professional work in a manner that violates Rule 7.3. A communication contains a recommendation if it endorses or vouches for a lawyer's credentials, abilities, competence, character, or other professional qualities. Paragraph (b)(1), however, allows a lawyer to pay for advertising and communications permitted by this Rule, including the costs of print directory listings, on-line directory listings, newspaper ads, television and radio airtime, domain-name registrations, sponsorship fees, Internet-based advertisements, and group advertising. A lawyer may compensate employees, agents and vendors who are engaged to provide marketing or client-development services, such as publicists, public-relations personnel, business-development staff, and website designers. Moreover, a lawyer may pay others for generating client leads, such as Internet-based client leads, as long as the lead generator does not recommend the lawyer, any payment to the lead generator is consistent with Rules 1.5(e) (division of fees) and 5.4 (professional independence of the lawyer), and the lead generator's communications are consistent with Rule 7.1 (communications concerning a lawyer's services). To comply with Rule 7.1, a lawyer must not pay a lead generator that states, implies, or creates a reasonable impression that it is recommending the lawyer, is making the referral without payment from the lawyer, or has analyzed a person's legal problems when determining which lawyer should receive the referral. See also Rule 5.3 (duties of lawyers and law firms with respect to the conduct of nonlawyers); Rule 8.4(a) (duty to avoid violating the Rules through the acts of another).

[6] A lawyer may pay the usual charges of a legal service plan or a not-for-profit or qualified lawyer referral service. A legal service plan is a prepaid or group legal service plan or a similar delivery system that assists people who seek to secure legal representation. A lawyer referral service, on the other hand, is any organization that holds itself out to the public as a lawyer referral service. Such referral services are understood by the public to be consumer-oriented organizations that provide unbiased referrals to lawyers with appropriate experience in the subject matter of the representation and afford other client protections, such as complaint procedures or malpractice insurance requirements. Consequently, this Rule only permits a lawyer to pay the usual charges of a not-for-profit or qualified lawyer referral service. A qualified lawyer referral service is one that is approved by an appropriate regulatory authority as affording adequate protections for the public. See, e.g., the American Bar Association's Model Supreme Court Rules Governing Lawyer Referral Services and Model Lawyer Referral and Information Service Quality Assurance Act (requiring that organizations that are identified as lawyer referral services (i) permit the participation of all lawyers who are licensed and eligible to practice in the jurisdiction and who meet reasonable objective eligibility requirements as may be established by the referral service for the protection of the public; (ii) require each participating lawyer to carry reasonably adequate malpractice insurance; (iii) act reasonably to assess client satisfaction and address client complaints; and (iv) do not make referrals to lawyers who own, operate or are employed by the referral service).

sional obligations. See Rule 5.3. Legal service plans and lawyer referral services may communicate with the public, but such communication must be in conformity with these Rules. Thus, advertising must not be false or misleading, as would be the case if the communications of a group advertising program or a group legal services plan would mislead the public to think that it was a lawyer referral service sponsored by a state agency or bar association. Nor could the lawyer allow in-person, telephonic, or real-time contacts that would violate Rule 7.3.

[8] A lawyer also may agree to refer clients to another lawyer or a nonlawyer in return for the undertaking of that person to refer clients or customers to the lawyer. Such reciprocal referral arrangements must not interfere with the lawyer's professional judgment as to making referrals or as to providing substantive legal services. See Rules 2.1 and 5.4(c). Except as provided in Rule 1.5(d), a lawyer who receives referrals from a lawyer or nonlawyer must not pay anything solely for the referral, but the lawyer does not violate paragraph (b) of this Rule by agreeing to refer clients to the other lawyer or nonlawyer, so long as the reciprocal referral agreement is not exclusive and the client is informed of the referral agreement. Conflicts of interest created by such arrangements are governed by Rule 1.7. Reciprocal referral agreements should not be of indefinite duration and should be reviewed periodically to determine whether they comply with these Rules. This Rule does not restrict referrals or divisions of revenues or net income among lawyers within firms comprised of multiple entities.

Public censure was appropriate where attorney continued to advertise with an unapproved, for-profit attorney referral service and where attorney had previously been disciplined with regard to use of client funds and was on suspension at the time of censure. People v. Mason, 938 P.2d 133 (Colo. 1997) (decided prior to 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct).

Rule 7.3. Solicitation of Clients

(a) A lawyer shall not by in-person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact solicit professional employment from a prospective client when a significant motive for the lawyer's doing so is the lawyer's pecuniary gain, unless the person contacted:

(1) is a lawyer; or

(2) has a family, close personal, or prior professional relationship with the lawyer.

(b) A lawyer shall not solicit professional employment from a prospective client by written, recorded, or electronic communication, or by in-person, telephone, or real-time electronic contact even when not otherwise prohibited by paragraph (a), if:

(1) the target of the solicitation has made known to the lawyer a desire not to be solicited by the lawyer; or

(2) the solicitation involves coercion, duress, or harassment.

(c) A lawyer shall not solicit professional employment from a prospective client believed to be in need of legal services which arise out of the personal injury or death of any person by written, recorded, or electronic communication. This Rule 7.3(c) shall not apply if the lawyer has a family or prior professional relationship with the prospective client or if the communication is issued more than 30 days after the occurrence of the event for which the legal representation is being solicited. Any such communication must comply with the following:

(1) no such communication may be made if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person to whom the communication is directed is represented by a lawyer in the matter; and

(2) if a lawyer other than the lawyer whose name or signature is contained in the communication will actually handle the case or matter, or if the case or matter will be referred to another lawyer or law firm, any such communication shall include a statement so advising the prospective client.

(d) Every written, recorded, or electronic communication from a lawyer soliciting professional employment from anyone known to be in need of legal services in a particular matter shall:

(1) include the words ''Advertising Material'' on the outside envelope, if any, and at the beginning and ending of any recorded or electronic communication, unless the recipient of the communication is a person specified in paragraphs (a)(1) or (a)(2);

(2) not reveal on the envelope or on the outside of a self-mailing brochure or pamphlet the nature of the prospective client's legal problem.

A copy of or recording of each such communication and a sample of the envelopes, if any, in which the communications are enclosed shall be kept for a period of four years from the date of dissemination of the communication.

(e) Notwithstanding the prohibitions in paragraph (a), a lawyer may participate with a prepaid or group legal service plan operated by an organization not owned or directed by the lawyer that uses in-person or telephone contact to solicit memberships or subscriptions for the plan from persons who are not known to need legal services in a particular matter covered by the plan.

COMMENT

[1] A solicitation is a targeted communication initiated by the lawyer that is directed to a specific person and that offers to provide, or can reasonably be understood as offering to provide, legal services. In contrast, a lawyer's communication typically does not constitute a solicitation if it is directed to the general public, such as through a billboard, an Internet banner advertisement, a website or a television commercial, or if it is in response to a request for information or is automatically generated in response to Internet searches.

[2] There is a potential for abuse when a solicitation involves direct in-person, live telephone, or real-time electronic contact by a lawyer with someone known to need legal services. These forms of contact subject a person to the private importuning of the trained advocate in a direct interpersonal encounter. The person, who may already feel overwhelmed by the circumstances giving rise to the need for legal services, may find it difficult fully to evaluate all available alternatives with reasoned judgment and appropriate self-interest in the face of the lawyer's presence and insistence upon being retained immediately. The situation is fraught with the possibility of undue influence, intimidation, and over-reaching.

[3] This potential for abuse inherent in direct in-person, live telephone, or real-time electronic solicitation justifies its prohibition, particularly since lawyers have alternative means of conveying necessary information to those who may be in need of legal services. In particular, communications can be mailed or transmitted by e-mail or other electronic means that do not involve real-time contact and do not violate other laws governing solicitations. These forms of communications and solicitations make it possible for the public to be informed about the need for legal services, and about the qualifications of available lawyers and law firms, without subjecting the public to direct in-person, telephone, or real-time electronic persuasion that may overwhelm a person's judgment.

[4] The use of general advertising and written, recorded, or electronic communications to transmit information from lawyer to the public, rather than direct in-person, live telephone, or real-time electronic contact, will help to assure that the information flows cleanly as well as freely. The contents of advertisements and communications permitted under Rule 7.2 can be permanently recorded so that they cannot be disputed and may be shared with others who know the lawyer. This potential for informal review is itself likely to help guard against statements and claims that might constitute false and misleading communications, in violation of Rule 7.1. The contents of direct in-person, live telephone, or real-time electronic contact can be disputed and may not be subject to third-party scrutiny. Consequently, they are much more likely to approach (and occasionally cross) the dividing line between accurate representations and those that are false and misleading.

[5] There is far less likelihood that a lawyer would engage in abusive practices against a former client or a person with whom the lawyer has close personal or family relationship, or in situations in which the lawyer is motivated by considerations other than the lawyer's pecuniary gain. Nor is there a serious potential for abuse when the person contacted is a lawyer. Consequently, the general prohibition in Rule 7.3(a) and the requirements of Rule 7.3(c) are not applicable in those situations. Also, paragraph (a) is not intended to prohibit a lawyer from participating in constitutionally protected activities of public or charitable legal-service organizations or bona fide political, social, civic, fraternal, employee, or trade organizations whose purposes include providing or recommending legal services to its members or beneficiaries.

[6] But even permitted forms of solicitation can be abused. Thus, any solicitation which contains information which is false or misleading within the meaning of Rule 7.1, which involves coercion, duress, or harassment within the meaning of Rule 7.3(b)(2), or which involves contact with someone who has made known to the lawyer a desire not to be solicited by the lawyer within the meaning of Rule 7.3(b)(1) is prohibited. Moreover, if after sending a letter or other communication to a client as permitted by Rule 7.2 the lawyer receives no response, any further effort to communicate with the recipient of the communication may violate the provisions of Rule 7.3(b).

[7] This Rule is not intended to prohibit a lawyer from contacting representatives of organizations or groups that may be interested in establishing a group or prepaid legal plan for their members, insureds, beneficiaries, or other third parties for the purpose of informing such entities of the availability of and details concerning the plan or arrangement which the lawyer or lawyer's firm is willing to offer. This form of communication is not directed to people who are seeking legal services for themselves. Rather, it is usually addressed to an individual acting in a fiduciary capacity seeking a supplier of legal services for others who may, if they choose, become prospective clients of the lawyer. Under these circumstances, the activity which the lawyer undertakes in communicating with such representatives and the type of information transmitted to the individual are functionally similar to and serve the same purpose as advertising permitted under Rule 7.2.

[8] The requirement in Rule 7.3(d)(1) that certain communications be marked ''Advertising Material'' does not apply to communications sent in response to requests of potential clients or their spokespersons or sponsors. General announcements by lawyers, including changes in personnel or office location, do not constitute communications soliciting professional employment from a client known to be in need of legal services within the meaning of this Rule.

[9] Paragraph (e) of this Rule permits a lawyer to participate with an organization which uses personal contact to solicit members for its group or prepaid legal service plan, provided that the personal contact is not undertaken by any lawyer who would be a provider of legal services through the plan. The organization must not be owned by or directed (whether as manager or otherwise) by any lawyer or law firm that participates in the plan. For example, paragraph (e) would not permit a lawyer to create an organization controlled directly or indirectly by the lawyer and use the organization for the in-person or telephone solicitation of legal employment of the lawyer through memberships in the plan or otherwise. The communication permitted by these organizations also must not be directed to a person known to need legal services in a particular matter, but is to be designed to inform potential plan members generally of another means of affordable legal services. Lawyers who participate in a legal service plan must reasonably assure that the plan sponsors are in compliance with Rules 7.1, 7.2, and 7.3(b). See Rule 8.4(a).

Rule 7.4. Communication of Fields of Practice

(a) A lawyer may communicate the fact that the lawyer does or does not practice in particular fields of law or that the lawyer is a specialist in particular fields of law. Such communication shall be in accordance with Rule 7.1.

(b) A lawyer admitted to engage in patent practice before the United States Patent and Trademark Office may use the designation ''Patent Attorney'' or a substantially similar designation.

(c) A lawyer engaged in admiralty practice may use the designation ''admiralty,'' ''proctor in admiralty'' or a substantially similar designation.

(d) A lawyer shall not state or imply that a lawyer is certified as a specialist in a particular field of law, unless:

(1) the lawyer has been certified as a specialist by an organization that has been approved by an appropriate state authority or that has been accredited by the American Bar Association; and

(2) the name of the certifying organization is clearly identified in the communication.

(e) In any advertisement in which a lawyer affirmatively claims to be certified in any area of the law, such advertisement shall contain the following disclosure: ''Colorado does not certify lawyers as specialists in any field.'' This disclaimer is not required where the information concerning the lawyer's services is contained in a law list, law directory or a publication intended primarily for use of the legal profession.

COMMENT

[1] Paragraph (a) of this Rule permits a lawyer to indicate areas of practice in communications about the lawyer's services. If a lawyer practices only in certain fields, or will not accept matters except in a specified field or fields, the lawyer is permitted to so indicate. A lawyer is generally permitted to state that the lawyer is a ''specialist,'' practices a ''specialty'' or ''specializes in'' particular fields, but such communications are subject to the ''false and misleading'' standard applied in Rule 7.1 to communications concerning a lawyer's services.

[2] Paragraph (b) recognizes the long-established policy of the Patent and Trademark Office for the designation of lawyers practicing before the Office. Paragraph (c) recognizes that designation of Admiralty practice has a long historical tradition associated with maritime commerce and the federal courts.

[3] Paragraph (d) permits a lawyer to state that the lawyer is certified as a specialist in a field of law if such certification is granted by an organization approved by an appropriate state authority or accredited by the American Bar Association or another organization, such as a state bar association, that has been approved by the state authority to accredit organizations that certify lawyers as specialists. Certification signifies that an objective entity has recognized an advanced degree of knowledge and experience in the specialty area greater than is suggested by general licensure to practice law. Certifying organizations may be expected to apply standards of experience, knowledge and proficiency to insure that a lawyer's recognition as a specialist is meaningful and reliable. In order to insure that consumers can obtain access to useful information about an organization granting certification, the name of the certifying organization must be included in any communication regarding the certification.

[4] A claim of certification contained in a lawyer's letterhead does not require the disclaimer in Rule 7.4(e) unless the letterhead is used in an advertisement.

Rule 7.5. Firm Names and Letterheads

(a) A lawyer shall not use a firm name, letterhead or other professional designation that violates Rule 7.1. A trade name may be used by a lawyer in private practice if it does not imply a connection with a government agency or with a public or charitable legal services organization and is not otherwise in violation of Rule 7.1.

(b) A law firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction may use the same name or other professional designation in each jurisdiction, but identification of the lawyers in an office of the firm shall indicate the jurisdictional limitations on those not licensed to practice in the jurisdiction where the office is located.

(c) The name of a lawyer holding a public office shall not be used in the name of a law firm, or in communications on its behalf, during any substantial period in which the lawyer is not actively and regularly practicing with the firm.

(d) Lawyers may state or imply that they practice in a partnership or other organization only when that is the fact.

COMMENT

[1] A firm may be designated by the names of all or some of its members, by the names of deceased members where there has been a continuing succession in the firm's identity or by a trade name such as the ''ABC Legal Clinic.'' A lawyer or law firm may also be designated by a distinctive website address or comparable professional designation. Although the United States Supreme Court has held that legislation may prohibit the use of trade names in professional practice, use of such names in law practice is acceptable so long as it is not misleading. If a private firm uses a trade name that includes a geographical name such as ''Springfield Legal Clinic,'' an express disclaimer that it is a public legal aid agency may be required to avoid a misleading implication. It may be observed that any firm name including the name of a deceased partner is, strictly speaking, a trade name. The use of such names to designate law firms has proven a useful means of identification. However, it is misleading to use the name of a lawyer not associated with the firm or a predecessor of the firm, or the name of a nonlawyer.

[2] With regard to paragraph (d), lawyers sharing office facilities, but who are not in fact associated with each other in a law firm, may not denominate themselves as, for example, ''Smith and Jones,'' for that title suggests that they are practicing law together in a firm.

ANNOTATION

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Reed, 955 P.2d 65 (Colo. 1998) (decided prior to 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct).

Rule 7.6. Political Contributions to Obtain Legal Engagements or Appointments by Judges

A lawyer or law firm shall not accept a government legal engagement or an appointment by a judge if the lawyer or law firm makes a political contribution or solicits political contributions for the purpose of obtaining or being considered for that type of legal engagement or appointment.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

COMMENT

[1] Lawyers have a right to participate fully in the political process, which includes making and soliciting political contributions to candidates for judicial and other public office. Nevertheless, when lawyers make or solicit political contributions in order to obtain an engagement for legal work awarded by a government agency, or to obtain appointment by a judge, the public may legitimately question whether the lawyers engaged to perform the work are selected on the basis of competence and merit. In such a circumstance, the integrity of the profession is undermined.

[2] The term ''political contribution'' denotes any gift, subscription, loan, advance or deposit of anything of value made directly or indirectly to a candidate, incumbent, political party or campaign committee to influence or provide financial support for election to or retention in judicial or other government office. Political contributions in initiative and referendum elections are not included. For purposes of this Rule, the term ''political contribution'' does not include uncompensated services.

[3] Subject to the exceptions below, (i) the term ''government legal engagement'' denotes any engagement to provide legal services that a public official has the direct or indirect power to award; and (ii) the term ''appointment by a judge'' denotes an appointment to a position such as referee, commissioner, special master, receiver, guardian or other similar position that is made by a judge. Those terms do not, however, include (a) substantially uncompensated services; (b) engagements or appointments made on the basis of experience, expertise, professional qualifications and cost following a request for proposal or other process that is free from influence based upon political contributions; and (c) engagements or appointments made on a rotational basis from a list compiled without regard to political contributions.

[4] The term ''lawyer or law firm'' includes a political action committee or other entity owned or controlled by a lawyer or law firm.

[5] Political contributions are for the purpose of obtaining or being considered for a government legal engagement or appointment by a judge if, but for the desire to be considered for the legal engagement or appointment, the lawyer or law firm would not have made or solicited the contributions. The purpose may be determined by an examination of the circumstances in which the contributions occur. For example, one or more contributions that in the aggregate are substantial in relation to other contributions by lawyers or law firms, made for the benefit of an official in a position to influence award of a government legal engagement, and followed by an award of the legal engagement to the contributing or soliciting lawyer or the lawyer's firm would support an inference that the purpose of the contributions was to obtain the engagement, absent other factors that weigh against existence of the proscribed purpose. Those factors may include among others that the contribution or solicitation was made to further a political, social, or economic interest or because of an existing personal, family, or professional relationship with a candidate.

[6] If a lawyer makes or solicits a political contribution under circumstances that constitute bribery or another crime, Rule 8.4(b) is implicated.

MAINTAINING THE INTEGRITY OF THE PROFESSION

Rule 8.1. Bar Admission and Disciplinary Matters

An applicant for admission, readmission, or reinstatement to the bar, or a lawyer in connection with an application for admission, readmission, or reinstatement to the bar or in connection with a disciplinary matter, shall not:

(a) knowingly make a false statement of material fact; or

(b) fail to disclose a fact necessary to correct a misapprehension known by the person to have arisen in the matter, or knowingly fail to respond to a lawful demand for information from an admissions or disciplinary authority, except that this Rule does not require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008.

[1] The duty imposed by this Rule extends to persons seeking admission to the bar as well as to lawyers. Hence, if a person makes a material false statement in connection with an application for admission, it may be the basis for subsequent disciplinary action if the person is admitted, and in any event may be relevant in a subsequent admission application. The duty imposed by this Rule applies to a lawyer's own admission or discipline as well as that of others. Thus, it is a separate professional offense for a lawyer to knowingly make a misrepresentation or omission in connection with a disciplinary investigation of the lawyer's own conduct. Paragraph (b) of this Rule also requires correction of any prior misstatement in the matter that the applicant or lawyer may have made and affirmative clarification of any misunderstanding on the part of the admissions or disciplinary authority of which the person involved becomes aware.

[2] This Rule is subject to the provisions of the fifth amendment of the United States Constitution and corresponding provisions of state constitutions. Rule 8.1(b) does not prohibit a good faith challenge to the demand for such information. A person relying on such a provision or challenge in response to a question, however, should do so openly and not use the right of nondisclosure as a justification for failure to comply with this Rule.

[3] A lawyer representing an applicant for admission to the bar, or representing a lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary inquiry or proceeding, is governed by the rules applicable to the client-lawyer relationship, including Rule 1.6 and, in some cases, Rule 3.3.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Rule 8.1 is similar to Rule 8.1 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Rule 8.2. Judicial and Legal Officials

(a) A lawyer shall not make a statement that the lawyer knows to be false or with reckless disregard as to its truth or falsity concerning the qualifications or integrity of a judge, adjudicatory officer or public legal officer or of a candidate for election, or appointment to, or retention in, judicial or legal office.

(b) A lawyer who is a candidate for retention in judicial office shall comply with the applicable provisions of the Code of Judicial Conduct.

COMMENT

[1] Assessments by lawyers are relied on in evaluating the professional or personal fitness of persons being considered for election or appointment to judicial office and to public legal offices, such as attorney general, prosecuting attorney and public defender. Expressing honest and candid opinions on such matters contributes to improving the administration of justice. Conversely, false statements by a lawyer can unfairly undermine public confidence in the administration of justice.

[2] When a lawyer seeks judicial office, the lawyer should be bound by applicable limitations on political activity.

[3] To maintain the fair and independent administration of justice, lawyers are encouraged to continue traditional efforts to defend judges and courts unjustly criticized.

Rule 8.3. Reporting Professional Misconduct

(a) A lawyer who knows that another lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct that raises a substantial question as to that lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects, shall inform the appropriate professional authority.

(b) A lawyer who knows that a judge has committed a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct that raises a substantial question as to the judge's fitness for office shall inform the appropriate authority.

(c) This Rule does not require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6 or information gained by a lawyer or judge while serving as a member of a lawyers' peer assistance program that has been approved by the Colorado Supreme Court initially or upon renewal, to the extent that such information would be confidential if it were communicated subject to the attorney-client privilege.

COMMENT

[1] Self-regulation of the legal profession requires that members of the profession initiate disciplinary investigation when they know of a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct. Lawyers have a similar obligation with respect to judicial misconduct. An apparently isolated violation may indicate a pattern of misconduct that only a disciplinary investigation can uncover. Reporting a violation is especially important where the victim is unlikely to discover the offense.

[2] A report about misconduct is not required where it would involve violation of Rule 1.6. However, a lawyer should encourage a client to consent to disclosure where prosecution would not substantially prejudice the client's interests.

[3] If a lawyer were obliged to report every violation of the Rules, the failure to report any violation would itself be a professional offense. Such a requirement existed in many jurisdictions but proved to be unenforceable. This Rule limits the reporting obligation to those offenses that a self-regulating profession must vigorously endeavor to prevent. A measure of judgment is, therefore, required in complying with the provisions of this Rule. The term ''substantial'' refers to the seriousness of the possible offense and not the quantum of evidence of which the lawyer is aware. A report should be made to the bar disciplinary agency unless some other agency, such as a peer review agency, is more appropriate in the circumstances. Similar considerations apply to the reporting of judicial misconduct.

[4] The duty to report professional misconduct does not apply to a lawyer retained to represent a lawyer whose professional conduct is in question. Such a situation is governed by the Rules applicable to the client-lawyer relationship.

[5] Information about a lawyer's or judge's misconduct or fitness may be received by a lawyer in the course of that lawyer's participation in an approved lawyers or judges assistance program. In that circumstance, providing for an exception to the reporting requirements of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this Rule encourages lawyers and judges to seek treatment through such a program. Conversely, without such an exception, lawyers and judges may hesitate to seek assistance from these programs, which may then result in additional harm to their professional careers and additional injury to the welfare of clients and the public. These Rules do not otherwise address the confidentiality of information received by a lawyer or judge participating in an approved lawyers assistance program; such an obligation, however, may be imposed by the rules of the program or other law.

Rule 8.4. Misconduct

It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

(a) violate or attempt to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, knowingly assist or induce another to do so, or do so through the acts of another;

(b) commit a criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects;

(c) engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation, except that a lawyer may advise, direct, or supervise others, including clients, law enforcement officers, or investigators, who participate in lawful investigative activities;

(d) engage in conduct that is prejudicial to the administration of justice;

(e) state or imply an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law;

(f) knowingly assist a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct or other law;

(g) engage in conduct, in the representation of a client, that exhibits or is intended to appeal to or engender bias against a person on account of that person's race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation, or socioeconomic status, whether that conduct is directed to other counsel, court personnel, witnesses, parties, judges, judicial officers, or any persons involved in the legal process; or

(h) engage in any conduct that directly, intentionally, and wrongfully harms others and that adversely reflects on a lawyer's fitness to practice law.

Source: Committee comment amended October 17, 1996, effective January 1, 1997; entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008; (c) amended and adopted, effective September 28, 2017.

COMMENT

[1] Lawyers are subject to discipline when they violate or attempt to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, knowingly assist or induce another to do so or do so through the acts of another, as when they request or instruct an agent to do so on the lawyer's behalf. Paragraph (a), however, does not prohibit a lawyer from advising a client concerning action the client is legally entitled to take.

[2] Many kinds of illegal conduct reflect adversely on fitness to practice law, such as offenses involving fraud and the offense of willful failure to file an income tax return. However, some kinds of offenses carry no such implication. Traditionally, the distinction was drawn in terms of offenses involving ''moral turpitude.'' That concept can be construed to include offenses concerning some matters of personal morality, such as adultery and comparable offenses, that have no specific connection to fitness for the practice of law. Although a lawyer is personally answerable to the entire criminal law, a lawyer should be professionally answerable only for offenses that indicate lack of those characteristics relevant to law practice. Offenses involving violence, dishonesty, breach of trust, or serious interference with the administration of justice are in that category. A pattern of repeated offenses, even ones of minor significance when considered separately, can indicate indifference to legal obligation.

[3] A lawyer who, in the course of representing a client, knowingly manifests by word or conduct, bias or prejudice based upon race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation or socioeconomic status, violates paragraph (g) and also may violate paragraph (d). Legitimate advocacy respecting the foregoing factors does not violate paragraphs (d) or (g). A trial judge's finding that peremptory challenges were exercised on a discriminatory basis does not alone establish a violation of this Rule.

[4] A lawyer may refuse to comply with an obligation imposed by law upon a good faith belief that no valid obligation exists. The provisions of Rule 1.2(d) concerning a good faith challenge to the validity, scope, meaning or application of the law apply to challenges of legal regulation of the practice of law.

[5] Lawyers holding public office assume legal responsibilities going beyond those of other citizens. A lawyer's abuse of public office can suggest an inability to fulfill the professional role of lawyers. The same is true of abuse of positions of private trust such as trustee, executor, administrator, guardian, agent and officer, director or manager of a corporation or other organization.

Lawyer violated section (c) when he failed to disclose the fact of his client's death during settlement negotiations. People v. Rosen, 199 P.3d 1241 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2007).

Lawyer who misrepresented to clients his status to practice law in the state engaged in dishonest conduct in violation of section (c) of this rule. People v. Auer, 331 P.3d 136 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2014).

Failure of former district attorney to make ordered child support payments constitutes conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice and conduct that adversely reflects upon a lawyer's fitness to practice law. People v. Primavera, 904 P.2d 883 (Colo. 1995).

Attorney's nonpayment of spousal support was a violation of section (d) warranting suspension, but the attorney's answer of ''no'' on his 2014 attorney registration statement regarding whether he was under the obligation of any current child support order did not violate section (c) because the attorney reasonably believed the unallocated temporary support order in place at that time was not a child support order. People v. McQuitty, 371 P.3d 279 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2016).

Attorney who conditioned settlement agreement on plaintiffs not pursuing a grievance against him violated section (d) and constituted conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice. In re Lopez, 980 P.2d 983 (Colo. 1999).

When a public defender gave his client the impression that he would provide better representation if the client hired him as private counsel, his conduct prejudiced the administration of justice under section (d), for which public censure was warranted. People v. Casias, 279 P.3d 667 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2012).

Attorney signing substitute counsel's name to pleadings in a style different from his own signature, without authority to sign in a representative capacity and without any indication that he was signing in a representative capacity, violated this rule and warranted a six-month suspension. People v. Reed, 955 P.2d 65 (Colo. 1998).

A noble motive does not justify departure from any rule of professional conduct. A prosecutor trying to protect public safety is not immune from the code of professional conduct when he or she chooses deception as means for protecting public safety. In re Pautler, 47 P.3d 1175 (Colo. 2002).

There is no imminent public harm, duress, or choice of evils exception or defense for a prosecutor to the rules of professional conduct. In re Pautler, 47 P.3d 1175 (Colo. 2002).

Suspension appropriate where prosecutor engaged in intentional deception in order to secure a suspect's arrest. The prosecutor's conduct violated the public and professional trust, was intentional, created potential harm, and involved aggravating factors, thus, justifying suspension. In re Pautler, 47 P.3d 1175 (Colo. 2002).

When considering discipline of attorneys who criticize judges, the New York Times standard should be applied because of the interests in protecting attorney speech critical of judges. Under the New York Times standard (New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254 (1964)), a two-part inquiry applies in determining whether an attorney may be disciplined for statements criticizing a judge: (1) Whether the disciplinary authority has proven that the statement was a false statement of fact (or a statement of opinion that necessarily implies an undisclosed false assertion of fact); and (2) assuming the statement is false, whether the attorney uttered the statement with actual malice—that is, with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard as to its truth. In re Green, 11 P.3d 1078 (Colo. 2000).

Public censure was appropriate for attorney who violated this rule by simultaneously representing, as defendants in a quantum meruit and lis pendens suit initiated by a subcontractor, the homeowners, the general contractor, the bank holding deed of trust on homeowners property, and two other parties who had contracted with contractor. Balancing the seriousness of the misconduct with the factors in mitigation, and taking into account the respondent's mental state when he entered into the conflicts in representation, public censure is appropriate. People v. Fritze, 926 P.2d 574 (Colo. 1996).

Public censure warranted where, although respondent did not notify his clients and opposing counsel of his suspension, he did notify the court early in proceedings, did not go forward with court proceedings while on suspension and no actual harm was demonstrated to any of his clients. People v. Dover, 944 P.2d 80 (Colo. 1997).

Stipulated agreement and recommendation of public censure with certain conditions and monitoring based upon conditional admission of misconduct were warranted for attorney who required that his associates sign a covenant that hindered a client's right to choose his or her own lawyer by interfering with the client's right to discharge his or her lawyer at any time, with or without cause. People v. Wilson, 953 P.2d 1292 (Colo. 1998).

Public censure was appropriate where attorney falsely testified that he had automobile insurance at the time of an accident, but outcome of case was not thereby affected. People v. Small, 962 P.2d 258 (Colo. 1998).

Knowingly deceiving a client by altering a settlement check generally would warrant a 30-day suspension, however, because the client was uninjured by the deception and the respondent had no previous discipline in 13 years of practice, public censure was adequate. People v. Waitkus, 962 P.2d 977 (Colo. 1998).

One-year and one-day suspension warranted where respondent failed to serve a cross-claim, failed to respond to several motions, failed to keep client informed, advanced defense that was not warranted by the facts and existing law, and misrepresented to client the basis for the judgment in favor of the opposing party. People v. Genchi, 849 P.2d 28 (Colo. 1993).

Six-month penalty justified for attorney pleading guilty to making and altering a false and forged prescription for a controlled substance and of criminal attempt to obtain a controlled substance by forgery and alteration, where mitigating factors included: (1) No prior disciplinary history; (2) personal or emotional problems at time of misconduct; (3) full and free disclosure by attorney to grievance committee; (4) imposition of other penalties and sanctions resulting from criminal proceeding; (5) demonstration of genuine remorse; and (6) relative inexperience in the practice of law. People v. Moore, 849 P.2d 40 (Colo. 1993).

Six-month suspension appropriate for respondent convicted of drunken driving offense and assault. People v. Shipman, 943 P.2d 458 (Colo. 1997); People v. Reaves, 943 P.2d 460 (Colo. 1997).

Multiple criminal and traffic convictions demonstrate a pattern of misconduct, and the presence of multiple offenses warrants suspension for six months with the requirement of reinstatement proceedings. People v. Van Buskirk, 962 P.2d 975 (Colo. 1998).

Demonstration of four conditions required for attorney publicly censured after conviction of driving while ability impaired: Continue psychotherapy, remain on antabuse, submit monthly reports regarding progress on antabuse, and execute written authorization to therapist to release medical information regarding status on antabuse. People v. Rotenberg, 911 P.2d 642 (Colo. 1996).

Thirty-day suspension warranted where lawyer, who represented an individual accused of first-degree murder, communicated with co-defendant who also was charged with first-degree murder and whose interests were adverse to the lawyer's client, without the knowledge or consent of the co-defendant's lawyers. The potential for harm was high in a first-degree murder case and the number of unauthorized contacts demonstrated more than negligence on the lawyer's part. People v. DeLoach, 944 P.2d 522 (Colo. 1997).

Stipulated agreement and recommendation of suspension for 30 days based upon conditional admission of misconduct were warranted for attorney who committed unfair insurance claim settlement practices and tortious conduct in handling insurance investigation of fire claim that he was not competent to handle. People v. McClung, 953 P.2d 1282 (Colo. 1998).

Forty-five-day suspension warranted for attorney's professional misconduct involving the improper collection of attorney's fees in six instances. People v. Peters, 849 P.2d 51 (Colo. 1993).

Suspension of three months is appropriate when attorney engaged in sexual intercourse with dissolution of marriage client on one occasion, had a history of disciplinary sanctions, but cooperated with the disciplinary investigation. People v. Barr, 929 P.2d 1325 (Colo. 1996).

Nine-month suspension stayed upon the requirement to pay restitution to clients is justified when violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules, particularly given the substantial and continuous incompetence, advancement of meritless claims, and significant financial harm conduct caused clients in this case. People v. Bontrager, 407 P.3d 1235 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2017).

Suspension for one year and one day, with conditional stay of all but 60 days, warranted for attorney's backdating of brief and certificate of service, after which attorney voluntarily reported misconduct, attempted to rectify the violation, cooperated in disciplinary proceedings, and showed genuine remorse. People v. Maynard, 219 P.3d 430 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008).

Suspension for one year and one day appropriate where attorney, among other disciplinary rule violations, violated section (d) by failing to pay attorney fees until two years after a malpractice action against the attorney and section (h) by engaging in two non-sufficient funds transactions involving his ''special'' account, and twenty-two non-sufficient funds transactions in his personal account. People v. Johnson, 944 P.2d 524 (Colo. 1997).

Suspension for one year and one day appropriate where attorney had a selfish or dishonest motive in retaining fees he received from clients that rightfully belonged to his law firm, but had no prior disciplinary record and made a timely good faith effort to provide restitution. People v. Bronstein, 964 P.2d 514 (Colo. 1998) (overruled in In the Matter of Thompson, 991 P.2d 820 (Colo. 1999)).

Suspension for one year and one day warranted where attorney violated section (c) by knowingly submitting a false statement to the small business administration for the purpose of obtaining a loan. People v. Mitchell, 969 P.2d 662 (Colo. 1998).

Suspension of one year and one day appropriate where attorney committed offense of third-degree sexual assault on a client and recklessly accused a lawyer and judge of having an improper ex parte communication. In re Egbune, 971 P.2d 1065 (Colo. 1999).

It is appropriate to condition reinstatement, after suspension for a year and a day, upon the attorney's submission to an independent medical examination by a qualified psychiatrist, where the attorney's belief in a conspiracy to remove her from the practice of law was both ingrained and illogical. The suspension is warranted because the attorney violated section (d) by threatening to sue witnesses if they testified at a hearing over an award of attorney fees and section (c) by secretly negotiating with opposing litigants for additional attorney fees when the attorney's contingency fee contract with her former clients gave them a potentially valid claim to a portion of the fees. People v. Maynard, 275 P.3d 780 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2010).

Two-year suspension warranted when attorney entered Alford plea to defer judgment on a charge of soliciting for child prostitution. People v. Gritchen, 908 P.2d 70 (Colo. 1995).

Driving while under the influence of alcohol with an expired driver's license and no proof of insurance, and accepting one ounce of cocaine as payment for legal services from a person believed to be a client facing drug charges, warranted a three-year suspension. People v. Madrid, 967 P.2d 627 (Colo. 1998).

Suspension for three years was appropriate in case involving violation of this rule and others, together with attorney's breach of his duty as client's trustee to protect his client, who was a particularly vulnerable victim that was recuperating from a serious head injury. People v. DeRose, 945 P.2d 412 (Colo. 1997).

Suspension of three years was appropriate for attorney who drove a vehicle on at least four occasions after his driver's license was revoked and who also failed to appear in two cases involving his illegal driving. People v. Hughes, 966 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1998).

Suspension for three years appropriate when attorney circumvented proper channels for the adoption of a child by falsely listing her own husband as the birth father on the baby's birth certificate, counseled her husband to engage in fraudulent conduct, and provided false information on a petition for stepparent adoption. People v. Ritland, 327 P.3d 914 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2014).

Suspension for one year and one day warranted where attorney failed to appear in county court on a charge of driving under the influence. People v. Myers, 969 P.2d 701 (Colo. 1998).

A long period of suspension, rather than disbarment, is warranted when acts complained of occurred before an earlier disciplinary action against the attorney and mitigating factors exist. Attorney's actions were more properly viewed as a pattern of misconduct. In re Van Buskirk, 981 P.2d 607 (Colo. 1999).

Thirty-day suspension appropriate where attorney overdrew his Colorado Lawyer Trust Account Foundation (COLTAF) account but shortly thereafter deposited sufficient funds to cure the deficiency, negligently failed to keep adequate trust account records, knowingly and repeatedly failed to respond to several requests for information from the office of attorney regulation counsel, eventually provided bank records that revealed no further misconduct on his part, and faced a number of challenges in his personal life at the time he knowingly failed to cooperate with the office of attorney regulation counsel. People v. Edwards, 201 P.3d 555 (Colo. 2008).

Behavior toward client that precipitated conflict on day of client's criminal trial, forcing client's newly appointed public defender to seek a continuance to have adequate time to prepare violates this rule. People v. Brenner, 852 P.2d 456 (Colo. 1993).

Pushing another attorney in the courtroom, resulting in a conviction for third-degree assault, warranted a 30-day suspension. People v. Nelson, 941 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1997).

Lawyer who imposed unauthorized charging lien and subsequently failed to release such lien, and who testified at grievance proceedings that he kept documents belonging to third parties in order to protect his client's financial interests, which was the first instance at which such a theory was raised, violated this rule. Although the attorney's motives were dishonest and selfish, the grievance against the attorney involved in multiple offenses, the attorney violated a disciplinary rule at the grievance proceedings, and the attorney failed to acknowledge wrongful nature of his conduct, the mitigating factors included the fact that the attorney had not been subject to prior grievances and the attorney was relatively inexperienced. Thus, the appropriate sanction is public censure. People v. Brown, 840 P.2d 1085 (Colo. 1992).

In determining appropriate sanction, it is not important whether injured party was attorney's client, when attorney-respondent was appointed conservator. People v. Vigil, 929 P.2d 1311 (Colo. 1996).

Conduct warranted one-year extension of attorney's suspension. People v. Silvola, 933 P.2d 1308 (Colo. 1997).

Disbarment warranted for respondent who continued to practice law while under suspension. Respondent was suspended based upon conviction for possession of cocaine, a class 3 felony, and upon release from prison represented to several persons that he was a licensed attorney and provided legal services to those persons. Board's finding that respondent had a history of prior discipline, a dishonest or selfish motive, displayed a pattern of misconduct, had committed multiple offenses, had engaged in a bad faith obstruction of the disciplinary process, had refused to acknowledge any wrongful conduct on his part, had substantial experience in law, and could offer no mitigating factors warranted disbarment. People v. Stauffer, 858 P.2d 694 (Colo. 1993).

Disbarment warranted for respondent convicted of repeated theft from her immigration clients. People v. Cohen, 369 P.3d 289 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2016).

Disbarment appropriate remedy where attorney neglected a legal matter, misappropriated funds and property, abandoned client, engaged in fraud, evaded process, and failed to cooperate in disciplinary investigation. People v. Hindman, 958 P.2d 463 (Colo. 1998).

Disbarment is the presumed sanction for knowing misappropriation of funds from clients or one's law firm, barring significant mitigating circumstances. People v. Guyerson, 898 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1995); People v. Varallo, 913 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1996); In the Matter of Thompson, 991 P.2d 820 (Colo. 1999) (overruling People v. Bronstein, 964 P.2d 514 (Colo. 1998)); People v. Sweetman, 218 P.3d 1123 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008); People v. Fiore, 301 P.3d 1250 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2013).

Disbarment appropriate when attorney accepted legal fees, performed limited services, abandoned the client, and then misappropriated the unearned fees. People v. Kuntz, 942 P.2d 1206 (Colo. 1997); People v. Ross, 350 P.3d 327 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2015).

Aiding client to violate custody order sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Chappell, 927 P.2d 829 (Colo. 1996).

Structuring financial transaction to enable client to avoid reporting requirements, a felony under federal law, warranted disbarment. In re DeRose, 55 P.3d 126 (Colo. 2002).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify disbarment where attorney continued to practice law when under suspension. People v. Redman, 902 P.2d 839 (Colo. 1995).

One-year and one-day suspension plus payment of restitution and costs proper for attorney who induced a loan through misrepresentations, assigned a promissory note obtained with proceeds of such loan without lender's knowledge or consent, and misrepresented that sufficient funds were in trust account to cover check. People v. Kearns, 843 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1992).

False statements by attorney in connection with an accident in which the attorney was at fault adversely reflects on attorney's fitness to practice law. People v. Dieters, 935 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1997).

Pleading guilty to a single count of bank fraud evidences serious criminal conduct warranting disbarment. People v. Terborg, 848 P.2d 346 (Colo. 1993).

Pleading guilty to felony theft evidences serious criminal conduct warranting disbarment. People v. Larson, 318 P.3d 89 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2013).

Pleading guilty to felony theft from at-risk victims is a crime of dishonesty that warrants disbarment. People v. Zarlengo, 367 P.3d 1197 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2016).

Attorney's repeated assurances to client that he would file a motion for reconsideration, his failure to do so, and his neglect of a legal matter entrusted to him constitute disciplinary violations warranting suspension for 30 days where there are mitigating factors. People v. LaSalle, 848 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1993).

Attorney's neglect resulting in an untimely filing of an inadequate certificate of review and dismissal of his client's case, combined with fact that certificate contained false statements of material fact that attorney later repeated to an investigative counsel with the office of disciplinary counsel, constituted disciplinary violations warranting a 45-day suspension, despite mitigating factors. People v. Porter, 980 P.2d 536 (Colo. 1999).

Ninety-day suspension justified where attorney's failure to respond to discovery requests resulted in default and entry of judgment against client for $816,613. People v. Clark, 927 P.2d 838 (Colo. 1996).

Ninety-day suspension and order of restitution as a condition of reinstatement was justified where attorney failed to pay court-ordered award of attorney's fees resulting from his filing of a frivolous motion and then failed to appear at a deposition. People v. Huntzinger, 967 P.2d 160 (Colo. 1998).

Thirty-day suspension appropriate where attorney failed to inform U.S. bankruptcy court in Colorado, in a hearing on a motion to remand the matter to U.S. bankruptcy court in Massachusetts, that an order of dismissal of the bankruptcy proceeding between the same parties had been entered in California. People v. Farry, 927 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1996).

Suspension stayed, in view of respondent's cooperation and remorse, conditioned upon successful completion of six-month probationary period and ethics refresher course. People v. Rosen, 199 P.3d 1241 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2007).

Lawyer advertisement containing false, misleading, deceptive, or unfair statements violates this rule and warrants public censure where respondent terminated referral service being advertised after the initial request for investigation was filed and cooperated in disciplinary proceedings but had received a past letter of admonition and had substantial experience in the practice of law. People v. Carpenter, 893 P.2d 777 (Colo. 1995).

Public censure appropriate where attorney misrepresented the status of a dismissed case to his client, the resultant actual harm to the client was only the cost of hiring a new lawyer to pursue an appeal of the dismissal, the attorney's law firm reimbursed the client for all fees it had collected, the attorney reimbursed the firm for such fees, the only aggravating factor was a 1994 letter of admonition given to the attorney for improperly communicating with a represented person, and mitigating factors included the absence of a dishonest or selfish motive, remorse, and full and free disclosure in the disciplinary proceedings. People v. Johnston, 955 P.2d 1051 (Colo. 1998).

Public censure appropriate where harm suffered by attorney's client was speculative, attorney retracted his misrepresentations and admitted to his client before the institution of disciplinary proceedings that he had done nothing on the client's appeal, attorney had no prior discipline, he made full and free disclosure of his misconduct to the grievance committee, and he expressed remorse for his misconduct. People v. Nelson, 848 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1993).

Public censure appropriate where attorney neglected and made misrepresentations in two separate legal matters. People v. Eagan, 902 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1995).

Public censure appropriate in light of mitigating circumstances for possession of cocaine in violation of state and federal controlled substance laws. People v. Gould, 912 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1996).

Public censure appropriate where respondent was convicted of driving while ability impaired and had also appeared in court while intoxicated on two consecutive days. People v. Coulter, 950 P.2d 176 (Colo. 1998).

Public censure appropriate for attorney who had been reprimanded in Connecticut for failure to file federal income tax return and attorney had not been disciplined before in Colorado. People v. Perkell, 969 P.2d 703 (Colo. 1998).

Public censure was warranted where attorney twice requested arresting officers in driving under the influence cases not to appear at license revocation hearings before the department of motor vehicles. People v. Carey, 938 P.2d 1166 (Colo. 1997).

Public censure was appropriate where significant mitigating factors were present. Attorney was convicted of vehicular assault, a class 4 felony, and two counts of driving under the influence of alcohol. The crimes are strict liability offenses for which attorney must serve three years in the custody of the department of corrections, followed by a two-year mandatory period of parole. Section 18-1-105(3) provides that, while he is serving his sentence, attorney is disqualified from practicing as an attorney in any state courts. The sentence and disqualification from practicing law are a significant "other penalty[] or sanction[]" and therefore a mitigating factor in determining the level of discipline. In re Kearns, 991 P.2d 824 (Colo. 1999) (decided under former C.R.C.P. 241.6(5)).

Public censure is appropriate for driving under the influence with mitigating factor of candidness and cooperativeness. This was attorney's first conviction, and he was truthful, candid, and cooperative. He also underwent alcohol evaluation by a doctor. People v. Miller, 409 P.3d 667 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2017).

Public censure was warranted for attorney who prepared motions to dismiss for his client's wife to sign when proceedings had been brought by the client's wife against the client and the client's wife was represented by counsel and was not advised that she should contact her own lawyer before signing the motions, nor asked if she wished to discuss the motions with her lawyer before signing. Three letters of admonition for unrelated misconduct also were an aggravating factor for purposes of determining the appropriate level of discipline. People v. McCray, 926 P.2d 578 (Colo. 1996).

Public censure warranted for attorney's solicitation of prostitution during telephone call with wife of client whom he was representing in a dissolution of marriage proceeding. People v. Bauder, 941 P.2d 282 (Colo. 1997).

Public censure was warranted where attorney made inappropriate, harmful, offensive, harassing, and sexually abusive comments to potential client. The mitigating factors found by the hearing board do not compel a different result. People v. Meier, 954 P.2d 1068 (Colo. 1998).

Chief deputy district attorney's theft of less than $50 constitutes conduct warranting public censure where significant mitigating factors exist. People v. Buckley, 848 P.2d 353 (Colo. 1993).

Two-year suspension was an adequate sanction where attorney neglected client matters by representing that he would file a lawsuit and neglected to do so, engaged in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation by agreeing to represent client and thereafter failing to advise the client of attorney's suspension, and where attorney further engaged in misrepresentation by collecting legal fees and costs from client while attorney was under suspension. People v. de Baca, 948 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1997).

Transferring various ownership interests to lawyer employees of firm who did not receive profits and were not managers warranted suspension of one year and a day. Suspension appropriate because attorney made misrepresentations and was dishonest in such transfers. People v. Reed, 942 P.2d 1204 (Colo. 1997).

Thirty-day suspension was appropriate discipline where attorney advised client to take action in violation of child custody order but failed to warn her of criminal consequences of such action. People v. Aron, 962 P.2d 261 (Colo. 1998).

Depositing personal funds into a COLTAF account to hide personal assets from creditors supports a 90-day suspension with conditions of reinstatement. People v. Alster, 221 P.3d 1088 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2009).

Suspension of one year and one day was appropriate based on evidence of three separate incidents in which the attorney physically assaulted his girlfriend. It was immaterial that no charges had been filed in any of the incidents, because the acts alone reflected adversely on the attorney's fitness to practice law. The fact that the attorney's behavior was not directly related to his practice of law was a factor to be considered, but was not conclusive. The attorney had failed to take any steps toward rehabilitation following the incidents, and the three separate assaults showed a pattern of misconduct. Therefore, it was appropriate to suspend the attorney and require him to demonstrate rehabilitation and completion of a certified domestic violence treatment program as a condition of reinstatement. People v. Musick, 960 P.2d 89 (Colo. 1998).

Attorney conduct violating this rule, in conjunction with other rules, sufficient to justify suspension when violation did not arise from neglect or willingness to take advantage of client's vulnerability and is mitigated by her inexperience in the practice of law, her lack of any prior disciplinary record, the fact that she had already been held in contempt and punished by the district court, and the fact that there is no suggestion of selfish motivation. Attorney's failure to appreciate the serious nature of conduct and the jurisdiction of the hearing board to discipline her is a serious matter meriting a period of suspension and a redetermination of her fitness before being permitted to practice law again. In re Roose, 69 P.3d 43 (Colo.), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1053, 124 S. Ct. 815, 157 L. Ed. 2d 705 (2003).

Suspension for three years, rather than disbarment, was appropriate where violation of this rule and others caused serious harm to attorney's clients, but mitigating factors were present, including no previous discipline in 14 years of practice, personal and emotional problems, and cooperation and demonstrated remorse in proceedings. People v. Henderson, 967 P.2d 1038 (Colo. 1998).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules, where mitigating factors were present, warrants public censure. People v. Davis, 950 P.2d 586 (Colo. 1998).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension, stayed upon completion of one-year period of probation with conditions. People v. Bendinelli, 329 P.3d 300 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2014).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension for nine months plus additional conditions. People v. Muhr, 370 P.3d 677 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2015).

Pleading guilty to one count of bribery evidences conduct warranting disbarment. People v. Viar, 848 P.2d 934 (Colo. 1993).

Disbarment is warranted where attorney was convicted of felony offense of forging a federal bankruptcy judge's signature and had engaged in multiple types of other dishonest conduct and where there was an insufficient showing of mental disability. People v. Goldstein, 887 P.2d 634 (Colo. 1994).

Disbarment is the only condign sanction for attempted second degree murder. Respondent nearly killed his wife by brutally attacking her with a hatchet and a kitchen knife. People v. Kintzele, 409 P.3d 680 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2017).

Disbarment is warranted where attorney was convicted in Hawaii of second-degree murder. People v. Draizen, 941 P.2d 280 (Colo. 1997).

Disbarment appropriate sanction for attorney who intentionally killed another person. Despite a lack of prior discipline in this state, giving full faith and credit to another state's law and its jury finding that attorney intentionally took her husband's life by shooting him 10 times with a firearm, disbarment is an appropriate sanction. People v. Sims, 190 P.3d 188 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008).

Disbarment is warranted for attorney convicted of one count of sexual assault on a child, notwithstanding lack of a prior record of discipline. People v. Espe, 967 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1998).

Disbarment was appropriate, despite existence of mitigating factors, where attorney violated section (c) of this rule by misappropriating bar association funds for his personal use and where such misappropriation was knowing. People v. Motsenbocker, 926 P.2d 576 (Colo. 1996).

Disbarment was appropriate for knowing misappropriation of funds despite fact respondent had not been previously disciplined. People v. Dice, 947 P.2d 339 (Colo. 1997).

Disbarment is appropriate when a lawyer knowingly misappropriates client funds in the absence of extraordinary mitigating factors. Mitigating factors such as stress due to prolonged divorce, personal financial losses, a serious motor vehicle accident, filing for bankruptcy, a deteriorating law practice, and alcohol abuse were insufficient to deviate from the rule that a clear and convincing showing of a knowing misappropriation of client funds warrants disbarment. People v. Torpy, 966 P.2d 1040 (Colo. 1998).

Disbarment is warranted where attorney knowingly converted funds belonging to law firm and where attorney knowingly acted dishonestly toward the firm and the disciplinary board investigator. People v. Bardulis, 203 P.3d 632 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2009).

Disbarment is only appropriate remedy for knowingly misappropriating client funds, unless significant extenuating circumstances are present. In re Cleland, 2 P.3d 700 (Colo. 2000).

Disbarment is warranted where attorney converted client's funds in multiple collections cases and committed other rule violations, thus causing severe injury to the client. People v. Solomon, 301 P.3d 1244 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2013).

Disbarment warranted for knowingly abandoning clients, converting their funds, and causing actual financial and emotional harm to them. Attorney violated duty to preserve clients' property, to diligently perform services on their behalf, to be candid with them during the course of the professional relationship, and to abide by the legal rules of substance and procedure that affect the administration of justice. People v. Martin, 223 P.3d 728 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2009).

Disbarment warranted for attorney convicted of conspiracy to commit tax fraud, tax evasion, and aiding and assisting in the preparation of a false income tax return. People v. Evanson, 223 P.3d 735 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2009).

Disbarment warranted for knowingly participating in a long-running tax evasion scheme, actively assisting more than 150 clients to disobey their legal obligations by collectively defrauding the federal government of millions of dollars. People v. Sugar, 360 P.3d 1041 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2015).

Attorney conduct violating this rule, in conjunction with other rules, sufficient to justify disbarment when attorney knowingly commingled and misappropriated clients' funds for his personal use, neglected filing a complaint in a case until it was barred by the statute of limitations, failed to comply with court orders applicable to his child support payments, and neglected two other cases causing default judgments to be entered against his client, despite fact that one of the judgments was subsequently set aside. People v. Gonzalez, 967 P.2d 156 (Colo. 1998).

Attorney who was the trustee of client's trust violated section (h) by utilizing the trust's funds to loan money to his daughter and to purchase his son-in-law's parents' former residence for the purpose of leasing it back to them, and by then failing to take any legal action against them when they did not make lease payments. People v. DeRose, 945 P.2d 412 (Colo. 1997).

Previously disbarred attorney who violated this rule would be forced to pay restitution to clients as a condition of readmission. People v. Vigil, 945 P.2d 1385 (Colo. 1997).

Prior discipline for conduct violating this rule is an important factor in determining the proper level of discipline, therefore disbarment is merited where attorney continues to engage in misconduct. In re C de Baca, 11 P.3d 426 (Colo. 2000).

Court erred when it ordered special advocate to refund fees without determining whether conduct violated section (c). In re Redmond, 131 P.3d 1167 (Colo. App. 2005).

Conduct violating this rule, in conjunction with other disciplinary rules, sufficient to justify disbarment where the attorney continued to practice law while on suspension, repeatedly neglecting his clients and failing to take reasonable steps to protect clients' interests. People v. Fager, 938 P.2d 138 (Colo. 1997).

Conduct found to violate disciplinary rules. People v. Brenner, 852 P.2d 452 (Colo. 1993).

Attorney who knowingly violated rule but without intent to deceive court is justifiably sanctioned. People v. Trogani, 203 P.3d 643 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Doherty, 908 P.2d 1120 (Colo. 1996); People v. Woodrum, 911 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1996); People v. Pooley, 917 P.2d 712 (Colo. 1996); People v. Newman, 925 P.2d 783 (Colo. 1996); People v. Yates, 952 P.2d 340 (Colo. 1998); People v. Rule 8.5. Disciplinary Authority; Choice of Law

(a) A lawyer admitted to practice in this jurisdiction is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction, regardless of where the lawyer's conduct occurs. A lawyer not admitted in this jurisdiction is also subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction if the lawyer provides or offers to provide any legal services in this jurisdiction. A lawyer may be subject to the disciplinary authority of both this jurisdiction and another jurisdiction for the same conduct.

(b) In any exercise of the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction, the rules of professional conduct to be applied shall be as follows:

(1) for conduct in connection with a matter pending before a tribunal, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits, unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise; and

(2) for any other conduct, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the lawyer's conduct occurred, or, if the predominant effect of the conduct is in a different jurisdiction, the rules of that jurisdiction shall be applied to the conduct. A lawyer shall not be subject to discipline if the lawyer's conduct conforms to the rules of a jurisdiction in which the lawyer reasonably believes the predominant effect of the lawyer's conduct will occur.

COMMENT

Disciplinary Authority

[1] It is longstanding law that the conduct of a lawyer admitted to practice in this jurisdiction is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction. Extension of the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction to other lawyers who provide or offer to provide legal services in this jurisdiction is for the protection of the citizens of this jurisdiction. Reciprocal enforcement of a jurisdiction's disciplinary findings and sanctions will further advance the purposes of this Rule. See, Rules 6 and 22, ABA Model Rules for Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement. A lawyer who is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction under Rule 8.5(a) appoints an official to be designated by this Court to receive service of process in this jurisdiction. The fact that the lawyer is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction may be a factor in determining whether personal jurisdiction may be asserted over the lawyer for civil matters.

[1A] The second sentence of Rule 8.5(a) does not preclude prosecution for the unauthorized practice of law of a lawyer who is not admitted in this jurisdiction, and who does not comply with C.R.C.P. 204 or C.R.C.P. 205, but who provides or offers to provide any legal services in this jurisdiction.

Choice of Law

[2] A lawyer may be potentially subject to more than one set of rules of professional conduct which impose different obligations. The lawyer may be licensed to practice in more than one jurisdiction with differing rules, or may be admitted to practice before a particular court with rules that differ from those of the jurisdiction or jurisdictions in which the lawyer is licensed to practice. Additionally, the lawyer's conduct may involve significant contacts with more than one jurisdiction.

[3] Paragraph (b) seeks to resolve such potential conflicts. Its premise is that minimizing conflicts between rules, as well as uncertainty about which rules are applicable, is in the best interest of both clients and the profession (as well as the bodies having authority to regulate the profession). Accordingly, it takes the approach of (i) providing that any particular conduct of a lawyer shall be subject to only one set of rules of professional conduct, (ii) making the determination of which set of rules applies to particular conduct as straightforward as possible, consistent with recognition of appropriate regulatory interests of relevant jurisdictions, and (iii) providing protection from discipline for lawyers who act reasonably in the face of uncertainty.

[4] Paragraph (b)(1) provides that as to a lawyer's conduct relating to a proceeding pending before a tribunal, the lawyer shall be subject only to the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits unless the rules of the tribunal, including its choice of law rule, provide otherwise. As to all other conduct, including conduct in anticipation of a proceeding not yet pending before a tribunal, paragraph (b)(2) provides that a lawyer shall be subject to the rules of the jurisdiction in which the lawyer's conduct occurred, or, if the predominant effect of the conduct is in another jurisdiction, the rules of that jurisdiction shall be applied to the conduct. In the case of conduct in anticipation of a proceeding that is likely to be before a tribunal, the predominant effect of such conduct could be where the conduct occurred, where the tribunal sits or in another jurisdiction.

[5] When a lawyer's conduct involves significant contacts with more than one jurisdiction, it may not be clear whether the predominant effect of the lawyer's conduct will occur in a jurisdiction other than the one in which the conduct occurred. So long as the lawyer's conduct conforms to the rules of a jurisdiction in which the lawyer reasonably believes the predominant effect will occur, the lawyer shall not be subject to discipline under this Rule.

[6] If two admitting jurisdictions were to proceed against a lawyer for the same conduct, they should, applying this Rule, identify the same governing ethics rules. They should take all appropriate steps to see that they do apply the same rule to the same conduct, and in all events should avoid proceeding against a lawyer on the basis of two inconsistent rules.

[7] The choice of law provision applies to lawyers engaged in transnational practice, unless international law, treaties or other agreements between competent regulatory authorities in the affected jurisdictions provide otherwise.

Professional Service Companies

Adopted by the

SUPREME COURT OF COLORADO

November 22, 1995,

Effective December 1, 1995

Editor's note: Effective December 1, 1995, these Rules replaced the Rules on Professional Service Corporations and Joint-Stock and Limited Liability Companies.

ANALYSIS BY RULE

CHAPTER 22

PROFESSIONAL SERVICE COMPANIES

Rule 265. Professional Service Companies

(a) Rendering Legal Service Through a Professional Company. One or more attorneys who are licensed to practice law in Colorado may render legal services in Colorado through a professional company, as that term is defined in Section (e), provided that such professional company is established and operated in accordance with the provisions of this Rule and the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct.

(1) Professional Company Name. The name of the professional company shall comply with the provisions of the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct regarding the names of law firms.

(2) Owners' Liability for Professional Acts, Errors, or Omissions. Each of the owners of the professional company shall be deemed to agree, by reason of the rendering of legal services by any attorney through the professional company, that each of them who is an owner at the time of the commission of any act, error, or omission in the rendering of legal services by any owner or other person for whose acts, errors, or omissions the professional company is liable, assumes, jointly and severally to the extent provided by this Rule the liability of the professional company for such act, error, or omission. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, any owner who has not directly participated in the act, error, or omission in the rendering of legal services for which liability is incurred by the professional company does not assume such liability, except as provided in subsection (a)(3)(D), if, at the time the act, error, or omission occurs the professional company has professional liability insurance that meets the minimum requirements stated in subsection (a)(3).

(3) Professional Liability Insurance Policy Requirements. The professional liability insurance contemplated in subsection (a)(2) shall meet the following minimum requirements:

(A) Professional Acts Coverage. The professional liability insurance shall insure the professional company against liability imposed upon it arising out of the rendering of legal services by any attorney through the professional company and against the liability imposed upon it arising out of the acts, errors, and omissions of all nonattorney employees assisting in the rendering of legal services by any attorney through the professional company.

(B) Policy Language. The policy or policies for the professional liability insurance may contain reasonable provisions with respect to policy periods, territory, claims, conditions, and other matters.

(C) Limits of Coverage. The professional liability insurance shall be in an amount for each claim of at least the lesser of $100,000 multiplied by the number of attorneys who render legal services through the professional company or $500,000. If the policy or policies for the professional liability insurance provide for an aggregate top limit of liability per year for all claims, the top limit shall not be less than the lesser $300,000 multiplied by the number of attorneys who render legal services through the professional company or $2,000,000.

(D) Deductibles and Defense Costs. The policy or policies for the professional liability insurance may provide for a deductible or self-insured retained amount and may provide for the payment of defense or other costs out of the stated limits of the policy. The liability assumed by each owner of the professional company who has not directly participated in the act, error or omission in the rendering of legal services for which liability is incurred by the professional company shall be the lesser of the actual liability of the professional company in excess of insurance available to pay such damages or the sum of the following:

(I) such deductible or retained self-insurance; and

(II) the amounts, if any, by which the payment of defense costs has reduced the insurance remaining available for the payment of damages incurred by reason of the liability of the professional company below the minimum limit of insurance required by subsection (a)(3)(C).

(E) Determination of Coverage. An act, error, or omission in the rendering of legal services shall be deemed to be covered by professional liability insurance for the purpose of this Rule if the policy or policies include such act, error, or omission as a covered activity, regardless of whether claims previously made against the policy have exhausted the aggregate top limit for the applicable time period or whether the individual claimed amount or ultimate liability exceeds either the per claim or aggregate top limit.

(F) Limitation of Vicarious Liability. The liability assumed by the owners of a professional company under this Rule is limited to the liability of the professional company for acts, errors, or omissions incurred in the rendering of legal services by any owner or other person for whose acts, errors, or omissions the professional company is liable and shall not extend to any other liability incurred by the professional company. Liability, if any, for any and all acts, errors, and omissions, other than acts, errors, or omissions incurred in the rendering of legal services by any owner or other person for whose acts, errors, or omissions the professional company is liable, shall be as otherwise provided by law and shall not be changed, affected, limited, or extended by this Rule.

(b) Compliance with Rules of Professional Conduct. Nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to diminish or change the obligation of each attorney rendering legal services through a professional company to comply with the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct promulgated by this Court.

(c) Violation of Rule: Termination of Authority. Any violation of or failure to comply with any of the provisions of this Rule by the professional company may be grounds for this Court to terminate or suspend the right of any attorney who is an owner of such professional company to render legal services in Colorado through a professional company.

(d) Professional Company Constituencies. A professional company may have one or more owners that are professional companies, so long as each such owner that is a professional company and the professional company of which they are owners are both established and operated in accordance with the provisions of this Rule.

(e) "Professional Company" Defined. For purposes of this Rule, a professional company is a corporation, limited liability company, limited liability partnership, limited partnership association, or other entity that may be formed under Colorado law to transact business or any entity that can be formed under the law of any other jurisdiction and through which attorneys may render legal services in that jurisdiction, except that the term excludes a general partnership that is not a limited liability partnership and excludes every other entity the owners of which are subject to personal liability for the obligations of the entity.

This rule authorizes lawyers to organize professional service corporations under the Colorado corporation code and thereafter operate them for the practice of law, provided they organize and operate such corporations in accordance with the provisions of this rule. United States v. Empey, 406 F.2d 157 (10th Cir. 1969).

Such lawyers are entitled to be treated as a corporation for income tax purposes. A corporation organized to practice a learned profession under the general corporation laws of a state which has to meet requirements laid down in this rule is entitled to be treated as a corporation for federal income tax purposes. United States v. Empey, 406 F.2d 157 (10th Cir. 1969).

The definition of a partnership plainly refers to unincorporated organizations; so, to treat as a partnership for federal income tax purposes, a corporation, organized and chartered under state laws as a corporation and operated as such in good faith, does violence to the statutory definitions of the terms ''partnership'' and ''corporation'' of the internal revenue statutes. United States v. Empey, 406 F.2d 157 (10th Cir. 1969).

Activities of law firm incorporated as professional corporation in conducting a business of selling television advertising materials go beyond the purpose of conducting a law practice and violate this rule, and, therefore, contracts made by such professional corporation are unenforceable. Network Affiliates, Inc. v. Robert E. Schack, P.A., 682 P.2d 1244 (Colo. App. 1984).

Failure of attorney to register as a professional corporation for the practice of law violated DR 1-102 and subjected attorney to disciplinary proceedings. People v. Dickinson, 903 P.2d 1132 (Colo. 1995).

Requirements contained in this rule are applicable only for the acts, errors, and omissions of the employees of the corporation. Gutrich v. LaPlante, 942 P.2d 1266 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Gutrich v. Cogswell & Wehrle, 961 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1998).

CHAPTER 23.3

Rules Governing Contingent Fees

CHAPTER 23.3

RULES GOVERNING CONTINGENT FEES

Rule 1. Definitions

In this rule, the term ''contingent fee agreement'' means a written agreement for legal services of an attorney or attorneys (including any associated counsel), under which compensation is to be contingent in whole or in part upon the successful accomplishment or disposition of the subject matter of the agreement.

ANNOTATION

Court may scrutinize contingent fee contracts. Under its general supervisory power over attorneys as officers of the court, a court may and should scrutinize contingent fee contracts and determine the reasonableness of the terms thereof. Anderson v. Kenelly, 37 Colo. App. 217, 547 P.2d 260 (1975).

Oral agreement does not substantially comply with this rule. Beeson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1314 (Colo. App. 1997).

Lack of a written agreement does not preclude an attorney from recovering fees based on the theory of quantum meruit. Beeson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1314 (Colo. App. 1997).

Withdrawn co-counsel may pursue quantum meruit claim against former co-counsel. But no action is permitted against the client who entered into the contingency-fee agreement with the attorneys. Claim accrues when the withdrawn attorney knows or should know of the settlement or judgment that results in the payment of the attorney fees. Melat, Pressman & Higbie v. Hannon Law Firm, 2012 CO 61, 287 P.3d 842.

Reasonableness of an attorney's fee depends on various factors, no one of which is determinative. The existence of a contingent fee contract is determinative only to the extent that it sets the maximum amount permitted. Beeson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1314 (Colo. App. 1997).

The rules governing contingent fees do not apply to attorney fees recovered pursuant to the common fund doctrine. In a common fund case, the court takes on the role of fiduciary for the beneficiaries of the fund when awarding attorney fees; thus, the court's oversight provides protection to the beneficiaries comparable to the rules governing contingent fee agreements. Brody v. Hellman, 167 P.3d 192 (Colo. App. 2007).

Rule 2. Construction

Unless expressly prohibited by this rule, no written contingent fee agreement shall be regarded as champertous if made in an effort in good faith reasonably to comply with this rule. The Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct may be considered in reviewing disputed contingent fee agreements.

Source: Amended November 5, 1992, effective January 1, 1993.

Rule 3. Prohibitions

No contingent fee agreement shall be made (a) in respect to the procuring of an acquittal upon any favorable disposition of a criminal charge, (b) in respect of the procuring of a dissolution of marriage, determination of invalidity of marriage or legal separation, (c) in connection with any case or proceeding where a contingency method of a determination of attorneys' fees is otherwise prohibited by law, the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct, or governmental agency rule, or (d) if it is unconscionable, unreasonable, and unfair.

Source: Amended November 5, 1992, effective January 1, 1993.

Rule 4. Procedure

(a) Before a contingent fee agreement is entered into the attorney shall disclose to the prospective client in writing:

(1) The nature of other types of fee arrangements;

(2) The nature of specially awarded attorney fees;

(3) The nature of expenses and the estimated amount of expenses to handle the matter to conclusion;

(4) The potential for an award of costs and attorneys' fees to the opposing party;

(5) What is meant by "associated counsel"; and

(6) What is meant by "subrogation" and effect of any subrogation interest or lien.

(b) Each contingent fee agreement shall be in writing in duplicate. Each duplicate copy shall be signed both by the attorney and by each client. One signed duplicate copy shall be mailed or delivered to each client within ten days after the making of the agreement. One such copy (and proof that the duplicate copy has been delivered or mailed to the client) shall be retained by the attorney for a period of six years after the completion or settlement of the case or the termination of the services, whichever event first occurs.

(c) A written disbursement statement shall issue to the client at the time of final disbursement.

Source: Entire rule amended and effective January 31, 1992.

ANNOTATION

Rules imposed upon an attorney the absolute burden to ensure that a proper contingent fee agreement is in place. This rule allows for no exception for instances in which an attorney does not comply with the requirement of the rules but simply relies on the client's representation. Fasing v. LaFond, 944 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1997); Hansel-Henderson v. Mullens, 39 P.3d 1200 (Colo. App. 2001), rev'd on other grounds, 65 P.3d 992 (Colo. 2002).

Rule 5. Contents

Each contingent fee agreement shall contain (a) the name and mail address of each client; (b) the name and mail address of the attorney or attorneys to be retained; (c) a statement of the nature of the claim, controversy and other matters with reference to which the services are to be performed; (d) a statement of the contingency upon which the client is to be liable to pay compensation otherwise than from amounts collected for him by the attorney; (e) a statement of the precise percentage to be charged subject to the limitations of Rule 3(d); and (f) a stipulation that the client, except as permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct, including Rule 1.8(e), is to be liable for expenses, such stipulation including an estimate of such expenses, authority of the attorney to incur the expenses and make disbursements, a maximum limitation not to be exceeded without the client's further written authority. The final disbursement statement shall reflect the amount received, expenses incurred in handling of the case and computation of the contingency fee.

Source: Entire rule amended and adopted, effective November 16, 1995.

ANNOTATION

Contract unenforceable where it is silent as to liability when either the attorney unilaterally terminates the agreement or the attorney and the client mutually terminate the agreement, thus failing to expressly include a contingency as required by the rule. Elliott v. Joyce, 889 P.2d 43 (Colo. 1994).

Under section (d) of this rule and rule 6, chapter 23.3 limits recovery to situations in which the contingent fee agreement specifically sets forth circumstances under which the client will be liable. Elliott v. Joyce, 889 P.2d 43 (Colo. 1994).

Attorney may proceed on a quantum meruit claim if outlined in the contingency fee agreement, even if the agreement contains other deficiencies and is unenforceable for purposes of the contingency. As long as the client has some notice of the possibility of equitable recovery should the contingency fail, the agreement cannot prohibit the attorney from seeking such recovery. Language in a contingent fee agreement notifying the client that, upon termination, the attorney may seek recovery based on a predetermined hourly rate provides insufficient notice of the possibility of equitable relief. Dudding v. Norton Frickey & Assocs., 11 P.3d 441 (Colo. 2000).

Attorney earned reasonable attorney fees, despite unenforceable contingency agreement, under quantum meruit. An attorney is entitled to fees under quantum meruit when the agreed upon services are successfully completed but the contingent fee agreement is not in writing. Mullens v. Hansel-Henderson, 65 P.3d 992 (Colo. 2002).

Section (d) applies only to claims in quantum meruit brought against a client. Rule does not bar a claim in quantum meruit against former co-counsel. Hannon Law Firm v. Melat, Pressman & Higbie, 293 P.3d 55 (Colo. App. 2011).

Rule 6. Sanction for Non-Compliance

No contingent fee agreement shall be enforceable by the involved attorney unless there has been substantial compliance with all of the provisions of this Chapter 23.3.

Source: Entire rule amended and adopted May 24, 2001, effective July 1, 2001.

ANNOTATION

Contract unenforceable where it is silent as to liability when either the attorney unilaterally terminates the agreement or the attorney and the client mutually terminate the agreement, thus failing to expressly include a contingency as required by the rule. Elliott v. Joyce, 889 P.2d 43 (Colo. 1994).

Under rule 5(d) and this rule, chapter 23.3 limits recovery to situations in which the contingent fee agreement specifically sets forth circumstances under which the client will be liable. Elliott v. Joyce, 889 P.2d 43 (Colo. 1994).

Rule 7. Forms

The following forms may be used and shall be sufficient. The authorization of these forms shall not prevent use of other forms consistent with this Chapter 23.3.

Form 1
Disclosure Statement

Type of Attorney Fee Agreements:

I have been informed and understand that there are several types of attorney fee arrangements: (1) time based, (2) fixed, (3) contingent, or (4) combinations of these types of fee arrangements. ''Time based'' means a fee that is determined by the amount of time involved such as so much per hour, day or week. ''Fixed'' means a fee that is based on an agreed amount regardless of the time or effort involved or the result obtained. ''Contingent'' means a certain agreed percentage or amount that is payable only upon attaining a recovery regardless of the time or effort involved. I understand that not all attorneys offer all of these different types of fee arrangements, and I acknowledge that I have the right to contact other attorneys to determine if they may provide such other fee arrangements for my case or matter. After such consideration or consultation, I have elected the fee arrangement set forth in the accompanying contingent fee agreement.

Specially Awarded Attorney Fees:

I have been informed and understand that the court or an arbitrator may sometimes award attorney fees in addition to amount of recovery being claimed. I understand that the fee agreement I enter into with my attorney should contain a provision as to how any specially awarded attorney fees will be accounted for and handled.

Expenses:

I have been informed and understand that there may be expenses (aside from any attorney fee) in pursuing my claim. Examples of such expenses are: fees payable to the court, the cost of serving process, fees charged by expert witnesses, fees of investigators, fees of court reporters to take and prepare transcripts of depositions, and expenses involved in preparing exhibits. I understand that an attorney is required to provide me with an estimate of such expenses before I enter into an attorney fee agreement and that my attorney fee agreement should include a provision as to how and when such expenses will be paid. I understand that the fee agreement should tell me whether a fee payable from the proceeds of the amount collected on my behalf will be based on the ''net'' or ''gross'' recovery. ''Net recovery'' means the amount remaining after expenses and deductions. ''Gross recovery'' means the total amount of the recovery before any deductions. The estimated amount of the expenses to handle my case will be set forth in the contingent fee agreement.

The Potential of Costs and Attorney's Fees Being Awarded to The Opposing Party:

I have been informed and understand that a court or arbitrator sometimes awards costs and attorney fees to the opposing party. I have been informed and understand that should that happen in my case, I will be responsible to pay such award. I understand that the fee agreement I enter into with my attorney should provide whether an award against me will be paid out of the proceeds of any amount collected on my behalf. I also understand that the agreement should provide whether the fee I am obligated to pay my attorney will be based on the amount of recovery before or after payment of the awarded costs and attorney fees to an opposing party.

Associated Counsel:

I have been informed and understand that my attorney may sometimes hire another attorney to assist in the handling of a case. That other attorney is called an ''associated counsel.'' I understand that the attorney fee agreement should tell me how the fees of associated counsel will be handled.

Subrogation:

I have been informed and understand that other persons or entities may have a subrogation right in what I recover in pursuing my claim. ''Subrogation'' means the right to be paid back. I understand that the subrogation right may arise in various ways such as when an insurer or a federal or state agency pays money to or on behalf of a claiming party like me in situations such as medicare, medicaid, worker's compensation, medical/health insurance, no-fault insurance, uninsured/underinsured motorist insurance, and property insurance situations. I understand that sometimes a hospital, physician or an attorney will assert a ''lien'' (a priority right) on a claim such as the one I am pursuing. Subrogation rights and liens need to be considered and provided for in the fee agreement I reach with my attorney. The fee agreement should tell me whether the subrogation right or lien is being paid by my attorney out of the proceeds of the recovery made on my behalf and whether the fee I am obligated to pay my attorney will be based on the amount of recovery before or after payment of the subrogation right or lien.

Alternative Attorney Compensation:

I have been informed and understand that if, after entering into a fee agreement with my attorney, I terminate the employment of my attorney or my attorney justifiably withdraws, I may nevertheless be obligated to pay my attorney for the work done by my attorney on my behalf. The fee agreement should contain a provision stating how such alternative compensation, if any, will be handled.

(3) The client is not to be liable to pay compensation otherwise than from amounts collected for the client by the attorney, except as follows:

In the event the client terminates this contingent fee agreement without wrongful conduct by the attorney which would cause the attorney to forfeit any fee, or if the attorney justifiably withdraws from the representation of the client, the attorney may ask the court or other tribunal to order the client to pay the attorney a fee based upon the reasonable value of the services provided by the attorney. If the attorney and the client cannot agree how the attorney is to be compensated in this circumstance, the attorney will request the court or other tribunal to determine: (1) if the client has been unfairly or unjustly enriched if the client does not pay a fee to the attorney; and (2) the amount of the fee owed, taking into account the nature and complexity of the client's case, the time and skill devoted to the client's case by the attorney, and the benefit obtained by the client as a result of the attorney's efforts. Any such fee shall be payable only out of the gross recovery obtained by or on behalf of the client and the amount of such fee shall not be greater than the fee that would have been earned by the attorney if the contingency described in this contingent fee agreement had occurred.

(4) The client will pay the attorney (including any associated counsel) _____*_____ percent of the (gross amount collected) (net amount collected) [indicate which]. COMMITTEE COMMENT

The Rules contained in this Chapter 23.3 set forth the minimum requirements of all enforceable contingency fee agreements in Colorado. The Rules do not prohibit additional terms, provided that such terms are not inconsistent with these Rules or the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct.

One type of provision that is sometimes included in contingent fee agreements is a ''conversion clause.'' A conversion clause is a provision that converts the fee due from the contingent amount set forth in the contract to some other type of fee, often an hourly based fee, when the contract is terminated before the contingency occurs.

There are a number of factors that must be considered to determine the ethical propriety and legal enforceability of a conversion clause. These factors are set forth and analyzed in detail in Formal Opinion 100, issued by the Colorado Bar Association Ethics Committee. Opinions of the CBA Ethics Committee are available on the Internet at www.cobar.org. This Committee notes that any conversion clause that purports to remove the contingency by making the attorney's fees payable without regard to the occurrence of the contingency, is presumptively invalid, unless the client is relatively sophisticated, has the demonstrated means to pay the attorney's fee even before the occurrence of the contingency, and has specifically negotiated the conversion clause.

The Colorado Supreme Court has held that an attorney cannot recover a fee based upon quantum meruit or unjust enrichment, unless the contingent fee agreement provides notice to the client of the possibility of such a fee. Dudding v. Norton Frickey & Associates, 11 P.3d 441 (Colo. 2000). Section (3) of the form Contingent Fee Agreement, which is a part of Chapter 23.3, provides notice to the client of the possibility of a quantum meruit or unjust enrichment fee recovery.

Rules of Procedure for Judicial Bypass of Parental Notification Requirements

CHAPTER 23.5

RULES OF PROCEDURE FOR JUDICIAL BYPASS OF PARENTAL NOTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS

Rule 1. Applicability

This rule applies to proceedings instituted pursuant to Section 12-37.5-107 (2) (g), C.R.S. which allows for judicial bypass of the parental notification requirements set forth in the Colorado Parental Notification Act, Sections 12-37.5-101, et seq. concerning abortions to be performed on unemancipated minors.

Source: Entire chapter added and effective September 18, 2003.

Rule 2. Petition for Waiver of Parental Notification Requirements

(a) Procedure. An unemancipated minor who seeks waiver of the parental notification requirements for an abortion shall file on her own, or have filed on her behalf, a ''petition'' with any district court or Denver Juvenile Court (both hereinafter referred to as ''district court''), as provided in Rule 6 (Form 1) of these rules. These rules of procedure and forms, as well as instructions for using the judicial bypass procedure, shall be available free of charge at the offices of all clerks of the state district courts and on the Judicial Department's official website (www.courts.state.co.us). The clerk of court's office shall provide assistance to minors seeking to file a judicial bypass petition in a manner that protects the minor's right to anonymity and confidentiality in the proceedings.

(b) Expedited Proceedings. Court proceedings under this rule shall be given preference over other pending matters and shall be heard and decided as soon as practicable but in no event later than four calendar days after the petition was filed. If the court fails to act within four calendar days, the court in which the proceeding is pending shall immediately issue an order setting forth that the parental notification requirements have been dispensed with by operation of law, pursuant to Section 12-37.5-107 (2) (f), C.R.S.

(c) Setting. At the time the petition is filed, the clerk shall immediately transfer the court file to the assigned judge for setting and inform the person filing the petition of the date, time and location of the hearing. The hearing shall be set as soon as practicable but in no event later than four calendar days after the date of filing. The hearing time shall accommodate the minor's schedule as practicable and shall be set before a district court or Denver juvenile court judge, and not a magistrate.

(d) Transfer of Court File. At the time the petition is filed, the clerk shall place the petition in a sealed envelope marked ''SEALED MATERIALS - CONFIDENTIAL'' identifying the file by case number only. The envelope shall be date stamped and forwarded immediately to the assigned judge for setting of the hearing. The clerk shall inform the judge of the four-day time limitation for the case and of any request for counsel and/or a guardian ad litem at that time.

(e) Contents of Petition. The petition shall include the following:

(1) the name and age of the minor;

(2) the length of the pregnancy;

(3) information to establish that the minor is unemancipated;

(4) a statement concerning whether the minor has been informed of the risks and consequences of the abortion;

(5) a statement that the minor seeks to have an abortion without notifying her parent(s), guardian or foster parent;

(6) the name, address and telephone number of the attending physician should the minor request to have the court inform the physician directly of its decision;

(7) a statement that the minor is sufficiently mature to decide whether to have an abortion without the notification of her parent(s), guardian or foster parent, and/or that parental notification would not be in her best interest;

(8) any request for court appointed counsel and/or a guardian ad litem; and

(9) contact information for confidential notification by the court of any court proceedings and/or rulings.

(f) Grounds for Waiver. In review of the petition, the court shall enter an order dispensing with the notice requirements of Section 12-37.5-104, C.R.S. if:

(1) the court determines, by clear and convincing evidence, that the minor is sufficiently mature to decide whether to have an abortion; or

(2) the court determines, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the giving of parental notice would not be in the best interest of the minor.

(g) Orders. Any order allowing for or denying a waiver of the parental notification requirements, either on the record or in writing, shall include specific factual and legal conclusions in support of the decision. The order shall issue within four calendar days of the filing of the petition. If the court fails to act within four days, an order shall immediately be issued by the court setting forth that the parental notification requirements have been dispensed with by operation of law. A certified copy of any order issued shall be provided to the minor by the method requested in the petition, the minor's attorney, if represented, and the guardian ad litem, if one has been appointed. A certified copy of the order also shall be provided to the attending physician of the minor, as set forth in the petition. If the court denies the petition, the minor and/or her attorney, if she is represented, shall be notified of the right to appeal and provided with a copy of the notice of appeal form (Form 3) contained in Rule 6 of these rules.

(h) Appointment of Counsel and/or Guardian Ad Litem. The court may appoint counsel for the minor, if she is not represented. In addition, the court may appoint a guardian ad litem for the minor. Any appointed attorney or guardian ad litem shall be retained at no cost to the minor, shall act within the time frames provided in these rules and shall maintain the confidentiality of the court record and proceedings.

Source: Entire chapter added and effective September 18, 2003.

Rule 3. Appeal to the Court of Appeals

(a) Procedure. An appeal of an order denying a petition filed under these rules may be made to the Colorado Court of Appeals by the minor, or someone acting on her behalf, by promptly filing a ''notice of appeal,'' as provided in Rule 6 (Form 3) of these rules. A copy of the district court order shall be attached to the notice of appeal. An advisory copy of the notice of appeal shall be filed with the district court. The appeal shall be decided on the record. A petitioner brief may be filed but is not required. Oral argument may be held at the discretion of the court.

(b) Setting. Upon receipt of the notice of appeal, the clerk of the Court of Appeals shall immediately request a transcript or any analog or digital recording of the district court proceedings. The clerk of the district court shall arrange for preparation of the transcript directly with the reporter if the proceeding was stenographically recorded. The clerk of the district court shall certify the contents and forward the entire district court file, including any prepared transcript or recording, in its sealed envelope to the clerk of the Court of Appeals via overnight or hand delivery forthwith, to be received in no event later than 48 hours after the notice of appeal was filed.

(c) Decision. A decision shall issue no later than five calendar days after the notice of appeal was filed. If no decision is rendered within five days, the court shall immediately issue an order setting forth that the parental notification requirements have been dispensed with by operation of law, pursuant to Section 12-37.5-107 (2) (f), C.R.S. A certified copy of any order issued shall be provided to the minor by the method requested in the petition, the minor's attorney, if represented, and the guardian ad litem, if one has been appointed. A certified copy of the order also shall be provided to the attending physician of the minor, as set forth in the petition.

Source: Entire chapter added and effective September 18, 2003.

Rule 4. No Fees or Costs

No court fees or costs of any kind, including transcript fees, shall be assessed against the minor in connection with the filing of the petition or an appeal pursuant to these rules.

Source: Entire chapter added and effective September 18, 2003.

Rule 5. Confidentiality of Court Record and Proceedings

(a) Court proceedings. All district court and appellate court proceedings shall be closed to the public. All hearings shall be held in a location where there is privacy and limited access.

(b) Court record. The entire district court and appellate court record relating to the petition, excluding any published decisions but including, without limitation, the petition, pleadings, submissions, transcripts, court reporter notes and tapes, tape recordings, exhibits, orders, evidence, findings, conclusions, and any other material to be maintained, shall be stored in a closed file contained in a sealed envelope and conspicuously marked ''SEALED MATERIALS - CONFIDENTIAL.'' The envelope shall be identified within the clerk's office only through reference to the case number. Access to the court file shall be limited to essential court personnel, the minor, the minor's attorney, any appointed guardian ad litem, and/or the court for use only in connection with court proceedings conducted under these rules. The court record shall not be open to public inspection or public disclosure, unless otherwise ordered by the court.

Source: Entire chapter added and effective September 18, 2003.

Rule 6. Forms

The following forms may be used and shall be sufficient. The authorization of these forms shall not prevent the use of other forms which substantively comply with the requirements of these rules of procedure.

CHAPTER 24

The Colorado Rules of Judicial Discipline

Repealed and Reenacted by the

SUPREME COURT OF COLORADO

March 22, 2012,

Effective Immediately

PART D. DISPOSITIONS AND SANCTIONS

PART E. SUPREME COURT ACTION

CHAPTER 24

COLORADO RULES OF JUDICIAL DISCIPLINE

PART A. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Rule 1. Scope, Objectives and Title

(a) Scope. The Colorado Rules of Judicial Discipline (the ''Rules'') apply to all of the responsibilities and proceedings of the Colorado Commission on Judicial Discipline (the ''Commission''), pursuant to Article VI, Section 23(3) of the Colorado Constitution (the ''Constitution''), involving the removal, retirement, suspension, censure, reprimand, or other discipline of judges, and disabilities affecting the performance of their judicial duties.

(b) Constitutional Mandate. The Constitutional mandate of the Commission is to protect the public from improper conduct of judges; preserve the integrity of the judicial process; maintain public confidence in the judiciary; create a greater awareness of proper judicial behavior on the part of the judiciary and the public; and provide for the fair and expeditious disposition of complaints of judicial misconduct or judicial disabilities.

(c) Title. These Rules shall be known and cited as the Colorado Rules of Judicial Discipline or Colo. RJD.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''The New Commission on Judicial Discipline'', see 38 Colo. Law. 85 (Nov. 2009).

Rule 2. Definitions

In these rules, unless the context or subject matter otherwise requires:

(a) The term ''Judge'' means any justice or judge of any court of record of this state serving on a full time, part-time, senior, or retired basis against whom a complaint has been filed or initiated or who has been convicted of a felony or an offense involving moral turpitude. This definition does not include judges of the county court of the City and County of Denver, whose conduct is monitored and disciplined by the Denver County Court Judicial Discipline Commission; municipal judges; magistrates; or administrative law judges. The conduct of an attorney serving as a municipal judge, magistrate, or administrative law judge is subject to the disciplinary and disability jurisdiction of Attorney Regulation under Colo. RPC 251.1(b).

(b) ''Attorney Regulation'' means the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel.

(c) ''Chair'' means a member elected by the Commission to administer the business of the Commission and preside at all meetings of the Commission, any member appointed to preside at a hearing, or any person designated as ''acting chair.''

(d) ''Code,'' ''Canons,'' or ''Canon Rules'' mean the provisions of the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct as amended.

(e) ''Colo. RPC'' means the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct.

(f) ''Complaint'' means allegations that provide grounds for the Commission to conduct disability or disciplinary proceedings.

(g) ''Complainant'' means a person who initiates a complaint by requesting an evaluation of judicial conduct.

(h) ''C.R.C.P.'' means the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

(i) ''Disability'' means a Judge's physical or mental condition that adversely affects the Judge's ability to serve as a judicial officer or to assist with his or her defense in disciplinary proceedings.

(j) "Executive director" means the person appointed by the Commission whose duties and responsibilities are described in Rule 3(d).

(k) "Formal proceedings" means disciplinary proceedings that could result in a recommendation for a public sanction.

(l) "Grounds" means the basis for disciplinary proceedings in Rule 5 or for disability proceedings in Rule 33.5.

(m) "Hearing" means a meeting of the Commission or special masters convened for the purpose of taking evidence or considering legal arguments.

(n) "Informal proceedings" means proceedings that could result in informal remedial action or the appointment of special counsel to advise the Commission regarding other options, including advice on whether there is probable cause to commence formal proceedings.

(o) "Mail" or "mailed" means first-class mail, personal delivery, or delivery by commercial mail service.

(p) "Meeting" means an assembly of the Commission or special masters in person or by conference call or any combination thereof.

(q) "Member" means a member or special member of the Commission.

(r) "Misconduct" means conduct by a Judge that does not comply with the Code or Colo. RJD.

(s) "Notice" means a letter or other writing sent by mail, unless otherwise specified in the Rules, to a Judge at the Judge's chambers or last known residence, to an address designated by the Judge, or to the Judge's counsel of record.

(t) "Participant" means a member, special member, the executive director, Commission staff, complainant, Judge, the Judge's counsel, special counsel, special master, witness, investigator, or any other person who obtains knowledge of a proceeding in the course of an investigation or prosecution by the Commission.

(u) "Party" means the Commission, special counsel, the Judge, or the Judge's counsel.

(v) "Presenter" means one or more members who are designated by the Commission or by the executive director to evaluate and report on a complaint to the Commission.

(w) "Proceedings" means informal or formal proceedings, including, but not limited to, consideration of a request for evaluation of judicial conduct; the investigation of a complaint; a meeting or hearing of or with the Commission, its staff, special counsel, or special masters; a disciplinary disposition; a disciplinary sanction; a disability disposition; or a communication with respect thereto.

(x) "SCAO" means the Office of the State Court Administrator.

(y) "Request for evaluation of judicial conduct" or "request" means a request by a complainant for the Commission to consider whether there is a reasonable basis for the commencement of disciplinary or disability proceedings.

(z) "Rules" as cited herein means Colo. RJD.

(aa) "Special counsel" means an attorney or attorneys appointed by the Commission to serve as counsel to the Commission on such matters as the Commission may request including, but not limited to, the investigation or disposition of a complaint, a motion for temporary suspension of a Judge under Rule 34, and the prosecution of a complaint in formal proceedings.

(cc) "Special members" are persons appointed by the Commission to serve as alternates to members.

(dd) "Supreme Court" or "Court" means the Colorado Supreme Court.

Source: Entire rule amended except (b) and (e) to (m) and effective December 10, 2014; entire rule amended April 20, 2017, effective July 1, 2017.

Rule 3. Organization and Administration

(a) Composition. The Commission shall be made up of ten members as provided in the Constitution.

(b) Officers. The Commission shall elect from its membership a chair, a vice-chair, and a secretary, each of whom shall serve renewable one-year terms from January 1 to December 31 each year. The vice-chair shall act as chair in the absence of the chair, and in the absence of both, the members present may select an acting chair. An officer's position and authority shall continue beyond his or her term of office until a successor is duly elected.

(c) Special Members. The Commission may appoint a special member to serve in the place of a member who recuses or is disqualified with respect to a complaint, or who may be temporarily unable to perform his or her duties as a member.

(d) Executive Director. The Commission shall appoint an executive director whose duties and responsibilities, subject to general oversight by the Commission, shall be to:

(1) Establish and maintain a permanent office;

(2) Respond to inquiries about the Commission or the Canons;

(3) Process requests for evaluation of judicial conduct;

(4) Conduct investigations;

(5) Recommend dispositions;

(6) Maintain Commission records;

(7) Maintain statistics concerning the operation of the Commission and make them available to the Commission and to the Supreme Court;

(8) Prepare the Commission's budget and administer its funds;

(9) Employ the Commission's staff;

(10) Prepare an annual report of the Commission's activities for presentation to the Commission, to the Supreme Court, and to the public;

(11) Employ special counsel, investigators, or other experts as necessary to investigate and process matters before the Commission and before the Supreme Court; and

(12) Perform such other duties as these Rules, the Commission, or the Supreme Court may require.

(e) Meetings. Meetings shall be held at the call of the chair, the vice-chair, or the executive director, or at the request of three members of the Commission. The Commission may conduct meetings in person or by conference call.

(f) Quorum. Six members must be present in person or by conference call for the transaction of business by the Commission.

Source: (b) and (d) amended and effective December 10, 2014; (d)IP, (d)(2), and (d)(3) amended April 20, 2017, effective July 1, 2017.

Rule 4. Jurisdiction and Powers

(a) Jurisdiction.

(1) Filing Date. The Commission has jurisdiction over a Judge regarding allegations of misconduct or a disability and the application of dispositions and sanctions thereto, based on events that occurred while the Judge was an active or senior judge, if a request for evaluation of judicial conduct is received by the Commission (or a complaint is commenced on the Commission's motion) (A) during the Judge's term of office or within one year following the end of the judge's term of office or the effective date of the Judge's retirement or resignation, with respect to alleged misconduct or disability occurring during the Judge's term of office; or (B) during the Judge's service in the senior judge program or within one year following the end of the Judge's service in the senior judge program, with respect to alleged misconduct or disability occurring during the Judge's service in the senior judge program.

(2) Continuing Jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of the Commission to fulfill its Constitutional mandate under of Rule 1(b) regarding a pending disciplinary or disability proceeding shall not terminate upon the expiration of the Judge's term of office, the Judge's retirement or resignation, or the appointment or reappointment of the Judge to the senior judge program. Such jurisdiction shall continue until a disposition or sanction is determined.

(b) Attorney Regulation. Conduct by a Judge or former Judge that involves grounds for disciplinary action under Rule 5 and/or may involve grounds for a violation of Colo.

RPC may be referred by the Commission to Attorney Regulation. Such referral shall not preclude the Commission from proceedings concerning conduct under its jurisdiction coincident with Attorney Regulation's jurisdiction over violations of Colo. RPC. Nothing in these Rules shall be construed to limit the jurisdiction of Attorney Regulation over an attorney with respect to conduct subject to Colo. RPC, which occurred before, during, or after the attorney's service as a judge.

(c) General Powers. The Commission shall have the authority and duty to investigate and resolve complaints in accordance with the Constitution and these Rules.

(d) Evidentiary Powers. Any member or special master may administer oaths and affirmations, compel by subpoena the attendance and testimony of witnesses, including the Judge as a witness, and provide for the inspection of documents, books, accounts, and other records.

(e) Contempt Powers. A Judge's refusal to comply with a disposition ordered under Colo. RJD 35 or the willful misconduct of a Judge or any other person during any stage of the Commission's investigation or consideration of a complaint in informal, formal, or disability proceedings, including, but not limited to, misrepresentation of a material fact, resistance to or obstruction of any lawful process, disruptive behavior, breach of confidentiality, or failure to comply with any of these Rules, may be grounds for direct or indirect contempt, as provided in C.R.C.P. 107. In formal proceedings or disability proceedings, direct contempt may be addressed summarily by the special masters. To address allegations of indirect contempt, the Commission shall request the Supreme Court to appoint a special master. The Commission shall be represented in contempt proceedings by special counsel who shall file a motion with the special master, verified by the executive director or a member of the Commission, alleging the grounds for contempt. The special master may ex parte order a citation to issue to the person charged to appear and show cause at a designated date, time, and place why the person should not be held in contempt. The motion and citation shall be served on the person charged at least seven days before the time required for the person to appear before the special master. The special master shall conduct a hearing and file recommended findings of fact and conclusions of law regarding the alleged contempt with the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court shall consider the special master's recommendations and dismiss the citation or order remedial or punitive sanctions as it deems appropriate under C.R.C.P. 107.

(f) Administrative Powers. The Commission may adopt administrative policies, procedural rules, or forms for its internal operation or proceedings that do not conflict with the provisions of these Rules.

(g) Communications. The Commission may distribute information to the judiciary and the public concerning its authority and procedures.

Source: (a) amended and effective December 10, 2014; (a)(1) and (e) amended April 20, 2017, effective July 1, 2017.

Rule 5. Grounds for Discipline

(a) In General. Grounds for judicial discipline shall include:

(1) Willful misconduct in office, including misconduct which, although not related to judicial duties, brings the judicial office into disrepute or is prejudicial to the administration of justice;

(2) Willful or persistent failure to perform judicial duties, including incompetent performance of judicial duties;

(3) Intemperance, including extreme or immoderate personal conduct; recurring loss of temper or control; abuse of alcohol, prescription drugs, or other legal substances; or the use of illegal or non-prescribed narcotic or mind-altering drugs; or

(4) Any conduct that constitutes a violation of the Code.

(b) Failure to Cooperate During Proceedings. A Judge's failure to cooperate with the Commission during the investigation or consideration of a complaint may be grounds for discipline.

(c) Failure to Comply with a Commission Order. A Judge's failure or refusal to comply with an order issued under these Rules during disciplinary proceedings or with a disciplinary order resulting from such proceedings may be (i) grounds for initial or supplemental disciplinary measures or (ii) probable cause to proceed with formal proceedings.

(d) Contempt Proceedings not Precluded. Determinations by the Commission under sections (b) and (c) of this Rule are in addition to and do not preclude contempt proceedings under Rule 4(e).

(e) Misconduct Distinguished from Disputed Rulings. A dispute regarding a Judge's rulings on motions, evidence, procedure, or sentencing; a Judge's findings of fact and conclusions of law; or other matters that are within the jurisdiction of the trial or appellate courts to resolve shall not provide a basis for disciplinary proceedings, unless the Judge's conduct in presiding over the case involves one or more of the grounds provided in this Rule.

Source: (c), (d), and (e) amended April 20, 2017, effective July 1, 2017.

ANNOTATION

Delay by district court judge in issuing a decision constituted a willful or persistent failure to perform judicial duty in violation of paragraph (a)(2). In re Jones, 728 P.2d 311 (Colo. 1986).

Rule 6. [Reserved]

[Confidentiality and Privilege revised and restated in 2012 as Rule 6.5.]

Rule 6.5. Confidentiality and Privilege

(a) Confidentiality. The proceedings of the Commission and special masters, including all papers, investigative notes and reports, pleadings, and other written or electronic records, shall be confidential unless and until the Commission files a recommendation with the Supreme Court under Rule 37. The recommendation and the record of proceedings shall thereupon become public, subject to the limitations provided in Rule 37. The Supreme Court may enter a protective order requiring that certain portions of the record remain confidential upon a showing of good cause by the Commission, special counsel, special masters, or the Judge.

(b) Privilege. Papers or pleadings filed with the Commission, the work product of investigations, testimony given in proceedings, minutes and decisions of the Commission, records of special counsel, hearings conducted by the special masters, and the report of the special masters are privileged and, therefore, cannot be the subject of any legal action against a participant, including a claim for defamation.

(c) Disability Proceedings. In disability proceedings, all orders transferring a Judge to or from disability inactive status shall be matters of public record; otherwise, disability proceedings shall remain confidential and shall not be made public, except by order of the Supreme Court.

(d) Disclosures. Subject to certification, when required by subsection (e)(2) of this Rule, confidentiality does not apply to (i) the disclosure of the records and proceedings reasonably necessary for the Commission or the executive director to fulfill the Commission's Constitutional mandate under Rule 1(b) or (ii) disclosures in the interest of justice or public safety, including the following:

(1) Disclosure of the allegations in a complaint and related materials reasonably necessary to conduct the investigation of the complaint;

(2) When the Commission has determined that there is a demonstrated need to notify another person in order to protect that person; or to notify an appropriate government agency, including law enforcement or Attorney Regulation, in order to protect the public or the judiciary or to further the administration of justice;

(3) In response to an inquiry by the Supreme Court or SCAO concerning the qualifications of a Judge for appointment or reappointment to other judicial responsibilities (including the senior judge program), by an agency or official authorized to evaluate the qualifications of a Judge who has applied for or has been nominated for another judicial position, or by the Governor with respect to the qualifications of a Judge recommended by a nominating commission for appointment to another judicial position, the Commission shall disclose disciplinary dispositions under Rule 35 (other than complaints resulting in dismissals) and sanctions under Rule 36, together with the status of any pending complaints directed at the Judge which the Commission, as of the date of such request, is investigating under Rule 14;

(4) In response to an inquiry by the Office of Judicial Performance Evaluation (''Judicial Performance'') if the Commission determines, in its discretion, that disclosure to Judicial Performance is consistent with its Constitutional mandate under Rule 1(b) and on the condition that Judicial Performance will not publicly disclose such information or its source without independent verification by Judicial Performance;

(5) When a Judge has been convicted of a crime or has become subject to disciplinary measures taken by Attorney Regulation or a similar agency in another jurisdiction;

(6) Upon request of an agency authorized to investigate the qualifications of persons for admission to practice law;

(7) Upon request of any attorney discipline enforcement agency;

(8) Upon request of any law enforcement agency;

(9) Upon a Judge's written waiver of confidentiality and consent to disclosure; or

(10) When the Commission or the executive director has knowledge of potential grounds for misconduct under state or federal law, a chief justice directive, or other rule applicable to the conduct of an employee of the state judicial branch (other than a Judge) and provides such information to SCAO.

(e) When Certification Required.

(1) The Commission is permitted to disclose nonpublic information pursuant to subsections (d)(1) through (d)(5) of this Rule without prior notice to, or waiver and consent by, the Judge.

(2) The Commission is permitted to provide nonpublic information requested pursuant to subsections (d)(6) through (d)(8) of this Rule without prior notice to, or waiver and consent by, the Judge, only if a senior official of the requesting agency provides a verified certificate to the Commission on the agency's letterhead in support of its request, which addresses:

(i) Whether there is an ongoing investigation of (A) alleged misconduct by the Judge, (B) an alleged violation of federal or state law, or (C) the Judge's qualifications to practice law;

(ii) The reasons the information is essential to that investigation;

(iii) Whether the agency has attempted to obtain the Judge's waiver of confidentiality and consent to disclosure or why a request for waiver and consent would be inappropriate or impractical;

(iv) Why disclosure of the existence of the investigation to the Judge would significantly prejudice the investigation; and

(v) Other factors relevant to the request.

(3) If an agency authorized to request disclosure by subsections (d)(6) through (d)(8) of this Rule has not obtained a waiver and consent from the Judge or provided the certification required in subsection (e)(2), then the Commission may decline the request or may notify the Judge in writing of the request which identifies the requesting agency and describes the information proposed to be released. The notice shall advise the Judge that the Commission will release the information, unless the Judge objects to the disclosure within fourteen days after mailing of the notice. If the Judge objects to the disclosure, then the information shall remain confidential unless, upon motion by the requesting agency or the Commission with notice to the Judge, the Supreme Court enters an order requiring release.

(f) Prior Discipline. In investigating a complaint, determining a disposition under Rule 35, or in recommending a sanction under Rule 36, the Commission and special masters may consider the record of any discipline previously imposed on the Judge by the Commission or the Supreme Court.

(g) Public Knowledge. The Commission or the Judge, by motion filed with the Supreme Court, may assert that allegations of misconduct, the commencement of informal or formal proceedings, and/or the disposition of such proceedings have become generally known to the public and, in the interest of justice, should be publicly disclosed. The Judge or the Commission shall have 14 days to object to or request modifications to the proposed disclosure. The Supreme Court, in its discretion, may deny such motion or order the disclosure as proposed or with such modifications as it deems necessary. Notwithstanding the disclosure of the nature, status, and result of the proceedings, the Commission's records, including but not limited to investigative reports, correspondence, and pleadings, shall remain confidential unless and until the Commission files a recommendation for sanctions in formal proceedings to the Supreme Court under Rule 37(c) or the Commission and the Judge stipulate to the resolution of formal proceedings under Rule 37(e).

(h) Summaries. In the annual report required by Rule 3(d)(10), the Commission may publish summaries of proceedings which have resulted in disciplinary dispositions or sanctions. A summary may include a brief statement of facts, references to the applicable Canons or Canon Rules, and a description of the disciplinary action taken, but shall not disclose the date or location of the factual basis for the disciplinary measures or the identity of the Judge, the complainant, witnesses, or other parties to the proceedings.

(i) Duty of Officials and Employees. All officials and employees within the Commission, the executive director's office, special counsel's office, special masters' offices, and the Supreme Court shall conduct themselves in a manner that maintains the confidentiality mandated by these Rules.

Editor's note: Section (f) was added and sections (g) and (h) were deleted, resulting in the relettering of sections (g) to (i).

Rule 7. Notice of Action

Upon termination of any proceedings hereunder, the Judge, the Judge's counsel, special counsel, and the complainant shall be notified of the action taken by the Commission or the Supreme Court and all participants shall be advised of the confidentiality of Commission proceedings.

Rule 8. Service

(a) Service on Judge. All papers and pleadings in proceedings may be served on a Judge in person or by mail, except that a notice of formal charges served by mail must be served by certified mail. Mail shall be sent to the chambers or last known residence of a Judge, or to an address designated by the Judge. If counsel has been designated for a Judge, all notices, papers, and pleadings may be served on the Judge's counsel in lieu of service upon the Judge.

(b) Service on Commission. Service of papers and pleadings on the Commission or any member shall be by delivering or mailing the papers to the Commission's office.

(c) Service on Special Counsel. Service of papers and pleadings on special counsel shall be by delivery or mail to special counsel's office.

(d) When Service Accomplished. When service is by mail, a pleading or other document is timely served if mailed within the time permitted for service.

Source: (c) amended April 20, 2017, effective July 1, 2017.

Rule 8.5. Procedural Rights of Judge

(a) Counsel. A Judge may confer with and be represented by counsel at any stage of disciplinary or disability proceedings. If counsel has entered an appearance, all communications and pleadings from the Commission, the executive director, and special counsel shall be directed to the Judge's counsel. In formal proceedings and disability proceedings, a Judge may testify, introduce evidence, and examine and cross-examine witnesses, and the Judge's counsel may introduce evidence and examine and cross-examine witnesses.

(b) Guardian ad litem. If it appears to the Commission at any time that a Judge may not be competent to act, the Commission shall appoint a guardian ad litem for the Judge at the Commission's expense. The guardian ad litem may claim and exercise any right or privilege that could be claimed or exercised by the Judge, including the selection of counsel, a request for an independent medical examination, or the commencement of disability proceedings under Rule 33.5. Any notice to be served on the Judge shall also be served on the guardian ad litem.

Rule 9. Disqualification of an Interested Party

A Judge who is a member shall be disqualified from participation in any proceedings involving the Judge's own discipline or disability. A justice of the Supreme Court shall be disqualified from participating in formal proceedings concerning the justice's own discipline or disability. A member or the executive director may recuse himself or herself in any proceeding involving a Judge who is a close personal acquaintance, their current or recent professional or business associate, or where there are other actual or potential conflicts of interest.

Rule 10. Immunity

Members, the executive director, Commission staff, its investigators, special counsel, and special masters shall be absolutely immune from suit for all conduct in the course of their official duties.

Rule 11. Amendment of Rules

The Commission may petition the Supreme Court to amend or alter these Rules as may be necessary to implement the Commission's Constitutional mandate. Any person may request the adoption, amendment, or repeal of a Rule by filing a petition with the Commission describing the proposed change.

PART B. INFORMAL PROCEEDINGS

Rule 12. Request for Evaluation of Judicial Conduct

To initiate a complaint, any person or organization may request that the Commission examine a Judge's conduct. The request should identify the Judge, the person or organization making the request, and describe conduct by the Judge that may involve grounds for disciplinary or disability proceedings. A request may be in any format; however, the Commission shall prepare and distribute printed forms to guide a complainant in making a request for evaluation of judicial conduct. Commission staff will make reasonable accommodations for a person with disabilities in preparing and filing a request.

Source: Entire rule amended and adopted April 20, 2017, effective July 1, 2017.

Rule 13. Preliminary Proceedings

(a) Evaluation of the Request. The executive director or one or more members of the Commission, upon receipt and without undue delay, shall evaluate each request to determine whether it alleges sufficient grounds for the Commission to consider disciplinary or disability proceedings. The evaluation may include a preliminary review of documentation, including court records.

(b) Complaint. If the members of the Commission, based on an evaluation of the request, conclude that there is a reasonable basis for disciplinary or disability proceedings, the Commission shall process the request as a complaint under these Rules.

(c) Absence of a Reasonable Basis for a Complaint. The executive director or members of the Commission shall close the matter without further consideration, if:

(1) The request does not allege sufficient grounds for disciplinary or disability proceedings;

(2) The request disputes a Judge's rulings on motions, evidence, procedure, or sentencing; a Judge's findings of fact and conclusions of law; or other matters that are within the jurisdiction of the trial or appellate courts to resolve, without providing grounds for disciplinary or disability proceedings;

(3) The allegations are frivolous; or

(4) The allegations involve subject matter that is not within the jurisdiction of the Commission.

(d) Reply to the Request. The executive director or a member of the Commission shall provide a written explanation to the complainant of the results of its evaluation.

(e) Reports from Other Offices. In its evaluation and any subsequent proceedings, the Commission may consider relevant information contained in (1) a report of an investigation by SCAO regarding the conduct of a Judge and/or other employees of the judicial branch or (2) a report by Attorney Regulation regarding (i) the misconduct of an attorney who has been appointed as a Judge or (ii) attorney misconduct that involves a Judge.

(f) Complaints Initiated by the Commission. The Commission on its own motion, based on information it deems reliable, may determine that there is a reasonable basis on which to initiate a complaint. The Commission shall process such a complaint in the same manner as other complaints.

Rule 14. Investigation and Notice to Judge

(a) Notice to Judge. As soon as practicable, after the members of the Commission have concluded that the allegations are sufficient to be processed as a complaint, the Commission shall provide written notice to the Judge of the allegations and commence an investigation. A copy of the Rules shall be included with the notice or incorporated by reference into the notice. The Commission is not required to notify a Judge of a request for evaluation that the Commission determined to be insufficient for consideration as a complaint.

(b) Investigation. The Commission's investigation may include interviews; an examination of pleadings, orders, transcripts, and other court records; and consideration of other evidence relevant to the allegations. The Commission or the executive director, in its, his, or her discretion, may determine when the complainant should be notified of the investigation.

(c) Expedited Notice and Investigation. If the request alleges an unreasonable delay in performing judicial duties or other circumstances which, in the good faith judgment of the executive director, require immediate commencement of disciplinary or disability proceedings, the executive director may process the request as a complaint, notify the Judge, and begin the investigation without the prior approval of the members of the Commission.

(d) Judge's Response. The Judge shall be afforded a reasonable opportunity to provide a written response to the allegations or to appear before the Commission.

(e) Temporary Suspension. The Commission may request the temporary suspension of a Judge under Rule 34 during an investigation.

Rule 15. Independent Medical Examination

If the preliminary evaluation or the investigation indicates that a Judge may have a physical or mental condition which significantly impairs his or her performance of judicial duties, the Commission may order the Judge to submit to one or more independent examinations by physicians or other persons with appropriate professional qualifications, who shall report their findings and recommendations to the Commission.

Rule 16. Determination

(a) Summary. The executive director or the Commission shall appoint a member to serve as the presenter who shall provide a summary of an investigation, including the allegations, the Judge's response, and other relevant evidence, to the other members.

(b) Decision. The Commission shall consider the summary of the investigation and by majority vote of the members participating in person and by conference call, exclusive of the presenter, dismiss the complaint under Rule 35(a) or take one of, or a combination of any of, the following measures:

(1) Apply a private disciplinary disposition under subsections (c) through (i) of Rule 33.5;

(2) Initiate disability proceedings under Rule 33.5;

(3) Request a temporary suspension of the Judge under Rule 34; or

(4) Appoint special counsel to review the summary, conduct such further investigation as may be appropriate, and advise the Commission regarding its options to address the allegations; and, upon consideration of special counsel's advice, dismiss the complaint, adopt a private disciplinary disposition, initiate disability proceedings, request a temporary suspension of the Judge pending further proceedings, determine that probable cause exists for the commencement of formal proceedings, or continue the investigation.

(c) Standard of Proof. The standard of proof for a decision under section (b) of this Rule shall be the preponderance of the evidence.

Source: Entire rule amended and effective December 10, 2014.

Rule 17. Disqualification of a Judge

When a complaint is filed against a Judge, the Commission may order the Judge disqualified, on request of the complainant or on the Commission's own motion, in any litigation in which the complainant is involved. Disqualification will be ordered only when the circumstances warrant such relief. After completion of the disqualifying litigation, the order for disqualification shall terminate unless extended by the Commission.

PART C. FORMAL PROCEEDINGS

Rule 18. Statement of Charges, Notice, and Pleadings in Formal Proceedings

(a) Commencement of Formal Proceedings, Statement of Charges, and Notice. Special counsel shall commence formal proceedings in the name of the People of the State of Colorado by serving a statement of charges together with a notice of formal charges on the Judge. The case shall be captioned ''In re the Matter of the People of the State of Colorado, Complainant, and Judge [name], Respondent.''

(1) The statement of charges shall state in ordinary and concise language the grounds for the charges with specific reference to the alleged misconduct and applicable Canons, Canon Rules, or Colo. RJD. The notice shall advise the Judge of his or her right to file an answer to the statement of charges, which shall include a response to each allegation together with applicable affirmative defenses or mitigation factors.

(2) Pleadings in formal proceedings shall follow the general format for civil pleadings. The statement of charges, notice of formal charges, the originals of all pleadings, and the orders of the special masters shall be filed in the office of the executive director, who shall maintain the record of proceedings.

(b) Role of Special Counsel in Formal Proceedings. At all times during formal proceedings, special counsel shall represent the People and shall inform the Commission periodically concerning the status of the proceedings.

Source: Entire rule amended and effective December 10, 2014.

Rule 18.5. Special Masters

(a) Appointment. After special counsel has served the statement of charges and notice of formal charges on the Judge and filed copies thereof with the executive director, the Commission shall request the Supreme Court to appoint three special masters to preside over formal proceedings who shall hear and take evidence concerning the charges and provide a report to the Commission in accordance with the Constitution and these Rules. The appointees may be retired justices or active or retired judges of courts of record, who have no conflicts of interest and who are able to serve diligently and impartially as special masters. Unless otherwise designated, the judge or justice first named in the Supreme Court's order shall be the presiding special master. The presiding special master is authorized to act on behalf of the special masters in resolving pre-hearing issues, including but not limited to discovery disputes; conducting pre-hearing conferences; and ruling on evidentiary, procedural, and legal issues that arise during hearings.

(b) One Special Master. The Commission may request the Supreme Court to appoint one special master for designated purposes in any proceeding.

Rule 19. Response of Judge

The Judge shall file a response to the statement of charges with the executive director within 21 days after service of the statement of charges and notice of formal charges. The special masters may consider the failure or refusal to respond as an admission of the charges.

Source: Entire rule amended and effective December 10, 2014.

Rule 20. Setting for Hearing

After the filing of the Judge's response under Rule 19, or if the Judge does not file a response under Rule 19, the presiding special master shall order that the formal proceedings are at issue and shall schedule a hearing regarding the matters contained in the statement of charges and the response, if any. The special masters shall serve notice on all parties of the location and date of the hearing, which shall begin no later than 91 days after the at issue date, unless extended for good cause by order of the presiding special master.

Rule 21. [Reserved]

[Discovery revised and restated in 2012 as Rule 21.5.]

Rule 21.5. Discovery

(a) Purpose and Scope. Rule 21.5 shall govern discovery in judicial discipline and disability proceedings. C.R.C.P. 26 shall not apply to such proceedings, except as provided in this Rule or as ordered by the presiding special master.

(b) Meeting. A meeting of the parties shall be held no later than 14 days after the case is at issue to confer with each other about the nature and basis of the claims and defenses and discuss the matters to be disclosed.

(c) Disclosures. No later than 21 days after the case is at issue, the parties shall disclose:

(1) The name and, if known, the address, and telephone number of each person likely to have discoverable information relevant to disputed facts alleged in the pleadings, and the nature of the information;

(2) A listing, together with a copy or description of all documents, written or electronic records, and tangible things in the possession, custody, or control of the Commission or the Judge that are relevant to the disputed facts in the proceedings; and

(3) A statement of whether the parties anticipate the use of expert witnesses, identifying the subject areas of the proposed experts.

(d) Limitations. Except upon order by the presiding special master for good cause shown, discovery shall be limited as follows:

(1) Special counsel may take one deposition of the Judge and two other persons in addition to the depositions of experts. The Judge or the Judge's counsel may take one deposition of the complaining witness and two other persons in addition to the depositions of experts. The scope and manner of proceeding by way of deposition and the use thereof shall otherwise be governed by C.R.C.P. 26, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and 45.

(2) A party may serve on the adverse party 30 written interrogatories, each of which shall consist of a single question. The scope and manner of proceeding by means of written interrogatories and the use thereof shall otherwise be governed by C.R.C.P. Rules 26 and 33.

(3) When the mental or physical condition of the Judge has become an issue in the proceeding, the presiding special master, on motion of any party or any of the special masters, may order the Judge to submit to a physical or mental examination by a suitable licensed or certified examiner. The order may be made only upon a determination that reasonable cause exists and after notice to the Judge. The Judge will be provided the opportunity to respond to the motion; and the Judge may request a hearing before the special masters. The hearing shall be held within 14 days of the date of the Judge's request, and shall be limited to the issue of whether reasonable cause exists for such an order.

(4) A party may serve the adverse party requests for production of documents pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34, except such requests for production shall be limited to 20 in number, each of which shall consist of a single request.

(5) A party may serve on the adverse party 20 requests for admission, each of which shall consist of a single request. The scope and manner of proceeding by means of requests for admission and the use thereof shall otherwise be governed by C.R.C.P. 36.

(e) Good Cause. In determining good cause pursuant to section (d) of this Rule, the presiding special master shall consider the following:

(1) Whether the scope of the proposed discovery is reasonable and likely to produce evidence that is material to the issues in the proceedings;

(2) Whether the discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative, unreasonably duplicative, or can be obtained from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive;

(3) Whether the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit; and

(4) Whether the party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by disclosure or discovery in the proceedings to obtain the information sought.

(f) Supplementation of Disclosures and Discovery Responses. A party is under a duty to supplement its disclosures under section (c) of this Rule when the party learns that in some material respect the information disclosed is incomplete or incorrect and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known to the other parties during the disclosure or discovery process. A party is under a duty to amend a prior response to an interrogatory, request for production, or request for admission when the party learns that the prior response is in some material respect incomplete or incorrect and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known to the other parties during the discovery process. With respect to experts, the duty to supplement or correct extends to information contained in the expert's report or summary disclosed in pre-hearing proceedings and to information provided through any deposition of or interrogatory responses by the expert. Supplementation shall be provided in a timely manner.

(g) Protective Orders. Upon motion by a party or by the person from whom disclosure is due or discovery is sought, accompanied by a certificate that the movant has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with other affected parties in an effort to resolve the dispute, and for good cause shown, the special masters may take any action which justice requires to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense, including the issuance of one or more of the following orders:

(1) That the disclosure or discovery not be had;

(2) That the disclosure or discovery may be had only on specified terms and conditions, including designation of the time or place;

(3) That the discovery may be had only by a method of discovery other than that selected by the party seeking discovery;

(4) That certain matters not be inquired into, or that the scope of the disclosure or discovery be limited to certain matters;

(5) That discovery be conducted with no one present except persons designated by the special masters; and

(6) That a deposition, if sealed, be opened only by order of the special masters.

If the motion for a protective order is denied in whole or in part, the special masters, on such terms and conditions as are just, may order that any party or other person provide or permit discovery. The provisions of C.R.C.P. 37(a)(4) apply to an award of expenses incurred with regard to the motion.

Rule 22. Subpoena and Inspection

Special counsel and the Judge shall be entitled to compel by subpoena the attendance and testimony of witnesses, including the Judge as witness, and to provide for the production and inspection of documents, books, accounts, and other records. Subpoenas may be issued by the chair, the executive director, special counsel, the Judge's counsel, or a special master and shall be served in the manner provided by law for the service of subpoenas in a civil action. A party requesting or issuing a subpoena shall file a copy of each subpoena with the special masters; shall notify all parties of the issuance and service of each subpoena; and shall not cancel any subpoena without the approval of the presiding special master or the agreement of the parties.

Rule 23. Witness Fees and Expenses

All witnesses in formal proceedings shall receive fees and expenses in the amount allowed by law for civil litigation in the district courts, except as provided in this Rule. Fees and expenses of witnesses shall be borne by the party calling them. The Commission may, upon a showing of good cause, reimburse a Judge for reasonable expenses incurred for consultations with or testimony by a physician or mental health professional with respect to whether the Judge's conduct is adversely affected by a physical or mental condition. If the Judge is exonerated of allegations of misconduct in a matter that does not involve disability issues and the Commission determines that the Judge's payment of witness fees and expenses would work a financial hardship or injustice upon the Judge, then it may pay or reimburse such fees and expenses.

Rule 24. [Reserved]

[Special Masters revised and restated in 2012 as Rule 18.5.]

Rule 25. Prehearing Procedures

The special masters may direct the parties to appear in person or by telephone for prehearing procedures which shall generally follow C.R.C.P. 16, but in a manner suitable for formal proceedings.

Rule 26. Hearing

(a) In General. At the time and place designated by notice, the special masters shall hear and take evidence, as required by Article VI, Section 23(3)(e) of the Constitution. Special counsel shall present the case in support of the formal charges. The presiding special master shall rule on all motions and objections made during the hearing, subject to the right of the Judge, the Judge's counsel, or special counsel to appeal a ruling to all of the special masters. The special masters shall provide a report to the Commission, as required by Article VI, Section 23(3)(e) of the Constitution and Rule 32, which shall be approved by majority vote of the special masters. In the event that a majority of the special masters cannot agree on the content of the report, each special master shall issue a report.

(b) Failure to Appear. The special masters may determine, in their discretion, whether the failure of the Judge to appear at the hearing may be considered an admission of the allegations in the statement of charges, unless such failure was due to circumstances beyond the Judge's control.

Rule 27. Procedures and Rules

The hearing in formal proceedings shall be conducted in accordance with C.R.C.P., except where the special masters determine that certain provisions of C.R.C.P. would be impractical or unnecessary. The order of presentation in a hearing shall be the same as in civil cases. All witnesses shall give testimony under oath, and rules of evidence applicable in civil proceedings shall apply. Procedural errors or defects not affecting the substantive rights of a Judge shall not be grounds for invalidation of the proceedings.

Rule 28. [Reserved]

[Procedural Rights of Judge revised and restated in 2012 in Rules 8.5 and 33.]

Rule 29. Amendment to Pleadings

The special masters may in the interest of justice allow or require amendments to pleadings at any time in accordance with C.R.C.P.

Rule 30. Additional Evidence

The special masters may order a hearing for the taking of additional evidence at any time while the matter is pending before it. The order shall set the time and place of the hearing and shall indicate matters on which the evidence is to be taken. A copy of such order shall be served on the Judge and special counsel at least 14 days prior to the date of hearing.

Rule 31. Standard of Proof

The standard of proof in all formal proceedings and disability proceedings shall be clear and convincing evidence.

ANNOTATION

Applied in In re Jones, 728 P.2d 311 (Colo. 1986).

Rule 32. Report of the Special Masters

At the conclusion of the hearing in formal proceedings, the special masters shall issue and file with the executive director a report which shall include written findings of fact regarding the evidence in support of and in defense to the allegations in the complaint, a report of any prior disciplinary action by the Commission against the Judge, and its recommendations to the Commission for dismissal of the charges, a private disposition, or one or more sanctions. The executive director shall certify the special masters' report as part of the record of proceedings to be filed with the Supreme Court, in accordance with Rule 37.

Source: Entire rule amended and effective December 10, 2014.

Rule 33. Record of Proceedings

The record of proceedings shall consist of the report of the special masters together with pleadings, motions, verbatim electronic or written transcripts of proceedings, affidavits, exhibits, findings of fact and conclusions of law, legal briefs, and any other documentation designated by the Commission for the Supreme Court's consideration. The special masters shall determine whether the verbatim record will be made by court reporter or electronic recording. The Judge shall be provided, on request and without cost, copies of electronic recordings that are made of any portion of the proceedings. The Judge may, in addition, have all or any portion of the testimony in the proceedings transcribed at the Judge's own expense. Special counsel's work product, the investigation file, discovery, and deliberations of the Commission or the special masters shall not be included in the record of proceedings unless so ordered by the Court.

Rule 33.5. Disability Proceedings

(a) Initiation of a Disability Proceeding. A disability proceeding can be initiated by a request for evaluation of judicial conduct, by the Commission, by a Judge or the Judge's counsel, by a claim of inability to defend in a disciplinary proceeding, by an order of involuntary commitment or adjudication of incompetency, or as a result of information discovered during the course of disciplinary proceedings.

(b) Proceedings to Determine Disability Generally. The Commission shall conduct all disability proceedings in accordance with the procedures for disciplinary proceedings, except:

(1) The purpose of the disability proceedings shall be to determine whether the Judge suffers from a physical or mental condition that adversely affects the Judge's ability to perform judicial functions or to assist with his or her defense in disciplinary proceedings;

(2) All of the proceedings shall be confidential;

(3) The Commission may appoint a lawyer to represent the Judge if the Judge is without representation;

(4) In lieu of a Rule 18.5 appointment of three special masters, the Supreme Court may, in its discretion, appoint one special master, who is qualified to oversee disability proceedings (and who need not be a judge of a court of record), to conduct a hearing to take and consider evidence, promptly transmit a report concerning the alleged disability to the Supreme Court, and otherwise act as provided in this Rule for action by three special masters; and

(5) If the Supreme Court concludes that the Judge is incapacitated to hold judicial office, it may enter orders appropriate to the nature and probable length of the period of disability, including:

(i) Retirement of the Judge for a disability interfering with the performance of his or her duties which is, or is likely to become, of a permanent character;

(ii) Transfer of the Judge to temporary judicial disability inactive status. Such transfer shall be for a period of 182 days (the ''temporary transfer period''). The special master(s) shall take appropriate measures to review the Judge's disability status during the temporary transfer period, and issue a report to the Supreme Court on the degree of the Judge's disability no later than 70 days after the beginning of the temporary transfer period. If the special master(s) find that the Judge remains disabled, the special master(s) shall again review the Judge's condition within the 35 days preceding the end of the temporary transfer period and report to the Supreme Court on or before expiration of the 182 days. The Court may order more frequent reports during the temporary transfer period, in its discretion. For good cause, the Court may extend the temporary transfer period, but not to exceed an additional 182 days, and require periodic reports from the special master(s) during and at the end of the extension. In each report, the special master(s) shall determine whether the Judge is no longer disabled or that the disability is continuing, and shall recommend whether the Judge should be returned to active status or, retired due to a disability under subsection (b)(5)(i) of this Rule. The Court shall consider the recommendations and enter any order appropriate under the circumstances;

(iii) Transfer of the Judge to lawyer disability inactive status, if the Supreme Court concludes that the Judge is unable to practice law; or

(iv) Suspension of the disciplinary proceeding, pursuant to subsection (c)(2) of this Rule.

(c) Inability to Properly Defend in a Disciplinary Proceeding.

(1) If, in the course of a disciplinary proceeding, a Judge, the Judge's counsel or personal representative, or special counsel, if appointed, alleges that the Judge is unable to assist in his or her defense due to mental or physical disability, the Commission shall promptly notify the Supreme Court and suspend the disciplinary proceeding. The Supreme Court shall immediately transfer the Judge to lawyer and judicial disability inactive status and appoint a special master, or special masters, under subsection (b)(4) of this Rule, who shall consider all relevant factors and/or stipulations of the parties, conduct a hearing if necessary, and report to the Supreme Court concerning the Judge's alleged disability. The 182 day temporary transfer period, provided in subsection (b)(5)(ii) of this Rule, shall not commence until and unless the special master(s) determine that the Judge cannot assist with his or her defense under subsection (c)(2) of this Rule.

(2) The Supreme Court shall consider the report of the special master(s) to determine whether the Judge can assist in such defense. If it finds that the Judge can assist, the disciplinary proceeding shall be resumed but the Judge shall remain on lawyer and judicial inactive status, pending the results of the disciplinary proceeding. If it finds that the Judge cannot assist, the disciplinary proceeding shall remain in suspension and the Judge shall be placed on (i) temporary judicial disability inactive status, subject to the provisions of subsection (b)(5)(ii) of this Rule, and (ii) on lawyer disability inactive status. If the Supreme Court, under subsection (b)(5(ii), subsequently determines that the Judge is no longer disabled, the Judge shall be restored to lawyer and judicial active status and the Commission may resume the disciplinary proceeding.

(d) Involuntary Commitment or Adjudication of Incompetency. If a Judge has been declared incompetent by judicial order or has been involuntarily committed to an institution by judicial order on the grounds of incompetency or disability, the Supreme Court shall, after considering all relevant factors, enter an order appropriate in the circumstances, including but not limited to: (i) retiring the Judge under subsection (b)(5)(i) of this Rule; (ii) transferring the Judge to temporary judicial disability inactive status and evaluating the Judge's disability under provisions of subsection (b)(5)(ii); and/or (iii) transferring the Judge to lawyer disability inactive status under subsection (b)(5)(iii). A copy of the order shall be served on the Judge, his or her guardian, and the director of such institution. All such orders shall be public, in accordance with section (i) of this Rule.

(e) Stipulated Disposition for Disability.

(1) The special masters may designate one or more experts whom the special masters deem, in their discretion, to be appropriately qualified in medicine, psychiatry, or psychology, and who shall examine the Judge prior to considering evidence of the alleged disability.

(2) After receipt of the examination report, the Commission or special counsel and the Judge may agree upon a stipulated disposition which includes proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law, and an order. The stipulated disposition shall be submitted to the special master(s) who shall forward it to the Supreme Court for approval or rejection.

(3) If the Supreme Court approves the stipulated disposition, it shall enter an order in accordance with its terms. If the stipulated disposition is rejected by the Supreme Court, the disability proceedings shall resume, but any statements by or on behalf of the Judge in the proposed disposition shall not be used as an admission of any material fact.

(f) Interim Appointment. The Supreme Court may designate another judge to assume the Judge's duties during the Judge's disability inactive status.

(g) Reinstatement from Judicial Disability Inactive Status.

(1) A Judge may petition the Court at any time, on good cause, for reinstatement to active judicial and lawyer status.

(2) Upon the filing of a petition for transfer to active judicial status, the Supreme Court may take or direct whatever action it deems necessary or proper to determine whether the disability has been removed, including but not limited to an examination of the Judge by a physician or mental health practitioner designated by the Supreme Court or consideration of the findings of the special master(s) under subsection (b)(5)(ii) of this Rule.

(3) With the filing of a petition for reinstatement to active judicial status, the Judge shall be required to disclose the name of each physician or mental health practitioner and hospital or other institution by whom or in which the Judge has been examined or treated since the transfer to judicial disability inactive status. The Judge shall furnish to the Supreme Court written consent to the release of information and records relating to the disability, if requested by the Supreme Court or by court-appointed experts. The Judge shall bear the burden of proof to establish grounds for reinstatement.

(4) A Judge who is returned to active judicial status will be eligible to apply for another judicial position or for the senior judge program.

(5) Reinstatement to active lawyer status shall be under the jurisdiction of Attorney Regulation, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 251.30.

(h) Waiver of Medical Privilege. Asserting a mental or physical condition as a defense to or in mitigation of judicial misconduct constitutes a waiver of medical privilege in any disciplinary proceeding.

(i) Public Orders. All recommendations of the special master(s) and orders of the Supreme Court under this Rule shall be public. However, the pleadings, briefs, and evidence considered by the special master(s), including but not limited to testimony, medical reports, and other documentation, shall remain confidential.

PART D. DISPOSITIONS AND SANCTIONS

Rule 34. Temporary Suspension

(a) Request to Supreme Court. The Commission, by its chair, the executive director, or special counsel, may request the Supreme Court to order temporary suspension of a Judge, with pay, pending the resolution of preliminary or formal proceedings. The request shall include a statement of the reasons in support of the suspension, which may include the Judge's failure to cooperate with the Commission. Upon receipt of such a request, the Court may require additional information from the Commission.

(b) Order to Show Cause. Upon a finding that the Supreme Court has been fully advised and that a temporary suspension is appropriate, the Court (1) shall issue an order for temporary suspension; (2) direct the Commission to issue an order to the Judge to show cause to the Commission in writing, within 21 days, why the Judge should not continue to be temporarily suspended from any or all judicial duties pending the outcome of preliminary or formal proceedings before the Commission; and (3) appoint an active, retired, or senior judge or a retired justice as special master to preside over a show cause hearing. The Court may issue an order for temporary suspension and an order to show cause to the Commission on its own motion.

(c) Hearing. The special master shall conduct a hearing on the order to show cause within 28 days of the Judge's response to such order or such later date ordered by the special master, at which the executive director, special counsel, the Judge, Judge's counsel, and witnesses may appear and participate. Within seven days following the conclusion of the hearing, the special master shall file its findings and conclusions with the Supreme Court. Within the seven days thereafter, special counsel and the Judge or the Judge's counsel may file exceptions with the Court regarding the findings and conclusions. Upon its consideration of the findings, conclusions, and exceptions, the Court may affirm, modify, or terminate the temporary suspension.

(d) Further Order. The Supreme Court may issue further orders concerning the suspension, as it may deem appropriate.

(e) Voluntary Suspension. The Commission may inquire whether a Judge will voluntarily submit to temporary suspension, and a written consent, if obtained, shall be filed with the Supreme Court.

(f) Public Notice. An order by the Supreme Court for temporary suspension shall become public upon its issuance. However, the Commission's investigation, pleadings, and other records with respect to the temporary suspension and its record of proceedings in preliminary or formal proceedings shall remain confidential unless and until a recommendation for sanctions or a recommendation for approval of a stipulated resolution is filed with the Court under Rule 37.

Rule 35. Dispositions

Upon consideration of all the evidence and the report of the presenter(s), the Commission may order any of the following dispositions:

(a) Dismissal. Dismiss an unjustified or unfounded complaint, which may include an appropriate expression of concern by the Commission regarding the circumstances;

(b) Disability Proceedings. Initiate disability proceedings under Rule 33.5 or stipulate to voluntary retirement by the Judge for a disability under Rule 33.5(e);

(c) Diversion Plan. Direct the Judge to follow a diversion plan, including but not limited to education, counseling, drug and alcohol testing, medical treatment, medical monitoring, or docket management, which may be accompanied by the deferral of final disciplinary proceedings;

(d) Private Admonishment. Admonish the Judge privately for an appearance of impropriety, even though the Judge's behavior otherwise meets the minimum standards of judicial conduct;

(e) Private Reprimand. Reprimand the Judge privately for conduct that does not meet the minimum standards of judicial conduct;

(f) Private Censure. Censure the Judge privately for conduct which involves a substantial breach of the standards of judicial conduct;

(g) Costs and Fees. Assess costs or fees of an investigation, examination or proceeding; or

(h) Stipulated Disposition. Agree with the Judge to a stipulated private disposition which may include the Judge's resignation, retirement, or agreement not to stand for retention; disciplinary measures under sections (c) through (g) of this Rule; and/or dismissal of the complaint with or without such disciplinary measures. A stipulated private disposition shall remain confidential, subject to Rule 6.5(g).

(i) Other Action. Take or direct such other action, including any combination of dispositions that the Commission believes will reasonably improve the conduct of the Judge. A Judge who disagrees with a disposition under this Rule has the right to request that the complaint be resolved through formal proceedings.

Rule 36. Sanctions

After considering the record of proceedings and the report of the special masters, in accordance with Article VI, Section 23(3)(e) of the Constitution, the Commission, by majority vote of the members meeting in person or by conference call, including the vote of any member who served as a presenter in prior proceedings, shall recommend that the Supreme Court dismiss the charges or order one or more of the following sanctions, except that a recommendation for removal shall require a majority vote of all members of the Commission:

(a) Removal. Remove the Judge from office;

(b) Retirement. Order the retirement of the Judge;

(c) Suspension. Suspend the Judge without pay for a specified period;

(d) Disability Proceedings. Remand the matter to the Commission for disability proceedings or stipulate to voluntary retirement by the Judge for a disability under Rule 33.5(e);

(e) Public Reprimand or Censure. Reprimand or censure the Judge publicly, either in person or by written order;

(f) Diversion or Deferred Discipline. Require compliance with a diversion plan or deferred discipline plan;

(g) Costs and Fees. Assess costs and fees incurred by the Commission, which may include a recommendation for reimbursement of its reasonable attorney fees, provided the recommendation includes grounds for such reimbursement that the Court determines to be appropriate and equitable in the circumstances; or

(h) Other Discipline. Impose any other sanction or combination of sanctions, including dispositions under Rule 35, that the Court determines will curtail or eliminate the Judge's misconduct.

Rule 36.5. Conviction of a Crime

(a) Suspension. Whenever a Judge has been found guilty, by a verdict or a plea of guilty in any state or federal court of the United States, of a felony or an offense involving moral turpitude, the Supreme Court on its own motion or upon petition filed by any person and a finding that such a finding of guilty was had, shall enter an order suspending the Judge from office and suspending the payment of the Judge's salary until such time as the Judge is sentenced.

(b) Removal. Upon the sentencing of the Judge, the Supreme Court shall enter an order removing the Judge from office and declaring the Judge's office vacant; and also forfeiting the Judge's salary, retroactive to the date of the finding of guilty.

(c) Reversal or Acquittal. If the judgment of guilty is reversed and a judgment of acquittal or a dismissal is then entered, the Judge shall recover the salary that had been forfeited pursuant to section (b) of this Rule together with the salary that would have accrued through the date of acquittal or dismissal. While reversal of a conviction does not entitle the Judge to resume his or her previous judicial office or to be paid a salary beyond the date of acquittal or the date of dismissal, the Judge will be eligible for consideration by a judicial nominating commission for open positions and will be eligible to apply for the senior judge program.

(d) Effect of Pleas. A plea of guilty or nolo contendere shall be equivalent to a finding of guilty for the purpose of this Rule.

PART E. SUPREME COURT ACTION

Rule 37. Recommendations

(a) Filing the Record of Proceedings and Recommendation. Upon the Commission's consideration of the report of the special masters, the executive director shall file, with the clerk of the Supreme Court, the record of the proceedings and the Commission's recommendation to the Court for dismissal, sanctions, a private disposition, or a stipulated resolution.

(b) Dismissal. If the Commission recommends dismissal, the dismissal and the record of proceedings shall remain confidential, unless the Supreme Court orders public disclosure under Rule 6.5(g).

(c) Sanctions. The Commission may recommend one or more of the sanctions provided in Rule 36. The Commission's recommendation for sanctions and the record of proceedings shall become public upon filing the recommendation with the Supreme Court, and the clerk shall docket the recommendation for the Court's expedited consideration. The executive director shall promptly serve a copy of the recommendation and notice of the date of its filing on the Judge (or the Judge's counsel) and on special counsel. The executive director shall file proof of service of the recommendation and the notice with the clerk. Exceptions to the recommendation may be filed under Rule 38.

(d) Private Disposition. As an alternative to sanctions, the Commission may recommend a private disposition under Rule 35. The executive director shall notify the Judge (or the Judge's counsel), special counsel, and the Supreme Court of the Commission's recommendation. Exceptions to the recommendation may be filed under Rule 38. The recommendation, exceptions, and any disposition resulting therefore shall remain confidential subject to the provisions of Rule 6.5(g). If the Court does not approve the disposition, the case shall be remanded to the Commission and the record shall remain sealed pending the Commission's further action.

(e) Stipulated Resolution of Formal Proceedings. Special counsel and the Judge may propose that the Commission adopt a stipulated resolution of formal proceedings, which shall include summaries of the principal allegations, the Judge's response, and material facts that are agreed or remain disputed; relevant Canons, Canon Rules, or provisions of Colo. RJD; recommendations for dismissal or sanctions; and an acknowledgement that the stipulated resolution and the record of proceedings will become public. If the Commission finds that the terms of the stipulated resolution comply with these requirements, it shall file the stipulated resolution with the Supreme Court as its recommendation under this Rule. The recommendation, the stipulated resolution, the record of proceedings, and any sanctions proposed in the stipulated resolution shall become public upon the Commission's filing of the recommendation with the Court. However, if it provides for dismissal, the stipulated resolution and the record of proceedings shall be confidential pending the Court's consideration, and if approved by the Court, the stipulated resolution and the record of proceedings shall remain confidential, subject to the provisions of Rule 6.5(g).

Rule 38. Exceptions

Exceptions to a recommendation under Rule 37(c) or 37(d) may be filed by the Judge, the Judge's counsel, or special counsel with the clerk of the Supreme Court and served on each other party to the proceedings within 21 days after service of the notice required by Rule 37(c) or 37(d). Exceptions shall be supported by an opening brief based on the record of the proceedings. A party opposing the exceptions shall have 14 days after the filing of the opening brief within which to file an answer brief, a copy of which shall be served on all parties. A party shall have 7 days after the filing of the answer brief within which to file a reply brief, a copy of which shall be served on all parties. If no exceptions are filed, the matter will stand submitted upon the Commission's recommendation and the record. In other respects, the filing and consideration of exceptions to the special masters' recommendation shall be governed by the Colorado Appellate Rules, unless the Court determines that the application of a particular rule would be impracticable, inappropriate, or inconsistent in disciplinary proceedings.

Rule 39. Additional Findings

If the Supreme Court desires an expansion of the record or additional findings as to certain issues or the entire matter, it may remand the proceedings to the Commission with appropriate directions and continue the proceedings pending receipt of the additional information. The Commission shall refer the remand to the special masters for additional findings and forward the additional findings to the Court. The Court may order oral argument, in its discretion.

Source: Entire rule amended and effective December 10, 2014.

Rule 40. Decision

The Supreme Court shall consider the evidence and the law, including the record of the proceedings and additions thereto; the special masters' report; the Commission's recommendation; and any exceptions filed under Rule 38. The Court shall issue a decision, in which it may dismiss the complaint; adopt or reject the recommendation of the Commission; adopt the recommendation of the Commission with modifications; or remand the proceedings to the Commission for further action. Provided, however, that if the Commission has recommended a stipulated resolution, the Court shall order it to become effective and issue any sanction provided in the stipulated resolution, unless the Court determines that its terms do not comply with Rule 37(e) or are not supported by the record of proceedings. The decision of the Court, including such sanctions as may be ordered, shall be final. Unless confidentiality is required under Rule 37, the decision shall be published.

APPENDIX TO CHAPTER 24

Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct

Repealed and Readopted by the

SUPREME COURT OF COLORADO

May 27, 2010,

Effective July 1, 2010

TABLE OF CONTENTS

APPENDIX TO CHAPTER 24

COLORADO CODE OF JUDICIAL CONDUCT

Editor's note: All ethics opinions and some annotations within the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct were written by the Colorado Supreme Court.

Preamble

[1] An independent, fair and impartial judiciary is indispensable to our system of justice. The United States legal system is based upon the principle that an independent, impartial, and competent judiciary, composed of men and women of integrity, will interpret and apply the law that governs our society. Thus, the judiciary plays a central role in preserving the principles of justice and the rule of law. Inherent in all the Rules contained in this Code are the precepts that judges, individually and collectively, must respect and honor the judicial office as a public trust and strive to maintain and enhance confidence in the legal system.

[2] Judges should maintain the dignity of judicial office at all times, and avoid both impropriety and the appearance of impropriety in their professional and personal lives. They should aspire at all times to conduct that ensures the greatest possible public confidence in their independence, impartiality, integrity, and competence.

[3] The Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct establishes standards for the ethical conduct of judges and judicial candidates. It is not intended as an exhaustive guide for the conduct of judges and judicial candidates, who are governed in their judicial and personal conduct by general ethical standards as well as by the Code. The Code is intended, however, to provide guidance and assist judges in maintaining the highest standards of judicial and personal conduct, and to provide a basis for regulating their conduct through disciplinary agencies.

Scope

[1] The Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct consists of four Canons, numbered Rules under each Canon, and Comments that generally follow and explain each Rule. Scope and Terminology sections provide additional guidance in interpreting and applying the Code. An Application section establishes when the various Rules apply to a judge or judicial candidate.

[2] The Canons state overarching principles of judicial ethics that all judges must observe. Although a judge may be disciplined only for violating a Rule, the Canons provide important guidance in interpreting the Rules. Where a Rule contains a permissive term, such as ''may'' or ''should,'' the conduct being addressed is committed to the personal and professional discretion of the judge or candidate in question, and no disciplinary action should be taken for action or inaction within the bounds of such discretion.

[3] The Comments that accompany the Rules serve two functions. First, they provide guidance regarding the purpose, meaning, and proper application of the Rules. They contain explanatory material and, in some instances, provide examples of permitted or prohibited conduct. Comments neither add to nor subtract from the binding obligations set forth in the Rules. Therefore, when a Comment contains the term ''must,'' it does not mean that the Comment itself is binding or enforceable; it signifies that the Rule in question, properly understood, is obligatory as to the conduct at issue.

[4] Second, the Comments identify aspirational goals for judges. To implement fully the principles of this Code as articulated in the Canons, judges should strive to exceed the standards of conduct established by the Rules, holding themselves to the highest ethical standards and seeking to achieve those aspirational goals, thereby enhancing the dignity of the judicial office.

[5] The Rules of the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct are rules of reason that should be applied consistent with constitutional requirements, statutes, other court rules, and decisional law, and with due regard for all relevant circumstances. The Rules should not be interpreted to impinge upon the essential independence of judges in making judicial decisions.

[6] Although the black letter of the Rules is binding and enforceable, it is not contemplated that every transgression will result in the imposition of discipline. Whether discipline should be imposed should be determined through a reasonable and reasoned application of the Rules, and should depend upon factors such as the seriousness of the transgression, the facts and circumstances that existed at the time of the transgression, the extent of any pattern of improper activity, whether there have been previous violations, and the effect of the improper activity upon the judicial system or others.

[7] The Code is not designed or intended as a basis for civil or criminal liability. Neither is it intended to be the basis for litigants to seek collateral remedies against each other.

ANNOTATION

By expressing approval of the canons of ethics, the supreme court did not enact them into law. In re Petition of Colo. Bar Ass'n, 137 Colo. 357, 325 P.2d 932 (1958).

Nevertheless, they are recognized as principles of exemplary conduct. Although the canons employing language of wide coverage cannot be given the effect of law, they nevertheless are recognized generally as a system of principles of exemplary conduct and good character. In re Petition of Colo. Bar Ass'n, 137 Colo. 357, 325 P.2d 932 (1958).

Neither the supreme court nor the grievance committee has the power or authority to institute or conduct disciplinary proceedings of any kind involving the conduct of a duly elected judge, he being responsible solely to the people, the constitution fixing the remedy at impeachment. In re Petition of Colo. Bar Ass'n, 137 Colo. 357, 325 P.2d 932 (1958).

Terminology

The first time any term listed below is used in a Rule in its defined sense, it is followed by an asterisk (*).

"Appropriate authority" means the authority having responsibility for initiation of disciplinary process in connection with the violation to be reported. In Colorado, the Commission on Judicial Discipline is the authority responsible for investigating judicial misconduct and disciplining judges, except with respect to Denver County court and municipal judges, over whom it has no jurisdiction pursuant to Colo. Const. Article VI § 26; § 13-10-105, C.R.S.; C.J.R.D. 4(a). See Rules 1.1, 2.14 and 2.15.

"Contribution" means both financial and in-kind contributions, such as goods, professional or volunteer services, advertising, and other types of assistance which, if obtained by the recipient otherwise, would require a financial expenditure. See Rule 3.7.

"De minimis," in the context of interests pertaining to disqualification of a judge, means an insignificant interest that could not raise a reasonable question regarding the judge's impartiality. See Rule 2.11.

"Domestic partner" means a person with whom another person maintains household and an intimate relationship, other than a person to whom he or she is legally married. See Rules 2.11, 3.13, and 3.14.

"Economic interest" means ownership of more than a one percent legal or equitable interest in a party, or a legal or equitable interest in a party of a fair market value exceeding $5,000, or a relationship as director, advisor, or other active participant in the affairs of a party, except that:

(1) Ownership in a mutual or common investment fund that holds securities, or of securities held in a managed fund, is not an ''economic interest'' in such securities unless the judge participates in the management of the fund;

(2) securities held by an educational, religious, charitable, fraternal, or civic organization in which the judge or the judge's spouse, domestic partner, parent, or child serves as a director, an officer, an advisor, or other participant is not an ''economic interest'' in securities held by the organization;

(3) the proprietary interest of a policy holder in a mutual insurance company, of a depositer in a financial institution, or deposits or proprietary interests the judge may maintain as a member of a mutual savings association or credit union, or a similar proprietary interest is an ''economic interest'' in the organization only if the outcome of the proceeding could substantially affect the value of the interest; and

(4) ownership of government securities is an ''economic interest'' in the issuer only if the outcome of the proceeding could substantially affect the value of the securities.

See Rules 1.3 and 2.11.

"Fiduciary" includes relationships such as executor, administrator, trustee, or guardian. See Rules 2.11, 3.2, and 3.8.

"Impartial," "impartiality," and "impartially" mean absence of bias or prejudice in favor of, or against, particular parties or classes of parties, as well as maintenance of an open mind in considering issues that may come before a judge. See Canons 1, 2, and 4, and Rules 1.2, 2.2, 2.10, 2.11, 2.13, 3.1, 3.12, 3.13, 4.1, and 4.2.

"Impending matter" is a matter that is imminent or expected to occur in the near future. See Rules 2.9, 2.10, 3.13, and 4.1.

"Impropriety" includes conduct that violates the law, court rules, or provisions of this Code, and conduct that undermines a judge's independence, integrity, or impartiality. See Canon 1 and Rule 1.2.

"Independence" means a judge's freedom from influence or controls other than those established by law. See Canons 1 and 4, and Rules 1.2, 3.1, 3.12, 3.13, and 4.2.

"Integrity" means probity, fairness, honesty, uprightness, and soundness of character. See Canon 1 and Rule 1.2.

"Judicial candidate" means a sitting judge who is seeking selection for judicial office by appointment or retention. See Rules 2.11, 4.1, 4.2, and 4.3.

"Knowingly," "knowledge," "known," and "knows" mean actual knowledge of the fact in question. A person's knowledge may be inferred from circumstances. See Rules 2.11, 2.15, 2.16, 3.6, and 4.1.

"Law" encompasses court rules and orders as well as statutes, constitutional provisions, and decisional law. See Rules 1.1, 2.1, 2.2, 2.6, 2.7, 2.9, 3.1, 3.4, 3.9, 3.12, 3.13, 3.14, 3.15, 4.1, 4.2, and 4.4.

"Member of the judge's family" means a spouse, domestic partner, child, grandchild, parent, grandparent, or other relative or person with whom the judge maintains a close familial relationship. See Rules 3.7, 3.8, 3.10, and 3.11.

"Member of a judge's family residing in the judge's household" means any relative of a judge by blood or marriage, or a person treated by a judge as a member of the judge's family, who resides in the judge's household. See Rules 2.11 and 3.13.

"Nonpublic information" means information that is not available to the public. Nonpublic information may include, but is not limited to, information that is sealed by statute or court order or impounded or communicated in camera, and information offered in grand jury proceedings, presentencing reports, dependency cases, or psychiatric reports. See Rule 3.5.

"Pending matter" is a matter that has commenced. A matter continues to be pending through any appellate process until final disposition. See Rules 2.9, 2.10, 3.13, and 4.1.

"Personally solicit" means a direct request made by a judge or judicial candidate for financial support or in kind services, whether made by letter, telephone, or any other means of communication. See Rule 4.1.

"Political organization" means a political party or other group sponsored by or affiliated with a political party or candidate, the principal purpose of which is to further the election or appointment of candidates for political office. For purposes of this Code, the term does not include a judicial candidate's retention committee created as authorized by Rule 4.3. See Rule 4.1.

"Public election" includes primary and general elections, partisan elections, nonpartisan elections, and retention elections. See Rule 4.2.

"Third degree of relationship" includes the following persons: great-grandparent, grandparent, parent, uncle, aunt, brother, sister, child, grandchild, great-grandchild, nephew, and niece. See Rule 2.11.

Application

The Application section establishes when the various Rules apply to a judge or judicial candidate.

I. Applicability of This Code

(A) The provisions of the Code apply to all full-time judges. Parts II through V of this section identify those provisions that apply to three distinct categories of part-time judges. The three categories of judicial service in other than a full-time capacity are necessarily defined in general terms because of the widely varying forms of judicial service. Canon 4 applies to judicial candidates.

(B) A judge, within the meaning of this Code, is anyone who is authorized to perform judicial functions, including an officer such as a magistrate, referee, or member of the administrative law judiciary.

COMMENT

[1] The Rules in this Code have been formulated to address the ethical obligations of any person who serves a judicial function, and are premised upon the supposition that a uniform system of ethical principles should apply to all those authorized to perform judicial functions.

[2] The determination of which category and, accordingly, which specific Rules apply to an individual judicial officer, depends upon the facts of the particular judicial service.

[3] This code does not apply to a person appointed by the court to serve as a master in a particular case. This code does not apply to municipal judges except to the extent it is made applicable by statute, municipal charter or ordinance. However, reference to the code by all judicial officers, including municipal judges, is recommended to provide guidance concerning the proper conduct for judges.

II. Senior and Retired Judges

Senior judges, while under contract pursuant to the senior judge program, and retired judges, while recalled and acting temporarily as a judge, are not required to comply:

(A) with Rule 3.9 (Service as Arbitrator or Mediator); or

(B) with Rule 3.8 (Appointments to Fiduciary Positions).

III. Part-Time Judges

A judge who serves on a part-time basis

(A) is not required to comply:

(1) with Rules 3.8 (Appointments to Fiduciary Positions), 3.9 (Service as Arbitrator or Mediator), 3.10 (Practice of Law), 3.11 (A) and (B) (Financial, Business, or Remunerative Activities); and

(B) shall not practice law in the court on which the judge serves or in any comparable level court in the same judicial district on which the judge serves or in any court subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the court on which the judge serves, and shall not act as a lawyer in a proceeding in which the judge has served as a judge or in any other proceeding related thereto;

(C) shall not practice law with respect to any controversies which will or appear likely to come before the court on which the judge serves or any court of the same or comparable jurisdiction within the same judicial district on which the judge serves.

COMMENT

[1] This Canon limits a part-time judge from practicing law in any comparable level court in the same judicial district as the judge serves. However, this prohibition shall not apply to any temporary assignment of a part-time judge to a comparable level court outside the judicial district the judge serves. In addition, this prohibition shall not apply to a one-time assignment of a part-time judge to a court of higher jurisdiction (such as a one-time assignment under order in a district court case) either within, or outside of, the judicial district in which the judge serves. A part-time judge serving on temporary assignment is not thereby precluded from practicing law in the court to which that judge may be temporarily assigned. During such period of temporary assignment, however, the judge shall not actively participate as counsel in any case pending before the court to which the judge is temporarily assigned.

[2] A part-time judge who practices law must avoid undertaking or continuing any relationship which precludes the judge from maintaining the integrity of the bench which he or she serves and at the same time providing the undivided loyalty to clients which the exercise of professional judgment on behalf of a client demands. Being ''of counsel'' is deemed to be the practice of law, whereas acting as a mediator or arbitrator is not deemed to be the practice of law. Necessarily, the professional responsibilities of a part-time judge who practices law limit the practice of law by the judge's partners and associates.

ETHICS OPINIONS

A part-time county court judge with authority by chief judge order to preside over cases in the district court may not appear as a lawyer in the district court in the judicial district. In this case, the part-time judge had continuing authority to hear district court criminal cases, but never exercised his authority. The opinion precludes the judge from appearing in district court civil cases in the same judicial district. CJEAB Op. 07-06.

IV. Appointed Judges

An Appointed Judge who serves pursuant to C.R.C.P. 122 and section 13-3-111, C.R.S., for the period of the appointment, and in his or her capacity as Appointed Judge,

(A) is not required to comply with the following canons:

(1) 2.10 (A) (Judicial Statements on Pending and Impending Cases), except as to the case where he or she is appointed, and should require similar abstention from comment on the part of those personnel who are subject to the Appointed Judge's direction and control;

(2) 3.2 (Appearances Before Governmental Bodies and Consultation with Governmental Officials); 3.3 (Testifying as a Character Witness); 3.4 (Appointments to Governmental Positions); 3.7 (Participation in Educational, Religious, Charitable, Fraternal, or Civic Organizations and Activities); 3.8 (Appointments to Fiduciary Positions); 3.9 (Service as Arbitrator of Mediator); 3.10 (Practice of Law); 3.11 (Financial, Business, or Remunerative Activities); 3.12 (Compensation for Extrajudicial Activities); 3.13 (C) (Reporting of Certain Gifts, Loans, Bequests, Benefits, or Other things of Value); 3.14 (Reimbursement of Expenses and Waivers of Fees or Charges); and 3.15 (Reporting Requirements);

(3) 4.1 (A) (5, 12, 13) (Political and Campaign Activities of Judges in General); 4.2 (Political and Campaign Activities of a Judge Standing for Retention); and 4.4 (Campaign Committees).

(B) should refrain as follows:

(1) from financial and business dealings that relate directly to any issues in the case to which the Appointed Judge is appointed;

(2) from accepting any gift, bequest, favor or loan from any party to or the lawyer appearing in the case to which the appointed judge is appointed, and should require a spouse, domestic partner or family member residing in the judge's household to refrain from accepting gifts, bequests, favors, or loans in the same manner as the judge.

V. Time for Compliance

A person to whom this Code becomes applicable shall comply immediately with its provisions, except that those judges to whom Rules 3.8 (Appointments to Fiduciary Positions) and 3.11 (Financial, Business, or Remunerative Activities) apply shall comply with those Rules as soon as reasonably possible, but in no event later than one year after the Code becomes applicable to the judge.

COMMENT

[1] If serving as a fiduciary when selected as judge, a new judge may, notwithstanding the prohibitions in Rule 3.8, continue to serve as fiduciary, but only for that period of time necessary to avoid serious adverse consequences to the beneficiaries of the fiduciary relationship and in no event longer than one year. Similarly, if engaged at the time of judicial selection in a business activity, a new judge may, notwithstanding the prohibitions in Rule 3.11, continue in that activity for a reasonable period but in no event longer than one year.

CANON 1

A JUDGE SHALL UPHOLD AND PROMOTE THE INDEPENDENCE, INTEGRITY, AND IMPARTIALITY OF THE JUDICIARY, AND SHALL AVOID IMPROPRIETY AND THE APPEARANCE OF IMPROPRIETY.

Rule 1.1: Compliance with the Law

(A) A judge shall comply with the law,* including the Code of Judicial Conduct.

(B) Conduct by a judge that violates a criminal law may, unless the violation is minor, constitute a violation of the requirement that a judge must comply with the law.

(C) Every judge subject to the Code of Judicial Conduct, upon being convicted of a crime, except misdemeanor traffic offenses or traffic ordinance violations not including the use of alcohol or drugs, shall notify the appropriate authority* in writing of such conviction within ten days after the date of the conviction. In addition, the clerk of any court in this state in which the conviction was entered shall transmit to the appropriate authority within ten days after the date of the conviction a certificate thereof. This obligation to self-report convictions is a parallel but independent obligation of judges admitted to the Colorado bar to report the same conduct to the Office of Attorney Regulation pursuant to C.R.C.P. 251.20.

ANNOTATION

Violations by a judge of federal or state criminal law may constitute a violation of the requirement that a judge must comply with the law, unless the violation is trivial. Matter of Vandelinde, 366 S.E.2d 631, 633 (W. Va. 1988) (involving a magistrate judge's misconduct in the form of excess election contributions).

Violation of law, however trivial, harmless or isolated, is not necessarily a violation of the judicial canons. However, conduct that is grave, intentional and threatening, such as criminal mischief in third degree, falls on censurable side of line. In re Conduct of Roth, 645 P.2d 1064 (Or. 1982) (disciplining a judge for third degree criminal mischief).

Some violations of law (such as minor traffic infractions) may be of such a nature as to not come within the intended meaning of [this Rule]. In re Sawyer, 594 P.2d 805, 811 (Or. 1979) (concluding that a judge who is regularly-employed as a part-time teacher for pay by a state-funded college violates a state constitutional prohibition against officials of one state department exercising functions of another).

Rule 1.2: Promoting Confidence in the Judiciary

A judge shall act at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in the independence,* integrity,* and impartiality* of the judiciary, and shall avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety.

COMMENT

[1] Public confidence in the judiciary is eroded by improper conduct and conduct that creates the appearance of impropriety. This principle applies to both the professional and personal conduct of a judge.

[2] A judge should expect to be the subject of public scrutiny that might be viewed as burdensome if applied to other citizens, and must accept the restrictions imposed by the Code.

[3] Conduct that compromises or appears to compromise the independence, integrity, and impartiality of a judge undermines public confidence in the judiciary. Because it is not practicable to list all such conduct, the Rule is necessarily cast in general terms.

[4] Judges should participate in activities that promote ethical conduct among judges and lawyers, support professionalism within the judiciary and the legal profession, and promote access to justice for all.

[5] Impropriety occurs when the conduct compromises the ability of the judge to carry out judicial responsibilities with integrity, impartiality and competence. Actual improprieties include violations of law, court rules or provisions of this Code. The test for appearance of impropriety is whether the conduct would create in reasonable minds a perception that the judge violated this Code or engaged in other conduct that reflects adversely on the judge's honesty, impartiality, temperament, or fitness to serve as a judge.

[6] A judge should initiate and participate in community outreach activities for the purpose of promoting public understanding of and confidence in the administration of justice. In conducting such activities, the judge must act in a manner consistent with this Code.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''From the Cloister to the Street: Judicial Ethics and Public Expression'', see 64 Den. U. L. Rev. 549 (1988).

One meaning of impartiality in the judicial context is lack of bias for or against any party to a proceeding. Impartiality may also involve open-mindedness, not in the sense that judges should have no preconceptions on legal issues, but rather that judges should be willing to consider views that oppose those preconceptions and remain open to persuasion when those issues arise in a pending case. Republican Party of Minn. v. White, 536 U.S. 765, 775, 779 (2002).

Role of judiciary is one of impartiality. The role of the judiciary, if its integrity is to be maintained, is one of impartiality. People v. Martinez, 185 Colo. 187, 523 P.2d 120, aff'd, 186 Colo. 225, 526 P.2d 1325 (1974).

Courts must meticulously avoid any appearance of partiality, not merely to secure the confidence of the litigants immediately involved, but to retain public respect and secure willing and ready obedience to their judgments. Wood Bros. Homes v. City of Fort Collins, 670 P.2d 9 (Colo. App. 1983).

The duty to be impartial cannot be fulfilled where, by his active role in the presentation of the prosecution's case, a trial judge calls witnesses, presents evidence, and cross-examines defense witnesses, because these are the acts of an advocate and not a judge. People v. Martinez, 185 Colo. 187, 523 P.2d 120, aff'd, 186 Colo. 225, 526 P.2d 1325 (1974).

Such conduct constitutes reversible error. The assumption by the court of the role of advocate for the prosecution is inconsistent with the proper function of the judiciary and constitutes reversible error. People v. Martinez, 185 Colo. 187, 523 P.2d 120, aff'd, 186 Colo. 225, 526 P.2d 1325 (1974).

Judge's advice to prosecution not error unless defendant denied fair trial. While it may be ill-advised for a trial judge to point out a possible deficiency in the prosecution's case, such conduct is not reversible error where it does not so depart from the required standard of impartiality as to deny the defendant a fair trial. People v. Adler, 629 P.2d 569 (Colo. 1981).

Judge is ill-advised to be expert witness and judge on same issue in two proceedings. The actions of a retired judge in becoming an expert witness in a case concerning the same issue — size of attorney fees in an estate proceeding — as in another dispute raises the specter of an appearance of impropriety. The judge is ill-advised to place himself in this position and then preside at the trial of the latter case. However, when the judge does not actually testify in the former case, and the record contains no indication that the judge acted with prejudice, the judge does not have such an interest as to require disqualification. Colo. State Bd. of Agriculture v. First Nat'l Bank, 671 P.2d 1331 (Colo. Ct. App. 1983).

Actual bias arises where a prejudice in all probability prevents a judge from dealing fairly with a party. People v. Julien, 47 P.3d 1194 (Colo. 2002).

Disqualification requires more than mere relationship. Determining factors are closeness of the relationship and its bearing on the underlying case. Schupper v. People, 157 P.3d 516 (Colo. 2007).

Existence of a marriage relationship between a judge and a deputy district attorney in the same county is sufficient to establish grounds for disqualification even though no other facts call into question the judge's impartiality. Smith v. Beckman, 683 P.2d 1214 (Colo. App. 1984).

Having the presiding judge's wife on the jury did not affect the independence, integrity, or impartiality of the judge. Although it would have been prudent for the judge to excuse his wife, or to recuse himself as presiding judge, the judge's misjudgment was not so egregious that it requires reversal under the plain error standard. People v. Richardson, 2018 COA 120, __ P.3d __.

While a dissent may be written in a succeeding case or two, the code of judicial conduct should bury the idea of a judge dissenting on the same issue ad infinitum. People v. Steed, 189 Colo. 212, 540 P.2d 323 (1975).

Public reprimand ordered based upon appearance of impropriety arising from judge's conduct hiring the judicial district's coroner. Appointee did not apply during application period, selection was made on basis of criteria not stated in official announcement, including known friendship with the Chief Justice, and on terms significantly different from those advertised to general public. In re Johnstone, 2 P.3d 1226 (Alaska 2000).

ETHICS OPINIONS

A judge whose spouse is running for city council, which exercises supervisory responsibility over the chief of police and city manager, would not be required to disqualify himself in all cases charged by the police department. The existence of this relationship would not, in the usual case, cause the judge's impartiality to be questioned. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-09.

A part-time county judge who maintains a part-time civil practice may not exercise discretionary authority to sit as a district judge in criminal matters and also continue to appear in the same district court as a lawyer on civil matters. To allow a judge to preside over cases while practicing in the same court would erode confidence in the impartiality of the judiciary. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-06.

A judge may not advertise her ability to perform wedding ceremonies by sending fliers to wedding planners and may not otherwise solicit business as a wedding officiant. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-05.

A judge is not required to automatically disqualify himself when the parent of his estranged godchild or the parent's colleagues appear before the judge. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-04.

A judge need not automatically disqualify herself where an attorney who represented the judge's adult child, the costs of which were paid by the judge but reimbursed by the adult child, appears before the judge. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-01.

An active judge planning to retire in the near future should refrain from setting or hearing private mediations until the judge actually retires. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-09.

A judge may serve on the board of an organization devoted to seeking funds to assist defendants in obtaining court-ordered substance abuse treatment, and the judge may make recommendations to a private foundation that it should fund programs to the same end, but it would be inappropriate for the judge to assist in determining which particular defendants receive the scholarship funds. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-06.

A judge should disqualify himself sua sponte if an attorney or firm currently representing the judge, or the judge's adversary in a current matter, appears before the judge. A judge should also disqualify himself sua sponte for a reasonable period, typically for one year, after the representation has ended, when the judge's attorney, other members of that firm, the judge's adversary's attorneys, or members of that attorney's firm appear before the judge in order to avoid an appearance of impropriety. After the expiration of a reasonable period of time, disqualification is not required but may be appropriate under the circumstances. Disclosure should continue until the passage of time or circumstances make the prior representation irrelevant. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-05.

To avoid an appearance of impropriety, when a judge's spouse contributes to a political candidate, the contribution should be made in the spouse's name alone and from the spouse's separate bank account, with no reference to the judge or the judge's position. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-04.

A judge may recommend a lawyer only in circumstances where the judge has a sufficiently close relationship with the requesting party that he would automatically recuse himself from the case due to the closeness of the relationship regardless of whether the judge had been asked to make the recommendation. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-01.

Service on the judge's homeowners' association board of directors would be inappropriate where the association is large and substantial, maintains sizable cash reserves and operates under a large budget, and engages in outside transactions likely to result in litigation. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 05-3.

A judge should disqualify himself from cases in which a partner or associate in his brother-in-law's firm acts as counsel. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 05-02.

A judge need not recuse in every case involving a law enforcement agency for which the judge's spouse occasionally performs arson investigations. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 05-01.

A mentee judge may discuss pending or impending matters with his or her mentor judge but the mentee judge alone is responsible for making decisions in the matter. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 04-02.

A judge's report of an attorney's misconduct in a case pending before the judge requires the judge to disqualify himself or herself. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 04-01.

A judge who, immediately following a hearing, had lunch with one of the attorneys in the proceeding, violated Canon 2A by creating an appearance of impropriety. The closeness in time between the hearing and the social lunch could suggest to a reasonable observer that the attorney had influence over the judge based upon their social relationship. Alaska Formal Op. 021.

A judge engages in improper political activity by moderating a partisan political debate. Despite all candidates being represented and no sponsorship by any political party, political debates by their nature engage the moderator in political discourse inappropriate to judicial office. Such a debate improperly lends the prestige of judicial office to the event in a state with a non-elected judiciary. Alaska Formal Op. 023.

While a judge may ''speak, write, lecture, and teach on both legal and non-legal subjects'' and may accept compensation so long as the compensation does not exceed a reasonable amount nor exceed that which would be received by a person who is not a judge, it is not permissible for a judge to write a regular column in a for-profit publication in which the placement of the article, not within the judge's control, could be construed as endorsing other articles or advertisements that might demean the office. Md. Ethics Op. 2001-01.

A judge should not participate on the advisory board of an arbitration association where it is likely that the judge's opinions on matters before the board could be construed as the giving of legal advice. Md. Ethics Op. 1995-06.

A judge's introduction of keynote speaker at event that is primarily commemorative but which also is used to raise funds would create appearance of impropriety. Neb. Ad. Op. 07-01.

No appearance of impropriety for judge who serves on board of directors of charitable organization to allow his name to appear on the organization's stationery provided judge's position is not identified and his name not selectively emphasized. U.S. Conf. Ad. Op. No. 35.

No appearance of impropriety for judge to participate in a seminar in another country designed to improve relations with that country where judge's expenses are paid by organization unlikely to come before Utah courts. Utah Ad. Op. 88-10.

No appearance of impropriety for judge to teach a course involving only one component of the bar. Utah Ad. Op. 99-6.

Rule 1.3: Avoiding Abuse of the Prestige of Judicial Office

A judge shall not abuse the prestige of judicial office to advance the personal or economic interests* of the judge or others, or allow others to do so.

COMMENT

[1] It is improper for a judge to use or attempt to use his or her position to gain personal advantage or deferential treatment of any kind. For example, it would be improper for a judge to allude to his or her judicial status to gain favorable treatment in encounters with traffic officials. Similarly, a judge must not use judicial letterhead to gain an advantage in conducting his or her personal business.

[2] A judge may provide a reference or recommendation for an individual based upon the judge's personal knowledge. The judge may use official letterhead if the judge indicates that the reference is personal and if there is no likelihood that the use of the letterhead would reasonably be perceived as an attempt to exert pressure by reason of the judicial office.

[3] Judges may participate in the process of judicial selection by cooperating with appointing authorities and screening committees, and by providing information to such entities concerning the professional qualifications of a person being considered for judicial office.

[4] Special considerations arise when judges write or contribute to publications of for-profit entities, whether related or unrelated to the law. A judge should not permit anyone associated with the publication of such materials to exploit the judge's office in a manner that violates this Rule or other applicable law. In contracts for publication of a judge's writing, the judge should retain sufficient control over the advertising to avoid such exploitation.

ETHICS OPINIONS

Judicial officer may not advertise his or her availability to perform wedding ceremonies by sending fliers to wedding planners and may not otherwise solicit business as a wedding officiant. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-05.

Judge may not testify as a character witness on a voluntary basis, but he or she is obligated to comply with a subpoena if one is issued. Judge should consider attempting to discourage, to the extent reasonable, a party or lawyer from subpoenaing the judge as a character witness, unless the interests of justice require the judge's testimony. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-03.

Judge's spouse is not subject to the Code of Judicial Conduct and thus may freely pursue elected office. However, the judge should refrain from attending all political events in support of the spouse's candidacy and must avoid activities that could be perceived as constituting an endorsement of the candidate or using the prestige of the judicial office to benefit the spouse. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 05-05.

A judge should take appropriate steps to ensure that neither the content of the foreword to a book a judge was asked to write nor the advertising exploit the judicial office or advance the private interests of others. Utah Ad. Op. 90-8.

A judge should not receive compensation for publication on how to practice before judge's court; for-profit publication on scholarly and legal topics permissible. U.S. Conf. Ad. Op. No. 87.

CANON 2

A JUDGE SHALL PERFORM THE DUTIES OF JUDICIAL OFFICE IMPARTIALLY, COMPETENTLY, AND DILIGENTLY.

Rule 2.1: Giving Precedence to the Duties of Judicial Office

The duties of judicial office, as prescribed by law,* shall take precedence over all of a judge's personal and extrajudicial activities.

COMMENT

[1] To ensure that judges are available to fulfill their judicial duties, judges must conduct their personal and extrajudicial activities to minimize the risk of conflicts that would result in frequent disqualification. See Canon 3.

[2] Although it is not a duty of judicial office unless prescribed by law, judges are encouraged to participate in activities that promote public understanding of and confidence in the justice system.

ETHICS OPINIONS

Whether a judge may sit on the board of directors of his or her homeowner's association is to be determined on a case-by-case basis. Where the association is large and substantial, maintains significant cash reserves, operates under a sizeable budget and engages in substantial business-type contacts with the outside enterprises of the kind that might involve the association in litigation, it would be inappropriate for a judge to serve on the association's board. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 05-03.

Rule 2.2: Impartiality and Fairness

A judge shall uphold and apply the law,* and shall perform all duties of judicial office fairly and impartially.*

COMMENT

[1] To ensure impartiality and fairness to all parties, a judge must be objective and open-minded.

[2] Although each judge comes to the bench with a unique background and personal philosophy, a judge must interpret and apply the law without regard to whether the judge approves or disapproves of the law in question.

[3] When applying and interpreting the law, a judge sometimes may make good-faith errors of fact or law. Errors of this kind do not violate this Rule.

[4] It is not a violation of this Rule for a judge to make reasonable accommodations to ensure pro se litigants the opportunity to have their matters fairly heard.

Rule 2.3: Bias, Prejudice, and Harassment

(A) A judge shall perform the duties of judicial office, including administrative duties, without bias or prejudice.

(B) A judge shall not, in the performance of judicial duties, by words or conduct manifest bias or prejudice, or engage in harassment, including but not limited to bias, prejudice, or harassment based upon race, sex, gender, religion, national origin, ethnicity, disability, age, sexual orientation, marital status, socioeconomic status, or political affiliation, and shall not permit court staff, court officials, or others subject to the judge's direction and control to do so.

(C) A judge shall require lawyers in proceedings before the court to refrain from manifesting bias or prejudice, or engaging in harassment, based upon attributes including but not limited to race, sex, gender, religion, national origin, ethnicity, disability, age, sexual orientation, marital status, socioeconomic status, or political affiliation, against parties, witnesses, lawyers, or others.

(D) The restrictions of paragraphs (B) and (C) do not preclude judges or lawyers from making legitimate reference to the listed factors, or similar factors, when they are relevant to an issue in a proceeding.

COMMENT

[1] A judge who manifests bias or prejudice in a proceeding impairs the fairness of the proceeding and brings the judiciary into disrepute.

[2] Examples of manifestations of bias or prejudice include but are not limited to epithets; slurs; demeaning nicknames; negative stereotyping; attempted humor based upon stereotypes; threatening, intimidating, or hostile acts; suggestions of connections between race, ethnicity, or nationality and crime; and irrelevant references to personal characteristics. Even facial expressions and body language can convey to parties and lawyers in the proceeding, jurors, the media, and others an appearance of bias or prejudice. A judge must avoid conduct that may reasonably be perceived as prejudiced or biased.

[3] Harassment, as referred to in paragraphs (B) and (C), is verbal or physical conduct that denigrates or shows hostility or aversion toward a person on bases such as race, sex, gender, religion, national origin, ethnicity, disability, age, sexual orientation, marital status, socioeconomic status, or political affiliation.

[4] Sexual harassment includes but is not limited to sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature that is unwelcome.

Rule 2.4: External Influences on Judicial Conduct

(A) A judge shall not be swayed by public clamor or fear of criticism.

(B) A judge shall not permit family, social, political, financial, or other interests or relationships to influence the judge's judicial conduct or judgment.

(C) A judge shall not convey or permit others to convey the impression that any person or organization is in a position to influence the judge.

COMMENT

[1] An independent judiciary requires that judges decide cases according to the law and facts, without regard to whether particular laws or litigants are popular or unpopular with the public, the media, government officials, or the judge's friends or family. Confidence in the judiciary is eroded if judicial decision making is perceived to be subject to inappropriate outside influences.

ETHICS OPINIONS

The judge may, at her discretion, meet with a special interest group, but the judge is not required to do so. In assessing whether to grant a request for a meeting, the judge should require the special interest group to submit a written request specifying the purpose of the meeting. If the purpose is not improper and the judge wishes to grant the request, she should send a written response laying out ground rules for the meeting. At the meeting itself, the judge should ensure that the group is not given any impression that it is in a special position to influence the judge, and the judge should not engage in any ex parte communications with the group regarding any pending or impending matters. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 08-01.

While a mentee judge may consult with his or her mentor judge or any other judge on ''pending or impending matters,'' the extent of those consultations should be limited to aiding the mentee judge in reaching a final decision on that matter. The consultation should not in any way actually influence, or appear to influence, the decision the mentee judge is responsible for making in a pending matter. The final adjudicative responsibility for any decision resides solely with the mentee-judge. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 04-02.

Rule 2.5: Competence, Diligence, and Cooperation

(A) A judge shall perform judicial and administrative duties, competently and diligently.

(B) A judge shall cooperate with other judges and court officials in the administration of court business.

COMMENT

[1] Competence in the performance of judicial duties requires the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness, and preparation reasonably necessary to perform a judge's responsibilities of judicial office.

[2] A judge should seek the necessary docket time, court staff, expertise, and resources to discharge all adjudicative and administrative responsibilities.

[3] Prompt disposition of the court's business requires a judge to devote adequate time to judicial duties, to be punctual in attending court and expeditious in determining matters under submission, and to take reasonable measures to ensure that court officials, litigants, and their lawyers cooperate with the judge to that end.

[4] In disposing of matters promptly and efficiently, a judge must demonstrate due regard for the rights of parties to be heard and to have issues resolved without unnecessary cost or delay. A judge should monitor and supervise cases in ways that reduce or eliminate dilatory practices, avoidable delays, and unnecessary costs.

Rule 2.6: Ensuring the Right to Be Heard

(A) A judge shall accord to every person who has a legal interest in a proceeding, or that person's lawyer, the right to be heard according to law.*

(B) A judge may encourage parties to a proceeding and their lawyers to settle matters in dispute but shall not act in a manner that coerces any party into settlement.

COMMENT

[1] The right to be heard is an essential component of a fair and impartial system of justice. Substantive rights of litigants can be protected only if procedures protecting the right to be heard are observed.

[2] The steps that are permissible in ensuring a self-represented litigant's right to be heard according to law include but are not limited to liberally construing pleadings; providing brief information about the proceeding and evidentiary and foundational requirements; modifying the traditional order of taking evidence; attempting to make legal concepts understandable; explaining the basis for a ruling; and making referrals to any resources available to assist the litigant in preparation of the case. Self-represented litigants are still required to comply with the same substantive law and procedural requirements as represented litigants.

[3] The judge plays an important role in overseeing the settlement of disputes, but should be careful that efforts to further settlement do not undermine any party's right to be heard according to law. The judge should keep in mind the effect that the judge's participation in settlement discussions may have, not only on the judge's own views of the case, but also on the perceptions of the lawyers and the parties if the case remains with the judge after settlement efforts are unsuccessful. Among the factors that a judge should consider when deciding upon an appropriate settlement practice for a case are (1) whether the parties have requested or voluntarily consented to a certain level of participation by the judge in settlement discussions, (2) whether the parties and their counsel are relatively sophisticated in legal matters, (3) whether the case will be tried by the judge or a jury, (4) whether the parties participate with their counsel in settlement discussions, (5) whether any parties are unrepresented by counsel, and (6) whether the matter is civil or criminal.

[4] Judges must be mindful of the effect settlement discussions can have, not only on their objectivity and impartiality, but also on the appearance of their objectivity and impartiality. Despite a judge's best efforts, there may be instances when information obtained during settlement discussions could influence a judge's decision making during trial, and, in such instances, the judge should consider whether disqualification may be appropriate. See Rule 2.11(A)(1).

Rule 2.7: Responsibility to Decide

A judge shall hear and decide matters assigned to the judge, except when disqualification is required by Rule 2.11 or other law.*

COMMENT

[1] Judges must be available to decide the matters that come before the courts. Although there are times when disqualification is necessary to protect the rights of litigants and preserve public confidence in the independence, integrity, and impartiality of the judiciary, judges must be available to decide matters that come before the courts. Unwarranted disqualification may bring public disfavor to the court and to the judge personally. The dignity of the court, the judge's respect for fulfillment of judicial duties, and a proper concern for the burdens that may be imposed upon the judge's colleagues require that a judge not use disqualification to avoid cases that present difficult, controversial, or unpopular issues.

ANNOTATION

Unnecessary and unwarranted delay by district court judge in issuing a decision violates this Rule. In Re Jones, 728 P.2d 311 (Colo. 1986).

Rule 2.8: Decorum, Demeanor, and Communication with Jurors

(A) A judge shall require order and decorum in proceedings before the court.

(B) A judge shall be patient, dignified, and courteous to litigants, jurors, witnesses, lawyers, court staff, court officials, and others with whom the judge deals in an official capacity, and shall require similar conduct of lawyers, court staff, court officials, and others subject to the judge's direction and control.

(C) A judge shall not commend or criticize jurors for their verdict other than in a court order or opinion in a proceeding.

COMMENT

[1] The duty to hear all proceedings with patience and courtesy is not inconsistent with the duty imposed in Rule 2.5 to dispose promptly of the business of the court. Judges can be efficient and businesslike while being patient and deliberate.

[2] Commending or criticizing jurors for their verdict may imply a judicial expectation in future cases and may impair a juror's ability to be fair and impartial in a subsequent case.

[3] A judge who is not otherwise prohibited by law from doing so may meet with jurors who choose to remain after trial but should be careful not to discuss the merits of the case.

ANNOTATION

Judge who met with jurors after the trial to thank them for their service erred in using jurors' post-verdict statements to impeach the verdict. In re Hall v. Levine, 104 P. 3d 222 (Colo. 2005).

Rule 2.9: Ex Parte Communications

(A) A judge shall not initiate, permit, or consider ex parte communications, or consider other communications made to the judge outside the presence of the parties or their lawyers, concerning a pending* or impending matter,* except as follows:

(1) When circumstances require it, ex parte communication for scheduling, administrative, or emergency purposes, which does not address substantive matters, is permitted, provided:

(a) the judge reasonably believes that no party will gain a procedural, substantive, or tactical advantage as a result of the ex parte communication; and

(b) the judge makes provision promptly to notify all other parties of the substance of the ex parte communication, and gives the parties an opportunity to respond.

(2) A judge may obtain the written advice of a disinterested expert on the law applicable to a proceeding before the judge, if the judge gives advance notice to the parties of the person to be consulted and the subject matter of the advice to be solicited, and affords the parties a reasonable opportunity to object and respond to the notice and to the advice received.

(3) A judge may consult with court staff and court officials whose functions are to aid the judge in carrying out the judge's adjudicative responsibilities, or with other judges, provided the judge makes reasonable efforts to avoid receiving factual information that is not part of the record, and does not abrogate the responsibility personally to decide the matter.

(4) A judge may, with the consent of the parties, confer separately with the parties and their lawyers in an effort to settle matters pending before the judge.

(5) A judge may initiate, permit, or consider any ex parte communication when expressly authorized by law* or by consent of the parties to do so.

(B) If a judge inadvertently receives an unauthorized ex parte communication bearing upon the substance of a matter, the judge shall make provision promptly to notify the parties of the substance of the communication and provide the parties with an opportunity to respond.

(C) A judge shall not investigate facts in a matter independently, and shall consider only the evidence presented and any facts that may properly be judicially noticed.

(D) A judge shall make reasonable efforts, including providing appropriate supervision, to ensure that this Rule is not violated by court staff, court officials, and others subject to the judge's direction and control.

COMMENT

[1] To the extent reasonably possible, all parties or their lawyers shall be included in communications with a judge.

[2] Whenever the presence of a party or notice to a party is required by this Rule, it is the party's lawyer, or if the party is unrepresented, the party, who is to be present or to whom notice is to be given.

[3] The proscription against communications concerning a proceeding includes communications with lawyers, law teachers, and other persons who are not participants in the proceeding, except to the limited extent permitted by this Rule.

[4] A judge may initiate, permit, or consider ex parte communications expressly authorized by law or by consent of the parties, including when serving on therapeutic or problem-solving courts such as many mental health courts, drug courts, and truancy courts. In this capacity, judges may assume a more interactive role with the parties, treatment providers, probation officers, social workers, and others.

[5] A judge may consult with other judges on pending matters, but must avoid ex parte discussions of a case with judges who have previously been disqualified from hearing the matter, and with judges who have appellate jurisdiction over the matter.

[6] A judge may consult ethics advisory committees, outside counsel, or legal experts concerning the judge's compliance with this Code. Such consultations are not subject to the restrictions of paragraph (A)(2).

[7] As it applies to paragraph 5(C), the definition of judicially noticed facts is set forth in Rule 201 of the Colorado Rules of Evidence.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''Ex Parte Communications with a Tribunal: From Both Sides'', see 29 Colo. Law. 55 (April 2000).

The initiation of an ex parte communication by a judge with a party in a dependency hearing regarding the adequacy of her attorney's representation was improper, but judge would not be disqualified where disqualification motion and affidavits failed to allege facts from which it might be inferred that the ex parte communication demonstrated a bias against the party or her attorney. S.S. v. Wakefield, 764 P.2d 70 (Colo. 1988).

Trial court's ex-parte communication with defendant's counsel directing counsel to prepare the form of order was not improper and did not require the attorney fee order to be vacated, where the communication was made after the court had reached its decision based on full briefing of the issues and a telephone hearing, where plaintiff's counsel was given an opportunity to object and did in fact object, and where there was no evidence of bias on the part of the judge or prejudice to plaintiff as a result of the court's action. Aztec Minerals Corp. v. State, 987 P.2d 895 (Colo. App. 1999).

Applied in People v. Wieghard, 727 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1986).

A judge may, at her discretion, meet with a special interest group, but the judge is not required to do so. In assessing whether to grant a request for a meeting, the judge should require the special interest group to submit a written request specifying the purpose of the meeting. If the purpose is not improper and the judge wishes to grant the request, she should send a written response laying out ground rules for the meeting. At the meeting itself, the judge should ensure that the group is not given any impression that it is in a special position to influence the judge, and the judge should not engage in any ex parte communications with the group regarding any pending or impending matters. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 08-01.

While a mentee judge may consult with his or her mentor judge or any other judge on ''pending or impending matters,'' the extent of those consultations should be limited to aiding the mentee judge in reaching a final decision on that matter. The consultation should not in any way actually influence, or appear to influence, the decision the mentee judge is responsible for making in a pending matter. The final adjudicative responsibility for any decision resides solely with the mentee-judge. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 04-02.

Rule 2.10: Judicial Statements on Pending and Impending Cases

(A) A judge shall not make any public statement that might reasonably be expected to affect the outcome or impair the fairness of a matter pending* or impending* in any court, or make any nonpublic statement that might substantially interfere with a fair trial or hearing.

(B) A judge shall not, in connection with cases, controversies, or issues that are likely to come before the court, make pledges, promises, or commitments that are inconsistent with the impartial* performance of the adjudicative duties of judicial office.

(C) A judge shall require court staff, court officials, and others subject to the judge's direction and control to refrain from making statements that the judge would be prohibited from making by paragraphs (A) and (B).

(D) Notwithstanding the restrictions in paragraph (A), a judge may make public statements in the course of official duties, may explain court procedures, and may comment on any proceeding in which the judge is a litigant in a personal capacity, subject to Canon 1.

COMMENT

[1] This Rule's restrictions on judicial speech are essential to the maintenance of the independence, integrity, and impartiality of the judiciary.

[2] This Rule does not prohibit a judge from commenting on proceedings in which the judge is a litigant in a personal capacity. In cases in which the judge is a litigant in an official capacity, such as a writ of mandamus, the judge must not comment publicly.

ETHICS OPINIONS

While a mentee judge may consult with his or her mentor judge or any other judge on "pending or impending matters," the extent of those consultations should be limited to aiding the mentee judge in reaching a final decision on that matter. The consultation should not in any way actually influence, or appear to influence, the decision the mentee judge is responsible for making in a pending matter. The final adjudicative responsibility for any decision resides solely with the mentee-judge. Colo. J.E.AB. Ad. Op. 2008-01.

Rule 2.11: Disqualification

(A) A judge shall disqualify himself or herself in any proceeding in which the judge's impartiality* might reasonably be questioned, including but not limited to the following circumstances:

(1) The judge has a personal bias or prejudice concerning a party or a party's lawyer, or personal knowledge* of facts that are in dispute in the proceeding.

(2) The judge knows* that the judge, the judge's spouse or domestic partner,* or a person within the third degree of relationship* to either of them, or the spouse or domestic partner of such a person is:

(a) a party to the proceeding, or an officer, director, general partner, managing member, or trustee of a party;

(b) acting as a lawyer in the proceeding;

(c) a person who has more than a de minimis* interest that could be substantially affected by the proceeding; or

(d) likely to be a material witness in the proceeding.

(3) The judge knows that he or she, individually or as a fiduciary,* or the judge's spouse, domestic partner, parent, child, or other member of the judge's family residing in the judge's household,* has an economic interest* in the subject matter in controversy or in a party to the proceeding.

(4) The judge, while a judge or a judicial candidate,* has made a public statement, other than in a court proceeding, judicial decision, or opinion, that commits or appears to commit the judge to reach a particular result or rule in a particular way in the proceeding or controversy.

(5) The judge:

(a) served as a lawyer in the matter in controversy, or was associated with a lawyer who participated substantially as a lawyer in the matter during such association;

(b) served in governmental employment, and in such capacity participated personally and substantially as a lawyer or public official concerning the proceeding, or has publicly expressed in such capacity an opinion concerning the merits of the particular matter in controversy;

(c) was a material witness concerning the matter; or

(d) previously presided as a judge over the matter in another court.

(B) A judge shall keep informed about the judge's personal and fiduciary economic interests, and make a reasonable effort to keep informed about the personal economic interests of the judge's spouse or domestic partner and minor children residing in the judge's household.

(C) A judge subject to disqualification under this Rule, other than for bias or prejudice under paragraph (A)(1), may disclose on the record the basis of the judge's disqualification and may ask the parties and their lawyers to consider, outside the presence of the judge and court personnel, whether to waive disqualification. If, following the disclosure, the parties and lawyers agree, without participation by the judge or court personnel, that the judge should not be disqualified, the judge may participate in the proceeding. The agreement shall be incorporated into the record of the proceeding.

(D) In limited circumstances, the rule of necessity applies and allows judges to hear a case in which all other judges also would have a disqualifying interest or the case could not otherwise be heard.

COMMENT

[1] Under this Rule, a judge is disqualified whenever the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned, regardless of whether any of the specific provisions of paragraphs (A)(1) through (5) apply. The term ''recusal'' is sometimes used interchangeably with the term ''disqualification.''

[2] A judge's obligation not to hear or decide matters in which disqualification is required applies regardless of whether a motion to disqualify is filed.

[3] The rule of necessity may override the rule of disqualification. The rule of necessity is an exception to the principle that every litigant is entitled to be heard by a judge who is not subject to disqualifications which might reasonably cause the judge's impartiality to be questioned. The rule of necessity has been invoked for trial court and court of appeals judges where disqualifications exist as to all members of the court and there is no other judge available. It has been invoked as to the supreme court when all or a majority of its members have a conflict of interest; the importance of having the court render a decision overrides the existence of the conflict, which might otherwise leave litigating parties in limbo. Under the rule of necessity, a judge might be required to participate in judicial review of a judicial salary statute, or might be the only judge available in a matter requiring immediate judicial action, such as a hearing on probable cause or a temporary restraining order. In matters that require immediate action, the judge must disclose on the record the basis for possible disqualification and make reasonable efforts to transfer the matter to another judge as soon as practicable. Rather than deny a party access to court, judicial disqualification yields to the demands of necessity.

[4] The fact that a lawyer in a proceeding is affiliated with a law firm with which a relative of the judge is affiliated does not itself disqualify the judge. If, however, the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned under paragraph (A), or the relative is known by the judge to have an interest in the law firm that could be substantially affected by the proceeding under paragraph (A)(2)(c), the judge's disqualification is required.

[5] A judge should disclose on the record information that the judge believes the parties or their lawyers might reasonably consider relevant to a possible motion for disqualification, even if the judge believes there is no basis for disqualification.

[6] ''Economic interest,'' as set forth in the Terminology section, means ownership of more than a one percent legal or equitable interest in a party, or a legal or equitable interest in a party of a fair market value exceeding $5,000, or a relationship as a director, advisor, or other active participant in the affairs of a party, except that:

(1) Ownership in a mutual or common investment fund that holds securities, or of securities held in a managed fund, is not an ''economic interest'' in such securities unless the judge participates in the management of the fund;

(2) securities held by an educational, religious, charitable, fraternal, or civic organization in which the judge or the judge's spouse, domestic partner, parent, or child serves as a director, officer, advisor, or other participant is not an ''economic interest'' in securities held by the organization;

(3) the proprietary interest of a policy holder in a mutual insurance company, of a depositer in a financial institution or deposits or proprietary interests the judge may maintain as a member of a mutual savings association or credit union, or a similar proprietary interest is an ''economic interest'' in the organization only if the outcome of the proceeding could substantially affect the value of the interest; and

(4) ownership of government securities is an ''economic interest'' in the issuer only if the outcome of the proceeding could substantially affect the value of the securities.

Law reviews. For article, ''Disqualification of Judges'', see 13 Colo. Law. 54 (1984).

Courts must meticulously avoid any appearance of partiality, not merely to secure the confidence of the litigants immediately involved, but to retain public respect and secure willing and ready obedience to their judgments. Wood Bros. Homes v. City of Fort Collins, 670 P.2d 9 (Colo. App. 1983).

Upon reasonable inference of a "bent of mind" that will prevent judge from dealing fairly with party seeking recusal, it is incumbent on trial judge to recuse himself. Wright v. District Court, 731 P.2d 661 (Colo. 1987).

At least an appearance of bias or prejudice existed due to a professional relationship between the trial judge and an expert witness for defendants and the trial court erred in denying a motion for recusal. Hammons v. Birket, 759 P.2d 783 (Colo. App. 1988).

Not all ex parte communications are per se grounds for disqualification under C.R.C.P. 97. The critical test is whether the affidavits in support of the motion to disqualify, along with any other matters of record, establish facts from which it may reasonably be inferred that the judge is prejudiced or biased, or appears to be prejudiced or biased, in favor of or against a party to the litigation. Goebel v. Benton, 830 P.2d 995 (Colo. 1992).

Not every connection between a judge and a participant in a case will require the judge to disqualify himself or herself. It is a judge's duty to sit on a case unless a reasonable person could infer that a judge would be prejudiced against a defendant. People v. Crumb, 203 P.3d 587 (Colo. App., Sept. 18, 2008).

Although judges hearing appeal from trial court's dismissal of antitrust action brought against software manufacturer used the operating system at issue in the lawsuit, raising the potential for a conflict of interest, the rule of necessity required those judges to proceed with the case. Pomerantz v. Microsoft Corp., 50 P.3d 929 (Colo. App. 2002).

Successor judge erred in determining that the same circumstances that led the trial judge to recuse himself or herself from defendant's other cases also existed before the commencement of trial in this case. People v. Schupper, 124 P.3d 856 (Colo. App. 2005), aff'd, 157 P.3d 516 (Colo. 2007).

Appearance of impropriety, not actual prejudice, is sufficient to warrant recusal. Where recusal is sought based upon the relationship of the judge to another person, it is the closeness of the relationship and its bearing on the underlying case that determines whether disqualification is necessary. People ex rel. A.G., 264 P.3d 615 (Colo. App. 2010) (decided under former canon 3(C)), rev'd on other grounds, 262 P.3d 646 (Colo. 2011).

Trial court judge erred by determining the relationship between his court clerk and the witness did not warrant judge's recusal. Where court clerk's daughter, as caseworker, was material witness in the case, absent waiver, judge abused his discretion by not recusing from the case. People ex rel. A.G., 264 P.3d 615 (Colo. App. 2010) (decided under former canon 3(C)), rev'd on other grounds, 262 P.3d 646 (Colo. 2011).

ETHICS OPINIONS

A judge who sits on the county bench in a small, rural district and whose spouse wishes to run for election to the city council, which oversees the chief of police, is not required to disqualify himself in cases charged by the police department. He should, however, consider whether the facts and circumstances make disqualification appropriate in a particular case, and, if his spouse is elected, he should disclose her role on the city council in cases charged by the police department. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-09.

A judge is not required to disqualify himself when the judge's estranged godchild's father appears before him, solely because of that relationship, but disqualification may nevertheless be appropriate depending on the judge's subjective and objective analysis of the circumstances. The judge should, however, disclose the godparent relationship to each party when his godchild's father appears in his court. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-04.

A judge need not disqualify herself sua sponte when the attorney who represented the judge's adult daughter appears before the judge. The judge should consult her own conscience to determine whether disqualification is warranted if the judge maintains a disabling prejudice for or against the attorney. If the judge concludes that disqualification is unnecessary, disclosure of the daughter's representation may still be appropriate until the passage of time, the limited consequences of the prior matter and the nature of the judge's relationship with the attorney have made the prior representation irrelevant. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-01.

Withdrawing Opinion 2004-01, the Board determines that a judge's report of attorney misconduct, without more, does not require the judge automatically to recuse from the reported attorney's cases. If the judge has a personal bias or prejudice against the attorney, or if the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned if the judge did not recuse, the judge must recuse from the reported attorney's cases. If the judge determines that the judge must recuse, the judge's disqualification from the reported attorney's cases does not require the judge to recuse in pending or new cases filed generally by the attorney's law firm but that do not include an entry of appearance by the reported attorney. Colo. J.E.A.B. Ad. Op. 2011-01.

A judge who reports an attorney to Attorney Regulation Counsel but concludes that disqualification from the attorney's cases is not required has a duty to sit on the reported attorney's cases and must disclose the report to the parties and their counsel until the disciplinary proceeding stemming from the report has been closed. Colo. J.E.A.B. Ad. Op. 2012-06.

A judge should disqualify himself or herself sua sponte if an attorney or firm currently representing the judge, or representing the judge's adversary in a current matter, appears before the judge. A judge should also continue to disqualify himself or herself sua sponte for a reasonable period of time after the representation has ended, typically one year, when the judge's attorney, other members of that firm, the judge's adversary's attorneys, or members of that attorney's firm appear before the judge. After the expiration of a reasonable period of time, continued disqualification is not required, but may be appropriate under the facts and circumstances of the case in which the judge was represented. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-05.

A judge who presides over a county court in a small rural jurisdiction should disqualify himself when any member of his brother-in-law's firm appears in the court on which he serves. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 05-02.

A judge must disqualify in any case in which the judge's spouse, who is an officer employed by a fire protection district which assists the sheriff's department with arson investigations, or those he or she supervises, participated in the investigation of the case. The judge is not, however, required to disqualify from all cases involving a law enforcement agency for which the judge's spouse occasionally performs arson investigations. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 05-01.

Rule 2.12: Supervisory Duties

(A) A judge shall require court staff, court officials, and others subject to the judge's direction and control to act in a manner consistent with the judge's obligations under this Code.

(B) A judge with supervisory authority for the performance of other judges shall take reasonable measures to ensure that those judges properly discharge their judicial responsibilities, including the prompt disposition of matters before them.

COMMENT

[1] A judge is responsible for his or her own conduct and for the conduct of others, such as staff, when those persons are acting at the judge's direction or control. A judge may not direct court personnel to engage in conduct on the judge's behalf or as the judge's representative when such conduct would violate the Code if undertaken by the judge.

[2] Public confidence in the judicial system depends upon timely justice. To promote the efficient administration of justice, a judge with supervisory authority must take the steps needed to ensure that judges under his or her supervision administer their workloads promptly.

Rule 2.13: Administrative Appointments

(A) In making administrative appointments, a judge:
(1) shall exercise the power of appointment impartially* and on the basis of merit; and
(2) shall avoid nepotism, favoritism, and unnecessary appointments.
(B) A judge shall not approve compensation of appointees beyond the fair value of services rendered.

COMMENT

[1] Appointees of a judge include assigned counsel, officials such as referees, commissioners, special masters, receivers, and guardians, and personnel such as clerks, secretaries, and bailiffs. Consent by the parties to an appointment or an award of compensation does not relieve the judge of the obligation prescribed by paragraph (A).

[2] Unless otherwise defined by law, nepotism is the appointment or hiring of any relative within the third degree of relationship of either the judge or the judge's spouse or domestic partner, or the spouse or domestic partner of such relative.

Rule 2.14: Disability and Impairment

A judge having a reasonable belief that the performance of a lawyer or another judge is impaired by drugs or alcohol, or by a mental, emotional, or physical condition, shall take appropriate action, which may include a confidential referral to a lawyer or judicial assistance program.

COMMENT

[1] ''Appropriate action'' means action intended and reasonably likely to help the judge or lawyer in question address the problem and prevent harm to the justice system. Depending upon the circumstances, appropriate action may include but is not limited to speaking directly to the impaired person, notifying an individual with supervisory responsibility over the impaired person, or making a referral to an assistance program.

[2] Taking or initiating corrective action by way of referral to an assistance program may satisfy a judge's responsibility under this Rule. Assistance programs have many approaches for offering help to impaired judges and lawyers, such as intervention, counseling, or referral to appropriate health care professionals. Depending upon the gravity of the conduct that has come to the judge's attention, however, the judge may be required to take other action, such as reporting the impaired judge or lawyer to the appropriate authority, agency, or body. See Rule 2.15.

Rule 2.15: Responding to Judicial and Lawyer Misconduct

(A) A judge having knowledge* that another judge has committed a violation of this Code that raises a substantial question regarding the judge's honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness as a judge in other respects shall inform the appropriate authority.*
(B) A judge having knowledge that a lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct that raises a substantial question regarding the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness as a lawyer in other respects shall inform the appropriate authority.
(C) A judge who receives information indicating a substantial likelihood that another judge has committed a violation of this Code shall take appropriate action.
(D) A judge who receives information indicating a substantial likelihood that a lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct shall take appropriate action.

COMMENT

[1] Taking action to address known misconduct is a judge's obligation. Paragraphs (A) and (B) impose an obligation on the judge to report to the appropriate disciplinary authority the known misconduct of another judge or a lawyer that raises a substantial question regarding the honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness of that judge or lawyer. Ignoring or denying known misconduct among one's judicial colleagues or members of the legal profession undermines a judge's responsibility to participate in efforts to ensure public respect for the justice system. This Rule limits the reporting obligation to those offenses that an independent judiciary must vigorously endeavor to prevent.

[2] A judge who does not have actual knowledge that another judge or a lawyer may have committed misconduct, but receives information indicating a substantial likelihood of such misconduct, is required to take appropriate action under paragraphs (C) and (D). Appropriate action may include, but is not limited to, communicating directly with the judge who may have violated this Code, communicating with a supervising judge, or reporting the suspected violation to the appropriate authority or other agency or body. Similarly, actions to be taken in response to information indicating that a lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct may include but are not limited to communicating directly with the lawyer who may have committed the violation, or reporting the suspected violation to the appropriate authority or other agency or body.

ETHICS OPINIONS

Withdrawing Opinion 2004-01, the Board determines that a judge's report of attorney misconduct, without more, does not require the judge automatically to recuse from the reported attorney's cases. If the judge has a personal bias or prejudice against the attorney, or if the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned if the judge did not recuse, the judge must recuse from the reported attorney's cases. If the judge determines that the judge must recuse, the judge's disqualification from the reported attorney's cases does not require the judge to recuse in pending or new cases filed generally by the attorney's law firm but that do not include an entry of appearance by the reported attorney. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. Ad. 2011-01.

A judge who reports an attorney to Attorney Regulation Counsel but concludes that disqualification from the attorney's cases is not required has a duty to sit on the reported attorney's cases and must disclose the report to the parties and their counsel until the disciplinary proceeding stemming from the report has been closed. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. Ad. 2012-06.

Rule 2.16: Cooperation with Disciplinary Authorities

(A) A judge shall cooperate and be candid and honest with judicial and lawyer disciplinary agencies.

(B) A judge shall not retaliate, directly or indirectly, against a person known* or suspected to have assisted or cooperated with an investigation of a judge or a lawyer.

COMMENT

[1] Cooperation with investigations and proceedings of judicial and lawyer discipline agencies, as required in paragraph (A), instills confidence in judges' commitment to the integrity of the judicial system and the protection of the public.

CANON 3

A JUDGE SHALL CONDUCT THE JUDGE'S PERSONAL AND EXTRAJUDICIAL ACTIVITIES TO MINIMIZE THE RISK OF CONFLICT WITH THE OBLIGATIONS OF JUDICIAL OFFICE.

Rule 3.1: Extrajudicial Activities in General

A judge may engage in extrajudicial activities, except as prohibited by law* or this Code. However, when engaging in extrajudicial activities, a judge shall not:

(A) participate in activities that will interfere with the proper performance of the judge's judicial duties;

(B) participate in activities that will lead to frequent disqualification of the judge;

(C) participate in activities that would appear to a reasonable person to undermine the judge's independence,* integrity,* or impartiality;*

(D) engage in conduct that would appear to a reasonable person to be coercive; or

(E) make use of court premises, staff, stationery, equipment, or other resources, except for incidental use for activities that concern the law, the legal system, or the administration of justice, or unless such additional use is permitted by law.

COMMENT

[1] To the extent that time permits, and judicial independence and impartiality are not compromised, judges are encouraged to engage in appropriate extrajudicial activities. Judges are uniquely qualified to engage in extrajudicial activities that concern the law, the legal system, and the administration of justice, such as by speaking, writing, teaching, or participating in scholarly research projects. In addition, judges are permitted and encouraged to engage in educational, religious, charitable, fraternal or civic extrajudicial activities not conducted for profit, even when the activities do not involve the law. See Rule 3.7.

[2] Participation in both law-related and other extrajudicial activities helps integrate judges into their communities, and furthers public understanding of and respect for courts and the judicial system.

[3] Discriminatory actions and expressions of bias or prejudice by a judge, even outside the judge's official or judicial actions, are likely to appear to a reasonable person to call into question the judge's integrity and impartiality. Examples include jokes or other remarks that demean individuals based upon their race, sex, gender, religion, national origin, ethnicity, disability, age, sexual orientation, or socioeconomic status. For the same reason, a judge's extrajudicial activities must not be conducted in connection or affiliation with an organization that practices invidious discrimination. See Rule 3.6.

[4] While engaged in permitted extrajudicial activities, judges must not coerce others or take action that would reasonably be perceived as coercive. For example, depending upon the circumstances, a judge's solicitation of contributions or memberships for an organization, even as permitted by Rule 3.7(A), might create the risk that the person solicited would feel obligated to respond favorably, or would do so to curry favor with the judge.

ANNOTATION

Judge's use of judicial chambers stationery for letters to opposing counsel in personal matter creates appearance of impropriety; objectively reasonable person would not know the difference between judicial chambers stationery and official court stationery. Judge privately reprimanded for this and other misconduct. Inquiry Concerning a Judge, 822 P.2d 1333, 1340 (Alaska 1991).

Public reprimand appropriate where judge was arrested for and plead guilty to drunk driving. In re Weaver, 691 N.W.2d 725 (Iowa 2004).

District court judge's two-month secret intimate relationship with assistant county attorney, who appeared before him on behalf of State on daily basis, was conduct that brought disrepute to judicial office, and warranted 60 day suspension without pay, despite lack of evidence that judge's relationship with county attorney prejudiced any defendant who appeared before him, where affair occurred with subordinate public servant, judge allowed affair to remain hidden from those who appeared before him against assistant county attorney, judge and county attorney engaged in intimate encounters in courthouse, and both parties were married to other people. In re Gerard, 631 N.W.2 271 (Iowa 2001).

Juvenile court judge's retaliation and intemperate statements directed at the attorneys required by law to appear on child welfare cases was at least negligent and ran afoul of duties to give precedence to his or her judicial duties over all other activities of the judge, to be patient and courteous to all persons dealt with in a judicial capacity, and to disqualify himself if impartiality could reasonably be questioned; the judge allowed his non-judicial activities, namely his federal action against the Director of the Office of the Guardian ad Litem, to take priority over his judicial duty to hear child welfare cases, and he did so by treating the Director, the attorneys in her office, and the attorneys of the Attorney General's office with considerable disrespect, creating a continuing situation where his impartiality could reasonably be, and was, repeatedly questioned. In re Anderson, 82 P.3d 1134 (Utah 2004).

ETHICS OPINIONS

The judge may speak at a CLE which is, in effect, limited to only one component of the bar, provided that the judge satisfies certain conditions. In addition, the judge should consider with care the topic on which he presents, and should avoid presenting on a topic such as trial strategy, which could raise questions regarding the judge's impartiality. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 08-03.

Judges are not permitted to be members of special bar association, as it would convey the appearance of a special relationship to one side in the adversarial process. Judges should avoid membership in even the most praiseworthy and noncontroversial organizations if they espouse or are dedicated to a particular legal philosophy or position. Alaska Ad. Op. 99-4.

A judge may not participate in an infomercial for a local surgeon, which would demean the judicial office and lend the prestige of the judge's office to advance the physician's private interests. Md. Ad. Op. 2006-11.

Judge may serve as a director of a non-profit corporation formed to solicit funds from the community to provide incentives for participants in a local Drug Court. Md. Ad. Op. 2005-11.

Judge may make presentations before groups representing single components of the judicial system as long as the judge is careful about the contents of the discussions and does not give legal advice, comment on pending cases, or offer opinions that would indicate biases or prejudgment of certain types of cases. The judge must also be willing to accept invitations from other components in the system. Utah Ad. Op. 2006-06.

Judge may maintain membership in a cycling club that is sponsored, in part, by a law firm. Utah Ad. Op. 03-01.

Rule 3.2: Appearances before Governmental Bodies and Consultation with Government Officials

A judge shall not appear voluntarily at a public hearing before, or otherwise consult with, an executive or a legislative body or official, except:

(A) in connection with matters concerning the law, the legal system, or the administration of justice;

(B) in connection with matters about which the judge acquired knowledge or expertise in the course of the judge's judicial duties; or

(C) when the judge is acting pro se in a matter involving the judge's legal or economic interests, or when the judge is acting in a fiduciary* capacity.

COMMENT

[1] Judges possess special expertise in matters of law, the legal system, and the administration of justice, and may properly share that expertise with governmental bodies and executive or legislative branch officials.

[2] In appearing before governmental bodies or consulting with government officials, judges must be mindful that they remain subject to other provisions of this Code, such as Rule 1.3, prohibiting judges from using the prestige of office to advance their own or others' interests, Rule 2.10, governing public comment on pending and impending matters, Rule 2.11, outlining the circumstances under which a judge must disqualify himself or herself, and Rule 3.1(C), prohibiting judges from engaging in extrajudicial activities that would appear to a reasonable person to undermine the judge's independence, integrity, or impartiality.

[3] In general, it would be an unnecessary and unfair burden to prohibit judges from appearing before governmental bodies or consulting with government officials on matters that are likely to affect them as private citizens, such as zoning proposals affecting their real property. In engaging in such activities, however, judges must not refer to their judicial positions, and must otherwise exercise caution to avoid using the prestige of judicial office.

ETHICS OPINIONS

A district court judge may not accept a voting or non-voting board position on a local community board that combines integrated services and legislative advocacy because such membership would involve legislative advocacy beyond matters to improve the law. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 2007-07.

The judge should not accept appointment to a blue ribbon panel of public and private leaders charged with "reducing the state's contribution and vulnerability to a changed climate'' by developing a set of recommendations and policy proposals addressing how Colorado can mitigate and adapt to climate change. The judge's work on the panel would involve consulting with or providing recommendations to the legislative and executive branches on climate control issues, which are unconnected with the law, the legal system, the administration of justice, or the role of the judiciary. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-08.

Rule 3.3: Testifying as a Character Witness

A judge shall not testify as a character witness in a judicial, administrative, or other adjudicatory proceeding or otherwise vouch for the character of a person in a legal proceeding, except when duly summoned.

COMMENT

[1] A judge who, without being subpoenaed, testifies as a character witness abuses the prestige of judicial office to advance the interests of another. See Rule 1.3. Except in unusual circumstances where the demands of justice require, a judge should discourage a party from requiring the judge to testify as a character witness.

ETHICS OPINIONS

A judge may not testify as a character witness on a voluntary basis, but he is obligated to comply with a subpoena if one is issued. Where a judge has been asked to provide such testimony, the judge should consider whether the interests of justice require his or her testimony, and if not should then consider attempting to discourage the subpoenaing party or lawyer from requiring the testimony, because of the possibility that the testimony is being sought to trade on the judge's position. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-03.

A judge may not write a letter to the pardon board at the request of convicted felon sentenced by the judge, nor should the judge write such a letter of the judge's own initiative. Alaska Ad. Op. 2003-01.

A judge should not testify as a character witness for a criminal defendant in a trial unless the judge has been subpoenaed. The giving of such character testimony by judges should be discouraged, and is appropriate only where a subpoena makes it unavoidable. Utah Ad. Op. 88-09.

Rule 3.4: Appointments to Governmental Positions

A judge shall not accept appointment to a governmental committee, board, commission, or other governmental position, unless it is one that concerns the law, the legal system, or the administration of justice.

COMMENT

[1] Rule 3.4 implicitly acknowledges the value of judges accepting appointments to entities that concern the law, the legal system, or the administration of justice. Even in such instances, however, a judge should assess the appropriateness of accepting an appointment, paying particular attention to the subject matter of the appointment and the availability and allocation of judicial resources, including the judge's time commitments, and giving due regard to the requirements of the independence and impartiality of the judiciary.

[2] A judge may represent his or her country, state, or locality on ceremonial occasions or in connection with historical, educational, or cultural activities. Such representation does not constitute acceptance of a government position.

[3] Complete separation of a judge from extrajudicial activities is neither possible nor wise; a judge should not become isolated from the community in which the judge lives. Every governmental board, committee and commission is different and must be evaluated independently to determine whether judicial participation is appropriate. In considering the appropriateness of accepting extrajudicial assignments, a judge should ensure that the mission and work of the board or commission relates to the law, the legal system, or the administration of justice. To effectuate the Code's goal of encouraging judges to participate in their communities, the relationship between the board's mission and the law, legal system, or the administration of justice should be construed broadly. Any judicial ethics advisory opinions issued before adoption of this Code requiring a narrow link or stringent nexus are no longer valid. A judge should avoid participating in governmental boards or commissions that might lead to the judge's frequent disqualification or that might call into question the judge's impartiality. The changing nature of some organizations and of their relationship to the law makes it necessary for a judge to regularly reexamine the activities of each organization with which the judge is affiliated to determine if it is proper to continue the affiliation.

ETHICS OPINIONS

Judge's service on a state Children's Justice Act task force created by federal statute and requiring state judge membership should be limited to roles permitted by ethical limitations. ''Fundamentally, whether a judge may sit on any board or committee, turns on whether that board or committee is devoted to the improvement of the law or the administration of justice, and, regardless of whether it is or not, whether participation by a judge would lead to an appearance of partiality in cases coming before that judge.'' Ak. Ad. Op. 2001-01.

Rule 3.5: Use of Nonpublic Information

A judge shall not intentionally disclose or use nonpublic information* acquired in a judicial capacity for any purpose unrelated to the judge's judicial duties.

COMMENT

[1] In the course of performing judicial duties, a judge may acquire information of commercial or other value that is unavailable to the public. The judge must not reveal or use such information for personal gain or for any purpose unrelated to his or her judicial duties.

[2] This rule is not intended, however, to affect a judge's ability to act on information as necessary to protect the health or safety of the judge or a member of a judge's family, court personnel, or other judicial officers if consistent with other provisions of this Code.

Rule 3.6: Affiliation with Discriminatory Organizations

(A) A judge shall not hold membership in any organization that practices invidious discrimination on the basis of race, sex, gender, religion, national origin, ethnicity, or sexual orientation.

(B) A judge shall not use the benefits or facilities of an organization if the judge knows* or should know that the organization practices invidious discrimination on one or more of the bases identified in paragraph (A). A judge's attendance at an event in a facility of an organization that the judge is not permitted to join is not a violation of this Rule when the judge's attendance is an isolated event that could not reasonably be perceived as an endorsement of the organization's practices.

COMMENT

[1] A judge's public manifestation of approval of invidious discrimination on any basis gives rise to the appearance of impropriety and diminishes public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary. A judge's membership in an organization that practices invidious discrimination creates the perception that the judge's impartiality is impaired.

[2] An organization is generally said to discriminate invidiously if it arbitrarily excludes from membership on the basis of race, sex, gender, religion, national origin, ethnicity, or sexual orientation, persons who would otherwise be eligible for admission. Whether an organization practices invidious discrimination is a complex question to which judges should be attentive. The answer cannot be determined from a mere examination of an organization's current membership rolls, but rather, depends upon how the organization selects members, as well as other relevant factors, such as whether the organization is dedicated to the preservation of religious, ethnic, or cultural values of legitimate common interest to its members, or whether it is an intimate, purely private organization whose membership limitations could not constitutionally be prohibited.

[3] When a judge learns that an organization to which the judge belongs engages in invidious discrimination, the judge must resign immediately from the organization.

[4] A judge's membership in a religious organization as a lawful exercise of the freedom of religion is not a violation of this Rule.

[5] This Rule does not apply to national or state military service.

Rule 3.7: Participation in Educational, Religious, Charitable, Fraternal, or Civic Organizations and Activities

(A) Subject to the requirements of Rule 3.1, a judge may participate in activities sponsored by organizations or governmental entities concerned with the law, the legal system, or the administration of justice, and those sponsored by or on behalf of educational, religious, charitable, fraternal, or civic organizations not conducted for profit, including but not limited to the following activities:

(1) assisting such an organization or entity in planning related to fund-raising, and participating in the management and investment of the organization's or entity's funds;

(2) soliciting* contributions* for such an organization or entity, but only from members of the judge's family,* or from judges over whom the judge does not exercise supervisory or appellate authority;

(3) soliciting membership for such an organization or entity, even though the membership dues or fees generated may be used to support the objectives of the organization or entity, but only if the organization or entity is concerned with the law, the legal system, or the administration of justice;

(4) appearing or speaking at, receiving an award or other recognition at, being featured on the program of, and permitting his or her title to be used in connection with an event of such an organization or entity, but if the event serves a fund-raising purpose, the judge may participate only if the event concerns the law, the legal system, or the administration of justice;

(5) making recommendations to such a public or private fund-granting organization or entity in connection with its programs and activities, but only if the organization or entity is concerned with the law, the legal system, or the administration of justice; and

(6) serving as an officer, director, trustee, or nonlegal advisor of such an organization or entity, unless it is likely that the organization or entity:

(a) will be engaged in proceedings that would ordinarily come before the judge; or

(b) will frequently be engaged in adversary proceedings in the court of which the judge is a member, or in any court subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the court of which the judge is a member.

(B) A judge may encourage lawyers to provide pro bono publico legal services.

COMMENT

[1] The activities permitted by paragraph (A) generally include those sponsored by or undertaken on behalf of public or private not-for-profit educational institutions, and other not-for-profit organizations, including law-related, charitable, and other organizations.

[2] Even for law-related organizations, a judge should consider whether the membership and purposes of the organization, or the nature of the judge's participation in or association with the organization, would conflict with the judge's obligation to refrain from activities that reflect adversely upon a judge's independence, integrity, and impartiality.

[3] Mere attendance at an event, whether or not the event serves a fund-raising purpose, does not constitute a violation of paragraph 4(A). It is also generally permissible for a judge to serve as an usher or a food server or preparer, or to perform similar functions, at fund-raising events sponsored by educational, religious, charitable, fraternal, or civic organizations. Such activities are not solicitation and do not present an element of coercion or abuse the prestige of judicial office.

[4] Identification of a judge's position in educational, religious, charitable, fraternal, or civic organizations on letterhead used for fund-raising or membership solicitation does not violate this Rule. The letterhead may list the judge's title or judicial office if comparable designations are used for other persons.

[5] In addition to appointing lawyers to serve as counsel for indigent parties in individual cases, a judge may promote broader access to justice by encouraging lawyers to participate in pro bono publico legal services, if in doing so the judge does not employ coercion, or abuse the prestige of judicial office. Such encouragement may take many forms, including providing lists of available programs, training lawyers to do pro bono publico legal work, and participating in events recognizing lawyers who have done pro bono publico work.

ETHICS OPINIONS

A district court judge may not accept a voting or non-voting board position on a local community board that combines integrated services and legislative advocacy because such membership would involve legislative advocacy beyond matters to improve the law. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-07.

A judge may serve on a grant-making committee of a community foundation. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-03.

A judge may serve on the board of directors of a public charter school in a neighboring judicial district. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 07-02.

The judge should not accept appointment to a blue-ribbon panel of public and private leaders charged with ''reducing the state's contribution and vulnerability to a changed climate'' by developing a set of recommendations and policy proposals addressing how Colorado can mitigate and adapt to climate change. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-08.

A judge may serve on the board of an organization devoted to seeking funds to assist defendants in obtaining court-ordered substance abuse treatment, and he may make recommendations to a private foundation that it should fund programs to the same end, but it would be inappropriate for the judge to assist in determining which particular defendants receive the scholarship funds. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-06.

A judge may make monetary contributions to further pro bono activities, but it is inappropriate for judges to solicit attorneys to participate in particular pro bono programs. Acknowledging the pro bono activity of particular attorneys would be permissible if it were done in a manner that is public, but letters of congratulation sent directly to the attorney could be interpreted as evidence that the attorneys are in a special position of influence or that the judge's ability to act impartially has been compromised. Alaska Ad. Op. 2004-01.

Judge may as college trustee co-host outreach event for alumni who are lawyers. Md. Ad. Op. 2008-06.

Judge may serve as a director of a non-profit corporation formed to solicit funds from the community to provide incentives for participants in a local Drug Court. Md. Ad. Op. 2005-11.

A judge shall not be a director or officer of an organization if it is likely that the organization will be engaged regularly in adversary proceedings in any court. Md. Ad. Op. 2008-05.

A judge may not serve on the board of a mental health organization whose representatives frequently appear in the judge's court. Utah Ad. Op. 07-04.

Judge may participate in a nationally renowned non-profit musical education and performance organization. Utah. Ad. Op. 97-3.

Part-time traffic referee may not practice criminal law. The referee also may not practice law at the court or courts which the referee serves. The judges of the district must enter disqualification in all cases in which the referee appears as counsel. Utah Ad. Op. 07-02.

Rule 3.8: Appointments to Fiduciary Positions

(A) A judge shall not accept appointment to serve in a fiduciary* position, such as executor, administrator, trustee, guardian, attorney in fact, or other personal representative, except for the estate, trust, or person of a member of the judge's family,* and then only if such service will not interfere with the proper performance of judicial duties.

(B) A judge shall not serve in a fiduciary position if the judge as fiduciary will likely be engaged in proceedings that would ordinarily come before the judge, or if the estate, trust, or ward becomes involved in adversary proceedings in the court on which the judge serves, or one under its appellate jurisdiction.

(C) A judge acting in a fiduciary capacity shall be subject to the same restrictions on engaging in financial activities that apply to a judge personally.

(D) If a person who is serving in a fiduciary position becomes a judge, he or she must comply with this Rule as soon as reasonably practicable, but in no event later than one year after becoming a judge.

COMMENT

[1] A judge should recognize that other restrictions imposed by this Code may conflict with a judge's obligations as a fiduciary; in such circumstances, a judge should resign as fiduciary. For example, serving as a fiduciary might require frequent disqualification of a judge under Rule 2.11 because a judge is deemed to have an economic interest in shares of stock held by a trust if the amount of stock held is more than de minimis.

Rule 3.9: Service as Arbitrator or Mediator

A judge shall not act as an arbitrator or a mediator or perform other judicial functions apart from the judge's official duties unless expressly authorized by law.*

COMMENT

[1] This Rule does not prohibit a judge from participating in arbitration, mediation, or settlement conferences performed as part of assigned judicial duties. Rendering dispute resolution services apart from those duties, whether or not for economic gain, is prohibited unless it is expressly authorized by law.

ETHICS OPINIONS

Active judge soon to retire and participate in the Senior Judge Program should refrain from setting or hearing private mediations until after he retires. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-09.

A judge may, with the consent of the parties, confer separately with the parties and their lawyers in an effort to mediate or settle matters pending before the judge. Trial judges conducting settlement conferences in their own cases must, however, have a heightened awareness of the appearance that the parties might feel improper pressure to settle or that the judge will no longer be impartial if the case fails to settle. Alaska Ad. Op. 2006-01.

Rule 3.10: Practice of Law

A judge shall not practice law except as permitted by law or this Code. A judge may act pro se but should not defend himself or herself when sued in an official capacity. The judge may, without compensation, give legal advice to and draft or review documents for a member of the judge's family,* but is prohibited from serving as the family member's lawyer in any forum.

COMMENT

[1] A judge may act pro se in all legal matters, including matters involving litigation and matters involving appearances before or other dealings with governmental bodies. A judge must not use the prestige of office to advance the judge's personal or family interests. See Rule 1.3.

[2] A judge who drafts or reviews documents as permitted by this rule must comply with C.R.C.P. 11(b).

ETHICS OPINIONS

Judge may not participate in a local legal service's call-a-lawyer program by providing advice to callers, anonymous or otherwise, because doing so would constitute the practice of law. The judge may, however, engage in activities intended to encourage attorneys to perform pro bono services or act in an advisory capacity to the legal services pro bono program. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-02.

A judge may serve as a National Guard judge advocate if the judge's role is limited to performing only those duties that do not resemble services provided by civilian attorneys for members of the military. Judges may not take any actions while serving as a National Guard judge advocate that would give the impression that the judge is an advocate on matters that concern the civilian justice system. Ak. Ad. Op. 2007-01.

Rule 3.11: Financial, Business, or Remunerative Activities

(A) A judge may hold and manage investments of the judge and members of the judge's family.*

(B) A judge shall not serve as an officer, director, manager, general partner, advisor, or employee of any business entity except that a judge may manage or participate in:

(1) a business closely held by the judge or members of the judge's family; or

(2) a business entity primarily engaged in investment of the financial resources of the judge or members of the judge's family.

(C) A judge shall not engage in financial activities permitted under paragraphs (A) and (B) if they will:

(1) interfere with the proper performance of judicial duties;

(2) lead to frequent disqualification of the judge;

(3) involve the judge in frequent transactions or continuing business relationships with lawyers or other persons likely to come before the court on which the judge serves; or

(4) result in violation of other provisions of this Code.

COMMENT

[1] Judges are generally permitted to engage in financial activities, including managing real estate and other investments for themselves or for members of their families. Participation in these activities, like participation in other extrajudicial activities, is subject to the requirements of this Code. For example, it would be improper for a judge to spend so much time on business activities that it interferes with the performance of judicial duties. See Rule 2.1. Similarly, it would be improper for a judge to use his or her official title or appear in judicial robes in business advertising, or to conduct his or her business or financial affairs in such a way that disqualification is frequently required. See Rules 1.3 and 2.11.

[2] As soon as practicable without serious financial detriment, the judge must divest himself or herself of investments and other financial interests that might require frequent disqualification or otherwise violate this Rule.

ANNOTATION

Judge's conduct in assuming command responsibility in furtherance of speculative real estate development project which depends for success upon official action of city and which results in substantial profit to judge violates canon requiring judge to avoid giving grounds for any reasonable suspicion that he is using power or prestige or his office to persuade others to contribute to the success of private business ventures and rule that judge shall not directly or indirectly lend the influence of his name or prestige of his office to aid or advance the welfare of a private business and such conduct warrants censure. In re Foster, 318 A.2d 523 (Md. 1974).

ETHICS OPINIONS

A judge may not serve as president of a corporation which markets products to correctional facilities. As a company officer, the judge would be engaged in financial dealings. A judge's service to an organization that markets product to correctional facilities may reasonably be perceived to exploit the judge's judicial position, and may cast reasonable doubt on the judge's capacity to act impartially as a judge. Utah Ad. Op. 05-01.

Rule 3.12: Compensation for Extrajudicial Activities

A judge may accept reasonable compensation for extrajudicial activities permitted by this Code or other law* unless such acceptance would appear to a reasonable person to undermine the judge's independence,* integrity,* or impartiality.*

COMMENT

[1] A judge is permitted to accept honoraria, stipends, fees, wages, salaries, royalties, or other compensation for speaking, teaching, writing, and other extrajudicial activities, provided the compensation is reasonable and commensurate with the task performed. The judge should be mindful, however, that judicial duties must take precedence over other activities. See Rule 2.1.

[2] Compensation derived from extrajudicial activities may be subject to public reporting. See Rule 3.15.

Note: Statutory disclosure and reporting requirements are contained in §§ 24-6-202 and -203, C.R.S.

ETHICS OPINIONS

Judge may not charge a fee for performing ceremonies at the court conducted during normal business hours. Utah Ad. Op. 98-8.

Rule 3.13: Acceptance and Reporting of Gifts, Loans, Bequests, Benefits, or Other Things of Value

(A) A judge shall not accept any gifts, loans, bequests, benefits, or other things of value, if acceptance is prohibited by law* or would appear to a reasonable person to undermine the judge's independence,* integrity,* or impartiality.*

(B) Unless otherwise prohibited by law, or by paragraph (A), a judge may accept the following without publicly reporting such acceptance:

(1) items with little intrinsic value, such as plaques, certificates, trophies, and greeting cards;

(2) gifts, loans, bequests, benefits, or other things of value from friends, relatives, or other persons, including lawyers, whose appearance or interest in a proceeding pending* or impending* before the judge would in any event require disqualification of the judge under Rule 2.11;

(3) ordinary social hospitality;

(4) commercial or financial opportunities and benefits, including special pricing and discounts, and loans from lending institutions in their regular course of business, if the same opportunities and benefits or loans are made available on the same terms to similarly situated persons who are not judges;

(5) rewards and prizes given to competitors or participants in random drawings, contests, or other events that are open to persons who are not judges;

(6) scholarships, fellowships, and similar benefits or awards, if they are available to similarly situated persons who are not judges, based upon the same terms and criteria;

(7) books, magazines, journals, audiovisual materials, and other resource materials supplied by publishers on a complimentary basis for official use; or

(8) gifts, awards, or benefits associated with the business, profession, or other separate activity of a spouse, a domestic partner,* or other family member of a judge residing in the judge's household,* but that incidentally benefit the judge.

(C) Unless otherwise prohibited by law or by paragraph (A), a judge may accept the following items, and must report such acceptance to the extent required by Rule 3.15:

(1) gifts incident to a public testimonial;

(2) invitations to the judge and the judge's spouse, domestic partner, or guest to attend without charge:

(a) an event associated with a bar-related function or other activity relating to the law, the legal system, or the administration of justice; or

(b) an event associated with any of the judge's educational, religious, charitable, fraternal or civic activities permitted by this Code, if the same invitation is offered to nonjudges who are engaged in similar ways in the activity as is the judge; and

(3) gifts, loans, bequests, benefits, or other things of value, if the source is a party or other person, including a lawyer, who has come or is likely to come before the judge, or whose interests have come or are likely to come before the judge.

COMMENT

[1] Whenever a judge accepts a gift or other thing of value without paying fair market value, there is a risk that the benefit might be viewed as intended to influence the judge's decision in a case. Rule 3.13 imposes restrictions upon the acceptance of such benefits, according to the magnitude of the risk. Paragraph (B) identifies circumstances in which the risk that the acceptance would appear to undermine the judge's independence, integrity, or impartiality is low, and explicitly provides that such items need not be publicly reported. As the value of the benefit or the likelihood that the source of the benefit will appear before the judge increases, the judge is either prohibited under paragraph (A) from accepting the gift, or required under paragraph (C) to publicly report it.

[2] Gift-giving between friends and relatives is a common occurrence, and ordinarily does not create an appearance of impropriety or cause reasonable persons to believe that the judge's independence, integrity, or impartiality has been compromised. In addition, when the appearance of friends or relatives in a case would require the judge's disqualification under Rule 2.11, there would be no opportunity for a gift to influence the judge's decision making. Paragraph (B)(2) places no restrictions upon the ability of a judge to accept gifts or other things of value from friends or relatives under these circumstances, and does not require public reporting.

[3] Businesses and financial institutions frequently make available special pricing, discounts, and other benefits, either in connection with a temporary promotion or for preferred customers, based upon longevity of the relationship, volume of business transacted, and other factors. A judge may freely accept such benefits if they are available to the general public, or if the judge qualifies for the special price or discount according to the same criteria as are applied to persons who are not judges. As an example, loans provided at generally prevailing interest rates are not gifts, but a judge could not accept a loan from a financial institution at below-market interest rates unless the same rate was being made available to the general public for a certain period of time or only to borrowers with specified qualifications that the judge also possesses.

[4] Rule 3.13 applies only to acceptance of gifts or other things of value by a judge. Nonetheless, if a gift or other benefit is given to the judge's spouse, domestic partner, or member of the judge's family residing in the judge's household, it may be viewed as an attempt to evade Rule 3.13 and influence the judge indirectly. Where the gift or benefit is being made primarily to such other persons, and the judge is merely an incidental beneficiary, this concern is reduced. A judge should, however, remind family and household members of the restrictions imposed upon judges, and urge them to take these restrictions into account when making decisions about accepting such gifts or benefits.

Note: Statutory disclosure and reporting requirements are contained in §§ 24-6-202 and -203, C.R.S.

ETHICS OPINIONS

Judge may not receive free travel to conference sponsored by The Roscoe Pound Foundation of Trial Lawyers of America because it could convey a special relationship to one side in the adversarial process. Alaska. Ad. Op. 99-5.

Judge may not allow law firm to pay for function following investiture. Md. Ad. Op. 2005-16.

Rule 3.14: Reimbursement of Expenses and Waivers of Fees or Charges

(A) Unless otherwise prohibited by Rules 3.1 and 3.13(A) or other law,* a judge may accept reimbursement of necessary and reasonable expenses for travel, food, lodging, or other incidental expenses, or a waiver or partial waiver of fees or charges for registration, tuition, and similar items, from sources other than the judge's employing entity, if the expenses or charges are associated with the judge's participation in extrajudicial activities permitted by this Code.

(B) Reimbursement of expenses for necessary travel, food, lodging, or other incidental expenses shall be limited to the actual costs reasonably incurred by the judge and, when appropriate to the occasion, by the judge's spouse, domestic partner,* or guest.

(C) A judge who accepts reimbursement of expenses or waivers or partial waivers of fees or charges on behalf of the judge or the judge's spouse, domestic partner, or guest shall publicly report such acceptance as required by Rule 3.15.

COMMENT

[1] Educational, civic, religious, fraternal, and charitable organizations often sponsor meetings, seminars, symposia, dinners, awards ceremonies, and similar events. Judges are encouraged to attend educational programs, as both teachers and participants, in law-related and academic disciplines, in furtherance of their duty to remain competent in the law. Participation in a variety of other extrajudicial activity is also permitted and encouraged by this Code.

[2] Not infrequently, sponsoring organizations invite certain judges to attend seminars or other events on a fee-waived or partial-fee-waived basis, and sometimes include reimbursement for necessary travel, food, lodging, or other incidental expenses. A judge's decision whether to accept reimbursement of expenses or a waiver or partial waiver of fees or charges in connection with these or other extrajudicial activities must be based upon an assessment of all the circumstances. The judge must undertake a reasonable inquiry to obtain the information necessary to make an informed judgment about whether acceptance would be consistent with the requirements of this Code.

[3] A judge must assure himself or herself that acceptance of reimbursement or fee waivers would not appear to a reasonable person to undermine the judge's independence, integrity, or impartiality. The factors that a judge should consider when deciding whether to accept reimbursement or a fee waiver for attendance at a particular activity include:

(a) whether the sponsor is an accredited educational institution or bar association rather than a trade association or a for-profit entity;

(b) whether the funding comes largely from numerous contributors rather than from a single entity and is earmarked for programs with specific content;

(c) whether the content is related or unrelated to the subject matter of litigation pending or impending before the judge, or to matters that are likely to come before the judge;

(d) whether the activity is primarily educational rather than recreational, and whether the costs of the event are reasonable and comparable to those associated with similar events sponsored by the judiciary, bar associations, or similar groups;

(e) whether information concerning the activity and its funding sources is available upon inquiry;

(f) whether the sponsor or source of funding is generally associated with particular parties or interests currently appearing or likely to appear in the judge's court, thus possibly requiring disqualification of the judge under Rule 2.11;

(g) whether differing viewpoints are presented; and

(h) whether a broad range of judicial and nonjudicial participants are invited, whether a large number of participants are invited, and whether the program is designed specifically for judges.

Note: Statutory disclosure and reporting requirements are contained in §§ 24-6-202 and -203, C.R.S.

Rule 3.15: Reporting Requirements

(A) A judge shall publicly report the source and amount or value of:

(1) compensation received for extrajudicial activities as permitted by Rule 3.12;

(2) gifts and other things of value as permitted by Rule 3.13(C), unless the value of such items does not exceed the statutory amount specified in Title 24, Article 6 of the Colorado Revised Statutes; and

(3) reimbursement of expenses and waiver of fees or charges permitted by Rule 3.14(A).

(B) When public reporting is required by paragraph (A), a judge shall report the date, place, and nature of the activity for which the judge received any compensation; the description of any gift, loan, bequest, benefit, or other thing of value accepted; and the source of reimbursement of expenses or waiver or partial waiver of fees or charges.

(C) The public report required by paragraph (A)(1) shall be made at least annually. Public reports required by paragraph (A)(2) and (3) shall be made quarterly.

(D) Reports made in compliance with this Rule shall be filed as public documents in the office of the clerk of the court on which the judge serves or other office designated by law*.

(E) Full time magistrates shall file reports required by paragraph A in the office of the clerk of the court on which the magistrate serves annually on or before January 15.

COMMENT

[1] In Colorado, judges' public reporting requirements are governed both by this Code and by statute. See § 24-6-202 and -203, C.R.S.

[2] Pursuant to section 24-6-202, all judges are required to file an annual disclosure with the secretary of state.

[3] Pursuant to section 24-6-203, judges are required to file quarterly disclosures reporting gifts, loans, tickets to events, and reimbursement for travel and lodging expenses.

[a] Money, including a loan, pledge, or advance of money or a guarantee of a loan of money with a value of $25 or more must be reported. § 24-6-203(3)(a), C.R.S.

[b] Any gift of any item of real or personal property, other than money, with a value of $50 or more must be reported. § 24-6-203(3)(b).

[c] Any loan of any item of real or personal property, other than money, if the value of the loan is $50 or more. § 24-6-203(3)(c).

[d] Waiver or partial waiver of the cost of attending CLEs or other educational conferences or seminars is included within the statutory requirement that judges report tickets to sporting, recreational, educational or cultural events with a value of $50 or more, or a series of tickets with a value of $100 or more. § 24-6-203(3)(e), C.R.S.

[e] Payment of or reimbursement for actual and necessary expenditures for travel and lodging at a convention or meeting at which the judge is scheduled to participate must be reported unless the payment or reimbursement is made from public funds, a joint governmental agency, an association of judges, or the judicial branch. § 24-6-203(3)(f), C.R.S.

[4] The disclosure reports filed with the secretary of state's office may be posted electronically on its website when technically feasible.

CANON 4

A JUDGE OR CANDIDATE FOR JUDICIAL OFFICE SHALL NOT ENGAGE IN POLITICAL OR CAMPAIGN ACTIVITY THAT IS INCONSISTENT WITH THE INDEPENDENCE, INTEGRITY, OR IMPARTIALITY OF THE JUDICIARY.

Rule 4.1: Political and Campaign Activities of Judges and Judicial Candidates in General

(A) Except as permitted by law,* or by this Canon, a judge or a judicial candidate* shall not:

(1) act as a leader in, or hold an office in, a political organization;*

(2) make speeches on behalf of a political organization;

(3) publicly endorse or oppose a candidate for any public office;

(4) solicit funds for, pay an assessment to, or make a contribution* to a political organization or a candidate for public office;

(5) attend or purchase tickets for dinners or other events sponsored by a political organization or a candidate for public office;

(6) publicly identify himself or herself as a candidate of a political organization;

(7) seek, accept, or use endorsements from a political organization;

(8) personally solicit* or accept campaign contributions;

(9) use or permit the use of campaign contributions for the private benefit of the judge or others;

(10) use court staff, facilities, or other court resources as a judicial candidate;

(11) knowingly,* or with reckless disregard for the truth, make any false or misleading statement;

(12) make any statement that would reasonably be expected to affect the outcome or impair the fairness of a matter pending* or impending* in any court; or

(13) in connection with cases, controversies, or issues that are likely to come before the court, make pledges, promises, or commitments that are inconsistent with the impartial* performance of the adjudicative duties of judicial office.

(B) A judge or judicial candidate shall take reasonable measures to ensure that other persons do not undertake, on behalf of the judge or judicial candidate, any activities prohibited under paragraph (A), except as permitted by Rule 4.3.

COMMENT

General Considerations

[1] A judge plays a role different from that of a legislator or executive branch official. Rather than making decisions based upon the expressed views or preferences of the electorate, a judge makes decisions based upon the law and the facts of every case. Therefore, in furtherance of this interest, judges and judicial candidates must, to the greatest extent possible, be free and appear to be free from political influence and political pressure. This Canon imposes narrowly tailored restrictions upon the political and campaign activities of all judges and judicial candidates, taking into account the various methods of selecting judges.

[2] When a person becomes a judicial candidate, this Canon becomes applicable to his or her conduct.

Participation in Political Activities

[3] Public confidence in the independence and impartiality of the judiciary is eroded if judges or judicial candidates are perceived to be subject to political influence. Although judges and judicial candidates may register to vote as members of a political party, they are prohibited by paragraph (A)(1) from assuming leadership roles in political organizations.

[4] Paragraphs (A)(2) and (A)(3) prohibit judges and judicial candidates from making speeches on behalf of political organizations or publicly endorsing or opposing candidates for public office, respectively, to prevent them from abusing the prestige of judicial office to advance the interests of others. See Rule 1.3.

[5] Although members of the families of judges and judicial candidates are free to engage in their own political activity, including running for public office, there is no ''family exception'' to the prohibition in paragraph (A)(3) against a judge or candidate publicly endorsing candidates for public office. A judge or judicial candidate must not become involved in, or publicly associated with, a family member's political activity or campaign for public office. To avoid public misunderstanding, judges and judicial candidates should take, and should urge members of their families to take, reasonable steps to avoid any implication that they endorse any family member's candidacy or other political activity.

[6] Judges and judicial candidates retain the right to participate in the political process as voters in both primary and general elections. For purposes of this Canon, participation in a caucus-type election procedure does not constitute public support for or endorsement of a political organization or candidate, and is not prohibited by paragraphs (A)(2) or (A)(3).

Statements and Comments Made during a Campaign for Judicial Office

[7] Judicial candidates must be scrupulously fair and accurate in all statements made by them and by their retention committees. Paragraph (A)(11) obligates candidates and their committees to refrain from making statements that are false or misleading, or that omit facts necessary to make the communication considered as a whole not materially misleading.

[8] Judicial candidates are sometimes the subject of false, misleading, or unfair allegations. For example, false or misleading statements might be made regarding the identity, present position, experience, qualifications, or judicial rulings of a candidate. In other situations, false or misleading allegations may be made that bear upon a candidate's integrity or fitness for judicial office. As long as the candidate does not violate paragraphs (A)(11), (A)(12), or (A)(13), the candidate may make a factually accurate public response. In making any such response, the judge should maintain the dignity appropriate to judicial office.

[9] Paragraph (A)(12) prohibits judicial candidates from making comments that might impair the fairness of pending or impending judicial proceedings. This provision does not restrict arguments or statements to the court or jury by a lawyer who is a judicial candidate, or rulings, statements, or instructions by a judge that may appropriately affect the outcome of a matter.

Pledges, Promises, or Commitments Inconsistent with Impartial Performance of the Adjudicative Duties of Judicial Office

[10] The role of a judge is different from that of a legislator or executive branch official Campaigns for retention to judicial office must be conducted differently from campaigns for other offices. The narrowly drafted restrictions upon political and campaign activities of judicial candidates provided in Canon 4 are intended to help preserve the integrity and independence of the judiciary, and to honor Colorado's merit-based system of selecting and retaining judges.

[11] Paragraph (A)(13) makes applicable to both judges and judicial candidates the prohibition that applies to judges in Rule 2.10(B), relating to pledges, promises, or commitments that are inconsistent with the impartial performance of the adjudicative duties of judicial office.

[12] The making of a pledge, promise, or commitment is not dependent upon, or limited to, the use of any specific words or phrases; instead, the totality of the statement must be examined to determine if a reasonable person would believe that the candidate for judicial office has specifically undertaken to reach a particular result. Pledges, promises, or commitments must be contrasted with statements or announcements of personal views on legal, political, or other issues, which are not prohibited. When making such statements, a judge should acknowledge the overarching judicial obligation to apply and uphold the law, without regard to his or her personal views.

ANNOTATION

Judge who allowed candidate for public office to place a sign in support of candidate outside judge's home publicly endorsed candidate for public office, thereby engaging in a prohibited political activity and improperly lending the prestige of his office to advance the private interests of another. In re Inquiry Concerning McCormick, 639 N.W.2d 12 (Iowa 2002).

ETHICS OPINIONS

The Colorado District Judges' Association (''Association'') may hire a public information officer (''PIO'') to convey general information to the public and discrete information, like issues impacting trial judges and trial courts, to news media. Subject to the limits set forth in the Code of Judicial Conduct (''Code''), the PIO may also appear before deliberative bodies to advocate positions designed to improve the welfare of trial courts and staff, the legal system, and the administration of justice. If a judge faces active opposition and is a candidate for retention, the PIO may also help that judge formulate a response to such opposition. Though the PIO may not be subject to the requirements of the Code, the Association's members in general, and especially its elected officers, are responsible for ensuring that the PIO's conduct and statements comply with the Code. Colo. J.E.A.B. Ad. Op. 19-01.

To make clear that any contribution by the judge's spouse to a political candidate is not from the judge, that contribution should be made in the spouse's name alone from the spouse's separate bank account with no reference to the judge or judicial position. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 06-04.

A judge may not contribute to another judge's retention campaign fund. Although a judge standing for retention is not necessarily a candidate for ''public'' office, judicial contributions to retention elections necessarily politicizes them, in contravention to the Code. Alaska Op. 98-3.

A judge may not attend a political party caucus. A judge may vote in a primary election, even when participation is conditioned on party affiliation. Utah. Ad. Op. 2002-1.

A judge may not act as a master of ceremonies at a ''Meet the Candidates Night'' sponsored by a local PTA, because the meeting is a political gathering. Utah Ad. Op. 98-15.

Rule 4.2: Political and Campaign Activities of a Judge Who is a Candidate for Retention

(A) A judicial candidate* in a retention public election* shall:

(1) act at all times in a manner consistent with the independence,* integrity,* and impartiality* of the judiciary;

(2) comply with all applicable federal and state election, election campaign, and election campaign fund-raising laws and regulations;

(3) review and approve the content of all campaign statements and materials produced by the candidate or his or her campaign committee, as authorized by Rule 4.3, before their dissemination; and

(4) take reasonable measures to ensure that other persons do not undertake on behalf of the candidate activities, other than those described in Rule 4.3, that the candidate is prohibited from doing by Rule 4.1.

ETHICS OPINIONS

The Colorado District Judges' Association (''Association'') may hire a public information officer (''PIO'') to convey general information to the public and discrete information, like issues impacting trial judges and trial courts, to news media. Subject to the limits set forth in the Code of Judicial Conduct (''Code''), the PIO may also appear before deliberative bodies to advocate positions designed to improve the welfare of trial courts and staff, the legal system, and the administration of justice. If a judge faces active opposition and is a candidate for retention, the PIO may also help that judge formulate a response to such opposition. Colo. J.E.A.B. Ad. Op. 19-01.

Judges standing for retention may not appear on a television program in which a representative of the League of Women Voters would ask them questions to help provide viewers with more information about whether or not the judges should be retained. Viewers might reasonably expect that the judge was seeking an approval vote and might therefore understand that the judge is engaging in campaign activity. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 08-04.

Rule 4.3: Retention Campaign Committees

(A) A judge who is a candidate for retention in office should abstain from any campaign activity in connection with the judge's own candidacy unless there is active opposition to his or her retention in office. If there is active opposition to the retention of a candidate judge:

(1) The judge may speak at public meetings;

(2) the judge may use advertising media, provided that the advertising is within the bounds of proper judicial decorum;

(3) a nonpartisan citizens' committee or committees advocating a judge's retention in office may be organized by others, either on their own initiative or at the request of the judge;

(4) any committee organized pursuant to subsection (A)(3) may raise funds for the judge's campaign, but the judge should not solicit funds personally or accept any funds except those paid to the judge by a committee for reimbursement of the judge's campaign expenses;

(5) the judge should not be advised of the source of funds raised by the committee or committees;

(6) the judge should review and approve the content of all statements and materials produced by the committee or committees before their dissemination.

COMMENT

[1] Judicial candidates are prohibited from personally soliciting funds in support of their retention or personally accepting retention campaign contributions. See Rule 4.1(A)(8).

[2] Retention campaign committees may solicit and accept campaign contributions, manage the expenditure of campaign funds, and generally conduct campaigns. Judicial candidates are responsible for compliance with the requirements of election law and other applicable law, and for the activities of their retention campaign committees.

[3] At the start of a retention campaign, the candidate must instruct the retention campaign committee to solicit or accept only such contributions as are reasonable in amount, appropriate under the circumstances, and in conformity with applicable law. Although lawyers and others who might appear before a judge who is retained are permitted to make campaign contributions, the judge should not be informed of the source of any funds.

Note: The Fair Campaign Practice Act, §§1-45-101 et seq., C.R.S. applies to campaigns for and against retention in office.

ETHICS OPINIONS

A great deal of media attention to a judge's ruling, even if it is critical of the ruling, does not, in itself, constitute active opposition to the judge's retention. However, if there is an organized campaign in opposition to the judge's retention or if there are individual comments opposed to the judge's retention that have been broadcast to a public audience, the judge may safely conclude that there is active opposition to the judge's retention. Here, the Board concludes that the numerous comments posted on the local newspaper's website recommending non-retention of the judge amount to active opposition. Nevertheless, the Board cautions the judge that even though he may, ethically, campaign for retention, he should begin a campaign with great care, bearing in mind that our system strongly disfavors judicial campaigns. Colo. J.E.A.B. Op. 08-05.

Judges standing for retention may not appear on a television program in which a representative of the League of Women Voters would ask them questions to help provide viewers with more information about whether or not the judges should be retained. Viewers might reasonably expect that the judge was seeking an approval vote and might therefore understand that the judge is engaging in campaign activity. Colo. J.E.A.B. 08-04.

A judge may operate a retention campaign if there is active opposition to the judge's retention. Active opposition does not include a below-average performance rating by the Judicial Conduct Commission or casual, water-cooler type discussions in opposition to the judge's retention, but can include scenarios where an anti-retention message is broadcast to a large audience of potential voters, such as through a letter to the editor, lawn signs, or paid advertisements in a publication. Active opposition may also be found in news stories, timed to a judge's retention election, that raise negative facts and qualification issues not immediately relevant to a news-making case. Utah Ad. Op. 2000-05.

Rule 4.4: Activities of Judges Who Become Candidates for Nonjudicial Office

(A) Upon becoming a candidate for a nonjudicial elective office, a judge shall resign from judicial office, unless permitted by law* to continue to hold judicial office.

(B) Upon becoming a candidate for a nonjudicial appointive office, a judge is not required to resign from judicial office, provided that the judge complies with the other provisions of this Code.

COMMENT

[1] In campaigns for nonjudicial elective public office, candidates may make pledges, promises, or commitments related to positions they would take and ways they would act if elected to office. Although appropriate in nonjudicial campaigns, this manner of campaigning is inconsistent with the role of a judge, who must remain fair and impartial to all who come before him or her. The potential for misuse of the judicial office, and the political promises that the judge would be compelled to make in the course of campaigning for nonjudicial elective office, together dictate that a judge who wishes to run for such an office must resign upon becoming a candidate.

[2] The ''resign to run'' rule set forth in paragraph (A) ensures that a judge cannot use the judicial office to promote his or her candidacy, and prevents post-campaign retaliation from the judge in the event the judge is defeated in the election. When a judge is seeking appointive nonjudicial office, however, the dangers are not sufficient to warrant imposing the ''resign to run'' rule.

The Colorado Rules of County Court Civil Procedure

COLORADO RULES OF COUNTY COURT CIVIL PROCEDURE

Rule 301. Scope of Rules

(a) Procedure Governed. These rules govern the procedure in all county courts created and governed by Chapter 45 of the Colorado Session Laws of 1964. They shall be liberally construed to secure the just, speedy and inexpensive determination of every action.

(b) How Known and Cited. These rules shall be known and cited as the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure, or C.R.C.P.

Source: (b) amended and adopted December 5, 1996, effective January 1, 1997.

Editor's note: Chapter 45 of the session laws of 1964 is now numbered as article 6 of title 13, C.R.S.

ANNOTATION

Orders need not be signed to be valid. There is no provision in these rules requiring orders to be signed in order to be valid. Spar Consol. Mining & Dev. Co. v. Aasgaard, 33 Colo. App. 35, 516 P.2d 127, aff'd, 185 Colo. 157, 522 P.2d 726 (1974).

Rule 302. Form of Action

There shall be one form of action to be known as a ''Simplified Civil Action''.

Rule 303. Commencement of Action

(a) How Commenced. A simplified civil action is commenced: (1) by filing with the court a complaint consisting of a statement of claim setting forth briefly the facts and circumstances giving rise to the action in the manner and form provided in Rule 308; or (2) by service of a summons and complaint. The complaint must be filed within 14 days of the service of the summons and not less than 7 days in advance of the return date. If the complaint is not timely filed, the service of the summons shall be deemed ineffective and void without notice. In such case the court may, in its discretion, tax a reasonable sum in favor of the defendant to compensate the defendant for expense and inconvenience, including attorney's fees, to be paid by plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney. The 14 day filing requirement may be expressly waived by a defendant and shall be deemed waived upon the filing of an answer or motion to the complaint without reserving the issue.

(b) Issuance of Summons. Upon the filing of a complaint as provided in section (a) of this rule and the payment of the docket fee, the clerk shall docket the case and assign it a number. Unless summons has prior thereto been issued and signed by an attorney, the clerk shall then sign and issue a summons under the seal of the court. Separate, additional, and amended summons may be issued by the clerk or an attorney of record against any defendant at any time, and when issued by an attorney, it must be filed with the court no later than 7 days in advance of the return date. All process shall be issued by the clerk except as otherwise provided by these rules.

(c) Time of Jurisdiction. The court shall have jurisdiction from (1) the filing of the complaint, or (2) the service of the summons and complaint; provided, however, if more than 14 days elapses after service upon any defendant before the filing of the complaint, jurisdiction as to that defendant shall not attach by virtue of the service.

Rule 304. Service of Process

(a) To What Applicable. This rule applies to all process except as otherwise provided by these rules.

(b) Initial Process. Except in cases of service by publication under Rule 304(f), the complaint and a blank copy of the answer form shall be served with the summons.

(c) By Whom Served. Process may be served within the United States or its Territories by any person whose age is eighteen years or older, not a party to the action. Process served in a foreign country shall be according to any internationally agreed means reasonably calculated to give notice, the law of the foreign country, or as directed by the foreign authority or the court if not otherwise prohibited by international agreement.

(d) Personal Service. Personal service shall be as follows:

(1) Upon a natural person whose age is eighteen years or older by delivering a copy thereof to the person, or by leaving a copy thereof at the person's usual place of abode, with any person whose age is eighteen years or older and who is a member of the person's family, or at the person's usual workplace, with the person's supervisor, secretary, administrative assistant, bookkeeper, human resources representative or managing agent; or by delivering a copy to a person authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process.

(2) Upon a natural person whose age is at least thirteen years and less than eighteen years, by delivering a copy thereof to the person and another copy thereof to the person's father, mother, or guardian, or if there be none in the state, then by delivering a copy thereof to any person in whose care or control the person may be, or with whom the person resides, or in whose service the person is employed, and upon a natural person under the age of thirteen years by delivering a copy to the person's father, mother, or guardian, or if there be none in the state, then by delivering a copy thereof to the person in whose care or control the person may be.

(3) Upon a person for whom a conservator has been appointed, by delivering a copy thereof to such conservator.

(4) Upon any form of corporation, partnership, association, cooperative, limited liability company, limited partnership association, trust, organization, or other form of entity that is recognized under the laws of this state or of any other jurisdiction, (including any such organization, association or entity serving as an agent for service of process for itself or for another entity) by delivering a copy thereof to the registered agent for service as set forth in the most recently filed document in the records of the secretary of state of this state or of any other jurisdiction, or that agent's secretary or assistant, or one of the following:

(A) An officer of any form of entity having officers, or that officer's secretary or assistant;

(B) A general partner of any form of partnership, or that general partner's secretary or assistant;

(C) A manager of a limited liability company or limited partnership association in which management is vested in managers rather than members, or that manager's secretary or assistant;

(D) A member of a limited liability company or limited partnership association in which management is vested in the members or in which management is vested in managers and there are no managers, or that member's secretary or assistant;

(E) A trustee of a trust, or that trustee's secretary or assistant;

(F) The functional equivalent of any person described in paragraphs (A) through (E) of this subsection (4), regardless of such person's title, under:

(I) the articles of incorporation, articles of organization, certificate of limited partnership, articles of association, statement of registration, or other documents of similar import duly filed or recorded by which the entity or any or all of its owners obtains status as an entity or the attribute of limited liability, or

(II) the law pursuant to which the entity is formed or which governs the operation of the entity;

(G) If no person listed in subsection (4) of this rule can be found in this state, upon any person serving as a shareholder, member, partner, or other person having an ownership or similar interest in, or any director, agent, or principal employee of such entity, who can be found in this state, or service as otherwise provided by law.

(5) Repealed.

(6) Upon a municipal corporation, by delivering a copy thereof to the mayor, the city manager, the clerk, or deputy clerk.

(7) Upon a county, by delivering a copy thereof to the county clerk, chief deputy, or county commissioner.

(8) Upon a school district, by delivering a copy thereof to the superintendent.

(9) Upon the state by delivering a copy thereof to the attorney general.

(10) (A) Upon an officer, agent, or employee of the state, acting in an official capacity, by delivering a copy thereof to the officer, agent, or employee, and by delivering a copy to the attorney general.

(B) Upon a department or agency of the state, subject to suit, by delivering a copy thereof to the principal officer, chief clerk, or other executive employee thereof, and by delivering a copy to the attorney general.

(C) For purposes of service of an initial summons and complaint, the copies shall be delivered to both the party and the attorney general within the times as set forth in rule 312(a). For all other purposes, the effective date of service shall be the latter date of delivery.

(11) Upon other political subdivisions of the State of Colorado, special districts, or quasi-municipal entities, by delivering a copy thereof to any officer or general manager, unless otherwise provided by law.

(12) Upon any of the entities or persons listed in subsections (4) through (11) of this section (d) by delivering a copy to any designee authorized to accept service of process for such entity or person, or by delivery to a person authorized by appointment or law to receive service of process for such entity or person. The delivery shall be made in any manner permitted by such appointment or law.

(e) Substitute Service. In the event that a party attempting service of process by personal service under section (d) is unable to accomplish service, and service by publication or mail is not otherwise permitted under section (f), the party may file a motion, supported by an affidavit of the person attempting service, for an order for substituted service. The motion shall state (1) the efforts made to obtain personal service and the reason that personal service could not be obtained, (2) the identity of the person to whom the party wishes to deliver the process, and (3) the address, or last known address of the workplace and residence, if known, of the party upon whom service is to be effected. If the court is satisfied that due diligence has been used to attempt personal service under section (d), that further attempts to obtain service under section (d) would be to no avail, and that the person to whom delivery of the process is appropriate under the circumstances and reasonably calculated to give actual notice to the party upon whom service is to be effective, it shall:

(1) Authorize delivery to be made to the person deemed appropriate for service, and

(2) Order the process to be mailed to the address(es) of the party to be served by substituted service, as set forth in the motion, on or before the date of delivery.

Service shall be complete on the date of delivery to the person deemed appropriate for service.

(f) Other Service. Except as otherwise provided by law, service by mail or publication shall be allowed only in actions affecting specific property or status or other proceedings in rem. When service is by publication, the complaint need not be published with the summons. The party desiring service of process by mail or publication under this section (f) shall file a motion verified by the oath of such party or of someone in the party's behalf for an order of service by mail or publication. It shall state the facts authorizing such service, and shall show the efforts, if any, that have been made to obtain personal service and shall give the address, or last known address, of each person to be served or shall state that this address and last known address are unknown. The court, if satisfied that due diligence has been used to obtain personal service or that efforts to obtain the same would have been to no avail, shall:

(1) Order the party to send by registered or certified mail a copy of the summons and a copy of the complaint, addressed to such person at such address, requesting a return receipt signed by addressee only. Such service shall be complete on the date of the filing of proof thereof, together with such return receipt attached thereto signed by such addressee, or

(2) Order publication of the summons in a newspaper published in the county in which the action is pending. Such publication shall be made once each week for five successive weeks. Within fifteen days after the order the party shall mail a copy of the summons and complaint to each person whose address or last known address has been stated in the motion and file proof thereof. Service shall be completed on the day of the last publication. If no newspaper is published in the county, the court shall designate one in some adjoining county.

(g) Manner of Proof. Proof of service shall be made as follows:

(1) If served personally, by a statement, certified by the sheriff, marshal or similar governmental official, or statement duly acknowledged under oath by any other person completing the service as to date, place, and manner of service.

(2) Repealed.

(3) If served by mail, an affidavit showing the date of the mailing, with the return receipt attached, where applicable.

(4) If served by publication, by the affidavit of publication, together with an affidavit as to the mailing of a copy of the summons, complaint and answer form where required.

(5) If served by waiver, by the written admission or waiver of service by the person or persons to be served, duly acknowledged, or by their attorney.

(6) If served by substituted service, by a duly acknowledged statement as to the date, place, and manner of service, accompanied by an affidavit that the process was also mailed to the party to be served by substituted service, setting forth the address(es) where the process was mailed.

(h) Amendment. At any time in its discretion and upon such terms as it deems just, the court may allow any summons or proof of service thereof to be amended, unless it clearly appears that material prejudice would result to the substantial rights of the party against whom the summons issued.

(i) Waiver of Service of Summons. A defendant who waives service of a summons does not thereby waive any objection to the venue or to the jurisdiction of the court over the defendant.

(j) Refusal of Copy. If a person to be served refuses to accept a copy of the summons and complaint, service shall be sufficient if the person serving the documents knows or has reason to identify the person who refuses to be served, identifies the documents being served as a summons and complaint, offers to deliver a copy of the documents to the person who refuses to be served, and thereafter leaves a copy in a conspicuous place.

Rule 305. Service and Filing of Pleadings and other Papers

(a) Service: When Required. Except as otherwise provided in these rules, every order required by its terms to be served, every pleading subsequent to the original complaint unless the court otherwise orders because of numerous defendants, every paper related to discovery required to be served upon a party unless the court otherwise orders, every written motion other than one which may be heard ex parte, and every written notice, appearance, demand, filings on appeal, and similar paper shall be served upon each of the parties. No service need be made on parties in default for failure to appear except that pleadings asserting new or additional claims for relief against them shall be served upon them in the manner provided for service of summons in Rule 304.

(b) Making Service. (1) Service under C.R.C.P. 305(a) on a party represented by an attorney is made upon the attorney unless the court orders personal service upon the party. A resident attorney, on whom pleadings and other papers may be served, shall be associated as attorney of record with any out-of-state attorney practicing in any courts of this state.

(2) Service under C.R.C.P. 305(a) is made by:

(A) Delivering a copy to the person served by:

(i) handing it to the person;

(ii) leaving it at the person's office with a clerk or other person in charge, or if no one is in charge, leaving it in a conspicuous place in the office; or

(iii) if the person has no office or the office is closed, leaving it at the person's dwelling house or usual place of abode with someone 18 years of age or older residing there;

(B) Mailing a copy to the last known address of the person served. Service by mail is complete on mailing;

(C) If the person served has no known address, leaving a copy with the clerk of the court; or

(D) Delivering a copy by any other means, including E-Service, other electronic means or a designated overnight courier, consented to in writing by the person served. Designation of a facsimile phone number in the pleadings effects consent in writing for such delivery. Parties who have subscribed to E-Filing, pursuant to Chief Justice Directive 06-02 have agreed to receive E-Service. Service by other electronic means is complete on transmission; service by other consented means is complete when the person making service delivers the copy to the agency designated to make delivery. Service by other electronic means or overnight courier under C.R.C.P. 305(b)(2)(D) is not effective if the party making service learns that the attempted service did not reach the person to be served.

(c) Service: Numerous Defendants. In any action in which there are unusually large numbers of defendants, the court, upon motion or of its own initiative, may order that service of the pleadings of the defendants and replies thereto need not be made as between the defendants and that any cross claim, counterclaim, or matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense contained therein shall be deemed to be denied or avoided by all other parties and that the filing of any such pleading and service thereof upon the plaintiff constitutes due notice of it to the parties. A copy of every such order shall be served upon the parties in such manner and form as the court directs.

(d) Filing; Certificate of Service. All papers after the initial pleading required to be served upon a party, together with a certificate of service, must be filed with the court within a reasonable time after service, but disclosures under Rule C.R.C.P. 316 and discovery requests and responses shall not be filed until they are used in the proceeding or the court orders otherwise.

(e) Filing with Court Defined. The filing of pleadings and other papers with the court as required by these rules shall be made by filing them with the clerk of the court, except that the judge may permit the papers to be filed with the judge, in which event the judge shall note thereon the filing date and forthwith transmit them to the office of the clerk. A paper filed by E-Filing in compliance with Chief Justice Directive 06-02 constitutes a written paper for the purpose of this Rule. The clerk shall not refuse to accept any paper presented for filing solely because it is not presented in proper form as required by these rules or any local practice.

(f) Inmate Filing and Service. Except where personal service is required, a pleading filed or served by an inmate confined to an institution is timely filed or served if deposited in the institution's internal mailing system on or before the last day for filing or serving. If an institution has a system designed for legal mail, the inmate must use that system to receive the benefit of this rule.

Rule 305.5. Electronic Filing and Serving

(a) Definitions:

(1) Document: A pleading, motion, writing or other paper filed or served under the E-System.

(2) E-Filing/Service System: The E-Filing/service system (''E-System'') approved by the Colorado Supreme Court for filing and service of documents via the Internet through the Court-authorized E-System provider.

(3) Electronic Filing: Electronic filing (''E-Filing'') is the transmission of documents to the clerk of the court, and from the court, via the E-System.

(4) Electronic Service: Electronic service (''E-Service'') is the transmission of documents to any party in a case via the E-System. Parties who have subscribed to the E-System have agreed to receive service, other than service of a summons, via the E-System.

(5) E-System Provider: The E-Service/E-Filing system provider authorized by the Colorado Supreme Court.

(6) Signatures:

I. Electronic Signature: an electronic sound, symbol, or process attached to or logically associated with an electronic record and executed or adopted by the person with the intent to sign the E-filed or E-served document.

II. Scanned Signature: A graphic image of a handwritten signature.

(b) Types of Cases Applicable: E-Filing and E-Service may be used for all cases filed in county court as the service becomes available. The availability of the E-System will be determined by the Colorado Supreme Court and announced through its website: http:www.courts.state.co.us and through published directives. E-Filing and E-Service may be mandated pursuant to Section (o) of this Rule 305.5.

(c) To Whom Applicable:

(1) Attorneys licensed or certified to practice law in Colorado, or admitted pro hac vice under C.R.C.P. 205.3 or 205.5 may register to use the E-System. The E-System provider will provide an attorney permitted to appear pursuant to C.R.C.P. 205.3 or 205.5 with a special user account for purposes of E-Filing and E-Serving only in the case identified by a court order approving pro hac vice admission. The E-System provider will provide an attorney certified as pro bono counsel pursuant to C.R.C.P. 204.6 with a special user account for purposes of E-Filing and E-Serving in pro bono cases as contemplated by that rule. An attorney may enter an appearance pursuant to C.R.C.P. 121, Section 1-1, through E-Filing. Where E-Filing is mandated pursuant to Section (o) of this Rule 305.5, attorneys must register and use the E-System.

(2) Where the system and necessary equipment are in place to permit it, pro se parties and government entities and agencies may register to use the E-System.

(d) Commencement of Action-Service of Summons: Cases may be commenced under C.R.C.P. 303 through an E-Filing. Cases commenced under C.R.C.P. 303 through an E-Filing must be E-Filed to the court no later than seven (7) days before the set return date, if any. Service of a summons shall be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 304.

(e) E-Filing, Date and Time of Filing: Documents filed in cases on the E-System may be filed under C.R.C.P. 305 through an E-Filing. A document transmitted to the E-System provider by 11:59 p.m. Colorado time shall be deemed to have been filed with the clerk of the court on that date.

(f) E-Service - When Required - Date and Time of Service: Documents submitted to the court through E-Filing shall be served under C.R.C.P. 5 by E-Service. A document transmitted to the E-System Provider for service by 11:59 p.m. Colorado time shall be deemed to have been served on that date.

(g) Filing Party To Maintain the Signed Copy, Paper Document Not To Be Filed, Duration of Maintaining of Document: A printed or printable copy of an E-Filed or E-Served document with original, electronic, or scanned signatures shall be maintained by the filing party and made available for inspection by other parties or the court upon request, but shall not be filed with the court. When these rules require a party to maintain a document, the filer is required to maintain the document for a period of two years after the final resolution of the action, including the final resolution of all appeals.

(h) Default Judgments and Original Documents:

(1) If the action is on a promissory note or where an original document is by law required to be filed, that original document shall be scanned and submitted electronically with the e-filed motion for default. The original document shall be presented to the court in order that the court may make a notation of the judgment on the face of the document.

(2) Following compliance with sub-paragraph (1) of this paragraph (h) the document may then be returned to the filing party; retained by the court for a specified period of time to be determined by the court; or destroyed by the court.

(3) When the return of service is required for entry of default, the return of service may be scanned and E-Filed. In accordance with paragraph (i) of this Rule, signatures of attorneys, parties, witnesses, notaries and notary stamps may be electronically affixed or documents with signatures obtained on a paper form may be scanned into the system to satisfy signature requirements.

(i) Documents Requiring E-Filed Signatures: E-Filed and E-Served documents, signatures of attorneys, parties, witnesses, notaries and notary stamps may be electronically affixed or documents with signatures obtained on a paper form may be scanned into the system to satisfy signature requirements.

(j) C.R.C.P. 311 Compliance: Use of the E-System by an attorney constitutes compliance with the signature requirement of C.R.C.P. 311. An attorney using the E-System shall be subject to all other requirements of Rule 311.

(k) Documents Under Seal: A motion for leave to file documents under seal may be E-Filed. Documents to be filed under seal pursuant to an order of the court may be E-Filed at the discretion of the court; however, the filing party may object to this procedure.

(l) Transmitting of Orders, Notices, and Other Court Entries: Courts shall distribute orders, notices, and other court entries using the E-System in cases where E-Filings were received from any party.

(m) Form of E-Filed Documents: C.R.C.P. 310 shall apply to E-Filed documents. A document shall not be transmitted to the clerk of the court by any other means unless the court at any later time requests a printed copy.

(n) Repealed.

(o) E-Filing May Be Mandated: With the permission of the Chief Justice, a chief judge may mandate E-filing within a county or judicial district for specific case classes or types of cases. Where E-Filing is mandatory, the court may thereafter accept a document in paper form and the court shall scan the document and upload it to the E-Service provider. After notice to an attorney that all future documents are to be E-Filed, the court may charge a fee of $50 per document for the service of scanning and uploading a document filed in paper form. Where E-Filing and E-Service are mandatory, the Chief Judge or appropriate judicial officer may exclude pro se parties from mandatory E-Filing requirements.

(p) Relief in the Event of Technical Difficulties:

(1) Upon satisfactory proof that E-Filing or E-Service of a document was not completed because of: (1) an error in the transmission of the document to the E-System provider which was unknown to the sending party, (2) a failure of the E-System provider to process the E-Filing when received, or (3) other technical problems experienced by the filer or E-System provider, the court may enter an order permitting the document to be filed nunc pro tunc to the date it was first attempted to be sent electronically.

(2) Upon satisfactory proof that an E-Served document was not received by or unavailable to a party served, the court may enter an order extending the time for responding to that document.

(q) Form of Electronic Documents:

(1) Electronic Document Format, Size, and Density: Electronic document format, size, and density shall be as specified by Chief Justice Directive #11-01.

(2) Multiple Documents: Multiple documents (including proposed orders) may be filed in a single electronic filing transaction. Each document (including proposed orders) in that filing must bear a separate document title.

(3) Proposed Orders: Proposed orders shall be E-Filed in an editable format. Proposed orders that are E-Filed in a non-editable format shall be rejected by the Court Clerk's office and must be resubmitted.

COMMENTS

[1] The Court authorized service provider for the program is the Integrated Colorado Courts E-Filing System (www.jbits.courts.state.co.us/icces/).

[2] ''Editable Format'' is one which is subject to modification by the court using standard means such as Word or WordPerfect format.

[3] C.R.C.P. 377 provides that courts are always open for business. This Rule 305.5 is intended to comport with that rule.

[4] Effective November 1, 2016, the name of the court authorized service provider changed from the ''Integrated Colorado Courts E-Filing System'' to ''Colorado Courts E-Filing'' (www.jbits.courts.state.co.us/efiling/).

Rule 306. Time

(a) Computation. (1) In computing any period of time prescribed or allowed by these rules, by order of court, or by an applicable statute, the day of the act, event, or default from which the designated period of time begins to run shall not be included. Thereafter, every day shall be counted including holidays, Saturdays or Sundays. The last day of the period so computed shall be included, unless it is a Saturday, a Sunday, or a legal holiday, in which event the period runs until the end of the next day which is not a Saturday, a Sunday, or a legal holiday. The ''next day'' is determined by continuing to count forward when the period is measured after an event and backward when measured before an event.

(2) As used in this Rule, ''Legal holiday'' includes the first day of January, observed as New Year's Day; the third Monday in January, observed as Martin Luther King Day; the third Monday in February, observed as Washington-Lincoln Day; the last Monday in May, observed as Memorial Day; the fourth day of July, observed as Independence Day; the first Monday in September, observed as Labor Day; the second Monday in October, observed as Columbus Day; the eleventh day of November, observed as Veteran's Day; the fourth Thursday in November, observed as Thanksgiving Day; the twenty-fifth day of December, observed as Christmas Day, and any other day except Saturday or Sunday when the court is closed.

(b) Enlargement. When by these rules or by a notice given thereunder or by order of court an act is required or allowed to be done at or within a specified time, the court for cause shown may, at any time in its discretion (1) with or without motion or notice, order the period enlarged if request therefor is made before the expiration of the period originally prescribed or as extended by a previous order or (2) upon motion made after the expiration of the specified period permit the act to be done where the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect; but it may not extend the time for taking any action under Rules 325 and 360(b), except to the extent and under the conditions stated in them.

(c) Unaffected by Expiration of Term. Repealed.

(d) Notice, Motion, Affidavits. Repealed.

(e) Additional Time on Service Under C.R.C.P. 305(b)(2)(B), (C), or (D). Repealed.

COMMENT

After the particular effective date, time computation in most situations is intended to incorporate the Rule of Seven. Under the Rule of Seven, a day is a day, and because calendars are divided into 7-day week intervals, groupings of days are in 7-day or multiples of 7-day intervals. Groupings of less than 7 days have been left as they were because such small numbers do not interfere with the underlying concept. Details of the Rule of Seven reform are set forth in an article by Richard P. Holme, 41 Colo. Lawyer, Vol. 1, P.33 (January 2012).

Time computation is sometimes "forward," meaning starting the count at a particular stated event [such as date of filing] and counting forward to the deadline date. Counting "backward" means counting backward from the event to reach the deadline date [such as a stated number of days being allowed before the commencement of trial]. In determining the effective date of the Rule of Seven time computation/time interval amendments having a statutory basis, said amendments take effect on July 1, 2012 and regardless of whether time intervals are counted forward or backward, both the time computation start date and deadline date must be after June 30, 2012. Further, the time computation/time interval amendments do not apply to modify the settings of any dates or time intervals set by an order of a court entered before July 1, 2012.

Rule 307. Pleadings and Motions

(a) Pleadings. There shall be a complaint and an answer which may or may not include a counterclaim. No other pleadings shall be allowed except by order of court.

(b) Motions. Repealed.

(c) Demurrers, Pleas, etc., Abolished. Demurrers, pleas, and exceptions for insufficiency of a pleading shall not be used.

(d) Agreed Case, Procedure. Parties to a dispute which might be the subject of a civil action may, without pleadings, file, in the court which would have had jurisdiction if an action had been brought, an agreed statement of facts. The same shall be supported by an affidavit that the controversy is real and that it is filed in good faith to determine the rights of the parties. The matters shall then be deemed an action at issue and all proceedings thereafter shall be as provided by these rules.

Source: (b) repealed, effective April 5, 2010.

Rule 308. General Rules of Pleading

(a) Claims for Relief. Complaints shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapter 25, Form 2, C.R.C.P., and shall be signed by the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney.

(b) Defenses; Form of Denials. The answer shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapter 25, Form 3, C.R.C.P., and shall be signed by the defendant or the defendant's attorney.

Rule 309. Pleading Special Matters

(a) Capacity. It is not necessary to aver the capacity of a party to sue or be sued or the authority of a party to sue or be sued in a representative capacity or the legal existence of an organized association of persons that is a party. The issue as to the legal existence of any party or the capacity of any party to sue or be sued or the authority of a party to sue or be sued in a representative capacity shall be raised by a short, concise, negative statement with supporting particulars in the answer.

(b) Fraud, Mistake, Condition of the Mind. All claims of fraud or mistake and the facts constituting such shall be concisely stated.

(c) Official Document or Act. In pleading an official document or official act it is sufficient to aver that the document was issued or the act done in compliance with law.

(d) Judgment. In pleading a judgment or decision of a court, judicial or quasi-judicial tribunal, or of a board or officer within the United States or within a territory or insular possession subject to the dominion of the United States, it is sufficient to aver the judgment or decision without setting forth matter showing jurisdiction to render it. A denial of jurisdiction shall be made specifically and with particularity and when so made the party pleading the judgment or decision shall establish on the trial all controverted jurisdictional facts.

(e) Time and Place. For the purpose of testing the sufficiency of a pleading, averments of time and place are material and shall be considered like all other averments of material matter.

(f) Special Damages. When items of special damage are claimed, they shall be specifically stated.

(g) Pleading Statute. In pleading a statute of Colorado or of the United States, the same need not be set forth at length, but it shall be sufficient to refer to such statute by the appropriate designation in the official or recognized compilation thereof, or otherwise identify the same, and the court shall thereupon take judicial notice thereof.

Rule 310. Form of Summons, Pleadings and Other Documents

(a) Caption; Names of Parties. The complaint and answer shall be in the form shown in Appendix to Chapter 25, C.R.C.P. with a caption that conforms with C.R.C.P. 10. The complaint in an action brought pursuant to section 13-40-110, C.R.S., shall also include a demand for possession setting forth all jurisdictional prerequisites necessary for the entry of judgment for possession. The complaint in an action brought pursuant to section 13-6-104 (5) or (6), C.R.S., shall also be verified and include a demand for injunctive relief. The complaint in an action brought pursuant to section 13-6-105(1)(f), C.R.S., shall also be verified and include a demand for injunctive relief, and a copy of the covenant shall be attached as an exhibit. Affidavits, written orders and all other documents authorized to be filed shall contain the form of caption as specified in C.R.C.P. 10. In all cases the case or docket number shall appear on the document if known.

(b) Exhibits. An exhibit is a part of the document to which it is attached for all purposes.

(c) Form of Summons. The summons shall be in the form and content prescribed by the Appendix to Chapter 25, Forms 1, 1A (for actions brought pursuant to section 13-40-110, C.R.S.), 1B (for actions brought pursuant to section 13-6-105(1)(f), C.R.S.), or 1C (for actions where service is permitted to be by publication), with a caption that conforms with C.R.C.P. 10. The summons shall contain the name, address, telephone number, and registration number of the plaintiff's attorney, if any, and if not, the full name, address and daytime telephone number of the plaintiff.

(d) General Rule Regarding Paper Size and Quality. Only documents which are clear and legible and are on permanent plain 8 1/2 by 11 inch paper shall be filed.

Rule 311. Signing of Pleadings

(a) Obligations of parties and attorneys. When a party is not represented by an attorney, the party shall sign the pleadings. The pleadings shall contain the party's address, and if the party is not represented by an attorney, shall include the party's telephone number. If a party is represented by an attorney, the attorney shall sign the pleading and state on the initial pleading the attorney's registration number, and in addition thereto shall note the attorney's address and telephone number thereon. The signature of the attorney on a pleading shall have the same effect and subject the attorney to the same penalties as provided in C.R.C.P. 11. If the pleading is not signed, it may be stricken and the action may proceed as though the pleading had not been filed. If the current registration number of the attorney is not included with the signature, the clerk of the court shall request from the attorney the registration number. If the attorney is unable to furnish the clerk with a registration number, that fact shall be reported to the clerk of the Supreme Court, but the clerk shall, nevertheless, accept the filing.

(b) Limited Representation. An attorney may undertake to provide limited representation in accordance with Colo.RPC 1.2 to a pro se party involved in a court proceeding. Pleadings or papers filed by the pro se party that were prepared with the drafting assistance of the attorney shall include the attorney's name, address, telephone number and registration number. The attorney shall advise the pro se party that such pleading or other paper must contain this statement. In helping to draft the pleading or paper filed by the pro se party, the attorney certifies that to the best of the attorney's knowledge, information and belief, this pleading or paper is (1) well-grounded in fact based upon a reasonable inquiry of the pro se party by the attorney, (2) is warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification or reversal of existing law, and (3) is not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation. The attorney in providing such drafting assistance may rely on the pro se party's representation of facts, unless the attorney has reason to believe that such representations are false or materially insufficient, in which instance the attorney shall make an independent reasonable inquiry into the facts. Assistance by an attorney to a pro se party in filling out pre-printed and electronically published forms that are issued through the judicial branch for use in court are not subject to the certification and attorney name disclosure requirements of this Rule 311(b).

Limited representation of a pro se party under this Rule 311(b) shall not constitute an entry of appearance by the attorney for purposes of C.R.C.P. 121, section 1-1 or C.R.C.P. 305, and does not authorize or require the service of papers upon the attorney. Representation of the pro se party by the attorney at any proceeding before a judge, magistrate, or other judicial officer on behalf of the pro se party constitutes an entry of an appearance pursuant to C.R.C.P. 121, section 1-1. The attorney's violation of this Rule 311(b) may subject the attorney to the sanctions provided in C.R.C.P. 311(a).

Rule 312. Defenses and Objections — When and How Presented — by Pleading or Motion — Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

(a) Responsive Pleadings; When Presented. The defendant shall file an answer including any counterclaim or cross-claim on or before the appearance date as fixed in the summons. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, the appearance date shall not be more than 63 days from the date of the issuance of the summons and the summons must have been served at least 14 days before the appearance date. When circumstances require that the plaintiff proceed under Rule 304(e), the above limitation shall not apply and the appearance date shall not be less than 14 days after the completion of service by publication or mail.

(b) Motions. Motions raising defenses shall be made in accordance with Rule 307. If made by the defendant on or before the appearance date the motions shall be ruled upon before an answer is required to be filed. If the court rules upon such motions on the appearance date, the defendant may be required to file the answer immediately. The answer shall otherwise be filed within 14 days of the order. The court may permit the plaintiff to amend the complaint or supply additional facts and may permit additional time within which the answer shall be filed.

(c) Waiver of Defenses. A party waives all defenses and objections which are not raised either by motion or in his answer except that the defense of lack of jurisdiction of the subject matter may be made at any time.

(d) Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings. At any time after the last pleading is filed, but within such time as not to delay the trial, any party may move for judgment on the pleadings. A party shall not submit matters outside the pleadings in support of the motion.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Abts v. Bd. of Educ., 622 P.2d 518 (Colo. 1980).

Rule 313. Counterclaim and Cross Claim

(a) Compulsory Counterclaims. If at the time the action is commenced the defendant possesses a counterclaim against the plaintiff that is within the jurisdiction of the county court, exclusive of interest and costs, arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim, does not require for its adjudication the presence of third parties over whom the court cannot acquire jurisdiction, and is not the subject of another pending action, the defendant shall file such counterclaim in the answer or thereafter be barred from suit on the counterclaim. The defendant may also elect to file a counterclaim not arising out of the transaction or occurrence.

(b) Alternate. If at the time the action is commenced the defendant possesses a counterclaim against the plaintiff that is not within the jurisdiction of the county court, exclusive of interest and costs, the defendant may:

(1) File the counterclaim in the pending county court action, but, unless the defendant follows the procedure set forth in section (2) below, any judgment in the defendant's favor shall be limited to the jurisdictional limit of the county court, exclusive of interest and costs, and suit for the excess due the defendant over that sum will be barred thereafter; or

(2) File the counterclaim together with the answer in the pending county court action and request in the answer that the action be transferred to the district court. Upon filing the answer and counterclaim, the defendant shall tender the district court filing fee for a complaint. Upon compliance by the defendant with the requirements of this section, all county court proceedings shall be discontinued and the clerk of the county court shall certify all records in the case and forward the docket fee to the district court. In the event the counterclaim which caused the removal is subsequently dismissed, the case may be remanded to the county court for further proceedings.

(c) Counterclaim Maturing or Acquired after Pleading. A claim which either matured or was acquired by the defendant after the answer was filed may, with the permission of the court, be presented as a counterclaim by supplemental pleading. If the counterclaim exceeds the jurisdiction of the county court, upon request of the defendant to transfer the case to district court and the tendering of the district court filing fee for a complaint, all county court proceedings shall be discontinued and the clerk of the county court shall certify all records in the case and forward the docket fee to the district court. If it is determined that the defendant's request for transfer was made for the purpose of delaying the trial of the plaintiff's claim, the district court shall award the plaintiff any costs, including reasonable attorney fees, occasioned by the delay.

(d) Omitted or Amended Counterclaim. When a defendant fails to file a counterclaim or request that the case be transferred to the district court through oversight, inadvertence, or excusable neglect, or when justice requires, the counterclaim may be pled by amendment, subject to Rule 315. If this omitted or amended counterclaim exceeds the jurisdiction of the county court, upon request of the defendant to transfer the case to district court and the tendering of the district court filing fee for a complaint, all county court proceedings shall be discontinued and the clerk of the county court shall certify all records in the case and forward the docket fee to the district court. If it is determined that the defendant's request for transfer was made for the purpose of delaying the trial of the plaintiff's claim, the district court shall award the plaintiff any costs, including reasonable attorney's fees, occasioned by the delay.

(e) Cross Claim against Co-party. An answer may state a cross claim against a codefendant arising out of the same transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the original action or relating to any property that is the subject matter of the original action. Such cross claim may include a claim that a party against whom it is asserted is or may be liable to the cross claimant for all or part of a claim asserted in the action against the cross claimant. A claim which either matured or was acquired by the defendant after filing the answer may, with the permission of the court, be presented as a cross claim by supplemental pleading. Any cross claim shall be limited to the jurisdictional limit of the county court, but the cross claimant shall have the right to dismiss the cross claim without prejudice at any time prior to trial, except that a dismissal operates as an adjudication upon the merits when requested by the cross claimant who has once dismissed in any court an action based on or including the same claim.

(f) Joinder of Additional Parties. Persons other than those made parties to the original action may be made parties to a counterclaim or cross claim in accordance with the provisions of Rules 319 and 320.

(g) Claims against Assignor or Assignee. Except as otherwise provided by law as to negotiable instruments, any claim, counterclaim, or cross claim which could be asserted against an assignor at the time of or before notice of an assignment, may be asserted against an assignee of the assignor, to the extent that such claim, counterclaim, or cross claim does not exceed recovery upon the claim of the assignee.

ANNOTATION

Court not to predetermine damages for jurisdictional question. Since damages are a matter of proof at the trial, a trial court may not determine in advance of filing whether the jurisdictional amount can be established. Medina v. District Court, 177 Colo. 185, 493 P.2d 367 (1972).

The three provisions of paragraph (b) are mutually exclusive alternatives for pursuing counterclaims in county court. As a result, when defendant filed its counterclaim in county court its potential recovery was limited to $5,000. Intern. Satellite Com. v. Kelly Servs., 749 P.2d 468 (Colo. App. 1987).

Even though defendant's counterclaim did not mature until after the action was begun, it is still subject to the other provisions of this rule. Intern. Satellite Com. v. Kelly Servs., 749 P.2d 468 (Colo. App. 1987).

Tenant's unlawful eviction action in district court was properly dismissed where tenant failed to mention landlord's unlawful detainer action in county court, failed to comply with the procedural requirements for asserting an unlawful eviction claim, and was unable to refile the same answer and counterclaim in district court that he had filed in county court. Rule 316. Pretrial Procedure — Disclosure and Conference

(a) Disclosure Statement.

(1) At any time after the answer is filed but no later than 21 days before trial, a party may request from an opposing party a list of witnesses who may be called at trial, and copies of documents and pictures, and a description of physical evidence which may be used at trial. Such request shall be made by serving pursuant to C.R.C.P. 305 a blank disclosure statement, which shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapter 25, Form 9, on the opposing party and shall be accompanied by the requesting party's properly completed Form 9 and its attachments. The opposing party shall serve pursuant to C.R.C.P. 305 a completed Form 9 with attachments on the requesting party within 21 days after service but not less than 7 days before trial. The court may shorten or extend that time. A party may not supplement the disclosure statement except for good cause.

(2) The court may order the parties to exchange and file Form 9 disclosure statements at any time before trial.

(3) Any party failing to respond in good faith to a Form 9 request or court order under this subsection (a) shall be subject to imposition of appropriate sanctions at the time of trial.

(b) Pretrial Conferences. Prior to trial, the court may in its discretion and upon reasonable notice order a pretrial conference. Conferences by telephone are encouraged. Following a pretrial conference, the court may issue an order which may include limitations on the issues to be raised and the witnesses and exhibits to be allowed at trial, entry of judgment, or dismissal, if appropriate. Failure to appear at a pretrial conference may result in appropriate sanctions, including an award of attorney's fees and expenses incurred by the appearing party.

(c) Pretrial Discovery. If a pretrial conference is held, any party may request that discovery be permitted to assist in the preparation for trial. The request shall be made only during the conference. The discovery may include depositions, requests for admission, interrogatories, physical or mental examinations, or requests for production or inspection. If the court enters a discovery order, it shall set forth the extent and terms of the discovery as well as the time for compliance. If the court fails to specify any term, then the provisions of C.R.C.P. 30, 32, 33, 34, 35, and 36 shall be followed as to the missing term.

(d) Resolution of Disputes. All issues regarding discovery shall be resolved during the conference. No party shall be entitled to seek protective orders following the conference. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, a dispute over compliance with the discovery order shall be resolved at the time of trial, and the court may impose appropriate sanctions, including attorney's fees and costs, against the non-complying party.

(e) Juror Notebooks. The court may order the use of juror notebooks. If notebooks are to be used, counsel for each party shall confer about items to be included in juror notebooks and at the pretrial conference or other date set by the court make a joint submission to the court of items to be included in the juror notebook.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

Subsection (a) provides for the disclosure of a list of witnesses and copies of exhibits through the use of a form Disclosure Statement in simple cases. This rule also sets forth the procedure for pretrial conferences. A simplified form of discovery has been developed for the exceptional case warranting the expense of discovery due to the increased jurisdictional limit of the county court and is available only when there is a pretrial conference. The procedure is designed to provide discovery which is tailored to the particular needs of the parties. In order to avoid disputes arising from discovery, all matters should be resolved by the court at the time of the conference.

(e) added and adopted June 25, 1998, effective January 1, 1999; (a)(1) and (a)(3) amended and effective June 28, 2007; (a)(1) amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b).

Rule 317. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant

(a) Real Party in Interest. Every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest; but a fiduciary as defined in section 15-1-301, C.R.S., a party with whom or in whose name a contract has been made for the benefit of another, or a party authorized by statute may sue in such party's own name without joining the party for whose benefit the action is brought, and when a statute so provides, an action for the use or benefit of another shall be brought in the name of the people of the state of Colorado.

(b) Capacity to Sue or Be Sued. A partnership or other unincorporated association may sue or be sued in its common name for the purpose of enforcing for or against it a substantive right. A father and mother or the sole surviving parent may maintain an action for the injury or death of a child; where both maintain the action, each shall have an equal interest in the judgment; where one has deserted or refuses to sue, the other may maintain the action. A guardian may maintain an action for the injury or death of the guardian's ward.

(c) Minors or Incapacitated Persons. Whenever a minor or incapacitated person has a representative, such as a fiduciary as defined in section 15-1-301, C.R.S., the fiduciary may sue or defend on behalf of the minor or incapacitated person. If a minor or incapacitated person does not have a duly appointed fiduciary, or such fiduciary fails to act, the minor or incapacitated person may sue by a next friend or by a guardian ad litem. The court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for a minor or incapacitated person not otherwise represented in an action or shall make such other order as it deems proper for the protection of the minor or incapacitated person, provided, that in an action in rem it shall not be necessary to appoint a guardian ad litem for any unknown person who might be a minor or incapacitated person.

Rule 318. Joinder of Claims and Remedies

(a) Joinder of Claims. The plaintiff in his complaint or in a reply setting forth a counterclaim and the defendant in an answer setting forth a counterclaim may join either as independent or as alternate claims as many claims either legal or equitable or both as he may have against an opposing party.

(b) Joinder of Remedies: Fraudulent Conveyances. Whenever a claim is one heretofore cognizable only after another claim has been prosecuted to a conclusion, the two claims may be joined in a single action; but the court shall grant relief in that action only in accordance with the relative substantive rights of the parties. For example, a plaintiff may state a claim for money and a claim to have set aside a conveyance fraudulent as to him, without first having obtained a judgment establishing the claim for money.

Rule 319. Necessary Joinder of Parties

Persons having a joint interest shall be made parties and be joined on the same side as plaintiffs or defendants. When a person who should join as a plaintiff refuses to do so, or the person's consent cannot be obtained, that person may be made a defendant, or in proper cases, an involuntary plaintiff.

Source: Entire rule amended July 22, 1993, effective January 1, 1994.

Rule 320. Permissive Joinder of Parties

(a) Permissive Joinder. All persons may join in one action as plaintiffs if they assert any right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences and if any question of law or fact common to all of them will arise in the action. All persons may be joined in one action as defendants if there is asserted against them jointly, severally, or in the alternative, any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences and if any question of law or fact common to all of them will arise in the action. A plaintiff or defendant need not be interested in obtaining or defending against all the relief demanded. Judgment may be given for one or more of the plaintiffs according to their respective rights to relief, and against one or more defendants according to their respective liabilities.

(b) Separate Trials. The court may make such orders as will prevent a party from being embarrassed, delayed, or put to expense by the inclusion of a party against whom the party asserts no claim and who asserts no claim against that party, and may order separate trials or make other orders to prevent delay or prejudice.

(c) Parties Jointly or Severally Liable. Persons jointly or severally liable upon the same obligation or instrument, including the parties to negotiable instruments and sureties on the same or separate instruments, may all or any of them be sued in the same action, at the option of the plaintiff.

Source: (b) amended July 22, 1993, effective January 1, 1994.

Rule 321. Misjoinder and Nonjoinder of Parties

Misjoinder of parties is not ground for dismissal of an action. Parties may be dropped or added by order of the court on motion of any party or of its own initiative at any stage of the action and on such terms as are just. Any claim against a party may be severed and proceeded with separately.

Rules 322 and 323.

(There are no present Colorado Rules 322 and 323.)

Rule 324. Intervention

Upon good cause shown, the court may permit intervention on such terms as it deems just.

Rule 325. Substitution of Parties

(a) Death.

(1) If a party dies and the claim is not thereby extinguished, the court may order substitution of the proper parties. The motion for substitution may be made by any party or by the successors or representatives of the deceased party and, together with the notice of hearing, shall be served on the parties as provided in Rule 305 and upon persons not parties in the manner provided in Rule 304 for the service of process, and may be served in any county. Suggestion of death upon the record is made by service of a statement of the fact of death as provided herein for the service of the motion and by filing of proof thereof. If the motion for substitution is not made within 91 days (13 weeks) after such service, the action shall be dismissed as to the deceased party.

(2) In the event of the death of one or more of the plaintiffs or of one or more of the defendants in an action in which the right sought to be enforced survives only to the surviving plaintiffs or only against the surviving defendants, the action does not abate. The death shall be suggested upon the record and the action shall proceed in favor of or against the surviving parties.

(b) Incapacity. If a party becomes incapacitated, the court upon motion served as provided in section (a) of this Rule may allow the action to be continued by or against the party's representative.

(c) Transfer of Interest. In case of any transfer of interest, the action may be continued by or against the original party, unless the court upon motion directs the person to whom the interest is transferred to be substituted in the action or joined with the original party. Service of the motion shall be made as provided in subsection (a)(1) of this Rule.

(d) Public Officers; Death or Separation from Office.

(1) When a public officer is a party to an action and during its pendency dies, resigns, or otherwise ceases to hold office, the action does not abate and the successor is automatically substituted as a party. Proceedings following the substitution shall be in the name of the substituted party, but any misnomer not affecting the substantial rights of the parties shall be disregarded. An order of substitution may be entered at any time, but the omission to enter such an order shall not affect the substitution.

(2) When a public officer sues or is sued in the officer's official capacity, the officer may be described as a party by the official title rather than by name; but the court may require the official's name to be added.

Rule 326. Depositions to Preserve Testimony

(a) After jurisdiction has been obtained over the defendant or over the property which is the subject of the action, a deposition by written interrogatories of a witness, including a party, may be ordered taken by the court upon motion pursuant to Rule 307 but only upon a showing (1) that the witness is or will be absent from the state at the time of trial or is or will be more than one hundred miles from the place of trial at the time of trial; or (2) that the witness will be unable to attend or testify because of age, sickness, infirmity, or imprisonment.

(b) If the court shall order such a deposition to be taken it shall be done in accordance with, and thereafter subject to, the provisions of Rule 331. Upon entry of such order, the deposition may be taken by oral examination upon agreement of the parties.

(c) The court, in lieu of a deposition to preserve testimony, may, where circumstances warrant, allow the witness to testify at the trial by telephone.

Rules 327 to 330.

(There are no present Colorado Rules 327 to 330.)

Rule 331. Conducting Depositions to Preserve Testimony

(a) Serving Interrogatories; Notice. If the court shall order the taking of a deposition of any person, the party desiring to take the deposition shall serve upon every other party not in default at least 7 days prior to the scheduled deposition copies of the written interrogatories, including the name and address of the person who is to answer them and the name, descriptive title, and address of the officer who will administer the interrogatories and transcribe the responses. Within 7 days thereafter a party so served may serve cross-interrogatories upon the party proposing to take the deposition. No redirect or recross interrogatories shall be permitted.

(b) A copy of all interrogatories served shall be delivered by the party taking the deposition to the officer designated in the order who shall put the witness on oath and who shall personally, or by someone acting under the officer's direction and in the officer's presence, record the answers of the witness verbatim. When the answers are fully transcribed the deposition shall be submitted to the witness for examination and shall be read to or by the witness, unless such examination and reading are waived by the witness and the parties. Any changes in form or substance which the witness desires to make shall be entered upon the deposition by the officer with a statement of the reasons given by the witness for making them. The deposition shall then be signed by the witness, unless the parties by stipulation waive the signing or the witness is ill or cannot be found or refuses to sign. If the deposition is not signed by the witness, the officer shall sign it and state on the record the fact of the waiver or of the illness or absence of the witness or the fact of the refusal to sign together with the reason, if any, given therefor; and the deposition may then be used as fully as though signed, unless on a motion to suppress under Rule 332(d) hereof the court holds that the reasons given for the refusal to sign require rejection of the deposition in whole or in part.

(c) Certification and Filing by Officer, Copies; Notice of Filing.

(1) The officer shall certify on the interrogatories and answers thereto that the witness was duly sworn and that the deposition is a true record of the answers given by the witness. The deposition shall then be securely sealed in an envelope endorsed with the title of the action and marked ''deposition of (here insert name of witness)'', and it shall be promptly delivered or sent by registered or certified mail to the attorney for the party taking the deposition and give written notice of the delivery or mailing to all other parties.

(2) Upon the payment of reasonable charges therefor, the officer shall furnish a copy of the deposition to any party or to the deponent.

(3) [Deleted]

(d) Orders for the Protection of Parties and Deponents. After the service of interrogatories and prior to the taking of the testimony of the deponent, the court in which the action is pending, on motion promptly made by a party or a deponent, upon notice and good cause shown, may make any order which is appropriate and just or an order that the deposition shall not be taken before the officer designated in the order.

Rule 332. Effect of Errors and Irregularities in Depositions to Preserve Testimony

(a) As to Notice. All errors and irregularities in the notice for taking a deposition under Rule 331 are waived unless written objection is promptly served upon the party after notice.

(b) As to Disqualification of Officer. Objection to taking a deposition because of disqualification of the officer before whom it is to be taken is waived unless made before the taking of the deposition begins or as soon thereafter as the disqualification becomes known or could be discovered with reasonable diligence.

(c) As to Taking of Deposition. Objections to the form of written interrogatories submitted under Rule 331 are waived unless served in writing upon the party propounding them within three days of receipt of said interrogatories.

(d) Errors and irregularities in the manner in which the testimony is transcribed or the deposition is prepared, signed, certified, sealed, indorsed, transmitted, filed, or otherwise dealt with by the officer under these rules are waived unless a motion to suppress the deposition or some part thereof is made with reasonable promptness after such defect is, or, with due diligence might have been, ascertained.

Rules 333 to 337.

(There are no present Colorado Rules 333 to 337.)

Rule 338. Right to Trial by Jury

(a) Exercise of Right. Upon the filing of a demand and the simultaneous payment of the requisite jury fee by any party in actions wherein a trial by jury is provided by constitution or by statute, including actions for the recovery of specific real or personal property, with or without damages, or for money claimed as due on contract, or as damages for breach of contract, or for injuries to person or property, all issues of fact shall be tried by a jury. The jury fee is not refundable; however, a demanding party may waive that party's demand for trial by jury pursuant to section (e) of this rule.

(b) Demand. A demand for trial by jury must be made on or before the appearance date. The demand may be made orally at the time of appearance or endorsed on the face of the complaint or answer. The demanding party shall pay the requisite jury fee at the time the demand is made and shall serve the demand on all other parties.

(c) Jury Fees. When a party to an action has exercised the right to demand a trial by jury, every other party to such action shall also pay the requisite jury fee unless such other party files and serves a notice of waiver of the right to trial by jury within 14 days after service of the demand.

(d) Specification of Issues. A demand may specify the issues to be tried to the jury; in the absence of such specification, the party filing the demand shall be deemed to have demanded trial by jury of all issues so triable. If a party demands trial by jury on fewer than all of the issues so triable, any other party, within 14 days after the demand is made, may file and serve a demand for trial by jury of any other issues so triable.

(e) Waiver; Withdrawal. The failure of a party to make a demand as required by this rule and simultaneously pay the requisite jury fee constitutes a waiver of that party's right to trial by jury. A demand for trial by jury made pursuant to this rule may not subsequently be withdrawn in the absence of the written consent of every party who has demanded a trial by jury and paid the requisite jury fee and of every party who has failed to waive the right to trial by jury and paid the requisite jury fee.

Rule 339. Trial by Jury or by the Court

(a) By Jury. When trial by jury has been demanded and the requisite jury fee has been paid pursuant to Rule 338, the action shall be designated upon the register of actions as a jury action. The trial shall be by jury of all issues so demanded, unless (1) all parties who have demanded a trial by jury and paid the requisite jury fee and all parties who have failed to waive the right to trial by jury and paid the requisite jury fee have, in writing, waived their rights to trial by jury, or (2) the court upon motion or on its own initiative finds that a right to trial by jury of some or all of those issues does not exist, or (3) all parties demanding trial by jury fail to appear at trial.

(b) By the Court. Issues not demanded for trial by jury as provided in Rule 338 shall be tried by the court.

(c) No Advisory Jury or Jury Without a Jury Demand. An issue not designated in a demand as an issue triable by jury shall not be tried by an advisory jury or by any jury.

ANNOTATION

Litigant is denied right to jury trial by repeated continuances. By structuring the court system to require a civil litigant to undergo repeated continuances if a jury trial is requested, a civil litigant is denied the right to a jury trial. Halliburton v. County Court ex rel. City & County of Denver, 672 P.2d 1006 (Colo. 1983).

Applied in Husar v. Larimer County Court, 629 P.2d 1104 (Colo. App. 1981).

Rule 340. Assignment of Cases for Trial

Trial courts shall provide by rule for the placing of actions upon the trial calendar in such manner as they deem expedient.

Rule 341. Dismissal of Actions

(a) (1) Subject to the provisions of these rules, an action may be dismissed by the plaintiff upon payment of costs without order of court (i) by filing notice of dismissal at any time before filing or service by the adverse party of an answer, whichever first occurs, or (ii) by filing a stipulation of dismissal signed by all parties who have appeared in the action. Unless otherwise stated in the notice of dismissal or stipulation, the dismissal is without prejudice, except that a notice of dismissal operates as an adjudication upon the merits when filed by a plaintiff who has once dismissed in any court an action based on or including the same claim.

(2) By Order of Court. Except as provided in subsection (a)(1) of this Rule, an action shall not be dismissed at the plaintiff's instance save upon order of the court and upon such terms and conditions as the court deems proper. If a counterclaim has been pleaded by a defendant prior to the service upon him of the plaintiff's motion to dismiss, the action shall not be dismissed against the defendant's objection unless the counterclaim can remain pending for independent adjudication by the court. Unless otherwise specified in the order, a dismissal under this paragraph is without prejudice.

(b) Involuntary Dismissal.

(1) By Defendant. For failure of the plaintiff to prosecute or to comply with these rules or any order of court, a defendant may move for dismissal of an action or any claim. After the completion of the plaintiff's evidence, the defendant, without waiving the right to offer evidence in the event that the motion is not granted, may move for a dismissal on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. In an action tried by the court without a jury the court as trier of the facts may then determine them and render a judgment against the plaintiff or may decline to render any judgment until the close of all the evidence. Unless the court in its order for dismissal otherwise specifies, a dismissal under this subdivision and any dismissal not provided for in this Rule, other than a dismissal for lack of jurisdiction or failure to file a complaint under Rule 303, operates as an adjudication upon the merits.

(2) By the Court. Actions not prosecuted or brought to trial with due diligence may, upon notice, be dismissed without prejudice unless otherwise specified by the court upon 28 days' notice in writing to all appearing parties or their counsel of record, unless a party shows cause in writing within said 28 days why the case should not be dismissed.

(c) Dismissal of Counterclaim or Cross Claim. The provisions of this Rule apply to the dismissal of a counterclaim or cross claim, except as provided in Rule 313(e).

Source: (b) and (c) amended July 22, 1993, effective January 1, 1994; (b)(2) amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b).

ANNOTATION

This rule provides for a plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of his action without prejudice if the notice of dismissal is filed before the adverse party files or serves his answer. The provisions of the rule also apply to the dismissal of a counterclaim. Where a reply to a counter-claim was filed after the notice of dismissal was sought, there is no reason why the counterclaim should not be dismissed as a matter of course. Empiregas, Inc., of Pueblo v. County Court, 715 P.2d 937 (Colo. App. 1985).

Rule 342. Consolidation; Separate Trials

(a) Consolidation. When actions involving a common question of law or fact are pending before the court, it may make such orders concerning proceedings therein as may tend to avoid unnecessary costs or delay.

(b) Separate Trials. The court in furtherance of convenience or to avoid prejudice may order a separate trial of any claim or issue.

(c) Court Sessions Public; When Closed. All sessions of court shall be public, except that when it appears to the court that the action will be of such character as to injure public morals, or when orderly procedure requires it, it shall be its duty to exclude all persons not officers of the court or connected with such case.

Rule 343. Evidence

(a) Form and Admissibility. In all trials the testimony of witnesses shall be taken orally in open court, unless otherwise provided by these rules or any statute of this state or of the United States excepting the Federal Rules of Evidence.

(b) to (d) Repealed.

(e) Evidence on Motions. When a motion is based on facts not appearing of record the court may hear the matter on affidavits presented by the respective parties, or the court may direct that the matter be heard wholly or partly on oral testimony or depositions. This shall include applications to grant or dissolve an injunction and for the appointment or discharge of a receiver.

(f) and (g) Repealed.

(h) (1) Request for absentee testimony. A party may request that testimony be presented at a trial or hearing by a person absent from the courtroom by means of telephone or some other suitable and equivalent medium of communication. A request for absentee testimony shall be made by written motion or stipulation filed as soon as practicable after the need for absentee testimony becomes known. The motion shall include:

(A) The reason(s) for allowing such testimony.

(B) A detailed description of all testimony which is proposed to be taken by telephone or other medium of communication.

(C) Copies of all documents or reports which will be used or referred to in such testimony.

(2) Response. If any party objects to absentee testimony, said party shall file a written response within 7 days following service of the motion unless the opening of the proceeding occurs first, in which case the objection shall be made orally in open court at the commencement of the proceeding or as soon as practicable thereafter. If no response is filed or objection is made, the motion may be deemed confessed.

(3) Determination. The court shall determine whether in the interest of justice absentee testimony may be allowed. The facts to be considered by the court in determining whether to permit absentee testimony shall include but not be limited to the following:

(A) Whether there is a statutory right to absentee testimony.

(B) The cost savings to the parties of having absentee testimony versus the cost of the witness appearing in person.

(C) The availability of appropriate equipment at the court to permit the presentation of absentee testimony.

(D) The availability of the witness to appear personally in court.

(E) The relative importance of the issue or issues for which the witness is offered to testify.

(F) If credibility of the witness is an issue.

(G) Whether the case is to be tried to the court or to a jury.

(H) Whether the presentation of absentee testimony would inhibit the ability to cross examine the witness.

(I) The efforts of the requesting parties to obtain the presence of the witness.

If the court orders absentee testimony to be taken, the court may issue such orders as it deems appropriate to protect the integrity of the proceedings.

Rule 344. Proof of Official Record

(a) Authentication of Copy. An official record or an entry therein, when admissible for any purpose, may be evidenced by an official publication thereof, or by a copy attested by the officer having the legal custody of the record, or by the deputy, and accompanied with a certificate that such officer has the custody. If the office in which the record is kept is within the United States or within a territory or possession subject to the dominion of the United States, the certificate may be made by a judge of a court of record of the district or political subdivision in which the record is kept, authenticated by the seal of the court, or may be made by any public officer having a seal of office and having official duties in the district or political subdivision in which the record is kept, authenticated by the seal of the office. If the office in which the record is kept is in a foreign state or country, the certificate may be made by a secretary of embassy or legation consul general, consul, vice-consul, or consular agent or by any officer in the foreign service of the United States stationed in the foreign state or country in which the record is kept, and authenticated by the seal of the office.

(b) Proof of Lack of Record. A written statement signed by an officer having the custody of an official record or by the deputy that after diligent search no record or entry of a specified tenor is found to exist in the records of the office, accompanied by a certificate as above provided, is admissible as evidence that the records of the office contain no such record or entry.

(c) Other Proof. This Rule does not prevent the proof of official records or of entry or lack of entry therein by any method authorized by any applicable statute or by the rules of evidence.

(d) Certified Copies of Records Read in Evidence. All copies of any record, or document, or paper, in the custody of a public officer of this state, or of the United States, certified by the officer having custody thereof, or verified by the oath of such officer to be a full, true and correct copy of the original in the officer's custody, may be read in evidence in an action or proceeding in the courts of this state, in like manner and with like effects as the original could be if produced.

(e) Seal Dispensed With. In the event any office or officer, authenticating any documents under the provisions of this Rule, has no official seal, then authentication by seal is dispensed with.

(f) Statutes and Laws of Other States and Countries. A printed copy of a statute, or other written law, of another state, or of a territory, or of a foreign country, or a printed copy of a proclamation, edict, decree or ordinance by the executive power thereof, contained in a book or publication purporting or proved to have been published by the authority thereof, or proved to be commonly admitted as evidence of the existing law in the judicial tribunals thereof, is presumptive evidence of the statute, law, proclamation, edict, decree or ordinance. The unwritten or common law of another state, or of a territory, or of a foreign country, may be proved as a fact by oral evidence. The books of reports of cases adjudged in the courts thereof must also be admitted as presumptive evidence of the unwritten or common law thereof. The law of such state or territory or foreign country is to be determined by the court or master and included in the findings of the court or master or instructions to the jury, as the case may be. Such finding or instruction is subject to review. In determining such law, neither the trial court nor the supreme court shall be limited to the evidence produced on the trial by the parties, but may consult any of the written authorities above named in this subdivision, with the same force and effect as if the same had been admitted in evidence.

Rule 345. Subpoena

(a) For Attendance of Witnesses; Form; Issuance. Subpoenas may be issued under Rule 345 only to compel attendance of witnesses, with or without documentary evidence, at a deposition, hearing or trial. Every subpoena shall state the name of the court, and the title of the action, and shall command each person to whom it is directed to attend and give testimony at a time and place therein specified.

(b) For Production of Documentary Evidence. A subpoena may also command the person to whom it is directed to produce the books, papers, documents, or tangible things designated therein; but the court, upon oral motion made promptly and in any event at or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance therewith, may (1) quash or modify the subpoena if it is unreasonable and oppressive or (2) condition denial of the motion upon the advancement by the person in whose behalf the subpoena is issued of the reasonable cost of producing the books, papers, documents, or tangible things.

(c) Service. Service of a subpoena upon a person named therein shall be made by delivering a copy thereof to such person and by tendering the fees for one day's attendance and mileage allowed by law. Service is also valid if the person named in the subpoena has signed a written admission or waiver of personal service. When the subpoena is issued on behalf of the state of Colorado, or an officer or agency thereof, fees and mileage need not be tendered. Proof of service shall be made as in Rule 304(g). Unless otherwise ordered by the court for good cause shown, such subpoena shall be served no later than 48 hours before the time for appearance set out in said subpoena.

(d) Subpoena for Taking Depositions on Written Interrogatories; Place of Examination. (1) Presentation of a notice to take a deposition by written interrogatories as provided in Rule 331, constitutes a sufficient authorization for the issuance by the judge or clerk of any court of record in the county where the deposition is to be taken, or by the notary public or other officer authorized to take the deposition, of subpoenas for the persons named or described therein.

(2) A resident of this state may be required by subpoena to attend an examination upon deposition by written interrogatories only in the county wherein the person resides or is employed or transacts business in person, or at such other convenient place as is fixed by an order of the court. A nonresident of this state may be required by subpoena to attend only in the county wherein the person is served with the subpoena, or within forty miles from the place of service, or at such other convenient place as is fixed by the order of the court.

(e) Subpoena for Deposition to Preserve Testimony, Hearing or Trial. Subpoenas shall be issued either by the clerk of the court in which the case is docketed or by one of counsel whose appearance has been entered in the particular case in which the subpoena is sought. A subpoena requiring the attendance of a witness at a deposition to preserve testimony, hearing or trial may be served any place within the state.

Rule 346. Exceptions Unnecessary

Formal exceptions to rulings or orders of the court are unnecessary; but for all purposes for which an exception has heretofore been necessary it is sufficient that a party, at the time the ruling or order of the court is made or sought, makes known to the court the action which the party desires the court to take or states the objection to the action of the court and the grounds therefor; and, if a party has no opportunity to object to a ruling or order at the time it is made, the absence of an objection does not thereafter prejudice that party.

Rule 347. Jurors

(a) Orientation and Examination of Jurors. An orientation and examination shall be conducted to inform prospective jurors about their duties and service and to obtain information about prospective jurors to facilitate an intelligent exercise of challenges for cause and peremptory challenges.

(1) The jury commissioner is authorized to examine and, when appropriate, excuse prospective jurors who do not satisfy the statutory qualifications for jury service, or who are entitled to a postponement, or as otherwise authorized by appropriate court order.

(2) When prospective jurors have reported to the courtroom, the judge shall explain to them in plain and clear language:

(I) The grounds for challenge for cause;

(II) Each juror's duty to volunteer information that would constitute a disqualification or give rise to a challenge for cause;

(III) The identities of the parties and their counsel;

(IV) The nature of the case, utilizing the parties' CJI(3d) Instruction 2:1 or, alternatively, a joint statement of factual information intended to provide a relevant context for the prospective jurors to respond to questions asked of them. Alternatively, at the request of counsel and in the discretion of the judge, counsel may present such information through brief, non-argumentative statements.

(V) General legal principles applicable to the case, including burdens of proof, definitions of preponderance and other pertinent evidentiary standards and other matters that jurors will be required to consider and apply in deciding the issues.

(3) The judge shall ask prospective jurors questions concerning their qualifications to serve as jurors. The parties or their counsel shall be permitted to ask the prospective jurors additional questions. In the discretion of the judge, juror questionnaires, posterboards and other methods may be used. In order to minimize delay, the judge may reasonably limit the time available to the parties or their counsel for juror examination. The court may limit or terminate repetitious, irrelevant, unreasonably lengthy, abusive, or otherwise improper examination.

(4) Jurors shall not be required to disclose personal locating information, such as address or place of business in open court and such information shall not be maintained in files open to the public. The trial judge shall assure that parties and counsel have access to appropriate and necessary locating information.

(5) Once the jury is impaneled, the judge shall explain the general principles of law applicable to civil cases, the procedural guidelines regarding conduct by jurors during the trial, case specific legal principles and definitions of technical or special terms expected to be used during the presentation of the case.

(b) Alternate Jurors. No alternate jurors shall be called or impaneled to sit on juries in the county court.

(c) Challenge to Array. A challenge to the array of jurors may not be made by either party.

(d) Challenge to Individual Jurors. A challenge to an individual juror may be for cause or peremptory.

(e) Challenges for Cause. Challenges for cause may be taken on one or more of the following grounds:

(1) A want of any of the qualifications prescribed by the statute to render a person competent as a juror.

(2) Consanguinity or affinity within the third degree to any party.

(3) Standing in the relation of guardian, ward, employer, employee, principal, or agent to any party, or being a member of the family of any party, or a partner in business with any party or being security on any bond or obligation for any party.

(4) Having served as a juror or been a witness on a previous trial between the same parties for the same cause of action.

(5) Interest on the part of the juror in the event of the action, or in the main question involved in the action, except the interest of the juror as a member, or citizen of a municipal corporation.

(6) Having formed or expressed an unqualified opinion or belief as to the merits of the action.

(7) The existence of a state of mind in the juror evincing enmity against or bias to either party.

(f) Order and Determination of Challenges for Cause. The plaintiff first, and afterwards the defendant, shall complete challenges for cause. Such challenges shall be tried by the court, and the juror challenged, and any other person, may be examined as a witness.

(g) Order of Selecting Jury. The clerk shall draw by lot and call the number of jurors that are to try the cause plus such an additional number as will allow for all peremptory challenges permitted. After each challenge for cause sustained, another juror shall be called to fill the vacancy and may be challenged for cause. When the challenges for cause are completed, the clerk shall make a list of the jurors remaining in the order called and each side beginning with plaintiff shall indicate thereon its peremptory challenge. The clerk shall then swear the remaining jurors to the number required to try the cause and these shall constitute the jury.

(h) Peremptory Challenges. Each side shall be entitled to one peremptory challenge, and if there be more than one party to a side they must join in such challenge. One additional peremptory challenge shall be allowed to each party appearing under Rule 324 if the trial court in its discretion determines that the ends of justice so require.

(i) Oath of Jurors. As soon as the jury is completed, an oath or affirmation shall be administered to the jurors in substance:

That you and each of you will well and truly try the matter at issue between _____, the plaintiff, and _____, the defendant, and a true verdict render, according to the evidence.

(j) When Juror Disqualified. If before verdict a juror becomes unable or disqualified to perform the juror's duty the parties may agree to proceed with the other jurors or agree that a new juror be sworn and the trial begun anew. If the parties do not so agree the court shall discharge the jury and the case shall be tried anew.

(k) Examination of Premises by Jury. The court may not order or permit the jury to see or examine any property or place.

(l) Deliberation of Jury. After hearing the charge the jury may either decide in court or retire for deliberation. If it retires, except as hereinafter provided in this section, it shall be kept together in a separate room or other convenient place under the charge of one or more officers until it agrees upon a verdict or is discharged. While the jury is deliberating the officer shall, to the utmost of the officer's ability, keep the jury together, separate from other persons. The officer shall not communicate or allow any communication to be made to any juror unless by order of the court except to ask it if it has agreed upon a verdict, and shall not, before the verdict is rendered, communicate with any person the state of its deliberations or the verdict agreed upon. The court in its discretion in any individual case may modify the procedure under this Rule by permitting a jury which is deliberating to separate during the luncheon or dinner hour or separate for the night under appropriate cautionary instructions, with directions that they meet again at a time certain to resume deliberations again under the charge of the appropriate officer.

(m) Items Taken to Deliberation. Upon retiring, the jurors shall take the jury instructions, their juror notebooks and notes they personally made, if any, and to the extent feasible, those exhibits that have been admitted as evidence.

(n) Additional Instructions. After the jury has retired for deliberation, if it desires additional instructions, it may request the same from the court; any additional instructions shall be given it in court in the presence of or after notice to the parties.

(o) New Trial if No Verdict. When a jury is discharged or prevented from giving a verdict for any reason, the action shall be tried anew.

(p) When Sealed Verdict. While the jury is absent the court may adjourn from time to time, in respect to other business, but it shall be nevertheless deemed open for every purpose connected with the cause submitted to the jury, until a verdict is rendered or the jury discharged. The court may direct the jury to bring in a sealed verdict at the opening of court, in case of an agreement during a recess or adjournment for the day. A final adjournment of the court for the term shall discharge the jury.

(q) Declaration of Verdict. When the jury has agreed upon its verdict it shall be conducted into court by the officer in charge. The names of the jurors shall be called, and the jurors shall be asked by the court or clerk if they have agreed upon a verdict, and if the answer be in the affirmative, they shall hand the same to the clerk. The clerk shall enter in the record the names of the jurors. Upon a request of any party the jury may be polled.

(r) Correction of Verdict. If the verdict be informal or insufficient in any particular, the jury, under the advice of the court, may correct it or may be again sent out.

(s) Verdict Recorded, Disagreement. The verdict, if agreed upon by all jurors, shall be received and recorded and the jury discharged. If all the jurors do not concur in the verdict, the jury may be again sent out, or may be discharged.

(t) Juror Notebooks. Juror notebooks may be available during trial and deliberation to aid jurors in the performance of their duties.

(u) Juror Questions. Jurors shall be allowed to submit written questions to the court for the court to ask of witnesses during trial, in compliance with procedures established by the trial court. The trial court shall have the discretion to prohibit or limit questioning in a particular trial for good cause.

Rule 349. No Colorado Rule

Rule 350. Motion for a Directed Verdict

A party may move for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence offered by an opponent or at the close of all the evidence. A party who moves for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence offered by an opponent may offer evidence in the event that the motion is not granted, without having reserved the right so to do and to the same extent as if the motion had not been made. A motion for a directed verdict which is not granted is not a waiver of trial by jury even though all parties to the action have moved for directed verdicts. A motion for a directed verdict shall state the specific grounds therefor. The order of the court granting a motion for a directed verdict is effective without the assent of the jury.

Rule 351. Instructions to Jury

(a) Any party may submit proposed jury instructions by filing with the court two sets of proposed jury instructions and verdict forms. Both sets may be photocopies, but one copy of each instruction shall contain a brief statement of the legal authority on which the proposed instruction is based. The party submitting such instructions and forms shall, simultaneously with the filing of the jury instructions and forms, serve copies on all other appearing parties or their counsel of record.

(b) The parties shall make all objections to the instructions before they are given to the jury. Only the objections specified shall be considered on motion for post-trial relief or on appeal or certiorari. Before closing argument, the court shall read its instructions to the jury but shall not comment upon the evidence. The court's instructions may be taken by the jury when it retires. All instructions offered or given shall be filed with the clerk and, with the indorsement thereon indicating the action of the court, shall be taken as a part of the record of the cause.

Rule 351.1. Colorado Jury Instructions

(1) In instructing the jury in a civil case, the court shall use such instructions as are contained in Colorado Jury Instructions (CJI) as are applicable to the evidence and the prevailing law.

(2) In cases in which there are no CJI instructions on the subject, or in which the factual situation or changes in the law warrant a departure from the CJI instructions, the court shall instruct the jury as to the prevailing law applicable to the evidence in a manner which is clear, unambiguous, impartial and free from argument, using CJI instructions as models as to the form so far as possible.

Rule 352. Judgment by the Court

Entry of Judgment. In all actions tried upon the facts without a jury the court shall, at the conclusion of the case, forthwith orally announce its decision, including findings of fact and conclusions of law, and direct the entry of the appropriate judgment. No written findings shall be required. The court may, under exceptional circumstances, take a case under advisement.

Source: Entire rule amended July 22, 1993, effective January 1, 1994.

Rule 353. No Colorado Rule

Rule 354. Judgments; Costs

(a) Definition; Form. "Judgment" as used in these rules includes a decree and any order to or from which an appeal lies.

(b) Judgment Upon Multiple Claims. Whether as a claim, counterclaim or cross claim, the court may not direct the entry of a final judgment upon less than all of the claims presented.

(c) Demand for Judgment. A judgment by default shall not be different in kind from or exceed in amount that prayed for in the demand for judgment. Except as to a party against whom a judgment is entered by default, every final judgment shall grant the relief to which the party in whose favor it is rendered is entitled, even if the party has not demanded such relief in his pleadings.

(d) Costs. Except when express provision therefor is made either in a statute of this state or in these rules, costs shall be allowed as of course to the prevailing party unless the court otherwise directs; but costs against the state of Colorado, its officers or agencies, shall be imposed only to the extent permitted by law.

(e) Against Partnership. Any judgment obtained against a partnership or unincorporated association shall bind only the joint property of the partners or associates, and the separate property of the parties personally served.

(f) After Death, How Payable. If a party dies after a verdict or decision upon any issue of fact, and before judgment, the court may, nevertheless, render judgment thereon. Such judgment shall not be a lien on the real property of the deceased party, but shall be paid as a claim against his estate.

(g) Against Unknown Defendants. The judgment in an action in rem shall apply to and conclude the unknown defendants whose interests are described in the complaint.

(h) Revival of Judgments. A judgment may be revived against any one or more judgment debtors whether they are jointly or severally liable under the judgment. To revive a judgment a motion shall be filed alleging the date of the judgment and the amount thereof which remains unsatisfied. Thereupon the clerk shall issue a notice requiring the judgment debtor to show cause within 14 days after service thereof why the judgment should not be revived. The notice shall be served on the judgment debtor in conformity with Rule 304. If the judgment debtor answers, any issue so presented may be tried and determined by the court. A revived judgment must be entered within twenty years after the entry of the judgment which it revives, and may be enforced and made a lien in the same manner and for like period as an original judgment. A judgment entered on or after July 1, 1981 must be revived within six years after the entry of the judgment which it revives, and may be enforced and made a lien in the same manner and for like period as an original judgment. If a judgment is revived before the expiration of any lien created by the original judgment, the filing of the transcript of the entry of revivor in the register of actions with the clerk and recorder of the appropriate county before the expiration of such lien shall continue that lien for the same period from the entry of the revived judgment as is provided for original judgments. Revived judgments may themselves be revived in the manner herein provided.

Rule 355. Default

(a) Entry at Time of Appearance. Upon the date and at the time set for appearance, if the defendant has filed no answer or fails to appear and if the plaintiff proves by appropriate return that the summons was served at least 14 days before the appearance date, the judge may enter judgment for the plaintiff for the amount due, including interest, costs and other items provided by statute or the agreement. However, before judgment is entered, the court shall be satisfied that the venue of the action is proper under Rule 398(c).

(b) At Time of Trial. Failure to appear on any date set for trial shall be grounds for entering a default and judgment thereon against the non-appearing party. For good cause shown, the court may set aside an entry of default and the judgment entered thereon in accordance with Rule 360.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Bachman v. County Court, 43 Colo. App. 175, 602 P.2d 899 (1979).

Rules 356 and 357.

(There are no present Colorado Rules 356 and 357.)

Rule 358. Entry and Satisfaction of Judgment

(a) Entry. Judgment upon the verdict of a jury or upon trial by the court in all actions shall be entered forthwith by the judge or the clerk at the discretion of the judge. A notation of the judgment shall be made in the register of actions as provided in Rule 379(a) and such notation of the judgment shall constitute the entry of judgment. The judgment shall not be effective for the purpose of placing a lien upon property unless so recorded in the register of actions. Money judgments shall also be entered in the judgment record as provided for in Rule 379(c). Whenever the court signs a judgment and a party is not present when it is signed, a copy of the signed judgment shall be immediately mailed by the court, pursuant to Rule 305, to each absent party who has previously appeared.

(b) Satisfaction. Satisfaction in whole or in part of a money judgment may be entered in the judgment record (Rule 379(c)) upon an execution returned satisfied in whole or in part, or upon the filing of a satisfaction with the clerk, signed by the judgment creditor's attorney of record unless a revocation of that authority be previously filed, or by the signing of such satisfaction, by the judgment creditor, attested by the clerk or notary public, or by the signing of the judgment record (Rule 379(c)) by one herein authorized to execute satisfaction. Whenever a judgment shall be so satisfied in fact otherwise than upon execution, it shall be the duty of the judgment creditor or the judgment creditor's attorney to give such satisfaction, and upon motion the court may compel it or may order the entry of such satisfaction to be made without it. With respect to judgments entered on or after July 1, 1981 the clerk shall, after six years from the entry of final judgment, satisfy the judgment and shall enter a full satisfaction in the judgment record (Rule 379(c)) unless the judgment is revived pursuant to Rule 354(h).

Source: (b) amended July 2, 1986, effective January 1, 1987; entire rule amended July 22, 1993, effective January 1, 1994; (b) amended and adopted February 27, 1997, effective July 1, 1997.

Rule 359. New Trials; Amendment of Judgments

(a) No Motion for New Trial Necessary. Motion for new trial shall not be a condition of appeal from the county to district court.

(b) Time for Motion. A motion for new trial (which must be in writing) may be made within 14 days of entry of judgment and if so made the time for appeal shall be extended until 14 days after disposition of the motion. Only matters raised in said motion shall be considered on appeal.

(c) Grounds. A new trial may be granted to all or any of the parties, and on all or a part of the issues, after trial by jury or by the court. On a motion for a new trial in an action tried without a jury, the court may upon the judgment, if one has been entered, take additional testimony and direct the entry of a new judgment. Subject to the provisions of Rule 361, a new trial may be granted for any of the following causes:

(1) Any irregularity in the proceedings by which any party was prevented from having a fair trial.

(2) Misconduct of the jury.

(3) Accident or surprise, which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against.

(4) Newly discovered evidence, material for the party making the application which he could not, with reasonable diligence, have discovered and produced at the trial.

(5) Excessive or inadequate damages.

(6) Insufficiency of the evidence.

(7) Error in law.

When application is made under subsection 1, 2, 3, or 4 of section (c) of this Rule it shall be supported by affidavit filed with the motion. When application is made under any of the subsections (1) to (7) of section (c) of this Rule there shall be filed with the motion a short memorandum brief including authorities, if any, upon which the applicant relies in support of the motion.

(d) Time for Filing and Serving Affidavits. When a motion for a new trial is based upon affidavits they shall be filed with the motion. The opposing party has ten calendar days after service thereof within which to file opposing affidavits, which period maybe extended for an additional period not exceeding twenty days either by the court for good cause shown or by the parties by written stipulation. The court may permit reply affidavits.

(e) On Initiative of Court. Not later than fifteen days after entry of judgment, the court on its own initiative may order a new trial for any reason for which it might have granted a new trial on motion of a party, and in the order shall specify the grounds therefor.

(f) Motion to Alter or Amend a Judgment. A motion to alter or amend the judgment shall be filed not later than 21 days after entry of the judgment.

(g) Effect of Granting Motion. The granting of a motion for a new trial shall not be an appealable order, but a party by participating in the new trial shall not be deemed to have waived any objections to the granting of the motion, and the validity of the order granting the motion may be raised on appeal to the district court and in the petition in the Supreme Court for writ of certiorari.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Bachman v. County Court, 43 Colo. App. 175, 602 P.2d 899 (1979).

Rule 360. Relief from Judgment or Order

(a) Clerical Mistakes. Clerical mistakes in judgments, orders, or other parts of the records and errors therein arising from oversight or omission may be corrected by the court at any time of its own initiative or on the motion of any party and after such notice, if any, as the court orders. During the pendency of an appeal such mistakes may be so corrected before the case is docketed in the appellate court, and thereafter while the appeal is pending may be so corrected with leave of the appellate court.

(b) Mistake; Inadvertence; Surprise; Excusable Neglect; Fraud; etc. On motion and upon such terms as are just, the court may relieve a party or the party's legal representative from a final judgment, order, or proceeding for the following reasons: (1) Mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect; (2) fraud (whether heretofore denominated intrinsic or extrinsic), misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party; (3) the judgment is void; (4) the judgment has been satisfied, released, or discharged, or a prior judgment upon which it is based has been reversed or otherwise vacated, or it is no longer equitable that the judgment should have prospective application; or (5) any other reason justifying relief from the operation of the judgment. The motion shall be made within a reasonable time, and for reasons (1) and (2), not more than six months after the judgment, order, or proceeding complained of was entered or taken. A motion under this section (b) does not affect the finality of a judgment or suspend its operation. This rule does not limit the power of a court: (1) To entertain an independent action to relieve a party from a judgment, order, or proceeding; or (2) to set aside a judgment for fraud upon the court; or (3) when, for any cause, the summons in an action has not been personally served within or without the state on the defendant, to allow, on such terms as may be just, such defendant, or the defendant's legal representatives, at any time within six months after the rendition of any judgment in such action, to answer to the merits of the original action.

ANNOTATION

This rule applies to default judgments. Bachman v. County Court, 43 Colo. App. 175, 602 P.2d 899 (1979).

Applied in Pollard v. Walsh, 194 Colo. 566, 575 P.2d 411 (1978).

Rule 361. Harmless Error

No error in either the admission or the exclusion of evidence and no error or defect in any ruling or order or in anything done or omitted by the court or by any of the parties is ground for granting a new trial or for setting aside a verdict or for vacating, modifying, or otherwise disturbing a judgment or order, unless refusal to take such action appears to the court inconsistent with substantial justice. The court at every stage of the proceeding must disregard any error or defect in the proceeding which does not affect the substantial rights of the parties.

Rule 362. Stay of Proceedings to Enforce a Judgment

(a) No Automatic Stay. If, upon the rendition of a judgment, payment is not made forthwith, an execution may issue immediately and proceedings may be taken for its enforcement unless the defendant requests a stay of execution and the court grants such request. Proceedings to enforce execution and other process after judgment and the fees therefor shall be as provided by law or these rules.

(b) Stay on Motion for New Trial or for Judgment. In its discretion and on such conditions for the security of the adverse party as are proper, the court may stay the execution of any proceedings to enforce a judgment pending the disposition of a motion for a new trial or to alter or amend a judgment made pursuant to Rule 359, or of a motion for relief from a judgment or order made pursuant to Rule 360, or of a motion for judgment in accordance with a motion for a directed verdict made pursuant to Rule 350, or pending the filing and determination of an appeal to the district court.

Rule 363. Disability of a Judge

If by reason of death, sickness, or other disability, a judge before whom an action has been tried is unable to perform the duties to be performed by the court under these rules after a verdict is returned or finding of fact and conclusions of law are filed, then any other judge lawfully sitting in or assigned to the court in which the action was tried may perform those duties; but if such other judge is satisfied that the judge cannot perform those duties having not presided at the trial or for any other reason, a new trial may be ordered.

Rule 364. No Colorado Rule

Rule 365. Injunctions, Restraining Orders and Orders for Emergency Protection

(a) Civil Protection Orders. No civil protection order, restraining order, or injunction under Title 13, Article 14, shall be issued by the court, except as provided therein.

(b) Repealed.

(c) Restrictive Covenants on Residential Real Property.

(1) Upon the filing of a duly verified complaint alleging that the defendant has violated a restrictive covenant on residential real property, the court shall issue a summons, which shall include notice to the defendant that it will hear the plaintiff's request for a preliminary injunction on the appearance date. A temporary restraining order may be granted without written or oral notice to the adverse party or the party's attorney only if: (a) it clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or by the verified complaint or by testimony that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage will result to the plaintiff before the adverse party or the party's attorney can be heard in opposition, and (b) the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney certifies to the court in writing or on the record the efforts, if any, which have been made to give notice and the reasons supporting a claim that notice should not be required. The restraining order shall be served upon the defendant, together with the summons and complaint, and shall be effective until the appearance date.

(2) On the appearance date, the court shall examine the record and the evidence and, if upon such record and evidence the court shall be of the opinion that the defendant has violated the restrictive covenant, the court shall issue a preliminary injunction which shall remain in effect until the trial of the action. If merely restraining the doing of an act or acts will not effectuate the relief to which the plaintiff is entitled, the injunction may be made mandatory. The court may, upon agreement of the parties, order that the trial of the action be advanced and consolidated with the preliminary injunction hearing.

(3) Any restraining order or injunction issued under this section (c) shall inform the defendant that a violation thereof will constitute contempt of court and subject the defendant to such punishment as may be provided by law.

ANNOTATION

County court has no jurisdiction to enter restraining order limiting visitation with a child when a custody proceeding is pending in another state. G.B. v. Arapahoe County Ct., 890 P.2d 1153 (Colo. 1995).

Rule 367. Deposit in Court

(a) By Party. In an action in which any part of the relief sought is a judgment for a sum of money or the disposition of a sum of money or of any other thing capable of delivery, a party, upon notice to every other party, and by leave of court, may deposit with the court all or any part of such sum or thing, to be held by the clerk of the court subject to withdrawal in whole or in part at any time thereafter upon order of the court.

(b) By Trustee. When it is admitted by the pleadings or examination of a party that the party has possession or control of any money or other things capable of delivery which, being the subject of litigation, is held by that party as trustee for another party, or which belongs or is due to another party, upon motion, the court may order the same to be deposited in court or delivered to such party, upon such conditions as may be just, subject to the further direction of the court.

Rule 368. Offer of Judgment

Repealed July 12, 1990, effective, nunc pro tunc, July 1, 1990.

Rule 369. Execution and Proceedings Subsequent to Judgment

(a) In General. Except as provided in Rule 403 herein, process to enforce a judgment for the payment of money shall be a writ of execution, unless the court directs otherwise.

(b) Execution for Costs. Whenever costs are finally awarded to a party by an order of any court, such party may have an execution therefor in like manner as upon a judgment. Whenever costs are awarded to a party by an appellate court, such party may have an execution for the same upon filing a remittance with the clerk of the court below, and it shall be the duty of such clerk, whenever the remittitur is filed, to issue the execution on application therefor.

(c) Debtor of Judgment; Debtor May Pay Sheriff. After issuance of an execution against property, any person indebted to the judgment debtor may pay to the sheriff the amount of the debt, or so much as may be necessary to satisfy the execution, and the sheriff's receipt shall be sufficient discharge for the amount so paid.

(d) Order for Debtor to Answer. At any time when execution may issue on a judgment, the judgment creditor shall be entitled to an order requiring the judgment debtor to answer such interrogatories concerning his property as shall be approved by the court. The interrogatories when so approved shall be mailed by the clerk to the judgment debtor, who shall answer the said interrogatories and mail or file them with the court within 14 days after receipt thereof by the judgment debtor. The interrogatories, upon approval, may also be served upon the judgment debtor in accordance with Rule 304.

(e) Order for Interrogatories to Debtor of Judgment Debtor. At any time when execution may issue on a judgment, upon proof to the satisfaction of the court, by affidavit or otherwise, that any person or corporation has property of the judgment debtor or is indebted to the judgment creditor in an amount exceeding fifty dollars not exempt from execution, the court may order such person to answer such interrogatories as the court may approve touching upon the matters set forth in the affidavit of the judgment creditor.

(f) Order for Property to be Applied on Judgment; Contempt. The court may order any property of the judgment debtor not exempt from execution in the hands of such debtor or any other person, or due to the judgment debtor, to be applied towards the satisfaction of the judgment. If any person, party or witness disobeys an order of the court properly made in proceedings under this Rule, he shall be punished by the court for contempt. Nothing in this Rule shall be construed to prevent an action in the nature of a creditor's bill.

(g) Pattern Interrogatories - Use Automatically Approved. The pattern interrogatories set forth in Appendix to Chapter 25, Form Numbers 7 and 7A are approved, and as part of the judgment order, may be mailed by the clerk or served by the judgment creditor in accordance with rule 304 without any further order of court. Any proposed non-pattern interrogatory must be specifically approved by the court.

Rule 370. Judgment for Specific Acts; Personal Property

If a judgment directs a party to execute a transfer of documents or to perform any other specific act and the party fails to comply within the time specified, the court may direct the act to be done at the cost of the disobedient party by some other person appointed by the court and the act when so done has like effect as if done by the party on application of the party entitled to performance, the clerk shall issue a writ of attachment against the property of the disobedient party to compel obedience to the judgment. The court may also in proper cases adjudge the party in contempt.

If personal property is within the state, the court in lieu of directing a transfer thereof may enter a judgment divesting the title of any party and vesting it in others and such judgment has the effect of a transfer executed in due form of law. When any order or judgment is for the delivery of possession, the party in whose favor it is entered is entitled to a writ of execution upon application to the clerk.

ANNOTATION

This rule properly may be read with the understanding that county courts have jurisdiction to issue decrees of specific performance. Snyder v. Sullivan, 705 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1985).

Rule 371. Procedure in Behalf of and Against Persons Not Parties

An order made in favor of a person who is not a party to the action may be enforced by the same procedure as if the person were a party; and, when obedience to an order may be lawfully enforced against a person who is not a party, the person is liable to the same procedure for enforcing obedience to the order as any party.

Rules 372 to 376.

(There are no present Colorado Rules 372 to 376.)

Rule 377. Courts and Clerks

(a) Courts Always Open. Courts shall be deemed always open for the purpose of filing any pleading or other proper paper, of issuing and returning process, and the conducting of court business.

(b) Clerk's Office and Orders by Clerk. The clerk's office with the clerk or deputy in attendance shall be open at such hours and on such days as may be provided by law, and by local rule not in conflict with law. All motions and all applications in the clerk's office for issuing process, for entering defaults and judgments by default, and for other proceedings which do not require allowance or order of the court are grantable as a matter of course by the clerk; but the clerk's action may be suspended or altered or rescinded by the court or judge upon cause shown.

(c) Orders in Any County. Any ex parte order in any pending action may be entered by the court, or by any judge thereof.

Rule 379. Records

(a) Register of Actions (Civil Docket). The clerk shall keep a record known as the register of actions and shall enter therein those items set forth below. The register of actions may be in any of the following forms or styles:

(1) A page, sheet, or printed form in a book, case jacket, or separate file, or the cover of the case jacket.

(2) A microfilm roll, film jacket, or microfiche card.

(3) Computer magnetic tape or magnetic disc storage, where the register of actions items appear on the terminal screen, or on a paper print-out of the screen display.

(4) Any other form or style prescribed by supreme court directive.

A register of actions shall be prepared for each case or matter filed. The file number of each case or matter shall be noted on every page, jacket cover, film or computer record whereon the first and all subsequent entries of actions are made. All papers filed with the clerk, all process issued and returns made thereon, all costs, appearances, orders, verdicts, and judgments shall be noted chronologically in the register of actions. These notations shall be brief but shall show the nature of each paper filed or writ issued and the substance of each order or judgment of the court and of the returns showing execution of process. The notation of an order or judgment shall show the date the notation is made. The notation of the judgment in the register of actions shall constitute the entry of judgment. When trial by jury has been demanded or ordered, the clerk shall enter the word jury on the page, jacket cover, film or computer record assigned to that case.

(b) Indices; Calendars. The clerk shall keep suitable indices of all records as directed by the court. The clerk shall also keep, as directed by the court, calendars of all hearings and all cases ready for trial, which shall distinguish trials to a jury from trials to the court. Indices and calendars may be in any of the following forms or styles:

(1) A page or sheet in a book or separate file.

(2) A mechanical or hand operated index machine or card file.

(3) Computer magnetic tape or magnetic disc storage, where the information appears on the terminal screen, or on a print-out of the screen display.

(4) Microfilm copies of 1, 2, and 3 above.

(5) Any other form or style prescribed by supreme court directive.

(c) Judgment Record. The clerk shall keep a judgment record in which a notation shall be made of every money judgment. The judgment record may be in any of the following forms or styles:

(1) A page, sheet, or printed form in a book, case jacket or separate file, or the cover of the case jacket.

(2) Computer magnetic tape or magnetic disc storage, where the judgment and subsequent transactions appear on the terminal screen, or on a paper print-out of the screen display.

(3) A microfilm copy or variation of 1 and 2 above.

(4) Any other form or style prescribed by supreme court directive.

(d) Retention and Disposition of Records. The clerk shall retain and dispose of all court records in accordance with instructions provided in the manual entitled, Colorado Judicial Department, Records Management.

Rule 380. Reporter; Stenographic Report or Transcript as Evidence

(a) A record of the proceedings and evidence at trials in the county court shall be maintained by electronic devices except as such record may be unnecessary in certain proceedings pursuant to specific provisions of law.

(b) Whenever the testimony of a witness at a trial or hearing which was recorded by electronic devices or by stenographic means is admissible in evidence at a later trial, it may be proved by the transcript thereof duly certified by the person who reported or transcribed the testimony, or by the judge.

(c) Reporter's Notes, Electronic or Mechanical Recording; Custody, Use, Ownership, Retention. All electronic or mechanical recordings shall be the property of the state. The recordings shall be retained by the court for no less than six months after the creation of the recordings, or such other period as may be prescribed by supreme court directive or by instructions in the manual entitled, Colorado Judicial Department Record Retention Manual. During the period of retention, recordings shall be made available to the person the court may designate. During the trial or the taking of other matters on the record, the recordings shall be considered the property of the state, even though in the custody of the reporter, judge, or clerk.

Editor's note: The June 9, 1988, amendment to this rule resulted in the renumbering of the paragraphs contained therein.

Rule 381. Applicability in General

Special Statutory Proceedings. These rules do not govern procedure and practice in any special statutory proceeding insofar as they are inconsistent or in conflict with the procedure and practice provided by the applicable statute. Where the applicable statute provides for procedure under a former Code of Civil Procedure, such procedure shall be in accordance with these rules.

Rule 382. Jurisdiction Unaffected

These rules shall not be construed to extend or limit the jurisdiction of any court.

Rule 383. Rules by Trial Courts

All county court local rules, including local county court procedures and standing orders having the effect of county court local rules, enacted before February 1, 1992, are hereby repealed. Each county court, by a majority of its judges, may from time to time propose county court local rules and amendments of the county court local rules. A proposed local rule or amendment shall not be inconsistent with the Colorado Rules of County Court Civil Procedure or with any directive of the Supreme Court regarding the conduct of formal judicial proceedings in county courts. A proposed local rule or amendment shall not be effective until it is approved by the Supreme Court. To obtain approval, three copies of any proposed local rule or amendment shall be submitted to the Supreme Court through the office of the State Court Administrator. Reasonable uniformity of county court local rules is required. Numbering and format of any county court local rule shall be as prescribed by the Supreme Court. Numbering and format requirements are on file at the office of the State Court Administrator. The Supreme Court's approval of a county court local rule or local procedure shall not preclude review of that rule or procedure under the law or circumstances of a particular case. Nothing in this rule is intended to affect the authority of a county court to adopt internal administrative procedures not relating to the conduct of formal judicial proceedings as prescribed by the Colorado Rules of County Court Civil Procedure.

Rule 397. Change of Judge

A judge shall be disqualified in an action in which the judge is interested or prejudiced, or has been of counsel for any party, or is or has been a material witness, or is so related or connected with any party or attorney as to render it improper to sit on the trial or other proceeding therein. The disqualification may be made on the judge's own initiative, or any party may move for such disqualification and any motion by a party for disqualification shall be supported by affidavit. Upon the filing by a party of such a motion, all other proceedings in the case shall be suspended until a ruling is made thereon. Upon disqualification, the judge shall notify forthwith the presiding judge of the court, who shall assign another judge of the court to hear the action. If no other judge of the court is available, the judge shall notify forthwith the chief judge of the district, who shall assign another judge in the district to hear the action. If no other judge in the district is available or qualified, the chief judge shall notify forthwith the state court administrator, who shall obtain from the Chief Justice the assignment of a replacement judge.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''Disqualification of Judges'', see 13 Colo. Law. 54 (1984).

Rule 398. Place of Trial

(a) Venue of Real Property. All actions affecting real property shall be tried in the county in which the subject of the action, or a substantial part thereof, is situated.

(b) Venue for Recovery of Penalty, etc. Actions upon the following claims shall be tried in the county where the claim, or some part thereof, arose:

(1) For the recovery of a penalty or forfeiture imposed by statute, except that when it is imposed for an offense committed on a lake, river, or other stream of water, situated in two or more counties, the action may be brought in any county bordering on such lake, river or stream and opposite the place where the offense was committed.

(2) Against a public officer or person specially appointed to execute his duties, for an act done by him in virtue of his office, or against a person who by his command, or in his aid, does anything touching the duties of such officer, or for a failure to perform any act or duty which he is by law required to perform.

(c) Venue for Tort and Contract and Other Actions. (1) Except as provided in sections (a) and (b) and subsections (c)(2) through (5) of this Rule, an action shall be tried in the county in which the defendants, or any of them, may reside at the commencement of the action, or in the county where the plaintiff resides when service is made on the defendant in such county; or if the defendant is a nonresident of this state, the same may be tried in any county in which the defendant may be found in this state, or in the county designated in the complaint, and if any defendant is about to depart from the state, such action may be tried in any county where plaintiff resides, or where defendant may be found and service had.

(2) Except as provided in subsection (3) of this section an action on book account or for goods sold and delivered may also be tried in the county where the plaintiff resides or where the goods were sold; an action upon contract may also be tried in the county where the same was to be performed.

(3) (A) For the purposes of this Rule, a consumer contract is any sale, lease or loan in which (i) the buyer, lessee or debtor is a person other than an organization; (ii) the goods are purchased or leased, the services are obtained, or the debt is incurred, primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose; and (iii) the initial amount due under the contract, the total amount initially payable under the lease, or the initial principal does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars.

(B) An action on a consumer contract shall be tried (i) in the county in which the contract was signed or entered into by any defendant; or (ii) in the county in which any defendant resided at the time the contract was entered into; or (iii) in the county in which any defendant resides at the time the action is commenced. If the defendant is a nonresident of this state, the same may be tried in any county in which the defendant may be found in this state, or in the county designated in the complaint, and if any defendant is about to depart from the state, such action may be tried in any county where plaintiff resides, or where defendant may be found and service had.

(C) In any action on a consumer contract, if the plaintiff fails to state facts in the complaint or by affidavit showing that the action has been commenced in the proper county as described in this Rule, or if it appears from the stated facts the venue is improper, the court may, upon its own motion or upon motion of any party, dismiss any such action without prejudice; however, if appropriate facts appear in the record, the court shall transfer the action to an appropriate county. Any provision or authorization in any consumer contract purporting to waive any rights under subsection (3) of section (c) of this Rule is void.

(D) Any debt collector covered by the provisions of the Federal ''Fair Debt Collection Practices Act'' shall comply with the provisions of said Act set forth in 15 U.S.C. 1692(i) concerning legal actions by debt collectors, notwithstanding any provision of this Rule.

(4) An action upon a contract for services may also be tried in the county in which the services were to be performed.

(5) An action for tort may also be tried in the county where the tort was committed.

(d) Motion to Change Venue. (1) Except for actions under subsection (c) (3) of this Rule, a motion for change of venue under the provisions of (a) through (c) hereof or on the grounds that the county designated in the complaint is not the proper county shall be made on the date fixed in the summons for appearance or answer. The motion shall be heard at that time and if overruled or granted the answer shall be filed immediately unless the court shall fix a different time. Unless filed as prescribed herein the right to have venue changed on said grounds is waived.

(2) A motion for change of venue on the grounds (A) that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by the change or (B) that a party fears that he will not receive a fair trial in the county in which the action is pending because the adverse party has an undue influence over the minds of the inhabitants thereof or that they are prejudiced against him so that he cannot expect a fair trial, or (C) that the venue of the action is improper under subsection (c) (3) of this Rule, may be made either on the date fixed in the summons for appearance or at any time before ten days prior to the date fixed for trial. The court may by order permit the filing of affidavits and a written counter motion and affidavits. Unless such motions are filed as prescribed herein the right to have venue changed on said grounds is waived.

(3) Except as otherwise provided in an order allowing a motion to change venue, earlier ex parte and other orders affecting an action, or the parties thereto, shall remain in effect, subject to change or modification by order of the court to which the action is removed.

(e) Transfer Where Concurrent Jurisdiction. All actions or proceedings in which district and county courts have concurrent jurisdiction, may, by stipulation of the parties and order of court, be transferred by either court to such other court of the same county. Upon transfer, the court to which such cause is removed shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction as if originally commenced therein.

(f) Place Changed if Parties Agree. When all parties assent, or when all parties who have entered their appearance assent and the remaining nonappearing parties are in default, the place of trial of an action in a county court may be changed to any other county court in the county.

(g) Parties Must Agree on Change. Where there are two or more plaintiffs or defendants, the place of trial shall not be changed unless the motion is made by or with the consent of all of the plaintiffs or defendants, as the case may be.

(h) Only One Change. No Waiver. In case the place of trial is changed the party securing the same shall not be permitted to apply for another change upon the same ground. A party does not waive his right to change of judge or place of trial if his objection thereto is made in apt time.

ANNOTATION

When improper venue does not impair court's jurisdiction. In a civil case where the defendant does not interpose a timely motion to change the place of trial, improper venue does not impair a court's jurisdiction. Under such circumstances, a county court does not act properly in changing venue at its own instance, contrary to the agreement of the parties and over the express objection of one of them. Halliburton v. County Court ex rel. City & County of Denver, 672 P.2d 1006 (Colo. 1983).

Rules 399 and 400.

(There are no present Colorado Rules 399 and 400.)

Rule 401. Arrest and Exemplary Damages

Repealed May 29, 1986, effective January 1, 1987.

Rule 402. Attachments

(a) Before Judgment. Any party, at the time of filing a claim, in an action on contract, express or implied, or in an action to recover damages for any tort committed against the person or property of a resident of this state, or at any time afterward before judgment, may have nonexempt property of the party against whom the claim is asserted (hereinafter defendant), attached by an ex parte order of court in the manner and on the grounds prescribed in this Rule, unless the defendant shall give good and sufficient security as required by section (f) of this Rule. No ex parte attachments before judgment shall be permitted other than those specified in this Rule.

(b) Affidavit. No writ of attachment shall issue unless the party asserting the claim (hereinafter plaintiff), the plaintiff's agent or attorney, or some credible person for the plaintiff, shall file in the court in which the action is brought an affidavit setting forth that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff, or that the defendant is liable in damages to the plaintiff for a tort committed against the person or property of a resident of this state, stating the nature and amount of such indebtedness or claim for damages and setting forth facts showing one or more of the causes of attachment of section (c) of this Rule.

(c) Causes. No writ of attachment shall issue unless it be shown by affidavit or testimony in specific factual detail, within the personal knowledge of an affiant or witness, that there is a reasonable probability that any of the following causes exist:

(1) The defendant is a foreign corporation without a certificate of authority to do business in this state.

(2) The defendant has for more than four months been absent from the state, or the whereabouts of the defendant are unknown, or the defendant is a nonresident of this state, and all reasonable efforts to obtain in personam jurisdiction over the defendant have failed. Plaintiff must show what efforts have been made to obtain jurisdiction over the defendant.

(3) The defendant hides, or defies an officer, so that process of law cannot be served upon the defendant.

(4) The defendant is presently about to remove any property or effects, or a material part thereof, from this state with intent to defraud, delay, or hinder one or more of the defendant's creditors, or to render execution unavailing if judgment is obtained.

(5) The defendant has fraudulently conveyed, transferred, or assigned any property or effects, or a material part thereof, so as to hinder or delay one or more of the defendant's creditors, or to render execution unavailing if judgment is obtained.

(6) The defendant has fraudulently concealed, removed, or disposed of any property or effects, or a material part thereof, so as to hinder or delay one or more of the defendant's creditors, or to render execution unavailing if judgment is obtained.

(7) The defendant is presently about to fraudulently convey, transfer, or assign any property or effects, or a material part thereof, so as to hinder or delay one or more of the defendant's creditors, or to render execution unavailing if judgment is obtained.

(8) The defendant is presently about to fraudulently conceal, remove, or dispose of any property or effects, or a material part thereof, so as to hinder or delay one or more of the defendant's creditors, or to render execution unavailing if judgment is obtained.

(9) The defendant has departed or is presently about to depart from this state, with the intention of having any property or effects, or a material part thereof, removed from the state.

(d) Plaintiff to Give Bond. Before the issuance of a writ of attachment the plaintiff shall furnish a bond or written undertaking, sufficient to the court, in an amount set by the court in its discretion, not exceeding double the amount claimed, to the effect that if the defendant recover judgment, or if the court shall finally decide that the plaintiff was not entitled to an attachment, the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant, and all damages defendant may sustain by reason of the wrongful suing out of the attachment. The defendant may require the sureties to satisfy the court that each is worth the amount for which the person has become surety over and above the person's just debts and liabilities, in property located in this state and not by law exempt from execution.

(e) Court Issues Writ of Attachment. After the affidavit and bond are filed as aforesaid and testimony had as the court may require, the court may issue a writ of attachment, directed to the sheriff of a specified county, commanding the sheriff to attach the lands, tenements, goods, chattels, rights, credits, moneys, and effects of said defendant, of every kind, or so much thereof as will be sufficient to satisfy the claim sworn to, regardless of whose hands or possession in which the same may be found.

(f) Contents of Writ and Notice. The writ shall direct the sheriff to serve a copy of the writ on the defendant if found in the county, and to attach and keep safely all the property of the defendant within the county, not exempt from execution, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, the amount of which shall be stated in conformity with the affidavit. The writ shall also inform the defendant of the right to traverse and to have a hearing to contest the attachment. If the defendant's property is or may be located in more than one county, additional or alias writs may be issued contemporaneously. If the defendant deposits the amount of money claimed by the plaintiff or gives and furnishes security by an undertaking, approved by the sheriff, of a corporate surety company or of at least two sureties in an amount sufficient to satisfy such claim, the sheriff shall take such money or undertaking in lieu of the property. Alias writs may issue at any time to the sheriffs of different counties.

(g) Service; How Made. The writ of attachment shall be served in like manner and under the same conditions as are provided in these rules for the service of process. Service shall be deemed completed upon the expiration of the same period as is provided for service of process.

(h) Execution of Writ. The sheriff to whom the writ is directed and delivered shall execute the same without delay as follows:

(1) Real property standing upon the records of the county in the name of the defendant shall be attached by filing a copy of the writ, together with a description of the property attached, with the recorder of the county.

(2) Real property, or any interest therein belonging to the defendant, and held by any person, or standing upon the records of the county in the name of any other person but belonging to the defendant, shall be attached by leaving with such person or the person's agent, if either be found in the county, a copy of the writ and a notice that such real property (giving a description thereof), and any interest therein belonging to the defendant, are attached pursuant to such writ, and filing a copy of such writ and notice with the recorder of the county.

(3) Personal property shall be attached by taking it into custody.

(i) Return of Writ. The sheriff shall return the writ of attachment within 21 days after its receipt, with a certificate of his proceedings endorsed thereon, or attached thereto, making a full inventory of the property attached as a part of his return upon the writ.

(j) Execution of Writ on Sunday or Legal Holiday. If an affidavit or testimony is received stating that it is necessary to execute the writ of attachment on Sunday or on a legal holiday, to secure property sufficient to satisfy the judgment to be obtained, and if the court is so satisfied, the court shall endorse on the writ an order to the officer directing the writ to be executed on such day.

(k) No Final Judgment Until 35 Days After Levy.

(1) Creditors. No final judgment shall be rendered in a cause wherein an attachment writ has been issued and a levy made thereunder, until the expiration of 35 days after such levy has been made; and any creditor of the defendant making and filing within said 35-day period an affidavit and undertaking, as hereinbefore required of the plaintiff, together with the complaint setting forth the claim against the defendant, shall be made a party plaintiff and have like remedies against the defendant to secure the claim, as the law gives to the original plaintiff.

(2) Judgment Creditors. Any other creditor whose claim has been reduced to judgment in this state may upon motion filed within said 35 days be made a party and have like remedies against the attached property. Such judgment creditor shall not be required to make or file an affidavit, undertaking or complaint, or have summons issue, provided, that any such judgment creditor may be required to prove to the satisfaction of the court that the judgment is bona fide and not in fraud of the rights of other creditors.

(l) Dismissal by One Creditor Does Not Affect Others. After any additional creditor has been made a party to the action, as hereinbefore provided, a dismissal by the first or any subsequent attaching creditor of the cause of action, or proceedings in attachments, shall not operate as a dismissal of the attachment proceedings as to any other attaching creditor; but the remaining creditors may proceed to final judgment therein the same as though no such dismissal has been made.

(m) Final Judgment Prorated; When Creditors Preferred. The final judgment in said action shall be a several judgment, wherein each creditor named as plaintiff shall have and recover of the defendant the amount of the claim or demand, as found by the court to be due, together with costs incurred; and the money realized from the attachment proceedings, after paying all costs taxed in the attachment action, shall be paid to the participating creditors in proportion to the amounts of their several judgments; and any surplus moneys, if any, shall be paid to the defendant by order of the court, upon proof thereof. Provided, when the property is attached while the defendant is removing the same or after the same has been removed from the county, and the same is overtaken and returned, or while same is secreted by the defendant, or put out of the defendant's hands, for the purpose of defrauding the defendant's creditors, the court may allow the creditor or creditors through whose diligence the same shall have been secured a priority over other attachments or judgment creditors.

(n) When Suit Transferred to District Court.

(1) Indivisible Property Over $15,000.00. Whenever in any attachment proceedings in the county court it is determined by the court that the ownership of indivisible property of the value of more than $15,000.00 is in issue, the county court shall suspend all proceedings in the entire action and certify the same, including a transcript of any judgment which may have been rendered, and transmit all papers therein to the district court of the same county, and the entire actions shall thereupon proceed as if originally instituted in the said district court, and any judgment so certified shall be entered in the judgment docket of the district court and when so entered shall have the same force and effect as if rendered originally by such district court; provided, however, that the judgment of the district court may be reviewed by the Supreme Court on writ of certiorari.

(2) Intervenor or Attachment Creditor. Whenever the original suit in which a writ of attachment shall be issued and served shall be begun in the county court of any county in this state, and the claim of an attaching creditor therein, as hereinbefore provided, shall exceed the sum of $15,000.00 exclusive of costs, it shall be the duty of such court to forthwith certify such case and transmit all papers issued or filed therein the district court of such county, and thereafter the case shall proceed in the same manner as if it had been originally begun in such district court.

(o) Traverse of Affidavit. (1) The defendant may, at any time before trial, by affidavit, traverse and put in issue the matters alleged in the affidavit, testimony, or other evidence upon which the attachment is based and if the plaintiff shall establish the reasonable probability that any one of the causes alleged in the affidavit exists, said attachment shall be sustained; otherwise the same shall be dissolved. A hearing on the defendant's traverse shall be held within 7 days from the filing of the traverse and upon no less than two business days' notice to the plaintiff. If the debt for which the action is brought is not due and for that reason the attachment is not sustained, the action shall be dismissed; but if the debt is due, but the attachment nevertheless is not sustained, the action may proceed to judgment after the attachment is dissolved, as in other actions where no attachment is issued.

(2) A plaintiff who fails to prevail at the hearing provided by this section is liable to the defendant for any damages sustained as a result of the issuance of process, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees. A claim for damages under this subsection may be brought as part of the existing action, and the defendant shall be permitted to amend the answer and any counterclaim for this purpose.

(p) Amendment of Affidavit. If at the hearing of issues formed by the traverse it shall appear that the evidence introduced does not prove the cause or causes alleged in the affidavits, but the evidence does tend to prove another cause of attachment in existence at the time of the issuance of the writ, then on motion the affidavits may be amended to conform to proof the same as pleadings are allowed to be amended in cases of variance.

(q) Intervention; Damages. Any third person claiming any of the property attached, or any lien thereon or interest therein, may intervene under the provisions of Rule 324, and in case of a judgment in that person's favor may also recover such damages as have been suffered by reason of the attachment of the property.

(r) Perishable Property May Be Sold. Where property taken by writ of execution or attachment, or seized under order of court, is in danger of serious and immediate decay or waste, or likely to depreciate rapidly in value pending the determination of the issues, or, where the keeping of it will be attended with great expense, any party to the action may apply to the court, upon due notice, for a sale thereof, and, thereupon the court may, in its discretion, order the property sold in the manner provided for in said order and the proceeds of said sale shall, thereupon, be deposited with the clerk to abide the further order of the court.

(s) Application of Proceeds; Satisfaction of Judgment. If judgment is recovered by the plaintiff or any intervenor, on order of court, all funds previously deposited with the clerk, or in the hands of the sheriff, shall be first applied thereto. If any balance remain due, execution shall issue and be delivered to the sheriff who shall sell so much of the attached property as may be sufficient to satisfy the judgment. Sales shall be conducted as in cases of sales on execution. If there is a personal judgment and after such sale the same is not satisfied in full, the sheriff shall thereupon collect the balance as upon an execution in other cases.

(t) Balance Due; Surplus. Whenever the judgment shall have been paid, the sheriff, upon demand, shall deliver over to the defendant the attached property remaining in the sheriff's hands, and any proceeds of the property attached unapplied on the judgment.

(u) Procedure When Judgment Is For Defendant. If the defendant recovers judgment against the plaintiff, any undertaking received in the action, all the proceeds of sales, all money collected by the sheriff, and all the property attached remaining in the sheriff's hands shall be delivered to the defendant, the writ of attachment shall be discharged, and the property released therefrom.

(v) Defendant May Release Property; Bond. The defendant may at any time before judgment have released any money in the hands of the clerk or any property in the hands of the sheriff, by virtue of any writ of attachment, by executing the undertaking provided in section (w) of this Rule. All the proceeds of sales all money collected by the sheriff, and all the property attached remaining in the sheriff's hands shall thereupon be released from the attachment and delivered to the defendant upon the delivery and approval of the undertaking.

(w) Conditions of Bond; Liability of Sheriff. Before releasing the attached property to the defendant, the sheriff shall require and approve an undertaking executed by the defendant to the plaintiff either of a corporate surety company or with at least two sureties in such sum as may be fixed by the sheriff in not less than the value of the property, to the effect that in case the plaintiff recover judgment in the action, and the attachment is not dissolved, defendant will, on demand, redeliver such attached property so released to the proper officer, to be applied to the payment of the judgment, and that in default thereof the defendant and sureties will pay to the plaintiff the full value of the property so released. If a sheriff shall release any property held under any writ of attachment without taking a sufficient bond, the sheriff and the sheriff's sureties shall be liable to the plaintiff for the damages sustained thereby.

(x) Application to Discharge Attachment. The defendant may also, at any time before trial, move that the attachment be discharged, on the ground that the writ was improperly issued, for any reason appearing upon the face of the papers and proceedings in the action. If on such application it shall satisfactorily appear that the writ of attachment was improperly issued, it shall be discharged.

(y) New Bond; When Ordered; Failure to Furnish. If at any time where an attachment has been issued it shall appear to the court that the undertaking is insufficient, the court shall order another undertaking, and if the plaintiff fails to comply with such order within 21 days after the same shall be made, all or any writs of attachment issued therein shall be quashed. The additional undertaking shall be executed in the same manner as the original, and the sureties therein shall be jointly and severally liable with those in the original undertaking.

(z) New Trial; Appeal and Writs of Certiorari. Motions for new trial may be made in the same time and manner, and shall be allowed in attachment proceedings, as in other actions. Appeals from the county court to the district court and writs of certiorari may be taken and prosecuted from any final judgment or order in such proceedings as in other civil cases. Any order by which an attachment is released or sustained is a final judgment.

Rule 403. Garnishment

NOTE: County Court Rule 403 is identical to C.R.C.P. 103 except for cross references within the County Court Rule to other County Court Rules. Forms used with the County Court are identical to those used with C.R.C.P. 103, and because County Court Rule 403 cites to and incorporates C.R.C.P. Forms 26 through 34, they need not be duplicated in the County Court Forms Section.

This rule sets forth the exclusive process for garnishment. There shall be five (5) types of writs: (1) Writ of Continuing Garnishment, (2) Writ of Garnishment with Notice of Exemption and Pending Levy, (3) Writ of Garnishment for Support, (4) Writ of Garnishment — Judgment Debtor Other Than Natural Person, and (5) Writ of Garnishment in Aid of Writ of Attachment.

WRIT OF CONTINUING GARNISHMENT
(ON EARNINGS OF A NATURAL PERSON)

(a) Definitions.

(1) ''Continuing garnishment'' means the exclusive procedure for withholding the earnings of a judgment debtor for successive pay periods for payment of a judgment debt other than a judgment for support as provided in subsection (c) of this rule.

(2) ''Earnings'' shall be defined in Section 13-54.5-101(2), C.R.S., as applicable.

(b) Form of Writ of Continuing Garnishment and Related Forms. A writ of continuing garnishment shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 26, C.R.C.P. It shall also include at least one (1) ''Calculation of Amount of Exempt Earnings'' form to be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 27, C.R.C.P. Objection to the calculation of exempt earnings shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 28, C.R.C.P.

(c) When Writ of Continuing Garnishment Issues. After entry of judgment when a writ of execution can issue, a writ of continuing garnishment against earnings shall be issued by the clerk of the court upon request of the judgment creditor. Under a writ of continuing garnishment, a judgment creditor may garnish earnings except to the extent such earnings are exempt under law. Issuance of a writ of execution shall not be required.

(d) Service of Writ of Continuing Garnishment. A judgment creditor shall serve two (2) copies of the writ of continuing garnishment, together with a blank copy of C.R.C.P. Form 28, ''Objection to the Calculation of the Amount of Exempt Earnings'' (Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 28, C.R.C.P.), upon the garnishee, one copy of which the garnishee shall deliver to the judgment debtor as provided in subsection (h)(1) of this rule. Service of the writ shall be in accordance with C.R.C.P. 304, and the person who serves the writ shall note the date and time of such service on the return service. In any civil action, a judgment creditor shall serve no more than one writ of continuing garnishment upon any one garnishee for the same judgment debtor during the Effective Garnishment Period. This restriction shall not preclude the issuance of a subsequent writ within the Effective Garnishment Period.

(e) Jurisdiction. Service of a writ of continuing garnishment upon the garnishee shall give the court jurisdiction over the garnishee and any earnings of the judgment debtor within the control of the garnishee.

(f) Effective Garnishment Period.

(1) A writ of continuing garnishment shall be a lien and continuing levy against the nonexempt earnings of the judgment debtor until such time as earnings are no longer due, the underlying judgment is vacated, modified or satisfied in full, the writ is dismissed, or for 91 days (13 weeks) following service of the writ, if the judgment was entered prior to August 8, 2001, and 182 days (26 weeks) following service of the writ if the judgment was entered on or after August 8, 2001, except when such writ is suspended pursuant to subsection (j) of this rule.

(2) When a writ of continuing garnishment is served upon a garnishee during the Effective Garnishment Period of a prior writ, it shall be effective for the Effective Garnishment Period following the Effective Garnishment Period of any prior writ.

(3) If a writ of garnishment for support pursuant to C.R.S. 14-14-105 is served during the effective period of a writ of continuing garnishment, the Effective Garnishment Period shall be tolled and all priorities preserved until the termination of the writ of garnishment for support.

(g) Exemptions. A garnishee shall not be required to deduct, set up or plead any exemption for or on behalf of a judgment debtor excepting as set forth in the Exemption Chart contained in the writ.

(h) Delivery of Copy to Judgment Debtor.

(1) The garnishee shall deliver a copy of the writ of continuing garnishment, together with the calculation of the amount of exempt earnings and the blank copy of C.R.C.P. Form 28, ''Objection to the Calculation of the Amount of Exempt Earnings'' (Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 28, C.R.C.P.), to the judgment debtor at the time the judgment debtor receives earnings for the first pay period affected by such writ.

(2) For all pay periods affected by the writ, the garnishee shall deliver a copy of the calculation of the amount of exempt earnings and the ''Judgment Debtor's Objection to the Calculation of the Amount of Exempt Earnings'' to the judgment debtor at the time the judgment debtor receives earnings for that pay period.

(i) Objection to Calculation of Amount of Exempt Earnings. A judgment debtor may object to the calculation of exempt earnings. A judgment debtor's objection to calculation of exempt earnings shall be in accordance with Section 6 of this rule.

(j) Suspension. A writ of continuing garnishment may be suspended for a specified period of time by the judgment creditor upon agreement with the judgment debtor, which agreement shall be in writing and filed by the judgment creditor with the clerk of the court in which judgment was entered and a copy shall be delivered by the judgment creditor to the garnishee. No suspension shall extend the running of the Effective Garnishment Period nor affect priorities.

(k) Answer and Tender of Payment by Garnishee.

(1) The garnishee shall file the answer to the writ of continuing garnishment with the clerk of the court and send a copy to the judgment creditor no less than 7 nor more than 14 days following the time the judgment debtor receives earnings for each pay period affected by such writ, or 42 days following the date such writ was served pursuant to section (1)(d) of this rule, whichever is less. However, if the judgment creditor is represented by an attorney, or is a collection agency licensed pursuant to section 12-14-101, et seq., C.R.S., the garnishee shall pay any nonexempt earnings and deliver a calculation of the amount of exempt earnings to the attorney or the licensed collection agency.

(2) Unless payment is made to an attorney or licensed collection agency as provided in paragraph (k)(1), the garnishee shall pay any nonexempt earnings and deliver a calculation of the amount of exempt earnings to the clerk of the court which issued such writ no less than 7 nor more than 14 days following the time the judgment debtor receives earnings affected by such writ. However, if the answer and subsequent calculations are mailed to an attorney or licensed collection agency under subsection (k)(1), the payment shall accompany the answer.

(3) Any writ of continuing garnishment served upon the garnishee while any previous writ is still in effect shall be answered by the garnishee with a statement that the garnishee has been previously served with one or more writs of continuing garnishment and/or writs of garnishment for support and specify the date on which such previously served writs are expected to terminate.

(1) If no objection is filed by the judgment debtor within 7 days after the judgment debtor received earnings for a pay period, the garnishee shall send the nonexempt earnings to the attorney, collection agency licensed pursuant to section 12-14-101, et seq., C.R.S., or court designated on the writ of continuing garnishment (C.R.C.P. Form 26, page 1, paragraph e). The judgment creditor shall refund to the judgment debtor any disbursement in excess of the amount necessary to satisfy the judgment.

(2) If a written objection to the calculation of exempt earnings is filed with the clerk of the court and a copy is delivered to the garnishee, the garnishee shall send the garnished nonexempt earnings to the clerk of the court. The garnished nonexempt earnings shall be placed in the registry of the court pending further order of the court.

(m) Request for accounting of garnished funds by judgment debtor. Upon reasonable written request by a judgment debtor, the judgment creditor shall provide an accounting in writing of all funds received to the date of the request, including the balance due at the date of the request.

SECTION 2
WRIT OF GARNISHMENT
(ON PERSONAL PROPERTY OTHER THAN EARNINGS OF A NATURAL PERSON)
WITH NOTICE OF EXEMPTION AND PENDING LEVY

(a) Definition. ''Writ of garnishment with notice of exemption and pending levy'' means the exclusive procedure through which the personal property of any kind (other than earnings of a natural person) in the possession or control of a garnishee including the credits, debts, choses in action, or money owed to the judgment debtor, whether they are due at the time of the service of the writ or are to become due thereafter, is required to be held for payment of a judgment debt. For the purposes of this rule such writ is designated ''writ with notice.''

(b) Form of Writ With Notice and Claim of Exemption. A writ with notice shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 29, C.R.C.P. A judgment debtor's written claim of exemption shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 30, C.R.C.P.

(c) When Writ With Notice Issues. After entry of a judgment when a writ of execution may issue, a writ with notice shall be issued by the clerk of the court upon request. Under such writ any indebtedness, intangible personal property, or tangible personal property capable of manual delivery, other than earnings of a natural person, owed to, or owned by, the judgment debtor, and in the possession or control of the garnishee at the time of service of such writ upon the garnishee, shall be subject to the process of garnishment. Issuance of a writ of execution shall not be required before the issuance of a writ with notice.

(d) Service of Writ With Notice.

(1) Service of a writ with notice shall be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 304.

(2) Following service of the writ with notice on the garnishee, a copy of the writ with notice, together with a blank copy of C.R.C.P. Form 30 ''Claim of Exemption to Writ of Garnishment with Notice'' (Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 30, C.R.C.P.), shall be served upon each judgment debtor whose property is subject to garnishment by such writ as soon thereafter as practicable. Such service shall be in accordance with C.R.S. 13-54.5-107 (2).

(e) Jurisdiction. Service of a writ with notice upon the garnishee shall give the court jurisdiction over the garnishee and any personal property of any description, owned by, or owed to the judgment debtor in the possession or control of the garnishee.

(f) Claim of Exemption. A judgment debtor's claim of exemption shall be in accordance with Section 6 of this rule.

(g) Court Order on Garnishment Answer.

(1) If an answer to a writ with notice shows the garnishee is indebted to the judgment debtor, the clerk shall enter judgment in favor of the judgment debtor and against the garnishee for the use of the judgment creditor in an amount not to exceed the total amount due and owing on the judgment and if the judgment creditor is pro se, request such indebtedness be paid to the registry of the court. However, if the judgment creditor is represented by an attorney or is a collection agency licensed pursuant to 12-14-101, et seq., C.R.S., the garnishee shall pay the funds directly to the attorney or licensed collection agency.

(2) No such judgment and request shall enter until the judgment creditor has made a proper showing that: (A) a copy of the writ with notice was properly served upon the judgment debtor, and (B) no written claim of exemption was filed within 14 days after such service or a written claim of exemption was properly filed and the same was disallowed.

(3) If an answer to a writ with notice shows the garnishee to possess or control intangible personal property or personal property capable of manual delivery owned by the judgment debtor, the court shall order the garnishee to deliver such property to the sheriff to be sold as upon execution and the court may enter any order necessary to protect the interests of the parties. Any proceeds received by the sheriff upon such sale shall be paid to the registry of the court to be applied to the judgment debt, but any surplus of property or proceeds shall be delivered to the judgment debtor.

(4) No such order shall enter until the judgment creditor has made a proper showing that: (A) a copy of the writ with notice was properly served upon the judgment debtor, and (B) no written claim of exemption was filed within 14 days after such service or a written claim of exemption was properly filed with the court and the same was disallowed.

(h) Disbursement by Clerk of Court. The clerk of the court shall disburse funds to the judgment creditor without further application or order and enter the disbursement in the court records. The judgment creditor shall refund to the clerk of the court any disbursement in excess of the amount necessary to satisfy the judgment.

(i) Automatic Release of Garnishee. If a garnishee answers a writ with notice that the garnishee is indebted to the judgment debtor in an amount less than $50.00 and no traverse has been filed, the garnishee shall automatically be released from said writ if the garnishee shall not have been ordered to pay the indebtedness to the clerk of the court within 182 days from the date of service of such writ.

WRIT OF GARNISHMENT FOR SUPPORT

(a) Definitions.

(1) ''Writ of garnishment for support'' means the exclusive procedure for withholding the earnings of a judgment debtor for payment of a judgment debt for child support arrearages, maintenance when combined with child support, or child support debts, or maintenance.

(2) ''Earnings'' shall be as defined in Section 13-54.5-101(2), C.R.S., as applicable.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The Colorado Legislature amended Section 13-54-104 and 13-54.5-101, C.R.S. (Section 7 of Chapter 65, Session Laws of Colorado 1991), which changed the definition of ''earnings'' applicable only to actions commenced on or after May 1, 1991. The amendment impacts the ability to garnish certain forms of income, depending upon when the original action was commenced. Sections 1 and 3 of the Rule and Forms 26 and 31 have been revised to deal with this legislative amendment.

(b) Form of Writ of Garnishment for Support. A writ of garnishment for support shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 31, C.R.C.P. and shall include at least four (4) ''Calculation of Amount of Exempt Earnings'' forms which shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 27, C.R.C.P.

(c) When Writ of Garnishment for Support Issues. Upon compliance with C.R.S. 14-10-122 (1)(c), a writ of garnishment for support shall be issued by the clerk of the court upon request. Under such writ a judgment creditor may garnish earnings except to the extent such are exempt under law. Issuance of a writ of execution shall not be required.

(d) Service of Writ of Garnishment for Support. Service of a writ of garnishment for support shall be in accordance with C.R.C.P. 304.

(e) Jurisdiction. Service of a writ of garnishment for support upon the garnishee shall give the court jurisdiction over the garnishee and any earnings of the judgment debtor within the control of the garnishee.

(f) Effective Garnishment Period and Priority.

(1) A writ of garnishment for support shall be continuing and shall require the garnishee to withhold, pursuant to law, the portion of earnings subject to garnishment at each succeeding earnings disbursement interval until the judgment is satisfied or the garnishment released by the court or released in writing by the judgment creditor.

(2) A writ of garnishment for support shall have priority over any writ of continuing garnishment notwithstanding the fact such other writ may have been served upon the garnishee previously.

(g) Answer and Tender of Payment by Garnishee.

(1) The garnishee shall answer the writ of garnishment for support no less than 7 nor more than 14 days following the time the judgment debtor receives earnings for the first pay period affected by such writ. If the judgment debtor is not employed by the garnishee at the time the writ is served, the garnishee shall answer the writ within 14 days from the service thereof.

(2) The garnishee shall pay any nonexempt earnings and deliver a calculation of the amount of exempt earnings, to the clerk of the court which issued such writ no less than 7 nor more than 14 days following the time the judgment debtor receives earnings during the Effective Garnishment Period to such writ.

(h) Disbursement of Garnished Earnings. The clerk of the court shall disburse nonexempt earnings to the judgment creditor without further application or order and enter such disbursement in the court records. The judgment creditor shall refund to the clerk of the court any disbursement in excess of the amount necessary to satisfy the judgment.

WRIT OF GARNISHMENT — JUDGMENT DEBTOR OTHER THAN NATURAL PERSON

(a) Definition. ''Writ of garnishment — judgment debtor other than natural person'' means the exclusive procedure through which personal property of any kind of a judgment debtor other than a natural person in the possession or control of the garnishee including the credits, debts, choses in action, or money owed to the judgment debtor, whether they are due at the time of the service of the writ or are to become due thereafter is required to be held by the garnishee for payment of a judgment debt. For purposes of this rule, such writ is designated ''writ of garnishment — other than natural person.''

(b) Form of Writ of Garnishment — Other Than Natural Person. A writ of garnishment under this Section shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 32, C.R.C.P.

(c) When Writ of Garnishment — Other Than Natural Person Issues. When the judgment debtor is other than a natural person, after entry of a judgment, and when a writ of execution may issue, a writ of garnishment shall be issued by the clerk of the court upon request. Under such writ of garnishment, the judgment creditor may garnish personal property of any description owned by, or owed to, such judgment debtor and in the possession or control of the garnishee. Issuance of a writ of execution shall not be required.

(d) Service of Writ of Garnishment — Other Than Natural Person. Service of the writ of garnishment — other than natural person shall be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 304. No service of the writ or other notice of levy need be made on the judgment debtor.

(e) Jurisdiction. Service of the writ of garnishment — other than natural person shall give the court jurisdiction over the garnishee and personal property of any description, owned by, or owed to, a judgment debtor who is other than a natural person, in the possession or control of the garnishee.

(f) Court Order on Garnishment Answer. When the judgment debtor is other than a natural person:

(1) If the answer to a writ of garnishment shows the garnishee is indebted to such judgment debtor, the clerk shall enter judgment in favor of such judgment debtor and against the garnishee for the use of the judgment creditor for the amount of the indebtedness shown in such answer and if the judgment creditor is pro se, request such indebtedness paid into the registry of the court. However, if the judgment creditor is represented by an attorney or is a collection agency licensed pursuant to 12-14-101, et seq., C.R.S., the garnishee shall pay the funds directly to the attorney or licensed collection agency. In no event shall any judgment against the garnishee be more than the total amount due and owing on the judgment.

(2) If the answer to a writ of garnishment shows the garnishee to possess or control personal property of any description, owned by, or owed to, such judgment debtor, the court shall order the garnishee to deliver such property to the sheriff to be sold as upon execution and the court may enter any order necessary to protect the interests of the parties. Any proceeds received by the sheriff upon such sale shall be paid to the registry of the court to be applied to the judgment debt, but any surplus of property or proceeds shall be delivered to the judgment debtor.

(g) Disbursement by Clerk of Court. The clerk of the court shall disburse any funds in the registry of court to the judgment creditor without further application or order and enter such disbursement in the court records. The judgment creditor shall refund to the clerk of the court any disbursement in excess of the amount necessary to satisfy the judgment.

WRIT OF GARNISHMENT IN AID OF WRIT OF ATTACHMENT

(a) Definition. ''Writ of garnishment in aid of writ of attachment'' means the exclusive procedure through which the personal property of any kind of a defendant in an attachment action (other than earnings of a natural person) in the possession or control of the garnishee including the credits, debts, choses in action, or money owed to the judgment debtor, whether they are due at the time of the service of the writ or are to become due thereafter, is required to be held by a garnishee. For the purposes of this rule such writ is designated ''writ of garnishment in aid of attachment.''

(b) Form of Writ of Garnishment in Aid of Attachment and Form of Notice of Levy. A writ of garnishment in aid of attachment shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 33, C.R.C.P. A Notice of Levy shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 34, C.R.C.P.

(c) When Writ of Garnishment in Aid of Attachment Issues. At any time after the issuance of a writ of attachment in accordance with C.R.C.P. 402, a writ of garnishment shall be issued by the clerk of the court upon request. Under such writ of garnishment the plaintiff in attachment may garnish personal property of any description, except earnings of a natural person, owed to, or owned by, such defendant in attachment and in the possession or control of the garnishee.

(d) Service of Writ of Garnishment in Aid of Attachment. Service of the writ of garnishment in aid of attachment shall be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 304. If the defendant in attachment is a natural person, service of a notice of levy shall be made as required by C.R.S. 13-55-102. If the defendant in attachment is other than a natural person, a notice of levy need not be served on the defendant in attachment.

(e) Jurisdiction. Service of the writ of garnishment in aid of attachment shall give the court jurisdiction over the garnishee and personal property of any description (except earnings of a natural person), owned by, or owed to, a defendant in attachment in the possession or control of the garnishee.

(f) Court Order on Garnishment Answer.

(1) When the defendant in attachment is an entity other than a natural person:

(A) If the answer to a writ of garnishment in aid of attachment shows the garnishee is indebted to such defendant in attachment, the clerk shall enter judgment in favor of such defendant in attachment and against the garnishee for the use of the plaintiff in attachment for the amount of the indebtedness shown in such answer and order such amount paid into the registry of the court. In no event shall any judgment against the garnishee be more than the total amount due and owing nor shall such judgment enter for the benefit of a plaintiff in attachment until a judgment has been entered by the court against such defendant in attachment.

(B) If the answer to a writ of garnishment in aid of attachment shows the garnishee to possess or control personal property of any description, owned by, or owed to, such defendant in attachment, at any time after judgment has entered against such defendant in attachment, the court shall order the garnishee to deliver such property to the sheriff to be sold as upon execution and the court may enter any order necessary to protect the interests of the parties. Any proceeds received by the sheriff upon such sale shall be paid to the registry of the court to be applied to the judgment debt, but any surplus of property or proceeds shall be delivered to the judgment debtor/defendant in attachment.

(2) When the defendant in attachment is a natural person:

(A) If the answer to a writ of garnishment in aid of attachment shows the garnishee is indebted to such defendant in attachment, after judgment has entered against such defendant in attachment/judgment debtor upon a showing that such defendant in attachment has been served with a notice of levy as required by C.R.S. 13-55-102, the court shall enter judgment in favor of the defendant in attachment/judgment debtor and against the garnishee for the use of the plaintiff in attachment/judgment creditor for the amount of the indebtedness shown in such answer and order such amount paid into the registry of the court. In no event shall any judgment against the garnishee be more than the amount of the judgment against the defendant in attachment/judgment debtor.

(B) If the answer to a writ of garnishment in aid of attachment shows the garnishee to possess or control personal property owned by, or owed to, such defendant in attachment, after judgment has entered against such defendant in attachment/judgment debtor and upon a showing that such defendant in attachment has been served with a notice of levy as required by C.R.S. 13-55-102, the court shall order the garnishee to deliver the property to the sheriff to be sold as upon execution and the court may enter any order necessary to protect the interests of the parties. Any proceeds received by the sheriff upon such sale shall be paid to the registry of the court to be applied to the judgment debt but any surplus of property or proceeds shall be delivered to the defendant in attachment/judgment debtor.

(g) Disbursement by Clerk of Court. The clerk of the court shall disburse any funds in the registry of the court to the judgment creditor without further application or order and enter such disbursement in the court records. The judgment creditor shall refund to the clerk of the court any disbursement in excess of the amount necessary to satisfy the judgment.

SECTION 6
JUDGMENT DEBTOR'S OBJECTION — WRITTEN CLAIM OF EXEMPTION — HEARING

(a) Judgment Debtor's Objection to Calculation of Exempt Earnings Under Writ of Continuing Garnishment.

(1) If a judgment debtor objects to the initial or a subsequent calculation of the amount of exempt earnings, the judgment debtor shall have 7 days from the receipt of the copy of the writ of garnishment or calculation of the amount of exempt earnings for subsequent pay periods, within which to resolve the issue of such miscalculation by agreement with the garnishee.

(2) If the judgment debtor's objection is not resolved with the garnishee within 7 days upon good faith effort, the judgment debtor may file a written objection setting forth, with reasonable detail, the grounds for such objection. Such objection must be filed within 14 days from receipt of the copy of writ of garnishment or calculation of the amount of exempt earnings for subsequent pay periods.

(3) The written objection shall be filed with the clerk of the court by the judgment debtor in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 28, C.R.C.P.

(4) The judgment debtor shall, by certified mail, return receipt requested, immediately deliver a copy of such objection to the garnishee and the judgment creditor's attorney of record, or if none, to the judgment creditor. If the garnishee has been directed to transmit the nonexempt earnings to an attorney or a collection agency licensed pursuant to section 12-14-101, et seq, C.R.S., then upon receipt of the objection, the garnishee shall transmit the nonexempt earnings to the clerk of the court.

(5) Upon the filing of a written objection, all proceedings with relation to the earnings of the judgment debtor in possession and control of the garnishee, the judgment creditor, the attorney for the judgment creditor, or in the registry of the court shall be stayed until the written objection is determined by the court.

(b) Judgment Debtor's Claim of Exemption Under a Writ With Notice.

(1) When a garnishee, pursuant to a writ with notice, holds any personal property of the judgment debtor, other than earnings, which the judgment debtor claims to be exempt, the judgment debtor, within 14 days after being served a copy of such writ as required by Section 2(d)(2) of this rule, shall make and file a written claim of exemption with the clerk of the court in which the judgment was entered.

(2) The claim of exemption to the writ of garnishment with notice shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 30, C.R.C.P.

(3) The judgment debtor shall, by certified mail, return receipt requested, deliver a copy of the claim of exemption to the garnishee and the judgment creditor's attorney of record, or if none, to the judgment creditor.

(4) Upon the filing of a claim of exemption to a writ with notice, all proceedings with relation to property in the possession or control of the garnishee shall be stayed until such claim is determined by the court.

(c) Hearing on Objection or Claim of Exemption.

(1) Upon the filing of an objection pursuant to Section 6(a) of this rule or the filing of a claim of exemption pursuant to Section 6(b) of this rule, the court in which the judgment was entered shall set a time for hearing of such objection or claim of exemption which hearing shall not be more than 14 days after the filing of such objection or claim of exemption.

(2) When an objection or claim of exemption is filed, the clerk of the court shall immediately inform the judgment creditor, the judgment debtor and the garnishee, or their attorneys of record, by telephone, by mail, or in person, of the date and time of such hearing.

(3) The clerk of the court shall document in the court record that notice of the hearing has been given in the manner required by this rule. Said documentation in the court record shall constitute a sufficient return and prima facie evidence of such notice.

(4) The court in which judgment was entered shall conduct a hearing at which all interested parties may testify, and shall determine the validity of the objection or claim of exemption filed by the judgment debtor and shall enter a judgment in favor of the judgment debtor to the extent of the validity of the objection or claim of exemption, which judgment shall be a final judgment for the purpose of appellate review.

(5) If the court shall find the amount of exempt earnings to have been miscalculated or if said property is found to be exempt, the court shall order the clerk of the court to remit the amount of over-garnished earnings, or the garnishee to remit such exempt property to the clerk of the court for the use and benefit of the judgment debtor within three (3) business days.

(d) Objection or Claim of Exemption Within 182 days.

(1) Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 6(a)(2) and Section 6(b)(1) of this rule, a judgment debtor failing to make and file a written objection or claim of exemption within the time therein provided, may, at any time within 182 days from receipt of the copy of the writ with notice or a copy of the writ of continuing garnishment or the calculation of the amount of exempt earnings, move the court in which the judgment was entered to hear an objection or claim of exemption as to any earnings or property levied in garnishment which the judgment debtor claims to have been miscalculated or which the judgment debtor claims to be exempt.

(2) A hearing pursuant to this subsection shall be held only upon a verified showing, under oath, of good cause which shall include: mistake, accident, surprise, irregularity in proceedings, newly discovered evidence, events not in the control of the judgment debtor, or such other grounds as the court may allow, but in no event shall a hearing be held pursuant to this subsection on grounds available to the judgment debtor as the basis of an objection or claim of exemption within the time periods provided in Section 6(a)(2) and Section 6(b)(1).

(3) At such hearing, if the judgment giving rise to such claim has been satisfied against property or earnings of the judgment debtor, the court shall hear and summarily try and determine whether the amount of the judgment debtor's earnings paid to the judgment creditor was correctly calculated and whether the judgment debtor's property sold as upon execution was exempt. If the court finds earnings to have been miscalculated of if property is found to be exempt, the court shall enter judgment in favor of the judgment debtor for the amount of the over-garnished earnings or such exempt property or the value thereof which judgment shall be satisfied by payment to the clerk of the court or the return of exempt property to the judgment debtor within three (3) business days.

SECTION 7
FAILURE OF GARNISHEE TO ANSWER
(ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

(a) Default Entered by Clerk of Court.

(1) If a garnishee, having been served with any form of writ provided for by this rule, fails to answer or pay any nonexempt earnings as directed within the time required, the clerk of the court shall enter a default against such garnishee upon request.

(2) No default shall be entered in an attachment action against the garnishee until the expiration of 42 days after service of a writ of garnishment upon the garnishee.

(b) Procedure After Default of Garnishee Entered.

(1) After a default is entered, the judgment creditor, plaintiff in attachment or any intervenor in attachment, may proceed before the court to prove the liability of the garnishee to the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment.

(2) If a garnishee is under subpoena to appear before the court for a hearing to prove such liability and such subpoena shall have been issued and served in accordance with C.R.C.P. 345 and shall fail to appear, the court shall thereupon enter such sanctions as are just, including, but not limited to, contempt of court, issuance of a bench warrant, reasonable attorney fees and the cost and expense of the judgment creditor, plaintiff in attachment or intervenor in attachment.

(3) Upon hearing, if the court finds the garnishee liable to the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment or in the possession or control of personal property of the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment at the time of service of the writ:

(A) The court shall enter judgment in favor of the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment against the garnishee for the use and benefit of the judgment creditor, plaintiff in attachment or intervenor in attachment, if the garnishee was liable to the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment;

(B) The court shall order the garnishee to deliver the personal property to the sheriff to be sold as upon execution in the same manner as section 4(f)(2) of this rule, if the garnishee was in the possession or control of personal property of the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment and may enter any order necessary to protect the interests of the parties. Provided, however, in the event that the garnishee no longer has possession or control over the personal property, the court may either enter a judgment for the value of such property at the time of the service of the writ or enter any order necessary to protect the interests of the parties or both.

(4) At any hearing the court shall make such orders as to reasonable attorney's fees, costs and expense of the parties to such hearing, as are just.

SECTION 8
TRAVERSE OF ANSWER
(ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

(a) Time for Filing of Traverse. The judgment creditor, plaintiff in attachment or intervenor in attachment, may file a traverse of an answer to any form of writ provided by this rule provided such traverse is filed within the greater time period of 21 days from the date such answer should have been filed with the court or 21 days after such answer was filed with the court. The failure to timely file a traverse shall be deemed an acceptance of the answer as true.

(b) Procedure.

(1) Within the time provided, the judgment creditor, plaintiff in attachment, or intervenor in attachment, shall state, in verified form, the grounds of traverse and shall mail a copy of the same to the garnishee in accordance with C.R.C.P. 305.

(2) Upon application of the judgment creditor, plaintiff in attachment, or intervenor in attachment, the traverse shall be set for hearing before the court at which hearing the statements in the traverse shall be deemed admitted or denied.

(3) Upon hearing of the traverse, if the court finds the garnishee liable to the judgment debtor or defendant in the attachment or in the possession or control of personal property of the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment at the time of service of the writ:

(A) The court shall enter judgment in favor of the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment against the garnishee for the use and benefit of the judgment creditor, plaintiff in attachment of intervenor in attachment, if the garnishee was liable to the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment;

(B) The court shall order the garnishee to deliver the personal property to the sheriff to be sold as upon execution in the same manner as section 4(f)(2) of this rule, if the garnishee was in the possession or control of personal property of the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment and may enter any order necessary to protect the interests of the parties. Provided, however, in the event that the garnishee no longer has possession or control over the personal property, the court may either enter a judgment for the value of such property at the time of the service of the writ or enter any order necessary to protect the interests of the parties or both.

(4) If a garnishee is under subpoena to appear for a hearing upon a traverse and such subpoena shall have been issued and served in accordance with C.R.C.P. 345, and shall fail to appear, the court shall thereupon enter such sanctions as are just, including, but not limited to, contempt of court, issuance of a bench warrant, reasonable attorney fees and the cost and expense of the judgment creditor, plaintiff in attachment or intervenor in attachment.

(5) At any hearing upon a traverse, the court shall make such orders as to reasonable attorney fees, costs and expense of the parties to such hearing as are just.

SECTION 9
INTERVENTION
(ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

Any person who claims an interest in any personal property of any description of a judgment debtor or defendant in attachment which property is the subject of any answer made by a garnishee, may intervene as provided in C.R.C.P. 324 at any time prior to entry of judgment against the garnishee.

SECTION 10
SET-OFF BY GARNISHEE
(ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

Every garnishee shall be allowed to claim as a set-off and retain or deduct all demands or claims on the part of the garnishee against any party to the garnishment proceedings, which the garnishee might have claimed if not summoned as a garnishee, whether such are payable or not at the time of service of any form or writ provided for by this rule.

SECTION 11
GARNISHEE NOT REQUIRED TO DEFEND CLAIMS OF THIRD PERSONS
(ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

(a) Garnishee With Notice. A garnishee with notice of the claim of a third person in any property of any description of a judgment debtor or defendant in attachment which is the subject of any answer made by the garnishee in response to any form of writ provided for by this rule shall not be required to defend on account of such claim, but shall state in such answer that the garnishee is informed of such claim of a third person.

(b) Court to Issue Summons. When such an answer has been filed, the clerk of the court, upon application, shall issue a summons requiring such third person to appear within the time specified in C.R.C.P. 312 to answer, set up, and assert a claim or be barred thereafter.

(c) Delivery of Property by Garnishee.

(1) If the answer states that the garnishee is informed of the claim of a third person, the garnishee may at any time pay to the clerk of the court any garnished amount payable at the time of the service of any writ provided for by this rule, or deliver to the sheriff any property the garnishee is required to hold pursuant to any form of writ provided for in this rule.

(2) Upon service of the summons upon such third person pursuant to C.R.C.P. 304, the garnishee shall thereupon be released and discharged of any liability to any person on account of such indebtedness to the extent of any amount paid to the clerk of the court or any property delivered to the sheriff.

SECTION 12
RELEASE AND DISCHARGE OF GARNISHEE
(ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

(a) Effect of Judgment. A judgment against a garnishee shall release and discharge such garnishee from all claims or demands of the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment to the extent of all sums paid or property delivered by the garnishee pursuant to such judgment.

(b) Effect of Payment. Payment by a garnishee of any sums required to be remitted by such garnishee pursuant to Sections 1(k)(2) or 3(g)(2) of this rule shall release and discharge such garnishee from all claims or demands of the judgment debtor to the extent of all such sums paid.

(c) Release by Judgment Creditor or Plaintiff in Attachment. A judgment creditor or plaintiff in attachment may issue a written release of any writ provided by this rule. Such release shall state the effective date of the release and shall be promptly filed with the clerk of the court.

GARNISHMENT OF PUBLIC BODY
(ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

Any writ provided for in this rule wherein a public body is designated as the garnishee, shall be served upon the officer of such body whose duty it is to issue warrants, checks or money to the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment, or, such officer as the public body may have designated to accept service. Such officer need not include in any answer to such writ, as money owing, the amount of any warrant or check drawn and signed prior to the time of service of such writ.

Rule 404. Replevin

(a) Personal Property. The plaintiff in an action in the county court to recover the possession of personal property, the value of which does not exceed fifteen thousand dollars, may, at the time of the commencement of the action, or at any time before trial, claim the delivery of such property to the plaintiff as provided in this Rule.

(b) Causes, Affidavit. Where a delivery is claimed, the plaintiff, the plaintiff's agent or attorney, or some credible person for the plaintiff, shall, by verified complaint or by complaint and affidavit under penalty of perjury show to the court as follows:

(1) That the plaintiff is the owner of the property claimed or is entitled to possession thereof and the source of such title or right; and if plaintiff's interest in such property is based upon a written instrument, a copy thereof shall be attached;

(2) That the property is being detained by the defendant against the plaintiff's claim of right to possession; the means by which the defendant came into possession thereof, and the specific facts constituting detention against the right of the plaintiff to possession;

(3) A particular description of the property, a statement of its actual value, and a statement to the plaintiff's best knowledge, information and belief concerning the location of the property and of the residence and the business address, if any, of the defendant;

(4) That the property has not been taken for a tax assessment or fine pursuant to a statute; or seized under an execution against the property of the plaintiff; or if so seized, that it is by statute exempt from seizure.

(c) Show Cause Order; Hearing within 14 Days. The court shall without delay, examine the complaint and affidavit, and if it is satisfied that they meet the requirements of subsection (b), it shall issue an order directed to the defendant to show cause why the property should not be taken from the defendant and delivered to the plaintiff. Such order shall fix the date and time for the hearing thereof. The hearing date shall be not more than 14 days from the date of the issuance of the order and the order must have been served at least 7 days prior to the hearing date. The plaintiff may request a hearing date beyond 14 days, which request shall constitute a waiver of the right to a hearing not more than 14 days from the date of issuance of the order. Such order shall inform the defendant that if the hearing date on the order to show cause and the appearance date fixed in the summons are different dates, the defendant must appear at both times, that the defendant may file affidavits on the defendant's behalf with the court and may appear and present testimony on the defendant's behalf at the time of such hearing, or that the defendant may, at or prior to such hearing, file with the court a written undertaking to stay the delivery of the property, in accordance with the provisions of section (j) of this Rule, and that, if the defendant fails to appear at the hearing on the order to show cause or to file an undertaking, plaintiff may apply to the court for an order requiring the sheriff to take immediate possession of the property described in the complaint and deliver same to the plaintiff. The summons and complaint, if not previously served, and the order shall be served on the defendant and the order shall fix the manner in which service shall be made, which shall be by service in accordance with the provisions of Rule 4, C.R.C.P., or in such manner as the court may determine to be reasonably calculated to afford notice thereof to the defendant under the circumstances appearing from the complaint and affidavit.

(d) Order for Possession prior to Hearing. Subject to the provisions of 5-5-104, C.R.S., and upon examination of the complaint and affidavit and such other evidence or testimony as the court may thereupon require, an order of possession may be issued prior to hearing, if probable cause appears that any of the following exist:

(1) The defendant gained possession of the property by theft.

(2) The property consists of one or more negotiable instruments or credit cards.

(3) By reason of specific, competent evidence shown, by testimony with the personal knowledge of an affiant or witness, the property is perishable, and will perish before any noticed hearing can be had, or that the defendant may destroy, dismantle, remove parts from, or in any way substantially change the character of the property, or the defendant may conceal or remove the property from the jurisdiction of the court to sell the property to an innocent purchaser.

(4) That the defendant has by contract voluntarily and intelligently and knowingly waived the right to a hearing prior to losing possession of the property by means of a court order.

Where an order of possession has been issued prior to hearing under the provisions of this section, the defendant or other persons from whom possession of said property has been taken, may apply to the court for an order shortening time for hearing on the order to show cause, and the court may, upon such application, shorten the time for hearing, and direct that the matter shall be heard on not less than forty-eight hours' notice to the plaintiff.

(e) Bond. An order of possession shall not issue pursuant to section (d) of this Rule until plaintiff has filed with the court in an amount set by the court in its discretion not to exceed double the value of the property a written undertaking executed by plaintiff and such surety as the court may require for the return of the property to the defendant, if return thereof be ordered, and for the payment to the defendant of any sum that may from any cause be recovered against the plaintiff.

(f) Temporary Order to Preserve Property. Under the circumstances described in section (b) of this Rule, or in lieu of the immediate issuance of an order of possession under any circumstances described in section (d) of this Rule, the court may, in addition to the issuance of the order to show cause, issue such temporary orders, directed to the defendant, prohibiting or requiring such acts with respect to the property as may appear to be necessary for the preservation of the rights of the parties and the status of the property.

(g) Order for Possession after Hearing; Bond; Directed to Sheriff. Upon the hearing on the order to show cause, which hearing shall be held as a matter of course by the court, the court shall consider the showing made by the parties appearing, and shall make a preliminary determination of which party, with reasonable probability, is entitled to possession, use, and disposition of the property pending final adjudication of the claims of the parties. If the court determines that the action is one in which a prejudgment order of possession should issue, it shall direct the issuance of such order and may require a bond in such amount and with such surety as the court may determine to protect the rights of the parties. Failure of the defendant to be present or represented at the hearing on the order to show cause shall not constitute a default in the main action. The order of possession shall be directed to the sheriff within whose jurisdiction the property is located.

(h) Contents of Possession Order. The order of possession shall describe the specific property to be seized, and shall specify the location or locations where there is probable cause to believe the property or some part thereof will be found. It shall direct the sheriff to seize the same as it is found, and to retain it in the sheriff's custody. There shall be attached to such order a copy of the written undertaking filed by the plaintiff, and such order shall inform the defendant of the right to except to the sureties or to the amount of the bond upon the undertaking or to file a written undertaking for the redelivery of such property as provided in section (j).

Upon probable cause shown by further affidavit or declaration by the plaintiff or someone in the plaintiff's behalf, filed with the court, an order of possession may be endorsed by the court, without further notice, to direct the sheriff to search for the property at another specified location or locations and to seize the same if found. The sheriff shall forthwith take the property if it be in the possession of the defendant or the defendant's agent, and retain it to the sheriff's custody.

(i) Sheriff May Break Building: When. If the property or any part thereof is in a building or an enclosure, the sheriff shall demand its delivery, announcing the sheriff's identity, purpose, and authority under which the sheriff acts. If it is not voluntarily delivered, the sheriff shall cause the building or enclosure to be broken open in such a manner as the sheriff reasonably believes will cause the least damage to the building or enclosure, and take the property into the sheriff's possession. The sheriff may call upon the power of the county to provide aid and protection, but if the sheriff reasonably believes that entry and seizure of the property will involve a substantial risk of death or serious bodily harm to any person, the sheriff shall refrain from seizing the property, and shall forthwith make a return before the court from which the order was issued, setting forth the reasons for the belief that such risk exists. The court may make such orders and decrees as may be appropriate.

The sheriff shall, without delay, serve upon the defendant a copy of the order of possession and written undertaking by delivering the same to the defendant personally, if the defendant can be found or to the defendant's agent for whose possession the property is taken; or, if neither can be found, by leaving them at the usual place of abode of either with some person of suitable age and discretion; or if neither has any known place of abode, by mailing them to the last known address of either.

(j) When Returned to Defendant; Bond. At any time prior to the hearing on the order to show cause, or before the delivery of the property to the plaintiff, the defendant may require the return thereof upon filing with the court a written undertaking, in an amount set by the court in its discretion not to exceed double the value of the property and executed by the defendant and such surety as the court may direct for the delivery of the property to the plaintiff, if such delivery be ordered, and for the payment to the plaintiff of such sum as may for any cause be recovered against the defendant. At the time of filing such undertaking, the defendant shall serve upon the plaintiff or Plaintiff's attorney, in the manner provided by Rule 305, C.R.C.P., a notice of filing of such undertaking, to which a copy of such undertaking shall be attached, and shall cause proof of service thereof to be filed with the court. If such undertaking be filed prior to hearing on the order to show cause, proceedings thereunder shall terminate, unless exception is taken to the amount of the bond or the sufficiency of the surety. If, at the time of filing of such undertaking, the property shall be in the custody of the sheriff, such property shall be redelivered to the defendant 7 days after service of notice of filing such undertaking upon the plaintiff or his attorney.

(k) Exception to Sureties. Either party may, within two business days after service of an undertaking or notice of filing and undertaking under the provisions of this Rule, give written notice to the court and the other party that the party excepts to do the sufficiency of the surety or the amount of the bond. If the party fails to do so, the party is deemed to have waived all objections to them. When a party excepts the court shall hold a hearing to determine the sufficiency of the bond or surety. If the property be in the custody of the sheriff, he shall retain custody thereof until the hearing is completed or waived. If the excepting party prevails at the hearing, the sheriff shall proceed as if no such undertaking has been filed. If the excepting party does not prevail at the hearing, or the exception is waived, the sheriff shall deliver the property to the party filing such undertaking.

(l) Duty of Sheriff in Holding Goods. When the sheriff has taken property as provided in this Rule, it shall be kept in a secure place and delivered to the party entitled thereto, upon receiving the sheriff's fees for taking and the necessary expenses for keeping the same, after expiration of the time for filing of an undertaking for redelivery and for the exception to the sufficiency of the bond, unless the court shall by order stay such delivery.

(m) Claim by Third Person. If the property taken is claimed by any other person than the defendant or the plaintiff, such person may intervene under the provisions of Rule 324, C.R.C.P., and in the event of a judgment in the person's favor, the person may also recover such damages as may have been suffered by reason of any wrongful detention of the property.

(n) Return; Papers by Sheriff. The sheriff shall return the order of possession and undertakings and affidavits with the sheriff's proceedings thereon, to the court in which the action is pending, within 21 days after taking the property mentioned therein.

(o) Precedence on Docket. In all proceedings brought to recover the possession of personal property, all courts, in which such actions are pending, shall, upon request of any party thereto, give such actions precedence over all other civil actions, except actions to which special precedence is otherwise given by law, in the matter of the setting of the same for hearing or trial, and in hearing or trial thereof, to the end that all such actions shall be quickly heard and determined.

(p) Judgment. In an action to recover the possession of personal property, judgment for the plaintiff may be for the possession or the value thereof in case a delivery cannot be had, and damages for the detention. If the property has been delivered to the plaintiff, and the defendant claims a return thereof, judgment for the defendant may be for a return of the property, or the value thereof in case a return cannot be had, and damages for taking and withholding the same. The provisions of Rule 313, C.R.C.P., shall apply to replevin actions.

Rule 406. Remedial Writs

Except for certiorari to the Supreme Court as provided by these rules the common law writs and any relief as provided in Rule 106, C.R.C.P., are not available in the county court.

Rule 407. Remedial and Punitive Sanctions for Contempt

(a) Definitions.

(1) Contempt. Disorderly or disruptive behavior, a breach of the peace, boisterous conduct or violent disturbance toward the court, or conduct that unreasonably interrupts the due course of judicial proceedings; behavior that obstructs the administration of justice; disobedience or resistance by any person to or interference with any lawful writ, process, or order of the court; or any other act or omission designated as contempt by the statutes or these rules.

(2) Direct Contempt. Contempt that the court has seen or heard and is so extreme that no warning is necessary or that has been repeated despite the court's warning to desist.

(3) Indirect Contempt. Contempt that occurs out of the direct sight or hearing of the court.

(4) Punitive Sanctions for Contempt. Punishment by unconditional fine, fixed sentence of imprisonment, or both, for conduct that is found to be offensive to the authority and dignity of the court.

(5) Remedial Sanctions for Contempt. Sanctions imposed to force compliance with a lawful order or to compel performance of an act within the person's power or present ability to perform.

(6) Court. For purposes of this rule, ''court'' means any judge, magistrate, commissioner, referee, or a master while performing official duties.

(b) Direct Contempt Proceedings. When a direct contempt is committed, it may be punished summarily. In such case an order shall be made on the record or in writing reciting the facts constituting the contempt, including a description of the person's conduct, a finding that the conduct was so extreme that no warning was necessary or the person's conduct was repeated after the court's warning to desist, and a finding that the conduct is offensive to the authority and dignity of the court. Prior to the imposition of sanctions, the person shall have the right to make a statement in mitigation.

(c) Indirect Contempt Proceedings. When it appears to the court by motion supported by affidavit that indirect contempt has been committed, the court may ex parte order a citation to issue to the person so charged to appear and show cause at a date, time and place designated why the person should not be punished. The citation and a copy of the motion, affidavit and order shall be served directly upon such person at least 21 days before the time designated for the person to appear. If such person fails to appear at the time so designated, and it is evident to the court that the person was properly served with copies of the motion, affidavit, order, and citation, a warrant for the person's arrest may issue to the sheriff. The warrant shall fix the date, time and place for the production of the person in court. The court shall state on the warrant the amount and kind of bond required. The person shall be discharged upon delivery to and approval by the sheriff or clerk of the bond directing the person to appear at the date, time and place designated in the warrant, and at any time to which the hearing may be continued, or pay the sum specified. If the person fails to appear at the time designated in the warrant, or at any time to which the hearing may be continued, the bond may be forfeited upon proper notice of hearing to the surety, if any, and to the extent of the damages suffered because of the contempt, the bond may be paid to the aggrieved party. If the person fails to make bond, the sheriff shall keep the person in custody subject to the order of the court.

(d) Trial and Punishment. (1) Punitive Sanctions. In an indirect contempt proceeding where punitive sanctions may be imposed, the court may appoint special counsel to prosecute the contempt action. If the judge initiates the contempt proceedings, the person shall be advised of the right to have the action heard by another judge. At the first appearance, the person shall be advised of the right to be represented by an attorney and, if indigent and if a jail sentence is contemplated, the court will appoint counsel. The maximum jail sentence shall not exceed six months unless the person has been advised of the right to a jury trial. The person shall also be advised of the right to plead either guilty or not guilty to the charges, the presumption of innocence, the right to require proof of the charge beyond a reasonable doubt, the right to present witnesses and evidence, the right to cross-examine all adverse witnesses, the right to have subpoenas issued to compel attendance of witnesses at trial, the right to remain silent, the right to testify at trial, and the right to appeal any adverse decision. The court may impose a fine or imprisonment or both if the court expressly finds that the person's conduct was offensive to the authority and dignity of the court. The person shall have the right to make a statement in mitigation prior to the imposition of sentence.

(2) Remedial Sanctions. In a contempt proceeding where remedial sanctions may be imposed, the court shall hear and consider the evidence for and against the person charged and it may find the person in contempt and order sanctions. The court shall enter an order in writing or on the record describing the means by which the person may purge the contempt and the sanctions that will be in effect until the contempt is purged. In all cases of indirect contempt where remedial sanctions are sought, the nature of the sanctions and remedies that may be imposed shall be described in the motion or citation. Costs and reasonable attorney's fees in connection with the contempt proceeding may be assessed in the discretion of the court. If the contempt consists of the failure to perform an act in the power of the person to perform and the court finds the person has the present ability to perform the act so ordered, the person may be fined or imprisoned until its performance.

(e) Limitations. The court shall not suspend any part of a punitive sanction based upon the performance or non-performance of any future acts. The court may reconsider any punitive sanction. Probation shall not be permitted as a condition of any punitive sanction. Remedial and punitive sanctions may be combined by the court, provided appropriate procedures are followed relative to each type of sanction and findings are made to support the adjudication of both types of sanctions.

(f) Appeal. For the purposes of appeal, an order deciding the issue of contempt and sanctions shall be final.

Source: Entire rule amended January 26, 1995, effective April 1, 1995; (c) amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b).

Rule 408. Affidavits

An affidavit may be sworn to either within or without this state before any officer authorized by law to take and certify the acknowledgment of deeds conveying lands.

Rule 410. Miscellaneous

(a) Amendments. No writ or process shall be quashed, nor any order or decree set aside, nor any undertaking be held invalid, nor any affidavit, traverse or other paper be held insufficient if the same be corrected within the time and manner prescribed by the court, which shall be liberal in permitting amendments.

(b) Use of Terms. Words used in the present tense shall include the future; singular shall include the plural; masculine shall include the feminine; person or party shall include all manner of organizations which may sue or be sued. The use of the word clerk, sheriff, marshal, or other officer means such officer or his deputy or other person authorized to perform his duties. The word ''oath'' includes the word ''affirmation''; and the phrase ''to swear'' includes ''to affirm''; signature or subscription shall include mark, when the person is unable to write, his name being written near it and witnessed by a person who writes his own name as a witness. A superintendent, overseer, foreman, sales director, or person occupying a similar position, may be considered a managing agent for the purposes of these rules.

(c) Certificates. Certificates shall be made in the name of the officer either by the officer or by his deputy.

(d) Counterclaimants. Where a counterclaim is filed, the claimant thereunder shall have the same rights and remedies as the plaintiff.

Rule 411. Appeals

(a) Notice of Appeal; Time for Filing; Bond. If either party in a civil action believes that the judgment of the county court is in error, that party may appeal to the district court by filing a notice of appeal in the county court within 14 days after the date of entry of judgment. The notice shall be in the form appearing in the Appendix to Chapter 25, Form 4, C.R.C.P. If the notice of the entry of judgment is transmitted to the parties by mail, the time for the filing of the notice of appeal shall commence from the date of the mailing of the notice. The appealing party shall also file within the said 14 days an appeal bond with the clerk of the county court. The bond shall be furnished by a corporate surety authorized and licensed to do business in this state as a surety, or one or more sufficient private sureties, or may be a cash deposit by the appellant and, if the appeal is taken by the plaintiff, shall be conditioned to pay the costs of the appeal and the counterclaim, if any, and, if the appeal be taken by the defendant, shall be conditioned to pay the costs and judgment if the appealing party fail. The bond shall be approved by the judge or the clerk. Upon filing of the notice of appeal, the posting and approval of the bond, and the deposit by the appellant of an estimated fee in advance for preparing the record, the county court shall discontinue all further proceedings and recall any execution issued. The appellant shall also, within 35 days after the filing of the notice of appeal, docket the case in the district court and pay the docket fee.

(b) Preparation of Record on Appeal. Upon the deposit of the estimated record fee, the clerk of the court shall prepare and issue as soon as may be possible a record of the proceedings in the county court, including the summons, the complaint, proof of service, and the judgment. The record shall also include a transcription of such part of the actual evidence and other proceedings as the parties may designate or, in lieu of transcription, to which they may stipulate. If a stenographic record has been maintained or the parties agree to stipulate, the party appealing shall lodge with the clerk of the court the reporter's transcript of the designated evidence or proceedings, or a stipulation covering such items within 42 days after the filing of the notice of appeal. If the proceedings have been electronically recorded, the transcription of designated evidence and proceedings shall be prepared in the office of the clerk of the county court or under the supervision of the clerk, within 42 days after the filing of the notice of appeal. The clerk shall notify, in writing, the opposing parties of the completion of the record, and such parties shall have 14 days within which to file objections. If none are received, the record shall be certified forthwith by the clerk. If objections are made, the parties shall be called for hearing and the objections settled by the county judge as soon as possible, and the record then certified.

(c) Filing of record. When the record has been duly certified and any additional fees therefor paid, it shall be filed with the clerk of the district court by the clerk of the county court, and the opposing parties shall be notified of such filing by the clerk of the county court.

(d) Briefs. A written brief shall contain a statement of the matters relied upon as constituting error and the arguments with respect thereto. It shall be filed in the district court by the appellant 21 days after filing of the record therein. A copy of such brief shall be served on the appellee. The appellee may file an answering brief within 21 days after such service. In the discretion of the district court, the time for filing of briefs and answers may be extended. When the briefs have been filed the matter shall stand at issue and shall be determined on the record and the briefs, with such oral argument as the court in its discretion may allow. No trial shall be held de novo in the district court unless the record of the proceedings in the county court have been lost or destroyed or for some other valid reason cannot be produced; or unless a party by proper proof to the court establishes that there is new and material evidence unknown and undiscoverable at the time of the trial in the county court which, if presented in a de novo trial in the district court, might affect the outcome.

(e) Determination of Appeal. Unless there is further review by the Supreme Court upon writ of certiorari and pursuant to the rules of such court, after final disposition of the appeal by the district court, the judgment on appeal therein shall be certified to the county court for action as directed by the district court, except upon trials de novo held in the district court or in cases in which the judgment is modified, in which cases the judgment shall be that of the district court and enforced therefrom.

ANNOTATION

The provisions of this section requiring the filing of an appeal bond for costs are not applicable to indigent plaintiffs. Bell v. Simpson, 918 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1996).

A county court party found to be indigent and allowed to proceed in forma pauperis is not required to post a judgment bond before appealing to district court. O'Donnell v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 186 P.3d 46 (Colo. 2008).

However, as with appeals from the district court to the court of appeals, the prevailing party in the county court would be able to execute the judgment while the appeal is still pending because the judgment would not have been stayed by a judgment bond. O'Donnell v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 186 P.3d 46 (Colo. 2008).

Time for docketing appeals. Subsection (1)(b) of § 13-6-311, relating to appeals from county court, and section (a)(1) of this rule clearly provide that the docketing must take place no later than the time allowed for completing and lodging the record. Tumbarello v. Superior Court, 195 Colo. 83, 575 P.2d 431 (1978).

Applied in Bachman v. County Court, 43 Colo. App. 175, 602 P.2d 899 (1979).

CHAPTER 26

The Colorado Rules of Procedure for Small Claims Courts

Repealed and Readopted by the

SUPREME COURT OF COLORADO

February 24, 1994,

Effective July 1, 1994

CHAPTER 26

COLORADO RULES OF PROCEDURE FOR SMALL CLAIMS COURTS

Rule 501. Scope and Purpose

(a) How Known and Cited. These rules for the small claims division for the county court are additions to C.R.C.P. and shall be known and cited as the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure, or C.R.C.P. These rules are promulgated pursuant to section 13-6-413, C.R.S.

(b) Procedure Governed. These rules govern the procedure in all small claims courts. They shall be liberally construed to secure the just, speedy, informal, and inexpensive determination of every small claims action.

(c) Purpose. Each small claims court shall provide for the expeditious resolution of all cases before it. Where practicable, at least one weekend session and at least one evening session shall be scheduled or available to be scheduled for trial in each small claims court each month.

(d) Record of Proceedings. A record shall be made of all small claims court proceedings.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Changes to the Statutes and Rules Governing Procedures in Colorado Small Claims Courts", see 31 Colo. Law. 29 (February 2002).

The strict technical application of procedural filing deadlines is to be avoided in cases where it would result in a punitive disposition of litigation and an arbitrary denial of substantial justice contrary to the spirit of the rules of civil procedure. The district court's order emphasized the importance of the timely and inexpensive resolution of small claims at the expense of an equally important concern: The tenet that requires courts to construe procedural rules in a manner that ensures the just determination of every action. Semental v. Denver County Court, 978 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1999).

Rule 502. Commencement of Action

(a) How Commenced. A small claims action is commenced by filing with the court a short statement of the plaintiff's claim setting forth the facts giving rise to the action in the manner and form provided in C.R.C.P. 506 and by paying the appropriate docket fee.

(b) Jurisdiction. The court shall have jurisdiction from the time the claim is filed.

(c) Setting of the Trial Date. At the time the small claims action is filed, the clerk shall set the trial on a date, time and place certain. The first scheduled trial date shall not be less than thirty days from the date of issuance of the notice of claim by the clerk.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective September 6, 2001.

Rule 503. Place of Action

(a) Where Brought, Generally. All actions in the small claims court shall be brought in the county in which at the time of filing of the claim any of the defendants resides, or is regularly employed, or has an office for the transaction of business, or is a student at an institution of higher education. In an action to enforce restrictive covenants or arising from a security deposit dispute, the action may be brought in the county in which the subject real property is located.

(b) Consent to venue. If a defendant appears and defends a small claims action on the merits at trial, the defendant agrees to the place of trial.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective September 6, 2001; (a) amended and effective November 13, 2008.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "What Is a Lawyer Doing in Small Claims Court"? see 13 Colo. Law. 430 (1984).

Applied in Yard v. Ambassador Bldr. Corp., 669 P.2d 1040 (Colo. App. 1983).

Rule 504. Service of the Notice, Claim and Summons to Appear for Trial

(a) Time for Serving the Notice, Claim and Summons to Appear for Trial. A copy of the notice, claim and summons to appear for trial shall be served at least fifteen days prior to the trial date.

(b) Personal Service of the Notice, Claim and Summons to Appear for Trial. Personal service of the notice, claim and summons to appear for trial shall be in accordance with C.R.C.P. 304(c), (d) and (e), with proof of service filed in accordance with C.R.C.P. 304(g), and refusal of service dealt with as described in C.R.C.P. 304(j).

(c) Clerk's Service of the Notice, Claim and Summons to Appear for Trial by Certified Mail.

(1) Within three days after the action is filed, the clerk shall send a signed and sealed notice, pursuant to Forms appended to these rules, to the defendant(s), by certified mail, return receipt requested to be signed by addressee only, at the address supplied or designated by the plaintiff. If the notice is delivered, the clerk shall note on the register of actions the mailing date and address, the date of delivery shown on the receipt, and the name of the person who signed the receipt. If the notice was refused, the clerk shall note the date of refusal.

(2) When Service is Complete. Notice shall be sufficient even if refused by the defendant and returned. Service shall be complete upon the date of delivery or refusal.

(3) Notification by Clerk and Fees and Expenses for Service. If the notice is returned for any reason other than refusal to accept it, or if the receipt is signed by any person other than the addressee, the clerk shall so notify the plaintiff. The clerk may then issue additional notices, at the request of the plaintiff. All fees and expenses for the certified mailing by the clerk shall be paid by the plaintiff and treated as costs of the action. Issuance of each notice shall be noted upon the register of actions or in the file.

Rule 505. Pleadings and Motions

(a) Pleadings. There shall be a claim and a response which may or may not include a counterclaim. No other pleadings shall be allowed.

(b) No Motions. There shall be no motions allowed except as contemplated by these rules.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994.

Rule 506. General Rules of Pleading

(a) Claims for Relief and Responses. Except as provided in subsection (b), claims and responses, with or without a counterclaim, in the small claims court shall be filed in the manner and form prescribed by Forms appended to these rules, and shall be signed by the party under penalty of perjury. Claims and responses, with or without a counterclaim, for an action to enforce restrictive covenants on residential property shall be filed pursuant to Forms appended to these rules, and shall be signed by the party under penalty of perjury.

(b) Availability of Forms; Assistance by Court Personnel. The clerk of the court shall provide such assistance as may be requested by a plaintiff or defendant regarding the forms, operations, procedures, jurisdictional limits, and functions of the small claims court; however, court personnel shall not engage in the practice of law. The clerk shall also advise parties of the availability of subpoenas to obtain witnesses and documents. All necessary and appropriate forms shall be available in the office of the clerk.

Rule 507. Responses and Defenses

Each defendant shall file a written and signed response on or before the trial date. At the time of filing the response or appearing, whichever occurs first, each defendant shall pay the docket fee prescribed by law.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective September 6, 2001.

Rule 508. Counterclaim

(a) When Counterclaim to be Filed; Effect on Hearing Date. If at the time of the trial date it appears that a defendant has a counterclaim within the jurisdiction of the small claims court, the court may either proceed to hear the entire case or may continue the hearing for a reasonable time, at which continued hearing the entire case shall be heard.

(b) Counterclaim Within the Jurisdiction of the Small Claims Court. If at the time the action is commenced a defendant possesses a claim against the plaintiff that: (1) is within the jurisdiction of the small claims court, exclusive of interest and costs; (2) arises out of the same transaction or event that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim; (3) does not require for its adjudication the joinder of third parties; and (4) is not the subject of another pending action, the defendant shall file such claim as a counterclaim in the answer or thereafter be barred from suit on the counterclaim. The defendant may also elect to file a counterclaim against the plaintiff that does not arise out of the transaction or occurrence.

(c) Counterclaim Exceeding the Jurisdiction of the Small Claims Court. If at the time the action is commenced the defendant possesses a counterclaim against the plaintiff that is not within the jurisdictional limit of the small claims court, exclusive of interest and costs, and the defendant wishes to assert the counterclaim, the defendant may:

(1) file the counterclaim in the pending small claims court action, but unless the defendant follows the procedure set forth in subsection (2) below, any judgment in the defendant's favor shall be limited to the jurisdictional limit of the small claims court, exclusive of interest and costs, and suit for the excess due the defendant over that sum will be barred thereafter; or

(2) file the counterclaim together with the answer in the pending small claims court action at least seven days before the first scheduled trial date and request in the answer that the action be removed to county court or district court, whichever has appropriate jurisdiction, as selected by the defendant, to be tried pursuant to the rules of civil procedure applicable to the court to which the case has been removed. Upon filing the answer and counterclaim, the defendant shall tender the filing fee for a complaint in the court to which the case has been removed. Upon compliance by the defendant with the requirements of this subsection (2), all small claims court proceedings shall be discontinued and the clerk of the small claims court shall deliver the case and fee to the appropriate court.

(d) Defendant Notified if Counterclaim Exceeds Court's Jurisdiction. All counterclaims asserted over the jurisdictional limit of the small claims court shall be subject to the provisions of Section 13-6-408, C.R.S., and all defendants shall be advised of those provisions on Forms appended to these rules.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective September 6, 2001.

Rule 509. Parties, Representation and Intervention

(a) Parties. Any natural person, corporation, partnership, association, or other organization may commence or defend an action in the small claims court, but no assignee or other person not a real party to the transaction which is the subject of the action may commence an action therein, except as a court-appointed personal representative, conservator, or guardian of the real party in interest.

(b) Representation.

(1) Partnerships and Associations. Notwithstanding the provisions of article 5 of title 12, C.R.S., in the small claims court, an individual shall represent himself or herself; a partnership shall be represented by an active general partner or an authorized full-time employee; a union shall be represented by an authorized active union member or full-time employee; a for-profit corporation shall be represented by one of its full-time officers or full-time employees; an association shall be represented by one of its active members or by a full-time employee of the association; and any other kind of organization or entity shall be represented by one of its active members or full-time employees or, in the case of a nonprofit corporation, a duly elected nonattorney officer or an employee.

(2) Attorney Representatives of Entities. No attorney, except pro se or as an authorized full-time employee or active general partner of a partnership, an authorized active member or full-time employee of a union, a full-time officer or full-time employee of a for-profit corporation, or a full-time employee or active member of an association, which partnership, union, corporation, or association is a party, shall appear or take any part in the filing or prosecution or defense of any matter in the small claims court, except as permitted by rule 520(b).

(3) Property Managers. In actions arising from a landlord-tenant relationship, a property manager who has received security deposits, rents, or both, or who has signed a lease agreement on behalf of the owner of the real property that is the subject of the small claims action, shall be permitted to represent the owner of the property in such action.

(4) Defendants in the Military. In any action to which the federal ''Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940'', 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 501 et seq., is applicable, the court may enter a default against a defendant who is in the military without entering judgment, and the court shall appoint an attorney to represent the interests of the defendant prior to the entry of judgment against the defendant.

(c) Intervention. There shall be no intervention, addition, or substitution of parties, unless otherwise ordered by the court in the interest of justice.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective September 6, 2001.

Rule 510. Discovery and Subpoenas

(a) Depositions, discovery, disclosure statements, and pre-trial conferences shall not be permitted in small claims court proceedings.

(b) Subpoenas for the attendance of witnesses or the production of evidence at trial shall be issued and served pursuant to C.R.C.P. 345.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective September 6, 2001.

Rule 511. Magistrates - No Jury Trial

(a) No Jury Trial. There is no right to a trial by jury in small claims court proceedings.

(b) Magistrates. Magistrates may hear and decide claims and shall have the same powers as a judge, except as provided by C.R.M. 5. A party objecting to a magistrate pursuant to Section 13-6-405 (4), C.R.S., shall file the objection seven days prior to the first scheduled trial date. Cases in which an objection to a magistrate has been timely filed shall be heard and decided by a judge pursuant to the rules and procedures of the small claims court.

Rule 512. Trial

(a) Date of Trial. The trial shall be held on the date set forth in the notice, claim, and summons to appear for trial unless the court grants a continuance for good cause shown. Good cause for a continuance may include a defense made in good faith raising jurisdictional grounds or defects in service of process. A plaintiff may request one continuance if a defendant files a counterclaim.

(b) Settlement Discussions. On the trial date, but before trial, the court may require settlement discussions between the parties, but the court shall not participate in such discussions. If a settlement is achieved, the terms of such settlement shall be presented to the court for approval. If an approved settlement is not achieved, the trial shall be held pursuant to subsection (a) of this rule.

Rule 513. Evidence

The hearing of all cases shall be informal, the object being to dispense justice promptly and economically between the parties. Rules of evidence shall not be strictly applied; however, all constitutional and statutory privileges shall be recognized. The parties may testify and offer evidence and testimony of witnesses at the hearing.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994.

Rule 514. Judgment

At the end of the trial, the court shall immediately state its findings and decision and direct the entry of judgment. Judgment shall be entered immediately pursuant to the provisions of C.R.C.P. 358. No written findings shall be required.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994.

Rule 515. Default and Judgment

(a) Entry at the Time of Trial. Upon the date and at the time set for trial, if the defendant has filed no response or fails to appear and if the plaintiff proves by appropriate return that proper service was made upon the defendant as provided herein at least fifteen days prior to the trial date, the court may enter judgment for the plaintiff for the amount due, as stated in the complaint, but in no event more than the amount requested in the plaintiff's claim, plus interest, costs, and other items provided by statute or agreement. However, before any judgment is entered pursuant to this rule, the court shall be satisfied that venue of the action is proper pursuant to C.R.C.P. 503 and may require the plaintiff to present sufficient evidence to support the plaintiff's claim.

(b) Entry at the Time of Continued Trial. Failure to appear at any other date set for trial shall be grounds for entering a default and judgment against the non-appearing party, whether on a plaintiff's claim or a defendant's counterclaim.

(c) Default and Judgment - Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief. If a defendant is a member on active duty in the United States military services, and if the defendant fails to appear on the trial date without having requested a stay of proceedings, the court shall enter the defendant's default and it shall appoint an attorney to represent the defendant's interests in accordance with the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 501, et seq. Judgment shall enter three business days after the appointment of the attorney unless the attorney shall have filed a written objection to the entry of judgment, stating the legal and factual bases for such objection. The fees of the attorney shall be paid by the plaintiff and shall be assessed as costs in accordance with C.R.C.P. 516.

(d) Setting Aside a Default. For good cause shown, within a reasonable period and in any event not more than thirty days after the entry of judgment, the court may set aside an entry of default and the judgment entered thereon.

Rule 516. Costs

The prevailing party in the action in a small claims court shall have judgment to recover costs of the action and also the costs to enforce the judgment as provided by law.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective June 16, 2011.

Rule 517. Stay of Proceedings to Enforce Judgment

(a) No Automatic Stay. If upon rendition of a judgment payment is not made forthwith, an execution may issue immediately and proceedings may be taken for its enforcement unless the party against whom the judgment was entered requests a stay of execution and the court grants such request. Proceedings to enforce execution and other process after judgment and any fees shall be as provided by law or the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure applicable in county court.

(b) Stay on Motion for Relief From Judgment or Appeal. In its discretion the court may stay the commencement of any proceeding to enforce a judgment pending the disposition of a motion for relief from a judgment or order made pursuant to C.R.C.P. 515(d), or pending the filing and determination of an appeal.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective September 6, 2001.

Rule 518. Execution and Proceedings Subsequent to Judgment

(a) Judgment Debtor to File List of Assets and Property. Immediately following the entry of judgment, the party against whom the judgment was entered, if present in court, shall complete and file the information of judgment debtor's assets and property, pursuant to forms appended to these rules, where appropriate and as ordered by the court, unless the judgment debtor tenders immediate payment of the judgment or the court orders otherwise.

(b) Enforcement Procedures.

(1) Execution and the proceedings subsequent to judgment shall be the same as in a civil action in the county court.

(2) In addition, at any time when execution may issue on a small claims court judgment, the judgment creditor shall be entitled to an order requiring the judgment debtor to appear before the court at a specified time and place to answer concerning assets and property.

(c) Enforcement of Nonmonetary Judgments. The judgment may compel delivery, compliance, or performance or the value thereof, and damages or other remedies for the failure to comply with the judgment, including contempt of court.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; (a) amended June 7, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective September 6, 2001.

Rule 519. Post Trial Relief and Appeals

No motion for new trial shall be filed in the small claims court, whether or not an appeal is taken. Appeal procedures shall be as provided by Section 13-6-410, C.R.S., and C.R.C.P. 411.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994.

Rule 520. Attorneys

(a) No Attorneys. Except as authorized by Section 13-6-407, C.R.S., rule 509(b)(2) and this rule, no attorney shall appear on behalf of any party in the small claims court.

(b) When Attorneys are Permitted in Small Claims Court. On the written notice of the defendant, that the defendant will be represented by an attorney, pursuant to forms appended to these rules filed not less than seven days before the first scheduled trial date, the defendant may be represented by an attorney. The notice of Representation shall advise the plaintiff of the plaintiff's right to counsel. Thereupon, plaintiff may also be represented by an attorney. If the notice is not filed at least seven days before the date set for the first scheduled trial date in the small claims court, no attorney shall appear for either party.

(c) Cases Heard by County Court Judge. Cases in which attorneys will appear may be heard by a county court judge pursuant to a standing order of the chief judge of any judicial district or of the presiding judge of the Denver county court.

(d) Sanctions. If the defendant appears at the trial without an attorney or fails to appear at the trial, and the court finds that the defendant's notice of representation by an attorney was made in bad faith, the court may award the plaintiff any costs, including reasonable attorney fees, occasioned thereby.

(e) Small Claims Court Rules to Apply. Any small claims court action in which an attorney appears shall be processed and tried pursuant to the statutes and court rules governing small claims court actions.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and readopted February 24, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective September 6, 2001; (b) and (e) amended and effective and (f) deleted and effective January 11, 2007.

ANNOTATION

It is within the discretion of the small claims court to continue an appearance date, the trial, or both, for good cause. When the court continues the appearance date, the court must also recognize a defendant's right to file a motion to transfer pursuant to section (b) so long as said motion is filed at least seven days prior to the continued appearance date. This interpretation of rule is particularly reasonable where small claims court continues a trial on its own motion to give the petitioner time to file a responsive pleading, pay the filing fee, and secure the assistance of a translator. Semental v. Denver County Court, 978 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1999).

Given the liberal interpretation afforded to procedural rules, district court abused its discretion by dismissing petitioner's motion for transfer as untimely filed under section (b) and appellate remedy would be inadequate. Accordingly, court makes the rule to show cause absolute and directs district court to grant petitioner's motion for transfer to county court. Semental v. Denver County Court, 978 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1999).

Rule 521. Special Procedures to Enforce Restrictive Covenants on Residential Property

(a) The small claims division shall dismiss without prejudice any claim to enforce a restrictive covenant if it affects the title to the real property.

(b) The owners of the residential property, subject of the action, shall be joined as codefendants to the action.

(c) Upon the filing of a claim under oath (see Forms appended to these rules) alleging that the defendant has violated any restrictive covenant regarding residential property, where the cost to comply with such restrictive covenant is not more than $7,500.00, the clerk shall issue the notice and summons to appear. The notice shall be served pursuant to C.R.C.P. 504.

(d) The general procedures applicable to the small claims court, C.R.C.P. 501 through 520, shall apply to actions to enforce a restrictive covenant on residential property, except as they are modified by this Rule.

(e) On the date set for appearance and trial pursuant to C.R.C.P. 512, the court shall proceed to determine the issues and render judgment and enter appropriate orders according to the law and the facts operative in the case.

(f) If the defendant fails to appear at the trial, the court may proceed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 514 and the provisions of this Rule, except that the court shall require the plaintiff to present sufficient evidence to support the plaintiff's claim.

(g) An order enforcing a restrictive covenant on residential property shall be reduced to writing by the magistrate and shall be personally served upon every party subject to the order (see Forms appended to these rules). If any party subject to the order is present in the courtroom at the time the order is made, the magistrate or judge shall at that time serve a copy of the order on such party and shall note such service on the order or file. Any party subject to the order who is not present shall be served as provided by C.R.C.P. 345, except that no fees or mileage need be tendered.

(h) If the plaintiff requests a temporary order directing the defendant to immediately comply with the restrictive covenant before the defendant has had an opportunity to be heard, the plaintiff shall attach to plaintiff's complaint a certified copy of the current deed showing ownership of the residential property, and a certified copy of the restrictive covenant. The request for temporary order shall be heard by the court, ex parte, at the earliest time the court is available. If the court is satisfied from the claim filed and the testimony of the plaintiff, that there is a substantial likelihood that the plaintiff will prevail at a trial on the merits of the claim and that irreparable damage will accrue to the plaintiff unless a temporary order is issued without notice, the court may issue a temporary order and citation to the defendant to appear and show cause, at a date and time certain, why the temporary order should not be made permanent, see Forms appended to these rules.

(1) A copy of the claim and notice with the attachments and with a copy of the temporary order and citation shall be served on the defendant as provided by C.R.C.P. 504, and the citation shall inform the defendant that if the defendant fails to appear in court in accordance with the terms of the citation, the restraining order may be made permanent.

(2) On the trial date or any date to which the matter has been continued, the court shall proceed as provided in subsections (e) and (g) of this Rule.

(i) A temporary order shall not be an appealable order. A permanent order shall be an appealable order.

(j) When it appears to the court by motion supported by affidavit that a violation of the temporary or permanent order issued pursuant to this Rule has occurred, the court shall immediately order the clerk to issue a citation to the defendant so charged to appear and show cause before a county judge at a time designated why the defendant should not be held in contempt for violation of the court's order. The citation shall direct the defendant to appear in the county court. Such contempt proceedings shall be governed by C.R.C.P. 407. The citation and a copy of the motion and affidavit shall be served upon the defendant in the manner required by C.R.C.P. 345. If such defendant fails to appear at the time designated in the citation, a warrant for the defendant's arrest may issue to the sheriff. The warrant shall fix the time for the production of the defendant in court. A bond set in a reasonable amount not to exceed $7,500.00 shall be stated on the face of the warrant.

PART 1. GENERAL

Rule 1. Scope of Rules - How Known and Cited

(a) Procedure Governed. These rules govern the procedure in the probate court for the city and county of Denver and district courts when sitting in probate. In case of conflict between these rules and the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure (C.R.C.P.), or between these rules and any local rules of probate procedure, these rules will control.

(b) How Known and Cited. These rules will be known and cited as the Colorado Rules of Probate Procedure, or C.R.P.P.

(c) In General. ''Colorado Probate Code'' means Articles 10 to 17 of Title 15 of the Colorado Revised Statutes (C.R.S.). Except as otherwise provided, terms used in these rules are defined in the applicable sections of Title 15, C.R.S., as amended.

When magistrates act in probate matters. The powers of magistrates and appellate review of their orders are governed, in the first instance, by the Colorado Rules for Magistrates. When magistrates are acting in probate matters, their powers are additionally controlled by these rules. Estate of Jordan v. Estate of Jordan, 899 P.2d 350 (Colo. App. 1995) (decided prior to 1996 amendment).

Rule 2. Definitions

[Reserved]

Rule 3. Registry of Court - Payments and Withdrawals

Payments into and withdrawals from the registry of the court must be made only upon order of court.

Source: Entire chapter amended and adopted June 28, 2018, effective September 1, 2018.

Rule 4. Delegation of Powers to Clerk and Deputy Clerk

(a) The court by written order may, in addition to duties and powers exercised as registrar in informal proceedings, delegate to the clerk or deputy clerk any one or more of the following duties, powers and authorities to be exercised under the supervision of the court:

(1) To appoint fiduciaries and to issue letters, if there is no written objection to the appointment or issuance on file;
(2) To set a date for hearing on any matter and to vacate any such setting;
(3) To issue dedimus to take testimony of a witness to a will;
(4) To approve the bond of a fiduciary;
(5) To appoint a guardian ad litem, subject to the provisions of law;
(6) To certify copies of documents filed in the court;
(7) To order a deposited will lodged in the records and to notify the named personal representative;
(8) To enter an order for service by mailing or by publication where such order is authorized by law or by the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure;
(9) To correct any clerical error in documents filed in the court;
(10) To appoint a special administrator in connection with the claim of a fiduciary;
(11) To order a will transferred to another jurisdiction pursuant to Rule 51 herein;
(12) To admit wills to formal probate and to determine heirship, if there is no objection to such admission or determination by any interested person;
(13) To enter estate closing orders in formal proceedings, if there is no objection to entry of such order by any interested person;
(14) To issue a citation to appear to be examined regarding assets alleged to be concealed, etc., pursuant to § 15-12-723, C.R.S.;
(15) To order an estate reopened for subsequent administration pursuant to § 15-12-1008, C.R.S.;
(16) To enter other orders upon the stipulation of all interested persons.

(b) All orders and proceedings by the clerk or deputy clerk under this rule must be made part of the permanent record.

(c) Any person in interest affected by an order entered or action taken under the authority of this rule may have the matter heard by the judge by filing a motion for such hearing within 14 days after the entering of the order or the taking of the action. Upon the filing of such a motion, the order or action in question must be vacated and the motion placed on the calendar of the court for as early a hearing as possible, and the matter must then be heard by the judge. The judge may, within the same 14 day period referred to above, vacate the order or action on the court's own motion. If a motion for hearing by the judge is not filed within the 14 day period, or the order or action is not vacated by the judge on the court's own motion within such period, the order or action of the clerk or deputy clerk will be final as of its date subject to applicable rights of appeal. The acts, records, orders, and judgments of the clerk or deputy clerk not vacated pursuant to the foregoing provision will have the same force, validity, and effect as if made by the judge.

Determination of the intent of a decedent is not a power that may be exercised under this rule. In re Estate of Hillebrandt, 979 P.2d 36 (Colo. App. 1999).

Rule 5. Rules of Court

(a) Repeal of Local Rules. All local probate rules are hereby repealed. Local rules may be enacted pursuant to C.R.C.P. 121(b).

(b) Procedure Not Otherwise Specified. If no procedure is specifically prescribed by rule or statute, the court may proceed in any lawful manner not inconsistent with these rules of probate procedure and the Colorado Probate Code and must look to the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure and to the applicable law if no rule of probate procedure exists.

PART 2. PLEADINGS

Rule 10. Judicial Department Forms

The Judicial Department Forms (JDF) approved by the Supreme Court should be used where applicable. Any pleading, document, or form filed in a probate proceeding should, insofar as possible, substantially follow the format and content of the approved JDF, if applicable.

Source: Entire chapter amended and adopted June 28, 2018, effective September 1, 2018.

Rule 11. Correction of Clerical Errors

(a) Documents with clerical errors filed with the court may be made the subject of a written request for correction by filing JDF 740 or a document that substantially follows the format and content of the approved JDF, if applicable, and may file a corrected document.

(b) A clerical error may include, but is not limited to:

(1) Errors in captions;

(2) Misspellings;

(3) Errors in dates, other than dates for settings, hearings, and limitations periods; or

(4) Transposition errors.

(c) A clerical error does not include the addition of an argument, allegation, or fact that has legal significance. If the court is not satisfied that a written request for correction is a clerical error, the request may be denied.

Rule 12. Petitions Must Indicate Persons Under Legal Disability

(a) Petition Requirements and Notice. If a person under legal disability has any interest in the subject matter of a petition which requires the issuance of notice, the petition must state:

(1) That an interested person is under legal disability as defined in subsection (b) below;

(2) The name, age, and residence of the person under legal disability; and
(3) The name of the guardian, conservator, or personal representative, if any.
(b) Legal Disability. A person under legal disability includes, but is not limited to, a person who is:
(1) Under 18 years of age; or
(2) Incompetent or incapacitated to such an extent that the individual is incapable of adequately representing his or her own interest.

PART 3. NOTICE

Rule 20. Process and Notice

The issuance, service, and proof of service of any process, notice, or order of court under the Colorado Probate Code will be governed by the provisions of the Colorado Probate Code and these rules. When no provision of the Colorado Probate Code or these rules is applicable, the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure will govern. Except when otherwise ordered by the court in any specific case or when service is by publication, if notice of a hearing on any petition or other pleading is required, the petition or other pleading, unless previously served, must be served with the notice. When served by publication, the notice must briefly state the nature of the relief requested. The petition or other pleading need not be attached to or filed with the proof of service, waiver of notice, or waiver of service.

Rule 21. Demands and Requests for Notice

(a) Demands for Notice. Demands for notice in decedents' estates are governed by § 15-12-204, C.R.S. After a demand for notice has been filed with the court, the clerk or registrar may thereafter take any authorized action, including, accepting and acting upon an application for informal appointment of a personal representative.
(b) Requests for Notice. Requests for Notice in Protective Proceedings are governed by § 15-14-116, C.R.S.

Source: Entire chapter amended and adopted June 28, 2018, effective September 1, 2018.

Rule 22. Constitutional Adequacy of Notice

When statutory notice is deemed by the court to be constitutionally inadequate, the court must provide on a case-by-case basis for such notice as will meet constitutional requirements.

Rule 23. Waiver of Notice

Unless otherwise approved by the court, a waiver of notice where authorized must identify the nature of the hearings or other matters to which the waiver of notice applies.

Source: Entire chapter amended and adopted June 28, 2018, effective September 1, 2018.

Rule 24. Determination of Matters by Hearing Without Appearance

(a) A hearing without appearance is a setting before or with the court for a ruling without the appearance of the parties.

(b) Unless otherwise required by statute, these rules, or court order, any appropriate matter may be set for a hearing without appearance.

(c) The procedure governing a hearing without appearance is as follows:

(1) Attendance at the hearing without appearance is not required or expected.

(2) Any interested person wishing to object to the requested action set forth in the court filing attached to the notice must file a specific written objection with the court at or before the hearing, and must serve a copy of the objection on the person requesting the court order and all persons listed on the notice of hearing without appearance. Form JDF 722, or a form that substantially conforms to JDF 722, may be used and will be sufficient.

(3) If no objection is filed, the court may take action on the matter without further notice or hearing.

(4) If any objection is filed, the objecting party must, within 14 days after filing the objection, contact the court to set the objection for an appearance hearing. If a hearing is scheduled, the objecting party must file a notice of hearing, and serve a copy on all persons listed on the notice of hearing without appearance. Failure to timely set the objection for an appearance hearing as required will result in action by the court as set forth in subsection (d).

(d) Upon the filing of an objection, the court may, in its discretion:

(1) Rule upon the written filings and briefs submitted;

(2) Require oral argument;

(3) Require an evidentiary hearing;

(4) Order the petitioner, movant, objector, and any other interested person who has entered an appearance to participate in alternative dispute resolution; or

(5) Enter any other orders the court deems appropriate.

(e) The Notice of a Hearing Without Appearance, together with copies of the court filing and proposed order must be served on all interested persons no less than 14 days prior to the setting of the hearing and must include a clear statement of this rule governing a hearing without appearance. Form JDF 712 or JDF 963, or a form that substantially conforms to such forms, may be used and will be sufficient.

COMMENTS

[1] Before the 2018 amendments, the rule was titled ''Non-Appearance Hearings,'' which engendered confusion for practitioners and self-represented parties as it referred to a hearing, which denotes an appearance, and then directed the party not to appear before the court. As a part of the 2018 amendments, the title of the rule changed to ''Determination of Matters by Hearing Without Appearance'' that more appropriately describes the actual practice; the rule is useful for matters required by statute to have a hearing when a party appearance is not required or mandated.

[2] The pre-2018 rule directed that matters which are ''routine and unopposed'' may be scheduled for hearing without appearance, however, there was no definition contained within the rule for what matters are considered to be ''routine and unopposed.'' With the 2018 amendments, language defining a hearing without appearance was added in subsection (a), and language generally describing what may be set on the docket in subsection (b). Motions for summary judgment and motions to dismiss are not appropriate for placement on a docket for hearing without appearance, and these motions should be filed using the procedure set forth in C.R.C.P. 121 § 1-15.

[3] The rule does not contain a requirement that the court rule on a motion on the date scheduled for hearing without an appearance. There is confusion among practitioners and self-represented parties regarding when the court is required to rule on a matter scheduled under this rule; the court may rule on these matters in due course after the date for hearing without appearance has passed. This rule allows for expediting many matters before the probate court while specifying that matters may be determined by the probate court without an appearance hearing, such as accommodating a real estate closing or other deadline such as a move-in date for a party.

[4] Matters denoted as requiring immediate action should not be scheduled for hearing without appearance.

[5] Concerns were raised regarding the shortened time frame in subsection (c)(4) for ruling on motions contained within the rule and whether the failure of a party or counsel to respond within these time frames would unfairly prejudice a party. Practitioners should bear in mind their ethical obligations to opposing parties and counsel when choosing to schedule a motion that may be opposed on the docket for hearing without appearance. Scheduling a motion on the docket for hearing without an appearance for determination on the merits where no responsive pleading has been filed with the court increases judicial economy by placing an opposing party or counsel on notice that a ruling may be entered unless a responsive pleading is filed with the court.

Rule 25. Notice of Formal Proceedings Terminating Estates

The notice of hearing on a petition under § 15-12-1001 or § 15-12-1002, C.R.S., must include statements:

(a) That interested persons have the responsibility to protect their own rights and interests within the time and in the manner provided by the Colorado Probate Code, including the appropriateness of claims paid, the compensation of personal representatives, attorneys, and others, and the distribution of estate assets, because the court will not review or adjudicate these or other matters unless specifically requested to do so by an interested person; and

(b) That if any interested person desires to object to any matter such person must file specific written objections at or before the hearing and must serve the personal representative with a copy pursuant to C.R.C.P. 5.

PART 4. FIDUCIARIES

Rule 30. Change of Contact Information

(a) Every fiduciary must promptly notify the court of any change to the name, physical or mailing address, e-mail address, or telephone number of:

(1) The fiduciary; or

(2) The ward or protected person.

(b) Notice to the court will be accomplished by filing the appropriate JDF or a form that substantially conforms to the JDF.

Rule 31. Accountings and Reports

(a) A fiduciary accounting or report must contain sufficient information to put interested persons on notice as to all significant transactions affecting administration during the accounting period.

(b) An accounting or report prepared by a personal representative, conservator, guardian, trustee, or other fiduciary must show with reasonable detail:

(1) The receipts and disbursements for the period covered by the accounting or report;

(2) The assets remaining at the end of the period; and

(3) All other transactions affecting administration during the accounting or report period.

(c) Accountings and reports that substantially conform to JDF 942 for decedents' estates, JDF 885 for conservatorships, JDF 834 for minor guardianships, and JDF 850 for adult guardianships will be considered acceptable as to both content and format for purposes of this rule. All other fiduciary accountings and reports must comply with the requirements of subsection (b).

(d) The court may require the fiduciary to produce supporting evidence for any and all transactions.

Rule 32. Appointment of Nonresident - Power of Attorney

Any person, resident or nonresident of this state, who is qualified to act under the Colorado Probate Code may be appointed as a fiduciary. When appointment is made of a nonresident, the person appointed must file an irrevocable power of attorney designating the clerk of the court and the clerk's successors in office, as the person upon whom all notices and process issued by a court or tribunal in the state of Colorado may be served, with like effect as personal service on such fiduciary, in relation to any suit, matter, cause, hearing, or thing, affecting or pertaining to the proceeding in regard to which the fiduciary was appointed. The power of attorney required by the provisions of this rule must set forth the address of the nonresident fiduciary. The clerk must promptly forward, by certified, registered, or ordinary first-class mail any notice or process served upon him or her, to the fiduciary at the address last provided in writing to the clerk. The clerk must file a certificate of service. Such service will be deemed complete 14 days after mailing. The clerk may require the person issuing or serving such notice or process to furnish sufficient copies, and the person desiring service must advance the costs and mailing expenses of the clerk.

PART 5. CONTESTED PROCEEDINGS

Rule 40. Discovery

(a) This rule establishes the provisions and structure for discovery in all proceedings seeking relief under Title 15, C.R.S. Nothing in this rule will alter the court's authority and ability to direct proportional limitations on discovery or to impose a case management structure or enter other discovery orders. Upon appropriate motion or sua sponte, the court may apply the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure in whole or in part, may fashion discovery rules applicable to specific proceedings, and may apply different discovery rules to different parts of the proceeding.

(b) Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the parties may engage in the discovery provided by C.R.C.P. 27 through 36. Any discovery conducted in Title 15 proceedings prior to the issuance of a case management or other discovery order will be subject to C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(A), 26(a)(2)(B), 26(a)(4) and (5), and 26(b) through (g). However, due to the unique, expedited and often exigent circumstances in which probate proceedings take place, C.R.C.P. 16, 16.1, 16.2, and 26(a)(1) do not apply to probate proceedings unless ordered by the court or stipulated to by the parties.

(c) C.R.C.P. 37, 45, and 121 § 1-12 are applicable to proceedings under Title 15.

(d) Notwithstanding subsections (a) through (c) of this rule, subpoenas and discovery directed to a respondent in proceedings under Title 15, Article 14, Part 3, must not be permitted without leave of court, or until a petition for appointment of a guardian has been granted under § 15-14-311, C.R.S.

Rule 41. Jury Trial - Demand and Waiver

If a jury trial is permitted by law, any jury demand must be filed with the court, and the requisite fee paid, before the matter is first set for trial. The demanding party must pay the requisite jury fee upon the filing of the demand. Failure of a party to file and serve a demand for jury trial and pay the requisite fee as provided in this rule will constitute a waiver of trial by jury as provided in C.R.C.P. 38(e).

Rule 42. Objections to Accounting, Final Settlement, Distribution or Discharge

(a) If any interested person desires to object to any accounting, the final settlement or distribution of an estate, the discharge of a fiduciary, or any other matter, the interested person must file specific written objections at or before the hearing thereon, and shall serve all interested persons with copies of the objections.

(b) If the matter is uncontested and set for a hearing without appearance, any interested person wishing to object must file specific written objections with the court at or before the hearing, and must serve all interested persons with copies of the specific written objections. An objector must set an appearance hearing in accordance with Rule 24.

(c) If the matter is set for an appearance hearing, the objector must file specific written objections 14 or more days before the scheduled hearing. If the objector fails to provide copies of the specific written objections within the required time frame, the petitioner is entitled to a continuance of the hearing.

PART 6. DECEDENT'S ESTATES

Rule 50. Wills - Deposit for Safekeeping and Withdrawals

A will of a living person tendered to the court for safekeeping in accordance with § 15-11-515, C.R.S., must be placed in a ''Deposited Will File'' and a certificate of deposit issued. In the testator's lifetime, the deposited will may be withdrawn only in strict accordance with § 15-11-515, C.R.S. After the testator's death, a deposited will must be transferred to the ''Lodged Will File.''

Rule 51. Transfer of Lodged Wills

If a petition under § 15-11-516, C.R.S., to transfer a will is filed and if the requested transfer is to a court within this state, no notice need be given; if the requested transfer is to a court outside this state, notice must be given to the person nominated as personal representative and such other persons as the court may direct. No filing fee will be charged for this petition, but the petitioner must pay any other costs of transferring the original will to the proper court.

Rule 53. Heirs and Devisees - Unknown, Missing or Nonexistent - Notice to Attorney General

In a decedent's estate, whenever it appears that there is an unknown heir or devisee, or that the address of any heir or devisee is unknown, or that there is no person qualified to receive a devise or distributive share from the estate, the personal representative must promptly notify the attorney general. Thereafter, the attorney general must be given the same information and notice required to be given to persons qualified to receive a devise or distributive share. When making any payment to the state treasurer of any devise or distributive share, the personal representative must include a copy of the court order obtained under § 15-12-914, C.R.S.

Rule 54. Supervised Administration - Scope of Supervision - Inventory and Accounting

(a) In considering the scope of supervised administration under § 15-12-501, C.R.S., the court must order such supervision as deemed necessary, after considering the reasons for the request.

(b) If supervised administration is ordered, the personal representative must file with the court and serve interested persons:

(1) An inventory;

(2) Annual interim accountings;

(3) A final accounting; and

(4) Other documentation as ordered by the court.

COMMENTS

Note that Colorado Bar Association Real Estate Title Standard 11.1.7 discusses certain requirements for the vesting of merchantable title in a distributee. A court order is necessary to vest merchantable title in a distributee, free from the rights of all persons interested in the estate to recover the property in case of an improper distribution. This rule requires a notice and hearing procedure as a condition of issuance of such order. A certified copy of the court's order should be recorded with the deed of distribution. Under the title standard, an order is not required to vest merchantable title in a purchaser for value from or a lender to such distributee. See § 38-35-109, C.R.S.

Rule 56. Foreign Personal Representatives

(a) After the death of a nonresident decedent, copies of the documents evidencing appointment of a domiciliary foreign personal representative may be filed as provided in § 15-13-204, C.R.S. Such documents must have been certified, exemplified or authenticated by the appointing foreign court not more than 60 days prior to filing with a Colorado court, and must include copies of all of the following that may have been issued by the foreign court:

(1) The order appointing the domiciliary foreign personal representative, and

(2) The letters or other documents evidencing or affecting the domiciliary foreign personal representative's authority to act.

(b) Upon filing such documents and a sworn statement by the domiciliary foreign personal representative stating that no administration, or application or petition for administration, is pending in Colorado, the court must issue a Certificate of Ancillary Filing, attesting that the clerk has in his or her possession the documents referenced in subsection (a) of this rule.

Rule 60. Physicians' Letters or Professional Evaluation

Any physician's letter or professional evaluation utilized as the evidentiary basis to support a petition for the appointment of a guardian, conservator or other protective order under Article 14 of the Colorado Probate Code, unless otherwise directed by the court, should contain:

(a) A description of the nature, type, and extent of the respondent's specific cognitive and functional limitations, if any;

(b) An evaluation of the respondent's mental and physical condition and, if appropriate, educational potential, adaptive behavior, and social skills;

(c) A prognosis for improvement and recommendation as to the appropriate treatment or rehabilitation plan; and

(d) The date of any assessment or examination upon which the report is based.

Rule 62. Court Approval of Settlement of Claims of Persons Under Disability

(a) This rule sets forth procedures by which a court considers requests for approval of the proposed settlement of claims on behalf of a minor or an adult in need of protection pursuant to § 15-14-401, et seq., C.R.S., (''respondent''). In connection with a proceeding brought under this rule, the court must:

(1) Consider the reasonableness of the proposed settlement and enter appropriate orders as the court finds will serve the best interest of the respondent;

(2) Ensure that the adult respondent, a minor respondent's parent, an adult respondent's or minor respondent's legal guardian, conservator, other fiduciary, next friend, guardian ad litem, and other interested persons as the court deems proper, have been advised of the finality of the proposed settlement;

(3) Adjudicate the allowance or disallowance, in whole or in part, of any outstanding liens and claims against settlement funds, including attorney fees; and

(4) Make protective arrangements for the conservation and use of the net settlement funds, in the best interest of the respondent, taking into account the nature and scope of the proposed settlement, the anticipated duration and nature of the respondent's disability, the cost of any future medical treatment and care required to treat respondent's disability, and any other relevant factors, pursuant to § 15-14-101, et seq., C.R.S.

(b) Venue for a petition brought under this rule must be in accordance with § 15-14-108(3), C.R.S.

(c) A petition for approval of a proposed settlement of a claim on behalf of the respondent may be filed by an adult respondent, a fiduciary for a respondent, an interested person as defined in § 15-10-201(27), C.R.S., a next friend, or guardian ad litem. The petition must be presented in accordance with the procedures set forth in this rule.

(d) A petition for approval of settlement must include the following information:

(1) Facts.

A. The respondent's name and address;

B. The respondent's date of birth;

C. If the respondent is a minor, the name and contact information of each legal guardian. If the identity or contact information of any legal guardian is unknown, or if any parental rights have been terminated, the petition must so state;

D. The name and contact information of the respondent's spouse, partner in a civil union, or if the respondent has none, an adult with whom the respondent has resided for more than six months within one year before the filing of the petition;

E. The name and contact information of any guardian, conservator, custodian, trustee, agent under a power of attorney, or any other court appointed fiduciary for the respondent; and

F. The date and a brief description of the event or transaction giving rise to the claim.

(2) Claims and Liabilities.

A. The contact information of each party against whom the respondent may have a claim;

B. The basis for each of the respondent's claims;

C. The defenses and counterclaims if any, to the respondent's claims; and

D. The name and contact information of each insurance company involved in the claim, the type of policy, the policy limits, and the identity of the insured.

(3) Damages.

A. A description of the respondent's injuries;

B. The amount of any time missed by the respondent from school or employment and a summary of any lost income resulting from the respondent's injuries;

C. A summary of any damage to respondent's property;

D. A summary of any expenses incurred for medical or other care provider services as a result of the respondent's injuries; and

E. The identification of any person, organization, institution, or state or federal agency that paid any of the respondent's expenses and a summary of any expenses that have been or will be paid by each particular source.

(4) Medical Status.

A. A description of the respondent's current condition including but not limited to the nature and extent of any disability, disfigurement, or physical or psychological impairments and any current treatments and therapies; and

B. An explanation of the respondent's prognosis and any anticipated treatments and therapies.

(5) Status of Claims.

A. For this claim and any other related claim, the status of the claim and if any civil action has been filed, the court, case number, and parties; and

B. For this claim and any other related claim, identify the amount of the claim and contact information of any party having a subrogation right including any state or federal agency paying or planning to pay benefits to or for the respondent. A list of all subrogation claims and liens against the settlement proceeds must be included as well as a summary of efforts to negotiate them.

(6) Proposed Settlement and Proposed Disposition of Settlement Proceeds.

A. The name and contact information of any party or entity making and receiving payment under the proposed settlement;

B. The proposed settlement amount, payment terms, and proposed disposition, including any restrictions on the accessibility of the funds and whether any proceeds will be deposited into a restricted account;

C. The details of any structured settlement, annuity, insurance policy or trust instrument, including the terms, present value, discount rate, if applicable, payment structure and the identity of the trustee or entity administering such arrangements;

D. The legal fees and costs being requested to be paid from the settlement proceeds; and

E. Whether there is a need for continuing court supervision, the appointment of a fiduciary or the continuation of an existing fiduciary appointment. The court may appoint a conservator, trustee, or other fiduciary to manage the settlement proceeds or make other protective arrangements in the best interest of the respondent.

(7) Exhibits.

A. The petition must list each exhibit filed with the petition.

B. The following exhibits must be attached to the petition:

(i) A written statement by the respondent's physician or other health care provider, if any. The statement must set forth the information required by subsection (d)(4) of this rule and comply with Rule 60 unless otherwise ordered by the court;

(ii) Relevant legal fee agreements, statement of costs and billing records and billing summary; and

(iii) Any proposed settlement agreements and proposed releases.

C. The court may continue, vacate, or place conditions on approval of the proposed settlement in response to petitioner's failure to include such exhibits.

(e) Notice of a hearing and a copy of the petition must be given in accordance with § 15-14-404(1) and (2), C.R.S., and Rule 20, unless otherwise ordered by the court.

(f) An appearance hearing is required for petitions brought under this rule.

(g) The petitioner, the respondent, and any nominated fiduciary must attend the hearing, unless excused by the court for good cause.

(h) The court may appoint a guardian ad litem, attorney, or other professional to investigate and report to the court, or represent the respondent. The court may order the payment of fees and costs for such guardian ad litem, attorney, or other professional to be paid from the settlement or other sources as may be deemed appropriate by the court.

Rule 63. Foreign Conservators

(a) After the appointment of a conservator for a person who is not a resident of this state, copies of documents evidencing the appointment of such foreign conservator may be filed as provided in § 15-14-433, C.R.S. Such documents must have been certified, exemplified or authenticated by the appointing foreign court not more than 60 days prior to filing with a Colorado court, and must include copies of all of the following:

(1) The order appointing the foreign conservator;

(2) The letters or other documents evidencing or affecting the foreign conservator's authority to act; and

(3) Any bond of foreign conservator.

(b) Upon filing such documents and a sworn statement by the foreign conservator stating that a conservator has not been appointed in this state and that no petition in a protective proceeding is pending in this state concerning the person for whom the foreign conservator was appointed, the court must issue a Certificate of Ancillary Filing, substantially conforming to JDF 892.

PART ONE — APPLICABILITY

Rule 1.

These rules govern proceedings brought in the juvenile court under Title 19, 8B C.R.S. (1987 Supp.), also hereinafter referred to as the Children's Code. All statutory references herein are to the Children's Code as amended. Proceedings are civil in nature and where not governed by these rules or the procedures set forth in Title 19, 8B C.R.S. (1987 Supp.), shall be conducted according to the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure. Proceedings in delinquency shall be conducted in accordance with the Colorado Rules of Criminal Procedure, except as otherwise provided by statute or by these rules.

Juvenile who is detained is entitled to a preliminary hearing by constitutional mandate. The right to a preliminary hearing in all other instances is based upon interpretation of the Colorado children's code and the Colorado rules of juvenile procedure. J.T. v. O'Rourke ex rel. Tenth Judicial Dist., 651 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1982).

When juvenile entitled to preliminary hearing. Juveniles charged in delinquency proceedings with crimes (Felonies and class 1 misdemeanors) subject to Crim. P. 5 and 7 are entitled to a preliminary hearing. Juveniles held on lesser charges are not granted a right to a preliminary hearing by statute or by rule. J.T. v. O'Rourke ex rel. Tenth Judicial Dist., 651 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1982).

Applicability of rules of civil procedure. The Rules of Juvenile Procedure and the applicable statutes are silent as to the effect of a direction from the court or commissioner to counsel to prepare an order; and the Rules of Civil Procedure, therefore, are applicable. PART TWO — GENERAL PROVISIONS

Rule 2. Purpose and Construction

These rules are intended to provide for the just determination of juvenile proceedings. They shall be construed to secure simplicity in procedure and fairness in administration.

Source: Entire chapter repealed and reenacted June 16, 1988, effective January 1, 1989.

ANNOTATION

Colorado rules of juvenile procedure reflect supreme court's judgment concerning the manner in which juvenile courts should proceed in applying the Colorado children's code. J.T. v. O'Rourke ex rel. Tenth Judicial Dist., 651 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1982).

Juvenile defendants best served by informal judicial setting. The juvenile system is premised on the concept that a more informal, simple, and speedy judicial setting will best serve the needs and welfare of juvenile defendants. J.T. v. O'Rourke ex rel. Tenth Judicial Dist., 651 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1982).

Applied in S.A.S. v. District Court, 623 P.2d 58 (Colo. 1981).

Rule 2.1. Attorney of Record

(a) An attorney shall be deemed of record when the attorney appears personally before the court, files a written entry of appearance, or has been appointed by the court.

(b) The clerk shall notify an attorney appointed by the court. An order of appointment shall appear in the file.

Rule 2.2. Summons — Content and Service

(a) Juvenile Delinquency Proceedings.

(1) The summons served in juvenile delinquency proceedings shall contain the notifications required by §19-2-514, C.R.S. The summons and petition shall be served upon the juvenile in the manner provided in §19-2-514, C.R.S.

(2) When the court has acquired jurisdiction over the parties as provided in the Children's Code or pursuant to the Colorado Rules of Juvenile Procedure, subsequent pleadings and notice may be served by regular mail.

(3) If a juvenile is issued a promise to appear pursuant to §19-2-507(5), C.R.S., the promise to appear shall contain the notifications required by §19-2-507(5), C.R.S.

(b) Dependency and Neglect Proceedings.

(1) The summons served in dependency and neglect proceedings shall contain the notifications required by §19-3-503, C.R.S. The summons and petition shall be served upon respondent(s) in the manner provided in §19-3-503(7) and (8), C.R.S.

(2) When the court has acquired jurisdiction over the parties as provided in the Children's Code or pursuant to the Colorado Rules of Juvenile Procedure, subsequent pleadings and notice may be served by regular mail.

(c) Relinquishment Proceedings.

(1) The summons served in relinquishment proceedings shall contain the notifications required by §19-5-105(5), C.R.S.

(2) The summons and petition shall be served upon the non-relinquishing parent as follows:

A. As ordered by the court; or

B. In the same manner as a summons in a civil action; or

C. By mailing it to the respondent ('s/s') last known address, not less than 14 days prior to the time the respondent(s) is/are required to appear, by registered mail return receipt requested or certified mail return receipt requested. Service by mail shall be complete upon return of the receipt signed by the respondent(s) or signed on behalf of the respondent(s) by one authorized by law.

(3) When the person to be served cannot be found after due diligence, service may be by a single publication pursuant to C.R.C.P. 4(g).

(4) When the court has acquired jurisdiction over the parties as provided in the Children's Code or pursuant to the Colorado Rules of Juvenile Procedure, subsequent pleadings and notice may be served by regular mail.

(d) Truancy Proceedings.

(1) The summons served in truancy proceedings shall comply with the provisions of C.R.C.P. 4(c). If the summons is combined with the notice required by §22-33-108(5)(c), C.R.S., it shall also comply with the provisions of that section. In any jurisdiction in which juvenile detention may be used as a sanction after a finding of a violation of a valid court order, the summons shall inform the juvenile served of his or her right to a hearing and to due process as guaranteed by the United States Constitution prior to the entry of a valid court order.

(2) The summons and petition shall be served upon the respondent(s) as required pursuant to C.R.C.P. 4.

(3) When the person to be served cannot be found after due diligence, service may be by a single publication pursuant to C.R.C.P. 4(g).

(4) When the court has acquired jurisdiction over the parties as provided in the Children's Code or pursuant to the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure, subsequent pleadings and notice may be served by regular mail.

(e) Uniform Parentage Act Proceedings.

(1) The petition and summons served in Uniform Parentage Act proceedings shall comply with all requirements of Title 19, Article 4 of the Colorado Revised Statutes.

(2) The petition and summons, filed by one party, shall be personally served upon all other parties in accordance with §19-4-105.5, C.R.S., or §19-4-109(2), C.R.S., or the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

(3) When the person to be served cannot be found after due diligence, service may be by a single publication pursuant to C.R.C.P. 4(g). Affidavits in support of motions for service by publication shall include a detailed statement of the specific efforts made to locate an absent parent.

(4) The summons issued upon commencement of a proceeding under Article 4 shall include the specified advisements and notice requirements of §19-4-105.5(5), C.R.S.

(5) If the child support enforcement unit is initiating a proceeding under the Uniform Parentage Act, a delegate shall serve the petition and notice of financial responsibility in the manner identified in §26-13.5-104, C.R.S.

(f) Adoption Proceedings.

(1) In adoption proceedings where either parent's parental rights have not been terminated or relinquished, that parent must be personally served with a copy of the petition for adoption.

(2) When the person to be served cannot be found after due diligence, service may be by a single publication pursuant to C.R.C.P. 4(g). Affidavits in support of motions for service by publication shall include a detailed statement of the specific efforts made to locate an absent parent.

(3) If the motion for service through publication is granted, the court shall order service by one publication of the notice in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the hearing is to be held. The hearing shall not be held sooner than 35 days after service of the notice is complete.

(4) If the subject child in the adoption proceeding is an enrolled member of a federally recognized American Indian Nation, the petition for adoption must be sent to the parent or Indian custodian of the Indian child and to the Indian child's tribe by registered mail, return receipt requested, pursuant to §19-1-126, C.R.S., and §19-5-208, C.R.S., and proof shall be filed with the court. Postal receipts, or copies thereof, shall be attached to the petition for adoption when it is filed with the court or filed within 10 days after the filing of the petition, as specified in §19-1-126(1)(c), C.R.S.

(5) Service of petition and notice requirements do not apply to validation of a foreign adoption decree proceedings.

(6) A petition for adult adoption shall be filed in accordance with §19-5-208, C.R.S. The petition and summons shall be served on the identified adult adoptee by the petitioner.

(g) Support Proceedings under the Children's Code.

(1) Upon filing of the petition for support, the clerk of court, petitioner, or child support enforcement unit shall issue a summons stating the hearing date and the substance of the petition. A copy of the petition may be attached to the summons in lieu of stating the substance of the petition in the summons.

(2) Service of the summons shall be by personal service pursuant to C.R.C.P. 4(e). If the obligor is a nonresident of this state, the summons and petition may be served by sending the copies by certified mail with proof of actual receipt by the individual.

(3) The hearing to establish support shall occur at least 10 days after service is completed, or any later date the court orders.

(h) Administrative Procedure for Establishing Child Support by the Child Support Enforcement Unit.

(1) The child support enforcement unit shall issue a notice of financial responsibility to an obligor who owes child support.

(2) The child support enforcement unit shall serve the notice of financial responsibility on the obligor not less than 10 days prior to the date stated in the notice for the negotiation conference. Service can be accomplished in accordance with the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure, by an employee appointed by the child support enforcement unit to serve process, or by certified mail, return receipt requested, signed by the obligor only. The receipt will be prima facie evidence of service.

(3) If process is served through the administrative process, there will be no additional service necessary if the case is referred to court for further review.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

Under Rule 2.2, a single publication is sufficient. There is no need for four weeks of publication.

Rule 2.3. Emergency Orders

(a) On the basis of a report that a child's or juvenile's welfare or safety may be endangered, and if the court believes action is reasonably necessary, the court may issue an ex parte order.

(b) Where the need for emergency orders arises, and the court is not in regular session, the judge or magistrate may issue such orders orally, by facsimile, or by electronic filing. Such orders shall have the same force and effect. Oral orders shall be followed promptly by a written order entered on the first regular court day thereafter.

(c) Any time when a child or juvenile is subject to an emergency order of court, as herein provided, and the child or juvenile requires medical or hospital care, reasonable effort shall be made to notify the parent(s), guardian, or other legal custodian for the purpose of gaining consent for such care; provided, however, that if such consent cannot be secured and the child's or juvenile's welfare or safety so requires, the court may authorize needed medical or hospital care.

ANNOTATION

Emergency custody order constitutional. An ex parte emergency order placing children under protective custody, pursuant to this rule, does not violate the parent's right to due process. People v. Coyle, 654 P.2d 815 (Colo. 1982) (decided under rule 15 as it existed prior to the 1988 repeal and reenactment of the rules of juvenile procedures).

Rule 2.4. Limitation on Authority of Juvenile Magistrates

No magistrate shall have the power to decide whether a state constitutional provision, statute, municipal charter provision, or ordinance is constitutional either on its face or as applied. Questions pertaining to the constitutionality of a state constitutional provision, statute, municipal charter provision, or ordinance may, however, be raised for the first time on review of the magistrate's order or judgment.

PART THREE — DELINQUENCY

Rule 3. Advisement

(a) At the juvenile's first appearance after the detention hearing, or at first appearance on summons, the juvenile and parent, guardian, or other legal custodian shall be fully advised by the court, and the court shall make certain that they understand the following:

(1) The nature of the allegations contained in the petition;

(2) The juvenile's continuing right to counsel and if the juvenile, parent, guardian, or other legal custodian is indigent, that the juvenile may be assigned counsel, as provided by law;

(3) The juvenile need make no statement, and that any statement made may be used against the juvenile;

(4) The juvenile's right to a preliminary hearing, as provided by §19-2-705, C.R.S.;

(5) The juvenile's right to a jury trial, as provided by §19-2-107, C.R.S.;

(6) That any plea of guilty by the juvenile must be voluntary and not the result of undue influence or coercion on the part of anyone;

(7) The sentencing alternatives available to the court if the juvenile pleads guilty or is found guilty;

(8) The juvenile's right to bail as limited by §19-2-508, C.R.S., and §19-2-509, C.R.S., and the amount of bail, if any, that has been set by the court;

(9) That the juvenile may be subject to transfer to the criminal division of the district court to be tried as an adult, as provided by §19-2-518, C.R.S.; and

(b) If the juvenile pleads guilty to the allegations in the petition, the court shall not accept the plea without first determining that the juvenile is advised of all the matters set forth in (a) of this Rule and also determines that:

(1) The juvenile understands the nature of the delinquent act alleged, the elements of the offense to which the juvenile is pleading guilty, and the effect of the juvenile's plea;

(2) The plea of guilty is voluntary on the juvenile's part and is not the result of undue influence or coercion on the part of anyone;

(3) The juvenile understands and waives his or her right to trial, including the right to a jury trial, if authorized by statute, on all issues;

(4) The juvenile understands the possible sentencing alternatives available to the court;

(5) The juvenile understands that the court will not be bound by representations made to the juvenile by anyone concerning the sentence to be imposed; and

(6) There is a factual basis for the plea of guilty. If the plea is entered as a result of plea agreement, the court shall satisfy itself that the juvenile understands the basis for the plea agreement, and the juvenile may then waive the establishment of a factual basis for the particular charge to which the juvenile is pleading guilty.

(c) If the juvenile pleads not guilty to the allegations in the petition, the court shall set the matter for an adjudicatory trial.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''Representing the Mentally Retarded or Disabled Parent in a Colorado Dependent or Neglected Child Action'', see 11 Colo. Law. 693 (1982). For article, ''The Nuts and Bolts of Juvenile Delinquency'', see 31 Colo. Law. 19 (October 2002).

This rule is the substantial equivalent of Rule 11, Crim. P., so that the court may analogize to it and the cases dealing with a guilty plea withdrawal. People in Interest of J.F.C., 660 P.2d 7 (Colo. App. 1982).

And codifies juvenile's constitutional rights. This rule is the codification of the standards guaranteeing a juvenile's constitutional rights. People in Interest of J.F.C., 660 P.2d 7 (Colo. App. 1982).

Test to determine valid waiver of rights. In determining whether there has been a valid waiver of a juvenile's rights, the factual circumstances of each case must be examined; that is, the ''totality of circumstances'' test is applied. People v. Cunningham, 678 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1983).

Presence of parent. The parent is there to assure that the juvenile is provided with parental guidance and moral support, as well as some assurance that any waiver of the juvenile's rights is made knowingly and intelligently. People in Interest of J.F.C., 660 P.2d 7 (Colo. App. 1982).

Of critical significance to any knowing and intelligent waiver of a constitutional right by a juvenile is the presence of the parent. People in Interest of J.F.C., 660 P.2d 7 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Cunningham, 678 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1983).

The Colorado rules of juvenile procedure do not require that a child must be accompanied by a parent, guardian, or legal custodian at all proceedings, even though the juvenile's first court appearance requires that a parent, guardian, or legal custodian be fully advised of the child's rights. Therefore, juvenile's waiver of rights during trial, adjudication of delinquency, or sentencing is not necessarily invalid. People in Interest of S.A.R., 860 P.2d 573 (Colo. App. 1993).

Failure to comply with rule voids disposition. Where the referee in two prior delinquency hearings failed to comply with the mandates of this rule, those prior dispositions are constitutionally void, and cannot be used as to basis for enhanced punishment proceedings under § 19-3-113.1. People v. M.A.W., 651 P.2d 433 (Colo. App. 1982).

Court not required to warn of possible future consequences of guilty plea. In the absence of a specific requirement by statute or rule, a juvenile court is not required to advise the juvenile of consequences of a guilty plea which would result from the future commission of felonies. People v. District Court, 191 Colo. 298, 552 P.2d 297 (1976).

Child does not have an absolute constitutional or statutory right to bail pending adjudication of the charges filed against him in juvenile court. L.O.W. v. District Court, 623 P.2d 1253 (Colo. 1981).

Applicability of Rule 46, C.R. Crim. P., to juvenile proceedings. Rule 46, C.R. Crim. P., does not apply to admission to bail in juvenile proceedings to the extent it is inconsistent with this rule and the children's code. L.O.W. v. District Court, 623 P.2d 1253 (Colo. 1981).

Presumption of release pending dispositional hearing. A trial court may detain a juvenile without bail only after giving due weight to a presumption that a juvenile should be released pending a dispositional hearing, except in narrowly defined circumstances where the state establishes that detention is necessary to protect the child from imminent harm or to protect others in the community from serious bodily harm which the child is likely to inflict. L.O.W. v. District Court, 623 P.2d 1253 (Colo. 1981).

Where juvenile's natural parents' parental rights have been terminated and the juvenile has been placed in the custody of the state department of social services, the department could act properly on juvenile's behalf as his legal custodian. People v. Cunningham, 678 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1983).

Applied in People in Interest of M.M., 41 Colo. App. 44, 582 P.2d 692 (1978); People v. Alward, 654 P.2d 327 (Colo. App. 1982); People in Interest of C.R.B., 662 P.2d 198 (Colo. App. 1983).

Rule 3.1. Petition Initiation, Form and Content, Time Limit for Filing Petition

(a) A petition concerning a juvenile who is alleged to be delinquent shall be initiated in accordance with Section 19-2-512 and 513, C.R.S.

(b) If the petition is not filed within seventy-two (72) hours (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and official court holidays) after a juvenile is taken into custody and not released to a parent, guardian or legal custodian, said juvenile shall be released upon order of court; provided that upon application to the court by the district attorney or any interested party and for good cause shown, the above time period may, in the discretion of the court, be extended for a reasonable period of time to be fixed by said court.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since rule 3.1 is similar to rule 7 as it existed prior to the 1988 repeal and reenactment of the rules of juvenile procedure, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this rule.

Petition is similar to information in criminal law. People in Interest of R.G., 630 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1981).

Sufficiency of petition in delinquency. A petition in delinquency is sufficient if it advises the juvenile of the nature and cause of the accusation against him, so that he can adequately defend himself. People in Interest of R.G., 630 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1981).

Petition need not specify lesser included offenses. A petition in delinquency need not specify lesser included offenses which may have been committed in commission of the described act. People in Interest of R.G., 630 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1981).

And incorrect citation of statutory reference in petition is not grounds for reversal, absent substantial prejudice. People in Interest of R.G., 630 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1981).

Rule 3.2. Responsive Pleadings and Motions

(a) No written responsive pleadings are required. Jurisdictional matters of age and residence of the juvenile shall be deemed admitted unless specifically denied.

(b) Any defense or objection which is capable of determination without trial of the general issues may be raised by motion.

(c) Defenses and objections based on defects in the institution of the action or in the petition, other than it fails to show jurisdiction in the court, shall be raised only by motion filed prior to the entry of a plea of guilty or not guilty. Failure thus to present any such defense or objection constitutes a waiver, but the court for good cause shown may grant relief from the waiver. Lack of jurisdiction shall be noticed by the court at any time during the proceedings.

(d) All motions shall be in writing and signed by the moving party or his counsel, except those made orally by leave of court.

(e) A request for waiver of jurisdiction to the district court for criminal proceedings shall be in writing and filed within 28 days of the initial advisement. Upon application to the court by the district attorney, and for good cause shown, a request may, in the discretion of the court, be filed at any time prior to the adjudicatory trial.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since rule 3.2 is similar to rule 8 as it existed prior to the 1988 repeal and reenactment of the rules of juvenile procedures relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Must prove juvenile's age even if not specifically denied in pleadings. Where the petition in delinquency states the respondent's age and the responsive pleading does not deny the asserted age, although section 19-3-106 and this rule specify that ''jurisdictional matters of the age and residence of the child shall be deemed admitted unless specifically denied'', the juvenile-defendant's age is not thereby admitted, and it is necessary to present evidence specifically on that issue. People in Interest of M.M., 41 Colo. App. 44, 582 P.2d 692 (1978).

Section not superseded by statutory procedure for waiving jurisdiction. This section is not superseded by the special statutory procedure provided in section 19-3-106(4)(b), C.R.S. 1973 (1978 Repl. Vol. 8), for waiving jurisdiction of the juvenile court. People v. District Court, 199 Colo. 197, 606 P.2d 450 (1980).

Denial of request for waiver of jurisdiction to district court upheld. In the absence of good cause to support the late filing by the people of a request for waiver of jurisdiction to the district court for criminal proceedings, the court is within its authority in denying the motion. People v. District Court, 199 Colo. 197, 606 P.2d 450 (1980).

Rule 3.5. Jury Trial

(a) In any action in delinquency in which a juvenile is alleged to be an aggravated juvenile offender, as described in section 19-2-516, C.R.S. or is alleged to have committed an act that would constitute a crime of violence, as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., if committed by an adult, the juvenile or the district attorney may demand a trial by a jury of not more than six persons except as provided in section 19-2-601(3)(a), C.R.S., or the court, on its own motion, may order a jury trial, with the exception that a juvenile is not entitled to a trial by jury when the petition alleges a delinquent act which is a misdemeanor, a petty offense, a violation of a municipal or county ordinance, or a violation of a court order. When requesting a jury trial pursuant to this rule, a juvenile is deemed to have waived the right to have an adjudicatory trial within 60 days and is subject instead to an adjudicatory trial within 6 months. Unless a jury is demanded pursuant to subsection (1) of section 19-2-107, C.R.S., it shall be deemed waived.

(b) Examination, selection, and challenges for jurors shall be as provided by C.R.C.P. 47, except that the grounds for challenge for cause shall be as provided by Crim. P. 24.

Annotator's note. Since rule 3.5 is similar to rule 18 as it existed prior to the 1988 repeal and reenactment of the rules of juvenile procedures relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Trial by jury in the adjudicative stage of a juvenile proceeding is not required by the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. People in Interest of T.A.W., 38 Colo. App. 175, 556 P.2d 1225 (1976).

And six-member jury satisfies due process requirements. People in Interest of T.A.W., 38 Colo. App. 175, 556 P.2d 1225 (1976).

Applied in S.A.S. v. District Court, 623 P.2d 58 (Colo. 1981).

Rule 3.6. Probation Revocation

Revocation of probation proceedings shall be governed by Crim. P. 32(f).

Source: Entire chapter repealed and reenacted June 16, 1988, effective January 1, 1989.

ANNOTATION

Probation revocation petitions and delinquency petitions based on same acts. Where the district attorney files petitions to have a juvenile's probation revoked and then files delinquency petitions based on the same alleged acts, the court may dismiss the petitions for revocation of probation without prejudice and order the prosecution to proceed on the delinquency petitions. People in Interest of M.H., 661 P.2d 1173 (Colo. 1983) (decided under rule 12 as it existed prior to the 1988 repeal and reenactment of the rules of juvenile procedure).

Rule 3.7. Detention

(a) Scope. This Rule only applies when a juvenile is taken into custody by a law enforcement officer or a probation officer in connection with a proceeding arising under Article 2 of Title 19 of the Colorado Children's Code or the Interstate Compact for Juveniles.

(b) Screening Team. The chief judge in each judicial district or the presiding judge of the Denver juvenile court shall designate one or more qualified persons or agencies to act as a screening team with authority to determine whether a juvenile who has been taken into custody should be released to a parent, guardian, or other legal custodian, or detained pending a detention hearing.

(c) Notice. When a juvenile is detained, the screening team shall notify the court, the district attorney, and the local office of the state public defender. The screening team shall also inform the juvenile and the juvenile's parent, guardian, or other legal custodian of the right to a prompt hearing to determine whether the juvenile should be detained further. Notice to the juvenile and the juvenile's parent, guardian, or other legal custodian shall include the date, time, and location of the detention hearing, if known. If the date, time, and location of the detention hearing have not been determined, the screening team will instruct the juvenile's parent, guardian, or other legal custodian to contact the court on the next day which is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, during regular business hours, to obtain that information. If a juvenile's parent, guardian, or other legal custodian cannot be located in the county, the screening team will provide notice to the person with whom the juvenile has been residing. Notice as required by this section (c) may be given verbally or in writing. Notice as required by this Rule shall be given as soon as practicable and without unnecessary delay.

(d) Information Sharing. The law enforcement agency that took the juvenile into custody shall promptly provide to the court, the district attorney, and the local office of the state public defender, or other defense counsel if known, the affidavit in support of probable cause for the arrest and the arrest report, if available. The screening team shall promptly provide to the court, the district attorney, the local office of the state public defender, or other defense counsel if known, any screening material prepared pursuant to the juvenile's arrest. The information required to be disclosed by this Rule shall be disseminated as soon as practicable before the detention hearing. If defense counsel does not continue to represent the juvenile after the detention hearing, defense counsel shall return any written materials to the court and destroy any materials received in electronic form immediately.

(e) Time. Upon receipt of the notification required by section (c) of this Rule, the court shall schedule a detention hearing and notify the district attorney, the local office of the state public defender, any defense attorney of record in the case, any guardian ad litem appointed by the court in the case, and the screening team of the date and time of the hearing. The court shall hold a detention hearing within 48 hours after the juvenile was taken into custody unless the juvenile was taken into custody for violating a valid court order on a status offense. The time in which the detention hearing must be held may be extended for a reasonable time by order of the court upon good cause shown. In computing any period of time prescribed by this section (e) Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays shall be excluded.

(f) Representation. A juvenile who is detained for committing a delinquent act shall be represented by counsel at a detention hearing as provided in C.R.J.P. 3.9. The court shall allow defense counsel sufficient time to consult with the juvenile before the detention hearing.

(g) Hearing. The purposes of a detention hearing are to determine if a juvenile should be detained further and to define conditions under which he or she may be released, if release is appropriate. Detention hearings shall be conducted in the manner prescribed by §19-2-508, C.R.S.

(h) Court Orders. At the conclusion of a detention hearing, the court shall enter orders prescribed by §19-2-508, C.R.S. The court may also issue temporary orders for legal custody of a juvenile as provided in §19-1-115, C.R.S. The court may further detain a juvenile only if it finds from information provided at the hearing that the juvenile is a danger to himself or herself or to the community.

(i) Court Oversight. The court shall maintain control over the admission, length of stay, and release of all juveniles placed in shelter or detention, subject to the limitations prescribed by §19-2-508(3)(c), C.R.S., and §19-2-509(1), C.R.S.

Rule 3.8. Status Offenders

Juveniles alleged to have committed offenses which would not be a crime if committed by an adult (i.e., status offenses), shall not be detained for more than 24 hours excluding non-judicial days unless there has been a detention hearing and judicial determination that there is probable cause to believe the juvenile has violated a valid court order (JDF 560). A juvenile in detention alleged to be a status offender and in violation of a valid court order shall be adjudicated within 72 hours exclusive of non-judicial days of the time detained. A juvenile adjudicated of being a status offender in violation of a valid court order (JDF 561) may not be disposed to a secure detention or correctional placement unless the court has first reviewed a written report (JDF 562) prepared by a public agency which is not a court or law enforcement agency. The purpose of the report is to provide the court with useful information prior to sentencing. The report shall address the juvenile's behavior and the circumstances which brought the juvenile before the court and shall assess whether all less restrictive dispositions have been exhausted or are clearly inappropriate. The court is not bound by the recommendations contained in the report. The written report must be signed and dated either before or on the date the juvenile is sentenced to detention. Nothing herein shall prohibit the court from ordering the placement of juveniles in shelter care where appropriate, and such placement shall not be considered detention within the meaning of this rule. Juveniles alleged to have violated C.R.S. 18-12-108.5 or adjudicated delinquent for having violated C.R.S. 18-12-108.5 are exempt from the provisions of this rule.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The reference to ''valid court orders'' is taken from the federal Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act (JJDPA) of 1974, as amended, which is found at 42 U.S.C.A. 5601 et seq. The Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention in April, 1995, issued final regulations to implement that portion of the JJDPA, as amended in 1992, which addresses the detention and secure confinement of status offenders. These regulations, which are found at 28 C.F.R. 31.303 (f)(3) set forth the legal requirements for issuing of ''valid court orders,'' the violation of which by a status offender may, in certain circumstances, authorize juvenile courts to detain and/or commit such youth to secure confinement. The appendix to these rules contains a form for issuing a valid court order, a form order for making a secure placement disposition for violation of a valid court order, and a form for a written report to the court.

The Committee's intent in drafting this rule is not to encourage more frequent use of detention for status offenders. The Committee recognizes that Congress and the OJJDP assumed that courts would exhibit self-restraint and exercise the valid court order exclusion only in cases of status offenders who chronically fail to follow court orders. The Colorado supreme court in In the Interest of J.E.S., 817 P.2d 508 (Colo. 1991) quoted from In Re Ronald S., 9 Cal. App. 3D 866, 138 Cal. Rptr. 387 (1977) to comment on the use of secure confinement for status offenders.

> Certainly not all [status offenders] need to be placed in secure facilities. However, some do and in these cases the juvenile court judge must have the authority to detain in a secure facility—if status offenders are to remain in the juvenile court. 69 Cal. App. 3d at 875, 138 Cal. Rptr. at 393.

Ohio Representative Ashbrook, who sponsored the valid court order amendment, stated that without the amendment courts would be limited in their ability to work with youths who continually flout the will of the court and that it would make ''helping that young person much more difficult.'' (126 Cong. Rec. H. 10 10932). Ashbrook contemplated that the valid court order exception would primarily be used to provide treatment rather than punishment.

The Committee recommends that the Courts adopt this benevolent approach and use the valid court order exception to ensure that secure placements are used only for recalcitrant status offenders.

Runaways who are in violation of their probation do not fall under this rule.

Trial courts are encouraged to use the forms provided for in this rule and contained in the special forms index (JDF 560, JDF 561 and JDF 562). The order to secure placement as a disposition for violation of valid court order (JDF 561) must be signed and dated on the day the juvenile enters detention. When the provided forms are utilized, signed and dated properly, the court's order sentencing the status offender to detention complies with the requirements of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act.

Rule 3.9. Counsel

(a) Appointment of Counsel.

(1) Detention Hearing. Any juvenile who is detained for committing a delinquent act shall be represented at the detention hearing by counsel. The court shall appoint the office of the state public defender or, in the case of a conflict, the office of alternate defense counsel. Appointment of the office of the state public defender or alternate defense counsel shall continue and counsel shall be available for the juvenile's first appearance.

(2) First Appearance. Unless the juvenile has made an early application for or retained his or her own counsel, or the juvenile has made a knowing, intelligent, and voluntary waiver, at the first appearance the court shall appoint the office of the state public defender or, in the case of a conflict, alternative defense counsel if:

A. The juvenile is indigent. Unless a preliminary determination of indigency has been made by the office of the state public defender prior to the first appearance the court shall determine if the juvenile is indigent pursuant to §21-1-103(3), C.R.S. and applicable Chief Justice Directives; or

B. The juvenile's parent, guardian, or other legal custodian, except the State or County Department of Human Services, refuses to retain counsel. The court shall advise any non-indigent parent, guardian, or other legal custodian that they will be ordered to reimburse the cost of the representation as provided by Chief Justice Directive; or

C. The court on its own motion determines that counsel is necessary to protect the interests of the juvenile; or

D. The juvenile is in custody of the State or County Department of Human Services.

(b) Waiver. Before accepting any waiver of counsel by the juvenile the court must place the following findings on the record, based on a dialog conducted with the juvenile:

(1) The juvenile is sufficiently mature to make a knowing, intelligent, and voluntary waiver;

(2) The juvenile understands the dispositional and/or sentencing options that are available in the event of an adjudication or conviction of an offense which the juvenile is charged;

(3) The juvenile has not been coerced by another party, like his or her parent, guardian, or other legal custodian;

(4) The juvenile understands that the court will provide counsel if the juvenile's parent, guardian, or other legal custodian is unable or unwilling to retain counsel; and

(5) The juvenile understands the possible consequences from an adjudication or conviction from the offense charged.

(c) Termination or Withdrawal of Counsel.

(1) The appointment of counsel shall continue until:

A. The court's jurisdiction is terminated; or

B. The court finds that the juvenile or his or her parent, guardian, or other legal custodian have sufficient means to retain counsel; or

C. The juvenile's parent, guardian, or other legal custodian no longer refuse to retain counsel; or

D. The juvenile makes a knowing, intelligent, and voluntary waiver of counsel.

(2) A lawyer may withdraw from a case only upon order of the court. In the discretion of the court, a hearing on a motion to withdraw may be waived with the consent of the prosecution and if a written substitution of counsel is filed which is signed by current counsel, future counsel, and the juvenile. A request to withdraw shall be in writing or may be made orally in the discretion of the court and shall state the grounds for the request. A request to withdraw shall be made as soon as practicable upon the lawyer becoming aware of the grounds for withdrawal. Advance notice of a request to withdraw shall be given to the juvenile before any hearing, if practicable. Such notice to withdraw shall include:

A. That the attorney wishes to withdraw;

B. The grounds for withdrawal;

C. That the juvenile has the right to object to withdrawal;

D. That a hearing will be held and withdrawal will only be allowed if the court approves;

E. That the juvenile has the obligation to appear at all previously scheduled court dates; and

F. That if the request to withdraw is granted, then the juvenile will have the obligation to hire other counsel, request the appointment of counsel by the court, or waive counsel, and elect to represent himself or herself.

(3) Upon setting of a hearing on a motion to withdraw, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to give the juvenile and his or her parent, guardian, or other legal custodian actual notice of the date, time, and place of the hearing. No hearing shall be conducted without the presence of the juvenile unless the motion is made subsequent to the failure of the juvenile to appear in court, for reason(s) directly attributable to the juvenile, as scheduled. A hearing need not be held and notice need not be given to a juvenile when a motion to withdraw is filed after a juvenile has failed to appear for a scheduled court appearance and has not reappeared within six months.

PART FOUR — DEPENDENCY AND NEGLECT

Rule 4. Petition Initiation, Form and Content

A petition concerning a child who is alleged to be dependent and neglected shall be initiated in accordance with Section 19-3-501, C.R.S., and shall be in the form set forth in Section 19-3-502, C.R.S. Said petition shall be filed within 14 days from the day a child is taken into custody, unless otherwise directed by the court.

Editor's note: Letter designation ''(a)'' removed on revision (2018).

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since rule 4 is similar to rule 7 as it existed prior to the 1988 repeal and reenactment of the rules of juvenile procedure, a relevant cases construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this rule.

Failure of attorney representing county department of social services to sign verified dependency petition held to be harmless error. People in Interest of A.M., 786 P.2d 476 (Colo. App. 1989).

Failure to file a dependency and neglect petition within prescribed time does not result in release of child absent a motion by an interested party, and even release of the child does not affect the right to file a dependency and neglect petition. People in Interest of A.M., 786 P.2d 476 (Colo. App. 1989).

Rule 4.1. Responsive Pleadings and Motions

(a) No written responsive pleadings are required. Jurisdictional matters of age and residence of the child which shall be deemed admitted unless specifically denied.

(b) Any defense or objection which is capable of determination without trial of the general issues may be raised by motion.

(c) Defenses and objections based on defects in the institution of the action or in the petition, other than it fails to show jurisdiction in the court, shall be raised only by motion filed prior to the entry of an admission or denial of the allegations of the petition. Failure to present any such defense or objection constitutes a waiver, but the court for good cause shown may grant relief from the waiver. Lack of jurisdiction shall be noticed by the court at any time during the proceeding.

(d) All motions shall be in writing and signed by the moving party or counsel, except those made orally by leave of court.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. For cases decided under former rule 8 on responsive pleadings and motions, see the annotations under rule 3.2.

Rule 4.2. Advisement — Dependency and Neglect

(a) At the first appearance before the court, the respondent(s) shall be fully advised by the court as to all rights and the possible consequences of a finding that a child is dependent or neglected. The court shall make certain that the respondent(s) understand the following:

(1) The nature of the allegations contained in the petition;

(2) As a party to the proceeding, the right to counsel;

(3) That if the respondent(s) is a parent, guardian, or legal custodian, and is indigent, the respondent may be assigned counsel as provided by law.

(4) The right to a trial by jury;

(5) That any admission to the petition must be voluntary;

(6) The general dispositional alternatives available to the court if the petition is sustained, as set forth in Section 19-3-508, C.R.S.;

(7) That termination of the parent-child legal relationship is a possible remedy which is available if the petition is sustained;

(8) That if a motion to terminate the parent-child legal relationship is filed, the court will set a separate hearing at which the allegations of the motion must be proven by clear and convincing evidence;

(9) That termination of the parent-child legal relationship means that the subject child would be available for adoption;

(10) That any party has the right to appeal any final decision made by the court; and

(11) That if the petition is admitted, the court is not bound by any promises or representations made by anyone about dispositional alternatives selected by the court.

(b) The respondent(s), after being advised, shall admit or deny the allegations of the petition.

(c) If a respondent(s) admits the allegations in the petition, the court may accept the admission after making the following finding:

(1) That the respondent(s) understand his or her rights, the allegations contained in the petition, and the effect of the admission;

(2) That the admission is voluntary.

(d) Notwithstanding any provision of this Rule to the contrary, the court may advise a non-appearing respondent(s) pursuant to this Rule in writing and may accept a written admission to the petition if the respondent has affirmed under oath that the respondent(s) understands the advisement and the consequences of the admission, and if, based upon such sworn statement, the court is able to make the findings set forth in part (c) of this Rule.

Rule 4.3. Jury Trial

(a) At the time the allegations of a petition are denied, a respondent, petitioner, the court, or guardian ad litem may demand a jury of not more than six. Unless a jury is demanded, it shall be deemed waived.

(b) Examination, selection, and challenges for jurors in such cases shall be as provided by C.R.C.P. 47, except that the petitioner, all respondents, and the guardian ad litem shall be entitled to three peremptory challenges. No more than nine peremptory challenges are authorized.

Section (b) expressly requires a collective total of three challenges for "all respondents", irrespective of the number of parties who are respondents. People ex rel. J.J.M., 2013 COA 159, 318 P.3d 559.

Rule 4.4. Certification of Custody Matters to Juvenile Court

(a) Any party to a dependency or neglect action who becomes aware of any other proceeding in which the custody of a subject child is at issue shall file in such other proceedings a notice that an action is pending in juvenile court together with a request that such other court certify the issue of legal custody to the juvenile court pursuant to Section 19-1-104(4) and (5), C.R.S.

(b) When the custody issue is certified to the juvenile court, a copy of the order certifying the issue to juvenile court shall be filed in the dependency or neglect case.

(c) When the juvenile court enters a custody order pursuant to the certification, a certified copy of such custody order shall be filed in the certifying court. Such order shall thereafter be the order of the certifying court.

Rule 4.5. Contempt in Dependency and Neglect Cases

The citation, copy of the motion, affidavit, and order in contempt proceedings pursuant to C.R.C.P. 107, shall be served personally upon any respondent or party to the dependency and neglect action, at least 14 days before the time designated for the person to appear before the court. Proceedings in contempt shall be conducted pursuant to C.R.C.P. 107, except that the time for service under subsection (c) shall be not less than 14 days before the time designated for the person to appear.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The old rule read twenty days; however, given the new time constraints imposed by other statutes and policies in dependency and neglect cases, contempt proceedings should be dealt with accordingly. The committee believes that this will not infringe upon the respondents' ability to respond. Respondents' counsel can always request more time in exceptional cases.

PART FIVE — UNIFORM PARENTAGE ACT

(No Rule)

PART SIX — ADOPTION AND RELINQUISHMENT

Rule 6. Petition in Adoption

(a) Every petition in adoption shall be verified and shall include the following information:

(1) All information required by Section 19-5-208, C.R.S.;

(2) A statement detailing why venue is proper;

(3) A statement as to the factual basis of the child's availability for adoption;

(4) The name of the person or agency placing the child in the home of petitioner(s) and the date of such placement. If placement is pursuant to court order, a copy of that order shall be attached to the petition;

(5) If the petition is for a designated adoption, a complete statement as to the facts surrounding the designation;

(6) A statement by petitioner(s) of any fee charged relative to the adoption and any charges, gifts, charitable contributions, medical expenses, or other consideration or thing of value as may be subject to the approval of the court; and

(7) A statement as to what, if any, additional charges, gifts, charitable contributions, medical expenses, or other consideration or thing of value that are anticipated to be paid.

(b) At least 14 days prior to the hearing on the petition, petitioner(s) shall file with the court the following documentation:

(1) All documents concerning the child's availability for adoption;

(2) The consent for adoption and report for adoption, as set forth in Section 19-5-207, C.R.S.;

(3) Where adoption of a foreign-born child is sought, the parties must present certified copies of the original documents with certified translations of the documents adjudicating the child as available for adoption;

(4) A statement of fees by counsel itemizing the hourly rate, services provided, and time spent on the case. A statement of fees in any agency adoption shall detail the services provided; and

(5) The report of the county department of social services or licensed child placement agency, as required by law.

Rule 6.2. Decree in Adoption

(a) Every decree in adoption shall be in conformance with the Colorado Children's Code, and shall include, but not be limited to:

(1) The name(s) of the adoptive parent(s);

(2) A finding that the court has jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter of the petition;

(3) A finding that the child is available for adoption; that written consents of all persons, as provided by law, are on file with the court and are valid; that the rights of all parents, whether known or unknown, have been terminated or that such parents have been given notice of a right to a hearing on fitness, pursuant to Section 19-3-102, C.R.S.;

(4) A finding that if the termination of parental rights of any party in interest was an issue, the party has been given notice in the time and in the manner provided by law and these Rules; that the party has appeared or is in default; that parental rights should be and are terminated and the reason(s) therefor;

(5) A finding that the petitioner(s) are of good moral character, able to support and educate the child, and have a suitable home;

(6) A finding that the child's mental and physical condition is such that the child is a proper subject for adoption by the petitioner(s); and

(7) The name to be given the child.

(b) The former name of the child shall not be stated in the final decree, pursuant to Section 19-5-210 (3), C.R.S.

Rule 6.3. Relinquishment

(a) Every petition in relinquishment shall contain the following:
(1) All information required by Section 19-5-103, C.R.S.;
(2) A statement as to venue being proper; and
(3) A statement if the relinquishment is part of a designated adoption, with particular details as to the designation and whether any fees or costs are being paid by the prospective adoptive parent(s).
(b) Prior to the hearing on relinquishment, a copy of a report shall be filed with the court by a county department of social services or licensed child placement agency detailing the counseling provided to the petitioner(s).
(c) Any motion for service by publication of an absent parent shall be governed by C.R.C.P. 4(h), and an affidavit must accompany the motion detailing what steps have been taken to determine the whereabouts of the absent parent. A single publication is sufficient.

CHAPTER 29

COLORADO RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

I. SCOPE, PURPOSE, AND CONSTRUCTION

Rule 1. Scope

These Rules govern the procedure in all criminal proceedings in all courts of record with the exceptions stated in Rule 54.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article on the Rules of Criminal Procedure, see 34 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 1 (1961). For article, ''1963 Amendments to Colorado Rules of Criminal Procedure'', see 35 U. Colo. L. Rev. 303 (1963).

Rules of criminal procedure must be read in pari materia. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

Rule 2. Purpose and Construction

These Rules are intended to provide for the just determination of criminal proceedings. They shall be construed to secure simplicity in procedure, fairness in administration, and the elimination of unjustifiable expense and delay.

II. INITIATION OF PRELIMINARY FELONY PROCEEDINGS

Rule 3. The Felony Complaint

(a) The felony complaint shall be a written statement of the essential facts constituting the offense charged, signed by the prosecutor and filed in the court having jurisdiction over the offense charged.

(b) Repealed.

Source: Amended and adopted September 4, 1997, effective January 1, 1998; (a) amended and adopted November 22, 2006, effective January 1, 2007.

ANNOTATION

Applied in People v. Stoppel, 637 P.2d 384 (Colo. 1981); People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

Rule 4. Warrant or Summons Upon Felony Complaint

(a) Issuance.

(1) Request by Prosecution. Upon the filing of a felony complaint in the county court, the prosecuting attorney shall request that the court issue either a warrant for the arrest of the defendant or a summons to be served on the defendant.

(2) Affidavits or Sworn Testimony. If a warrant is requested, the felony complaint must contain or be accompanied by a sworn statement of facts establishing probable cause to believe that a criminal offense has been committed, and that the offense was committed by the person for whom the warrant is sought. In lieu of such a sworn statement, the felony complaint may be supplemented by sworn testimony of such facts. Such testimony must be transcribed and then signed under oath by the witness giving the testimony.

(3) Summons in Lieu of Warrant. Except in class 1, class 2, and class 3 felonies, level 1 and level 2 drug felonies, and unclassified felonies punishable by a maximum penalty of more than 10 years, whenever a felony complaint has been filed prior to the arrest of the person named as defendant therein, the court shall have power to issue a summons commanding the appearance of the defendant in lieu of an arrest warrant, unless a law enforcement officer presents in writing a basis to believe there is a significant risk of flight or that the victim's or public's safety may be compromised. If empowered to issue a summons under this subsection (a)(3), the court shall issue a summons instead of an arrest warrant when the prosecuting attorney so requests.

(4) Standards Relating to Issuance of Summons. Except in class 1, class 2, and class 3 felonies, level 1 and level 2 drug felonies, and unclassified felonies punishable by a maximum penalty of more than 10 years the general policy shall favor issuance of a summons instead of a warrant for the arrest of the defendant. When an application is made to a court for issuance of an arrest warrant or summons, the court may require the applicant to provide such information as reasonably is available concerning the following:

(I) The defendant's residence;

(II) The defendant's employment;

(III) The defendant's family relationships;

(IV) The defendant's past history of response to legal process; and

(V) The defendant's past criminal record.

(5) Failure to Appear. If any person properly summoned pursuant to this Rule fails to appear as commanded by the summons, the court shall forthwith issue a warrant for the arrest of that person.

(6) Corporations. When a corporation is charged with the commission of an offense, the court shall issue a summons setting forth the nature of the offense and commanding the corporation to appear before the court at a certain time and place.

(b) Form.

(1) Warrant. The arrest warrant shall be a written order issued by a judge of a court of record directed to any peace officer and shall:

(I) State the defendant's name or if that is unknown, any name or description by which the defendant can be identified with reasonable certainty;

(II) Command that the defendant be arrested and brought without unnecessary delay before the nearest available judge of a county or district court;

(III) Identify the nature of the offense;

(IV) Have endorsed upon it the amount of bail if the offense is bailable; and

(V) Be signed by the issuing county judge.

(2) Summons. If a summons is issued in lieu of a warrant pursuant to this Rule, the summons shall:

(I) Be in writing;

(II) State the defendant's name and address;

(III) Identify the nature of the offense;

(IV) State the date when issued and the county where issued;

(V) Be signed by the judge or the clerk with the title of the office; and

(VI) Command the person to appear before the court at a certain time and place.

(c) Execution or Service and Return.

(1) Warrant.

(I) By Whom. The warrant may be executed by any peace officer.

(II) Territorial Limits. The warrant may be executed anywhere within Colorado.

(III) Manner. The warrant shall be executed by arresting the defendant. The warrant need not be in the officer's possession at the time of the arrest, in which event the officers shall then inform the defendant of the offense and of the fact that a warrant has been issued, and upon request shall show the warrant to the defendant as soon as possible. If the warrant is in the officer's possession at the time of the arrest, then the officer shall show the warrant to the defendant immediately upon request.

(IV) Return. The peace officer executing a warrant shall make return thereof to the issuing court. At the request of the prosecuting attorney any unexecuted warrant shall be returned and cancelled. At the request of the prosecuting attorney, made while a complaint is pending, a warrant returned unexecuted and not cancelled, or a duplicate thereof, may be delivered by the county judge to any officer or other authorized person for execution.

(2) Summons.

(I) By Whom. The summons may be served by any person authorized to effect service in a civil action.

(II) Territorial Limits. The summons may be served anywhere within Colorado.

(III) Manner. A summons issued pursuant to this Rule may be served in the same manner as the summons in a civil action or by mailing it to the defendant's last known address, not less than 14 days prior to the time the defendant is required to appear, by registered mail with return receipt requested or certified mail with return receipt requested. Service by mail shall be complete upon the return of the receipt signed by the defendant or signed on behalf of the defendant by one authorized by law to do so. The summons for the appearance of a corporation may be served by a peace officer in the manner provided for service of summons upon a corporation in a civil action.

(IV) Return. At least one day prior to the return day, the person to whom a summons has been delivered for service shall make return thereof to the county court before whom the summons is returnable. At the request of the prosecuting attorney, made while a complaint is pending, a summons returned unserved, or a duplicate thereof, may be delivered by the county judge to any peace officer or other authorized person for service.

To support the issuance of an arrest warrant, the complaint must comply with the probable cause requirements of the fourth amendment to the United States constitution, § 7 of art. II, Colo. Const., and this rule. People v. Moreno, 176 Colo. 488, 491 P.2d 575 (1971).

And the existence of probable cause must be determined by member of the judiciary, rather than by a law enforcement officer who is employed to apprehend criminals and to bring charges against those who choose to violate the law. People v. Moreno, 176 Colo. 488, 491 P.2d 575 (1971).

Judge not to accept mere conclusion of complainant. In determining whether or not probable cause exists, a judge should not accept without question the complainant's mere conclusion that the person whose arrest is sought has committed a crime. People v. Moreno, 176 Colo. 488, 491 P.2d 575 (1971).

But should require and examine underlying facts. Before a warrant for arrest can be issued, the judicial officer issuing such a warrant must be supplied with sufficient information to support an independent judgment that probable cause exists for the warrant. People v. Moreno, 176 Colo. 488, 491 P.2d 575 (1971).

A complaint standing alone will not support an arrest warrant where no facts are set forth to establish probable cause. Sergent v. People, 177 Colo. 354, 497 P.2d 983 (1972).

So judge may require supplemental sworn testimony or amendment of complaint. Should the judge to whom application has been made for the issuance of an arrest warrant determine that the complaint is insufficient, he can require that sworn testimony be offered to supplement the complaint or that the complaint be amended to set forth additional facts if an arrest warrant is to be issued. And under § 7 of art. II, Colo. Const., any testimony taken to supplement the complaint must be reduced to writing and signed by the witness or witnesses who offer the testimony under oath. People v. Moreno, 176 Colo. 488, 491 P.2d 575 (1971).

Warrant and supporting affidavits may overcome insufficiency of complaint. Where federal warrants are supported by affidavits which square with all constitutional requirements, they provide a legitimate basis for an arrest, notwithstanding the insufficiency of the complaint to support an arrest warrant. Sergent v. People, 177 Colo. 354, 497 P.2d 983 (1972).

III. EXECUTION.

There are no constitutional requirements dictating that an arrest warrant be executed at the earliest opportunity. People v. Nisser, 189 Colo. 471, 542 P.2d 84 (1975).

Nor does this rule contain limitations regarding the time within which an arrest warrant must be executed. People v. Nisser, 189 Colo. 471, 542 P.2d 84 (1975).

No abuse of process where delay in service not prejudicial. Where the record contains no evidence that the delay in the service of an arrest warrant was intended to prejudice the defendant — or that defendant was, in fact, prejudiced by the six-day postponement of her arrest, but on the other hand, uncontroverted evidence indicates that the delay was caused by the perceived need to protect the identity of an undercover agent in a collateral investigation, the delay in the service of the arrest warrant was not an abuse of process. People v. Nisser, 189 Colo. 471, 542 P.2d 84 (1975).

Where and by whom execution authorized. Arrest warrants are not territorially limited and, therefore, may be executed anywhere in Colorado by an officer with authority to arrest in the particular jurisdiction in which the person named in the warrant is found. People v. Hamilton, 666 P.2d 152 (Colo. 1983).

Arresting officers are not required to have arrest warrants with them at the time of arrest. Sergent v. People, 177 Colo. 354, 497 P.2d 983 (1972).

And execution by unauthorized person immaterial if authorized person present. It is immaterial who executes an arrest warrant provided that individuals with lawful authority to make an arrest are actually present at the scene of the arrest and participate in the arrest process. People v. Schultz, 200 Colo. 47, 611 P.2d 977 (1980).

Rule 4.1. County Court Procedure — Misdemeanor and Petty Offense — Warrant or Summons Upon Complaint

Where the offense charged is a misdemeanor or petty offense, the action may be commenced in the county court as provided below in this Rule. This Rule shall have no application to misdemeanors or petty offenses prosecuted in other courts or to felonies.

(a) Definitions.

(1) ''Complaint'' means a written statement charging the commission of a crime by an alleged offender filed in the county court.

(2) Repealed.

(3) ''Summons'' means a written order or notice directing that a person appear before a designated county court at a stated time and place and answer to a charge against him.

(4) ''Summons and complaint'' means a document combining the functions of both a summons and a complaint.

(b) Initiation of the Prosecution.

(1) Prosecution of a misdemeanor or petty offense may be commenced in the county court by:

(I) The issuance of a summons and complaint;

(II) The issuance of a summons following the filing of a complaint;

(III) The filing of a complaint following an arrest;

(IV) The filing of a summons and complaint following arrest; or

(V) In the event that the offense is a class 2 petty offense, by the issuance of a notice of penalty assessment pursuant to statute.

(c) Summons, Summons and Complaint.

(1) Summons. A summons issued by the county court in a prosecution for a misdemeanor or a class 1 petty offense may be served by giving a copy to the defendant personally, or by leaving a copy at the defendant's usual place of abode with some person over the age of eighteen years residing therein, or by mailing a copy to the defendant's last known address not less than 14 days prior to the time the defendant is required to appear by registered mail with return receipt requested or certified mail with return receipt requested. Service by mail shall be complete upon the return of the receipt signed by the defendant or signed on behalf of the defendant by one authorized by law to do so. Personal service shall be made by a peace officer or any disinterested party over the age of eighteen years.

(2) Repealed.

(3) Summons and Complaint. A summons and complaint may be issued by any peace officer for an offense constituting a misdemeanor or a petty offense:

(I) Committed in his presence; or

(II) If not committed in his presence, which he has probable cause to believe was committed and probable cause to believe was committed by the person charged.

Except for penalty assessment notices which shall be handled according to the procedures set forth in section 16-2-201 and subsection (e) of this Rule, a copy of the summons and complaint shall be filed immediately with the county court before which appearance is required and a second copy shall be given to the district attorney or his deputy for such county.

(4) Content of Summons and Complaint. A summons and complaint issued by a peace officer shall contain the name of the defendant, shall identify the offense charged, including a citation of the statute alleged to have been violated, shall contain a brief statement or description of the offense charged, including the date and approximate location thereof, and shall direct the defendant to appear before a specified county court at a stated time and place.

(d) Arrest followed by a Complaint. If a peace officer makes an arrest without a warrant of a person for a misdemeanor or a petty offense, the arrested person shall be taken without unnecessary delay before the nearest available county or district judge. Thereafter, a complaint shall be filed immediately in the county court having jurisdiction of the offense and a copy thereof given to the defendant at or before the time he is arraigned. The provisions of this Rule are subject to the right of the arresting authority to release the arrested person pursuant to section 16-3-105.

(e) Penalty Assessment Procedure.

(1) When a person is arrested for a class 2 petty offense, the arresting officer may either give the person a penalty assessment notice and release him upon its terms, or take him before a judge of the county court in the county in which the alleged offense occurred. The choice of procedures shall be based upon circumstances which reasonably persuade the officer that the alleged offender is likely or unlikely to comply with the terms of the penalty assessment notice.

(2) The penalty assessment notice shall be a summons and complaint containing identification of the alleged offender, specification of the offense and applicable fine, a requirement that the alleged offender pay the fine or appear to answer the charge at a specified time and place, that payment of the specified fine without an appearance is an acknowledgment of guilt, and that an appearance must be made or the specified fine paid on or before a certain date or a bench warrant will issue for the offender's arrest. In traffic cases, the penalty assessment notice shall also advise the traffic offender of the immediate consequences of payment of the specified fine without an appearance.

(3) In traffic cases, a duplicate copy of the notice shall be sent by the officer to the Colorado department of revenue, motor vehicle division, Denver, Colorado. In all cases, a duplicate copy shall be sent to the clerk of the county court in the county in which the alleged offense occurred.

(4) If the person given a penalty assessment notice chooses to acknowledge his guilt, he may pay the specified fine in person or by mail at the place and within the time specified in the notice. If he chooses not to acknowledge his guilt, he shall appear as required in the notice. Upon trial, if the alleged offender is found guilty, the fine imposed shall be that specified in the notice for the offense of which he was found guilty, but customary court costs may be assessed against him in addition to such fine.

(f) Failure to Appear. If a person upon whom a summons or summons and complaint has been served pursuant to this Rule fails to appear in person or by counsel at the place and time specified therein, a bench warrant may issue for his arrest. In the case of a penalty assessment notice, if the person to whom a penalty assessment notice has been served pursuant to this Rule fails to appear in person or by counsel, or if he fails to pay the specified fine at a specified time and place, a bench warrant may issue for his arrest.

ANNOTATION

I. General Consideration.
II. Summons, Summons and Complaint.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Applied in Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981); May v. People, 636 P.2d 672 (Colo. 1981); People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

II. SUMMONS, SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT.

Minimum requirements of a summons and complaint under this rule are: (1) The name of the defendant, (2) the offense charged, (3) a citation of the statute alleged to have been violated, (4) a brief statement or description of the offense charged, including the date and approximate location thereof, and (5) the direction that the defendant appear before a specified county court at a stated date, time, and place. Francis v. County Court, 175 Colo. 308, 487 P.2d 375 (1971). See Stubert v. County Court, 163 Colo. 535, 433 P.2d 97 (1967).

General assembly did not intend that such a summons and complaint be verified. Stubert v. County Court, 163 Colo. 535, 433 P.2d 97 (1967); Francis v. County Court, 175 Colo. 308, 487 P.2d 375 (1971).

Only peace officers may sign. The only persons designated as having the authority to sign such a summons and complaint are peace officers. Francis v. County Court, 175 Colo. 308, 487 P.2d 375 (1971).

It is sufficient that the summons form alleges that complainant "knows or believes", rather than stating more formally that he ''knows or has reason to believe'', that the accused committed the offense charged. Francis v. County Court, 175 Colo. 308, 487 P.2d 375 (1971).

Prosecution for a misdemeanor charge was properly initiated in accordance with subsection (d) of this rule when the defendant posted bail and executed his appearance bond, thereby waiving service of the complaint on him until his appearance date. This procedure also complies with § 16-2-112 and related rules, which do not require that a person charged with a misdemeanor be given a copy of the complaint until at or before the time he is arraigned. Weld County Court v. Richards, 812 P.2d 650 (Colo. 1991).

The statutes and procedural rules do not require that a person charged with a misdemeanor be given a copy of the complaint prior to being released on bail. Weld County Court v. Richards, 812 P.2d 650 (Colo. 1991).

Rule 4.2. Arrest Warrant Without Information, Felony Complaint, or Complaint

If a warrant for arrest is sought prior to the filing of an information, felony complaint, or complaint, such warrant shall issue only on affidavit sworn to or affirmed before the judge, or a notary public and determined by a judge to relate facts sufficient to establish probable cause that an offense has been committed and probable cause that a particular person committed that offense. A warrant may be obtained by facsimile transmission (FAX) or electronic transmission pursuant to procedures set forth in Rule 41, in which event the procedure in Rule 41 shall be followed. The court shall issue a warrant for the arrest of such person commanding any peace officer to arrest the person so named and to take the person without unnecessary delay before the nearest judge of a court of record.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

This rule is intended to facilitate the issuance of warrants by eliminating the need to physically carry the supporting affidavit to the judge (see Section 16-1-106, C.R.S.).

ANNOTATION

This rule is codification of § 7 of art. II, Colo. Const. People v. Kelderman, 44 Colo. App. 487, 618 P.2d 723 (1980).

Applied in People v. Schultz, 200 Colo. 47, 611 P.2d 977 (1980).

Rule 5. Preliminary Proceedings

(a) Felony Proceedings.

(1) Procedure Following Arrest. If a peace officer or any other person makes an arrest, either with or without a warrant, the arrested person shall be taken without unnecessary delay before the nearest available county or district court. Thereafter, a felony complaint, information, or indictment shall be filed, if it has not already been filed, without unnecessary delay in the proper court and a copy thereof given to the defendant.

(2) Appearance Before the Court. At the first appearance of the defendant in court, it is the duty of the court to inform the defendant and make certain that the defendant understands the following:

(I) The defendant need make no statement and any statement made can and may be used against the defendant;

(II) The right to counsel;

(III) If indigent, the defendant has the right to request the appointment of counsel or consult with the public defender before any further proceedings are held;

(IV) Any plea the defendant makes must be voluntary and not the result of undue influence or coercion;

(V) The right to bail, if the offense is bailable, and the amount of bail that has been set by the court;

(VI) The nature of the charges;

(VII) The right to a jury trial;

(VIII) The right to demand and receive a preliminary hearing within a reasonable time to determine whether probable cause exists to believe that the offense charged was committed by the defendant;

(IX) If currently serving in the United States armed forces or if a veteran of such forces, the defendant may be entitled to receive mental health treatment, substance use disorder treatment, or other services as a veteran.

(3) Appearance in the Court not Issuing the Warrant. If the defendant is taken before a court which did not issue the arrest warrant, the court shall inform the defendant of the matters set out in subsection (a)(2) of this Rule and, allowing time for travel, set bail returnable not less than 14 days thereafter before the court which issued the arrest warrant, and shall transmit forthwith all papers in the case to the court which issued the arrest warrant. In the event the defendant does not make bail within forty-eight hours, the sheriff of the county in which the arrest warrant was issued shall return the defendant to the court which issued the warrant.

(4) Preliminary Hearing — County Court Procedures. Every person accused of a class 1, 2, or 3 felony or a level 1 or 2 drug felony in a felony complaint has the right to demand and receive a preliminary hearing to determine whether probable cause exists to believe that the offense charged in the felony complaint was committed by the defendant. In addition, only those persons accused of a class 4, 5, or 6 felony or a level 3 or 4 drug felony by felony complaint which felony requires mandatory sentencing or is a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406 or is a sexual offense under part 4 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., shall have the right to demand and receive a preliminary hearing to determine whether probable cause exists to believe that the offense charged in the felony complaint was committed by the defendant. However, any defendant accused of a class 4, 5, or 6 felony or a level 3 or 4 drug felony who is not otherwise entitled to a preliminary hearing may request a preliminary hearing if the defendant is in custody for the offense for which the preliminary hearing is requested; except that, upon motion of either party, the court shall vacate the preliminary hearing if there is a reasonable showing that the defendant has been released from custody prior to the preliminary hearing. Any person accused of a class 4, 5, or 6 felony or a level 3 or 4 drug felony who is not entitled to a preliminary hearing shall, unless otherwise waived, participate in a dispositional hearing for the purposes of case evaluation and potential resolution. The following procedures shall govern the holding of a preliminary hearing:

(I) Within 7 days after the defendant is brought before the county court for or following the filing of the felony complaint in that court, either the prosecutor or the defendant may request a preliminary hearing. Upon such request, the court forthwith shall set the hearing. The hearing shall be held within 35 days of the day of setting, unless good cause for continuing the hearing beyond that time is shown to the court. The clerk of the court shall prepare and give notice of the hearing, or any continuance thereof, to all parties and their counsel.

(II) The preliminary hearing shall be held before a judge of the county court in which the felony complaint has been filed. The defendant shall not be called upon to plead. The defendant may cross-examine the prosecutor's witnesses and may introduce evidence. The prosecutor shall have the burden of establishing probable cause. The judge presiding at the preliminary hearing may temper the rules of evidence in the exercise of sound judicial discretion.

(III) If the county court determines such probable cause exists or if the case is not otherwise resolved pursuant to a dispositional hearing if no preliminary hearing was held, it shall order the defendant bound over to the appropriate court of record for trial. In appropriate cases, the defendant may be admitted to or continued on bail by the county court, but bond shall be made returnable in the trial court and at a day and time certain. All county court records, except the reporter's transcript notes, or recording, shall be transferred forthwith by the clerk of the county court to the clerk of the appropriate court of record.

(IV) If from the evidence it appears to the county court that there is not probable cause to believe that any or all of the offenses charged were committed by the defendant, the county court shall dismiss those counts from the complaint and, if all counts are dismissed, discharge the defendant. Upon a finding of no probable cause, the prosecution may appeal pursuant to Rule 5(a)(4)(V), file a direct information pursuant to Rule 5(a)(4)(VI) charging the same offense(s), or submit the matter to a grand jury, but may not file a subsequent felony complaint charging the same offenses.

(V) If the prosecutor believes the court erred in its finding of no probable cause, the prosecutor may appeal the ruling to the district court. The appeal of such final order shall be conducted pursuant to the procedures for interlocutory appeals in Rule 37.1 of these rules. Such error, if any, shall not constitute good cause for refiling.

(VI) Upon a finding of no probable cause as to any one or more of the offenses charged in a felony complaint, the prosecution may file a direct information in the district court pursuant to Rule 7(c)(2) charging the same offense(s). If the prosecutor states an intention to proceed in this manner, the bond executed by the defendant shall be continued and returnable in the district court at a day and time certain. If a bond has not been continued, the defendant shall be summoned into court without the necessity of making a new bond.

(VII) If a felony complaint is dismissed prior to a preliminary hearing being held when one is required or, in other cases, prior to being bound over, the prosecution may thereafter file a direct information in the district court pursuant to Rule 7(c)(4) charging the same offense(s), file a felony complaint in the county court charging the same offense(s), or submit the matter to a grand jury. If the prosecution files a subsequent felony complaint charging the defendant with the same offense(s), the felony complaint shall be accompanied by a written statement from the prosecutor providing good cause for dismissing and refiling the charges. Within 21 days of defendant's first appearance following the filing of the new felony complaint the defendant may request an evidentiary hearing at which the prosecutor shall establish the existence of such good cause.

(VIII) If the county court has bound over the defendant to the district court and the case is thereafter dismissed in the district court before jeopardy has attached, the prosecution may file a direct information in the district court pursuant to Rule 7(c)(5) charging the same offense(s), file a felony complaint in county court charging the same offense(s), or submit the matter to a grand jury, and the case shall then proceed as if the previous case had never been filed. The prosecution shall also file with the felony complaint or the direct information a statement showing good cause for dismissing and then refiling the case. Within 21 days of defendant's first appearance following the filing of the new felony complaint or the direct filing of the new information the defendant may request an evidentiary hearing at which the prosecutor shall establish the existence of such good cause.

(4.5) A dispositional hearing is an opportunity for the parties to report to the court on the status of discussions toward disposition, including presenting any resolution pursuant to C.R.S. 16-7-302. The court shall set the dispositional hearing at a time that will afford the parties an opportunity for case evaluation and potential resolution.

(5) Procedure Upon Failure to Request Preliminary Hearing. If the defendant or prosecutor fails to request a preliminary hearing within 7 days after the defendant has come before the court, the county court shall forthwith order the defendant bound over to the appropriate court of record for trial. In no case shall the defendant be bound over for trial to another court until the preliminary hearing has been held, the 7-day period for requesting a preliminary hearing has expired, or the parties have waived their rights to a preliminary hearing. In appropriate cases, the defendant may be admitted to, or continued upon bail by the county court, but bond shall be made returnable in the trial court at a day and time certain. All court records in the case, except the reporter's transcript, notes, or recording shall be transferred forthwith by the clerk to the appropriate court of record.

(b) Bail in Absence of a County Judge. If no county judge is immediately available to set bond in the case of a person in custody for the commission of a bailable felony, any available district judge may set bond, or such person may be admitted to bail pursuant to Rule 46.

(c) Misdemeanor and Petty Offense Proceedings.

(1) Procedure Following Arrest. If a peace officer or any other person makes an arrest, either with or without a warrant, the arrested person shall be taken without unnecessary delay before the nearest available county court. Thereafter a complaint or summons and complaint shall be filed, if it has not already been filed, immediately in the proper court and a copy thereof given to the defendant at or before arraignment. Trial may be held forthwith if the court calendar permits, immediate trial appears proper, and the parties do not request a continuance for good cause. Otherwise the case shall be set for trial as soon as possible.

(2) Appearance Before the Court. At the first appearance in the county court the defendant shall be advised in accordance with the provisions set forth in subparagraphs (a)(2)(I) through (VII) and (IX) of this Rule.

(3) Appearance in the County Court Not Issuing the Warrant. If the defendant is taken before a county court which did not issue the arrest warrant, the court shall inform the defendant of the matters set out in subsection (a)(2)(I through VII and IX) of this Rule and, allowing time for travel, set bail returnable not less than 14 days thereafter before the court which issued the arrest warrant, and shall transmit forthwith a transcript of the proceedings and all papers in the case to the court which issued the arrest warrant. In the event the defendant does not make bail within forty-eight hours, the sheriff of the county in which the arrest warrant was issued shall return the defendant to the court which issued the warrant.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Police Interrogation in Colorado: The Implementation of Miranda'', see 47 Den. L.J. 1 (1970). For article, ''Hearsay in Criminal Cases Under the Colorado Rules of Evidence: An Overview'', see 50 U. Colo. L. Rev. 277 (1979). For article, ''The Colorado Counsel Conundrum: Plea Bargaining, Misdemeanors, and the Right to Counsel'', see 89 Denv. U.L. Rev. 327 (2012).

Purpose of this rule is to furnish a prophylaxis against abuses in the detention process and, more importantly, to place the accused in early contact with a judicial officer so that the right to counsel may not only be explained clearly but also be implemented upon the accused's request. People v. Heintze, 200 Colo. 248, 614 P.2d 367 (1980).

Limited extraterritorial effect of rule. There is limited extraterritorial effect which the procedural rules of this jurisdiction can generally be given, absent denial of constitutional rights. People v. Robinson, 192 Colo. 48, 556 P.2d 466 (1976).

Prosecutor's failure to file a statement of good cause under subsection (a)(4)(VII) is not a jurisdictional defect, but, instead, a procedural defect that defendant waived when defendant pleaded guilty. People v. Garcia, 2013 COA 15, 320 P.3d 360.

Statements were improperly suppressed when there wasn't an arrest. Defendant was held for the purpose of taking blood samples only. A reasonable person would understand he or she was being detained for that limited purpose and not being arrested. People v. Turtura, 921 P.2d 40 (Colo. 1996).

Psychiatric examination of unconsenting party unauthorized. There is no authority in the Rules of Criminal Procedure nor in the statutes for ordering an unconsenting third party to submit to a psychiatric examination. People v. La Plant, 670 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1983).

Applied in People v. York, 189 Colo. 16, 537 P.2d 294 (1975); People v. Salazar, 189 Colo. 429, 541 P.2d 676 (1975); People v. Lopez, 41 Colo. App. 206, 587 P.2d 792 (1978); People v. District Court, 199 Colo. 398, 610 P.2d 490 (1980); Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981); People v. Boyette, 635 P.2d 552 (Colo. 1981); Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

II. PROCEDURE FOLLOWING ARREST.

Purpose of section (a)(1) is to insure that the defendant is adequately informed of his rights. People v. Casey, 185 Colo. 58, 521 P.2d 1250 (1974).

One of the central purposes of restricting unnecessary delay in bringing an arrested person before a judge is to insure that he will be fully informed of the offense involved and of his constitutional rights. People v. Weaver, 179 Colo. 331, 500 P.2d 980 (1972). See People v. Reed, 180 Colo. 16, 502 P.2d 952 (1972).

This rule was not designed to prevent incriminating statements willingly made during an unnecessary delay where there were no abuses in the detention process. People v. Roybal, 55 P.3d 144 (Colo. App. 2001).

Person arrested must be taken before a county judge within a reasonable time and without unnecessary delay. Washington v. People, 158 Colo. 115, 405 P.2d 735 (1965), cert. denied, 383 U.S. 953, 86 S. Ct. 1217, 16 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1966); England v. People, 175 Colo. 236, 486 P.2d 1055 (1971).

"Necessary delay". A ''necessary delay'' is one reasonably related to the administrative process attendant upon the arrest of the accused, viz., delays associated with fingerprinting, photographing, taking inventory of personal belongings, preparation of necessary charging documents and reports, and other legitimate administrative procedures. People v. Heintze, 200 Colo. 248, 614 P.2d 367 (1980); People v. Raymer, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Inadvertent delay unnecessary. Where prolonged inadvertence is the only basis for the delay, that delay is unnecessary. People v. Heintze, 200 Colo. 248, 614 P.2d 367 (1980).

But where arresting authorities delay the accused's judicial advisement on charges from a foreign jurisdiction until after the local charges are completely resolved, delay is unnecessary. People v. Garcia, 746 P.2d 560 (Colo. 1987).

Failure to comply with this rule does not automatically invalidate a confession. Aragon v. People, 166 Colo. 172, 442 P.2d 397 (1968); People v. Weaver, 179 Colo. 331, 500 P.2d 980 (1972); People v. Reed, 180 Colo. 16, 502 P.2d 952 (1972); People v. Litsey, 192 Colo. 19, 555 P.2d 974 (1976).

Nor require granting motion to dismiss. A violation of sections (a) and (c) does not of itself automatically operate to equire the granting of a motion to dismiss charges. People v. Wiedemer, 180 Colo. 265, 504 P.2d 667 (1972).

As each case must be considered on its own facts where a defendant argues that he was not taken before a county judge within the time required by this rule. Aragon v. People, 166 Colo. 172, 442 P.2d 397 (1968); Jaggers v. People, 174 Colo. 430, 484 P.2d 796 (1971); People v. Weaver, 179 Colo. 331, 500 P.2d 980 (1972).

Admissibility of confession dependent on compliance with Miranda. If a statement is admissible as being in compliance with ''Miranda'', it should not be invalidated because of noncompliance with this rule if there was no studied attempt to avoid taking the defendant before a county judge. Jaggers v. People, 174 Colo. 430, 484 P.2d 796 (1971); People v. Weaver, 179 Colo. 331, 500 P.2d 980 (1972).

Where defendant was in custody for at least 18 hours before section (a)(1) was complied with, and where during this period he was interrogated on two occasions and made incriminating statements during the interrogations, the 18-hour delay neither unfairly prejudiced the defendant nor denied him any basic constitutional right, since prior to both interrogations the defendant was properly advised as required by the Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S. Ct. 1602, 16 L. Ed. 2d 694, 10 A.L.R.3d 974 (1966) decision, and only thereafter did the defendant choose to give the incriminating statements. People v. Hosier, 186 Colo. 116, 525 P.2d 1161 (1974).

Failure to comply with this rule did not result in prejudice to the defendant, where the defendant was properly advised as required by Miranda, and thereafter chose to make incriminating statements rather than to remain silent. People v. Gilmer, 182 Colo. 96, 511 P.2d 494 (1973).

Where the statement was voluntarily made and the defendant was several times fully advised of his Miranda rights, any violation of this rule constituted harmless error and the trial court correctly refused to suppress the defendant's statement on this ground. People v. Litsey, 192 Colo. 19, 555 P.2d 974 (1976).

And inability of defendant to show prejudice. In the absence of a factual showing of prejudice, the failure to comply with this rule does not require suppression of voluntary statements. People v. Litsey, 192 Colo. 19, 555 P.2d 974 (1976); People v. Robinson, 192 Colo. 48, 556 P.2d 466 (1976).

Defendant must prove both unnecessary delay and prejudice to establish a right to relief for a violation of this rule. People v. Johnson, 653 P.2d 737 (Colo. 1982).

Violation of section (a)(1) does not per se require suppression; rather, the defendant must show prejudice as a result of the delay. People v. La Plant, 670 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1983).

Showing of prejudice required on motion to dismiss. And before one may prevail on a motion to dismiss charges, he must show that he would be unfairly prejudiced or would be denied some basic rights at trial because of the Crim. P. 5(a)(1) and 5(c) violation. People v. Wiedemer, 180 Colo. 265, 504 P.2d 667 (1972).

In the absence of a factual showing of prejudice, the failure to comply with section (a)(1) does not require dismissal of a criminal charge. People v. Edwards, 183 Colo. 210, 515 P.2d 1243 (1973).

Before a violation of section (a)(1) may be grounds for reversal, it must be shown that the defendant was unfairly prejudiced or denied some basic constitutional rights by reason of the failure to comply with the rule. People v. Gilmer, 182 Colo. 96, 511 P.2d 494 (1973); People v. Hosier, 186 Colo. 116, 525 P.2d 1161 (1974).

Test for prejudice. In determining the existence of prejudice the proper inquiry is whether the unnecessary delay reasonably contributed to the acquisition of the challenged evidence. People v. Heintze, 200 Colo. 248, 614 P.2d 367 (1980); People v. Raymer, 626 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1980).

To establish prejudice, a defendant must show a nexus between the unnecessary delay and the challenged evidence. In other words, a defendant must establish that the delay induced, caused, or was used to extract a confession. People v. Roybal, 55 P.3d 144 (Colo. App. 2001).

In view of the important role played by this rule in speedily implementing the right to counsel especially for an indigent defendant, some important considerations on the issue of prejudice are: whether an attorney had already been retained by, or had been made available to, the defendant during the period of unnecessary delay; whether that attorney was accessible to the defendant prior to the challenged statement; and whether the defendant freely and knowingly waived the presence of the attorney in making the challenged statement to the police. People v. Heintze, 200 Colo. 248, 614 P.2d 367 (1980).

In determining the existence of prejudice, the appropriate inquiry is whether unnecessary delay reasonably contributed to the acquisition of any challenged evidence. The relevant time period which must be examined is the time between the arrest and the acquisition of the challenged evidence. People v. Raymer, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Sufficiency of evidence showing prejudice and nature of prejudice suffered by defendant should be considered by trial court in fashioning sanction, if any, to be imposed for violation and such drastic sanction as dismissal should be imposed only when violation has rendered accused unable to fairly defend against the charges. People v. Garcia, 746 P.2d 560 (Colo. 1987).

Prosecution for a misdemeanor charge was properly initiated in accordance with this rule when the defendant posted bail and executed his appearance bond, thereby waiving service of the complaint on him until his appearance date. This procedure also complies with § 16-2-112 and related rules, which do not require that a person charged with a misdemeanor be given a copy of the complaint until at or before the time he is arraigned. Weld County Court v. Richards, 812 P.2d 650 (Colo. 1991).

The statutes and procedural rules do not require that a person charged with a misdemeanor be given a copy of the complaint prior to being released on bail. Weld County Court v. Richards, 812 P.2d 650 (Colo. 1991).

No prejudice held shown by delay in presenting defendant before judge. Gottfried v. People, 158 Colo. 510, 408 P.2d 431 (1965); Hubbard v. Patterson, 374 F.2d 856 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 389 U.S. 868, 88 S. Ct. 142, 19 L. Ed. 2d 144 (1967).

Delay to conduct custodial interrogation is not "necessary". Where delay is occasioned by the decision of law enforcement officers to conduct a custodial interrogation of the defendant before presenting him to a judicial officer for a proper advisement of rights, then clearly such a delay is not ''necessary''. People v. Raymer, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Presumption of regularity of proceedings. Where it is alleged prejudice resulted from noncompliance with this rule, every presumption is indulged in favor of regularity of the proceedings in the trial court, and the burden of showing error is on the party asserting it. Gottfried v. People, 158 Colo. 510, 408 P.2d 431 (1965).

But interview of defendant in sheriff's office over 24 hours after arrest does not fulfill requirements of this rule. People v. Kelley, 172 Colo. 39, 470 P.2d 32 (1970).

Confession during six-day delay inadmissible. Where there was a delay of six days between the time a defendant was first questioned and the time he was finally brought before a judge and advised of his rights, any statements made prior to compliance with this rule were inadmissible. Hervey v. People, 178 Colo. 38, 495 P.2d 204 (1972).

Where delay not unreasonable. Where the defendant was taken before a judge on the afternoon following the evening of his arrest, this is not an unreasonable delay. People v. Casey, 185 Colo. 58, 521 P.2d 1250 (1974).

Where most of delay in taking defendant before a judge was necessitated by treatment of defendant's wounds, such a delay was not unreasonable, particularly since the delay did not appear to result in coercion or in contributing to defendant's desire to talk. People v. Valencia, 181 Colo. 36, 506 P.2d 743 (1973).

Noncompliance with rule may be waived by defendant. Washington v. People, 158 Colo. 115, 405 P.2d 735 (1965), cert. denied, 383 U.S. 953, 86 S. Ct. 1217, 16 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1966).

Justifiable excuse needed to bring defendant before out-of-county judge. A justifiable excuse must be shown to warrant the removal of defendant to a county seat, other than the one in which the alleged offense was committed, where a county judge is available in that county. Aragon v. People, 166 Colo. 172, 442 P.2d 397 (1968).

Prosecution's remedies when case dismissed. The prosecution has one of two remedies available to it when a case is dismissed in the county court. If the case is dismissed before a preliminary hearing is held, the prosecution may appeal the order of dismissal to the district court. If the county court dismisses a charge after holding a preliminary hearing under section (a)(4), the exclusive remedy available to the prosecution is to request leave to file a direct information in the district court. People v. Freiman, 657 P.2d 452 (Colo. 1983).

Colorado rule not applicable to defendant arrested in another state by federal agents, and federal rules of criminal procedure control. People v. Porter, 742 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1987).

Posting of officers outside defendant's hospital door for the purpose of effecting an arrest upon his release from medical care not an arrest requiring compliance with this rule. People v. MacCallum, 925 P.2d 758 (Colo. 1996).

III. APPEARANCE BEFORE COURT.

Judges' duties upon first appearance. Section (a)(2) imposes on the judge at the accused's first appearance the duty to inform him of, and to make certain that he understands, those basic rights applicable upon the initiation of formal criminal proceedings, especially his privilege against self-incrimination and his right to the appointment of an attorney at state expense if he is financially unable to retain one. People v. Heintze, 200 Colo. 248, 614 P.2d 367 (1980); Washington v. People, 158 Colo. 115, 405 P.2d 735 (1965), cert. denied, 383 U.S. 953, 86 S. Ct. 1217, 16 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1966); England v. People, 175 Colo. 236, 486 P.2d 1055 (1971).

Right to counsel need not be advised where defendant already represented. When accepting a plea of guilty, the trial court is not necessarily required to advise a defendant of his right to counsel when the defendant is represented by counsel at the providency hearing. People v. Derrerra, 667 P.2d 1363 (Colo. 1983).

Defendant not denied his sixth amendment right to counsel because he lacked counsel at advisement hearing. Although hearing triggered defendant's right to counsel, defendant was not entitled to counsel at the hearing itself. People v. Roberts, 2013 COA 50, 321 P.3d 581.

Even if defendant was entitled to counsel at advisement hearing, any error in not providing counsel was harmless because nothing of any significance in determining defendant's guilt or innocence occurred at the hearing. People v. Roberts, 2013 COA 50, 321 P.3d 581.

Court may properly allow testimony concerning defendant's pre-advisement silence concerning failure to contact authorities to correct discrepancies in documents if defendant testified and the evidence of defendant's pre-advisement silence was elicited in the cross-examination of defendant for credibility purposes. People v. Taylor, 159 P.3d 730 (Colo. App. 2006).

IV. PRELIMINARY HEARING.

Primary purpose of preliminary hearing is to determine whether probable cause exists to support the prosecution's charge that the accused committed a specific crime. People v. Weaver, 182 Colo. 221, 511 P.2d 908 (1973); People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973); People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

The rules of criminal procedure relating to a preliminary hearing are intended to create a preliminary screening device by affording a defendant an opportunity, at an early stage of the criminal proceedings, to challenge the sufficiency of the prosecution's evidence before an impartial judge. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974); People v. District Court, 652 P.2d 582 (Colo. 1982).

A preliminary hearing provides the accused with an opportunity to challenge the sufficiency of the people's evidence at an early stage in the proceedings. The preliminary hearing is designed to weed out groundless or unsupported charges and to relieve the accused of the degradation and expense of a criminal trial. Holmes v. District Court, 668 P.2d 11 (Colo. 1983).

Level of proof required. It is not necessary to introduce evidence sufficient to prove defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt but evidence sufficient to permit a person of ordinary prudence to reasonably believe in defendant's guilt. People v. Walker, 675 P.2d 304 (Colo. 1984).

Preliminary hearing presents forum for the presentation and assessment of evidence of probable cause and if prosecuting attorney fails to establish probable cause at a preliminary hearing, the county court is empowered to dismiss the complaint. Gallagher v. County Court, 759 P.2d 859 (Colo. App. 1988).

There is no procedure for dismissing a felony complaint without prejudice. Once the filing of a felony complaint in county court is dismissed, the prosecution must either obtain a grand jury indictment or file an information directly in the district court. People v. Williams, 987 P.2d 232 (Colo. 1999).

"The offense charged," within section (a)(4)(IV), encompasses any lesser included offense of the offense charged. Hunter v. District Court, 184 Colo. 238, 519 P.2d 941 (1974).

Defendant's request for preliminary hearing after indictment has been returned is not authorized where such a request, or motion, cannot provide a foundation for the trial court's order for delivery of a requested transcript of the colloquy between the grand jury and the district attorney. People v. District Court, 199 Colo. 398, 610 P.2d 490 (1980).

Demand for hearing to be by written motion. The statutory right to receive a preliminary hearing is not absolute and requires that either the defendant or his attorney, or the prosecuting attorney, file a written motion demanding the preliminary hearing. People v. Moody, 630 P.2d 74 (Colo. 1981).

Although oral request may be treated as written motion. A court may treat a defendant's oral request for a preliminary hearing, as a written motion as required by this rule. People v. Driscoll, 200 Colo. 410, 615 P.2d 696 (1980).

When juvenile entitled to preliminary hearing. Juveniles charged in delinquency proceedings with crimes (felonies and class 1 misdemeanors) subject to this rule and Crim. P. 7 are entitled to a preliminary hearing. Juveniles held on lesser charges are not granted a right to a preliminary hearing by statute or by rule. J.T. v. O'Rourke ex rel. Tenth Judicial Dist., 651 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1982).

Prosecution not to present all evidences and witnesses. A preliminary hearing does not require that the prosecution lay out for inspection and for full examination all witnesses and evidence. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

It is unnecessary at a preliminary hearing for the prosecution to show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the crime, or even the probability of the defendant's conviction. Instead, the trial court is obligated at the preliminary hearing to view the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution and the prosecution therefore is accorded latitude at the preliminary hearing to establish probable cause that the defendant committed the crime charged. People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996); People v. Hall, 999 P.2d 207 (Colo. 2000).

Preliminary hearing is not intended to be a mandatory procedural step in every criminal prosecution. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974).

And does not alter proposition that accused entitled to trial on merits. Although a preliminary hearing provides the defendant with an early opportunity to question the government's case, it is not designed to alter the basic proposition that an accused is entitled to one trial on the merits of the charge. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

Defendant to appear at requested preliminary hearing. When a defendant requests a preliminary hearing, he has not only the constitutional right to be present, but is under an affirmative obligation and duty to appear at the hearing. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974).

Unless court permits defendant to waive his presence. The court may, when a timely request is made, permit the defendant to waive his presence at the preliminary hearing if the ends of justice would not be frustrated, but the tactical ploy of refusing to produce a defendant at the preliminary hearing to frustrate the prosecution's case should not be tolerated. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974).

Refusal to appear may constitute implied waiver of hearing. Where the judge of the county court advised counsel that the failure of the defendant to appear would constitute a waiver, the defendant's subsequent refusal to appear constituted an implied waiver and extinguished the defendant's right to a preliminary hearing in the county court. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974); People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

Right to counsel at preliminary hearing reaches constitutional proportions. Schwader v. District Court, 172 Colo. 474, 474 P.2d 607 (1970).

Where the case against the defendant is overwhelming, the absence of counsel at the preliminary hearing is harmless error. People v. Gallegos, 680 P.2d 1294 (Colo. App. 1983).

Authority to bind over on lesser included offense. The trial court which holds the preliminary hearing has the authority to bind over the defendant on a lesser included offense. People v. Hrapski, 658 P.2d 1367 (Colo. 1983).

Hearing may be set beyond 30-day period. The absence of open court dates within 30-day period prescribed by this rule constitute good cause for setting a preliminary hearing for a date outside that period. People v. Hogland, 37 Colo. App. 34, 543 P.2d 1298 (1975).

Evidence need not be admissible at trial. Hearsay evidence, and other evidence, which would be incompetent if offered at the time of trial, may be the bulk of evidence at a preliminary hearing. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

Preliminary hearing in district court after such hearing in county court. After the filing of a direct information in the district court, either the people or the defendant may demand a preliminary hearing in that court even where there has been a dismissal of a felony complaint by the county court following a preliminary hearing on the same charge. People v. Burggraf, 36 Colo. App. 137, 536 P.2d 48 (1975).

The purpose of a Crim. P. 5 proceeding is to furnish a prophylaxis against abuses in the detention process and, more importantly, to place the accused in early contact with a judicial officer so that the right to counsel may not only be clearly explained but also be implemented upon the accused's request. People v. Heintze, 614 P.2d 367 (Colo. 1980); People v. Vigoa, 841 P.2d 311 (Colo. 1992).

Defendant waived showing of good cause necessary to continue preliminary hearing by failing to object to setting of preliminary hearing beyond statutory time requirement. People v. Thompson, 736 P.2d 423 (Colo. App. 1987).

Court has jurisdiction to dismiss charges pursuant to this rule after denying continuance where prosecution failed to demonstrate adequate, timely efforts to secure witness' attendance and such dismissal was not an abuse of discretion. Gallagher v. County Court, 759 P.2d 859 (Colo. App. 1988).

District court may not review county court's probable cause finding. It is not proper for the district court to review the county court's finding of probable cause. People v. District Court, 652 P.2d 582 (Colo. 1982); People v. Atkin, 680 P.2d 1277 (Colo. App. 1984); White v. MacFarlane, 713 P.2d 366 (Colo. 1986); Blevins v. Tihonovich, 728 P.2d 732 (Colo. 1986).

Direct information not available after discharge for failure to gain hearing within 30 days. Crim. P. 7(c), does not allow the filing of a direct information in the district court if the charges, first filed in county court, are dismissed before a preliminary hearing for failure of the prosecution to comply with the 30-day rule in this rule. Chavez v. District Court, 648 P.2d 658 (Colo. 1982).

Factors considered when direct filing of information requested. While under Crim. P. 7(c)(2) the district attorney, with the consent of the court, may file a direct information in the district court if a preliminary hearing was held on the same charge in the county court and the accused was discharged, before the district court may properly exercise its discretion, there must be a sufficient evidentiary disclosure by the prosecution to apprise the district court of the earlier dismissal of the identical charges in the county court and the reasons for the requested refiling. When exercising its discretion in deciding whether to permit the direct filing of an information, the district court is required to balance the right of the district attorney to prosecute criminal cases against the need to protect the accused from discrimination and oppression. Holmes v. District Court, 668 P.2d 11 (Colo. 1983).

No probable cause necessary to bind over habitual criminal charges. Inasmuch as habitual criminal counts do not constitute ''offenses'', probable cause need not be established in the preliminary hearing to bind these charges over to the district court. Maestas v. District Court, 189 Colo. 443, 541 P.2d 889 (1975).

Where technical difficulties prevented defendant from obtaining a transcript of the preliminary hearing, the judge abused his discretion in denying defendant's motion for a second preliminary hearing. Such motion should have been granted because the testimony presented at the first preliminary hearing was directly relevant and significant to defendant's trial preparation, the prosecution was expected to rely on testimony presented at the preliminary hearing, and there was no alternative method of reconstructing the testimony from the preliminary hearing. Harris v. District Court, 843 P.2d 1316 (Colo. 1993).

Prosecution may seek a grand jury indictment after dismissal by a county court on a preliminary hearing for lack of probable cause as an alternative to appealing to or filing a direct information in the district court. People v. Noline, 917 P.2d 1256 (Colo. 1996).

Because district court applied a flawed interpretation of the law during the preliminary hearing, assessment of probable cause was in error and review requires the court to determine whether the facts, when viewed in the light most favorable to the prosecution, would induce a reasonably prudent and cautious person to entertain the belief that the defendant committed the crime charged. People v. Hall, 999 P.2d 207 (Colo. 2000).

When court applies an erroneous legal standard or bases its ruling on erroneous conclusions of law at preliminary hearing, the proper standard of review is de novo, not abuse of discretion. Reviewing court must review the evidence in the light most favorable to prosecution to determine if a reasonably prudent and cautious person could entertain the belief that defendant committed the crime charged. People v. Beck, 187 P.3d 1125 (Colo. App. 2008).

Where district court finds that defendant's waiver of right to preliminary hearing is ineffective, the district court has the authority to restore defendant's right to a preliminary hearing. People v. Nichelson, 219 P.3d 1064 (Colo. 2009).

V. FAILURE TO FILE FOR PRELIMINARY HEARING.

Waiver occurs when defendant fails to request preliminary hearing. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974); People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 188, 522 P.2d 589 (1974); People v. Moody, 630 P.2d 74 (Colo. 1981).

And affirmative waiver not necessary. Section (a)(4)(I), when construed with section (a)(5), establishes that an affirmative waiver is not necessary to cause a defendant to lose his right to demand a preliminary hearing. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

Effect of waiver. If the defendant waives a preliminary hearing in the county court, he must be bound over for trial, and not for a subsequent preliminary hearing in the district court. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

If the defendant elects to waive the preliminary hearing and to proceed to trial, the waiver operates as an admission by the defendant that sufficient evidence does exist to establish probable cause that the defendant committed the crimes charged. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974); People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974).

An express written waiver by a defendant of his right to a preliminary hearing operates identically to a failure to file within the time limit prescribed by this rule; both requiring the defendant's case to be bound over for trial. People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

Right not restorable by district court after waiver in county court. A defendant is not entitled to a preliminary hearing in the district court if he has previously waived a preliminary hearing in the county court. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 18, 521 P.2d 780 (1974); People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974); People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

III. INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION

Rule 6. Grand Jury Rules

(a) The chief judge of the district court in each county or a judge designated by him may order a grand jury summoned where authorized by law or required by the public interest.

(b) The grand jury shall hear witnesses as may be determined by the grand jury and may find an indictment on the sworn testimony of one witness only, except in cases of perjury, when at least two witnesses to the same fact shall be necessary. An indictment may also be found upon the information of two of their own body.

(c) The foreman of the grand jury may swear or affirm all witnesses who may come before the grand jury.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''State Grand Juries in Colorado: Understanding the Process and Attacking Indictments'', see 34 Colo. Law. 63 (Apr. 2005).

Grand jury proceedings have been traditionally free of technical rules. People ex rel. Dunbar v. District Court, 179 Colo. 321, 500 P.2d 819 (1972).

Applied in Thomas v. County Court, 198 Colo. 87, 596 P.2d 768 (1979); People v. District Court, 199 Colo. 398, 610 P.2d 490 (1980).

Rule 6.1. Subpoenas — Issuance and Time Limits

Subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum shall be issued in accordance with the rules of criminal procedure and these rules and shall be served at least forty-eight hours before any appearance is required before the grand jury, unless waived by the witness. The court, for good cause, may shorten the time limit imposed by this rule.

ANNOTATION

Grand jury dependent on courts for subpoenas. One significant limitation upon the grand jury is that it must rely upon the courts to compel the production of documents or the attendance of witnesses, and, on motion of the witness subpoenaed, the court is given discretion to quash, modify, or order compliance with the subpoena. Losavio v. Robb, 195 Colo. 533, 579 P.2d 1152 (1978).

For in camera examination of subpoenaed bank records, see Pignatiello v. District Court, 659 P.2d 683 (Colo. 1983).

Rule 6.2. Secrecy of Proceedings — Witness Privacy — Representation by Counsel

(a) All persons associated with a grand jury and its investigations or functions should at all times be aware that a grand jury is an investigative body, the proceedings of which shall be secret. Witnesses or persons under investigation should be dealt with privately to insure fairness. The oath of secrecy shall continue until such time as an indictment is made public, if an indictment is returned, or until a grand jury report dealing with the investigation is issued and made public as provided by law. Nothing in this rule shall prevent a disclosure of the general purpose of the grand jury's investigation by the prosecutor.

(b) Any witness subpoenaed to appear and testify before a grand jury or to produce books, papers, documents, or other objects before such grand jury shall be entitled to assistance of counsel during any time that such witness is being questioned in the presence of said grand jury. If the witness desires legal assistance during his testimony, counsel must be present in the grand jury room with his client during such questioning. However, counsel for the witness shall be permitted only to counsel with the witness and shall not make objections, arguments, or address the grand jury. Such counsel may be retained by the witness or may, for any person financially unable to obtain adequate assistance, be appointed in the same manner as if that person were eligible for appointed counsel. An attorney present in the grand jury room shall take an oath of secrecy. If the court, at an in camera hearing, determines that counsel was disruptive, then the court may order counsel to remain outside the courtroom when advising his client. No attorney shall be permitted to provide counsel in the grand jury room to more than one witness in the same criminal investigation, except with the permission of the grand jury.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment, ''Reporter's Privilege: Pankratz v. District Court'', see 58 Den. L.J. 681 (1981).

Grand jury secrecy remains important to safeguard a number of different interests to preserve its proper functioning. Hoffman-Pugh v. Keenan, 338 F.3d 1136 (10th Cir. 2003).

Justifications for grand jury secrecy are several: (1) To prevent the escape of those whose indictment may be contemplated; (2) to prevent disclosure of derogatory information presented to the grand jury against someone who has not been indicted; (3) to encourage witnesses to come before the grand jury and speak freely with respect to a commission of crimes; (4) to encourage grand jurors in uninhibited investigation of and deliberation on suspected criminal activity. In re P.R. v. District Court, 637 P.2d 346 (Colo. 1981).

Colorado secrecy rules do not violate the first amendment by prohibiting the disclosure of matters a witness learned from her participation in the grand jury process, at least so long as the potential remains for another grand jury to be called to investigate an unsolved murder. Hoffman-Pugh v. Keenan, 338 F.3d 1136 (10th Cir. 2003).

Disclosure of grand jury materials to federal prosecutors without prior approval, in violation of § 16-5-204, did not violate federal constitutional or statutory rights. United States v. Pignatiello, 628 F. Supp. 68 (D. Colo. 1986).

Disclosure that testimony of other grand jury witnesses contradicted current witness' testimony did not violate grand jury secrecy rule where identities of witnesses were not disclosed. People v. Rickard, 761 P.2d 188 (Colo. 1988).

A line should be drawn between information the witness possessed prior to becoming a witness and information the witness gained through her actual participation in the grand jury process. Hoffman-Pugh v. Keenan, 338 F.3d 1136 (10th Cir. 2003).

Disclosure of information the witness already had independently of the grand jury process does not violate this rule. Drawing the line here protects the witness's first amendment right to speak while preserving the state's interest in grand jury secrecy. Hoffman-Pugh v. Keenan, 338 F.3d 1136 (10th Cir. 2003).

Breach of secrecy by prosecution does not warrant dismissal of indictment absent factual findings that defendant is prejudiced. People v. Rickard, 761 P.2d (Colo. 1988).

Jurors and witnesses should be protected vigorously from outside influences. People v. Zupancic, 192 Colo. 231, 557 P.2d 1195 (1976).

Any effort to tamper is reprehensible. Any effort to tamper with or obstruct the due administration of a grand jury's function is reprehensible. People v. Zupancic, 192 Colo. 231, 557 P.2d 1195 (1976).

The jury tampering statute, section 18-8-609, is implemented by this rule. People v. Zupancic, 192 Colo. 231, 557 P.2d 1195 (1976).

Despite defendant's contention that unauthorized persons were allowed in grand jury room and proceedings were not kept secret, the alleged violations did not affect defendant's substantial rights. Petit jury's subsequent guilty verdict made alleged error in grand jury proceeding harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Cerrone, 867 P.2d 143 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd on other grounds, 900 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1995).

Applied in People ex rel. Losavio v. J.L., 195 Colo. 494, 580 P.2d 23 (1978); Pankratz v. District Court, 199 Colo. 411, 609 P.2d 1101 (1980).

Rule 6.3. Oath of Witnesses

The following oath shall be administered to each witness testifying before the grand jury:

> DO YOU SWEAR (AFFIRM), UNDER PENALTY OF PERJURY, THAT THE TESTIMONY YOU ARE TO GIVE IS THE TRUTH, THE WHOLE TRUTH, AND NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH, AND THAT YOU WILL KEEP YOUR TESTIMONY SECRET, EXCEPT TO DISCUSS IT WITH YOUR ATTORNEY, OR THE PROSECUTOR, UNTIL AND UNLESS AN INDICTMENT OR REPORT IS ISSUED?

Rule 6.4. Reporting of Proceedings

A certified or authorized reporter shall be present at all grand jury sessions. All grand jury proceedings and testimony from commencement to adjournment shall be reported. The reporter's notes and any transcripts which may be prepared shall be preserved, sealed, and filed with the court. No release or destruction of the notes or transcripts shall occur without prior court approval.

Rule 6.5. Investigator

(a) Appointment. Upon the written motion of the grand jury, the court shall appoint an investigator or investigators to assist the grand jury in its investigative functions. Said investigator may be an existing investigating law enforcement officer who is presently investigating the subject matter before the grand jury.

(b) Presence. Upon written motion of the grand jury, approved by the prosecutor, the court, for good cause, may allow a grand jury investigator to be present during testimony to advise the prosecutor. No grand jury investigator shall question any witness before the grand jury. A grand jury investigator shall not comment to the grand jury by word or gesture on the evidence or concerning the credibility of any witness but may testify under oath the same as other witnesses.

ANNOTATION

Despite defendant's contention that unauthorized persons were allowed in grand jury room and proceedings were not kept secret, the alleged violations did not affect defendant's substantial rights. Petit jury's subsequent guilty verdict made alleged error in grand jury proceeding harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Cerrone, 867 P.2d 143 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd on other grounds, 900 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1995).

Rule 6.6. Indictment — Presentation — Sealing

(a) Presentation of an indictment in open court by a grand jury may be accomplished by the foreman of the grand jury, the full grand jury, or by the prosecutor acting under instructions of the grand jury.

(b) Upon motion by the prosecutor, the court shall order the indictment to be sealed and no person may disclose the existence of the indictment until the defendant is in custody or has been admitted to bail, except when necessary for the issuance of a warrant or summons.

ANNOTATION

It was not essential for all members of a grand jury who issued a true bill to specifically observe the formal charging paper and approve its formal language. People v. Campbell, 194 Colo. 451, 573 P.2d 557 (1978).

Rule 6.7. Reports

A grand jury report may be prepared and released as permitted by § 16-5-205.5, C.R.S.

ANNOTATION

Section 16-5-205, relating to informations and indictments, applies to the extent of any conflict with this rule. de'Sha v. Reed, 194 Colo. 367, 572 P.2d 821 (1977).

Applied in In re 1976 Arapahoe County Statutory Grand Jury, 194 Colo. 308, 572 P.2d 147 (1977); Charnes v. Lilly, 197 Colo. 460, 593 P.2d 967 (1979).

Rule 6.8. Indictment — Amendment

(a) Matters of Form, Time, Place, Names. At any time before or during trial, the court may, upon application of the people and with notice to the defendant and opportunity for the defendant to be heard, order the amendment of an indictment with respect to defects, errors, or variances from the proof relating to matters of form, time, place, and names of persons when such amendment does not change the substance of the charge, and does not prejudice the defendant on the merits. Upon ordering an amendment, the court, for good cause, may grant a continuance to accord the defendant adequate opportunity to prepare his defense.

(b) Prohibition as to Substance. No indictment may be amended as to the substance of the offense charged.

ANNOTATION

The policy underlying this rule is to insure that an indictment reflects the will of the grand jury. People v. Campbell, 194 Colo. 451, 573 P.2d 557 (1978).

It was not essential for all members of a grand jury who issued a true bill to specifically observe the formal charging paper and approve its formal language. People v. Campbell, 194 Colo. 451, 573 P.2d 557 (1978).

Trial court did not violate this rule by allowing the indictment to be amended to add a charge where the defendant entered into an agreement to plead nolo contendere to the added charge in exchange for a dismissal of all other charges in the indictment. People v. Valdez, 928 P.2d 1387 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court's addition of habitual criminal counts had no effect on the substance of the indictment or the second degree assault charge and did not violate the provision of this rule prohibiting such amendments under this rule. People v. Martinez, 18 P.3d 831 (Colo. App. 2000).

An indictment may be amended to fix defects, errors, or variances of proof, if the change is not substantial or an element of the crime. The indictment was amended to change dates and the dates were not a material element of any of the offenses, therefore, the defendant was not prejudiced. People v. James, 40 P.3d 36 (Colo. App. 2001).

Applied in People v. Thimmes, 643 P.2d 780 (Colo. App. 1981).

Rule 6.9. Testimony

(a) Release to Prosecutor. Upon application by the prosecutor, the court, for good cause, may enter an order to furnish to the prosecutor transcripts of grand jury testimony, minutes, reports, or exhibits relating to them.

(b) Release to Witness. Upon application by the prosecutor, or by any witness after notice to the prosecutor, the court, for good cause, may enter an order to furnish to that witness a transcript of his own grand jury testimony, or minutes, reports, or exhibits relating to them.

(c) Limitations on Release. An order to furnish transcripts of grand jury testimony, minutes, reports, or exhibits under this rule shall specify the person or persons who may be granted access to such material upon its release. Such order shall also specify any limitations which the court finds should be imposed on the use to be made of such material by any person or persons, after giving due consideration to the provisions of Rule 6.3. Such order shall also provide that release of such material shall not be made by the clerk of the court until the filing of an oath of affirmation of acceptance by the person receiving such material of the restrictions and limitations which are specified by the court under this paragraph.

(d) Indicted Defendant's Discovery Rights. Nothing herein shall limit the right of an indicted defendant to discovery under the rules of criminal procedure.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Charnes v. Lilly, 197 Colo. 460, 593 P.2d 967 (1979).

Rule 7. The Indictment and the Information

(a) The Indictment.

(1) An indictment shall be a written statement presented in open court by a grand jury to the district court which charges the commission of any crime by an alleged offender.

(2) Requisites of the Indictment. Every indictment of the grand jury shall state the crime charged and essential facts which constitute the offense. It also should state:

(I) That it is presented by a grand jury;

(II) That the defendant is identified therein, either by name or by the defendant's patterned chemical structure of genetic information, or described as a person whose name is unknown to the grand jury;

(III) That the offense was committed within the jurisdiction of the court, or is triable therein;

(IV) That it is signed by the foreman of the grand jury, and the prosecutor.

(b) The Information.

(1) An information shall be a written statement, signed by the prosecutor and filed in the court having jurisdiction over the offense charged, alleging that a person committed the criminal offense described therein.

(2) Requisites of the Information. The information shall be deemed technically sufficient and correct if it can be understood therefrom:

(I) That it is presented by the person authorized by law to prosecute the offense;

(II) That the defendant is identified therein, either by name or by the defendant's patterned chemical structure of genetic information, or described as a person whose name is unknown to the informant;

(III) That the offense was committed within the jurisdiction of the court, or is triable therein;

(IV) That the offense charged is set forth with such degree of certainty that the court may pronounce judgment upon a conviction.

(3) Information After Preliminary Hearing Waiver or Dispositional Hearing. An information may be filed, without consent of the trial court having jurisdiction, for any offense against anyone who has either:

(I) Failed to request a preliminary hearing in the county pursuant to Rule 5;

(II) Had a preliminary hearing or dispositional hearing and has been bound over by the county court to appear in the court having trial jurisdiction.

(4) When a defendant has been bound over to the trial court pursuant to Rule 5 (a)(4)(III), the felony complaint when transferred to the trial court shall be deemed to be an information if it contains the requirements of an information.

(c) Direct Information. The prosecutor may file a direct information if:

(1) The prosecutor obtains the consent of the court having trial jurisdiction and no complaint was filed against the accused person in the county court pursuant to Rule 5; or

(2) A preliminary hearing was held either in the county court or in the district court and the court found probable cause did not exist as to one or more counts. If the prosecutor states an intention to proceed in this manner, the bond executed by the defendant shall be continued and returnable in the district court at a day and time certain. If a bond has not been continued, the defendant shall be summoned into court without the necessity of making a new bond. The information shall be accompanied by a written statement from the prosecutor alleging facts which establish that evidence exists which for good cause was not presented by the prosecutor at the preliminary hearing. Within 21 days of defendant's first appearance following the direct filing the defendant may request an evidentiary hearing at which the prosecutor shall establish the existence of such good cause; or

(3) The prosecutor obtains the consent of the court having trial jurisdiction and the complaint upon which the preliminary hearing was held and the other records in the case have not been delivered to the clerk of the proper trial court.

(4) The case was dismissed before a preliminary hearing was held in the county court or in the district court, when one is required, or, in other cases, before the defendant was bound over to the trial court or otherwise set for arraignment or trial. The information shall be accompanied by a written statement from the prosecutor stating good cause for dismissing and then refiling the case. Within 21 days after defendant's first appearance following the direct filing the defendant may request a hearing at which the prosecutor shall establish the existence of such good cause. The prosecution may also submit the matter to a grand jury.

(5) The case was dismissed after the district or county court found probable cause at the preliminary hearing if one was required or, in other cases, after the defendant was bound over to the trial court or otherwise set for arraignment or trial, and before jeopardy has attached. If such case was originally filed by direct information in the district court, the prosecution may not file the same offense(s) by a felony complaint in the county court, but the prosecution may charge the same offense(s) by filing a direct information in the district court or may submit the matter to a grand jury, and the case shall then proceed as if the previous case had never been filed. The prosecution shall also file with the direct information or with the felony complaint a statement showing good cause for dismissing and then refiling the case. Within 21 days of defendant's first appearance following the filing of the new felony complaint or the direct filing of the new information the defendant may request an evidentiary hearing at which the prosecutor shall establish the existence of such good cause.

(d) Repealed.

(e) Amendment of Information. The court may permit an information to be amended as to form or substance at any time prior to trial; the court may permit it to be amended as to form at any time before the verdict or finding if no additional or different offense is charged and if substantial rights of the defendant are not prejudiced.

(f) Surplusage. The court, on motion of the defendant or the prosecutor, may strike surplusage from the information or indictment.

(g) Bill of Particulars. The court may direct the filing of a bill of particulars. A motion for a bill of particulars may be made only within 14 days after arraignment or at such other time before or after arraignment as may be prescribed by rule or order. A bill of particulars may be amended at any time subject to such conditions as justice requires.

(h) Preliminary Hearing - District Court Procedures.

(1) In cases in which a direct information was filed pursuant to Rule 7(c), charging: (1) a class 1, 2, or 3 felony; (2) a level 1 or 2 drug felony; or (3) a class 4, 5, or 6 felony or a level 3 or 4 drug felony if such felony requires mandatory sentencing or is a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406 or is a sexual offense under part 4 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., a preliminary hearing is authorized. Either the defendant or the prosecutor may request a preliminary hearing to determine whether probable cause exists to believe that the offense charged in the information has been committed by the defendant. However, any defendant accused of a class 4, 5, or 6 felony or a level 3 or 4 drug felony who is not otherwise entitled to a preliminary hearing may request a preliminary hearing if the defendant is in custody for the offense for which the preliminary hearing is requested; except that, upon motion of either party, the court shall vacate the preliminary hearing if there is a reasonable showing that the defendant has been released from custody prior to the preliminary hearing. Any person accused of a class 4, 5, or 6 felony or a level 3 or 4 drug felony who may not request a preliminary hearing shall participate in a dispositional hearing unless otherwise waived for the purposes of case evaluation and potential resolution. Except upon a finding of good cause, the request for a preliminary hearing must be made within 7 days after the defendant is brought before the court for or following the filing of the information in that court and prior to a plea. No request for a preliminary hearing may be filed in a case which is to be tried upon indictment.

(2) Upon the making of such a request, or if a dispositional hearing is required, the district court shall set the hearing which shall be held within 35 days of the day of the setting, unless good cause for continuing the hearing beyond that period is shown to the court. The clerk of the court shall prepare and give notice of the hearing, or any continuance thereof, to all parties and their counsel.

(3) The defendant shall not be called upon to plead at the preliminary hearing. The defendant may cross-examine the prosecutor's witnesses and may introduce evidence. The prosecutor shall have the burden of establishing probable cause. The presiding judge at the preliminary hearing may temper the rules of evidence in the exercise of sound judicial discretion.

(4) If, from the evidence, it appears to the district court that no probable cause exists to believe that any or all of the offenses charged were committed by the defendant, the court shall dismiss those counts from the information and, if the court dismisses all counts, discharge the defendant; otherwise, or subsequent to a dispositional hearing, it shall set the case for arraignment or trial. If the prosecutor believes the court erred in its finding of no probable cause, this ruling may be appealed pursuant to Colorado Appellate Rules. Such a ruling shall not constitute good cause for refiling.

(4.5) A dispositional hearing is an opportunity for the parties to report to the court on the status of discussions toward disposition, including presenting any resolution pursuant to C.R.S. 16-7-302. The court shall set the dispositional hearing at a time that will afford the parties an opportunity for case evaluation and potential resolution.

(5) If a request for preliminary hearing has not been filed within the time limitations of subsection (h)(1) of this Rule, such a request shall not thereafter be heard by the court, nor shall the court entertain successive requests for preliminary hearing. The order denying a dismissal of any or all of the counts in the information after a preliminary hearing shall be final and not subject to review on appeal. The granting of such a dismissal or any or all of the counts in an information shall not be a bar to further prosecution of the accused person for the same offenses. Upon a finding of no probable cause, the prosecution may appeal pursuant to Rule 7(h)(4), may file another direct information in the district court pursuant to Rule 7(c)(2) charging the same offense(s) or may submit the matter to a grand jury, but in such cases originally filed by direct information in the district court, the prosecution may not refile the same offense(s) by a felony complaint in the county court.

(i) Motion for Reverse-Transfer Hearing Upon Indictment. In cases commenced by indictment, any motion under section 19-2-517 (3)(a), C.R.S., to transfer the case to juvenile court must be filed within 7 days after the defendant is brought before the court for or following the filing of the indictment in that court and prior to a plea, except upon a showing of good cause.

District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

II. INDICTMENT.

It is defendant's right to be informed with reasonable certainty of nature of charges against him by requiring that an indictment answer the questions of ''who, what, wheres, and how'' in cases where the acts constituting the offense are not adequately described by the statute. People v. Donachy, 196 Colo. 289, 586 P.2d 14 (1978); People v. Gable, 647 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1982).

Indictment must clearly state essential facts which constitute the offense: Fundamental fairness requires no less. People v. Tucker, 631 P.2d 162 (Colo. 1981).

Test of sufficiency of indictment is whether it is sufficiently definite to inform the defendant of the charges against him so as to enable him to prepare a defense and to plead the judgment in bar of any further prosecutions for the same offense. People v. Westendorf, 37 Col. App. 111, 542 P. 2d 1300 (1975); People v. Gable, 647 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1982).

An indictment is sufficient so long as it is not so indefinite in its statement of a particular charge that it fails to afford defendant a fair opportunity to procure witnesses and prepare for trial. People v. Heller, 698 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1984), rev'd on other grounds, 712 P.2d 1023 (Colo. 1986).

Orderly sequence of statement of elements of offense should characterize indictment. Johnson v. People, 110 Colo. 283, 133 P.2d 789 (1943).

The requirements of a criminal indictment by a grand jury are essentially twofold: First, it must give the defendant sufficient notice of the crime that has allegedly been committed so that a defense may be prepared; second, it must define the acts which constitute the crime with sufficient definiteness so that the defendant may plead the resolution of the indictment as a bar to subsequent proceedings. People v. Tucker, 631 P.2d 162 (Colo. 1981).

Insufficient indictment does not legally charge crime or subject defendant to the jurisdiction of the court. People v. Westendorf, 37 Colo. App. 111, 542 P. 2d 1300 (1975).

And jeopardy does not attach to indictment defective in substance. An indictment which is defective in substance merely prevents prosecution on the basis of that particular pleading. No jeopardy attaches, and the defendant may be charged be any appropriate and sufficient pleading. People v. Thimmes, 643 P.2d 780 (Colo. App. 1981).

Recitation of statute may be insufficient. Where acts constituting an offense are not described by the statute, any indictment merely reciting the statutory words is insufficient. People v. Tucker, 631 P.2d 162 (Colo. 1981).

Defendant may raise insufficiency for first time on appeal. Although defendant did not raise the insufficienty of the indictment at trial or in his motion for new trial, he is not thereby precluded from asserting that defect on appeal. People v. Westendorf, 37 Colo. App. 111, 542 P.2d 1300 (1975).

Date of offense is material allegation. Allegations specifying the date on which an accused allegedly committed an offense are always material when the offense charged is one which may be barred by an applicable statute of limitations. People v. Thimmes, 643 P.2d 780 (Colo. App. 1981).

Because of the veil of secrecy surrounding most conspiracies, considerable latitude is allowed in drafting conspiracy indictment. People v. Gable, 647 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1982).

A state grand jury indictment need not be presented in open court to the district court designated as the county of venue for the purposes of trial. The requirement that the indictment be presented in open court applies to the court supervising the state grand jury. People v. Tee, 2018 COA 84, __ P.3d __.

When an indictment is procured by or with the assistance of a prosecuting attorney who is disqualified to conduct the prosecution, it is invalid. Once the disqualification of a district attorney is entered and the appointment of a special prosecutor becomes effective, the special prosecutor, and only the special prosecutor, is the authorized prosecuting attorney on the case. People v. Hastings, 903 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1994).

III. INFORMATION.

A. In General.

District attorney has the authority to file a complaint or information in derogation of grand jury's true bill. Dresner v. County Court, 189 Colo. 374, 540 P.2d 1085 (1975).

Practice of effecting charge through information is not unconstitutionally void as not affording the protection of a grand jury. Falgout v. People, 170 Colo. 32, 459 P.2d 572 (1969); Sergent v. People, 177 Colo. 354, 497 P.2d 983 (1972).

But if information fails to charge crime, court acquires no jurisdiction. People v. Moore, 200 Colo. 481, 615 P.2d 726 (1980).

If the information is not presented by a person authorized by law to prosecute the offense, it is technically insufficient and incorrect and if it is signed by an unauthorized person, it is invalid. People v. Hastings, 903 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1994).

When an information is presented by a disqualified prosecuting attorney, it is invalid. Once the disqualification of a district attorney is entered and the appointment of a special prosecutor becomes effective, the special prosecutor, and only the special prosecutor, is the authorized prosecuting attorney on the case. People v. Hastings, 903 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1994).

Count charged both the crime of sexual assault on a child and the sentence enhancer by clearly identifying each of the elements of both with sufficient particularity. People v. Melillo, 25 P.3d 769 (Colo. 2001).

Amendment of information on date of trial was proper since the amendment went to the dates of the offenses and did not prejudice defendant. The date change was not substantive and there was no prejudice to defendant because previous informations had included the dates in the amendment, so defendant was on notice the charges could include those dates. People v. Walker, 321 P.3d 528 (Colo. App. 2011), aff'd on other grounds, 2014 CO 6, 318 P.3d 479, cert. denied, __ U.S. __, 135 S. Ct. 112, 190 L. Ed. 2d 88 (2014).

Failure to include intent to seek discretionary indeterminate sentencing in information is not plain error. Defendant was aware he was charged with a crime in which indeterminate sentencing was a possibility. People v. Walker, 321 P.3d 528 (Colo. App. 2011), aff'd on other grounds, 2014 CO 6, 318 P.3d 479, cert. denied, __ U.S. __, 135 S. Ct. 112, 190 L. Ed. 2d 88 (2014).

B. Affidavits.

Law reviews. For article, ''Confidential Informants To Disclose or Not to Disclose'', see 19 Colo. Law. 225 (1990).

Verification of an information is required under this rule. Scott v. People, 176 Colo. 289, 490 P.2d 1295 (1971).

Technical defects in the form of an information do not require reversal unless substantial rights of the defendant are prejudiced. Information which omitted the words ''against the peace and dignity of the {People of the State of Colorado}'', did not prejudice defendant's substantial rights. People v. Higgins, 874 P.2d 479 (Colo. App. 1994).

Affiant's competency presumed. It is unnecessary for the affidavit to recite that affiant is ''a competent witness to testify in the case'', as his competency will be presumed until the contrary appears. Walt v. People, 46 Colo. 136, 104 P.2d 89 (1909), appeal dismissed, 223 U.S. 748, 32 S. Ct. 534, 56 L. Ed. 640 (1912); Hubbard v. People, 153 Colo. 252, 385 P.2d 419 (1963).

As is credibility. An affiant's credibility as a witness is presumed until the contrary appears. Hubbard v. People, 153 Colo. 252, 385 P.2d 419 (1963).

Signing affidavit before reading does not nullify affiant's credibility. Although it is extremely poor practice to sign without reading, such does not make affiant an uncredible, where he signed the affidavit as prepared and explained to him, believing he knew what it said. Williams v. People, 157 Colo. 443, 403 P.2d 436 (1965).

Nor does minor factual discrepancy. A discrepancy in the amount of money taken and charged in the affidavit does not render affiant incompetent as a witness. Williams v. People, 157 Colo. 443, 403 P.2d 436 (1965).

Affidavit complies with rule despite technical error. Where a defendant is charged with more than one crime, an affidavit which uses the word ''offense'' rather than ''offenses'' substantially complies with this rule. Martinez v. People, 156 Colo. 380, 399 P.2d 415, cert. denied, 382 U.S. 866, 86 S. Ct. 134, 15 L. Ed. 2d 104 (1965).

And evidence adduced at preliminary hearing may cure defect in affidavit. Where defendants exercised their rights to a preliminary hearing and had the issue of probable cause determined against them by direct evidence, which would be sufficient to satisfy the requirements of this rule, the evidence adduced at the preliminary hearing cured a defect in the affidavit and rendered the issue of personal knowledge of the affiant on the information moot. People v. Weaver, 182 Colo. 221, 511 P.2d 908 (1973).

Affidavit sufficient to meet requirements of this rule. Williams v. People, 157 Colo. 443, 403 P.2d 436 (1965); Coy v. People, 158 Colo. 437, 407 P.2d 345 (1965); Andrews v. People, 161 Colo. 516, 423 P.2d 322 (1967).

Not denial of right of conformation where affiant does not testify at trial. A defendant is not denied his constitutional right of confrontation because an individual who verified the information and who was indorsed as a witness does not testify at the time of trial. Scott v. People, 176 Colo. 289, 490 P.2d 1295 (1971).

IV. DIRECT INFORMATION.

Prosecution's remedies upon dismissal in county court. The prosecution has one of two remedies available to it when a case is dismissed in the county court. If the case is dismissed before a preliminary hearing is held, the prosecution may appeal the order of dismissal to the district court. If the county court dismisses a charge after holding a preliminary hearing under Crim. P. 5(a)(4), the exclusive remedy available to the prosecution is to request leave to file a direct information in the district court. People v. Freiman, 657 P.2d 452 (Colo. 1983).

There is no procedure for dismissing a felony complaint without prejudice. Once the filing of a felony complaint in county court is dismissed, the prosecution must either obtain a grand jury indictment or file an information directly in the district court. People v. Williams, 987 P.2d 232 (Colo. 1999).

The purpose to be achieved by the district court consent requirement of section (c)(2) is to insure that the accused is not subject to oppressive and malicious prosecutions. People v. Elmore, 652 P.2d 571 (Colo. 1982).

Consent of court cannot be perfunctory. People v. Swazo, 191 Colo. 425, 553 P.2d 782 (1976).

As informed consent required. The logical application of section (c), requires informed consent. Otherwise, any real distinction between section (b)(3), and section (c) would be illusory. People v. Swazo, 191 Colo. 425, 553 P.2d 782 (1976).

And exercise of discretion. The requirement of court consent implies a real application of discretion. People v. Swazo, 191 Colo. 425, 553 P.2d 782 (1976); People v. Elmore, 652 P.2d 571 (Colo. 1982); People v. Sabell, 708 P.2d 463 (Colo. 1985).

In exercising its discretion in deciding whether to permit a direct filing of an information, the district court is required to balance the right of the district attorney to prosecute criminal cases against the need to protect the accused from discrimination and oppression. People v. Freiman, 657 P.2d 452 (Colo. 1983).

There is no constitutional right to a preliminary hearing when a direct information is filed. Falgout v. People, 170 Colo. 32, 459 P.2d 572 (1969); Hervey v. People, 178 Colo. 38, 495 P.2d 204 (1972); Sergent v. People, 177 Colo. 354, 497 P.2d 983 (1972); People v. Moreno, 181 Colo. 106, 507 P.2d 857 (1973).

As bringing charge by direct information is not in violation of either state or federal constitution. Habbord v. People, 175 Colo. 417, 488 P.2d 554 (1971).

And whether a preliminary hearing shall be had is a procedural matter. De Baca v. Trujillo, 167 Colo. 311, 447 P.2d 533 (1968).

Purpose behind requiring personal knowledge of affiant in direct information is to assure that there is probable cause to initiate the criminal proceeding, so as to safeguard the rights of innocent citizens. People v. Weaver, 182 Colo. 221, 511 P.2d 908 (1973).

Authority to file direct information charging differently than true bill. Where a true bill was never filed in district court, the district attorney had the power and authority to file a complaint or direct information that included charges which were different than those allegedly set forth in the true bill returned by a grand jury. Dresner v. County Court, 189 Colo. 374, 540 P.2d 1085 (1975).

No requirement of new evidence to support direct filing. There is no requirement that the district attorney establish that there exists new or additional evidence to support the direct filing of an information. The existence of such evidence is only one factor the district court may consider in exercising its discretion to determine whether to allow the direct filing. Holmes v. District Court, 668 P.2d 11 (Colo. 1983).

Incompetent evidence acceptable at hearing. Hearsay evidence, and other evidence, which would be incompetent if offered at the time of trial, may be the bulk of evidence at a preliminary hearing. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

Prosecutor must apprise judge of prior dismissal of charges. For consent to be valid, there must be a sufficient evidentiary disclosure by the prosecutor to at least apprise the judge of a prior dismissal of the identical charges in county court and the reasons for the direct filing. People v. Swazo, 191 Colo. 425, 553 P.2d 782 (1976).

And hearing in district court may be demanded even though such hearing was held in county court. After the filing of a direct information in the district court either the people or the defendant may demand a preliminary hearing in that court even where there has been a dismissal of a felony complaing by the county court following a preliminary hearing on the same charge. People v. Burggraf, 36 Colo. App. 137, 536 P.2d 48 (1975).

Direct information not available after dismissal for failure to prosecute. Section (c) does not allow filing of a direct information in the district court if the charges, first filed in county court, are dismissed before a preliminary hearing for failure of the prosecution to comply with the 30-day rule in Crim. P. 5(a)(4)(I). Chavez v. District Court, 648 P.2d 658 (Colo. 1982).

Court's discretion in filing direct information following dismissal. While under section (c)(2), the district attorney, with the consent of the court, may file a direct information in the district court if a preliminary hearing was held on the same charge in the county court and the accused was discharged, before the district court may properly exercise its discretion, there must be a sufficient evidentiary disclosure by the prosecution to apprise the district court of the earlier dismissal of the identical charges in the county court and the reasons for the requested refiling. When exercising its discretion in deciding whether to permit the direct filing of an information, the district court is required to balance the right of the district attorney to prosecute criminal cases against the need to protect the accused from discrimination and oppression. Holmes v. District Court, 668 P.2d 11 (Colo. 1983); People v. Sabell, 708 P.2d 463 (Colo. 1985).

When the motion under section (c)(2) did not identify the county court's error and did not describe testimony at the preliminary hearing in detail, there was not sufficient evidentiary disclosure to allow refiling. Borg v. District Court, 686 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1984).

Requirement of district court's consent for filing of direct information implies an exercise of court's discretion which will not be overturned unless there exists abuse of such discretion. People v. Stokes, 812 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court's denial of defendant's motion to dismiss, despite failure of prosecution to advise trial court of prior dismissal, was not error where consent by the court was obtained and the dismissed case involved separate and distinct charges. People v. Higgins, 874 P.2d 479 (Colo. App. 1994).

Belief that county court erred in finding no probable cause existed for sexual assault charge does not constitute good cause for refiling charges by direct information as issue of adequacy of evidence may be addressed only upon appellate review. People v. Stokes, 812 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1991).

District court's denial of consent for filing of direct information did not constitute abuse of discretion when prosecution did not present testimony of victim in county court proceedings for tactical reasons. People v. Stokes, 812 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1991).

District attorney allowed to join offenses arising from criminal episode. This rule allows the district attorney, with the consent of the trial court, to file a direct information joining any or all offenses arising from a criminal episode. People v. District Court, 183 Colo. 101, 515 P.2d 101 (1973).

V. NAMES OF WITNESSES.

Compliance with this rule is mandatory for district attorney. People v. Bailey, 191 Colo. 366, 552 P.2d 1014 (1976).

Purpose of supplying names of witnesses with the indictment or information is to advise defendants of the identity of those who might testify against them and to afford counsel an opportunity, where deemed advisable, to interview such witnesses. Reed v. People, 171 Colo. 421, 467 P.2d 809 (1970); People v. Bailey, 191 Colo. 336, 552 P.2d 1014 (1976).

Allowance of late endorsements of prosecution witnesses is within discretion of trial court. People v. Muniz, 622 P.2d 100 (Colo. App. 1980); Corbett v. People, 153 Colo. 457, 387 P.2d 409 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1346, 12 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1964); People v. Buckner, 180 Colo. 65, 504 P.2d 669 (1972); People v. Wandel, 713 P.2d 398 (Colo. App. 1985).

And no error unless defendant prejudiced. In order to constitute reversible error where there is a late endorsement of a witness, the defendant must show that he was prejudiced because the appearance of the witness surprised him and because he did not have adequate opportunity to interview the witness prior to trial. People v. Bailey, 191 Colo. 366, 552 P.2d 1014 (1976).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing prosecution to endorse four witnesses on the day of the trial where defendant was familiar with testimony of three of the witnesses and did not request a continuance for the purpose of interviewing them, and where endorsement of the fourth witness was conditioned upon defendant having access prior to the witness' testimony. People v. Castango, 674 P.2d 978 (Colo. App. 1983).

When failure to notify defendant of witness's change of address not reversible error. Failure to notify defendant of a change of address of a witness is not grounds for reversal where no surprise is shown when he testifies at the trial, no continuance has been sought on the grounds that there was no opportunity to interview him prior to trial, and no attempt has been made to ascertain his current address if defendant had sought to locate him for the purpose of interview. Reed v. People, 171 Colo. 421, 467 P.2d 809 (1970).

Defense counsel's refusal to request continuance may be waiver of claim of prejudicial error due to late endorsement. People v. Bailey, 191 Colo. 366, 552 P.2d 1014 (1976).

VI. NATURE AND CONTENTS OF INFORMATION.

A specific crime must be alleged in the information. Gomez v. People, 162 Colo. 77, 424 P.2d 387 (1967); Henson v. People, 166 Colo. 428, 444 P.2d 275 (1968).

But the name of the crime need not be mentioned in an information, if the crime is adequately described therein. Gallegos v. People, 166 Colo. 409, 444 P.2d 267 (1968).

Rather, information is sufficient if it advises a defendant of the offense with which he is charged. Edwards v. People, 176 Colo. 478, 491 P.2d 566 (1971); People v. Ingersoll, 181 Colo. 1, 506 P.2d 364 (1973); People v. Flanders, 183 Colo. 268, 516 P.2d 418 (1973); People v. Gnout, 183 Colo. 366, 517 P.2d 394 (1973); People v. Moore, 200 Colo. 481, 615 P.2d 726 (1980).

And can be understood by the jury. An information is sufficient if the charge is in language from which the nature of the offense may be readily understood by the accused and jury. Tracy v. People, 65 Colo. 226, 176 P. 280 (1918); Sarno v. People, 74 Colo. 528, 223 P. 41 (1924); Albert v. People, 90 Colo. 219, 7 P.2d 822 (1932); Johnson v. People, 110 Colo. 283, 133 P.2d 789 (1943); Wright v. People, 116 Colo. 306, 181 P.2d 447 (1947); Ciccarelli v. People, 147 Colo. 413, 364 P.2d 368 (1961); Loggins v. People, 178 Colo. 439, 498 P.2d 1146 (1972); Olguin v. People, 179 Colo. 26, 497 P.2d 1254 (1972).

So that defendant can defend against it. An information is sufficient if it advises the accused of the charge he is facing so that he can adequately defend against it. Gallegos v. People, 166 Colo. 409, 444 P.2d 267 (1968); Perez v. People, 176 Colo. 505, 491 P.2d 969 (1971); Loggins v. People, 178 Colo. 439, 498 P.2d 1146 (1972); People v. Flanders, 183 Colo. 268, 516 P.2d 418 (1973); People v. Gnout, 183 Colo. 366, 517 P.2d 394 (1973); People v. Moore, 200 Colo. 481, 615 P.2d 726 (1980); People in Interest of R.G., 630 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1981).

And be protected from further prosecution for the same offense. An information is sufficient if it advises the defendant of the charges he is facing so that he can adequately defend himself and be protected from further prosecution for the same offense. People v. Warner, 112 Colo. 565, 151 P.2d 975 (1944); Ciccarelli v. People, 147 Colo. 413, 364 P.2d 368 (1961); People v. Allen, 167 Colo. 158, 446 P.2d 223 (1968); Loggins v. People, 178 Colo. 439, 498 P.2d 1146 (1972); Olguin v. People, 179 Colo. 26, 497 P.2d 1254 (1972); People v. Ingersoll, 181 Colo. 1, 506 P.2d 364 (1973). People v. Flanders, 183 Colo. 268, 516 P.2d 418 (1973); People v. Gnout, 183 Colo. 366, 517 P.2d 394 (1973); People v. Moore, 200 Colo. 481, 615 P.2d 726 (1980); People v. Palmer, 87 P.3d 137 (Colo. App. 2003).

Although great detail not needed as judgment, not information, constitutes bar. An information need not plead an offense in such detail as to be self-sufficient as a bar to further prosecution for the same offense; for the judgment constitutes a bar, and the extent of the judgment may be determined from an examination of the record as a whole. Mora v. People, 172 Colo. 261, 472 P.2d 142 (1970); Howe v. People, 178 Colo. 248, 496 P.2d 1040 (1972).

Jeopardy does not attach if information is insufficient to sustain conviction. People v. Garner, 187 Colo. 294, 530 P.2d 496 (1975).

Dimissal if defendant not fairly and reasonably informed of accusations. There must be a variance between the information and the proof to be offered constituting such an imperfection or inaccuracy that the defendant was not fairly and reasonably informed of the nature and cause of the accusations against him in order that a motion of dismissal be granted. People v. Allen, 167 Colo. 158, 446 P.2d 223 (1968).

Each count of information must be independent. Absent a clear and specific incorporation by reference, each count of an information to be valid must be independent of the others, and in itself charge the defendant with a distinct and different offense. People v. Moore, 200 Colo. 481, 615 P.2d 726 (1980); People v. Steiner, 640 P.2d 250 (Colo. App. 1981).

But clear and specific incorporation by reference permitted. Any count in an information may, by proper reference, incorporate the allegations more fully set forth in another count, such reference must be clear, specific, and leave no doubt as to what provision is intended to be incorporated and this same rule is applicable to incorporating the caption. People v. Steiner, 640 P.2d 250 (Colo. App. 1981).

Information is sufficient if it charges crime in the words of the statute. Williams v. People, 26 Colo. 272, 57 P. 701 (1899); Wright v. People, 116 Colo. 306, 181 P.2d 447 (1947); Gallegos v. People, 166 Colo. 409, 444 P.2d 267 (1968); People v. Moreno, 176 Colo. 488, 491 P.2d 575 (1971); Perez v. People, 176 Colo. 505, 491 P.2d 969 (1971); Loggins v. People, 178 Colo. 439, 498 P.2d 1146 (1972); Olguin v. People, 179 Colo. 26, 497 P.2d 1254 (1972); People v. Palmer, 87 P.3d 137 (Colo. App. 2003).

However, an information need not follow the exact wording of the statute. Sarno v. People, 74 Colo. 528, 223 P. 41 (1924); Albert v. People, 90 Colo. 219, 7 P.2d 822 (1932); Helser v. People, 100 Colo. 371, 68 P.2d 543 (1937); Ciccarelli v. People, 147 Colo. 413, 364 P.2d 368 (1961); Cortez v. People, 155 Colo. 317, 394 P.2d 346 (1964); Gallegos v. People, 166 Colo. 409, 444 P.2d 267 (1968); Perez v. People, 176 Colo. 505, 491 P.2d 969 (1971); Loggins v. People, 178 Colo. 439, 498 P.2d 1146 (1972); People v. Russell, 36 P.3d 92 (Colo. App. 2001).

The charging of a defendant in the conjunctive where a statute defines a crime as being capable of being committed in diverse ways is proper. Rowe v. People, 26 Colo. 542, 59 P. 57 (1899); Hernandez v. People, 156 Colo. 23, 396 P.2d 952 (1964).

And statutory reference is not material part of information, and, in the absence of any showing that the defendant is actually misled to his prejudice by such an inaccuracy, no error arises therefrom. Lucero v. People, 164 Colo. 247, 434 P.2d 128 (1967); People v. Marion, 182 Colo. 435, 514 P.2d 327 (1973); People v. Johnson, 644 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1980); People in Interest of R.G., 630 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1981).

Information need not specify lesser included offenses which may have been committed in commission of the described act. People in Interest of R.G., 630 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1981).

No information is deemed insufficient by any defect which does not tend to prejudice the substantial rights of the defendant on the merits. Albert v. People, 90 Colo. 219, 7 P.2d 822 (1932); Martinez v. People, 156 Colo. 380, 399 P.2d 415, cert. denied, 382 U.S. 866, 86 S. Ct. 134, 15 L. Ed. 2d 104 (1965).

Date of offense is not material allegation of information. Marn v. People, 175 Colo. 242, 486 P.2d 424 (1971).

Where the defendant made no showing that he was impaired in his defense to the charge at trial or in his ability to plead the judgment as a bar to a subsequent proceeding, a variance between the specific date of the offense as alleged in the information and the date as proved at trial is not fatal. People v. Adler, 629 P.2d 569 (Colo. 1981).

The prosecution is not required to specify a precise date of an alleged offense unless that date is a material element of the offense. People v. Salyer, 80 P.3d 831 (Colo. App. 2003).

But failure to allege where offense committed makes information insufficient. When an information fails to allege where the offense was committed, and thus, that it occurred within the jurisdiction of the court, it fails to state facts sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon the district court of the county in which it is filed to try the defendant. People v. Steiner, 640 P.2d 250 (Colo. App. 1981).

Separate allegation of place where offense was committed, which specifically referred to all previously alleged offenses, clearly advised defendant of claimed location of offenses, and was sufficient. People v. Brinson, 739 P.2d 897 (Colo. App. 1987).

If the information is signed by an unauthorized person, it is invalid. People v. Hastings, 903 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1994).

Information charging offense beyond statute of limitations. The trial court has jurisdiction to entertain a motion to amend an information which charges an offense committed outside of the statute of limitations. People v. Bowen, 658 P.2d 269 (Colo. 1983).

When general statement of offense not error. Charging theft of ''miscellaneous personal property'' in information is sufficient where itemized list is furnished defense. Howe v. People, 178 Colo. 248, 496 P.2d 1040 (1972).

And poor writing style not error where nature of charge clear. Where an information could have been written in far better style, but there can be no doubt that its meaning is clear, then defendants are adequately advised of the nature of the crime charged against them, and this is all section (c) requires. Covington v. People, 36 Colo. 183, 85 P. 832 (1906); Petty v. People, 156 Colo. 549, 400 P.2d 666 (1965).

Sufficiency of information is matter of jurisdiction. People v. Garner, 187 Colo. 294, 530 P.2d 946 (1975).

And such matter may be raised after trial by a motion in arrest of judgment. People v. Garner, 187 Colo. 294, 530 P.2d 496 (1975).

VII. AMENDMENT OF INFORMATION.

The purposes served by a criminal information are to advise the defendant of the nature of the charges against him, to enable him to prepare a defense, and to protect him from further prosecution for the same offense, and it is within the discretion of the trial court to allow the information to be amended as to form or substance any time prior to trial. People v. Thomas, 832 P.2d 990 (Colo. App. 1991).

When the defendant had actual notice before trial that he was being charged with having committed three prior felonies under § 16-13-101 (2) rather than two prior felonies under § 16-13-101 (1), an amendment to the information to reflect that state of affairs was a matter of form and not of substance. People v. Butler, 929 P.2d 36 (Colo. App. 1996).

Substance should prevail over form and cases generally should not be dismissed for technical irregularities that can be cured through amendment. People v. Hertz, 196 Colo. 259, 586 P.2d 5 (1978); People v. Cervantes, 677 P.2d 403 (Colo. App. 1983), aff'd, 715 P.2d 783 (Colo. 1986); People v. Washam, 2018 CO 19, __ P.3d __.

An amended complaint that merely remedies an insufficient list of victims in the original complaint relates back to the date of the original and is not time-barred. People v. Higgins, 868 P.2d 371 (Colo. 1994).

Where late amendment of information allowed. Where the court allowed the prosecution to amend the information one week before trial and then denied defendants' motions for continuance, there was no abuse of discretion where defendants' counsel knew of the amendment two weeks before trial, where the trial was reset so as to grant an additional week's continuance, where the amendment added nothing substantial to the original charge, and where there was no showing in the record that defendants were prejudiced by the denial. People v. Buckner, 180 Colo. 65, 504 P.2d 669 (1972).

Defendant must request continuance to claim prejudice or surprise. Defendant who did not request continuance when amendments and deletions to information were made has no basis for claiming prejudice or surprise. People v. Marion, 182 Colo. 435, 514 P.2d 327 (1973); People v. Swain, 43 Colo. App. 343, 607 P.2d 396 (1979); People v. Cervantes, 677 P.2d 403 (Colo. App. 1983), aff'd, 715 P.2d 783 (Colo. 1986).

No amendment of substance after prosecution presents evidence. An accused person is entitled to be tried on the specific charge contained in the information, and after a plea of not guilty has been entered and the state has submitted all the evidence which the prosecutor desires to present to sustain that charge, no amendment can be made thereto which changes entirely the substance of the crime which defendant is alleged to have committed. Skidmore v. People, 154 Colo. 363, 390 P.2d 944 (1964); People v. Jefferson, 934 P.2d 870 (Colo. App. 1996).

A constructive amendment after completion of the evidence is per se reversible error. People v. Madden, 87 P.3d 153 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 111 P.3d 452 (Colo. 2005).

Prosecution's theory that defendant concealed information to illegally obtain a controlled substance did not effect a constructive amendment to charge involving fraud, deceit, and misrepresentation. People v. Harte, 131 P.3d 1180 (Colo. App. 2005).

And no substitution of statute prosecution conducted under. Where an information identifies with particularity the exact section of a statute upon which prosecution is based, no other statute can be substituted for the one actually selected as forming the subject matter of the prosecution. Casadas v. People, 134 Colo. 244, 304 P.2d 626 (1956); Skidmore v. People, 154 Colo. 363, 390 P.2d 944 (1964).

Nor amendment to charge more serious offense. Where the amended information would charge a different and more serious offense than that which was originally charged, the amendment should not be permitted. People v. Johnson, 644 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1980).

Amending a charge within the same offense from a charge that did not require mandatory sentencing to one requiring mandatory sentencing for a crime of violence is impermissible after trial begins. People v. Manyik, 2016 COA 42, 383 P.3d 77.

Language of information is controlling factor. The language of an information charging an offense is the controlling factor in determining whether the amendment was permissible after trial. People v. Johnson, 644 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1980).

Section (e) is to be liberally construed to allow amendment of an information ''as to form or substance at any time prior to trial'', and it is within the trial court's discretion to permit the information to be amended. People v. Wright, 678 P.2d 1072 (Colo. App. 1984).

Amendment that does not affect charge permitted prior to verdict. An amendment that does not charge an additional or different offense and does not go to the essence of the charge is one of form rather than substance, and it may be permitted at any time prior to verdict. Collins v. People, 69 Colo. 353, 195 P. 525 (1920); Maraggos v. People, 175 Colo. 130, 486 P.2d 1 (1971); People v. Washam, 2018 CO 19, __ P.3d __.

Where an information contains specific language of the offense underlying an habitual criminal count, a defendant is not prejudiced by amendment of the statutory reference thereto. People v. Ybarra, 652 P.2d 182 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Stephens, 689 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1984).

No amendment was necessary where the information was sufficient to provide the defendant notice of the charge and defendant's defense was applicable to the offense as stated in the jury instructions. The jury instruction stated that the victim was an at-risk adult, but the count did not specifically refer to § 18-6.5-101, which proscribes crimes against at-risk adults, and the information did not specifically identify the victim as an at-risk adult. However, no amendment was necessary because throughout the trial the prosecution demonstrated its intent to prosecute under the at-risk adult statute and defendant's theory of defense was applicable regardless of how the information stated the elements of the offense. People v. Valdez, 946 P.2d 491 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd on other grounds, 966 P.2d 587 (Colo. 1998).

It was not error to allow amendment of habitual criminal count prior to presentation of evidence but after jury was sworn in. People v. Wandel, 713 P.2d 398 (Colo. App. 1985).

No abuse of discretion when court permitted district attorney to amend robbery count to add items taken from victim. The amendment did not result in new charges so there was no prejudice to defendant. People v. Al-Yousif, 206 P.3d 824 (Colo. App. 2006).

No error committed by allowing the information to be amended on a matter of form. The amendment reduced the number of victims, thereby reducing the likelihood of criminal liability and benefitting the defendant. People v. Manzanares, 942 P.2d 1235 (Colo. App. 1996).

An amendment to an information narrowing the date range after the trial began did not prejudice defendant's substantial rights. Defendant was always informed of the time frame in the case against him, and so the trial court did not abuse its discretion. To the extent that defendant's defense changed at all, it was to his benefit. People v. Washam, 2018 CO 19, __ P.3d __.

Amendments of form. Changing name of owner of premises in information charging burglary is an amendment of form rather than substance. Maraggos v. People, 175 Colo. 130, 486 P.2d 1 (1971).

In prosecutions for larceny, amendments to an information changing the name or description of the owner of the property are of form, not substance, and are allowable during the trial. Collins v. People, 69 Colo. 353, 195 P. 525 (1920); Diebold v. People, 175 Colo. 96, 485 P.2d 900 (1971).

An amendment of an information transposing the victim's first and last names is not prejudicial to the defendant, and is one of form rather than substance within the meaning of section (e). McKee v. People, 175 Colo. 410, 487 P.2d 1332 (1971).

Amendment of information to add missing words so that defendant could be charged with second degree assault was one of form and was properly allowed by the court. People v. Cervantes, 677 P.2d 403 (Colo. App. 1983), aff'd, 715 P.2d 783 (Colo. 1986).

And correction of immaterial errors does not require rearraignment. The mere correction of a clerical or other immaterial error in an indictment does not require a second arraignment and plea. Albritton v. People, 157 Colo. 518, 403 P.2d 772 (1965).

Allegations of time are substantive in prosecutions under § 18-4-402 (1)(b). Section 18-4-402 (1)(b) (theft of rental property) proscribes only conduct which occurs after the expiration of the rental period specified in a rental agreement. In prosecutions commenced under § 18-4-402 (1)(b), allegations of time are, therefore, substantive allegations — not mere matters of form which may be altered by amendment at any time prior to the rendering of a verdict in the absence of prejudice to the defendant. People v. Moody, 674 P.2d 366 (Colo. 1984).

No abuse of discretion in granting motion to amend information where defendant was served with a copy of the written motion four days before trial, he understood the allegations of the amendment, he failed to request a continuance, and he made no showing of prejudice, misunderstanding, or surprise by reason of the time at which the amendment was made. People v. Thomas, 832 P.2d 990 (Colo. App. 1991).

Amendment of information at close of evidence was permissible where amendment related to acts occurring within the statutory limitation period, date of offense was neither a material element nor an issue at trial, and the amendment did not involve an altered accusation or require a different defense strategy from the one defendant had chosen under the initial information. People v. Metcalf, 926 P.2d 133 (Colo. App. 1996).

The people's failure actually to file an amended information after filing a written motion containing all of the allegations that would have been contained in any formal amendment to the information did not result in a lack of jurisdiction, nor was it an error so grave as to require a vacation of the conviction. People v. Thomas, 832 P.2d 990 (Colo. App. 1991).

Court's decision to submit to the jury a burglary charge based on unlawful sexual contact instead of the underlying offense of sexual assault was not in error. In this case unlawful sexual contact is a lesser included offense of sexual assault based on sexual intrusion. People v. Loyas, 259 P.3d 505 (Colo. App. 2010).

New charges may not be filed after a defendant's successful appeal unless new evidence supports their filing. The fourteen new counts added by the prosecution were based on new evidence; specifically, new witness disclosures and new evidence obtained by new technological methods not available at the first trial. People v. Cook, 2014 COA 33, 342 P.3d 539.

Because the prosecution's amended information required proof of an additional element and carried a harsher minimum and maximum sentence, the amendment changed the essence of the charge and was, therefore, substantive. People v. Palmer, 2018 COA 38, 433 P.3d 107.

VIII. SURPLUSAGE.

Averments which are not necessary to a sufficient description of the offense may be stricken as surplusage. Specht v. People, 156 Colo. 12, 396 P.2d 838 (1964).

IX. BILL OF PARTICULARS.

Bill not to disclose prosecution's evidence in detail. The purpose of a bill of particulars is not to disclose in detail the evidence upon which the prosecution expects to rely. Balltrip v. People, 157 Colo. 108, 401 P.2d 259 (1965); People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 501, 603 P.2d 127 (1979).

Rather, purpose of a bill of particulars is to define more specifically offense charged. Balltrip v. People, 157 Colo. 108, 401 P.2d 259 (1965).

A bill of particulars calls for an exposition of the facts that the prosecution intends to prove and limits the proof at trial to those areas described in the bill. People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 501, 603 P.2d 127 (1979).

The purpose of a bill of particulars is to enable the defendant to properly prepare his defense in cases where the indictment, although sufficient to advise the defendant of the charges raised against him, is nonetheless so indefinite in its statement of a particular charge that it does not afford the defendant a fair opportunity to procure witnesses and prepare for trial. People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 501, 603 P.2d 127 (1979).

A bill of particulars must provide such information requested by defendant as is necessary for the defendant to prepare his defense and to avoid prejudicial surprise. However, a defendant is not necessarily entitled to receive all the information requested for a bill of particulars. The prosecution need not disclose in detail all evidence upon which it intends to rely. People v. Lewis, 671 P.2d 985 (Colo. App. 1983).

It is within the trial court's discretion to grant or deny motions for bills of particulars, and its action will not be disturbed on writ of error in the absence of an abuse of discretion. Stewart v. People, 86 Colo. 456, 283 P. 47 (1929); Johnson v. People, 110 Colo. 283, 133 P.2d 789 (1943); Balltrip v. People, 157 Colo. 108, 401 P.2d 259 (1965); Self v. People, 167 Colo. 292, 448 P.2d 619 (1968); Howe v. People, 178 Colo. 248, 496 P.2d 1040 (1972); People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 501, 603 P.2d 127 (1979); People v. Pineda, 40 P.3d 60 (Colo. App. 2001).

Considerations in addressing motion for bill. When addressing motions requesting bills of particulars, the trial judge should consider whether the requested information is necessary for the defendant to prepare his defense and to avoid prejudicial surprise. People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 501, 603 P.2d 127 (1979).

Bill mandatory where crime charged in words of statute. Where the crime of theft is charged in the words of the statute, an order for a bill of particulars is mandatory upon the defendant's request. People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 501, 603 P.2d 127 (1979).

Bill may be denied where information sufficiently advises defendant. There is no abuse of discretion in denying a motion for a bill of particulars where the information sufficiently advises the defendant of the charge he is to meet. Johnson v. People, 110 Colo. 283, 133 P.2d 789 (1943); Balltrip v. People, 157 Colo. 108, 401 P.2d 259 (1965); Self v. People, 167 Colo. 292, 448 P.2d 619 (1968); Howe v. People, 178 Colo. 248, 496 P.2d 1040 (1972).

Bill properly denied where, at the time defendant requested a bill of particulars, several preliminary hearings had already been conducted, and the prosecution had provided the defendant with much of the evidence that was later presented at trial. People v. Pineda, 40 P.3d 60 (Colo. App. 2001).

Bill cannot aid fundamentally bad indictment. Although the purpose of a bill of particulars is to define more specifically the offense charged, a bill of particulars is not a part of an indictment nor an amendment thereto; it cannot in any way aid an indictment fundamentally bad. People v. Westendorf, 37 Colo. App. 111, 542 P.2d 1300 (1975).

A bill of particulars under section (g) cannot save an insufficient indictment. People v. Tucker, 631 P.2d 162 (Colo. 1981).

Bill of particulars was sufficient where the defendant was given the specific incidents the prosecution would rely on and the general time frame when the sexual assaults occurred. People v. Graham, 876 P.2d 68 (Colo. App. 1994).

X. PRELIMINARY HEARING.

Law reviews. For article, ''Felony Preliminary Hearings in Colorado'', see 17 Colo. Law. 1085 (1988).

Trial court does not lose its authority to conduct a preliminary hearing after a defendant enters a not guilty plea. People v. Simpson, 2012 COA 156, 292 P.3d 1153.

Primary purpose of the preliminary hearing is to determine whether probable cause exists to support the prosecution's charge that the accused committed a specific crime. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973); People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974); People v. District Court, 186 Colo. 136, 526 P.2d 289 (1974); McDonald v. District Court, 195 Colo. 159, 576 P.2d 169 (1978); People in Interest of M.V., 742 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1987).

Preliminary hearing is a screening device to determine whether probable cause exists. People v. Weaver, 182 Colo. 221, 511 P.2d 908 (1973); People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973); Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975); People v. Buhrle, 744 P.2d 747 (Colo. 1987).

The preliminary hearing is a screening device, designed to determine whether probable cause exists to support charges that an accused person committed a particular crime or crimes. People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977); People v. Johnson, 618 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1980); Miller v. District Court, 641 P.2d 966 (Colo. 1982).

The purpose of a preliminary hearing is to screen out cases in which prosecution is unwarranted by allowing an impartial judge to determine whether there is probable cause to believe that the crime charged may have been committed by the defendant. Rex v. Sullivan, 194 Colo. 568, 575 P.2d 408 (1978); People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

Evidence to support a conviction is not necessary at a preliminary hearing. People v. District Court, 186 Colo. 136, 526 P.2d 289 (1974); People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977); People v. Johnson, 618 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1980); Miller v. District Court, 641 P.2d 966 (Colo. 1982).

Result of finding probable cause. A finding by the district court that there is probable cause can only have the result that the court shall set the case for arraignment or trial. People v. District Court, 186 Colo. 136, 526 P.2d 289 (1974).

This rule sets forth specific requirements which must be met by a defendant in order to obtain a preliminary hearing. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

And opening sentence of section (h) limits applicability of that section to those cases which are instituted in the district court by direct information filed under section (c). People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

Proceeding with a preliminary hearing for the sole purpose of preserving the possibility of a direct filing is not good cause for such filing. People v. Stanchieff, 862 P.2d 988 (Colo. App. 1993).

The preliminary hearing is not minitrial, but rather is limited to the purpose of determining whether there is probable cause to believe that a crime was committed and that the defendant committed it. Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975); Johns v. District Court, 192 Colo. 462, 561 P.2d 1 (1977); People v. Cisneros, 193 Colo. 380, 566 P.2d 703 (1977); McDonald v. District Court, 195 Colo. 159, 576 P.2d 169 (1978); Flores v. People, 196 Colo. 565, 593 P.2d 316 (1978); People in Interest of M.V., 742 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1987).

The preliminary hearing is not intended to be a minitrial or to afford the defendant an opportunity to effect discovery. Rex v. Sullivan, 194 Colo. 568, 575 P.2d 408 (1978); McDonald v. District Court, 195 Colo. 159, 576 P.2d 169 (1978).

And judge not trier of fact. In Colorado, the preliminary hearing is not a ''minitrial'', and the judge is not a trier of fact; rather, his function is solely to determine the existence or absence of probable cause. Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975).

No consideration of probability of conviction. A preliminary hearing focuses upon a probable cause determination, rather than a consideration of the probability of conviction at the ensuing trial. Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975).

Nor require examination of all prosecution witnesses and evidence. Preliminary hearing does not require that the prosecution lay out for inspection and for full examination all witnesses and evidence. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

Merely quantum necessary to establish probable cause. The prosecution need not produce all of its evidence against the defendant at the preliminary hearing, but only that quantum necessary to establish probable cause. Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975).

The probable cause standard requires evidence sufficient to induce a person of ordinary prudence and caution to entertain a reasonable belief that the defendant committed the crimes charged. People v. Johnson, 618 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1980); People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977); Miller v. District Court, 641 P.2d 966 (Colo. 1982); People in Interest of M.V., 742 P.2d, 326 (Colo. 1987).

The prosecution is not required to produce at a preliminary hearing evidence that is sufficient to support a conviction. People in Interest of M.V., 742 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1987).

It is not necessary that the prosecution show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the crime; nor is it even necessary to show the probability of the defendant's conviction. People in Interest of M.V., 742 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1987).

Prosecution may seek a grand jury indictment after dismissal by a county court on a preliminary hearing for lack of probable cause as an alternative to appealing to or filing a direct information in the district court. People v. Noline, 917 P.2d 1256 (Colo. 1996).

Under section (h)(3), the burden of proof is on the prosecution, and the defendant need not testify, although he has the right to cross-examine the witnesses called by the People. Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975).

Although trial judge may curtail the right to cross-examine and to introduce evidence in the preliminary hearing, he may not completely prevent inquiry into matters relevant to the determination of probable cause or disregard the testimony of a witness favorable to the prosecution unless such testimony is implausible or incredible as a matter of law. People v. Buhrle, 744 P.2d 747 (Colo. 1987).

District court may not review county court's probable cause finding. It is not proper for the district court to review the county court's finding of probable cause. Blevins v. Tihonovich, 728 P.2d 732 (Colo. 1986).

Rules of evidence and procedure relaxed. In light of its limited purpose, evidentiary and procedural rules in the preliminary hearing in Colorado are relaxed. Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975).

Since the preliminary hearing is not a minitrial, greater evidentiary and procedural latitude is granted to the prosecution to establish probable cause than would be permqtted at trial to prove the defendant committed the crime. People v. Buhrle, 744 P.2d 747 (Colo. 1987).

But may not rely solely on hearsay. While the bulk of testimony at a preliminary hearing may be hearsay, the prosecution may not totally rely on hearsay to establish probable cause where competent evidence is readily available. Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975); McDonald v. District Court, 195 Colo. 159, 576 P.2d 169 (1978).

Consideration of credibility of witnesses limited. A judge in a preliminary hearing has jurisdiction to consider the credibility of witnesses only when, as a matter of law, the testimony is implausible or incredible. Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975); Johns v. District Court, 192 Colo. 462, 561 P.2d 1 (1977); People in Interest of M.V., 742 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1987).

Inferences to be made in favor of prosecution. When there is a mere conflict in the testimony, a question of fact exists for the jury, and the judge in a preliminary hearing must draw the inference favorable to the prosecution. Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975); Johns v. District Court, 192 Colo. 461, 561 P.2d 1 (1977); People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977); People v. Johnson, 618 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1980); Miller v. District Court, 641 P.2d 966 (Colo. 1982); People in Interest of M.V., 742 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1987).

The right to cross-examine and to introduce evidence may be curtailed by the presiding judge consistent with the screening purpose of the preliminary hearing. Rex v. Sullivan, 194 Colo. 568, 575 P.2d 408 (1978).

But judge may not completely curtail inquiry into matters relevant to the determination of probable cause. Rex v. Sullivan, 194 Colo. 568, 575 P.2d 408 (1978).

When prohibiting defense from calling witness deemed abuse of discretion. Where an eyewitness is available in court during a preliminary hearing and where the prosecution is relying almost completely on hearsay testimony, it is an abuse of discretion to prohibit the defense from calling the witness. McDonald v. District Court, 195 Colo. 159, 576 P.2d 169 (1978).

And witness' testimony may be used at trial. Where a defendant cross-examined an adverse witness during a preliminary hearing, that witness' recorded testimony might be used as evidence at trial, although the hearing merely determined the existence of probable cause and witness' credibility was not in issue. People v. Flores, 39 Colo. App. 556, 575 P.2d 11 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 196 Colo. 565, 593 P.2d 316 (1978).

Right to hearing founded in statutes, rules, and constitutions. Defendant in requesting and obtaining a preliminary hearing was exercising a right that was not only guaranteed him by statute and rule of court, but also one that has a constitutional foundation. Lucero v. District Court, 188 Colo. 67, 532 P.2d 955 (1975).

Protects accused and benefits judiciary. A preliminary hearing protects the accused by avoiding an embarrassing, costly, and unnecessary trial, and it benefits the interests of judicial economy and efficiency. Hunter v. District Court, 190 Colo. 48, 543 P.2d 1265 (1975).

But does not alter proposition that accused entitled to trial on merits. Although a preliminary hearing provides the defendant with an early opportunity to question the government's case, it is not designed to alter the basic proposition that an accused is entitled to one trial on the merits of the charge. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

And deemed to be critical stage. A preliminary hearing is a critical stage in the prosecution of a defendant and should not be conducted in a ''perfunctory fashion''. McDonald v. District Court, 195 Colo. 159, 576 P.2d 169 (1978).

Preliminary hearing is not intended to be mandatory procedural step in every prosecution. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974).

When waiver occurs. If a defendant does not request a preliminary hearing, he is deemed to have waived the preliminary hearing and must be bound over for trial. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974).

Effect of waiver. If the defendant elects to waive the preliminary hearing and to proceed to trial, the waiver operates as an admission by the defendant that sufficient evidence does exist to establish probable cause that the defendant committed the crimes charged. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

A defendant requesting preliminary hearing must appear. When a defendant requests a preliminary hearing, he has not only the constitutional right to be present, but is under an affirmative obligation and duty to appear at the hearing. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974).

Unless the court permits defendant to waive his presence. The court may, when a timely request is made, permit the defendant to waive his presence at the preliminary hearing if the ends of justice would not be frustrated, but the tactical ploy of refusing to produce a defendant at the preliminary hearing to frustrate the prosecution's case should not be tolerated. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974).

Refusal to appear constitutes implied waiver. Where the judge of the county court advised counsel that the failure of the defendant to appear would constitute a waiver, the defendant's subsequent refusal to appear constituted an implied waiver and extinguished the defendant's right to a preliminary hearing in the county court. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974).

But application for deferred sentencing does not constitute waiver of the right to a preliminary hearing. Celestine v. District Court, 199 Colo. 514 610 P.2d 1342 (1980).

Restoration of right once waived in county court. Under the Colorado Rules of Criminal Procedure and the statutes of this state, a district court is not vested with the power to restore a defendant's statutory right to a preliminary hearing once the defendant had waived that right in county court bind-over proceedings. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

Once a defendant knowingly waives his right to a preliminary hearing in the county court, the right is extinguished and may not be restored in the subsequent district court proceedings. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 185 Colo. 118, 522 P.2d 589 (1974).

Authority to bind over on lesser included offense. The trial court which holds the preliminary hearing has the authority to bind over the defendant on a lesser included offense. People v. Hrapski, 658 P.2d 1367 (Colo. 1983).

When juvenile not entitled to preliminary hearing in district court. A juvenile who was transferred to the district from the juvenile court, after a transfer hearing where probable cause as to the offenses charged was determined, was not entitled in the district court to another determination of probable cause in the form of a preliminary hearing. People v. Flanigan, 189 Colo. 43, 536 P.2d 41 (1975).

Defendant cannot complain if he is committed to a state institution until he is competent to have a preliminary hearing, pursuant to a sanity proceeding, since section (h)(2), provides that the preliminary hearing ''shall be held within 30 days of the day of the setting, unless good cause for continuing the hearing beyond that time be shown to the court'', and the matter of the defendant's sanity is good cause. Schwader v. District Court, 172 Colo. 474, 474 P.2d 607 (1970).

The bulk of evidence in a preliminary hearing may consist of hearsay evidence which would be inadmissible at the trial. People v. Buhrle, 744 P.2d 747 (Colo. 1987).

Rehearing not provided. There is no provision in this rule for rehearing on, or reconsideration of, a ruling on completion of a preliminary hearing. People v. District Court, 186 Colo. 136, 526 P.2d 289 (1974).

Where technical difficulties prevented defendant from obtaining a transcript of the preliminary hearing, the judge abused his discretion in denying defendant's motion for a second preliminary hearing. Such motion should have been granted because the testimony presented at the first preliminary hearing was directly relevant and significant to defendant's trial preparation, the prosecution was expected to rely on testimony presented at the preliminary hearing, and there was no alternative method of reconstructing the testimony from the preliminary hearing. Harris v. District Court, 843 P.2d 1316 (Colo. 1993).

Rule 8. Joinder of Offenses and of Defendants

(a) Joinder of Offenses.

(1) Mandatory Joinder. If several offenses are actually known to the prosecuting attorney at the time of commencing the prosecution and were committed within his judicial district, all such offenses upon which the prosecuting attorney elects to proceed must be prosecuted by separate counts in a single prosecution if they are based on the same act or series of acts arising from the same criminal episode. Any such offense not thus joined by separate count cannot thereafter be the basis of a subsequent prosecution; except that, if at the time jeopardy attaches with respect to the first prosecution against the defendant, the defendant or counsel for the defendant actually knows of additional pending prosecutions that this subsection (a)(1) requires the prosecuting attorney to charge and the defendant or counsel for the defendant fails to object to the prosecution's failure to join the charges, the defendant waives any claim pursuant to this subsection (a)(1) that a subsequent prosecution is prohibited.

(2) Permissive Joinder. Two or more offenses may be charged in the same indictment or information in a separate count for each offense if the offenses charged, whether felonies or misdemeanors or both, are of the same or similar character or are based on two or more acts or transactions connected together or constituting parts of a common scheme or plan.

(b) Joinder of Defendants. Two or more defendants may be charged in the same indictment, information, or felony complaint if they are alleged to have participated in the same act or series of acts arising from the same criminal episode. Such defendants may be charged in one or more counts together or separately and all of the defendants need not be charged in each count.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Colorado Felony Sentencing'', see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982).

Applied in People v. Mendoza, 190 Colo. 519, 549 P.2d 766 (1976); People v. McCrary, 190 Colo. 538, 549 P.2d 1320 (1976); Brutcher v. District Court, 195 Colo. 579, 580 P.2d 396 (1978); Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981); People v. Holder, 632 P.2d 607 (Colo. App. 1981).

II. JOINDER OF OFFENSES.

When joinder of offenses permitted. This rule provides that two or more offenses may be charged in the same information, in a separate count for each offense, if the offenses charged are based upon the same act or transaction, or on two or more acts or transactions connected together and that they were properly charged in separate counts for each offense. Ruark v. People, 158 Colo. 287, 406 P.2d 91 (1965).

Where the acts involved were committed at the same time or in immediate succession and at the same place, they arose out of the same criminal episode; therefore, it is appropriate to include the separate counts in a single information. People v. McGregor, 635 P.2d 912 (Colo. App. 1981).

Purpose of joinder is to prevent vexatious prosecution and harassment of a defendant by a district attorney who initiates successive prosecutions for crimes which stem from the same criminal episode. Ruth v. County Court, 198 Colo. 6, 595 P.2d 237 (1979).

"Single prosecution" is a proceeding from the commencement of the criminal action until further prosecution is barred. Ruth v. County Court, 198 Colo. 6, 595 P.2d 237 (1979).

Section 8(a) applies only where prosecution aware of other offenses. Section (a) of this rule and § 18-1-408 (2) apply only where the prosecution is aware of other offenses at the time the original action is commenced. People v. Scott, 615 P.2d 680 (Colo. 1980).

Jeopardy must attach before there is "subsequent prosecution". The proscription contained in section (a) is against bringing a ''subsequent prosecution'' based on charges known to the prosecutor at the time he commenced the initial prosecution, and there is no ''subsequent prosecution'' until jeopardy attaches to the initial prosecution. People v. Freeman, 196 Colo. 238, 583 P.2d 921 (1978).

Guilty plea to related charge bars subsequent prosecution. Section (a) and § 18-1-408 (2), bar the prosecution of a defendant for two pending charges arising out of the same criminal episode when the defendant has pleaded guilty and has been sentenced for a third related charge. Ruth v. County Court, 198 Colo. 6, 595 P.2d 237 (1979).

Effect of dismissal on attachment of jeopardy. Where dismissal of a count occurred prior to trial and the dismissal had nothing to do with the defendant's criminal liability, jeopardy does not attach. People v. Freeman, 196 Colo. 238, 583 P.2d 921 (1978).

In joinder of offenses of similar character, prejudice may develop because defendant's statements concerning his involvement in one count would not ordinarily be admissible at a separate trial of the second count, since it is related to the other count only as a crime of a similar nature. People v. McCrary, 190 Colo. 538, 549 P.2d 1320 (1976).

Nearness in time, proximity of place and unity of scheme are not indispensable prerequisites to joinder under the ''same criminal episode'' standard, although multiple offenses characterized by all three components would certainly qualify for joinder under section (a). Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

Law of joinder and severance dependent on facts in each case. The law relating to joinder and severance and that which permits consolidation of charges depends on the facts in each particular case. Hunter v. District Court, 193 Colo. 308, 565 P.2d 942 (1977).

Where joinder permitted in sanity trial. Joinder of a charge of forcible rape with an unrelated deviate sexual intercourse charge committed on a different female on a different date for purposes of trial on the sanity issue was not error. People v. Renfrow, 193 Colo. 131, 564 P.2d 411 (1977).

But accessory charge barred if not included in first information. The prosecution is precluded from pursuing a second prosecution where the accessory charge could have been included in the first information. People v. Riddick, 626 P.2d 641 (Colo. 1981).

Joinder of offenses permitted. People v. Trujillo, 181 Colo. 350, 509 P.2d 794 (1973).

Where two assault counts arose out of the same continuous sequence of events closely related in time and distance, the two counts were ''based on two acts connected together'', and the trial judge was not obligated to sever them at trial. People v. Walker, 189 Colo. 545, 542 P.2d 1283 (1975).

Joinder not sanctioned. Where the alleged victims of the crimes are the same, but the same persons are not charged in each offense and material differences exist as to the date of each offense and the factual transactions specified in each count, joinder under such circumstances is not sanctioned by Crim. P. 8(a). Norman v. People, 178 Colo. 190, 496 P.2d 1029 (1972).

To be duplicitous, information must join two or more distinct and separate offenses in the same count of an indictment or information. Marrs v. People, 135 Colo. 458, 312 P.2d 505 (1957); Leyba v. People, 174 Colo. 1, 481 P.2d 417 (1971).

Count is not bad for duplicity where it sets forth several overt acts in pursuance of the principal act charged, or where it alleges several acts done by the same person which are only successive stages in the progress of a criminal enterprise, constituting as a whole only one offense, although either, when done alone, might be an offense. Marrs v. People, 135 Colo. 458, 312 P.2d 505 (1957).

Rule authorizes the joinder of offenses based on a series of acts arising from the same criminal episode. Joinder of offenses committed at different times and places is permissible provided they are part of a schematic whole. People v. Taylor, 804 P.2d 196 (Colo. App. 1990).

Sexual assault offenses may be joined if the evidence of each offense would be admissible in separate trials. People v. Williams, 899 P.2d 306 (Colo. App. 1995).

Regardless of whether two shoplifting incidents were part of a common scheme or design, they were "of the same or similar character" under section (a)(2). People v. Buell, 2017 COA 148, 442 P.3d 961.

An analysis under C.R.E. 404(b) is not required by the "same or similar character" criterion of section (a)(2). People v. Buell, 2017 COA 148, 442 P.3d 961.

Separate offenses may be joined that are committed at different times and places if they constitute part of a schematic whole. The incident at the grocery store and subsequent shopping spree were a continuous criminal episode and there was no prejudice to the defendant in trying the counts together. People v. Smith, 121 P.3d 243 (Colo. App. 2005).

Trial court did not abuse discretion by denying motion to sever when the attempted manslaughter charge (having unprotected intercourse while HIV positive) arose from the same act as the sexual assault charges. People v. Dembry, 91 P.3d 431 (Colo. App. 2003).

A defendant does not impliedly waive his right to rely upon the statute and rule by entering a plea of guilty in a county court case with knowledge that the district court case is pending. People v. Robinson, 774 P.2d 884 (Colo. 1989).

But the right to compulsory joinder may be waived by raising the issue after jeopardy attaches in the second prosecution. People v. Wilson, 819 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1991); People v. Carey, 198 P.3d 1223 (Colo. App. 2008).

A defendant may not oppose a prosecution's failed motion to join two cases and then later move to dismiss the second case because the court did not join the cases originally. A defendant waives his or her joinder rights when he or she objects to a joinder motion and the court denies the motion. People v. Marshall, 2014 COA 42, 348 P.3d 462.

III. JOINDER OF DEFENDANTS.

Law reviews. For article, "Pronouncements of the U. S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986", which discusses a case relating to misjoinder of defendants, see 15 Colo. Law. 1615 (1986).

By consenting to a joint trial defendant waives any right to urge a later objection thereto based solely on the joinder. Pineda v. People, 152 Colo. 545, 383 P.2d 793 (1963).

Considerations in granting motion for severance. When deciding whether to grant a motion for severance, the trial court should consider whether evidence inadmissible against one defendant will be considered against the other defendant, despite the issuance by the trial court of the proper admonitory instructions. An additional consideration is whether the defendants plan to offer antagonistic defenses. People v. Gonzales, 198 Colo. 450, 601 P.2d 1366 (1979).

Severance required if joinder prevents fair trial. When joint prosecution would prevent a fair trial of one or more of the defendants, the trial court must grant a motion for severance. People v. Magoon, 645 P.2d 286 (Colo. App. 1982).

Motion for severance is addressed to the sound discretion of trial court. People v. Magoon, 645 P.2d 286 (Colo. App. 1982).

And not disturbed on appeal absent prejudice. A ruling on a motion for severance will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of a showing that the denial of such motion prejudiced a defendant. People v. Magoon, 645 P.2d 286 (Colo. App. 1982).

Court did not err in joining two cases because evidence from each case would be admissible in the other case as common plan or scheme evidence. People v. George, 2017 COA 75, __ P.3d __.

Rule 9. Warrant or Summons Upon Indictment or Information

(a) Issuance.

(1) Request by Prosecution. Upon the return of an indictment by a grand jury, or the filing of an information, the prosecuting attorney shall request that the court issue either a warrant for the arrest of the defendant or a summons to be served on the defendant.

(2) Affidavits or Sworn Testimony. If a warrant is requested upon an information, the information must contain or be accompanied by a sworn written statement of facts establishing probable cause to believe that a criminal offense has been committed and that the offense was committed by the person for whom the warrant is sought. In lieu of such sworn statement, the information may be supplemented by sworn testimony of such facts. Such testimony must be transcribed and then signed under oath or affirmation by the witness giving the testimony.

(3) Summons in Lieu of Warrant. Except in class 1, class 2, and class 3 felonies, level 1 and level 2 drug felonies, and unclassified felonies punishable by a maximum penalty of more than 10 years, whenever an indictment is returned or an information has been filed prior to the arrest of the person named as defendant therein, the court shall have power to issue a summons commanding the appearance of the defendant in lieu of a warrant for his arrest, unless a law enforcement officer presents in writing a basis to believe there is a significant risk of flight or that the victim's or public's safety may be compromised. If empowered to issue a summons under this subsection (a)(3), the court shall issue a summons instead of an arrest warrant when the prosecuting attorney so recommends.

(4) Standards Relating to Issuance of Summons. Except in class 1, class 2, and class 3 felonies, level 1 and level 2 drug felonies, and unclassified felonies punishable by a maximum penalty of more than 10 years, the general policy shall favor issuance of a summons instead of a warrant for the arrest of the defendant. When an application is made to a court for issuance of an arrest warrant or summons, the court may require the applicant to provide such information as reasonably is available concerning the following:

(I) The defendant's residence;

(II) The defendant's employment;

(III) The defendant's family relationships;

(IV) The defendant's past history of response to legal process; and

(V) The defendant's past criminal record.

(5) Failure to Appear. If any person properly summoned pursuant to this Rule fails to appear as commanded by the summons, the court shall forthwith issue a warrant for the arrest of that person.

(6) Corporations. When a corporation is charged with the commission of an offense, the court shall issue a summons setting forth the nature of the offense and commanding the corporation to appear before the court at a certain time and place.

(b) Form.

(1) Warrant. The form of the warrant shall be as provided in Rule 4(b)(1), except that it shall be signed by the clerk, it shall identify the nature of the offense charged in the indictment or information, and it shall command that the defendant be arrested and brought before the court unless he shall be admitted to bail as otherwise provided in these Rules.

(2) Summons. The summons shall be in the same form as provided in Rule 4(b)(2).

(c) Execution or Service and Return.

(1) Execution or Service. The warrant shall be executed or the summons served as provided in Rule 4(c). The officer executing the warrant shall bring the arrested person before the court without unnecessary delay, or for the purposes of admission to bail, before the clerk of the court, the sheriff of the county where the arrest occurs, or any other officer authorized to admit to bail.

(2) Return. The peace officer executing a warrant shall make a return thereof to the court. At the request of the prosecuting attorney, any unexecuted warrant shall be returned and cancelled. At least one day prior to the return day, the person to whom a summons was delivered for service shall make return thereof. At the request of the prosecuting attorney made at any time while the indictment or information is pending, a warrant returned unexecuted and not cancelled or a summons returned unserved, or a duplicate thereof may be delivered by the clerk to any peace officer or other authorized person for execution or service.

IV. ARRAIGNMENT AND PREPARATION FOR TRIAL

Rule 10. Arraignment

Following preliminary proceedings pursuant to the provisions of Rules 5, 7, and 12, the arraignment shall be conducted in open court, informing the defendant of the offense with which he is charged, and requiring him to enter a plea to the charge. The defendant shall be arraigned in the court having trial jurisdiction in which the indictment, information, or complaint is filed, unless before arraignment the cause has been removed to another court, in which case he shall be arraigned in that court.

(a) If the offense charged is a felony or a class 1 misdemeanor, or if the maximum penalty for the offense charged is more than one year's imprisonment, the defendant must be personally present for arraignment, except that the court for good cause shown may accept a plea of not guilty made by an attorney representing the defendant without requiring the defendant to be personally present.

(b) In all other cases the court may permit arraignment without the presence of the defendant. If a plea of guilty or nolo contendere is entered by counsel in the absence of the defendant, the court may command the appearance of the defendant in person for the imposition of sentence.

(c) Upon arraignment, the defendant or his counsel shall be furnished with a copy of the indictment or information, complaint, or summons and complaint if one has not been previously served.

(d) A record shall be made of the proceedings at every arraignment.

(e) If the defendant appears without counsel at an arraignment, the information, indictment, or complaint shall be read to him by the court or the clerk thereof. If the defendant appears with counsel, the information or indictment need not be read and no waiver of said reading is necessary.

(f) As soon as the jury panel is drawn which will try the case, a list of the names and addresses of the jurors on the panel shall be made available by the clerk of the court to defendant's counsel, and if the defendant has no counsel, the list shall be served on him personally or by certified mail. It shall not be necessary to serve a list of jurors upon the defendant at the time of arraignment.

ANNOTATION

No arraignment required in certain criminal contempts. In criminal contempt cases, no arraignment is required, at least with respect to those criminal contempts which are analogous to petty offenses. Robran v. People ex rel. Smith, 173 Colo. 378, 479 P.2d 976 (1971).

Correction of immaterial error in indictment does not require rearraignment. The mere correction of a clerical or other immaterial error in an indictment does not require a second arraignment and plea. Albritton v. People, 157 Colo. 518, 403 P.2d 772 (1965).

The denial of a motion to dismiss for failure to rearraign on an amended information is not error where the amendment is not one of substance, and where, when counsel calls the court's attention to it during the course of the trial, the trial court follows the provision of Rule 11(d), C.R. Crim. P., and enters a plea of not guilty and, thereupon, the trial proceeds. People v. Buckner, 180 Colo. 65, 504 P.2d 669 (1972).

It is essential that the record show affirmatively an arraignment. Wright v. People, 22 Colo. 143, 43 P. 1021 (1896).

Rule 11. Pleas

(a) Generally. A defendant personally or by counsel may plead guilty, not guilty, not guilty by reason of insanity (in which event a not guilty plea may also be entered), or with the consent of the court, nolo contendere.

(b) Pleas of Guilty and Nolo Contendere. The court shall not accept a plea of guilty or a plea of nolo contendere without first determining that the defendant has been advised of all the rights set forth in Rule 5(a)(2) and also determining:

(1) That the defendant understands the nature of the charge and the elements of the offense to which he is pleading and the effect of his plea;

(2) That the plea is voluntary on defendant's part and is not the result of undue influence or coercion on the part of anyone;

(3) That he understands the right to trial by jury and that he waives his right to trial by jury on all issues;

(4) That he understands the possible penalty or penalties;

(5) That the defendant understands that the court will not be bound by any representations made to the defendant by anyone concerning the penalty to be imposed or the granting or the denial of probation, unless such representations are included in a formal plea agreement approved by the court and supported by the findings of the presentence report, if any;

(6) That there is a factual basis for the plea. If the plea is entered as a result of a plea agreement, the court shall explain to the defendant, and satisfy itself that the defendant understands, the basis for the plea agreement, and the defendant may then waive the establishment of a factual basis for the particular charge to which he pleads;

(7) That in class 1 felonies, or where the plea of guilty is to a lesser included offense, a written consent shall have been filed with the court by the district attorney.

(c) Misdemeanor Cases. In all misdemeanor cases except class 1, the court may accept, in the absence of the defendant, any plea entered in writing by the defendant or orally made by his counsel.

(d) Failure or Refusal to Plead. If a defendant refuses to plead, or if the court refuses to accept a plea of guilty, or a plea of nolo contendere, or if a corporation fails to appear, the court shall enter a plea of not guilty. If for any reason the arraignment here provided for has not been had, the case shall for all purposes be considered as one in which a plea of not guilty has been entered.

(e) Defense of Insanity.

(1) The defense of insanity must be pleaded at the time of arraignment, except that the court for good cause shown may permit such plea to be entered at any time before trial. It must be pleaded orally, either by the defendant or by his counsel, in the form, ''not guilty by reason of insanity''. A defendant who does not thus plead not guilty by reason of insanity shall not be permitted to rely on insanity as a defense as to any accusation of any crime; provided, however, that evidence of mental condition may be offered in a proper case as bearing upon the capacity of the accused to form specific intent essential to the commission of a crime. The plea of not guilty by reason of insanity includes the plea of not guilty.

(2) If counsel for the defendant believes that a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity should be entered on behalf of the defendant, but the defendant refuses to permit the entry of such plea, counsel may so inform the court. The court shall then conduct such investigation as it deems proper, which may include the appointment of psychiatrists or psychologists to assist a psychiatrist to examine the defendant and advise the court. After its investigation the court shall conduct a hearing to determine whether the plea should be entered. If the court finds that the entry of a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity is necessary for a just determination of the charge against the defendant, it shall enter such plea on behalf of the defendant, and the plea so entered shall have the same effect as though it had been voluntarily entered by the defendant himself.

(3) If there has been no grand jury indictment or preliminary hearing prior to the entry of the plea of not guilty by reason of insanity, the court shall hold a preliminary hearing prior to the trial of the insanity issue. If probable cause is not established the case shall be dismissed, but the court may order the district attorney to institute civil commitment proceedings if it appears that the protection of the public or the accused requires it.

(f) Plea Discussions and Plea Agreements.

(1) Where it appears that the effective administration of criminal justice will thereby be served, the district attorney may engage in plea discussions for the purpose of reaching a plea agreement. He should engage in plea discussions or reach plea agreements with the defendant only through or in the presence of defense counsel except where the defendant is not eligible for or refuses appointment of counsel and has not retained counsel.

(2) The district attorney may agree to one of the following depending upon the circumstances of the individual case:

(I) To make or not to oppose favorable recommendations concerning the sentence to be imposed if the defendant enters a plea of guilty or nolo contendere;

(II) To seek or not to oppose the dismissal of an offense charged if the defendant enters a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to another offense reasonably related to the defendant's conduct;

(III) To seek or not to oppose the dismissal of other charges or not to prosecute other potential charges against the defendant if the defendant enters a plea of guilty or nolo contendere.

(3) Defendants whose situations are similar should be afforded similar opportunities for plea agreement.

(4) The trial judge shall not participate in plea discussions.

(5) Notwithstanding the reaching of a plea agreement between the district attorney and defense counsel or defendant, the judge in every case should exercise an independent judgment in deciding whether to grant charge and sentence concessions.

(6) Except as to proceedings resulting from a plea of guilty or nolo contendere which is not withdrawn, the fact that the defendant or his defense counsel and the district attorney engaged in plea discussions or made a plea agreement shall not be received in evidence against or in favor of the defendant in any criminal or civil action or administrative proceeding.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Attacking Prior Convictions in Habitual Criminal Cases: Avoiding the Third Strike'', see 11 Colo. Law. 1225 (1982).

Prosecutor should discuss pleas with defense counsel. A prosecutor should make known a general policy of willingness to consult with defense counsel concerning disposition of charges by pleas. Dabbs v. People, 175 Colo. 273, 486 P.2d 1053 (1971).

And court should allow changes of, and additions to, pleas. Where good cause is shown, it is incumbent upon the trial court to allow changes of plea or additional pleas to accomplish the fair and just determination of criminal charges. Perez v. People, 176 Colo. 505, 491 P.2d 969 (1971).

Through a plea agreement accepted by the trial court, a defendant may preserve the right to appeal a suppression ruling while entering a conditional plea of guilty. People v. Bachofer, 85 P.3d 615 (Colo. App. 2003).

It is essential that the record show a plea. Wright v. People, 22 Colo. 143, 43 P. 1021 (1896).

The decision to enter a guilty plea or withdraw a guilty plea is one of the few fundamental choices that must be decided by the defendant alone. People v. Davis, 2012 COA 1, 412 P.3d 376, rev'd on other grounds, 2015 CO 36M, 352 P.3d 950.

Applied in McClendon v. People, 175 Colo. 451, 488 P.2d 556 (1971); Romero v. District Court, 178 Colo. 200, 496 P.2d 1049 (1972); People v. Baca, 179 Colo. 156, 499 P.2d 317 (1972); Hyde v. Hinton, 180 Colo. 324, 505 P.2d 376 (1973); People v. Kelly, 189 Colo. 31, 536, P.2d 39 (1975); People v. Taylor, 190 Colo. 144, 544 P.2d 392 (1975); People v. Breazeale, 190 Colo. 17, 544 P.2d 970 (1975); People v. Arnold, 190 Colo. 193, 544 P.2d 968 (1976); People v. Banks, 190 Colo. 295, 545 P.2d 1356 (1976); People v. Smith, 190 Colo. 449, 548 P.2d 603 (1976); People v. Worsley, 191 Colo. 351, 553 P.2d 73 (1976); People v. Carino, 193 Colo. 412, 566 P.2d 1061 (1977); People v. Cole, 39 Colo. App. 323, 570 P.2d 8 (1977); People v. Smith, 195 Colo. 404, 579 P.2d 1129 (1978); Gelfand v. People, 196 Colo. 487, 586 P.2d 1331 (1978); People v. Palmer, 42 Colo. App. 460, 595 P.2d 1060 (1979); People v. Weber, 199 Colo. 25, 604 P.2d 30 (1979); People v. Baca, 44 Colo. App. 167, 610 P.2d 1083 (1980); People v. Adargo, 622 P.2d 593 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Horton, 628 P.2d 117 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Shaver, 630 P.2d 600 (Colo. 1981); State v. Laughlin, 634 P.2d 49 (Colo. 1981); People v. Marquez, 644

P.2d 59 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Velasquez, 641 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1982); Crocker v. Colo. Dept. of Rev., 652 P.2d 1067 (Colo. 1982); People v. Vollentine, 643 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. M.A.W., 651 P.2d 433 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Ramirez, 652 P.2d 1077 (Colo. App. 1982); People in Interest of J.F.C., 660 P.2d 7 (Colo. App. 1982); Flower v. People, 658 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1983); People v. Akins, 662 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1983).

II. PLEAS OF GUILTY AND NOLO CONTENDERE.

Law reviews. For article, ''Collateral Effects of a Criminal Conviction in Colorado'', see 35 Colo. Law. 39 (June 2006). For comment, ''Ineffective Assistance of Counsel Under People v. Pozo: Advising Non-Citizen Criminal Defendants of Possible Immigration Consequences in Criminal Plea Agreements'', see 80 Colo. L. Rev. 793 (2009).

Constitutional due process requirements regarding advisement of possible penalties do not apply to section (b) in a hearing to revoke a deferred judgment. Defendant's admission that he violated the terms of the deferred judgment was valid. Due process does not require that defendant be readvised of the potential penalties after defendant was advised of the possible penalties when entering into the deferred judgment. People v. Finney, 2012 COA 38, 328 P.3d 205, aff'd, 2014 CO 38, 325 P.3d 1044.

Defendant's guilty plea was unconstitutional since he was illiterate, was told by the interpreter to sign the plea advisement form without having it read to him, had difficulty hearing the interpreter during the plea hearing, was pro se, and lacked the knowledge or understanding of the criminal justice system and process. The guilty plea was not made based on a voluntary and intelligent choice among alternative courses of action. Sanchez-Martinez v. People, 250 P.3d 1248 (Colo. 2011).

This rule sets forth required guidelines for the entry of a plea upon arraignment. People v. Marsh, 183 Colo. 258, 516 P.2d 431 (1973).

This rule itemizes certain requirements which must be followed by a court before it may accept a plea of guilty or one of nolo contendere. People v. Van Hook, 36 Colo. App. 226, 539 P.2d 507 (1975).

Purpose of section (b). Section (b) contemplates that the transcribed colloquy between the court and the defendant will eliminate the need to resort to a subsequent fact-finding proceeding in order to determine whether a guilty plea was voluntarily and understandingly made. People v. Quintana, 634 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1981), overruled on other grounds in People v. Porter, 2015 CO 34, 348 P.3d 922.

Judge to determine fulfillment of certain conditions before accepting plea. Section 16-7-207 and section (b) of this rule require that a trial court must make certain determinations before it accepts a plea of guilty or a plea of nolo contendere. People v. Lambert, 189 Colo. 264, 539 P.2d 1238 (1975); People v. Gleason, 180 Colo. 71, 502 P.2d 69 (1972); Laughlin v. State, 44 Colo. App. 341, 618 P.2d 689 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 634 P.2d 49 (Colo. 1981).

Trial courts must adhere strictly to the requirements of this rule when pleas of guilty are being considered. People v. Sandoval, 188 Colo. 431, 535 P.2d 1120 (1975).

As a valid plea of guilty waives substantially all the fundamental procedural rights afforded an accused in a criminal proceeding, such as his rights to the assistance of counsel, confrontation of witnesses, and trial by jury. People v. Harrington, 179 Colo. 312, 500 P.2d 360 (1972).

But compliance not shown by use of printed form. Compliance with this rule cannot be demonstrated solely by reliance upon a printed form. People v. Van Hook, 36 Colo. App. 226, 539 P.2d 507 (1975).

And formal ritual is not required by this rule. People v. Duran, 183 Colo. 180, 515 P.2d 1117 (1973); People v. Marsh, 183 Colo. 258, 516 P.2d 431 (1973).

Satisfaction of this rule does not require that a prescribed ritual or wording be employed, but rather the substance of the circumstances surrounding the plea should prevail over form. People v. Edwards, 186 Colo. 129, 526 P.2d 144 (1974); People v. Cushon, 650 P.2d 527 (Colo. 1982).

The overriding consideration in analyzing a record pertaining to a guilty plea or a plea of nolo contendere is that a set ritual is not required. People v. Lambert, 189 Colo. 264, 539 P.2d 1238 (1975).

A trial court is not required to follow any particular formula for advising a defendant at a preliminary hearing. People v. Thimmes, 643 P.2d 778 (Colo. App. 1981).

So that reading charge may be sufficient. Where the language of a charge is not highly technical, the reading of the charge is sufficient explanation. People v. Wright, 662 P.2d 489 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd, 690 P.2d 1257 (Colo. 1984); People v. Muniz, 667 P.2d 1377(Colo. 1983); People v. Cabral, 698 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1985); People v. Wilson, 708 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1985) (term ''feloniously'' sufficiently informed defendant of mens rea element of the offense of rape); People v. Trujillo, 731 P.2d 649 (Colo. 1986).

Effect of noncompliance with rule. Where rule is not complied with, the defendant's conviction will be reversed and the cause will be remanded to the trial court to set aside the plea and to rearraign the defendant. People v. Golden, 184 Colo. 311, 520 P.2d 127 (1974); People v. Baca, 186 Colo. 95, 525 P.2d 1146 (1974).

Failure of trial court to advise or to make a proper inquiry precludes treating the defendant's plea of guilty as a voluntary and intelligent waiver of his constitutional rights, so defendant may withdraw his plea of guilty and be permitted to plea anew. People v. Harrington, 179 Colo. 312, 500 P.2d 360 (1972); People v. Gleason, 180 Colo. 71, 502 P.2d 69 (1972).

Failure of the trial court to comply with each requirement of this rule affords defendants the opportunity to later challenge the trial court's refusal to permit a withdrawal of a guilty plea. People v. Sandoval, 188 Colo. 431, 535 P.2d 1120 (1975).

Without showing of compliance, guilty plea not acceptable. Without an affirmative showing of compliance with the mandatory provisions of this rule, a plea of guilty cannot be accepted, and any judgment and sentence which is entered following the plea is void. Martinez v. People, 152 Colo. 521, 382 P.2d 990 (1963); Lamb v. People, 174 Colo. 441, 484 P.2d 798 (1971); People v. Randolph, 175 Colo. 454, 488 P.2d 203 (1971).

Thus, conduct of proceedings to appear in record. The conduct of proceedings under this rule must affirmatively appear in the record, since an appellate court cannot presume a waiver of constitutional rights from a silent record. People v. Brewer, 648 P.2d 167 (Colo. App. 1982).

But lack of precise language not grounds for reversal. If the record reflects that the trial court had assured itself that defendant's plea was voluntary and intelligently entered with full knowledge of the nature and elements of the offense and of the waiver of his rights as an accused person, then lack of precise language in the record expressing these things is not of itself a valid reason to reverse acceptance of a plea of nolo contendere. People v. Lambert, 189 Colo. 264, 539 P.2d 1238 (1975).

Test for proper plea advisement. In deciding if a plea advisement was proper, the dispositive issue is whether the constitutional requirements of voluntariness then in effect were met. People v. Wright, 662 P.2d 489 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd, 690 P.2d 1257 (Colo. 1984).

Record must show factual basis for plea. A guilty plea cannot be accepted if the record lacks an affirmative showing of a factual basis. People v. Cushon, 631 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 650 P.2d 527 (Colo. 1982).

As guilty plea cannot stand if it lacks a factual basis and is not voluntary and accurate. People v. Alvarez, 181 Colo. 213, 508 P.2d 1267 (1973); People v. Hutton, 183 Colo. 388, 517 P.2d 392 (1973).

Nor may nolo contendere plea. Nolo contendere plea that is voluntarily and understandingly made, with a factual basis that appears in the record, should be upheld. People v. Canino, 181 Colo. 207, 508 P.2d 1273 (1973).

Although court not required to ascertain factual basis for nolo contendere plea. There is no requirement that a court ascertain that there is a factual basis for a plea of nolo contendere when such a plea is permitted. People v. Canino, 181 Colo. 207, 508 P.2d 1273 (1973).

Entering of guilty plea to lesser charge does not automatically waive factual basis requirement of section (b)(6). People v. Cushon, 631 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 650 P.2d 527 (Colo. 1982).

Record must affirmatively show that accused understandingly and voluntarily waived his constitutional rights. People v. Harrington, 179 Colo. 312, 500 P.2d 360 (1972).

Compliance with this rule requires that there be an adequate basis in the record to support a determination by the court that the defendant understands the nature of the charge to which he is pleading guilty. People v. Montoya, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983).

Compliance with this rule creates an adequate record to support a determination by both the arraigning court and a reviewing court of the defendant's understanding of the crime to which a plea is tendered. People v. Leonard, 673 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1983).

Even when the defendant or his attorney waives the formal reading of the information, such waiver does not serve to dispense with the express mandate of this rule that the court not accept the plea of guilty without first determining that the defendant understands the nature of the charge. People v. Montoya, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983).

Silent record insufficient. Where there are no facts in the record to establish the defendant's complete understanding of the nature of the offense with which he is charged, then, when the state attempts to prove waiver of such knowledge, it bears a heavy burden, and a silent record will not suffice. People v. Colosacco, 177 Colo. 219, 493 P.2d 650 (1972).

Application of Boykin v. Alabama. Boykin v. Alabama, 395 U.S. 238, 89 S. Ct. 1709, 23 L. Ed. 2d 274 (1969), holding that waiver of the privilege against self-incrimination, of the right to trial by jury, and of the right to confrontation cannot be presumed by a silent record, is given only prospective application. People v. Crater, 182 Colo. 248, 512 P.2d 623 (1973); People v. Edwards, 186 Colo. 129, 526 P.2d 144 (1974);

People v. Malouff, 721 P.2d 159 (Colo. App. 1986).

Record held to show defendant's knowing and intelligent waiver of rights. People v. Chavez, 650 P.2d 1310 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Chavez, 730 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1986); People v. Campbell, 174 P.3d 860 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court's failure to explain elements of second degree burglary was cured by evidence in record showing defendant understood and had knowledge of elements of second degree burglary. Wieder v. People, 722 P.2d 396 (Colo. 1986).

While the court gave a proper advisement under this rule, it did not specifically evaluate the totality of the circumstances surrounding juvenile defendant's waiver of critical constitutional rights. After applying the totality of circumstances standard, defendant did not knowingly and voluntarily waive his constitutional rights when he entered a guilty plea. People v. Simpson, 51 P.3d 1022 (Colo. App. 2001), rev'd on other grounds, 69 P.3d 79 (Colo. 2003).

Guilty plea must be voluntarily and intelligently given. In order for a court to accept a plea of guilty, there must be an affirmative showing that it was given voluntarily and intelligently. Martinez v. Ricketts, 498 F. Supp. 893 (D. Colo. 1980); People v. Drake, 785 P.2d 1257 (1990).

A plea of guilty, to be valid, must be intelligently made. Hampton v. Tinsley, 240 F. Supp. 213 (D. Colo. 1965), rev'd on other grounds, 355 F.2d 470 (10th Cir. 1966).

For a waiver of such the fundamental rights which results from the acceptance of a guilty plea, a defendant must voluntarily, knowingly, and intentionally relinquish those rights. People v. Harrington, 179 Colo. 312, 500 P.2d 360 (1972).

A plea of guilty must be entered voluntarily and with full understanding of the essential elements of the offense to withstand constitutional scrutiny. People v. Cisneros, 665 P.2d 145 (Colo. App. 1983).

Defendant who is subject to sentencing act must be informed of the penalties under such act prior to acceptance of guilty plea or else the plea cannot be voluntarily and understandingly entered. People v. Sutka, 713 P.2d 1326 (Colo. App. 1985).

Defendant entered a guilty plea without being informed that he could receive an aggravated range sentence. Consequently, defendant's plea was not given voluntarily and intelligently and did not satisfy due process. People v. Corral, 179 P.3d 837 (Colo. App. 2007).

Due process of law mandates that a guilty plea must be voluntary and understandingly made before a valid judgment can be entered thereon. People v. Chavez, 730 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1986).

Test whether plea intelligently and voluntarily made. When determining whether pleas of guilty were intelligently and voluntarily entered, the test to be applied is that a plea of guilty entered by one fully aware of the direct consequences, including the actual value of any commitments made to him by the court, prosecutor, or his own counsel, must stand unless induced by threats (or promises to discontinue improper harassment), misrepresentation (including unfulfilled or unfulfillable promises), or perhaps by promises that are by their nature improper as having no proper relationship to the prosecutor's business (e.g. bribes). Ward v. People, 172 Colo. 244, 472 P.2d 673 (1970); England v. People, 175 Colo. 236, 486 P.2d 1055 (1971); Bresnahan v. People, 175 Colo. 286, 487 P.2d 551 (1971); People v. Mason, 176 Colo. 544, 491 P.2d 1383 (1971); People v. Cumby, 178 Colo. 31, 495 P.2d 223 (1972); Bresnahan v. Patterson, 352 F. Supp. 1180 (D. Colo. 1973); People v. Musser, 187 Colo. 198, 529 P.2d 626 (1974).

However, every relevant factor need not be correctly assessed. The rule that a plea must be intelligently made to be valid does not require that a plea be vulnerable to later attack if the defendant did not correctly assess every relevant factor entering into his decision. Simms v. People, 175 Colo. 191, 486 P.2d 22 (1971).

Defendant must understand elements of offense and his rights. Rather than any ritualistic formalism, this rule requires only that a defendant be aware of the elements of the offense and that he voluntarily and understandingly acknowledge his guilt after being made aware of his various rights. People v. Marsh, 183 Colo. 258, 516 P.2d 431 (1973).

The constitution requires that the defendant be aware of the elements of the offense and that he voluntarily and understandingly acknowledge his guilt when pleading guilty, but a formalistic recitation by the trial judge at a providency hearing is not a constitutional requisite. People v. Canino, 181 Colo. 207, 508 P.2d 1273 (1973); People v. Duran, 183 Colo. 180, 515 P.2d 1117 (1973); People v. Keenan, 185 Colo. 317, 524 P.2d 604 (1974).

No guilty plea can be deemed valid unless a defendant understands the nature and elements of the crime with which he stands charged. People v. Colosacco, 177 Colo. 219, 493 P.2d 650 (1972); People v. Hubbard, 184 Colo. 243, 519 P.2d 945 (1974); People v. Keenan, 185 Colo. 317, 524 P.2d 604 (1974); People v. Sanders, 185 Colo. 356, 524 P.2d 299 (1974); People v. Brown, 187 Colo. 244, 529 P.2d 1338 (1974); People v. Murdock, 187 Colo. 418, 532 P.2d 43 (1975); Harshfield v. People, 697 P.2d 391 (Colo. 1985); People v. Wade, 708 P.2d 1366 (Colo. 1985); People v. Cisneros, 824 P.2d 16 (Colo. App. 1991).

A guilty plea cannot stand as voluntarily and knowingly entered unless the defendant understands the nature of the crime charged, and this requirement is not met unless the critical elements of the crime charged are explained in terms which are understandable to the defendant. People v. Gorniak, 197 Colo. 289, 593 P.2d 349 (1979).

As well as consequences of guilty plea. Every defendant that stands at the bar of justice charged with a crime must be advised and must know what the possible consequences are of his tendered plea of guilty. People v. Jones, 176 Colo. 61, 489 P.2d 596 (1971).

A plea of guilty must be a genuine one by a defendant who is guilty and who understands his situation, his rights, and the consequences of his plea, and is neither deceived nor coerced. Westendorf v. People, 171 Colo. 123, 464 P.2d 866 (1970).

A defendant must be advised of the pertinent fundamental constitutional rights and must understand the consequences of a guilty plea for him to voluntarily and understandingly enter such a plea and waive the right to a jury trial. People v. Weed, 830 P.2d 1095 (Colo. App. 1991).

And trial judge must determine that defendant understands nature of offense with which he stands charged. People v. Riney, 176 Colo. 221, 489 P.2d 1304 (1971); People v. Colosacco, 177 Colo. 219, 493 P.2d 650 (1972); People v. Keenan, 185 Colo. 317, 524 P.2d 604 (1974); People v. Sanders, 185 Colo. 356, 524 P.2d 299 (1974).

And consequences of act. Prior to the acceptance of a guilty plea the trial court must be assured that the defendant is fully aware of the consequences of his act. People v. Brown, 187 Colo. 244, 529 P.2d 1338 (1974).

Colorado law does not contemplate an increase in the statutory maximum sentence to which a defendant has subjected himself by pleading guilty, based on subsequent jury findings, which are the functional equivalent of elements of a greater offense than the one to which he pled. People v. Lopez, 148 P.3d 121 (Colo. 2006).

Violation of requirement that defendant understand the effects of his plea occurs if consideration of subsequent jury findings is allowed to increase defendant's maximum sentence. People v. Lopez, 148 P.3d 121 (Colo. 2006).

Court's determination may be implied. Where the trial judge advises the defendant that his plea has to be voluntary and that any promises which have been made are not binding on the court, but judge fails to ask the defendant whether any such promises or coercion were involved in his decision to plead guilty, implicit in the court's acceptance of the guilty plea is its determination that the plea was intelligently and voluntarily entered. People v. Derrerra, 667 P.2d 1363 (Colo. 1983).

Mere assertion of understanding of charge does not satisfy rule. The mere assertion of understanding of a charge by the defendant does not satisfy either the letter or spirit of this rule, but it must be clear, in fact, that the defendant understands the elements of the charge. People v. Sanders, 185 Colo. 356, 524 P.2d 299 (1974).

Court to explain elements of crime and meaning of guilty plea. The requirement of understanding is not met unless critical elements of crime charged are explained in terms understandable to the defendant and unless meaning of guilty plea is explained in relation to each of such elements. People v. Gleason, 180 Colo. 71, 502 P.2d 69 (1972); People v. Brown, 187 Colo. 244, 529 P.2d 1338 (1974); People v. Van Hook, 36 Colo. App. 226, 539 P.2d 507 (1975); People v. Steelman, 200 Colo. 177, 613 P.2d 334 (1980); People v. Wieghard, 709 P.2d 81 (Colo. App. 1985); Waits v. People, 724 P.2d 1329 (Colo. 1986).

And reading simply worded information may suffice. By reading an information, which is couched in language which is easily understandable to a person with ordinary intelligence and by inquiring into the defendant's understanding of the charge before a plea of guilty was accepted, the trial judge satisfied the requirements of this rule. People v. Lottie, 183 Colo. 308, 516 P.2d 430 (1973).

In explaining the critical elements of the charge to the defendant, unless the language of the charge is highly technical, no more full explanation of the substantive crime could be given than the charge itself. People v. Gorniak, 197 Colo. 289, 593 P.2d 349 (1979); People v. Moore, 636 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Wieghard, 709 P.2d 81 (Colo. App. 1985).

Where language was readily understandable by person of average intelligence and defendant affirmatively acknowledged he understood nature of charge, reading of information was sufficient. Wilson v. People, 708 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1985).

The court is not required to advise a non-English speaking defendant that an official interpreter may be utilized for communication with the defendant's attorney. People v. Ochoa-Magana, 36 P.3d 141 (Colo. App. 2001).

If defendant enters guilty plea under mistaken assurance that defendant's immigration status would not be affected by guilty plea, then plea may not have been made knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently. People v. Nguyen, 80 P.3d 903 (Colo. App. 2003).

Explanation of "unlawful act" more properly described burglary than the trespass with which the defendant was charged but the court concluded that it adequately apprised the defendant of the necessary elements of first degree criminal trespass. People v. Wood, 844 P.2d 1299 (Colo. App. 1992).

Court must also explain attendant waiver of rights. In accordance with this rule, the trial court must make certain, by inquiry of the defendant, that he understands that the guilty plea stands as a waiver of nearly all of his rights as guaranteed by the fifth and sixth amendments to the United States Constitution. People v. Sandoval, 188 Colo. 431, 535 P.2d 1120 (1975).

However, trial court is not required to advise defendant, before accepting his guilty plea, of the right to testify on his own behalf. People v. Malouff, 721 P.2d 159 (Colo. App. 1986).

And definite, immediate, and automatic consequences of plea. The judge who accepts a plea of guilty is required to inform the defendant only of those consequences which have a definite, immediate and largely automatic effect on the range of a defendant's punishment. People v. Heinz, 197 Colo. 102, 589 P.2d 931 (1979).

Where consequence of guilty plea to a crime of moral turpitude subjected defendant to mandatory deportation proceeding, defendant was denied effective assistance of counsel since counsel was unaware of deportation consequence and therefore defendant was entitled to withdraw plea and plead anew. People v. Pozo, 712 P.2d 1044 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 746 P.2d 523 (Colo. 1987).

A mandatory parole term is such a consequence because parole imposes a significant limitation on a defendant's freedom during the term of parole. People v. Tyus, 776 P.2d 1143 (Colo. App. 1989); People v. Sandoval, 809 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1990), overruled in Craig v. People, 986 P.2d 951 (Colo. 1999).

Trial court, therefore, must advise the defendant of mandatory parole even if a plea agreement contemplates a sentence to probation or community corrections. The only exception is if the parties stipulate to a sentence to probation or to community corrections, the judge explicitly accepts and agrees to be bound by the stipulation, and the judge so advises the defendant. Dawson v. People, 30 P.3d 213 (Colo. 2001).

Mandatory sentencing of defendant on parole status under § 18-1-105 is a definite, immediate, and automatic consequence of plea which defendant must understand. People v. Chippewa, 713 P.2d 1311 (Colo. App. 1985).

A proper advisement on the subject of mandatory parole requires that a defendant be informed that he or she is subject to a period of mandatory parole, the maximum possible length of that period, and the fact that mandatory parole is a consequence distinct from imprisonment. People v. Laurson, 70 P.3d 564 (Colo. App. 2002).

The proper inquiry is whether the record as a whole demonstrates that a defendant was given sufficient notice of the issue. When a defendant indicates at the providency hearing that he or she understood the matters contained in a written guilty plea advisement form, the burden of proof is on the defendant to show that the apparent waiver was not effective. People v. Laurson, 70 P.3d 564 (Colo. App. 2002).

Failure to properly advise of the term of mandatory parole is harmless if the length of parole and imprisonment together does not exceed the total term of imprisonment to which the defendant was advised. Craig v. People, 986 P.2d 951 (Colo. 1999) (overruling People v. Sandoval, 809 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1990)).

Thus, it was harmless error where the defendant received an inadequate mandatory advisement but was sentenced to a total sentence of 11 years, plus three years of mandatory parole, when he could have been sentenced to a maximum of 24 years. Dawson v. People, 30 P.3d 213 (Colo. 2001).

No script or formula is required so long as the advisement adequately informs defendant of the mandatory parole requirement. People v. Flagg, 18 P.3d 792 (Colo. App. 2000).

Where defendant was advised that his sentence would include a term of parole in addition to a stipulated maximum term of incarceration, it is not reasonable to hold that the full range of penalties that the defendant risked receiving is limited to the term of incarceration specified in the plea agreement or the Crim. P. 11 advisement. If defendant was advised of mandatory parole but not its duration, his sentence cannot be modified and the only available remedy under the facts is withdrawal of the guilty plea. Clark v. People, 7 P.3d 163 (Colo. 2000).

An agreement that is silent as to parole should not be construed as containing a promise to eliminate or reduce the mandatory period of parole. A plea agreement to reduce or modify the statutorily mandated period of parole calls for an illegal sentence. Craig v. People, 986 P.2d 951 (Colo. 1999) (overruling People v. Sandoval, 809 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1990)).

Defendant's understanding of the mandatory parole requirement and the lack of indication in the record that the parties' negotiations included the issue of mandatory parole supported trial court's conclusion that the parties' agreement to a "ten year cap" pertained only to the imprisonment component and did not include the five-year mandatory parole period. People v. Wright, 53 P.3d 730 (Colo. App. 2002).

A mittimus that does not specify the mandatory parole period should be read as including the appropriate mandatory parole period and must be corrected. Craig v. People, 986 P.2d 951 (Colo. 1999) (overruling People v. Sandoval, 809 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1990)).

A trial court is not generally required to inform a defendant of the collateral consequences of his guilty plea. People v. Moore, 841 P.2d 320 (Colo. App. 1992).

To satisfy due process, a defendant must be informed only of the direct consequences of his guilty plea, which include those which have a definite, immediate, and largely automatic effect on the range of possible punishment. People v. Moore, 841 P.2d 320 (Colo. App. 1992).

Accordingly, a guilty plea is not invalid for failure of a trial court to warn a defendant of its possible effect on future criminal liability. People v. Heinz, 589 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1979); People v. Moore, 841 P.2d 320 (Colo. App. 1992).

Although the defendant's sentence to imprisonment and mandatory parole was not inevitable at the time of his pleas and, in fact, could not have been lawfully imposed prior to his subsequent breach of the terms of his deferred sentencing agreement, it was a direct consequence of his plea to burglary and, therefore, the defendant should have been advised of the mandatory parole. People v. Marez, 39 P.3d 1190 (Colo. 2002).

Defendant cannot be lawfully sentenced for a crime to which he has pled guilty to a term longer than that of which he was advised when it was still within his power to reject the plea. People v. Marez, 39 P.3d 1190 (Colo. 2002).

Case must be remanded to allow defendant the opportunity to affirm or withdraw his guilty plea where the trial court's rejection of the sentence recommendation contained in the plea agreement calls into question the voluntariness of that plea and the defendant had no opportunity to affirm or withdraw that plea. People v. Walker, 46 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2002).

Case must be remanded to allow defendant to reaffirm or withdraw guilty plea after advisement of the proper sentencing range, including the possibility of sentencing in the aggravated range. Because defendant's plea was not induced by prosecutor's promise, the proper remedy was not to resentence defendant based upon the providency hearing advisement, but to allow defendant to reaffirm or withdraw the plea after advisement of the proper sentencing range. People v. Corral, 179 P.3d 837 (Colo. App. 2007).

Possibility that required counseling cannot be completed if the defendant does not admit guilt and that probation may therefore be revoked is a collateral consequence of a guilty plea. Person who entered an Alford plea and could not complete required counseling because of failure to admit guilt could have his or her probation revoked. People v. Birdsong, 958 P.2d 1124 (Colo. 1998).

Interest on unpaid restitution is a collateral consequence. Application of the statutory interest rate is contingent on whether a defendant pays his or her restitution obligation within a year. This contingency is a future action beyond the control of the sentencing court, therefore, neither the court nor defense counsel has a duty to advise a defendant of it. People v. Joslin, 2018 COA 24, 415 P.3d 881.

Due process requires compliance only with the mandatory provisions of this rule which inform an accused of the constitutional protection and the critical elements of the charge he faces, and not the factual basis of the plea or the possible defenses to the charge. People v. Moore, 841 P.2d 320 (Colo. App. 1992).

However, the appropriate remedy is not to allow withdrawal of the plea, but reduce the sentence to the maximum that the defendant could receive under the plea agreement. People v. Sandoval, 809 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1990).

And waiver of previously raised defenses. Where the defendant previously filed a notice of alibi defense, the trial court, in accepting a later guilty plea, should have assiduously adhered to the requirements of this rule and should have even made a more detailed inquiry of the defendant to make certain that he was fully aware that by pleading guilty, he was, in effect, making a judicial statement that he was guilty of the offense charged and that his alibi defense was in fact baseless. People v. Sandoval, 188 Colo. 431, 535 P.2d 1120 (1975), overruled in Craig v. People, 986 P.2d 951 (Colo. 1999).

But judge not required to point out available affirmative defenses. Absent from the provisions of section (b) is any requirement that the trial judge in accepting a guilty plea explain to the defendant possible affirmative defenses to the crime charged; the rationale is that such advice is properly the role of counsel. People v. Gorniak, 197 Colo. 289, 593 P.2d 349 (1979); People v. Nieto, 715 P.2d 1262 (Colo. App. 1985).

And need not be informed of possible future operation of habitual criminal statutes. It is not required that an adult, before he enters an otherwise uncoerced guilty plea, be informed of the operation of the habitual criminal statutes in the event he should in the future be convicted of illegal acts. People v. District Court, 191 Colo. 298, 552 P.2d 297 (1976).

Trial court's oversight may be cured. An oversight on the part of the trial court in a providency hearing may be cured if the record, as a whole, discloses evidence of understanding and knowledge. People v. Moore, 636 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1981).

The degree of explanation that a court is required to provide a defendant at a providency hearing is dependent upon the nature and complexity of the crime. People v. Muniz, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983); Ramirez v.

People, 682 P.2d 1181 (Colo. 1984); People v. Cabral, 698 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1985); People v. District Court, Arapahoe County, 868 P.2d 400 (Colo. 1994).

And mere reading of a charge may be sufficient if the charge itself is readily understandable to persons of ordinary intelligence. People v. Muniz, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983); People v. Cabral, 698 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1985).

By reading the charges, which were couched in language easily understandable to a person of ordinary intelligence, by briefly explaining the mens rea necessary, and by inquiring into the defendant's understanding of the charges, the trial judge adequately advised the defendant and provided a fully sufficient basis for the court's determination that the pleas were freely, voluntarily, and intelligently given. People v. District Court, Arapahoe County, 868 P.2d 400 (Colo. 1994).

Defining "attempt" as conduct constituting a substantial step toward the commission of the crime is sufficient for the purpose of providing a defendant with the necessary understanding of the crime charged. People v. District Court, Arapahoe County, 868 P.2d 400 (Colo. 1994).

A defendant need not be advised of the right to appeal before a guilty plea may be said to be knowingly and voluntarily given. People v. District Court, Arapahoe County, 868 P.2d 400 (Colo. 1994).

Court need not advise defendant of the prosecution's burden to prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt as long as defendant is advised that the prosecution has the burden of proof. People v. Wells, 734 P.2d 655 (Colo. App. 1986).

Guilty plea of defendant who was not aware of possibility of consecutive sentencing when he entered plea is constitutionally deficient. People v. Peters, 738 P.2d 395 (Colo. App. 1987).

Defendant adequately advised regarding the special offender sentence enhancer where the sentences defendant received were within the range of sentences he or she was advised of and were on the low end of the range required by the special offender statute. Thus, defendant was not prejudiced by the erroneous advisements, and the fact that they understated the maximum allowable sentence did not undermine the validity of his or her guilty plea. People v. Zuniga, 80 P.3d 965 (Colo. App. 2003).

Failure to advise defendant of a mandatory parole obligation did not invalidate his guilty plea since defendant was correctly advised that he could be incarcerated for a term of from six months to four years and defendant's sentence of one year plus one year parole fell below the four-year maximum. People v. Coleman, 844 P.2d 1215 (Colo. App. 1992).

To understand the "possible penalty or penalties", the court must advise the defendant of mandatory parole for all class 2 through class 6 felony convictions that involve a sentence of imprisonment. Young v. People, 30 P.3d 202 (Colo. 2001).

Record of providency hearing helpful in satisfying rule. A record of a providency hearing demonstrating compliance with this rule should be deemed supportive of the conclusion that the defendant did enter his or her guilty plea voluntarily and understandingly. People v. Wade, 708 P.2d 1366 (Colo. 1985).

The proper basis for analyzing the constitutional validity of a guilty plea should include not only the statements made during the providency hearing but also those statements made by both defendant and defendant's attorney in the petition to plead guilty. People v. Weed, 830 P.2d 1095 (Colo. App. 1991).

Evidence in record that defendant understood nature and elements of crime. People v. Marsh, 183 Colo. 258, 516 P.2d 431 (1973); People v. Waits, 695 P.2d 1176 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 724 P.2d 1329 (Colo. 1986).

Validity of guilty plea should not be based solely on the colloquy during the providency hearing. The proper basis for determining the validity of a guilty plea should include not only the statements made during a providency hearing but also the statements made by the defendant and the defendant's attorney in the petition to plead guilty. People v. Weed, 830 P.2d 1095 (Colo. App. 1991).

Upon entry of a guilty plea, suppression issues become moot. People v. Waits, 695 P.2d 1176 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 724 P.2d 1329 (Colo. 1986).

Trial court to determine defendant's capacity to plead, where appropriate. If there is any question, the trial court has the duty to determine the defendant's mental capacity to understand the nature and effect of such a plea before accepting it. Hampton v. Tinsley, 240 F. Supp. 213 (D. Colo. 1965), rev'd on other grounds, 355 F.2d 470 (10th Cir. 1966).

Where the trial court was aware of the possible mental infirmities of the defendant, it should have made sure he clearly, voluntarily, and knowingly entered his guilty plea. People v. Brown, 187 Colo. 244, 529 P.2d 1338 (1974).

And if a defendant is insane, plea of guilty should be stricken, and the sentence vacated. Gallegos v. People, 166 Colo. 409, 444 P.2d 267 (1968); Simms v. People, 175 Colo. 191, 486 P.2d 22 (1971); Moneyhun v. People, 175 Colo. 220, 486 P.2d 434 (1971).

As guilty plea not acceptable from legally insane. As a plea of guilty cannot be accepted where the evidence before the judge suggests that the accused may be legally insane, until his sanity is finally determined; if the plea is accepted prior to such a determination, the judgment is potentially void, depending on whether the accused had the capacity to enter a plea. Martinez v. Tinsley, 241 F. Supp. 730 (D. Colo. 1965).

Sixteen-year old competent to enter guilty plea. Although a trial court should act with great caution in accepting a guilty plea from a 16-year-old, such a defendant is competent. Bresnahan v. Patterson, 352 F. Supp. 1180 (D. Colo. 1973).

Although restraints may be one circumstance that affects defendant's decision to plead guilty, the constitutionality of a defendant's restraints at the time of entry of his pleas is not relevant to determine whether he entered the plea voluntarily. People v. Kyler, 991 P.2d 810 (Colo. 2000).

When bargain upon which plea based not honored. If plea of guilty results from plea bargaining and bargain is not honored, the judgment must be vacated. People v. McClellan, 183 Colo. 176, 515 P.2d 1127 (1973).

Effect of invalid plea upon bargain. When an invalid guilty plea is a result of plea bargaining, vacation of the plea results in an abrogation of the bargain, and there is no impediment to the reinstatement of the charges dismissed as a result of the bargain. People v. Mason, 176 Colo. 544, 491 P.2d 1383 (1971); People v. Keenan, 185 Colo. 317, 524 P.2d 604 (1974).

Plea bargaining per se does not invalidate a guilty plea. Smith v. People, 162 Colo. 558, 428 P.2d 69 (1967); Lucero v. People, 164 Colo. 247, 434 P.2d 128 (1967); Maes v. People, 164 Colo. 481, 435 P.2d 893 (1968); Brewer v. People, 168 Colo. 505, 452 P.2d 370 (1969).

Purpose of section (b)(5). Section (b)(5) is specifically designed to insure that a criminal defendant voluntarily pleads to a charge unfettered by promises of a light sentence or of probation, and is in addition to the inquiry concerning coercion or threats. People v. Golden, 184 Colo. 311, 520 P.2d 127 (1974).

Section (b)(5) applies to representations and promises by defendant's own counsel. People v. Golden, 184 Colo. 311, 520 P.2d 127 (1974).

Pleas of guilty induced by threats or promises are not valid. Normand v. People, 165 Colo. 509, 440 P.2d 282 (1968).

As such pleas involuntary. A plea of guilty is clearly involuntary if it is induced by threats or by a promise of lenient sentence. People v. McClellan, 183 Colo. 176, 515 P.2d 1127 (1973).

And involuntary guilty plea violates due process. A guilty plea which is not entered voluntarily and knowingly is obtained in violation of due process guarantees. People v. Moore, 636 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1981).

Defendant's burden to set aside plea. Upon postconviction procedures to set aside an involuntary plea, it becomes the burden of the defendant to establish that the plea was entered because of coercion. Normand v. People, 165 Colo. 509, 440 P.2d 282 (1968).

With evidence to overcome presumption of valid plea. The burden is upon the defendant to produce sufficient evidence to overcome the presumption of validity and regularity surrounding entry of his plea of guilty. Hampton v. Tinsley, 240 F. Supp. 213 (D. Colo. 1965), rev'd on other grounds, 355 F.2d 470 (10th Cir. 1966).

And every reasonable presumption against waiver must be indulged. People v. Harrington, 179 Colo. 312, 500 P.2d 360 (1972).

Withdrawal of guilty plea generally should not be denied. The withdrawal of a plea of guilty should not be denied in any case where it is the least evident that the ends of justice would be subserved by permitting not guilty to be pleaded in its place. Burman v. People, 172 Colo. 247, 472 P.2d 121 (1970).

Denial of motion to withdraw guilty pleas was not an abuse of discretion by the trial court where the pleas were entered in accordance with due process of law and this rule. People v. Chavez, 730 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1986).

Defendant was properly advised of his right to a jury trial and knowingly and voluntarily waived that right where the record shows that he executed a five-page ''Petition to Enter Plea of Guilty'', the trial court held a providency hearing and ascertained that the defendant had read and discussed the petition with his attorney and understood the petition, and the petition was signed by the defense attorney who certified that he had fully discussed the matter with the defendant, the attorney considered the defendant to be competent to understand the effect of the guilty plea, and the attorney recommended the court accept the plea. People v. Weed, 830 P.2d 1095 (Colo. App. 1991).

Requirement that defendant understand the possible penalty when pleading guilty met where defendant signed a ''Petition to Enter Plea of Guilty'' that recited the possible years of incarceration in both the presumptive and extraordinary ranges in addition to the possible fines to which the defendant would be subject, the possibility of consecutive sentencing, mandatory sentencing in the aggravated range, the factors precluding grant of probation, and incarceration as a condition of probation, the plea was entered with an express stipulation that defendant receive a three-year sentence, the trial court at the providency hearing advised the defendant of the stipulation and further advised him that, if at the sentencing hearing, the court rejected the stipulation, defendant would be allowed to withdraw the plea, and defendant responded that he understood. People v. Weed, 830 P.2d 1095 (Colo. App. 1991).

Denial of motion to withdraw guilty plea was not an abuse of discretion where the court held a fact hearing before denying defendant's motion, the judge had also conducted the advisement, the court found that defendant's plea had been voluntarily entered, and justice would not be subverted by denying defendant's request. People v. Weed, 830 P.2d 1095 (Colo. App. 1991).

Valid guilty plea requires that defendant understand the possible penalty or penalties which could be imposed. People v. Chavez, 902 P.2d 891 (Colo. App. 1995).

Section (b)(4) requires that defendant be advised, prior to the entry of a guilty plea, of the maximum possible sentence to which that plea will subject him or her, including the maximum that may result if the sentences are ordered to be served consecutively. People v. Peters, 738 P.2d 395 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Phillips, 964 P.2d 628 (Colo. App. 1998).

Court not required to advise defendant of the possibility of consecutive sentences that might result from crimes not yet committed or sentences or charges not pending. People v. Phillips, 964 P.2d 628 (Colo. App. 1998).

Fact that defense counsel may not have advised client of maximum penalty defendant might be sentenced to does not form the basis for vacating a guilty plea where court gave defendant a complete advisement with respect to the possible penalties, including presumptive and aggravated range penalties for each conviction and the difference between concurrent and consecutive sentences. People v. Chavez, 902 P.2d 891 (Colo. App. 1995).

And showing of reason for plea change within discretion of court. Whether a showing of ''fair and just reason'' for a change of plea was made is a matter within the discretion of the trial court, and the Colorado supreme court will intervene only if the court has abused its discretion. People v. Gutierrez, 622 P.2d 547 (Colo. 1981).

In determining whether defendant received a proper advisement under the rule, the court looks to whether the record as a whole shows defendant received sufficient information as to be fairly placed on notice of the matter in question. Young v. People, 30 P.3d 202 (Colo. 2001).

If an advisement indicates an affirmative waiver, the defendant has the burden to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, the ineffectiveness of his apparent waiver. Young v. People, 30 P.3d 202 (Colo. 2001).

Defendant was entitled to a hearing on motion to withdraw guilty plea where court understated minimum sentence that could be imposed and defendant's plea agreement was not in evidence. On remand, defendant must establish that his asserted belief that he would receive a sentence below the minimum sentence stated by the court was objectively reasonable. People v. Hodge, 205 P.3d 481 (Colo. App. 2008).

Burden on defendant. The burden of demonstrating a ''fair and just reason'' for a change of plea rests on the defendant. People v. Gutierrez, 622 P.2d 547 (Colo. 1981).

If the advisement is infirm, the court determines if it can correct the error. If the error cannot be corrected, the defendant can withdraw his plea. Young v. People, 30 P.3d 202 (Colo. 2001).

The trial court is not bound by the plea agreement, and has an independent duty to examine the appropriate sentence prior to issuance of that sentence. On review, the court looks at the maximum statutory exposure recited by the trial court or included in the documentation. Young v. People, 30 P.3d 202 (Colo. 2001).

Except when the trial court explicitly states at the providency hearing that it will accept and agree to be bound by the plea agreement, and so advises the defendant. Young v. People, 30 P.3d 202 (Colo. 2001).

Who must show that denial would subvert justice. To warrant a change of plea before entry of a sentence, there must be some showing that denial of the request will subvert justice. People v. Gutierrez, 622 P.2d 547 (Colo. 1981).

Gutierrez distinguished where the defendant acknowledged his own guilt rather than an independent trier of fact that determined defendant's guilt based on sworn trial testimony. People v. Schneider, 25 P.3d 755 (Colo. 2001).

Use of statements made in conjunction with withdrawn or rejected guilty plea. A defendant who challenges the voluntariness or reliability of statements made in the course of tendering a guilty plea which is subsequently withdrawn or rejected and is later sought to be used against him at trial for impeachment purposes is entitled to a hearing which provides the safeguards set forth in Jackson v. Denno, 378 U.S. 368, 84 S. Ct. 1774, 12 L. Ed. 2d 908 (1964), before those statements may be used against him. People v. Cole, 195 Colo. 483, 584 P.2d 71 (1978).

The prosecution has the right to cure a deficient record by offering evidence at a rule 35(c) hearing which establishes that the defendant's plea was constitutionally obtained. People v. Lesh, 668 P.2d 1362 (Colo. 1983).

Jurisdictional defects not waived by plea. Jurisdictional defects, such as insufficiency of a charging instrument, are not waived by a plea of nolo contendere. People v. Roberts, 668 P.2d 977 (Colo. App. 1983).

Limitation on use of plea accepted in violation of rule. Conviction based on plea accepted in violation of this rule cannot be used in a later proceeding to support the imposition of statutory liabilities. People v. Heinz, 197 Colo. 102, 589 P.2d 931 (1979).

Conditional guilty pleas are not authorized in Colorado by statute or court rule. People v. Neuhaus, 240 P.3d 391 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd, 2012 CO 65, 289 P.3d 19; People v. Hoffman, 2012 CO 66, 289 P.3d 24; Escobedo v. People, 2012 CO 67, 289 P.3d 25.

A plea accepted in violation of this rule may not be used to support a conviction for purposes of the habitual traffic offender statute. People v. Roybal, 618 P.2d 1121 (Colo. 1980).

Substantial compliance with section (b)(7). District attorney's oral consent to entry of a guilty plea, made on the record at the providency hearing, substantially complies with the requirements of section (b)(7). People v. Mascarenas, 643 P.2d 786 (Colo. App. 1981).

Evidence that requirements of rules not complied with. People v. Van Hook, 36 Colo. App. 226, 539 P.2d 507 (1975).

III. MISDEMEANOR CASES.

Law reviews. For article, ''The Colorado Counsel Conundrum: Plea Bargaining, Misdemeanors, and the Right to Counsel'', see 89 Denv. U.L. Rev. 327 (2012).

More simplified procedures can properly be used for minor offenses than those required to be followed in receiving a plea of guilty in serious criminal cases. Cave v. Colo. Dept. of Rev., 31 Colo. App. 185, 501 P.2d 479 (1972).

Procedure for plea to misdemeanor or traffic offense. Before accepting a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to a misdemeanor or traffic offense, the trial court must be satisfied that the defendant's decision to acknowledge guilt has been made knowingly and understandingly. People v. Lesh, 668 P.2d 1362 (Colo. 1983).

IV. FAILURE OR REFUSAL TO PLEAD.

When court may enter plea. Where a trial court denies a motion to dismiss for failure to rearraign on an amended information because the amendment is not one of substance, when counsel calls the court's attention to the amended information during the course of the trial, the court may follow the provisions of Crim. P. 11(d) and enter a plea of not guilty, allowing the trial to proceed. People v. Buckner, 180 Colo. 65, 504 P.2d 669 (1972).

V. DEFENSE OF INSANITY.

Fact that defendant is insane does not conclusively render him incompetent to proceed or enter a plea of guilty. People v. Blehm, 791 P.2d 1177 (Colo. App. 1989), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 817 P.2d 988 (Colo. 1991).

Plea of not guilty by reason of insanity includes a not guilty plea. Sanchez v. District Court, 200 Colo. 33, 612 P.2d 519 (1980).

Section (e) is to be liberally construed in favor of defendants. Martinez v. People, 179 Colo. 197, 499 P.2d 611 (1972); Ellis v. District Court, 189 Colo. 123, 538 P.2d 107 (1975); Labor v. Gibson, 195 Colo. 416, 578 P.2d 1059 (1978).

Common-law bar on pleading and trial of mentally ill. It has long been the rule of the common law that a person cannot be required to plead to an indictment or be tried for a crime while he is so mentally disordered as to be incapable of making a rational defense, and he cannot be adjudged to punishment or executed while he is so disordered as to be incapable of stating any reasons that may exist why judgment should not be pronounced or executed. Hampton v. Tinsley, 240 F. Supp. 213 (D. Colo. 1965), rev'd on other grounds, 355 F.2d 470 (10th Cir. 1966).

Plea at arraignment or before trial upon good cause showing. Section (e) sets forth in unequivocal terms that the insanity defense must be interposed at the time of arraignment, except when the court, for good cause shown, permits the plea to be interposed prior to trial. Ellis v. District Court, 189 Colo. 123, 538 P.2d 107 (1975).

Determination of good cause in discretion of trial court. Whether good cause is shown to permit a plea of insanity rests within discretion of trial court. Taylor v. District Court, 182 Colo. 406, 514 P.2d 309 (1973).

Not disturbed on appeal absent clear abuse. The question of good cause is one addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge and, absent a clear abuse of discretion, the trial judge's ruling will not be disturbed on appeal. Martinez v. People, 179 Colo. 197, 499 P.2d 611 (1972); Taylor v. District Court, 182 Colo. 406, 514 P.2d 309 (1973); Garza v. People, 200 Colo. 62, 612 P.2d 85 (1980).

Showing required to prove good cause. Good cause in section (e) of this rule is shown when it is demonstrated that fairness and justice are best subserved by permitting the additional plea. Ellis v. District Court, 189 Colo. 123, 538 P.2d 107 (1975).

Good cause in section (e) is satisfied if the accused establishes that the plea was not entered at the time of arraignment due to mistake, ignorance, or inadvertence. Ellis v. District Court, 189 Colo. 123, 538 P.2d 107 (1975).

Good cause not established. Garza v. People, 200 Colo. 62, 612 P.2d 85 (1980).

Abuse of discretion in not allowing insanity plea. Taylor v. District Court, 182 Colo. 406, 514 P.2d 309 (1973); Ellis v. District Court, 189 Colo. 123, 538 P.2d 107 (1975).

Right to have jury solve dispute as to sanity. Where there is a disputed question as to the defendant's sanity, he is entitled to have a jury pass on it. Abad v. People, 168 Colo. 202, 450 P.2d 327 (1969).

Choice of entering plea is defendant's. The tactical choice of whether to enter a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity by a defendant found ''mentally competent'' is left to the defendant and his counsel. People v. Lopez, 640 P.2d 275 (Colo. App. 1982).

And court not authorized to enter insanity plea unless defendant requests. Neither section (e) nor § 16-8-103, gives a trial court the authority to enter a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity when it has not been requested by the defendant or his counsel. Labor v. Gibson, 195 Colo. 416, 578 P.2d 1059 (1978); People v. Lopez, 640 P.2d 275 (Colo. App. 1982).

Insanity inquiry at any time during trial. If a court, at any of the stages of a trial, has a reasonable doubt whether a defendant is mentally disordered, it should suspend the criminal proceedings and hold an inquiry on the matter. Hampton v. Tinsley, 240 F. Supp. 213 (D. Colo. 1965), rev'd on other grounds, 355 F.2d 470 (10th Cir. 1966).

Otherwise due process is violated. It is fundamental that a proceeding against an insane person in a criminal matter is a violation of his rights under the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. Hampton v. Tinsley, 240 F. Supp. 213 (D. Colo. 1965), rev'd on other grounds, 355 F.2d 470 (10th Cir. 1966).

VI. PLEA BARGAINING.

Law reviews. For article, ''Felony Plea Bargaining in Six Colorado Judicial Districts: A Limited Inquiry into the Nature of the Process'', see 66 Den. U. L. Rev. 243 (1989).

Plea agreements, or plea bargainings, are approved. Dabbs v. People, 175 Colo. 273, 486 P.2d 1053 (1971); People v. White, 182 Colo. 417, 514 P.2d 69 (1973).

But it may not be utilized to subvert truth or as means of forcing plea to an uncommitted crime. People v. White, 182 Colo. 417, 514 P.2d 69 (1973).

Plea bargain may not be hidden and must be brought to the surface for scrutiny. DeLuzio v. People, 177 Colo. 389, 494 P.2d 589 (1972).

And defense lawyer must first obtain permission and the consent of his client before plea bargaining. Dabbs v. People, 175 Colo. 273, 486 P.2d 1053 (1971).

Coercion. Negotiation regarding charges against a loved one does not necessarily render a plea bargain the product of coercion, because such a plea can be voluntary. People v. Duran, 179 Colo. 129, 498 P.2d 937 (1972).

Judge not to participate in bargaining. Participation by trial judge in the plea bargaining process must be condemned. People v. Clark, 183 Colo. 201, 515 P.2d 1242 (1973).

Court may involve itself in plea discussions if such involvement merely involves observations regarding the evolving legal posture of the case or inquiries as to whether the parties still wish to consummate the agreement. People v. Venzor, 121 P.3d 260 (Colo. App. 2005).

Section (f)(4) makes it clear that a trial judge shall not participate in plea discussions. This prohibition is designed to prevent coercion by the court in shaping a bargain. People v. Roy, 109 P.3d 993 (Colo. App. 2004).

When rejecting a plea agreement, a trial court must demonstrate on the record that it has actually exercised its discretion. A court's failure to make such showing is an abuse of discretion. People v. Copenhaver, 21 P.3d 413 (Colo. App. 2000).

Court has discretion to reject a plea agreement, separately from the merits, on the basis that the parties tendered it in an untimely fashion. The trial court must provide adequate notice to the parties of the plea bargain cutoff date and must permit an exception to the rule for good cause. If a court rejects a plea for failure to conform to plea deadline, court need not necessarily consider the terms of the plea agreement proffered by the parties. People v. Jasper, 17 P.3d 807 (Colo. 2001).

Court is not bound by a recommendation; in its discretion it may refuse to grant the district attorney's sentence concession. People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978); People v. McGhee, 677 P.2d 419 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Smith, 827 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1991).

A prosecutor can only make sentence recommendations, not promises, and sentencing determinations remain within the discretion of the trial court regardless of plea agreements between the prosecution and the defense. People v. Smith, 827 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1991).

Section (f)(2)(I) clearly contemplates that a defendant should be permitted to withdraw his guilty plea where the trial court chooses not to follow the prosecutor's sentence recommendation, regardless of whether the prosecution has promised that the court will follow the recommendation. People v. Wright, 194 Colo. 448. 573 P.2d 551 (1978); People v. Smith, 827 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1991).

But court must comply with rule 32(e). The provision in section (b)(5) of this rule and § 16-7-207 (2)(e), that the court will not be bound by representations made to the defendant ''unless [the] representations are included in a formal plea agreement approved by the court and supported by the findings of the presentence report . . .'', does not free the court from complying with Crim. P. 32(e), which states, that if the court decides that the final disposition should not include the charge or sentence concessions contemplated by the plea agreement, the judge must so advise the defendant and call upon the defendant to affirm or withdraw his plea of guilty or nolo contendere. People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

Although district judges are barred from the plea negotiation process by this rule, once they have given unqualified approval to a plea agreement they, like the parties, become bound by the terms of that agreement. Were courts free to re-examine the wisdom of plea bargains with the benefit of hindsight, the agreements themselves would lack finality, and the benefits that encourage the government and defendants to enter into pleas might prove illusory. People v. Roy, 109 P.3d 993 (Colo. App. 2004).

Application of C.R.E. 410, when read in light of this rule and § 16-7-303, requires the exclusion of evidence of statements made by defendant during plea bargaining process only in regard to plea discussions with the attorney for the government. People v. Rollins, 759 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1988).

Sentence recommendation is a sentence concession whether or not the court approves or concurs. People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

Offers of identical concessions for similarly situated defendants not required. Section 16-7-301 (3) and section (f)(3) of this rule do not require that similarly situated defendants must be offered identical concessions. People v. Lewis, 671 P.2d 985 (Colo. App. 1983).

District attorneys have the power to refuse to recommend sentence or probation. People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

Failure to object at time of acceptance of bargain bars later appeal of sentence. Where the trial court repeatedly reminded the defendant of what the sentence would be when it advised him at the time of the acceptance of his plea of guilty, pursuant to this rule, and where at no time did the defendant or his counsel protest the sentence nor raise an objection that the trial court was not properly exercising its discretion in imposing the sentence, the defendant could not, after benefiting from the plea bargain, claim on appeal that he has been unjustly sentenced. People v. Cunningham, 200 Colo. 303, 614 P.2d 886 (1980); People v. Campbell, 174 P.3d 860 (Colo. App. 2007).

The proper standard for evaluating whether a prosecution remains bound by its obligations under a plea agreement is whether a defendant has materially and substantially breached his obligation to perform under the plea agreement. People v. McCormick, 859 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1993).

A plea agreement is more than merely a contract between two parties and must be attended by constitutional safeguards to ensure that a defendant receives the performance that he is due. People v. McCormick, 856 P.2d 846 (Colo. 1993).

Once the court chose to engage in the bargaining process and agreed to terms, it became obligated to comply with those terms, just as any other party to the agreement. The court's faithful observance of the terms of the bargain was just as vital to the fairness and efficiency of the process as was the prosecutor's compliance. Once the court committed to the plea agreement, it became bound by the terms of the agreement and could not, absent proof of fraud or breach of the plea bargain, set the agreement aside. People v. Roy, 109 P.3d 993 (Colo. App. 2004).

Partial performance not enough. A defendant who materially and substantially breaches a plea agreement cannot enforce the agreement, regardless of whether the defendant has partially performed some of his obligations under it. People v. McCormick, 859 P.2d 846 (Colo. 1993).

Rule 12. Pleadings, Motions Before Trial, Defenses, and Objections

(a) Pleadings and Motions. Pleadings shall consist of the indictment or information or complaint, or summons and complaint, and the pleas of guilty, not guilty, not guilty by reason of insanity, and nolo contendere. All other pleas, demurrers, and motions to quash are abolished and defenses and objections raised before trial which heretofore could have been raised by one or more of them shall be raised only by motion to dismiss or to grant appropriate relief, as provided in these Rules.

(b) The Motion Raising Defenses and Objections.

(1) Defenses and Objections Which May Be Raised. Any defense or objection which is capable of determination without the trial of the general issue may be raised by motion.

(2) Defenses and Objections Which Must Be Raised. Defenses and objections based on defects in the institution of the prosecution or in the indictment or information or complaint, or summons and complaint, other than that it fails to show jurisdiction in the court or to charge an offense, may be raised only by motion. The motion shall include all such defenses and objections then available to the defendant. Failure to present any such defense or objection constitutes a waiver of it, but the court for cause shown may grant relief from the waiver. Lack of jurisdiction or the failure of the indictment or information to charge an offense shall be noticed by the court at any time during the proceeding. When a motion challenging the constitutionality of the statute upon which the charge is based or asserting lack of jurisdiction is made after the commencement of the trial, the court shall reserve its ruling on that motion until the conclusion of the trial.

(3) Time of Making Motion. The motion shall be made within 21 days following arraignment.

(4) Hearing on Motion. A motion before trial raising defenses or objections shall be determined before the trial unless the court orders that it be deferred for determination at the trial of the general issue except as provided in Rule 41. An issue of fact shall be tried by a jury if a jury trial is required by the Constitution or by statute. All other issues of fact shall be determined by the court with or without a jury or on affidavits or in such other manner as the court may direct.

(5) Effect of Determination. If a motion is determined adversely to the defendant, he shall be permitted to plead if he has not previously pleaded. A plea previously entered shall stand.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Technical noncompliance with Crim. P. 16 that does not cause prejudice to defendant will not constitute reversible error. People v. Hernandez, 695 P.2d 308 (Colo. App. 1984).

Applied in Stapleton v. District Court, 179 Colo. 187, 499 P.2d 310 (1972); People v. McCabe, 37 Colo. App. 181, 546 P.2d 1289 (1975); People v. Davis, 194 Colo. 466, 573 P.2d 543 (1978); People v. Dickinson, 197 Colo. 338, 592 P.2d 807 (1979); People v. Velasquez, 641 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1982); People v. Peterson, 656 P.2d 1301 (Colo. 1983).

II. PLEADING AND MOTIONS.

Legal effect of present nomenclature for old procedures is the same. Although the granting of motions to quash, demurrers, pleas in bar, pleas in abatement, motions in arrest of judgment, and the declarations of a statute unconstitutional have been abolished by section (a) and Crim. P. 29(a) the legal effect of the present nomenclature for those procedures is the same, that is, a ruling adverse to the state effectively terminates its prosecution of the defendant and results in a ''final judgment''. People v. Cochran, 176 Colo. 364, 490 P.2d 684 (1971).

III. MOTION RAISING DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS.

A. Defenses and Objections That May Be Raised.

Motion to suppress a lineup identification is within the scope of this subsection (b)(1). People v. Renfrow, 172 Colo. 399, 473 P.2d 957 (1970).

B. Defenses and Objections That Must Be Raised.

Waiver of defenses and objections by failure to raise. Failure to raise defenses and objections referred to in subsection (b)(2) by motion constitutes waiver of the defenses and objections. Mora v. People, 172 Colo. 261, 472 P.2d 142 (1970).

Subsection (b)(2) does not require a defendant to either raise a double jeopardy claim at trial or waive such claim. People v. Zadra, 2017 CO 18, 389 P.3d 885.

Nothing in this rule requires a defendant to file a motion regarding any error that might later flow from the charging document, including a double jeopardy error.

Reyna-Abarca v. People, 2017 CO 15, 390 P.3d 816; Zubiate v. People, 2017 CO 17, 390 P.3d 394.

Motions not within scope of subsection (b)(2). A motion for the return of property and to suppress evidence is not a defense or objection based on defects in the institution of the prosecution or in the indictment, information, or complaint, and, thus, does not fall within the scope of subsection (b)(2). Adargo v. People, 173 Colo. 323, 478 P.2d 308 (1970).

A motion to suppress is not a ''defense or objection'' based on defects listed in this section. People v. Robertson, 40 Colo. App. 386, 577 P.2d 314 (1978).

Trial court should entertain motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction at whatever stage of the proceedings the question is raised. Maddox v. People, 178 Colo. 366, 497 P.2d 1263 (1972).

Absence of verification on information is not jurisdictional. Quintana v. People, 168 Colo. 308, 451 P.2d 286 (1969).

Rather, it is for benefit of defendant and is waived unless timely objection is made thereto. Quintana v. People, 168 Colo. 308, 451 P.2d 286 (1969); Bergdahl v. People, 27 Colo. 302, 61 P. 228 (1900); Curl v. People, 53 Colo. 578, 127 P. 951 (1912); Harris v. Municipal Court, 123 Colo. 539, 234 P.2d 1055 (1951); Bustamante v. People, 136 Colo. 362, 317 P.2d 885 (1957); Mora v. People, 172 Colo. 261, 472 P.2d 142 (1970); Workman v. People, 174 Colo. 194, 483 P.2d 213 (1971); Maraggos v. People, 175 Colo. 130, 486 P.2d 1 (1971); Scott v. People, 176 Colo. 289, 490 P.2d 1295 (1971).

C. Time of Making Motion.

Defects raisable in motion in arrest of judgment or for new trial. When objections to the want of a verifying affidavit and to the competency and credibility of the affiant are raised by the defendant for the first time in a motion in arrest of judgment or in the alternative for a new trial, and the record does not reveal that any objections were raised prior to that time, although the opportunity existed, then the objections come too late. Maraggos v. People, 175 Colo. 130, 486 P.2d 1 (1971).

Insufficiency of indictment assertable on appeal. Although defendant did not raise the insufficiency of the indictment at trial or in his motion for new trial, he is not thereby precluded from asserting that defect on appeal. People v. Westendorf, 37 Colo. App. 111, 542 P.2d 1300 (1975).

Selective prosecution claim must be raised prior to trial. A selective prosecution claim is an objection based upon a defect in the institution of the prosecution, and, therefore, a defendant's failure to raise the objection in a timely motion constitutes a waiver of the objection. People v. Gallegos, 226 P.3d 1112 (Colo. App. 2009).

Motion made after trial but before sentencing. A motion challenging the constitutionality of a statute preserves the issue on appeal where the motion is made after oral argument on motion for judgment of acquittal or for new trial, but before sentencing. People v. Cagle, 751 P.2d 614 (Colo. 1988).

A substantive defect in an information may be raised at any time during the proceedings. People v. Williams, 961 P.2d 533 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 984 P.2d 56 (Colo. 1999).

Exceptions to duplicitous count must be made before trial. A duplicitous count in a criminal information is only a matter of form, and exceptions which go merely to form must be made before trial. Russell v. People, 155 Colo. 422, 395 P.2d 16 (1964); Specht v. People, 156 Colo. 12, 396 P.2d 838 (1964).

Colorado law is clear that subsection (b) does not require a defendant to object within the time limit under that subsection when the error flows from circumstances that are not apparent from the charging document. People v. Wester-Gravelle, 2018 COA 89M, __ P.3d __.

A unanimity issue arose only after the prosecution decided to introduce at trial three different written instruments under a single charge of forgery of ''a written instrument''. People v. Wester- Gravelle, 2018 COA 89M, __ P.3d __.

Compulsory joinder defense not waived. Where compulsory joinder defense was not available when prosecution of felony charge was instituted because second charge had not been filed, defendant did not waive compulsory joinder claim when he failed to raise issue within twenty days after his arraignment on felony charge and, therefore, claim was not based on a defect in institution of prosecution and, thus, this rule did not prevent defendant from moving to dismiss. People v. Rogers, 742 P.2d 912 (Colo. 1987).

Waiver of objection to legality of arrest. A defendant who fails to object to his arrest before trial waives his right to challenge the legality of his arrest. Massey v. People, 179 Colo. 167, 498 P.2d 953 (1972); People v. Hernandez, 695 P.2d 308 (Colo. App. 1984).

Admissibility of alibi evidence. While a showing by a defendant of good cause for noncompliance with this rule is a proper factor to be considered by a trial court in deciding whether alibi evidence should be admitted, justification for noncompliance is not the sole determinant of admissibility. People v. Moore, 36 Colo. App. 328, 539 P.2d 489 (1975).

The critical consideration for admissibility of alibi evidence is whether the proffered alibi evidence should be admitted in order to assure the defendant a fair trial. People v. Moore, 36 Colo. App. 328, 539 P.2d 489 (1975).

D. Hearing.

Defendant's burden on motion to dismiss for want of due prosecution. A motion for discharge or for dismissal for want of due prosecution of a charge of crime must be sustained by the accused; he has the burden of showing that he was not afforded a speedy trial. Jordan v. People, 155 Colo. 224, 393 P.2d 745 (1964).

Rule 12.1. Notice of Alibi

Repealed March 15, 1985, effective July 1, 1985.

Cross references: For present provisions on notice of alibi, see Crim. P. 16 part II(d).

Rule 13. Trial Together of Indictments, Informations, Complaints, Summons and Complaints

Subject to the provisions of Rule 14, the court may order two or more indictments, informations, complaints, or summons and complaints to be tried together if the offenses, and the defendants, if there are more than one, could have been joined in a single indictment, information, complaint, or summons and complaint. The procedure shall be the same as if the prosecution were under such single indictment, information, complaint, or summons and complaint.

ANNOTATION

Law dependent on facts of each case. The law relating to joinder and severance, and that which permits consolidation of charges, depends on the facts in each particular case. Hunter v. District Court, 193 Colo. 308, 565 P.2d 942 (1977).

Evidence sufficient to justify consolidation of informations. Brown v. District Court, 197 Colo. 219, 591 P.2d 99 (1979).

When defendant uses a common scheme to commit highly similar crimes, consolidation is not an abuse of discretion. People v. Gross, 39 P.3d 1279 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Gregg, 298 P.3d 983 (Colo. App. 2011); People v. Bondsteel, 2015 COA 165, 442 P.3d 880.

Sexual assault offenses may be joined if the evidence of each offense would be admissible in separate trials. People v. Williams, 899 P.2d 306 (Colo. App. 1995).

Joint trial of defendants permitted. People v. Trujillo, 181 Colo. 350, 509 P.2d 794 (1973).

Joinder of unrelated charges allowed for trial on sanity issue. Joinder of a charge of forcible rape with an unrelated deviate sexual intercourse charge committed on a different female on a different date for purposes of trial on the sanity issue was not error. People v. Renfrow, 193 Colo. 131, 564 P.2d 411 (1977).

There was no abuse of discretion in joining two sexual-assault-on-a-minor cases because evidence of each offense would have been admissible in separate trials. Even though the court admitted explicit photographs of the defendant with one of the victims while there were no photos of the other victim, the photos were properly admitted to corroborate the testimony of the victim and the photos were not unduly prejudicial. People v. Raehal, 2017 COA 18, 401 P.3d 117.

Applied in People v. Lyons, 185 Colo. 112, 521 P.2d 1265 (1974); People v. Gonzales, 198 Colo. 450, 601 P.2d 1366 (1979); Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1981); Gimmy v. People, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982); Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

Rule 14. Relief from Prejudicial Joinder

If it appears that a defendant or the prosecution is prejudiced by a joinder of offenses or of defendants in any indictment or information, or by such joinder for trial together, the court may order an election or separate trials of counts, grant a severance of defendants, or provide whatever other relief justice requires. However, upon motion any defendant shall be granted a separate trial as of right if the court finds that the prosecution probably will present against a joint defendant evidence, other than reputation or character testimony, which would not be admissible in a separate trial of the moving defendant, and that such evidence would be prejudicial to those against whom it is not admissible. In ruling on a motion by a defendant for severance, the court may order the prosecuting attorney to deliver to the court for inspection in camera any statements or confessions made by the defendants which the prosecution intends to introduce in evidence at the trial.

ANNOTATION

Duty of trial judge. The trial judge has a duty to safeguard the rights of the accused and to ensure the fair conduct of the trial, and, in furtherance of that duty, he has broad discretion to order a separate trial of counts when their joinder would result in prejudice. People v. Fullerton, 186 Colo. 97, 525 P.2d 1166 (1974).

Consolidation of trials, when the defendant uses a common scheme to commit highly similar crimes, is not an abuse of discretion. People v. Gross, 39 P.3d 1279 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Bondsteel, 2015 COA 165, 442 P.3d 880.

Purpose of severance is to promote a fair determination of guilt or innocence of one or more defendants. People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980).

Matter of election is within the sound discretion of trial court. People v. Mayfield, 184 Colo. 399, 520 P.2d 748 (1974).

And motion for separate trial is addressed to sound discretion of trial court. People v. Maestas, 183 Colo. 378, 517 P.2d 461 (1973); Ruark v. People, 158 Colo. 287, 406 P.2d 91 (1965); Small v. People, 173 Colo. 304, 479 P.2d 386 (1970); Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972); People v. Trujillo, 181 Colo. 350, 509 P.2d 794 (1973); People v. Robles, 183 Colo. 4, 514 P.2d 630 (1973); People v. Walker, 189 Colo. 545, 542 P.2d 1283 (1975); People v. Martinez, 190 Colo. 507, 549 P.2d 758 (1976); People v. McCrary, 190 Colo. 538, 549 P.2d 1320 (1976); People v. Pickett, 194 Colo. 178, 571 P.2d 1078 (1977); People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980); People v. Wortham, 690 P.2d 876 (Colo. App. 1984).

A motion for severance is directed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and, absent an abuse of that discretion resulting in prejudice to the moving defendant, denial of the motion will not be disturbed on appeal. People v. Warren, 196 Colo. 75, 582 P.2d 663 (1978); People v. Allen, 42 Colo. App. 345, 599 P.2d 264 (1979); People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980); People v. Martinez, 652 P.2d 174 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Early, 692 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Hoefer, 961 P.2d 563 (Colo. App. 1998).

And what constitutes abuse of discretion depends upon facts of each particular case. People v. Trujillo, 181 Colo. 350, 509 P.2d 794 (1973); Hunter v. District Court, 193 Colo. 308, 565 P.2d 942 (1977).

To show abuse of discretion with respect to the denial of a motion to sever counts, a defendant must demonstrate that joinder caused actual prejudice and that trier of fact was unable to separate the facts and legal principles applicable to each offense. People v. Knight, 167 P.3d 141 (Colo. App. 2006); People v. Cousins, 181 P.3d 365 (Colo. App. 2007); People v. Garcia, 2012 COA 79, 296 P.3d 285.

And court granted discretion in determining prejudicial circumstances. Although this rule specifies one situation in which separate trials of joint defendants are mandatory, it leaves to the trial court's discretion the determination of what circumstances may prejudice a sole defendant if multiple counts against him are joined in a single trial. People v. Gallagher, 194 Colo. 121, 570 P.2d 236 (1977).

There must be actual prejudice to the defendant and not just differences that are inherent in any trial of different offenses. People v. Pickett, 194 Colo. 178, 571 P.2d 1078 (1977); People v. Early, 692 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1984): People v. Guffie, 749 P.2d 976 (Colo. App. 1987).

Joinder requiring disclosure of prior conviction denies fair trial. Joinder of counts, one of which requires the disclosure of the defendant's prior conviction to the jury panel at the inception of a case, so taints the trial with the defendant's prior criminality that a fair trial on the other counts is impossible. People v. Peterson, 633 P.2d 1088 (Colo. App. 1981).

And unfairness to deny defendant favorable inferences of codefendant's silence. There is a distinct element of unfairness, albeit not always prejudicial, in denying one codefendant any favorable inference to be drawn from the other's silence, for it prohibits him from urging upon the jury every point favorable to his case. People v. Warren, 196 Colo. 75, 582 P.2d 663 (1978).

When denial of severance disturbed on appeal. Absent an abuse of discretion resulting in prejudice to the moving defendant, a denial of a motion for severance will not be disturbed on appeal. People v. Robles, 183 Colo. 4, 514 P.2d 630 (1973).

And inartfully raised motion to sever is sufficient to preserve issue for appeal. People v. Peterson, 633 P.2d 1088 (Colo. App. 1981).

Factors to be considered on motion for severance. Motion for severance will be granted when grounded on the presence of four factors: (1) The defenses of the defendants were antagonistic; (2) one defendant took the stand and his attorney could not comment on the other defendant's silence; (3) one defendant, if tried first, could conceivably testify on behalf of the other at the later trial; (4) the evidence was largely circumstantial and stronger against one defendant. People v. Robles, 183 Colo. 4, 514 P.2d 630 (1973).

Necessity of severance is tested by the standard that it must be ''deemed appropriate to promote a fair determination of the guilt or innocence of a defendant'', and that standard, in turn, is tested by the following: (1) Whether the number of defendants or the complexity of the evidence is such that the jury will probably confuse the evidence and law applicable to each defendant; (2) whether evidence inadmissible against one defendant will be considered against the other defendant despite admonitory instructions; (3) whether there are antagonistic defenses. People v. Maestas, 183 Colo. 378, 517 P.2d 461 (1973); People v. Warren, 196 Colo. 75, 582 P.2d 663 (1978).

When deciding whether to grant a motion for severance, the trial court should consider whether evidence inadmissible against one defendant will be considered against the other defendant, despite the issuance by the trial court of the proper admonitory instructions. An additional consideration is whether the defendants plan to offer antagonistic defenses. People v. Gonzales, 198 Colo. 450, 601 P.2d 1366 (1979).

Important inquiry is whether the trier of fact will be able to separate the facts and legal theories applicable to each offense. People v. Pickett, 194 Colo. 178, 571 P.2d 1078 (1977); People v. Taylor, 804 P.2d 196 (Colo. App. 1990).

Joinder of offenses permissible to show common elements. Joinder of sexual assault offenses is permissible where the evidence tending to prove each offense would be admissible in separate trials to show common plan, scheme, design, identity, modus operandi, motive, guilty knowledge, or intent. People v. Allen, 42 Colo. App. 345, 599 P.2d 264 (1979).

Desire to testify on one count does not entitle defendant to separate trial. The mere fact that defendant wishes to testify on one count and not on the other does not automatically entitle one to severance. People v. Walker, 189 Colo. 545, 542 P.2d 1283 (1975); People v. Early, 692 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Garcia, 2012 COA 79, 296 P.3d 285.

And fact of antagonistic defenses may not always demand severance, but certainly it justifies separate trials in many instances. Eder v. People, 179 Colo. 122, 498 P.2d 945 (1972).

When separate trial not required. Where references to a defendant are carefully and completely deleted from a codefendant's written statement which also implicates the defendant and the jury is instructed that such written statement is to be considered solely for the purpose of determining the guilt or innocence of the codefendant, then, in a separate trial of the defendant as an accessory, the questioned statement, under such a limiting instruction, would be admissible on the issue of the guilt of the codefendant, and, accordingly, this rule, by its very terms, does not require a separate trial. Stewart v. People, 161 Colo. 1, 419 P.2d 650, 26 A.L.R.3d 943 (1966).

Bifurcated trial before single jury did not result in defendant being denied his right to a fair trial on previous offender charges or abuse of court's discretion in denying motion for separate trials before different juries. People v. Robinson, 187 P.3d 1166 (Colo. App. 2008).

When separate trial to be granted as of right. Upon motion, any defendant must be granted a separate trial as of right if the court finds that the prosecution probably will present, against a joint defendant, evidence, other than reputation or character testimony, which would not be admissible in a separate trial of the moving defendant. Ruark v. People, 158 Colo. 287, 406 P.2d 91 (1965); Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972); People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980).

Severance not mandatory where one codefendant testifies while other does not. The fact that one codefendant testifies while the other does not, does not mandate severance. People v. Toomer, 43 Colo. App. 182, 604 P.2d 1180 (1979).

But if defendant fails to move for severance, he cannot raise question on appeal. Pineda v. People, 152 Colo. 545, 383 P.2d 793 (1963); Reed v. People, 174 Colo. 43, 482 P.2d 110 (1971); People v. Barker, 180 Colo. 28, 501 P.2d 1041 (1972).

Failure to renew pretrial motion to sever waives right to challenge trial court's denial on appeal. People v. Aalbu, 696 P.2d 796 (Colo. 1985).

Nor where defendant accedes to limitation on admissibility of evidence. Where the trial court rules that certain evidence is admissible only as to a codefendant and the defendant accedes to this ruling, he waives any further objection. Maes v. People, 169 Colo. 200, 454 P.2d 792 (1969).

And motion need not detail specific objectionable evidence. Where the court has no basis for concluding that the defendant was aware of objectionable testimony relied on in a motion for severance of trials until after the trial commenced, and the defendant rightfully filed his motion before the evidence was presented, it is not necessary for the motion to make reference to the specific evidence being relied upon. People v. Gonzales, 43 Colo. App. 312, 602 P.2d 6 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 198 Colo. 450, 601 P.2d 1366 (1979).

But motion for severance must contain evidence which is claimed to be incompetent toward the moving party, so that the court will be given the opportunity to determine whether the one requesting a severance may be prejudiced by testimony admissible against the codefendant, but not admissible as to him. Padilla v. People, 171 Colo. 521, 470 P.2d 846 (1970); People v. Gonzales, 43 Colo. App. 312, 602 P.2d 6 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 198 Colo. 450, 601 P.2d 1366 (1979).

Applied in People v. Story, 182 Colo. 122, 511 P.2d 492 (1973); People v. Lyons, 185 Colo. 112, 521 P.2d 1265 (1974); People v. Ciari, 189 Colo. 325, 540 P.2d 1094 (1975); People v. Renfrow, 193 Colo. 131, 564 P.2d 411 (1977); People v. McGregor, 635 P.2d 912 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Peterson, 656 P.2d 1301 (Colo. 1983); People v. Gregory, 691 P.2d 357 (Colo. App. 1984).

Rule 15. Depositions

(a) Motion and Order. The prosecutor or the defendant may file a motion supported by an affidavit any time after an indictment, information, complaint, or summons and complaint is filed requesting that the deposition of a prospective witness be taken before the court. The court may order that a deposition be taken before the court if a prospective witness may be unable to attend a trial or hearing and it is necessary to take that person's deposition to prevent injustice. The court shall identify the witness and fix the date and time for the deposition in the order and shall give every party reasonable notice of the time and place for taking the deposition. For good cause shown, the court may reschedule the date and time for the deposition.

(a.5) Deposition by Stipulation Permitted. The prosecution and defense may take a deposition before a judge by stipulation.

(b) Subpoena of Witness. Upon entering an order for the taking of a deposition, the court shall direct that a subpoena issue for each person named in the order and may require that any designated books, papers, documents, photographs, or other tangible objects, not privileged, be produced at the deposition. If it appears, however, that the witness will disregard a subpoena, the court may direct the sheriff to produce the prospective witness in court where the witness may be released upon personal recognizance or upon reasonable bail conditioned upon the witness's appearance at the time and place fixed for the taking of deposition. If the witness fails to give bail, the court shall remand him to custody until the deposition can be taken but in no event for longer than forty-eight hours. If the deposition be not taken within forty-eight hours, the witness shall be discharged.

(c) Presence of Defendant. The defendant shall be present at the deposition unless the defendant voluntarily fails to appear after receiving notice of the date, time, and place of the deposition.

(d) Taking and Preserving Depositions. Depositions shall be taken as directed by the court. All depositions shall be preserved by video recording at the expense of the requesting party. A copy of the video recording shall be filed with the clerk of the court and provided to the opposing party.

(e) Use. At the trial, or at any hearing, a part or all of a deposition may be used, so far as otherwise allowed by law or by stipulation.

(f) Transcripts of Depositions. The requesting party shall file a transcript of the deposition with the clerk of the court and provide a copy to the opposing party without cost.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Hearsay in Criminal Cases Under the Colorado Rules of Evidence: An Overview", see 50 U. Colo. L. Rev. 277 (1979).

This rule limits taking of depositions in a criminal proceeding to those situations where the prospective witness ''may be unable to attend a trial or hearing''. Bresnahan v. District Court, 164 Colo. 263, 434 P.2d 419 (1967).

Primary purpose of section (e) is to safeguard the confrontation rights of the criminally accused by limiting the use of deposition testimony to narrowly defined situations of unavailability. People ex rel. Faulk v. District Court, 667 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1983).

Trial court has great discretion in determining whether to allow the taking of deposition testimony under this rule. People v. Hernandez, 899 P.2d 297 (Colo. App. 1995).

A Colorado court does not have authority under this rule to order a deposition of a person outside of its jurisdiction. Trial court was in error in granting a motion to depose a witness residing in Mexico. The rule specifically provides that the deposition must be taken in the court's presence. It also logically follows that, since the rule requires the court to subpoena the witness who is to be deposed, the court may not order a deposition of any person who may not be legally served a subpoena. The provisions of the Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without a State in Criminal Proceedings, which extends a court's jurisdiction to persons in other states, applies only within the United States and only to other states that have enacted the same law. Thus, in ordering the deposition of a person in Mexico, the district court was proceeding without jurisdiction. People v. Arellano-Avila, 20 P.3d 1191 (Colo. 2001).

This rule does not allow taking of depositions for purely discovery purposes, be it in-state or out-of-state. Bresnahan v. District Court, 164 Colo. 263, 434 P.2d 419 (1967).

"Unavailability" determined at time of trial. Unavailability within the context of section (e) is to be determined at the time of trial in light of the circumstances then existing. The mere granting of a pretrial motion to depose a witness accords no presumption of unavailability at the time of trial. People ex rel. Faulk v. District Court, 667 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1983); People v. Hernandez, 899 P.2d 297 (Colo. App. 1995).

Showing required before deposition admitted. Before a deposition is admitted into evidence, the proponent of the deposition must make some showing, by evidence or stipulation, that the witness's inability to testify at trial is due to sickness or infirmity. Mere inconvenience or passing discomfort does not satisfy the unambiguous provisions of the rule. People ex rel. Faulk v. District Court, 667 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1983).

Affidavit not essential to motion. The purpose of the affidavit requirement in section (a) is to ensure that the court has sufficient information to decide the merits of the motion, i.e., whether a witness might be unable to attend the trial. Where the court is thoroughly informed of the facts supporting the motion by other means, and defendant does not dispute these assertions, the lack of an affidavit is not fatal. People v. Hernandez, 899 P.2d 297 (Colo. App. 1995).

Lack of finding of unavailability may not constitute deprivation of rights. Where prosecution uses depositions of witnesses at trial, and the defendant was present with counsel and granted full rights of cross-examination at the time of the taking of the depositions before a judge, the defendant is not deprived of his right to confront the witnesses at the trial where the depositions are used without a finding of unavailability of the deponents when it is a matter of his counsel's trial strategy. Morse v. People, 180 Colo. 49, 501 P.2d 1328 (1972).

Applied in People v. Mann, 646 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1982).

Rule 16. Discovery and Procedure Before Trial

Definitions.

(1) ''Defense'', as used in this rule, means an attorney for the defendant, or a defendant if pro se.

Part I. Disclosure to the Defense

(a) Prosecutor's Obligations.

(1) The prosecuting attorney shall make available to the defense the following material and information which is within the possession or control of the prosecuting attorney, and shall provide duplicates upon request, and concerning the pending case:

(I) Police, arrest and crime or offense reports, including statements of all witnesses;

(II) With consent of the judge supervising the grand jury, all transcripts of grand jury testimony and all tangible evidence presented to the grand jury in connection with the case;

(III) Any reports or statements of experts made in connection with the particular case, including results of physical or mental examinations and of scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons;

(IV) Any books, papers, documents, photographs or tangible objects held as evidence in connection with the case;

(V) Any record of prior criminal convictions of the accused, any codefendant or any person the prosecuting attorney intends to call as a witness in the case;

(VI) All tapes and transcripts of any electronic surveillance (including wiretaps) of conversations involving the accused, any codefendant or witness in the case;

(VII) A written list of the names and addresses of the witnesses then known to the district attorney whom he or she intends to call at trial;

(VIII) Any written or recorded statements of the accused or of a codefendant, and the substance of any oral statements made to the police or prosecution by the accused or by a codefendant, if the trial is to be a joint one.

(2) The prosecuting attorney shall disclose to the defense any material or information within his or her possession or control which tends to negate the guilt of the accused as to the offense charged or would tend to reduce the punishment therefor.

(3) The prosecuting attorney's obligations under this section (a) extend to material and information in the possession or control of members of his or her staff and of any others who have participated in the investigation or evaluation of the case and who either regularly report, or with reference to the particular case have reported, to his or her office.

(b) Prosecutor's Performance of Obligations.

(1) The prosecuting attorney shall perform his or her obligations under subsections (a)(1)(I), (IV), (VII), and with regard to written or recorded statements of the accused or a codefendant under (VIII) as soon as practicable but not later than 21 days after the defendant's first appearance at the time of or following the filing of charges, except that portions of such reports claimed to be nondiscoverable may be withheld pending a determination and ruling of the court under Part III but the defense must be notified in writing that information has not been disclosed.

(2) The prosecuting attorney shall request court consent and provide the defense with all grand jury transcripts made in connection with the case as soon as practicable but not later than 35 days after indictment.

(3) The prosecuting attorney shall perform all other obligations under subsection (a)(1) as soon as practicable but not later than 35 days before trial.

(4) The prosecuting attorney shall ensure that a flow of information is maintained between the various investigative personnel and his or her office sufficient to place within his or her possession or control all material and information relevant to the accused and the offense charged.

(c) Material Held by Other Governmental Personnel.

(1) Upon the defense's request and designation of material or information which would be discoverable if in the possession or control of the prosecuting attorney and which is in the possession or control of other governmental personnel, the prosecuting attorney shall use diligent good faith efforts to cause such material to be made available to the defense.

(2) The court shall issue suitable subpoenas or orders to cause such material to be made available to the defense, if the prosecuting attorney's efforts are unsuccessful and such material or other governmental personnel are subject to the jurisdiction of the court.

(d) Discretionary Disclosures.

(1) The court in its discretion may, upon motion, require disclosure to the defense of relevant material and information not covered by Parts I (a), (b), and (c), upon a showing by the defense that the request is reasonable.

(2) The court may deny disclosure authorized by this section if it finds that there is substantial risk to any person of physical harm, intimidation, bribery, economic reprisals, or unnecessary annoyance or embarrassment, resulting from such disclosure, which outweighs any usefulness of the disclosure to the defense.

(3) Where the interests of justice would be served, the court may order the prosecution to disclose the underlying facts or data supporting the opinion in that particular case of an expert endorsed as a witness. If a report has not been prepared by that expert to aid in compliance with other discovery obligations of this rule, the court may order the party calling that expert to provide a written summary of the testimony describing the witness's opinions and the bases and reasons therefor, including results of physical or mental examination and of scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons. The intent of this section is to allow the defense sufficient meaningful information to conduct effective cross-examination under CRE 705.

(e) Matters not Subject to Disclosure.

(1) Work Product. Disclosure shall not be required of legal research or of records, correspondence, reports, or memoranda to the extent that they contain the opinions, theories, or conclusions of the prosecuting attorney or members of his legal staff.

(2) Informants. Disclosure shall not be required of an informant's identity where his or her identity is a prosecution secret and a failure to disclose will not infringe the constitutional rights of the accused. Disclosure shall not be denied hereunder of the identity of witnesses to be produced at a hearing or trial.

Part II. Disclosure to Prosecution

(a) The Person of the Accused.

(1) Notwithstanding the initiation of judicial proceedings, and subject to constitutional limitations, upon request of the prosecuting attorney, the court may require the accused to give any nontestimonial identification as provided in Rule 41.1(h)(2).

(2) Whenever the personal appearance of the accused is required for the foregoing purposes, reasonable notice of the time and place of such appearance shall be given by the prosecuting attorney to the accused and his or her counsel. Provision may be made for appearance for such purposes in an order admitting the accused to bail or providing for his or her release.

(b) Medical and Scientific Reports.

(1) Subject to constitutional limitations, the trial court may require that the prosecuting attorney be informed of and permitted to inspect and copy or photograph any reports or statements of experts, made in connection with the particular case, including results of physical or mental examinations and of scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons.

(2) Subject to constitutional limitations, and where the interests of justice would be served, the court may order the defense to disclose the underlying facts or data supporting the opinion in that particular case of an expert endorsed as a witness. If a report has not been prepared by that expert to aid in compliance with other discovery obligations of this rule, the court may order the party calling that expert to provide a written summary of the testimony describing the witness's opinions and the bases and reasons therefor, including results of physical or mental examinations and of scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons. The intent of this section is to allow the prosecution sufficient meaningful information to conduct effective cross-examination under CRE 705.

(c) Nature of Defense.

Subject to constitutional limitations, the defense shall disclose to the prosecution the nature of any defense, other than alibi, which the defense intends to use at trial. The defense shall also disclose the names and addresses of persons whom the defense intends to call as witnesses at trial. At the entry of the not guilty plea, the court shall set a deadline for such disclosure. In no case shall such disclosure be less than 35 days before trial for a felony trial, or 7 days before trial for a non-felony trial, except for good cause shown. Upon receipt of the information required by this subsection (c), the prosecuting attorney shall notify the defense of any additional witnesses which the prosecution intends to call to rebut such defense within a reasonable time after their identity becomes known.

(d) Notice of Alibi.

The defense, if it intends to introduce evidence that the defendant was at a place other than the location of the offense, shall serve upon the prosecuting attorney as soon as practicable but not later than 35 days before trial a statement in writing specifying the place where he or she claims to have been and the names and addresses of the witnesses he or she will call to support the defense of alibi. Upon receiving this statement, the prosecuting attorney shall advise the defense of the names and addresses of any additional witnesses who may be called to refute such alibi as soon as practicable after their names become known. Neither the prosecuting attorney nor the defense shall be permitted at the trial to introduce evidence inconsistent with the specification, unless the court for good cause and upon just terms permits the specification to be amended. If the defense fails to make the specification required by this section, the court shall exclude evidence in his behalf that he or she was at a place other than that specified by the prosecuting attorney unless the court is satisfied upon good cause shown that such evidence should be admitted.

Part III. Regulation of Discovery

(a) Investigation Not to be Impeded.

Subject to the provisions of Parts I (d) and III (d), neither the prosecuting attorney, the defense counsel, the defendant nor other prosecution or defense personnel shall advise persons having relevant material or information (except the defendant) to refrain from discussing the case or with showing any relevant material to any party, counsel or their agent, nor shall they otherwise impede counsel's investigation of the case. The court shall determine that the parties are aware of the provision.

(b) Continuing Duty to Disclose.

If, subsequent to compliance with these standards or orders pursuant thereto, a party discovers additional material or information which is subject to disclosure, including the names and addresses of any additional witnesses who have become known or the materiality of whose testimony has become known to the district attorney after making available the written list required in part I (a)(1)(VII), he or she shall promptly notify the other party or his or her counsel of the existence of such additional material, and if the additional material or information is discovered during trial, the court shall also be notified.

(c) Custody of Materials.

Materials furnished in discovery pursuant to this rule may only be used for purposes of preparation and trial of the case and may only be provided to others and used by them for purposes of preparation and trial of the case, and shall be subject to such other terms, conditions or restrictions as the court, statutes or rules may provide. Defense counsel is not required to provide actual copies of discovery to his or her client if defense counsel reasonably believes that it would not be in the client's interest, and other methods of having the client review discovery are available. An attorney may also use materials he or she receives in discovery for the purposes of educational presentations if all identifying information is first removed.

(d) Protective Orders.

With regard to all matters of discovery under this rule, upon a showing of cause, the court may at any time order that specified disclosures be restricted or deferred, or make such other order as is appropriate, provided that all material and information to which a party is entitled must be disclosed in time to permit the party to make beneficial use thereof.

(e) Excision.

(1) When some parts of certain material are discoverable under the provisions of these court rules, and other parts are not discoverable, the nondiscoverable material may be excised and the remainder made available in accordance with the applicable provisions of these rules.

(2) Material excised pursuant to judicial order shall be sealed and preserved in the records of the court, to be made available to the appellate court in the event of an appeal.

(f) In Camera Proceedings.

Upon request of any person, the court may permit any showing of cause for denial or regulation of disclosures, or portion of such showing, to be made in camera. A record shall be made of such proceedings. If the court enters an order granting relief following a showing in camera, the entire record of such showing shall be sealed and preserved in the records of the court, to be made available to the appellate court in the event of an appeal.

(g) Failure to Comply; Sanctions.

If at any time during the course of the proceedings it is brought to the attention of the court that a party has failed to comply with this rule or with an order issued pursuant to this rule, the court may order such party to permit the discovery or inspection of materials not previously disclosed, grant a continuance, prohibit the party from introducing in evidence the material not disclosed or enter such other order as it deems just under the circumstances.

Part IV. Procedure

(a) General Procedural Requirements.

(1) In all criminal cases, in procedures prior to trial, there may be a need for one or more of the following three stages:

(I) An exploratory stage, initiated by the parties and conducted without court supervision to implement discovery required or authorized under this rule;

(II) An omnibus stage, when ordered by the court, supervised by the trial court and court appearance required when necessary;

(III) A trial planning stage, requiring pretrial conferences when necessary.

(2) These stages shall be adapted to the needs of the particular case and may be modified or eliminated as appropriate.

(b) Setting of Omnibus Hearing.

(1) If a plea of not guilty or not guilty by reason of insanity is entered at the time the accused is arraigned, the court may set a time for and hold an omnibus hearing in all felony and misdemeanor cases.

(2) In determining the date for the omnibus hearing, the court shall allow counsel sufficient time:

(I) To initiate and complete discovery required or authorized under this rule;

(II) To conduct further investigation necessary to the defendant's case;

(III) To continue plea discussion.

(3) The hearing shall be no later than 35 days after arraignment.

(c) Omnibus Hearing.

(1) If an omnibus hearing is held, the court on its own initiative, utilizing an appropriate checklist form, should:

(I) Ensure that there has been compliance with the rule regarding obligations of the parties;

(II) Ascertain whether the parties have completed the discovery required in Part I (a), and if not, make orders appropriate to expedite completion;

(III) Ascertain whether there are requests for additional disclosures under Part I (d);

(IV) Make rulings on any motions or other requests then pending, and ascertain whether any additional motions or requests will be made at the hearing or continued portions thereof;

(V) Ascertain whether there are any procedural or constitutional issues which should be considered; and

(VI) Upon agreement of the parties, or upon a finding that the trial is likely to be protracted or otherwise unusually complicated, set a time for a pretrial conference.

(2) Unless the court otherwise directs, all motions and other requests prior to trial should be reserved for and presented orally or in writing at the omnibus hearing. All issues presented at the omnibus hearing may be raised without prior notice by either party or by the court. If discovery, investigation, preparation, and evidentiary hearing, or a formal presentation is necessary for a fair determination of any issue, the omnibus hearing should be continued until all matters are properly disposed of.

(3) Any pretrial motion, request, or issue which is not raised at the omnibus hearing shall be deemed waived, unless the party concerned did not have the information necessary to make the motion or request or raise the issue.

(4) Stipulations by any party or his or her counsel should be binding upon the parties at trial unless set aside or modified by the court in the interests of justice.

(5) A verbatim record of the omnibus hearing shall be made. This record shall include the disclosures made, all rulings and orders of the court, stipulations of the parties, and an identification of other matter determined or pending.

(d) Omnibus Hearing Forms.

(1) The forms set out in the Appendix to Chapter 29 shall be utilized by the court in conducting the omnibus hearing. These forms shall be made available to the parties at the time of the defendant's first appearance.

(2) Nothing in the forms shall be construed to make substantive changes of these rules.

(e) Pretrial Conference.

(1) Whenever a trial is likely to be protracted or otherwise unusually complicated, or upon request by agreement of the parties, the trial court may (in addition to the omnibus hearing) hold one or more pretrial conferences, with trial counsel present, to consider such matters as will promote a fair and expeditious trial. Matters which might be considered include:

(I) Making stipulations as to facts about which there can be no dispute;

(II) Marking for identification various documents and other exhibits of the parties;

(III) Excerpting or highlighting exhibits;

(IV) Waivers of foundation as to such documents;

(V) Issues relating to codefendant statements;

(VI) Severance of defendants or offenses for trial;

(VII) Seating arrangements for defendants and counsel;

(VIII) Conduct of jury examination, including any issues relating to confidentiality of juror locating information;

(IX) Number and use of peremptory challenges;

(X) Procedure on objections where there are multiple counsel or defendants;

(XI) Order of presentation of evidence and arguments when there are multiple counsel or defendants;

(XII) Order of cross-examination where there are multiple defendants;

(XIII) Temporary absence of defense counsel during trial;

(XIV) Resolution of any motions or evidentiary issues in a manner least likely to inconvenience jurors to the extent possible; and

(XV) Submission of items to be included in a juror notebook.

(2) At the conclusion of the pretrial conference, a memorandum of the matters agreed upon should be signed by the parties, approved by the court, and filed. Such memorandum shall be binding upon the parties at trial, on appeal and in postconviction proceedings unless set aside or modified by the court in the interests of justice. However, admissions of fact by an accused if present should bind the accused only if included in the pretrial order and signed by the accused as well as his or her attorney.

(f) Juror Notebooks.

Juror notebooks shall be available during all felony trials and deliberations to aid jurors in the performance of their duties. The parties shall confer about the items to be included in juror notebooks and, by the pre-trial conference or other date set by the court, shall make a joint submission to the court of items to be included in a juror notebook. In non-felony trials, juror notebooks shall be optional.

Part V. Time Schedules and Discovery Procedures

(a) Mandatory Discovery.

The furnishing of the items discoverable, referred to in Part I (a), (b) and (c) and Part II (b)(1), (c) and (d) herein, is mandatory and no motions for discovery with respect to such items may be filed.

(b) Time Schedule.

(1) In the event the defendant enters a plea of not guilty or not guilty by reason of insanity, or asserts the defense of impaired mental condition, the court shall set a deadline for such disclosure to the prosecuting attorney of those items referred to in Parts II (b) (1) and (c) herein, subject to objections which may be raised by the defense within that period pursuant to Part III (d) of this rule. In no case shall such disclosure be less than 35 days before trial for a felony trial, or 7 days before trial for a non-felony trial, except for good cause shown.

(2) If either the prosecuting attorney or the defense claims that discoverable material under this rule was not furnished, was incomplete, was illegible or otherwise failed to satisfy this rule, or if claim is made that discretionary disclosures pursuant to Part I (d) should be made, the prosecuting attorney or the defense may file a motion concerning these matters and the motion shall be promptly heard by the court.

(3) For good cause, the court may, on motion of either party or its own motion, alter the time for all matters relating to discovery under this rule.

(c) Cost and Location of Discovery.

(1) The prosecution's costs of providing any discoverable material electronically to the defense shall be funded as set forth in section 16-9-702(2), C.R.S. The prosecution shall not charge for discovery. For any materials provided to the prosecution as part of the defense discovery obligation, the cost shall be borne by the prosecution based on the actual cost of duplication. Copies of any discovery provided to a defendant by court appointed counsel shall be paid for by the defendant.

(2) The place of discovery for materials not capable of being provided electronically shall be at the office of the party furnishing it, or at a mutually agreeable location.

(d) Compliance Certificate.

(1) When deemed necessary by the trial court, the prosecuting attorney and the defense shall furnish to the court a compliance certificate signed by all counsel listing specifically each item furnished to the other party. The court may, in its discretion, refuse to admit into evidence items not disclosed to the other party if such evidence was required to be disclosed under Parts I and II of this rule.

(2) If discoverable matters are obtained after the compliance certificate is filed, copies thereof shall be furnished forthwith to the opposing party and, upon application to the court, the court may either permit such evidence to be offered at trial or grant a continuance in its discretion.

Trial court must rule on motion for disclosure of the names of confidential informants. A trial court cannot delay ruling on a defendant's motion for disclosure of the names of confidential informants, notwithstanding the agreement of the parties, on the theory that the motion would be moot if the court were to deny defendant's motion to suppress evidence because reasonable suspicion justified an investigatory stop even absent the information obtained from the confidential informants. The court must rule on the disclosure motion so that the basis for the investigatory detention can be considered in light of the totality of the circumstances. People v. Saint-Veltri, 945 P.2d 1339 (Colo. 1997).

Right to pretrial discovery was nonexistent under the common law. People ex rel. Shinn v. District Court, 172 Colo. 23, 469 P.2d 732 (1970); Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972); Sergent v. People, 177 Colo. 354, 497 P.2d 983 (1972).

Trial court's authority to grant discovery is limited to the categories expressly set forth in this rule. Richardson v. District Court, 632 P.2d 595 (Colo. 1981).

Scope of discovery prior to preliminary hearing is specifically limited by this rule. People v. Kingsley, 187 Colo. 258, 530 P.2d 501 (1975).

Categories of discoverable material do not include compelled physical examination of child victim of sexual abuse. People v. Chard, 808 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1991); People v. Melendez, 80 P.3d 883 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd on other grounds, 102 P.3d 315 (Colo. 2004).

But rule is not designed to convert preliminary hearing into a mini trial. People v. Kingsley, 187 Colo. 258, 530 P.2d 501 (1975).

Defendant and prosecution granted independent rights. This rule is not conditional, but rather grants independent discovery rights to both the prosecution and the defendant. People v. District Court, 187 Colo. 333, 531 P.2d 626 (1975).

Exemption from discovery under the attorney work-product doctrine is intended to ensure the privacy of a party's attorney from unnecessary intrusion by opposing parties and counsel, but this privilege is not absolute; it is not personal to the client, and it can be waived by an attorney's course of conduct. People v. Small, 631 P.2d 148 (Colo. 1981).

The decision of whether to order disclosure is committed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and the court's exercise of that discretion is entitled to strong deference. People v. Vigil, 729 P.2d 360 (Colo. 1986).

Technical non-compliance with rule does not constitute reversible error, and evidence is generally not improperly withheld if the defense has knowledge of it. People v. Graham, 678 P.2d 1043 (Colo. App. 1983), cert denied, 467 U.S. 1216, 104 S. Ct. 2660, 81 L. Ed. 2d 366 (1984); People v. Rivers, 727 P.2d 394 (Colo. App. 1986).

Although prosecution violated this rule by the untimely disclosure of expert's report to defendant, it did not necessarily follow that the trial court's denial of defendant's motion for a continuance was reversible error, since failure to comply with discovery rules is not reversible error absent a demonstration of prejudice to the defendant. Salazar v. People, 870 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1994).

The work product doctrine, although most frequently asserted as a bar to discovery in civil litigation, applies with equal, if not greater, force in criminal prosecutions. People v. District Court, 790 P.2d 332 (Colo. 1990); People v. Ullery, 964 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 984 P.2d 586 (Colo. 1999).

Witness statements in prosecutor's notes and work sheets of the prosecuting attorney or members of the prosecutor's staff are ordinarily considered non-discoverable work product because they are prepared for litigation. People v. District Court, 790 P.2d 332 (Colo. 1990).

Report of an interview of a witness by a lay investigator is not prosecutor's work product and, hence, is automatically discoverable under section (I)(a)(1)(I). People v. Alberico, 817 P.2d 573 (Colo. App. 1991).

Section 19-1-307 (2) does not provide equal access to social services records in a criminal case, and it changes the automatic disclosure process contemplated by section (I)(a)(1) of this rule. People v. Jowell, 199 P.3d 38 (Colo. App. 2008).

Section 19-1-307 (2)(f) limits defendant's access to items that the court, after an in camera review, determines necessary for the resolution of an issue. Therefore, defendant cannot expect automatic disclosure of records within the possession and control of prosecuting attorney. Instead, defendant must request an in camera review, identify the information sought, and explain why disclosure is necessary for resolution of an issue. To achieve the broadest possible disclosure, defendant should explain the relevance and materiality of the information sought. People v. Jowell, 199 P.3d 38 (Colo. App. 2008).

Prosecutor has full access to records while investigating a report of known or suspected incident of child abuse or neglect. Section 19-1-307 (2)(f) does not suspend prosecutor's obligation to disclose information that is materially favorable to defendant, but it does change it. The duty to disclose is subject to the in camera review process in § 19-1-307 (2)(f). Therefore, if the prosecutor believes a social services record contains information it must disclose, the prosecutor must ask the trial court to conduct an in camera review of the information to determine if disclosure is necessary for the resolution of an issue. If the trial court determines the information is necessary, then it is disclosed to the defendant. The prosecutor does not have the right to offer the material into evidence without first obtaining the trial court's approval. People v. Jowell, 199 P.3d 38 (Colo. App. 2008).

Section 19-1-307 (2)(f) places the trial court in the middle of a procedural issue that normally would have been handled by counsel through the automatic disclosure requirements under section (I)(a)(1) of this rule. The trial court must review the records to determine whether the records are necessary for the resolution of an issue. Although the determination of whether the records should be disclosed must be made on case-specific circumstances, there are three principles that apply generally. First, under due process considerations, the trial court must disclose any information that is materially favorable to defendant because it is either exculpatory or impeaching. Second, the trial court should disclose inculpatory information when the information would materially assist in preparing the defense. Finally, it may be significant, although not determinative, that the information would be otherwise subject to automatic disclosure under section (I)(a)(1) of this rule. People v. Jowell, 199 P.3d 38 (Colo. App. 2008).

Neither the state rules of criminal procedure, the federal constitution, nor any statute provided the trial court authority to grant the criminal defendant or anyone else access to a non-party's private home for an investigation without consent. Defendant sought an order allowing defense counsel and her investigator access to the private property of a non-party to view and photograph the crime scene. People in Interest of E.G., 2016 CO 19, 368 P.3d 946; People v. Chavez, 2016 CO 20, 368 P.3d 943.

For history of this rule, see People v. Adams County Court, 767 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1988).

Applied in Oaks v. People, 161 Colo. 561, 424 P.2d 115 (1967); People v. Couch, 179 Colo. 324, 500 P.2d 967 (1972); People v. Smith, 179 Colo. 413, 500 P.2d 1177 (1972); People v. Manier, 184 Colo. 44, 518 P.2d 811 (1974); People v. Smith, 185 Colo. 369, 524 P.2d 607 (1974); People v. Steed, 189 Colo. 212, 540 P.2d 323 (1975); People v. District Court, 196 Colo. 246, 588 P.2d 874 (1979); People v. Davenport, 43 Colo. App. 41, 602 P.2d 871 (1979); People v. Schlegel, 622 P.2d 98 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Callis, 666 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 692 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1984); Denbow v. Williams, 672 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1983); People v. Aalbu, 696 P.2d 796 (Colo. 1985); People v. Madsen, 743 P.2d 437 (Colo. App. 1987).

II. DISCLOSURE TO DEFENDANT.

Remedial purpose of automatic disclosure requirement in section (I)(a)(1) is broader than merely to ensure disclosure of evidence known to prosecution but unknown to defense. Disclosure of evidence within scope of rule is required whether or not material to the case, whether or not requested by defense, and whether or not it pertains to witnesses endorsed by the defense or who would be called by prosecution only for rebuttal purposes. Rule is designed to avoid loss of defendants' rights through inadvertent failure to make timely requests and to minimize court's supervisory role in basic discovery process, and to this end disclosure must be automatic unless prosecution takes specified action. People v. Alberico, 817 P.2d 573 (Colo. App. 1991).

Written notification expressly required if prosecutor deems material not discoverable. People v. Alberico, 817 P.2d 573 (Colo. App. 1991).

This rule governs the obligation of the prosecutor to cooperate with the defendant in the securing of evidence. Thus the prosecutor is obligated to give the names and addresses of witnesses as well as reports, statements, etc., of experts it intends to use. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

Duty of prosecution and courts to disclose evidence favorable to defendant. It is the duty of both the prosecution and the courts to see that no known evidence in the possession of the state which might tend to prove a defendant's innocence is withheld from the defense before or during trial. Cheatwood v. People, 164 Colo. 334, 435 P.2d 402 (1967); People v. Millitello, 705 P.2d 514 (Colo. 1985); People v. Terry, 720 P.2d 125 (Colo. 1986).

The prosecution is obligated to disclose to the defendant evidence favorable to the accused. People v. Austin, 185 Colo. 229, 523 P.2d 989 (1974).

This rule does not conflict with § 18-6-403 (3)(b). Therefore the prosecution was required to provide the defense an opportunity to examine photographs under the same conditions as the prosecution. People v. Arapahoe County Court, 74 P.3d 429 (Colo. App. 2003).

Scope of discovery includes names, photographs, and statements. Where the defense seeks discovery, the defense should be given access to the names of those whose prints have been compared, photographs of the crime scene, and statements which the defendant has made prior to the time he testifies at trial. Hervey v. People, 178 Colo. 38, 495 P.2d 204 (1972).

This rule clearly grants defense counsel the right to obtain names of witnesses and any statements which they might have given prior to the preliminary hearing. People v. Kingsley, 187 Colo. 258, 530 P.2d 501 (1975).

This rule requires that every statement made by the accused which is in the possession or control of the district attorney and which relates in any way to the series of events from which the charges pending against the accused arose must be disclosed to the defense upon an appropriate motion. People v. McKnight, 626 P.2d 678 (Colo. 1981).

And appropriate portions of grand jury minutes. A prosecuting attorney shall disclose to defense counsel those portions of grand jury minutes containing testimony of the accused and relevant testimony of persons whom the prosecuting attorney intends to call as witnesses at the hearing or trial. Parlapiano v. District Court, 176 Colo. 521, 491 P.2d 965 (1971).

This rule permits discovery of grand jury testimony of a party. Robles v. People, 178 Colo. 181, 496 P.2d 1003 (1972).

Even where trial is upon a direct information. Examination of the grand jury testimony of a witness testifying at the trial is to be permitted whether the trial is upon an indictment or upon a direct information when the grand jury has not returned any indictment. Norman v. People, 178 Colo. 190, 496 P.2d 1029 (1972).

Disclosure not dependent on showing of particularized need. A disclosure of grand jury testimony should be granted without a showing of a particularized need. Parlapiano v. District Court, 176 Colo. 521, 491 P.2d 965 (1971); McNulty v. People, 180 Colo. 246, 504 P.2d 335 (1972).

Although automatic disclosure of grand jury testimony not required. The liberal discovery rights which have been granted to a defendant in this state do not guarantee automatic access to everything that transpires before the grand jury. Parlapiano v. District Court, 176 Colo. 521, 491 P.2d 965 (1971); People v. District Court, 199 Colo. 398, 610 P.2d 490 (1980).

Refusal to allow examination of grand jury testimony held not error. Robles v. People, 178 Colo. 181, 496 P.2d 1003 (1972).

Generally, defendant has no constitutional right to compel disclosure of a confidential informant, but consideration of fundamental fairness sometimes requires that identity of such informant be revealed. People v. Dailey, 639 P.2d 1068 (Colo. 1982); People v. Vigil, 729 P.2d 360 (Colo. 1986).

In determining whether the government's privilege of not disclosing informants should yield in a particular case, court must balance the public's interest in protecting the flow of information to law enforcement officials about criminal activity against the defendant's need to obtain evidence necessary for the preparation of a defense. People v. Bueno, 646 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1982); People v. Vigil, 729 P.2d 360 (Colo. 1986).

Defendant not entitled to the disclosure of informant based on assertion that his defense requires it, but such disclosure may be ordered only where the defendant has established a reasonable basis in fact to believe the informant is a likely source of relevant and helpful evidence to the accused. People v. Bueno, 646 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1982); People v. Vigil, 729 P.2d 360 (Colo. 1986).

A defendant is presumptively entitled to cross-examine a prosecution witness as to the witness's address and place of employment. Absent sufficient justification for withholding this information, a defendant's right to it is unqualified, and the defendant is under no obligation to provide reasons for seeking it. People ex. rel Dunbar v. District Court, 177 Colo. 429, 494 P.2d 841 (1972); People v. Thurman, 787 P.2d 646 (Colo. 1990).

The trial court, in exercising its sound discretion, is in the best position to assess the basis for and seriousness of the witness's apprehension. When such apprehension is expressed, the key consideration for a trial court in assessing a defendant's constitutional claim to a witness's identity, address or place of employment is whether in absence of that information the defendant will have sufficient opportunity to place the witness in his proper setting. People v. Thurman, 787 P.2d 646 (Colo. 1990).

The rule that an adequate showing by the prosecution that the witness legitimately fears for his safety requires some showing in turn by the defendant that the disclosure is so material as to outweigh the matter of the safety of the witness followed by a balancing of interests by the trial court should not be interpreted as requiring a threshold demonstration by the defendant that the information to be developed from learning the witness's identity, address and place of employment would prove highly material. The defendant's burden extends only to showing that the confidential informant is a material witness on the issue of guilt and that nondisclosure would deprive the defendant of a fair opportunity to test the witness's credibility. People v. Thurman, 787 P.2d 646 (Colo. 1990); People v. Turley, 870 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1993).

A witness's assertion of concern for personal safety does not have a talismanic quality automatically giving the witness the right to withhold information about identity, address and place of employment. Rather, the proper resolution of such issues requires careful attention to the facts of each case and application of the law concerning the right of an accused to confront adverse witnesses. People v. Thurman, 787 P.2d 646 (Colo. 1990).

Witnesses' personal safety outweighs defendant's confrontation right, as evidenced by the delay in the disclosure of their identities until they had been placed under witness protection. Witnesses' former addresses and telephone numbers should not be disclosed. People v. District Court, 933 P.2d 22 (Colo. 1997).

Dismissal of an action may be ordered in proper circumstances if the government declines to disclose a confidential informant in accordance with the court's order. People v. Martinez, 658 P.2d 260 (Colo. 1983); People v. Vigil, 729 P.2d 360 (Colo. 1986).

Dismissal was not warranted where the evidence that the prosecution failed to disclose was not exculpatory to the defendant, and the trial court's proposed remedy was a continuance conditioned on defendant's waiver of speedy trial until the date of the continuance. People v. Loggins, 981 P.2d 630 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court properly granted defendant additional time at trial to review previously undisclosed bank records for which summaries had been provided. Material was not exculpatory to defendant, there was no prejudice to defendant, and the information was relevant to show what defendant did with the victim's money. People v. Pagan, 165 P.3d 724 (Colo. App. 2006).

The decision to order disclosure of a witness's address and place of employment was committed to the sound discretion of the trial court. If there is evidence in the record to support the trial court's order compelling disclosure despite the witness's apprehension, the prosecution's willful refusal to comply with that order was properly sanctioned by the trial court under part III (g). People v. Thurman, 787 P.2d 646 (Colo. 1990).

The trial court acted within the bounds of its discretion in dismissing an information against the defendants where no actual threat was made against a witness, the trial court attempted to accommodate all parties by limiting disclosure to defense counsel alone, both the witness's and place of employment were withheld, and without the sought-after information the defense could not place the witness in her proper setting. People v. Thurman, 787 P.2d 646 (Colo. 1990).

Dismissal was appropriate sanction where disclosure of investigator's report of interview of victim was not made until after victim had testified, defense was in the midst of presenting its case, and alternative sanction of striking victim's testimony would have been tantamount to dismissal. People v. Alberico, 817 P.2d 573 (Colo. App. 1991).

Written statements outside possession and control of prosecution cannot be discovered pursuant to this rule. Dickerson v. People, 179 Colo. 146, 499 P.2d 1196 (1972); People v. Garcia, 690 P.2d 869 (Colo. App. 1984).

However, statements in possession of police are within "possession or control" of the prosecuting attorney so as to meet the requirement of this rule. Ortega v. People, 162 Colo. 358, 426 P.2d 180 (1967).

Material in possession of the police is constructively in the possession of the prosecution. People v. Lucero, 623 P.2d 424 (Colo. App. 1980).

Offense report not within scope of discovery. An offense report, although signed by a complaining witness, is not within the scope of a pretrial discovery order as it is not a statement of a witness; it is, in fact, a compilation of information relating to the commission of crimes. People v. Morgan, 189 Colo. 256, 539 P.2d 130 (1975).

As internal police documents are not within purview of pretrial discovery order. People v. Morgan, 189 Colo. 256, 539 P.2d 130 (1975); Losavio v. Mayber, 178 Colo. 184, 496 P.2d 1032 (1972).

When contents of police records discoverable. Where the district attorney's office regularly receives information from police records, defense attorneys, including public defenders, are entitled to obtain such information in possession of prosecution. Losavio v. Mayber, 178 Colo. 184, 496 P.2d 1032 (1972).

Prosecution's failure to provide defendant with a written police incident report violated this section, but a new trial was not required because the report was either cumulative to information provided to the defense or was immaterial to the outcome of the trial, and the judge allowed defendant a continuance to study the document and the opportunity to examine witnesses as to its contents. People v. Banuelos, 674 P.2d 964 (Colo. App. 1983).

Failure by prosecution to provide defendant statement codefendant made to federal drug enforcement administration agent harmless error because defendant was not tried jointly with codefendant who had already pled guilty and been sentenced prior to defendant's trial and because defendant knew of the statement and its contents but failed to request it. People v. Montalvo-Lopez, 215 P.3d 1139 (Colo. App. 2008).

Failure by district court to provide defendant the opportunity to cross-examine a confidential informant about whether informant believed he would receive immigration support for his willingness to participate in a controlled buy was harmless error. However, the remedy provided by the court, an opportunity for the defense to interview the investigator who hired the informant, was inadequate. People v. Mendez, 2017 COA 129, __ P.3d __.

Discovery costs. Prior to requiring the public defender's office to pay costs of copying a police officer's file for an in camera review by the court, the court should make the following specific findings: Was the defendant's subpoena unreasonable or oppressive and were the city's proffered concerns as to use and possible loss justified? The court should consider whether adequate safeguards could be provided for an initial in camera review of the original documents and whether any payment should be limited to actual costs. In doing so, the court must balance the government's interests against defendant's interests in disclosure. People v. Trujillo, 62 P.3d 1034 (Colo. App. 2002), rev'd on other grounds, 83 P.3d 642 (Colo. 2004).

Where defendant received forensics report linking him to tire slashing incident prior to trial and the court allowed the defendant to interview the report's introducing witness prior to testifying, court's admission of the evidence in an arson prosecution was not reversible error even though defendant claimed the evidence had not been disclosed to him. People v. Copeland, 976 P.2d 334 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 2 P.3d 1283 (Colo. 2000).

Notes of interviews with witnesses discoverable. This rule includes not only materials which have been signed or adopted by the government's witness, but also notes taken by officers when talking to the witness. Ortega v. People, 162 Colo. 358, 426 P.2d 180 (1967).

Defendant's right to discovery of a witness's statement includes the right to examine notes which are substantial recitals of the statement and were reduced to writing contemporaneously with the making of the statement. People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982).

All that is required is that notes be substantially verbatim recitals of the oral statement. Ortega v. People, 162 Colo. 358, 426 P.2d 180 (1967); People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981).

Notes must not contain the interpretations, impressions, comments, ideas, opinions, conclusions, evaluations, or summaries of the person transcribing the notes. Ortega v. People, 162 Colo. 358, 426 P.2d 180 (1967).

Destruction of notes not necessarily violation of rule. Destruction of written notes made by a government agent during the taping of a phone conversation is not a violation of this rule when the substance of that conversation is set forth in the agent's formal report and made available to the defendant. People v. Alonzi, 40 Colo. App. 507, 580 P.2d 1263 (1978), aff'd, 198 Colo. 160, 597 P.2d 560 (1979).

Failure to disclose prosecutor's notes of an interview with a defense expert witness before the prosecutor relied on the notes when cross-examining the witness was harmless error, even if assumed to be a discovery violation, where the notes were provided to defense counsel during the cross-examination in time for redirect examination of the witness the next day. People v. Pasillas-Sanchez, 214 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2009).

Right to discover statements of prosecution witnesses not absolute. The defendant does not have an absolute right to discover statements of prosecution witnesses under any and all circumstances. People v. Smith, 185 Colo. 369, 524 P.2d 607 (1974).

Witness statements included in prosecution's notes and emails are not automatically discoverable. Those statements are only provided to the defense if they contain exculpatory information or if the trial court, exercising its discretion, finds the information is relevant, unavailable from any other source, and request is reasonable. People v. Vlassis, 247 P.3d 196 (Colo. 2011).

Court granted discretion to require disclosure. This rule vests in the trial court discretion to require disclosure prior to trial of any relevant material and information. People ex rel. Shinn v. District Court, 172 Colo. 23, 469 P.2d 732 (1970).

Trial court must exercise sound discretion in permitting discovery under part I (e)(1) (now (d)(1)), guided by the standards suggested in part I (e)(2) (now (d)(2)). People v. Maestas, 183 Colo. 378, 517 P.2d 461 (1973); People v. Smith, 185 Colo. 369, 524 P.2d 607 (1974).

And in granting discovery, court may enter appropriate protective orders under part III (d). People v. Smith, 185 Colo. 369, 524 P.2d 607 (1974).

And trial court's discovery ruling may consider judicial economy as long as constitutional rights are not violated. People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981).

Defendant must prove prejudice to show abuse of discretion. To show an abuse of discretion in not permitting discovery, the facts must reveal that the defendant was prejudiced. People v. Maestas, 183 Colo. 378, 517 P.2d 461 (1973).

When court may refuse discovery of relevant testimony. It is within the sound discretion of the court to refuse to compel discovery of what may be relevant testimony where defense counsel had the opportunity and failed to institute timely discovery. People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981).

But discovery compelled when information of material importance to defense. Where the defense has made a specific request for certain information in the possession or control of the prosecution, discovery of that information is constitutionally compelled, not only when it is exculpatory, but also when it is of material importance to the defense. People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981); Chambers v. People, 682 P.2d 1173 (Colo. 1984).

Discovery material used for impeachment purposes is of material importance. The use of discovery material for impeachment purposes implicates the due process rights of the defendant and is of material importance to the defense. People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hamer, 689 P.2d 1147 (Colo. App. 1984).

Material to be used for impeachment purposes is subject to the discovery provisions of this rule. People v. Rivers, 727 P.2d 394 (Colo. App. 1986).

"Material" defined. In the context of a completed trial, ''material,'' constitutionally, means evidence which, when evaluated in light of the entire record, likely would have affected the outcome of the trial. People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982); People v. Hamer, 689 P.2d 1147 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Wilson, 841 P.2d 337 (Colo. App. 1992).

And refusal to disclose such evidence mandates reversal. Where information sought on discovery by a defendant might have affected the outcome of the trial, failure to disclose that information mandates reversal of trial court's guilty verdict. People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981).

Minimal showing of necessity required of defendant. A defendant seeking disclosure must make a minimal showing of necessity, and mere speculation concerning the need for disclosure will not suffice. People v. McLean, 633 P.2d 513 (Colo. App. 1981).

Defense counsel to determine relevance and usefulness of statement to defense. Generally, defense counsel is the appropriate party to make the determination that a statement is relevant to the conduct of the defense. People v. Gallegos, 644 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1982).

Determination of usefulness of evidence under part I (e) (now (d)) is a defense function, not a prosecutorial function, as only the defense can determine what will be material and helpful to its case. People v. Smith, 185 Colo. 369, 524 P.2d 607 (1974).

And statement need not be admissible to be relevant. A witness' statement, to be relevant, need not contain information admissible at trial, as long as the contents of the statement are relevant to the conduct of the defense. People v. Gallegos, 644 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1982).

But must tend to prove or disprove fact of consequence. Information which would not tend to prove or disprove any fact that is of consequence to the defendant's guilt or innocence is not relevant and need not be disclosed under part I (a)(1)(I). People v. Gallegos, 644 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1982).

Whether nondisclosure is erroneous depends on all circumstances of case, the nature of the crime charged, and possible defenses, as well as the possible significance of the informant's testimony. People v. Peterson, 40 Colo. App. 102, 576 P.2d 175 (1977).

Since this rule imposes disclosure obligations for information only obtained before or during trial by the prosecution, the rule's disclosure obligation does not apply to information acquired in response to defendant's post-conviction claims. People v. Owens, 2014 CO 58M, 330 P.3d 1027.

Prosecution not required to furnish statements of anticipated witnesses. A discovery order does not impose an affirmative obligation on the prosecution to reduce the oral statements of anticipated witnesses to writing and to furnish the substance of their testimony to the defense. People v. Garcia, 627 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1980).

Section (a)(1) of part I specifically requires disclosure only of the substance of oral statements made by the accused, or, if a joint trial is to be held, by a codefendant, and, aside from these specified situations, additional disclosure of oral statements is not mandated. People v. Garcia, 627 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1980).

Prosecution fulfilled its discovery obligations by providing notice that officer would testify and providing officer's written report. Prosecution was not required to reduce the substance of the officer's anticipated testimony to writing and furnish it to the defense before trial. People v. Knight, 167 P.3d 141 (Colo. App. 2006).

Part I (a)(1)(I) requires the prosecution to provide the defense only with the written statements of witnesses or any written reports that quote or summarize oral statements made by witnesses. If the supreme court had intended the disclosure of unrecorded oral statements, then it would have so specified. People v. Denton, 91 P.3d 388 (Colo. App. 2003).

No abuse of discretion where trial court found prosecution had not committed a discovery violation by failing to disclose certain oral statements that the victim made to a police officer and to the prosecutor. The victim's statements were not exculpatory, and nothing in the record suggests that the prosecutor or the police officer deliberately refrained from reducing the victim's statements to writing in order to avoid a discovery obligation. People v. Denton, 91 P.3d 388 (Colo. App. 2003).

When disclosure of rebuttal witness unnecessary. The requirement, contained in part II (c), that the prosecution disclose the identity of its rebuttal witnesses under certain circumstances, is inapplicable where the rebuttal testimony is not introduced to refute a defense, but is introduced solely to impeach the credibility of a defense witness. People v. Vollentine, 643 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1982).

The disclosure requirements of this rule are not applicable to impeachment testimony which does not contradict alibi evidence but does attack the credibility of defense witnesses on matters collateral to the alibi defense. People v. Muniz, 622 P.2d 100 (Colo. 1980).

And prosecution not required to disclose which witnesses will be called for rebuttal. Neither this rule nor § 16-5-203 specifically requires the prosecution to endorse or to disclose which of the endorsed witnesses it will call for rebuttal. People v. Hamrick, 624 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1979), aff'd, 624 P.2d 1320 (Colo. 1981); People v. Avila, 944 P.2d 673 (Colo. App. 1997).

Disclosure of identity of confidential informant. The prosecution's privilege to refuse to disclose the identity of a confidential informant is subject to a defendant's right to disclosure of the identity of an informant when the informant's testimony or identity is relevant or helpful to the defense of the accused or is necessary to a fair determination of the cause. People v. McLean, 633 P.2d 513 (Colo. App. 1981).

When determining whether the identity of a confidential informant should be disclosed, the trial court must balance the needs of law enforcement officials to preserve the anonymity of the informant with the defendant's right to obtain evidence necessary for the preparation of his defense. People v. Gable, 647 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1982).

When informant's identity to be disclosed. The interests of a fair trial require disclosure of the informant's identity if the facts reveal that he is ''so closely related'' to the defendant as to make his testimony highly material. People v. Peterson, 40 Colo. App. 102, 576 P.2d 175 (1977).

When informant's identity not be disclosed. There was no prejudicial error in the denial of appellant's motion to disclose the informer's identity where the trial judge concluded that the public's and the informer's interest in preserving his anonymity outweighed appellant's interest in disclosure. People v. Mulligan, 193 Colo. 509, 568 P.2d 449 (1977).

This rule does not require the prosecution to specifically identify that a witness is an expert witness, although that is the better practice. People v. Greer, 262 P.3d 920 (Colo. App. 2011).

Under reciprocal discovery order, defendant was not entitled to disclosure of police interview with witness which concerned crime other than that with which the defendant was charged. People v. Green, 759 P.2d 814 (Colo. App. 1988).

Prosecution's duty is to keep in contact with witness to offense. The prosecution is under a duty to make reasonable and good faith efforts to keep in contact with an eye and ear witness to an alleged criminal offense from the time the decision to file charges is made. People v. Velasquez, 645 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1982); People v. Rodriguez, 645 P.2d 851 (Colo. 1982); People v. Wandel, 696 P.2d 288 (Colo. 1985), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1032, 106 S. Ct. 592, 88 L. Ed. 2d 572 (1985).

However, this duty does not include the obligation to establish and employ a regularized method of maintaining contact with the informant. People v. Wandel, 696 P.2d 288 (Colo. 1985), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1032, 106 S. Ct. 592, 88 L. Ed. 2d 572 (1985).

Lack of full name or current address not violation of disclosure obligation. Although the prosecution is obligated to provide all pertinent information in its possession which might assist the defense in locating the informant, if such information does not contain the informant's full name or current address, the disclosure obligation may, nonetheless, still be satisfied. People v. Velasquez, 645 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1982); People v. Rodriguez, 645 P.2d 851 (Colo. 1982).

Charges dismissed for failure to disclose informant's address. People v. Velasquez, 645 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1982); People v. Rodriguez, 645 P.2d 851 (Colo. 1982).

Prosecution must disclose to the defense any evidence within the prosecution's possession or control that tends to negate the guilt of the accused as to the offense charged, or tends to reduce the punishment therefor. People v. Bradley, 25 P.3d 1271 (Colo. App. 2001).

Tangible evidence must be preserved and made available to defendant, where it may assist defense. People v. Morgan, 199 Colo. 237, 606 P.2d 1296 (1980).

Requirements of part I (a)(1)(IV) (now (a)(1)(III)) met. Where the trial court denied a defense motion to allow the defense's expert to examine a sample of the alleged cocaine in the expert's lab, but did allow the defense expert to examine a sample of cocaine in the forensic laboratory at the Denver general hospital and also ordered the disclosure of the test results of the people's expert, this met the requirements of part I (a)(1)(IV) (now (a)(1)(III)). People v. Brown, 185 Colo. 272, 523 P.2d 986 (1974).

Test to determine whether destruction of evidence violates due process. There is a three-prong test to determine whether the loss or destruction of evidence by the state, with the result that the defendant is denied access to that evidence, violates a defendant's right to due process of law: (1) Whether the evidence was suppressed or destroyed by the prosecution; (2) whether the evidence is exculpatory; and (3) whether the evidence is material to the defendant's case. People v. Garries, 645 P.2d 1306 (Colo. 1982).

For the imposition of a judicial sanction in connection with a defendant's due process claim based upon the loss or destruction of evidence, the record must show that the destroyed evidence is constitutionally material. People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982). (See note above, with the catchline '"Material' defined.")

No due process violation where mere claim that evidentiary material could have been subjected to tests and a failure to preserve that evidence, unless an accused can show bad faith on the part of the police. People v. Wyman, 788 P.2d 1278 (Colo. 1990); People v. Apodaca, 998 P.2d 25 (Colo. App. 1999).

Failure to comply with this rule is not reversible error unless the withheld evidence was material to guilt or punishment. No due process violation unless the accused can show bad faith by the police or the prosecution. People v. Bradley, 25 P.3d 1271 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where testimony about destroyed evidence suppressed, defendant not entitled to dismissal of complaint. Where all physical evidence collected by law enforcement officers in the investigation of a crime was destroyed or released prior to the defendant's arrest, so it was unavailable to him at trial, and the defendant is granted an order suppressing testimony by officers about the missing evidence, he is not entitled to a dismissal of the complaint against him. People v. Archuleta, 43 Colo. App. 474, 607 P.2d 1032 (1979).

Discovery during trial of prior out-of-court statement. Under this rule defense counsel is provided with access to a witness' out-of-court statements immediately after the witness testifies on direct examination. Robles v. People, 178 Colo. 181, 496 P.2d 1003 (1972).

Notes of district attorney are not within ambit of this rule and are not to be furnished to defense counsel. Hopper v. People, 152 Colo. 405, 382 P.2d 540 (1963); Rapue v. People, 171 Colo. 324, 466 P.2d 925 (1970); Norman v. People, 178 Colo. 190, 496 P.2d 1029 (1972).

Prosecution's notes on voir dire are protected by the work product doctrine even under a Batson challenge. People v. Trujillo, 15 P.3d 1104 (Colo. App. 2000).

Record of witnesses' oral statement not protected as work product. Where the majority of notes are in substance a record of oral statements made by witnesses, such notes are not protected by the work-product exception. People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981).

Finding of denial of fair trial because of violation of rule. People v. Edgar, 40 Colo. App. 377, 578 P.2d 666 (1978).

Where district attorney learned of physician's opinion in an oral interview, and it appeared that the interview was not recorded in any manner, and the defense learned of physician's opinion before trial and did not request a continuance, the district attorney was under no duty to furnish the opinion to the defendant, and there was no prejudice to defendant. People v. Graham, 678 P.2d 1043 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1216, 104 S. Ct. 2660, 81 L. Ed. 2d 366 (1984).

A compelling reason or need for an involuntary psychological examination of a victim must be shown before the trial court will grant such a motion by the defense. The defendant's right to a fair trial must be balanced against the victim's privacy interests. People v. Chard, 808 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1991); People v. Turley, 870 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1993).

Defendant failed to show he was prejudiced by the late disclosure of the prosecution's expert's report where, at the time the report was disclosed, defendant had already obtained the services of an expert witness to examine evidence and 25 days still remained to review prosecution's expert's report and perform additional tests if desired. Salazar v. People, 870 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1994).

Defendant's failure to move for continuance, after admission of incriminating evidence at trial, discredited any claim of prejudice arising from alleged discovery violation. People v. Wieghard, 727 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1986).

Mere speculation regarding the court's disposition of a motion for a continuance or to recall a witness does not obviate the defendant's duty to seek such procedures if the defendant is to base his claim of prejudice on the inability to prepare new theories of defense or to cross-examine past witnesses in light of previously undisclosed evidence. Salazar v. People, 870 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1994).

Information in possession of detective concerning drug use and crimes of prosecution witness is covered by this rule, and failure of prosecution to disclose such information violates this rule even if prosecutor had no actual knowledge of the information. People v. District Court, 793 P.2d 163 (Colo. 1990).

Trial court's refusal to order the prosecution to obtain and disclose the criminal histories of all prosecution witnesses, including police officers, was not in error. Trial court's order requiring the prosecution to disclose any criminal history of a police officer witness of which it is aware was also held to not be in error. People v. Fox, 862 P.2d 1000 (Colo. App. 1993).

The sanction for nondisclosure applies only against the prosecution and not against a co-defendant; a co-defendant in a joint trial should be able to use prior felony convictions to impeach the testimony of a defendant who chooses to testify. People v. Lesney, 855 P.2d 1364 (Colo. 1993).

No mistrial resulted when the prosecution refused to provide defendant with the readouts printed by the instruments used to reach the test results. This rule requires only that the expert's report and the results be provided, and defendant had the results for four months before trial and did not file a motion indicating the results were incomplete or inadequate. People v. Evans, 886 P.2d 288 (Colo. App. 1994).

Defendant's statement was not subject to the mandatory disclosure provisions of part I (a)(2), or the constitutional obligation to disclose exculpatory information where the trial court found defendant's testimony implausible and essentially made a finding of fact that the statement was not made. Salazar v. People, 870 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1994).

Prosecution not required to disclose derivative trial exhibits of identical content that prosecution prepared from disclosed material. People v. Armijo, 179 P.3d 134 (Colo. App. 2007).

Protection against disclosure extends to opinion work product prepared by the prosecution in anticipation of any criminal prosecution. Trial court erred in ordering prosecution to disclose materials that the prosecution prepared in anticipation of a different but related criminal investigation. Court must conduct ex parte, in camera review to determine whether contested materials constitute opinion work product prepared in anticipation of a criminal prosecution. People v. Angel, 2012 CO 34, 277 P.3d 231.

Juvenile adjudications are not part of a witness's criminal history and therefore not subject to automatic disclosure. People v. Corson, 2016 CO 33, 379 P.3d 288.

Applied in People v. Shannon, 683 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1984); People v. Doss, 782 P.2d 1198 (Colo. App. 1989); People v. Cobb, 962 P.2d 944 (Colo. 1998).

III. DISCLOSURE TO PROSECUTION.

Part II (b) is constitutional on its face, as it does not violate the privilege against self-incrimination. People v. District Court, 187 Colo. 333, 531 P.2d 626 (1975).

Part II (c) is constitutional on its face, as it does not violate the privilege against self-incrimination. People v. District Court, 187 Colo. 333, 531 P.2d 626 (1975).

Trial court to determine whether discovery will violate defendant's constitutional rights. The trial court, in ruling on the prosecution's motions under this rule, must first determine whether discovery which has been objected to will constitute a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights. People v. District Court, 187 Colo. 333, 531 P.2d 626 (1975); People v. Castro, 854 P.2d 1262 (Colo. 1993).

A balancing approach may be used to measure the state's interest in enforcing discovery rules against the defendant's right to call witnesses in his favor. The factors considered in such approach include: (1) Whether the discovery violation was willful or in bad faith; (2) the materiality of the evidence excluded; (3) the extent to which the prosecution will be surprised or prejudiced; (4) the effectiveness of less severe sanctions; and (5) whether the defendant himself knew of or cooperated in the discovery violation. People v. Pronovost, 756 P.2d 387 (Colo. App. 1987).

Balancing approach applied in People v. Pronovost, 756 P.2d 387 (Colo. App. 1987).

Discovery of statements of nonexpert defense witnesses not authorized. Part II (c) neither explicitly nor implicitly authorizes trial courts to grant prosecution motions for pretrial discovery of statements of nonexpert defense witnesses. Richardson v. District Court, 632 P.2d 595 (Colo. 1981).

Scope of part II (c) does not purport to extend to work product. People v. District Court, 187 Colo. 333, 531 P.2d 626 (1975).

But discovery of defense theories and names of supporting witnesses permitted upon condition. By its direct and uncontradicted terms, part II (c) permits discovery of defense theories and the names of supporting witnesses only when the defendant intends to introduce them at trial. People v. District Court, 187 Colo. 333, 531 P.2d 626 (1975).

Demonstrative, nontestimonial evidence. While the privilege against self-incrimination does not extend to demonstrative evidence obtained from a defendant or from a witness, demonstrative evidence is limited to nontestimonial evidence such as fingerprints, blood specimens, handwriting examples, photographs and other evidence of similar character. Richardson v. District Court, 632 P.2d 595 (Colo. 1981).

When request for disclosure by prosecution invalid. The request for disclosure by the prosecution under this rule may be overbroad and, therefore, invalid if it seeks information which might serve as an unconstitutional link in a chain of evidence tending to establish the accused's guilt of a criminal offense. People v. District Court, 187 Colo. 333, 531 P.2d 626 (1975); Richardson v. District Court, 632 P.2d 595 (Colo. 1981).

This rule governs a prosecution request for nontestimonial identification once judicial proceedings against a defendant have been initiated. People v. Angel, 701 P.2d 149 (Colo. App. 1985).

A prosecuting attorney has both a statutory and a constitutional obligation to disclose to the defense any material, exculpatory evidence he possesses; however, failure to disclose information helpful to the accused results in a violation of due process only where the evidence is "material" either to guilt or punishment. Salazar v. People, 870 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1994).

More specifically, there must be a reasonable probability that, had the evidence been disclosed to the defense, the result of the proceeding would have been different. Salazar v. People, 870 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1994).

"Reasonable time" requirement of rule violated when defendant failed to respond to prosecution's specification for several months or until actual commencement of trial unless there is a showing of unusual circumstances. People v. Hampton, 696 P.2d 765 (Colo. 1985) (decided under former Crim. P. 12.1).

Factors for determining when exclusion of alibi testimony is proper are discussed in People v. Hampton, 696 P.2d 765 (Colo. 1985) (decided under former Crim. P. 12.1).

The trial court, after applying the factors for determining when exclusion of alibi testimony is proper, determined that the exclusion of the alibi evidence was appropriate under the facts of the case and the trial court's exercise of its discretionary authority will not be overturned on appeal because the trial court did not abuse its discretion. People v. Hampton, 758 P.2d 1344 (Colo. 1988) (decided under former Crim. P. 12.1).

No abuse of discretion when court prohibited defense witness from testifying when the defense did not disclose the witness within the time period in the rule and failed to articulate why the disclosure was made late. In addition, the witness was not a key witness, and the evidence that the witness was going to rebut was rebutted by another defense witness. People v. Carmichael, 179 P.3d 47 (Colo. App. 2007), rev'd on other grounds, 206 P.3d 800 (Colo. 2009).

Although a prosecutor's duty to disclose potentially exculpatory evidence is not limited by the circumstances of known defense theories or considerations of relevancy, reversible error did not exist since the only evidence linking gun to the shooting in question was its discovery in the back seat of the suspects' vehicle and there was no reasonable probability that had the evidence been disclosed, the result of the trial would have been different. Salazar v. People, 870 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1994).

Although an alibi defense not an affirmative defense so as to place on the People the burden of proof to rebut, and trial court did not err by refusing a theory of case instruction treating alibi as an affirmative defense, defendant was entitled to a properly worded instruction setting forth his theory of the case. People v. Nunez, 824 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1991).

Notice of alibi is admissible as a prior inconsistent statement when a defendant testifies at trial in a manner inconsistent with such notice. People v. Lowe, 969 P.2d 746 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering a mistrial when the defense did not disclose to prosecution a defense witness's new alibi evidence and elicited the evidence on cross- examination. People v. Jackson, 2018 COA 79, __ P.3d __.

Defendant's statement to psychiatrist that was provided to the prosecution under this rule loses its confidential nature and cross-examination of the defendant concerning such statements as prior inconsistent statements is proper impeachment, even if the psychiatrist did not testify at the defendant's trial. Use of such statements do not violate the attorney-client privilege or the right to effective assistance of counsel. People v. Lanari, 811 P.2d 399 (Colo. App. 1989), aff'd, 827 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1992).

Purpose of the rule is fulfilled by the entry of a not guilty plea followed by no further disclosure of defenses, which operates to inform the prosecution that the defense is a general denial. People v. Castro, 835 P.2d 561 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 854 P.2d 1262 (Colo. 1993).

Nor does the rule require disclosure of intent to cross-examine prosecution witnesses. People v. Castro, 835 P.2d 561 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 854 P.2d 1262 (Colo. 1993).

Exclusion of a defense witness by the court as a sanction against the defense attorney, for failing to disclose such witness to the prosecution in violation of this rule, was excessive and violated defendant's right to challenge a prosecution witness's credibility through cross-examination based on testimony that would have been given by the excluded witness. People v. Cobb, 962 P.2d 944 (Colo. 1998).

Although the trial court has broad discretion in deciding the appropriate course of action in response to a violation of this rule by the defense, it must consider: (1) The reason for and degree of culpability associated with the violation; (2) the extent of resulting prejudice to the other party; (3) any events after the violation that mitigate such prejudice; (4) reasonable and less drastic alternatives to exclusion; and (5) any other relevant facts. People v. Cobb, 962 P.2d 944 (Colo. 1998).

Because the error violated the defendant's right under the sixth amendment to confront the witnesses against him and caused material prejudice to his defense, the error was not harmless beyond a reasonable doubt and required a new trial. People v. Cobb, 962 P.2d 944 (Colo. 1998).

Prosecution could not be sanctioned for police conduct in which it did not participate. Trial court may not preclude prosecution from applying for and obtaining order for nontestimonial identification evidence though blood and hair samples obtained by police through a warrantless search were suppressed. People v. Diaz, 55 P.3d 1171 (Colo. 2002).

IV. REGULATION.

Rule relates only to pretrial discovery and not to posttrial discovery. Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972).

Preservation of evidence upon motion for protective order. If the government seeks a protective order regarding grand jury testimony, the court should first examine ''in camera'' the material sought to be protected before making its ruling, and if material is withheld from the defendant under such an order, it should be sealed by the court and preserved for consideration on appeal. Parlapiano v. District Court, 176 Colo. 521, 491 P.2d 965 (1971).

Introduction of identification testimony within court's discretion. But where a trial judge, after considering the totality of the circumstances at an ''in camera'' hearing, permits the introduction of identification testimony, he does not abuse his discretion, and a reviewing court will not substitute its judgment for that of the trial court. People v. Knapp, 180 Colo. 280, 505 P.2d 7 (1973).

Trial court properly allowed witness endorsed as a perceiving witness to testify as an expert witness after defense raised the issue related to the expertise at trial. People v. Jowell, 199 P.3d 38 (Colo. App. 2008).

In camera review of documents obtained only by showings of necessity and undue hardship. Although section (f) of part III allows for in camera review of documents to determine whether they are covered by attorney work-product doctrine, the party seeking inspection in camera of confidential portions of the attorney's documents must show necessity and that obtaining the information through other means would cause undue hardship. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

If, however, parties in a discovery dispute must resort to court intervention, the moving party must show that other means of resolving the dispute have been exhausted and that the requested relief is narrowly tailored to fit the implied waiver of the attorney-client privilege involved. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

Sanction within discretion of trial court. Whether the sanction imposed by the trial court for failure to comply with section (c) of part II is appropriate, under the facts and circumstances of a case, is a matter which is within the sound discretion of the trial court. People v. Lyle, 200 Colo. 236, 613 P.2d 896 (1980); People v. Madsen, 743 P.2d 437 (Colo. App. 1987).

A trial judge has broad discretion in considering motions to endorse additional witnesses and fashioning remedies for violations of a discovery order under this rule. People v. District Court, 664 P.2d 247 (Colo. 1983).

Trial court need not prevent district attorney from using evidence that was not disclosed to defendant when the court recessed for the day to permit defense time to investigate evidence and the substance of the evidence was similar to other statements which had been disclosed. People v. Hammons, 771 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1988).

When exercising its discretion in fashioning remedies for violations of this rule, the trial court should impose the least severe sanction that will ensure full compliance with the court's discovery orders. People v. District Court, 793 P.2d 163 (Colo. 1990); People v. Castro, 854 P.2d 1262 (Colo. 1993); People v. Lee, 18 P.3d 192 (Colo. 2001).

The trial court should also take into account the reason why disclosure was not made, the extent of the prejudice, if any, to the opposing party, the feasibility of rectifying that prejudice by a continuance, and any other relevant circumstances. People v. District Court, 793 P.2d 163 (Colo. 1990); People v. Castro, 854 P.2d 1262 (Colo. 1993); People v. Lee, 18 P.3d 192 (Colo. 2001).

Sanction held to abridge right to fair trial. Discovery sanction which substantially prevents the negation of the prosecution's direct testimony, abridges defendant's right to a fair trial and constitutes an abuse of discretion. People v. Willis, 667 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1983).

Sanction held not to be abuse of discretion. An order preventing the district attorney from using certain evidence is a harsh sanction, but it is not necessarily an abuse of discretion. People v. District Court, 664 P.2d 247 (Colo. 1983).

Sanction of excluding presentation of evidence by a defendant is a matter of judicial discretion to be preceded by adequate inquiry into circumstances of defendant's noncompliance with court's discovery order and effect of exclusion. People v. Reger, 731 P.2d 752 (Colo. App. 1986).

Factors pertinent to sanction of excluding evidence for noncompliance with a discovery order include reason for and degree of culpability associated with failure to timely respond to prosecution's request for discovery, whether and to what extent nondisclosure prejudiced prosecution's opportunity effectively to prepare for trial, whether events occurring subsequent to noncompliance mitigate prejudice to prosecution, whether there is a reasonable and less drastic alternative to preclusion of evidence, and any other relevant factors arising out of circumstances of the case. People v. Reger, 731 P.2d 752 (Colo. App. 1986).

Monetary sanction payable from public funds for violation of discover rules is beyond authority of district court. People v. District Court, 808 P.2d 831 (Colo. 1991).

Preclusion is proper method to assure compliance with discovery order. People v. Patterson, 189 Colo. 451, 541 P.2d 894 (1975).

Sanction of a continuance held to be abuse of discretion where delay was not attributable to the defendant and he was thereby denied his right to a speedy trial. People v. Castro, 835 P.2d 561 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 854 P.2d 1262 (Colo. 1993).

Decision whether to continue trial is within court's sound discretion, even when a defendant asserts a need to prepare to meet unexpected or newly discovered evidence or testimony. Trial court properly denied defense motion for continuance where prosecution's toxicologist had been endorsed two months before trial and materials used by toxicologist during his testimony were made during trial. People v. Scarlett, 985 P.2d 36 (Colo. App. 1998).

A balancing approach may be used to measure the state's interest in enforcing discovery rules against the defendant's right to call witnesses in his favor. The factors considered in such approach include: (1) The reason for and the degree of culpability associated with the failure to timely respond to the prosecution's specification of time and place; (2) whether and to what extent the nondisclosure prejudiced the prosecution's opportunity to effectively prepare for trial; (3) whether events occurring subsequent to the defendant's noncompliance mitigate the prejudice to the prosecution; (4) whether there is a reasonable and less drastic alternative to the preclusion of alibi (or other defense) evidence; (5) and any other relevant factors arising out of the circumstances of the case. People v. Hampton, 696 P.2d 765 (Colo. 1985); People v. Pronovost, 773 P.2d 555 (Colo. 1989); cert. denied, 785 P.2d 611 (Colo. 1990).

Exclusion or suppression of exculpatory evidence which should have been disclosed by prosecution to defense does not further search for truth and is not merited by the possible deterrence of prosecutorial misconduct, where the prosecutor had no actual knowledge of the evidence, where the evidence is crucial to the case, where a continuance would cure any prejudice suffered by the defendant because of the violation of the rule, and where the prosecutor did not willfully act in bad faith. People v. District court, 793 P.2d 163 (Colo. 1990).

No prosecutorial misconduct exists where the prosecutor leaves it to the discretion of the potential witness as to whether the witness talks to the defendant's investigator. People v. Antunes, 680 P.2d 1321 (Colo. App. 1984).

It was an abuse of discretion to exclude DNA evidence when record supported prosecutor's explanation that she was complying with court's earlier directives, when such exclusion could have a potentially distorting effect on truth finding, and when record shows that continuance may have been adequate to cure any prejudice suffered by defendant. People v. Lee, 18 P.3d 192 (Colo. 2001).

It was an abuse of discretion to impose sanctions that were tantamount to dismissal of the charges where trial court had found no bad faith or willful violation of this rule and determined that dismissal would be inappropriate. People v. Daley, 97 P.3d 295 (Colo. App. 2004).

Defendant's counsel's decision to provide defendant with limited access to selected discovery materials, though the defendant wants to review all discovery materials, does not create a conflict warranting substitution of counsel. Counsel's sharing of some discovery materials with defendant and summarizing of other discovery materials for defendant were appropriate ''other methods'' for having defendant review discovery. People v. Krueger, 2012 COA 80, 296 P.3d 294.

V. PROCEDURE.

Discovery rules not applicable to extradition proceedings. Allowing full discovery in extradition proceedings would defeat the limited purpose of the habeas corpus hearing. Temen v. Barry, 695 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1984).

Evidentiary hearing on disclosure. Once a defendant has made an initial showing of the necessity for disclosure, the issue becomes an evidentiary matter for resolution by the trial court and an evidentiary hearing normally will be required. People v. McLean, 633 P.2d 513 (Colo. App. 1981).

Rule not guide as to when discovery to take place. This rule is only intended to create a cut-off time for the filing of discovery motions, and offers no guidance as to when the discovery should take place. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

Procedure for exchange of statements from prosecution to defense counsel established. Howe v. People, 178 Colo. 248, 496 P.2d 1040 (1972).

Informally or through in camera proceedings, the trial court should have examined the requested medical files to determine which portions, if any, were defense counsel's work product and therefore entitled to protection from discovery. On completing the examination, the trial court should have protected confidential or privileged material, only allowing disclosure of the files after defense counsel had an opportunity to excise any confidential or privileged material. People v. Ullery, 984 P.2d 506 (Colo. 1999).

The court erred by allowing the jurors to take juror notebooks home, but the error was not a structural error requiring reversal. The error was not a fundamentally serious error that would prevasively prejudice the entire of the proceedings. People v. Willcoxon, 80 P.3d 817 (Colo. App. 2002).

Failure to allow defense counsel to review juror notebooks prior to trial is harmless error if counsel is allowed to review the notebook during trial and make objections. People v. Baird, 66 P.3d 183 (Colo. App. 2002).

Jury notebooks are not to supplant the requirement of Crim. P. 30 that jurors be orally instructed prior to closing arguments. People v. Baenziger, 97 P.3d 271 (Colo. App. 2004).

Part V (c) applies only to materials that are discoverable and actually received by the requesting party. Any other reading would require a requesting party to pay for materials that requesting party might not be allowed to review. People v. Trujillo, 114 P.3d 27 (Colo. App. 2004).

District court erred in suppressing statements in a case in one county made by defendant during lawful investigation of a crime in another county. Because defendant effectively waived his fifth and sixth amendment right to counsel through a knowing and voluntary Miranda waiver as to the particular crime being investigated, there was no duty pursuant to part II of this rule for the officers in the second county to notify counsel in the first county of the time and place of the Crim. P. 41.1 identification procedure. This rule applies to judicial proceedings, and there was no judicial proceeding initiated against defendant in the second county for the crime being investigated. People v. Luna-Solis, 2013 CO 21, 298 P.3d 927.

Rule 17. Subpoena

In every criminal case, the prosecuting attorneys and the defendant have the right to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of tangible evidence by service upon them of a subpoena to appear for examination as a witness upon the trial or other hearing.

(a) For Attendance of Witnesses — Form — Issuance. A subpoena shall be issued either by the clerk of the court in which case is filed or by one of counsel whose appearance has been entered in the particular case in which the subpoena is sought. It shall state the name of the court and the title, if any, of the proceedings, and shall command each person to whom it is directed to attend and give testimony at the time and place specified therein.

(b) Pro Se Defendants. Subpoenas shall be issued at the request of a pro se defendant, as hereinafter provided. The court or a judge thereof, in its discretion in any case involving a pro se defendant, may order at any time that a subpoena be issued only upon motion or request of a pro se defendant and upon order entered thereon. The motion or request shall be supported by an affidavit stating facts supporting the contention that the witness or the items sought to be subpoenaed are material and relevant and that the defendant cannot safely go to trial without the witness or items which are sought by subpoena. If the court is satisfied with the affidavit it shall direct that the subpoena be issued.

(c) For Production of Documentary Evidence and of Objects. A subpoena may also command the person to whom it is directed to produce the books, papers, documents, photographs, or other objects designated therein. The subpoenaing party shall forthwith provide a copy of the subpoena to opposing counsel (or directly to the defendant if unrepresented) upon issuance. The court on motion made promptly may quash or modify the subpoena if compliance would be unreasonable or oppressive. The court may direct that books, papers, documents, photographs, or objects designated in the subpoena be produced before the court at a time prior to the trial or prior to the time when they are to be offered in evidence and may upon their production permit the books, papers, documents, photographs, or objects or portions thereof to be inspected by the parties and their attorneys.

(d) Service on a Minor. Service of a subpoena upon a parent or legal guardian who has physical care of an unemancipated minor that contains wording commanding said parent or legal guardian to produce the unemancipated minor for the purpose of testifying before the court shall be valid service compelling the attendance of both said parent or legal guardian and the unemancipated minor for examination as witnesses. In addition, service of a subpoena as described in this subsection shall compel said parent or legal guardian either to make all necessary arrangements to ensure that the unemancipated minor is available before the court to testify or to appear in court and show good cause for the unemancipated minor's failure to appear.

(e) Service. Unless service is admitted or waived, a subpoena may be served by the sheriff, by his deputy, or by any other person who is not a party and who is not less than eighteen years of age. Service of a subpoena may be made by delivering a copy thereof to the person named. Service may also be made in accordance with Section 24-30-2104(3), C.R.S. Service is also valid if the person named has signed a written admission or waiver of personal service, including an admission or waiver signed using a scanned or electronic signature. If ordered by the court, a fee for one day's attendance and mileage allowed by law shall be tendered to the person named if the person named resides outside the county of trial.

(f) Place of Service.

(1) In Colorado. A subpoena requiring the attendance of a witness at a hearing or trial may be served anywhere within Colorado.

(2) Witness from Another State. Service on a witness outside this state shall be made only as provided by law.

(g) For Taking Deposition — Issuance. A court order to take a deposition authorizes the issuance by the clerk of the court of subpoenas for the persons named or described in the order.

(h) Failure to Obey Subpoena.

(1) Contempt. Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a duly served subpoena may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued. Such contempt is indirect contempt within the meaning of C.R.C.P. 107. The trial court may issue a contempt citation under this subsection (1) whether or not it also issues a bench warrant under subsection (2) below.

(2) Trial Witness — Bench Warrant.

(A) When it appears to the court that a person has failed without adequate excuse to obey a duly served subpoena commanding appearance at a trial, the court, upon request of the subpoenaing party, shall issue a bench warrant directing that any peace officer apprehend the person and produce the person in court immediately upon apprehension or, if the court is not then in session, as soon as court reconvenes. Such bench warrant shall expire upon the earliest of:

(i) submission of the case to the jury; or

(ii) cancellation or termination of the trial.

(B) Upon the person's production in court, the court shall set bond.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''The Ethics of Contacting Witnesses'', see 46 Colo. Law. 40 (Dec. 2017).

A defendant is not entitled to issue ex parte subpoenas duces tecum by leave of the court. The fifth and sixth amendments to the federal constitution do not give the defendant the right to engage in this type of discovery without providing the information to the prosecution. People v. Baltazar, 241 P.3d 941 (Colo. 2010).

Effect of failure of subpoenaed witness to appear. Under some circumstances, failure of court to grant continuance or to order mistrial when witness who has been subpoenaed fails to appear requires reversal. People v. Lee, 180 Colo. 376, 506 P.2d 136 (1973).

A trial court does not abuse its discretion in denying a continuance because the defendant's psychiatric witness who had not been served with a subpoena failed to appear. People v. Mann, 646 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1982).

Order of court should be required before a subpoena duces tecum is issued. Digiallonardo v. People, 175 Colo. 560, 488 P.2d 1109 (1971).

During the course of a criminal prosecution, the prosecution may compel production of telephone and bank records through the use of a subpoena duces tecum so long as the defendant has the opportunity to challenge the subpoena for lack of probable cause. Use of a subpoena duces tecum for such records is not an unreasonable search and seizure provided that it is supported by probable cause and is properly defined and executed. People v. Mason, 989 P.2d 757 (Colo. 1999).

Probable cause for issuance of a subpoena duces tecum for obtaining telephone and bank records exists if there is a reasonable likelihood that the evidence sought exists and that it would link the defendant to the crime charged. People v. Mason, 989 P.2d 757 (Colo. 1999).

District attorney has standing to challenge defense subpoena of third party. As the prosecuting party, the district attorney has an independent interest in ensuring the propriety of third-party subpoenas as part of the management of the case and the prevention of complainant or witness harassment through improper discovery. People v. Spykstra, 234 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2010).

To withstand challenge to criminal pretrial third-party subpoena, defendant must demonstrate: (1) A reasonable likelihood that the subpoenaed materials exist, by setting forth a specific factual basis; (2) that the materials are evidentiary and relevant; (3) that the materials are not otherwise procurable reasonably in advance of trial by the exercise of due diligence; (4) that the party cannot properly prepare for trial without such production and inspection in advance of trial and that the failure to obtain such inspection may tend unreasonably to delay the trial; and (5) that the application is made in good faith and is not intended as a general fishing expedition. People v. Spykstra, 234 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2010).

In addition to this basic test, for subpoenas issued for materials that may be protected by privilege or a right to confidentiality, a balancing of interests is necessary and the defendant must make a greater showing of need. In camera review may be necessary in some instances, but is not mandated. People v. Spykstra, 234 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2010).

District attorney has standing to move to quash defense subpoena of alleged victim to appear at preliminary hearing. The district attorney has an independent interest in ensuring the propriety of subpoenas and in preventing witness harassment. People v. Bros., 2013 CO 31, 308 P.3d 1213.

Trial court abused discretion in failing to rule on motion to quash witness subpoena prior to preliminary hearing. Court may quash witness subpoena prior to hearing prosecution's evidence at preliminary hearing. With respect to a defense subpoena of a child victim, the prosecution indicated that the child's testimony would not be required for the probable cause determination and that the child could suffer harm by preparing for and attending the preliminary hearing, even if not ultimately required to testify. People v. Bros., 2013 CO 31, 308 P.3d 1213.

Witnesses for indigent defendants. The expenses of obtaining the testimony of witnesses for an indigent defendant must be paid by the state. People v. McCabe, 37 Colo. App. 181, 546 P.2d 1289 (1975).

Defendant must establish indigency to satisfaction of court. People v. McCabe, 37 Colo. App. 181, 546 P.2d 1289 (1975).

No authority to quash properly issued subpoena. There is no authority under this rule to quash a subpoena if the district attorney has complied with the technical requirements. People v. Ensor, 632 P.2d 641 (Colo. App. 1981).

Mailing a subpoena to a witness, without more, does not comply with the requirements in section (e). The record does not indicate that the prosecution exercised diligence in trying to obtain the witness' presence. People v. Stanchieff, 862 P.2d 988 (Colo. App. 1993).

Subpoena served by mail insufficient to invoke contempt. A subpoena served by mail, pursuant to an administrative order, is insufficient to invoke the sanction of contempt under section (h). People v. Mann, 646 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1982).

For in camera examination of subpoenaed bank records, see Pignatiello v. District Court, 659 P.2d 683 (Colo. 1983).

Discovery costs. Prior to requiring the public defender's office to pay costs of copying a police officer's file for an in camera review by the court, the court should make the following specific findings: Was the defendant's subpoena unreasonable or oppressive and were the city's proffered concerns as to use and possible loss justified? The court should consider whether adequate safeguards could be provided for an initial in camera review of the original documents and whether any payment should be limited to actual costs. In doing so, the court must balance the government's interests against defendant's interests in disclosure. People v. Trujillo, 62 P.3d 1034 (Colo. App. 2002), rev'd on other grounds, 83 P.3d 642 (Colo. 2004).

Applied in People v. Duncan, 179 Colo. 253, 500 P.2d 137 (1972); A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976); Losavio v. Robb, 195 Colo. 533, 579 P.2d 1152 (1978).

V. VENUE

Rule 18. Venue

Deleted by amendment March 4, 2004, effective July 1, 2004.

Comment. The place for trying criminal cases is governed by applicable statutes or rules, such as section 18-1-202 (general venue statute), section 13-73-107 and section 13-74-107 (on statewide and judicial district grand jury indictments), section 18-2-202 (2) (a) (conspiracy), section 18-3-304 (4) (violation of custody orders), and section 19-2-105 (juvenile cases), as well as section 16-6-101 et seq. and Crim. P. 21 (change of venue), or the state or federal constitutions.

II. PLACE OF TRIAL.

Burden is on the state to prove venue in a criminal prosecution. Stout v. People, 171 Colo. 142, 464 P.2d 872 (1970).

But venue is a matter which may be proved by positive testimony or inferred from proof of other facts. Stout v. People, 171 Colo. 142, 464 P.2d 872 (1970).

For venue is a matter to be determined from all evidence in the case. Fernandez v. People, 176 Colo. 346, 490 P.2d 690 (1971).

Venue may be established by circumstantial evidence. People v. Bd., 656 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1982).

Waiver of error related to venue. Any error relating to venue, not mentioned during trial, in motion for acquittal, or in motion for a new trial, is waived, and cannot be raised on appeal. People v. Jones, 184 Colo. 96, 518 P.2d 819 (1974).

Failure of county resident to pay taxes constitutes act in that county. Failure of a Pueblo county resident to pay taxes or file a return constitutes an act in Pueblo county in furtherance of the crimes charged, within the meaning of this rule. People v. Vickers, 199 Colo. 305, 608 P.2d 808 (1980).

Rule 19. No Colorado Rule

Rule 20. No Colorado Rule

Rule 21. Change of Venue or Judge

(a) Change of Venue.

(1) For Fair or Expeditious Trial. The place of trial may be changed when the court in its sound discretion determines that a fair or expeditious trial cannot take place in the county or district in which the trial is pending.

(2) The Motion for Change of Venue.

(I) A motion for a change of venue shall be in writing and accompanied by one or more affidavits setting forth the facts upon which the moving party relies, or in lieu of such affidavits the motion, with approval of the court, may contain a stipulation of the parties to a change of venue.

(II) The written motion and the affidavits shall be served upon the opposing party 7 days before the hearing; the nonmoving party may submit a written brief or affidavit or both in opposition to the motion.

(III) As soon as practicable, the court may hold a hearing on the motion.

(3) Effect of Motions. After a motion for a change of venue has been denied, the applicant may renew his motion for good cause shown, if since denial he has learned of new grounds for a change of venue. All questions concerning the regularity of the proceedings in obtaining changes of venue or the right of the court to which the change is made to try the case and execute the judgment, and all grounds for a change of venue, shall be considered waived if not raised before trial.

(4) Order of Change. Every order for a change of venue shall be in writing, signed by the judge, and filed by the clerk with the motion as a part of the record in the case. The order shall state the court to which venue has been changed and the date and time at which the defendant shall appear at said court. The bond made, if any, shall remain in force and effect.

(5) Disposition of Confined Defendant. When the defendant is in custody, the court shall order the sheriff, or other officer having custody of the defendant, to remove him not less than 7 days before trial to the jail of the county to which the venue is changed and there deliver him together with the warrant under which he is held, to the jailer. The sheriff or other officers shall endorse on the warrant of commitment the reason for the change of custody, and deliver the warrant, with the prisoner, to the jailer of the proper county, who shall give the sheriff or other officer a receipt and keep the prisoner in the same manner as if he had originally been committed to his custody.

(6) Transcript of Record. When a change of venue is granted, the clerk of the court from which the change is granted shall immediately make a full transcript of the record and proceedings in the case, and of the motion and order for the change of venue, and shall transmit the same, together with all papers filed in the case, including the indictment or information, complaint, or summons and complaint, and bonds of the defendant and of all witnesses, to the proper court. When the change is granted to one or more, but not of several defendants, a certified copy of the indictment or information, and of each other paper in the case, shall be transmitted to the court to which the change of venue is ordered. Such certified copies shall stand as the originals, and the defendant shall be tried upon them. The transcript and papers may be transmitted by mail, or in any other way the court may direct. The clerk of the court to which the venue is changed shall file the transcript and papers transmitted to him, and docket the case; and the case shall proceed before and after judgment, as if it had originated in that court.

(7) Imprisonment. When after a change of venue the defendant is convicted and sentenced to imprisonment in the county jail, the sheriff shall transport him at once to the county where the crime was committed if that county has a jail or other place of confinement.

(b) Substitution of Judges.

(1) Within 14 days after a case has been assigned to a court, a motion, verified and supported by affidavits of at least two credible persons not related to the defendant, may be filed with the court and served on the opposing party to have a substitution of the judge. Said motion may be filed after the 14-day period only if good cause is shown to the court why it was not filed within the original 14-day period. The motion shall be based on the following grounds:

(I) The judge is related to the defendant or to any attorney of record or attorney otherwise engaged in the case; or

(II) The offense charged is alleged to have been committed against the person or property of the judge, or of some person related to him; or

(III) The judge has been of counsel in the case; or

(IV) The judge is in any way interested or prejudiced with respect to the case, the parties, or counsel.

(2) Any judge who knows of circumstances which disqualify him in a case shall, on his own motion, disqualify himself.

(3) Upon the filing of a motion under this section (b), all other proceedings in the case shall be suspended until a ruling is made thereon. If the motion and supporting affidavits state facts showing grounds for disqualification, the judge shall immediately enter an order disqualifying himself or herself. Upon disqualifying himself or herself, the judge shall notify forthwith the chief judge of the district, who shall assign another judge in the district to hear the action. If no other judge in the district is available or qualified, the chief judge shall notify forthwith the state court administrator, who shall obtain from the Chief Justice the assignment of a replacement judge.

ANNOTATION

I. Change of Venue.
II. Substitution of Judges.

I. CHANGE OF VENUE.

Right to fair and impartial jury is a constitutional right which can never be abrogated. Brisbin v. Schauer, 176 Colo. 550, 492 P.2d 835 (1971).

Change of venue subject to judicial discretion. Motion for change of venue due to local prejudice is a matter of judicial discretion. People v. Simmons, 183 Colo. 253, 516 P.2d 117 (1973).

Trial court has inherent power to change venue on its own motion if such action is necessary to provide a fair trial and, in appropriate circumstances, may do so over the defendant's objections. Wafai v. People, 750 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1988).

Question of prejudice one of fact. The question as to the existence of prejudice such as would dictate the granting of a motion for a change of venue is one of fact and rests within the sound discretion of the trial court. Nowels v. People, 166 Colo. 140, 442 P.2d 410 (1968); Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972).

Inquiry on review relating to fair trial. Regardless of the means imposed by the trial judge to insure the accused's constitutional right to a fair trial by a panel of impartial jurors, the critical inquiry on appellate review is whether the chosen means did in fact preserve the accused's right to a fair trial. People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981).

When change of venue must be granted. If a community is prejudiced against a citizen, or if other circumstances are likely to deny him a fair and impartial jury trial, then a change of venue must be granted. Brisbin v. Schauer, 176 Colo. 550, 492 P.2d 835 (1971); Sergent v. People, 177 Colo. 354, 497 P.2d 983 (1972); Sollitt v. District Court, 180 Colo. 114, 502 P.2d 1108 (1972).

Denial of fair trial may be presumed when pretrial publicity is massive, pervasive, and prejudicial. People v. Simmons, 183 Colo. 253, 516 P.2d 117 (1973).

Pretrial publicity was extensive, but not so massive, pervasive, and prejudicial as to create a presumption that defendant was denied a fair trial. People v. Hankins, 2014 COA 71, 361 P.3d 1033.

Showing required when pretrial publicity not presumptively prejudicial. Where a defendant has not demonstrated the existence of massive, pervasive, and prejudicial publicity, which would create a presumption that he was denied a fair trial, he must establish the denial of a fair trial based upon a nexus between extensive pretrial publicity and the jury panel. People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981).

Record did not show actual prejudice. Only one impaneled juror said he had formed an opinion, and he adamantly declared that he could set it aside. People v. Hankins, 2014 COA 71, 361 P.3d 1033.

If prejudice exists, it should show up in the voir dire examination. Nowels v. People, 166 Colo. 140, 442 P.2d 410 (1968).

Burden of showing partiality of jurors met. Where it is shown that a significant number of jurors entertained an opinion of the defendant's guilt, had been exposed to pretrial publicity, and had knowledge of the details of the crime, the defendant has met his burden of showing the existence of an opinion in the minds of the jurors which raises a presumption of partiality. People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981).

Failure to grant change of venue not error. People v. Trujillo, 181 Colo. 350, 509 P.2d 794 (1973); People v. Medina, 185 Colo. 101, 521 P.2d 1257 (1974).

Change of venue is available pursuant to writ of habeas corpus. Brisbin v. Schauer, 176 Colo. 550, 492 P.2d 835 (1971).

II. SUBSTITUTION OF JUDGES.

Law reviews. For article, ''Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986'', which discusses a case relating to the personal interest of judge in case, see 15 Colo. Law. 1609 (1986).

Rule to be strictly applied. This rule and its statutory counterpart on change of judge must be strictly applied. People in Interest of A.L.C., 660 P.2d 917 (Colo. App. 1982).

Purpose of section (b) is to guarantee that no person is forced to stand trial before a judge with a bent of mind. People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981).

Judge's duty to sit on case unless prejudiced. Unless a reasonable person could infer that the judge would in all probability be prejudiced against the petitioner, the judge's duty is to sit on the case. Smith v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1981).

Prejudice is mental condition or status, a certain bent of mind, which cannot be demonstrated, ordinarily, by direct proof. Smith v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1981).

To be distinguished from normal personal opinions. Prejudice must be distinguished from the sort of personal opinions that as a matter of course arise during a judge's hearing of a cause. Smith v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1981).

Discourteousness or rudeness do not dictate disqualification. It does not comport with sound judicial policy or the intent of either section (b) or § 16-6-201 to require disqualification of a judge solely on the basis of subjective conclusions that he was discourteous or rude. Carr v. Barnes, 196 Colo. 70, 580 P.2d 803 (1978).

But appearance of possible prejudice can dictate disqualification. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 503, 560 P.2d 828 (1977).

In reviewing the motion and affidavits, both the actuality and appearance of fairness must be considered. Even where the trial judge is convinced of his own impartiality, the integrity of the judicial system is impugned when it appears to the public that the judge is partial. People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981).

Section (b) of this rule has uniformly been applied in disqualification cases. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 503, 560 P.2d 828 (1977).

Rule measures timeliness of motion to disqualify. One apparent purpose of section (b) of this rule was to provide a standard by which to measure timeliness of a motion for disqualification, whether filed pursuant to § 16-6-201, or to this rule. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 503, 560 P.2d 828 (1977).

Later discovered or occurring disqualifying facts. When disqualifying facts do not occur or are not discovered by the moving party until after expiration of the time within which the motion and affidavits normally must be presented, application for a change of judge is timely if made as soon as possible after occurrence or discovery of those facts. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 503, 560 P.2d 828 (1977); People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981).

Good cause for delay in filing shown. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 503, 560 P.2d 828 (1977).

Defendant's claim that sentencing judge was biased, depriving him of his constitutional right to have an impartial judge determine his sentence, can only be reviewed for actual bias by the sentencing judge because defendant failed to file a motion to disqualify the sentencing judge in a timely manner, thereby waiving his argument that the sentencing judge should have recused himself based on an appearance of partiality. People v. Dobler, 2015 COA 25, 369 P.3d 686.

Because prosecutor did not argue to the trial court that the motion was untimely and court did not consider the timeliness issue and further because the motion to recuse was triggered by comments the trial judge made at sentencing, good cause existed for the late filing. People v. Barton, 121 P.3d 230 (Colo. App. 2004).

Timeliness and sufficiency of motion and affidavit deemed questions of law. Whether the motion is timely and whether it sufficiently states grounds for disqualification are questions of law subject to plenary review. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 503, 560 P.2d 828 (1977).

A motion for recusal must be verified and supported by affidavits of at least two credible witnesses not related to defendant. People v. Grenemyer, 827 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1992).

Whether recusal is required will depend on whether defendant's motion and supporting affidavits set forth legally sufficient facts upon which bias or prejudice may be implied. James v. People, 727 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1986); People v. Grenemyer, 827 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1992).

And facts in affidavits and motion taken as true. As a matter of judicial policy courts must take as true, for purposes of a motion to disqualify, facts stated in the affidavits and motion. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 503, 560 P.2d 828 (1977); People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981).

The facts set forth in affidavits supporting a motion to disqualify a judge are not subject to a trial court's inquiry, but are presumed to be true. Smith v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1981); People v. Cook, 22 P.3d 947 (Colo. App. 2000); Kane v. County Court Jefferson County, 192 P.3d 443 (Colo. App. 2008).

Thus, the trial judge engaging in this inquiry cannot pass upon the truth or falsity of statements of fact in the motion and supporting affidavits. Estep v. Hardeman, 705 P.2d 523 (Colo. 1985); S.S. v. Wakefield, 764 P.2d 70 (Colo. 1988); Brewster v. District Court, 811 P.2d 812 (Colo. 1991).

The judge must confine the analysis to the four corners of the motion and supporting affidavits, and then determine as a matter of law whether they allege legally sufficient facts for disqualification. Klinck v. District Court, 876 P.2d 1270 (Colo. 1994).

Recusal not discretionary where affidavits sufficiently allege prejudice. The trial judge has no discretion in the matter of recusing himself upon finding the affidavits sufficient under the rule to allege prejudice. He immediately loses all jurisdiction in the matter except to grant the change. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 503, 560 P.2d 828 (1977); Brewster v. District Court, 811 P.2d 812 (Colo. 1991).

Test of sufficiency of motion and affidavit. The test of the legal sufficiency of a motion to disqualify a judge is whether the motion and affidavits state facts from which it may reasonably be inferred that the respondent judge has a bias or prejudice that will in all probability prevent him or her from dealing fairly with the petitioner. People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981); Smith v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1981); People v. Baca, 633 P.2d 528 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Hrapski, 718 P.2d 1050 (Colo. 1986).

To be sufficient, the affidavits must state facts from which the respondent judge's prejudice may reasonably be inferred. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 503, 560 P.2d 828 (1977).

Test is applied in Estep v. Hardeman, 705 P.2d 523 (Colo. 1985).

There can be no presumption that a judge is intimidated by the outrage of the community in which the judge serves. Thus, motion for disqualification properly denied where there was no allegation that the judge was in fact intimidated by the community's animosity toward the defendant. People v. Vecchio, 819 P.2d 533 (Colo. App. 1991).

Prejudgments regarding the quality of evidence to be heard are not consistent with the duty of a trial court to reach an unbiased decision after weighing all the evidence. Estep v. Hardeman, 705 P.2d 523 (Colo. 1985).

Subjective conclusion of party not sufficient. Neither § 16-6-201 nor section (b) of this rule requires disqualification of a judge on the basis of a party's subjective conclusion that the judge is not impartial because of acts or statements made by the party. Smith v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1981).

And motion without supporting affidavits or facts insufficient. Where defendant filed no affidavits and alleged no facts which would reasonably indicate that the judge was interested or prejudiced with respect to the case, the parties, or counsel, the defendant's motion to disqualify the judge was insufficient as a matter of law. People v. Johnson, 634 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1981).

The mere allegation that a trial judge engaged in an ex parte communication with a doctor who would testify as an expert witness is not alone sufficient to require recusal of the trial judge. Comiskey v. District Ct., 926 P.2d 539 (Colo. 1996).

Recusal not required where the trial court's statements merely consisted of comments about a second co-defendant as part of the consideration of mitigating factors during sentencing of first co-defendant, and not statements expressing bias or prejudice about the second co-defendant, especially when judge specifically refused at the co-defendant's sentencing hearing to speculate as to co-defendant's role in the crimes charged. People v. Cook, 22 P.3d 947 (Colo. App. 2000).

An appearance of impropriety cannot be inferred simply because the judge was a member of the general public that witnessed the fire started by defendant or because the judge assisted in general relief efforts. People v. Barton, 121 P.3d 230 (Colo. App. 2004).

However, numerous other allegations of the judge's personal involvement and comments made by the judge during the sentencing hearing about his or her personal experience presented legally sufficient basis to create the appearance of prejudice that could have prevented the judge from dealing fairly with the defendant. People v. Barton, 121 P.3d 230 (Colo. App. 2004).

Trial judge's presence in courtroom in which defendant allegedly threatened a witness did not require recusal. A mere order for an investigation of threat did not create a potential conflict of interest or indicate that the judge might become a witness. People v. Hagos, 250 P.3d 596 (Colo. App. 2009).

Defendant's attorney may file affidavit in support of motion for substitution of judge where the attorney-affiant is not related to the defendant within the third degree by blood, adoption, or marriage. People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981).

To disqualify, suit against judge must be probably successful. To create an adverse interest sufficient to disqualify a trial judge from presiding over a criminal trial, a suit brought against him by the accused person must have some probability of success. Watson v. People, 155 Colo. 357, 394 P.2d 737 (1964), cert. denied, 380 U.S. 966, 85 S. Ct. 1111, 14 L. Ed. 2d 156 (1965).

Challenged judge may request hearing before another judge. A challenged judge in juvenile delinquency matters may, after self-disqualification, request a hearing before another judge on the issues raised in respondent's motion and affidavits. People in Interest of A.L.C., 660 P.2d 917 (Colo. App. 1982).

Referring a motion for substitution to another judge for decision is not reversible error, even if it is not the procedure contemplated by this rule. Comiskey v. District Ct., 926 P.2d 539 (Colo. 1996).

Disqualification where court only determining matters of law. It is unnecessary to determine whether a trial judge errs in not disqualifying himself where the error committed by him is not prejudicial error in that there is no disagreement over the facts and the sole material determinations to be made by the trial court are matters of law, in which case an appellate court is to determine whether the trial court correctly ruled on such matters. Robran v. People ex rel. Smith, 173 Colo. 378, 479 P.2d 976 (1971).

A judge's bias or prejudice against defense counsel, while not generally requiring recusal, may so require when the judge's manifestation of hostility or ill will is apparent from the motion and affidavits and indicates the absence of the impartiality required for a fair trial. Brewster v. District Court, 811 P.2d 812 (Colo. 1991).

A government attorney is not an "attorney otherwise engaged in the case" unless he has worked on it directly. While a partner in a law firm is said to be ''engaged'' in every case in which a member of his firm represents a party because he has a financial interest in the case's outcome, a government lawyer's compensation and clientele are set, and the prestige of the office as a whole is not greatly affected by the outcome of a particular case. Smith v. Beckman, 683 P.2d 1214 (Colo. App. 1984).

Judges are not disqualified solely on the basis that they were formerly employed by the prosecutor's office. Instead, when employed by that office, the judge to be disqualified must have performed some role in the case or have obtained actual knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts of the case. People v. Julien, 47 P.3d 1194 (Colo. 2002).

Where defendant failed to submit affidavits in accordance with requirements of § 16-2-201 and section (b) of this rule, and supplied allegations himself that record did not verify, there were insufficient grounds for disqualification. People v. Grenemyer, 827 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where defendant failed to present evidence to substantiate his claim that the judge knew of circumstances that would disqualify him from presiding in case and improperly filed a motion for case transfer with another trial court judge but failed to inform presiding judge of defendant's motion or to seek a decision on such motion, there were insufficient grounds for disqualification. People v. Harmon, 3 P.3d 480 (Colo. App. 2000).

Mere filing of complaint with the judicial performance commission, without more, does not establish sufficient grounds for recusal. Further, county court judge's decision to recuse herself in seven prior cases does not lead to the conclusion that she should permanently recuse herself in all cases involving the attorneys. Kane v. County Court Jefferson County, 192 P.3d 443 (Colo. App. 2008).

Rule 22. Time of Motion to Transfer

A motion for a change of venue or for a change of judge under these Rules may be made at or before arraignment or, for good cause shown for a late filing, at any time before trial.

VI. TRIAL

Rule 23. Trial by Jury or to the Court

(a) (1) Every person accused of a felony has the right to be tried by a jury of twelve. Before the jury is sworn, the defendant may, except in class 1 felonies, elect a jury of less than twelve but no fewer than six, with the consent of the court.

(2) Every person accused of a misdemeanor has the right to be tried by a jury of six. Before the jury is sworn, the defendant may elect a jury of less than six but no fewer than three, with the consent of the court.

(3) Every person accused of a class 1 or class 2 petty offense has the right to be tried by a jury of three, if he or she:

(I) Files a written jury demand within 21 days after entry of a plea;

(II) Tenders twenty-five dollars to the court within 21 days after entry of a plea, unless such fee is waived by the judge because of the indigence of the defendant. If the charge is dismissed or the defendant is acquitted of the charge, or if the defendant, having paid the jury fee, files with the court, at least 7 days before the scheduled trial date a written waiver of jury trial, the jury fee shall be returned to the defendant.

(4) The jury, in matters involving class 1 and class 2 petty offenses, shall consist of a greater number than three, not to exceed six, if requested by the defendant in the jury demand.

(5) (I) The person accused of a felony or misdemeanor may, with the consent of the prosecution, waive a trial by jury in writing or orally in court. Trial shall then be to the court.

(II) The court shall not proceed with a trial to the court after waiver of jury trial without first determining:

(a) That the defendant's waiver is voluntary;

(b) That the defendant understands that:

(i) The waiver would apply to all issues that might otherwise need to be determined by a jury including those issues requiring factual findings at sentencing;

(ii) The jury would be composed of a certain number of people;

(iii) A jury verdict must be unanimous;

(iv) In a trial to the court, the judge alone would decide the verdict;

(v) The choice to waive a jury trial is the defendant's alone and may be made contrary to counsel's advice.

(III) In a proceeding where the waiver of a jury trial is part of a determination preceding the entry of a guilty or nolo contendere plea, the court need only make the determinations required by Rule 11(b) and not those required by this rule.

(6) A defendant may not withdraw a voluntary and knowing waiver of trial by jury as a matter of right, but the court, with the consent of the prosecution, may permit withdrawal of the waiver prior to the commencement of the trial.

(7) In any case in which a jury has been sworn to try a case, and any juror by reason of illness or other cause becomes unable to continue until a verdict is reached, the court may excuse such juror. Except in class 1 felonies, if no alternate juror is available to replace such juror, the defendant and the prosecution, at any time before verdict, may stipulate in writing or on the record in open court, with approval of the court, that the jury shall consist of less than twelve but no fewer than six in felony cases, and less than six but no fewer than three in misdemeanor cases, and the jurors thus remaining shall proceed to try the case and determine the issues.

(8) All jury verdicts must be unanimous.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

Amended Rule 23(a)(5) reflects the legislature's 1989 decision to condition a defendant's waiver of a jury trial upon the consent of the prosecution. See 1989 S.B. 246, Section 35, amending Section 16-10-101, C.R.S. See also People v. District Court, 731 P.2d 720, 722 (Colo. 1987). Also, consistent with Colorado caselaw, the amended rule would permit the waiver of a jury trial even in a class 1 felony case. See People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159, 209-12 (Colo. 1990).

Annotator's note. For other annotations concerning the right to trial by jury, see § 23 of art. II, Colo. Const., and § 18-1-406.

Section 18-1-406 (1) and this rule, which provide for six jurors in misdemeanor cases, are constitutional under § 23 of art. II of the Colorado Constitution. People v. Rodriguez, 112 P.3d 693 (Colo. 2005).

Right to waive trial by jury is substantive in nature. Garcia v. People, 200 Colo. 413, 615 P.2d 698 (1980).

Rule conflicts with § 18-1-406. Section (a)(5) of this rule and § 18-1-406 (2) are not reconcilable and are in direct conflict with each other. Garcia v. People, 200 Colo. 413, 615 P.2d 698 (1980).

And § 18-1-406 (2) controls over section (a)(5) of this rule, so that the consent of the prosecuting attorney cannot be imposed as a condition on right to waive trial by jury. Garcia v. People, 200 Colo. 413, 615 P.2d 698 (1980).

Defendant must personally waive right to jury. The plain meaning of section (a)(5) requires that a defendant personally waive his right to a jury trial and that a statement by his counsel does not operate as a waiver. Rice v. People, 193 Colo. 270, 565 P.2d 940 (1977); People v. Evans, 44 Colo. App. 288, 612 P.2d 1153 (1980); Moore v. People, 707 P.2d 990 (Colo. 1985).

A waiver must be understandingly, voluntarily, and deliberately made. A defendant in a criminal case may waive his right to a jury trial; however, that waiver must be understandingly, voluntarily, and deliberately made, and a determination of waiver must be a matter of certainty and not implication. People v. Evans, 44 Colo. App. 288, 612 P.2d 1153 (1980); Moore v. People, 707 P.2d 990 (Colo. 1985).

Presumption accorded waiver of jury trial. Where, when the jury was assembled in the courtroom ready for trial, defendants' counsel orally announced that defendants had decided to waive their right to a jury trial, and the court inquired of each defendant if that was their desire and both indicated in the affirmative, and as a further precaution, the court then insisted that a written waiver of jury trial be prepared and be signed by each defendant and their counsel, which was done, it will be presumed that defendants understandingly, voluntarily, and deliberately decided to waive the jury. People v. Fowler, 183 Colo. 300, 516 P.2d 428 (1973).

A defendant is not automatically entitled to an evidentiary hearing on the challenge to an advisement when the advisement did not comply with section (a)(5)(II). Rather, a defendant must allege specific facts suggesting the waiver was not knowing, voluntary, and intelligent. People v. Walker, 2014 CO 6, 318 P.3d 479, cert. denied, __ U.S. __, 135 S. Ct. 112, 190 L. Ed. 2d 88 (2014).

Waiver not constitutional right. The defendant in a criminal case does not have a constitutional right to waive a jury and be tried by the court. People v. Linton, 193 Colo. 64, 565 P.2d 919 (1977).

Effect of waiver. Where the defendant voluntarily and with advice of counsel waived a jury trial, defendant in such circumstances cannot be heard to complain when he creates a situation which necessarily makes the trial judge both the one who decides the admissibility of evidence and the one who renders the verdict. People v. Thompson, 182 Colo. 198, 511 P.2d 909 (1973).

Waiver is effective where defendant fails to present evidence from which it could be reasonably inferred that the waiver was not voluntary, knowing, and intentional. People v. Porterfield, 772 P.2d 638 (Colo. App. 1988).

Jury to be sworn. While there is no explicit statute or rule requiring the administration of an oath to a jury in this state, section (a)(7) of this rule and section (b)(2) and section (e) of Crim. P. 24, implicitly require that a jury will be sworn to try a case. Hollis v. People, 630 P.2d 68 (Colo. 1981).

But delayed swearing not error. Where no prejudice is shown by the delayed swearing of the jury, no objection is made, and the oath is administered before the jury retires to begin its deliberations, the error is harmless. Hollis v. People, 630 P.2d 68 (Colo. 1981).

Juror properly dismissed and replaced. A juror, after being sequestered for eight days, was properly dismissed and replaced with an alternative when the juror was shown to be quite nervous and upset, and no evidence of prejudice against the defendant was shown by the dismissal and replacement of the juror. People v. Evans, 674 P.2d 975 (Colo. App. 1983).

Requirement of written stipulation to jury of less than 12 met. Where defense counsel stipulates to a jury of less than 12 in open court and on the record, the requirement of section (a)(7) that the stipulation be in writing is met. People v. Waters, 641 P.2d 292 (Colo. App. 1981).

Unanimity is required only with respect to the ultimate issue of the defendant's guilt or innocence of the crime charged, and not with respect to alternative means by which the crime was committed. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981).

Although there is a statutory right to a unanimous verdict in criminal cases in Colorado, the state constitution does not explicitly guarantee the right to a unanimous verdict. Nevertheless, there are some cases in which the jury may return a general verdict of guilty when instructed on alternative theories of principal and complicitor liability and in which the state constitution has provided a criminal defendant the right to a unanimous jury verdict. People v. Hall, 60 P.3d 728 (Colo. App. 2002).

Section (a)(5)(II) is intended to require that trial courts conduct on-the-record advisements to defendants, informing them of specific elements of their right to a trial by jury and of certain consequences if they waive that right. People v. Montoya, 251 P.3d 35 (Colo. App. 2010).

Trial court did not substantially comply with section (a)(5)(II)(b) due to omissions in the court's advisement to defendant about the waiver. Nor did the omissions in the advisement merely constitute a ''slip-up'' by the trial court. People v. Montoya, 251 P.3d 35 (Colo. App. 2010).

Advisement regarding waiver was not deficient simply because trial court did not advise defendant of the possible penalties upon conviction. Such an advisement is neither required nor necessary. People v. Montoya, 251 P.3d 35 (Colo. App. 2010).

Where advisement is deficient under section (a)(5)(II), the appropriate remedy is to remand the case to the trial court for an evidentiary hearing to resolve defendant's challenge to the validity of the waiver of a jury trial. People v. Montoya, 251 P.3d 35 (Colo. App. 2010).

The right to a 12-person jury is purely statutory. The sixth and fourteenth amendments to the U.S. Constitution guarantee the right to trial by jury, but do not, nor does the Colorado Constitution guarantee the right to a 12-person jury. People v. Chavez, 791 P.2d 1210 (Colo. App. 1990).

Constitutional right to a jury of 12 lies only with felony cases and does not extend to misdemeanor cases. A defendant in a misdemeanor case does not have a constitutional right under art. II, § 23, of the Colorado Constitution to demand a 12-person jury. People v. Rodriguez, 112 P.3d 693 (Colo. 2005).

The statutory right to a 12-person jury could be waived by counsel's statements. The requirement that a defendant must make a written or oral ''announcement'' of his intention to waive a jury does not extend to a reduction in the number of jurors. People v. Chavez, 791 P.2d 1210 (Colo. App. 1990).

Defense counsel stipulation to a jury of less than 12 in open court and on the record satisfies the statutory requirement that the stipulation must be in writing. People v. Baird, 66 P.3d 183 (Colo. App. 2002).

Applied in Hawkins v. Superior Court, 196 Colo. 86, 580 P.2d 811 (1978); People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981); People v. Andrews, 632 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1981); People v. Norman, 703 P.2d 1261 (Colo. 1985).

Rule 24. Trial Jurors

(a) Orientation And Examination Of Jurors. An orientation and examination shall be conducted to inform prospective jurors about their duties and service and to obtain information about prospective jurors to faciliate an intelligent exercise of challenges for cause and peremptory challenges.

(1) The jury commissioner is authorized to examine and, when appropriate, excuse prospective jurors who do not satisfy the statutory qualifications for jury service, or who are entitled to a postponement, or as otherwise authorized by appropriate court order.

(2) When prospective jurors have reported to the courtroom, the judge shall explain to them in plain and clear language:

(i) The grounds for challenge for cause;

(ii) Each juror's duty to volunteer information that would constitute a disqualification or give rise to a challenge for cause;

(iii) The identities of the parties and their counsel;

(iv) The nature of the case using applicable instructions if available or, alternatively a joint statement of factual information intended to provide a relevant context for the prospective jurors to respond to questions asked of them. Alternatively, at the request of counsel and in the discretion of the judge, counsel may present such information through brief non-argumentative statements;

(v) General legal principles applicable to the case including the presumption of innocence, burden of proof, definition of reasonable doubt, elements of charged offenses and other matters that jurors will be required to consider and apply in deciding the issues.

(3) The judge shall ask prospective jurors questions concerning their qualifications to serve as jurors. The parties or their counsel shall be permitted to ask the prospective jurors additional questions. In the discretion of the judge, juror questionnaires, posterboards and other methods may be used. In order to minimize delay, the judge may reasonably limit the time available to the parties or their counsel for juror examination. The court may limit or terminate repetitious, irrelevant, unreasonably lengthy, abusive or otherwise improper examination.

(4) Jurors shall not be required to disclose personal locating information, such as address or place of business in open court and such information shall not be maintained in files open to the public. The trial judge shall assure that parties and counsel have access to appropriate and necessary locating information.

(5) Once the jury is impaneled, the judge shall again explain in more detail the general principles of law applicable to criminal cases, the procedural guidelines regarding conduct by jurors during the trial, case specific legal principles and definitions of technical or special terms expected to be used during the presentation of the case.

(b) Challenges for Cause.

(1) The court shall sustain a challenge for cause on one or more of the following grounds:

(I) Absence of any qualification prescribed by statute to render a person competent as a juror;

(II) Relationship within the third degree, by blood, adoption, or marriage, to a defendant or to any attorney of record or attorney engaged in the trial of the case;

(III) Standing in the relation of guardian and ward, employer and employee, landlord and tenant, debtor and creditor, or principal and agent to, or being a member of the household of, or associated in business with, or surety on any bond or obligation for, any defendant;

(IV) The juror is or has been a party adverse to the defendant in a civil action, or has complained against or been accused by him in a criminal prosecution;

(V) The juror has served on the grand jury which returned the indictment or on a coroner's jury which inquired into the death of a person whose death is the subject of the indictment or the information, or on any other investigatory body which inquired into the facts of the crime charged;

(VI) The juror was a juror at a former trial arising out of the same factual situation or involving the same defendant;

(VII) The juror was a juror in a civil action against the defendant arising out of the act charged as a crime;

(VIII) The juror was a witness to any matter related to the crime or its prosecution;

(IX) The juror occupies a fiduciary relationship to the defendant or a person alleged to have been injured by the crime or the person on whose complaint the prosecution was instituted;

(X) The existence of a state of mind in a juror manifesting a bias for or against the defendant, or for or against the prosecution, or the acknowledgement of a previously formed or expressed opinion regarding the guilt or innocence of the defendant shall be grounds for disqualification of the juror, unless the court is satisfied that the juror will render an impartial verdict based solely upon the evidence and the instructions of the court;

(XI) [Reserved]

(XII) The juror is an employee of a public law enforcement agency or public defender's office.

(2) If either party desires to introduce evidence, other than the sworn responses of the prospective juror, for the purpose of establishing grounds to disqualify or challenge the juror for cause, such evidence shall be heard and all issues related thereto shall be determined by the court out of the presence of the other prospective jurors. All matters pertaining to the qualifications and competency of the prospective jurors shall be deemed waived by the parties if not raised prior to the swearing in of the jury to try the case, except that the court for good cause shown or upon a motion for mistrial or other relief may hear such evidence during the trial out of the presence of the jury and enter such orders as are appropriate.

(c) Challenge to Pool.

(1) Upon the request of the defendant or the prosecution in advance of the commencement of the trial, the defendant or the prosecution shall be furnished with a list of prospective jurors who will be subject to call in the trial.

(2) Either the prosecution or the defendant may challenge the pool on the ground that there has been a substantial failure to comply with the requirements of the law governing the selection of jurors. Such challenge must be made in writing setting forth the particular ground upon which it is based and shall be accompanied by one or more affidavits specifying the supporting facts and demographic data. The challenge must be filed prior to the swearing in of the jury selected to try the case.

(3) If the court finds the affidavit or affidavits filed under subsection (2) of this section, if true, demonstrate a substantial failure to comply with the ''Uniform Jury Selection and Service Act'', the moving party is entitled to present in support of the motion the testimony of any person responsible for the implementation of the ''Uniform Jury Selection and Service Act.'' Any party may present any records used in the selection and summoning of jurors for service, and any other relevant evidence. If the court determines, by a preponderance of the evidence, that in selecting either a grand jury or a petit jury there has been a substantial failure to comply with the ''Uniform Jury Selection and Service Act'', the court shall discharge the jury panel and stay the proceedings pending the summoning of a new juror pool or dismiss an indictment, information, or complaint, or grant other appropriate relief.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

These changes were made in order to conform Rule 24 to the legislative changes in the Colorado Uniform Jury Selection and Service Act, Sections 13-71-101 to 13-71-145, C.R.S. which became effective January 1, 1990.

(d) Peremptory Challenges.

(1) For purposes of Rule 24 a capital case is a case in which a class 1 felony is charged.

(2) In capital cases the state and the defendant, when there is one defendant, shall each be entitled to ten peremptory challenges. In all other cases where there is one defendant and the punishment may be by imprisonment in a correctional facility, the state and the defendant shall each be entitled to five peremptory challenges, and in all other cases, to three peremptory challenges. If there is more than one defendant, each side shall be entitled to an additional three peremptory challenges for every defendant after the first in capital cases, but not exceeding twenty peremptory challenges to each side; in all other cases, where the punishment may be by imprisonment in a correctional facility, to two additional peremptory challenges for every defendant after the first, not exceeding fifteen peremptory challenges to each side; and in all other cases to one additional peremptory challenge for every defendant after the first, not exceeding ten peremptory challenges to each side. In any case where there are multiple defendants, every peremptory challenge shall be made and considered as the joint peremptory challenge of all defendants. In case of the consolidation of any indictments, informations, complaints, or summons and complaints for trial, such consolidated cases shall be considered, for all purposes concerning peremptory challenges, as though the defendants had been joined in the same indictment, information, complaint, or summons and complaint. When trial is held on a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity, the number of peremptory challenges shall be the same as if trial were on the issue of substantive guilt.

(3) For good cause shown, the court at any time may add peremptory challenges to either or both sides.

(4) Peremptory challenges shall be exercised by counsel, alternately, the first challenge to be exercised by the prosecution. A prospective juror so challenged shall be excused, and another juror from the panel shall replace the juror excused. Counsel waiving the exercise of further peremptory challenges as to those jurors then in the jury box may thereafter exercise peremptory challenges only as to jurors subsequently called into the jury box without, however, reducing the total number of peremptory challenges available to either side.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The rule is changed to permit, but not to require, the court to allow the simultaneous questioning of more than 12 potential jurors and one or two alternate jurors at one time. Further, the rule permits, but does not require, the court to allow the exercise of peremptory challenges, in writing, in its discretion, as is done in civil cases. This rule change is intended to apply to both district and county court criminal cases.

(e) Alternate Jurors. The court may direct that a sufficient number of jurors in addition to the regular jury be called and impaneled to sit as alternate jurors. Alternate jurors in the order in which they are called shall replace jurors who become unable or disqualified to perform their duties. Alternate jurors shall be drawn in the same manner, shall have the same qualifications, shall be subject to the same examination and challenges, shall take the same oath, and shall have the same functions, powers, facilities, and privileges as the regular jurors. An alternate juror shall not be discharged until the jury renders its verdict or until such time as determined by the court. When alternate jurors are impaneled, each side is entitled to one peremptory challenge for each alternate to be selected, and such additional peremptory challenges may be exercised as to any prospective jurors. In a case in which a class 1, 2 or 3 felony is charged and in any case in which a felony listed in section 24-4.1-302 (1), C.R.S. is charged, the court, at the request of the defendant or the prosecution, shall impanel at least one alternate juror.

(f) Custody of Jury.

(1) The court should only sequester jurors in extraordinary cases. Otherwise, (J)urors should be permitted to separate during all trial recesses, both before and after the case has been submitted to the jury for deliberation. Cautionary instructions as to their conduct during all recesses shall be given to the jurors by the court.

(2) The jurors shall be in the custody of the bailiff whenever they are deliberating and at any other time as ordered by the court.

(3) If the jurors are permitted to separate during any recess of the court, the court shall order them to return at a day and hour appointed by the court for the purpose of continuing the trial, or for resuming their deliberations if the case has been submitted to the jury.

(g) Juror Questions. Jurors shall be allowed to submit written questions to the court for the court to ask of witnesses during trial, in compliance with procedures established by the trial court. The trial court shall have the discretion to prohibit or limit questioning in a particular trial for reasons related to the severity of the charges, the presence of significant suppressed evidence or for other good cause. After giving the parties notice and an opportunity to be heard on each question, the court shall determine whether to ask the submitted question. The trial court shall permit appropriate follow-up questions from the parties within the scope of the jurors' questions.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Challenges for Cause in Criminal Trials'', see 12 Colo. Law. 1799 (1983). For article, ''Criminal Procedure'', which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with co-conspirators and voir dire, see 61 Den. L.J. 310 (1984). For article, ''Curbing the Prosecutor's Abuse of the Peremptory Challenge'', see 14 Colo. Law. 1629 (1985). For article, ''Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986'', which discusses cases relating to peremptory challenges on the basis of race, see 15 Colo. Law. 1609 (1986). For article, ''Criminal Jury Selection After People v. Novotny'', see 44 Colo. Law. 41 (Feb. 2015).

Standard of review is "abuse of discretion". Phrases used in prior case law such as ''clear abuse of discretion'' and ''gross abuse of discretion'' are deemed to express this standard and have the same meaning. Carrillo v. People, 974 P.2d 478 (Colo. 1999).

Defendant entitled to impartial jury. It is fundamental to the right to a fair trial that a defendant be provided with an impartial jury. Nailor v. People, 200 Colo. 30, 612 P.2d 79 (1980); People v. Gurule, 628 P.2d 99 (Colo. 1981); People v. Collins, 730 P.2d 293 (Colo. 1986).

Although a defendant is entitled to a trial by a fair and impartial jury, he is not entitled to any particular juror. People v. Johnson, 757 P.2d 1098 (Colo. App. 1988).

The right to an impartial jury does not require counsel be granted unlimited voir dire examination. People v. O'Neill, 803 P.2d 164 (Colo. 1990).

And discrimination in summoning of jurors may be ground for reversal. Counsel may request, in the presence of the presiding judge, or the judge himself may direct, that only good and lawful men be summoned as jurors; but to discriminate in favor of or against any class of citizens eligible for jury duty would be a grievous wrong. Whether such intermeddling would be ground for reversal depends upon the circumstances of the case. Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889).

Court's procedure of calling prospective jurors by their juror number or seat number did not violate defendant's right to presumption of innocence or right to a public trial. Since court indicated to the jury that the procedure was ''his policy'' to respect the jurors' privacy, the question of defendant's guilt or innocence was not undermined. Additionally, because court's procedure allowed defendant access to the jurors' names and other information, the process was not an ''anonymous jury'' requiring the court to demonstrate good cause. Perez v. People, 2013 CO 22, 302 P.3d 222; Rizo v. People, 2013 CO 23, 302 P.3d 232; Robles v. People, 2013 CO 24, 302 P.3d 229.

Qualified person should not be excused except for statutory reason. Jury service being an obligation of citizenship, the court should not excuse a person otherwise qualified for jury service for any reason short of the statutory criteria of ''undue hardship, extreme inconvenience, or public necessity'' set out in § 13-71-112 (2). People ex rel. Faulk v. District Court, 667 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1983).

Jury to be sworn. While there is no explicit statute or rule requiring the administration of an oath to a jury in this state, section (b)(2) and section (e) of this rule and Crim. P. 23(a)(7) implicitly require that a jury will be sworn to try a case. Hollis v. People, 630 P.2d 68 (Colo. 1981).

And delayed swearing not necessarily error. Where no prejudice is shown by the delayed swearing of the jury, no objection is made, and the oath is administered before the jury retires to begin its deliberations, the error is harmless. Hollis v. People, 630 P.2d 68 (Colo. 1981).

Defendant who failed to make a timely objection forfeited the right to a jury free of the presiding judge's spouse. It is the responsibility of the litigants — not the judge — to preserve issues for review. People v. Richardson, 2018 COA 120, __ P.3d __.

A ruling by the trial court which calls an alternative juror to replace a juror who becomes ''disqualified'' to perform his duties is a matter within the discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed on review unless an abuse of discretion is shown. People v. Johnson, 757 P.2d 1098 (Colo. App. 1988).

It is within the trial court's prerogative to give considerable weight to a potential juror's statement that he or she can fairly and impartially serve on the case. People v. Montoya, 942 P.2d 1287 (Colo. App. 1996).

This rule is not in agreement with § 16-10-105 because that section requires that jurors may be replaced with alternate jurors before deliberations begin and not after. Since the court rules govern practice and procedure in civil and criminal cases while the statute affects the substantive right to a fair trial, § 16-10-105 is the operative provision in deciding that the trial court erred by applying section (e) of this rule and allowing the replacement of a regular juror with an alternate juror after the jury had begun its deliberations People v. Montoya, 942 P.2d 1287 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court's use of random selection to choose alternate juror was error, but, in the absence of any prejudice demonstrated against the defendant, it was harmless error. People v. Tippett, 733 P.2d 1183 (Colo. 1987).

The purpose of seating an alternate juror is to have available another juror when, through unforeseen circumstances, a juror is unable to continue to serve and the trial court is in the best position to evaluate whether a juror is unable to serve, and its decision to excuse a juror will not be disturbed absent a gross abuse of discretion. People v. Abbott, 690 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1984); People v. Christopher, 896 P.2d 876 (Colo. 1995).

Applied in Raullerson v. People, 157 Colo. 462, 404 P.2d 149 (1965); Reed v. People, 171 Colo. 421, 467 P.2d 809 (1970); People v. Bercillio, 179 Colo. 383, 500 P.2d 975 (1972); People v. Fink, 41 Colo. App. 47, 579 P.2d 659 (1978); Kaltenbach v. Julesburg Sch. Dist. Re-1, 43 Colo. App. 150, 603 P.2d 955 (1979); People v. Velarde, 200 Colo. 374, 616 P.2d 104 (1980); People v. Gonzales, 631 P.2d 1170 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Rivers, 727 P.2d 394 (Colo. App. 1986).

II. EXAMINATION.

Purpose of voir dire examination is to enable counsel to determine whether any prospective jurors are possessed of beliefs which would cause them to be biased in such a manner as to prevent his client from obtaining a fair and impartial trial. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974); People v. Heller, 698 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1984), rev'd on other grounds, 712 P.2d 1023 (Colo. 1986); People v. Collins, 730 P.2d 293 (Colo. 1986).

While a defendant does not have a constitutional right to voir dire a prospective jury panel, such right is expressly granted under rules of criminal procedure. People v. Lefebre, 981 P.2d 650 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 5 P.3d 295 (Colo. 2000).

Court may limit, but may not deny, the defendant's right to voir dire. People v. Lefebre, 981 P.2d 650 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 5 P.3d 295 (Colo. 2000).

The court's error in denying defense counsel the right to question a prospective juror who was excused by the court does not constitute prejudice requiring a reversal of the conviction where defendant does not allege that the jury that was seated was unfair or partial and where the prosecution did not exhaust its peremptory challenges and thus could have removed the prospective juror even if the court had not excused him. People v. Evans, 987 P.2d 845 (Colo. App. 1998).

The knowledge or ignorance of prospective jurors concerning questions of law is generally not a proper subject of inquiry for voir dire. People v. Collins, 730 P.2d 293 (Colo. 1986).

Restrictions within court's discretion. Restrictions on the scope of the voir dire examination are within the trial court's discretion, and will not be reversed on appeal absent an abuse of that discretion. People v. Saiz, 660 P.2d 2 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Rivers, 727 P.2d 394 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Reaud, 821 P.2d 870 (Colo. App. 1991).

If there is firm and clear evidence that a potential juror holds an actual bias that is unlikely to change through education concerning the trial process, exposure to basic principles governing criminal trials, or questioning by the court or the parties, the judge is permitted to excuse that juror without additional questioning. Under section (a)(3) of this rule, a trial judge must ordinarily permit voir dire of jurors in circumstances that could involve actual bias. Such questioning is useful to determine whether the juror can set aside bias and decide the case based on the evidence presented and the court's instructions. However, the trial need not waste time on further questioning where there is firm and clear evidence that a juror is unfit to serve under section (b)(1)(X) of this rule or if there is implied bias under sections (b)(1)(I) through (IX) or (b)(1)(XII) of this rule. People v. Lefebre, 5 P.3d 295 (Colo. 2000).

Trial court abused its discretion in dismissing jurors without allowing the defense to question them where the record did not contain firm and clear evidence that the jurors removed for cause held actual biases that they could not set aside. The following responses on a written questionnaire were insufficient to support dismissal for cause without further questioning: Juror's assertion that he could not be fair because his brother had been convicted of the same offense with which defendant was charged; juror's assertion that a prior criminal background would prevent him from being fair; and juror's statement that he could not be fair because his sister serves as an expert witness and he had not liked the district attorney's treatment of her on the witness stand. People v. Lefebre, 5 P.3d 295 (Colo. 2000).

Propriety of questions within discretion of trial court. The propriety of questions to potential jurors on voir dire is within the discretion of the trial court, and its ruling thereon will not be disturbed on appeal unless an abuse of that discretion is shown. People v. Buckner, 180 Colo. 65, 504 P.2d 669 (1972); People v. Collins, 730 P.2d 293 (Colo. 1986); People v. Shipman, 747 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1987).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in disallowing one of defense counsel's questions that went to the defendant's theory of the case. The court permitted other questions that allowed the defendant to determine whether potential jurors held certain attitudes toward the defendant's affirmative defense. People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Rule expressly authorizes counsel to directly question prospective jurors and the judge cannot require counsel to submit questions to prospective jurors through the judge. The judge may, however, limit counsel's questions if they are unduly repetitious, irrelevant, or otherwise improper. People v. Reaud, 821 P.2d 870 (Colo. App. 1991).

The court's blanket prohibition against questions regarding a prospective juror's understanding of an instruction is an abuse of discretion where the court makes no inquiry as to the nature of the questions. People v. Reaud, 821 P.2d 870 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court's failure to conduct examination not plain error. Trial court's failure to explain to potential jurors the qualifications for jury service, the grounds for challenges for cause, and juror's duty to inform the court of anything that would disqualify them from service was not plain error when no party objected. People v. Page, 907 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court's questioning and "rehabilitation" of prospective jurors was not improper where the questions were directed to eliciting information on the subject of the prospective jurors' possible bias and were no more leading than necessary. People v. James, 981 P.2d 637 (Colo. App. 1998).

No abuse of discretion to deny the release of juror contact information when defendant did not present sufficient evidence of juror misconduct. People v. Bohl, 2018 COA 152, __ P.3d __.

III. CHALLENGES FOR CAUSE.

A. In General.

Distinguishing between challenges. Courts distinguish between challenges ''propter affectum'', those relating to a juror's bias, prejudice, interest, etc., and challenges ''propter defectum'', those relating to the absence of some purely statutory qualification such as residence, citizenship, property owning, taxpaying, etc., holding that disregard of the former constitutes reversible error but not disregard of the latter. Also, in case of the former, prejudice to the litigant may be assumed; in case of the latter, it must be shown. Exceptions to this rule are not wanting, but these rest generally upon special facts and are supported by sound reason.

Harris v. People, 113 Colo. 511, 160 P.2d 372 (1945).

Examination and disposal of challenges within discretion of court. The method and order of procedure in ascertaining the qualifications of veniremen and in disposing of challenges for cause are commonly in the discretion of the court. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Carson, 21 Colo. App. 604, 123 P. 680 (1912).

But discretion is not an arbitrary one, and a party is not to be unreasonably denied a challenge to which he shows himself entitled, because his right in such case is a substantial right which it is not within the discretion of the court to take away. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Carson, 21 Colo. App. 604, 123 P. 680 (1912).

Determination of the trial court upon a question of fact is not subject to review in challenges to jurors. Union Gold Mining Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat'l Bank, 2 Colo. 565 (1875), aff'd, 96 U.S. 640, 24 L. Ed. 648 (1877).

Challenge need not be made immediately when grounds become apparent. The challenge of a particular juror for cause need not be made at the very time when the ground of challenge becomes apparent and before proceeding to the examination of another juror. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Carson, 21 Colo. App. 604, 123 P. 680 (1912).

Trial court may conduct challenges for cause in open court. While the better practice is to hear challenges for cause outside the prospective jurors' presence as espoused by the American Bar Association, a trial court retains discretion to conduct challenges in open court. However, the court may abuse its discretion depending upon the reason for the challenge, the overall tenor or contentiousness of the voir dire examination, and any other circumstances pertinent to the issue. People v. Flockhart, 2013 CO 42, 304 P.3d 227.

No dismissal if juror will render impartial verdict. No juror can be dismissed for cause if the trial court is satisfied the juror will render an impartial verdict. People v. Romero, 42 Colo. App. 20, 593 P.2d 365 (1978).

No abuse of discretion to deny challenge for cause where trial court conducted inquiry of juror who was related to sheriff's posse members and was satisfied with juror's specific assurances that she could render a fair and impartial verdict. People v. Goodpaster, 742 P.2d 965 (Colo. App. 1987).

No abuse of discretion to deny challenge for cause where trial court concluded that prospective juror, who was a neighbor of police officer who would be testifying, specifically stated that he would not give more or less credibility to the officer's testimony as a result. People v. Loggins, 981 P.2d 630 (Colo. App. 1998).

No abuse of discretion in denying challenge for cause where trial court determined that first cousin of investigating police department's chief of police who indicated that while her relationship with the mother of the chief could create a hardship for her she could nonetheless be impartial. People v. Pasillas-Sanchez, 214 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2009).

Missing portion of transcript of voir dire proceedings does not automatically require reversal. Where trial court held a hearing to reconstruct, to the extent possible, the relevant portion of voir dire, the court's denial of the challenge for cause was upheld. People v. Loggins, 981 P.2d 630 (Colo. App. 1998).

Prejudice is shown if defendant exhausts all of his peremptory challenges and one of those challenges is expended on a juror who should have been removed for cause. A defendant is not required to request an additional peremptory challenge to preserve this issue on appeal. People v. Prator, 833 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1992).

Court properly denied challenge for cause of a prospective juror because, although the juror stated that she basically believed children to be honest, she also indicated she would apply the principles of law given by the court to their testimony. People v. Howard, 886 P.2d 296 (Colo. App. 1994).

Defendant must exercise reasonable diligence to determine whether a prospective juror should have been excused. If defendant fails to do so, he or she is considered to have waived his or her opportunity to raise any matters pertaining to the qualifications and competency of the excluded juror on appeal. People v. Asberry, 172 P.3d 927 (Colo. App. 2007).

B. Effect of Juror's Opinion or Interest.

Section (b)(1)(X) of this rule does not conflict with the sixth amendment to the United States Constitution, which secures to persons charged with crime the right to be tried by an impartial jury. Jones v. People, 2 Colo. 351 (1874).

Defendant has right to ask questions to show existence of grounds for challenge. The defendant has a right to propound questions to the proposed jurors, to show not only that there exists proper grounds for a challenge for cause but also to elicit facts to enable him to decide whether or not he would make a peremptory challenge. Union Pac. Ry. v. Jones, 21 Colo. 340, 40 P. 891 (1895); Jones v. People, 23 Colo. 276, 47 P. 275 (1896); Zancannelli v. People, 63 Colo. 252, 165 P. 612 (1917).

The mere expression of some concern by a prospective juror regarding a certain aspect or issue of a case should not result in automatic dismissal of that prospective juror for cause. Likewise, dismissal for cause is not required merely because a prospective juror answers questions in a way that might indicate some bias, prejudice, or preconceived notion.

The decisive question is whether it is possible for the prospective juror to set aside his or her preconceived notions and decide the case based on the evidence and the court's instructions. In determining whether a prospective juror can do so, the trial court should consider all available facts, including the prospective juror's assurances of fairness and impartiality. People v. Arko, 159 P.3d 713 (Colo. App. 2006), rev'd on other grounds, 183 P.3d 555 (Colo. 2008).

Challenge for cause should be granted where prospective juror is unwilling or unable to accept the basic principles of law applicable to the case and to render a fair and impartial verdict based upon the trial. People v. Russo, 713 P.2d 356 (Colo. 1986); People v. Esch, 786 P.2d 462 (Colo. App. 1989).

Juror who is not impartial should be dismissed. If there is sufficient reason to question the impartiality of the juror, the trial court should grant a challenge for cause and dismiss the juror. Nailor v. People, 200 Colo. 30, 612 P.2d 79 (1980); People v. Russo, 677 P.2d 386 (Colo. App. 1983).

To ensure that the right to a fair trial is protected, the trial court must excuse prejudiced or biased persons from the jury. Nailor v. People, 200 Colo. 30, 612 P.2d 79 (1980); People v. Gurule, 628 P.2d 99 (Colo. 1981).

If the trial court has genuine doubt about the juror's ability to be impartial, it should resolve the doubt by sustaining the challenge. People v. Russo, 713 P.2d 356 (Colo. 1986).

Or who will not follow court's instructions. A prospective juror should be excused if it appears doubtful that he will be governed by the instructions of the court as to the law of the case. Morgan v. People, 624 P.2d 1331 (Colo. 1981).

And failure to excuse prejudiced juror is abuse of discretion. Where a juror repeatedly indicated that he would have difficulty applying the principles that the burden of proof rests solely upon the prosecution to establish the guilt of the accused, the trial court abused its discretion by failing to excuse him. Morgan v. People, 624 P.2d 1331 (Colo. 1981).

Where the prospective juror patently demonstrates a fixed prejudgment about the merits of the case and an unwillingness to accept and apply those principles that form the bedrock of a fair trial, the trial court errs in refusing to excuse that juror when casually challenged. People v. Gurule, 628 P.2d 99 (Colo. 1981).

But denying challenge to juror with bias against handguns not abuse. In a prosecution for armed robbery, the court does not abuse its discretion in denying a challenge for cause to potential juror who admits his long-standing bias against handguns, where the juror is questioned extensively by the court and defendant's counsel on his opinions concerning handguns and the probable effect of his opinions and experiences on his evaluation of the evidence, where the juror reveals no enmity or bias toward the defendant or the state, and where he expresses an understanding of the principles upon which a fair trial is based. People v. Ward, 673 P.2d 47 (Colo. App. 1983).

General prejudice against crime does not disqualify. Under this rule a general prejudice against crime, or prejudice against the particular crime with which the accused stands charged, does not disqualify a juror. Smith v. People, 39 Colo. 202, 88 P. 1072 (1907); Ausmus v. People, 47 Colo. 167, 107 P. 204 (1910); Forte v. People, 57 Colo. 450, 140 P. 789 (1914); McGonigal v. People, 74 Colo. 270, 220 P. 1003 (1923); Shank v. People, 79 Colo. 576, 247 P. 559 (1926); Fleagle v. People, 87 Colo. 532, 289 P. 1078 (1930).

Nor does a financial interest not directly affected. Where, in a prosecution of bank officers for a conspiracy to defraud the bank, certain jurors, though creditors of the bank or financially interested therein at the time of its failure, testified that they had no bias or prejudice against the defendants, and any interest they might have in the bank's affairs could not be affected in any way by the litigation, they were not disqualified. Imboden v. People, 40 Colo. 142, 90 P. 608 (1907).

And fact that jurors have read newspaper articles relating to a case does not disqualify them as jurors. Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972).

Even though juror may have preconceived notion as to the guilt or innocence of an accused he may not be automatically disqualified from serving. Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972).

That a person has an opinion or impression concerning the guilt or innocence of the accused which can only be removed by evidence is by no means conclusive of his disqualification to serve as a juror. Solander v. People, 2 Colo. 48 (1873); Union Gold Mining Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat'l Bank, 2 Colo. 565 (1875), aff'd, 96 U.S. 640, 24 L. Ed. 648 (1877); Jones v. People, 6 Colo. 452, 45 Am. R. 526 (1882); Denver, S. P. & P. R. R. v. Driscoll, 12 Colo. 520, 21 P. 708, 13 Am. St. R. 243 (1889); Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889); Carroll v. People, 177 Colo. 288, 494 P.2d 80 (1972); Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972); People v. Buckner, 180 Colo. 65, 504 P.2d 669 (1972).

Court did not abuse discretion in denying challenge for cause for juror who expressed some doubts about being fair and impartial and being biased against the defendant, but also repeatedly stated she thought she could perform her duties and keep an open mind when hearing the evidence. People v. Doubleday, 2012 COA 141M, 369 P.3d 595, rev'd on other grounds, 2016 CO 3, 364 P.3d 193.

On the theory that news report will not control judgment. As a rule, citizens who are fit to try criminal cases will not allow previous opinions based upon unofficial reports to control their judgment against the sworn evidence in a case. Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889); Power v. People, 17 Colo. 178, 28 P. 1121 (1892).

Where the voir dire amply demonstrates the absence of prejudice and the ability of the jurors to set aside any opinions that they may have received from the news media to the end that the case could be determined on the law and on the evidence, reversal is not called for. Sergent v. People, 177 Colo. 354, 497 P.2d 983 (1972).

Where the record contained no evidence that any juror was prejudiced by having read anything in the newspapers, the denial of a challenge for cause was clearly within the trial court's discretion. People v. McKay, 191 Colo. 381, 553 P.2d 380 (1976).

The fact that a juror entertains an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of a defendant does not disqualify him, if the court believes that he can and will disregard that opinion and return a verdict based solely upon the evidence. McGonigal v. People, 74 Colo. 270, 220 P. 1003 (1923); Johns v. Shinall, 103 Colo. 381, 86 P.2d 605 (1939); Goldsberry v. People, 149 Colo. 431, 369 P.2d 787 (1962); People v. Buckner, 180 Colo. 65, 504 P.2d 669 (1972).

So long as the court is satisfied, from an examination of the prospective juror or from other evidence, that the juror will render an impartial verdict according to the evidence admitted at trial and the court's instructions of law, the court may permit the juror to serve. People v. Gurule, 628 P.2d 99 (Colo. 1981).

The proper test under this rule when a juror states he has ''partially'' formed an opinion is, can and will the juror render a verdict according to the evidence heard upon the trial impartially and fairly under his oath so to do, regardless of his preconceived opinions. If the juror declares upon his voir dire oath that he can and will so decide, there is no cause for sustaining a challenge on the ground of such previously formed opinion. Solander v. People, 2 Colo. 48 (1873); Jones v. People, 6 Colo. 452, 45 Am. R. 526 (1882).

General discussions of crime and possible punishments by a prospective juror do not show sufficient bias or prejudice to disqualify him from serving where he clearly states to the court that he has not arrived at any conclusions and that his mind is free and open. Fleagle v. People, 87 Colo. 532, 289 P. 1078 (1930); Abshier v. People, 87 Colo. 507, 289 P. 1081 (1930).

Trial courts have considerable discretion in ruling on challenges for cause, because the trial judge is in the best position to assess the credibility, demeanor, and sincerity of the potential juror's responses, including statements that linguistically may appear to be inconsistent. People v. Richardson, 58 P.3d 1039 (Colo. App. 2002).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying challenge for cause to juror who admitted familiarity with murder case from press accounts, but who stated she would attempt to be fair and impartial despite such knowledge. People v. Brown, 731 P.2d 763 (Colo. App. 1986).

Nor did trial court abuse its discretion in denying challenge for cause to juror who admitted that she had read about the case involving felony child abuse that resulted in death and may have formed an opinion about the defendant's affirmative defense. Juror, upon sufficient questioning by the court, said she would listen to the evidence presented and would apply the court's instruction on the law in reaching a verdict. People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Test as to whether prospective juror has been unduly affected by pretrial publicity is whether the nature and strength of the opinion formed or of the information learned from that publicity are such as necessarily raise the presumption of partiality or of the inability of the potential juror to block out the information from his consideration. People v. Romero, 42 Colo. App. 20, 593 P.2d 365 (1978); People v. Bashara, 677 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1983).

Neither the department of social services nor the equal employment opportunity commission constitute a "law enforcement agency", and therefore trial court did not err by refusing defendant's challenge for cause of jurors employed by such entities. People v. Zurenko, 833 P.2d 794 (Colo. App. 1991).

Exclusion of unconscious influence of preconceptions cannot be assumed. One cannot assume that the average juror is so endowed with a sense of detachment, so clear in his introspective perception of his own mental processes, that he may exclude even the unconscious influence of his preconceptions. Beeman v. People, 193 Colo. 337, 565 P.2d 1340 (1977).

Belief that failure to testify indicates guilt does not disqualify. Notwithstanding a juror expressed belief that failure of defendant to testify would be an indication of guilt, where such juror acknowledges a willingness to lay aside any personal belief and follow the law as instructed by the court, a challenge for cause is properly overruled. Goldsberry v. People, 149 Colo. 431, 369 P.2d 787 (1962).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's challenge for cause where defense counsel asked during voir dire whether anyone believed it would be impossible to be fair if defendant did not testify and juror stated that it would and that it might upset her, but not so much as to affect her decision making. The trial court found that the juror indicated she would do what the court instructed her to do even though she might not like it. People v. Frantz, 114 P.3d 34 (Colo. App. 2004).

Informing jurors of mandatory sentence for crime not proper purpose for voir dire. The trial court did not err in refusing to allow defense counsel to conduct voir dire for the purpose of informing potential jurors of the mandatory sentence for a crime of violence. People v. Swain, 43 Colo. App. 343, 607 P.2d 396 (1979).

Voir dire examination concerning capital punishment. Carroll v. People, 177 Colo. 288, 494 P.2d 80 (1972); Segura v. District Court, 179 Colo. 20, 498 P.2d 926 (1972); People v. District Court, 190 Colo. 342, 546 P.2d 1268 (1976).

Knowledge of jurors concerning questions of law not proper subject for voir dire. The knowledge or ignorance of prospective jurors concerning questions of law is generally not a proper subject of inquiry for voir dire, for it is presumed that jurors will be adequately informed as to the applicable law by the instructions of the court. People v. Swain, 43 Colo. App. 343, 607 P.2d 396 (1979).

Juror with tenuous relationship with law enforcement agency should be excused. To insure that a jury is impartial in both fact and appearance, a prospective juror who has even a tenuous relationship with any prosecutorial or law enforcement arm of the state should be excused from jury duty in a criminal case. People in Interest of R.A.D., 196 Colo. 430, 586 P.2d 46 (1978).

Challenge for cause valid. Juror's close association with the law enforcement establishment, the crime scene, and the co-employee who attended the murder victim required dismissal for cause. People v. Rogers, 690 P.2d 886 (Colo. App. 1984).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's challenge for cause to a juror that had multiple associations with law enforcement. The juror understood that the defense had no burden of proof, that the prosecution had the burden of proving every element, and that both sides would get a fair trial from said juror. People v. Richardson, 58 P.3d 1039 (Colo. App. 2002).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's challenge for cause to a juror based on said juror's views regarding the death penalty and previous traumatic experiences. The juror did not express any partiality for or bias in favor of or against either side. People v. Richardson, 58 P.3d 1039 (Colo. App. 2002).

No abuse of discretion for denying challenge for cause. Although the potential juror indicated his relationship with law enforcement officers might bias him in favor of believing police testimony, he also explained he would be fair and impartial and fair to the defendant. People v. Garrison, 2012 COA 132M, 303 P.3d 117.

State penitentiary deemed law enforcement agency. The state penitentiary, as a state ''institution'' within the department of institutions, is a law enforcement agency for the purposes of determining the eligibility of employees thereof to serve as jurors. People v. Scott, 41 Colo. App. 66, 583 P.2d 939 (1978).

Showing of bias not required. Under § 16-10-103 and section (b)(1)(XII), the actual bias of a law enforcement employee need not be shown to sustain a challenge for cause. People in Interest of R.A.D., 196 Colo. 430, 586 P.2d 46 (1978).

But disqualification not applicable to former employees. As § 16-10-103 and this rule do not purport to disqualify former employees of a public law enforcement agency challenged for cause, a defendant's challenge of a retired guard member of the jury panel should be denied. People v. Scott, 41 Colo. App. 66, 583 P.2d 939 (1978).

Prospective juror clearly was not an "employee" under section (b)(1)(XII) of this rule or § 16-10-103 where she volunteered to serve on an on-call basis to work with victims, at the time of trial had been an advocate for a brief period, had been called only approximately six times, and had only a casual limited time commitment. People v. Gilbert, 12 P.3d 331 (Colo. App. 2000).

Defendants were not prejudiced by having the wife of the deputy sheriff on jury where voir dire questions revealed that her husband was a police officer, but where she was not asked whether he was a deputy sheriff nor did she disclose the information, because it would have added nothing material to counsel's decision as to whether to challenge for bias. Ray v. People, 147 Colo. 587, 364 P.2d 578 (1961).

A marital relationship between a judge and a juror is not included in specific circumstances under which a court must sustain a challenge to a juror for cause. Considering § 16-10-103 as a whole and giving the word ''attorney'' its plain and ordinary meaning in context, it is apparent that it refers to attorneys who represent or have represented the parties and advocated on their behalf. Moreover, an attorney is defined as someone who practices law, and a judge is prohibited from engaging in the practice of law. People v. Richardson, 2018 COA 120, __ P.3d __.

Although it would have been prudent for the judge to excuse his wife, or to recuse himself as presiding judge, the judge's misjudgment was not so egregious that it requires reversal under the plain error standard. People v. Richardson, 2018 COA 120, __ P.3d __.

When a presiding judge's spouse serves on a jury, the inquiry is not whether the jurors were influenced by the judge's spouse. The inquiry is, if the jurors deferred to the spouse, did that deference lead to an actual bias against the defendant. People v. Richardson, 2018 COA 120, __ P.3d __.

Where the defendant could not point to any prejudice resulting from the judge's spouse serving on the jury, the presiding judge's spouse's presence on the jury did not rise to the level of structural error. People v. Richardson, 2018 COA 120, __ P.3d __.

Noncitizen properly excused from jury. It is proper to excuse from the jury a person who is not a citizen of the United States. Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889).

A county official whose office, by statutory mandate, is represented by the prosecutor need not automatically be excluded from serving on a jury on the grounds that the county official is implicitly biased. The relationship between the offices of the clerk and county recorder and of the district attorney, standing alone, does not provide sufficient grounds to justify a challenge for cause. People v. Rhodus, 870 P.2d 470 (Colo. 1994).

Applied in People v. Pernell, 2014 COA 157, 414 P.3d 1, aff'd on other grounds, 2018 CO 13, 411 P.3d 669.

C. Public Law Enforcement Agency or Public Defender's Office Employee as Juror.

Employees of an agency being classified by statute as "peace officers" while engaged in their duties is not determinative of whether the agency is a law enforcement agency. People v. Carter, 2015 COA 24M-2, 402 P.3d 480.

While § 16-10-103 (1)(k) and section (b)(1)(XII) of this rule require a trial court to grant a party's challenge for cause to a juror who is employed by a public law enforcement agency, neither expressly requires the court to excuse a juror sua sponte. People v. Hinojos-Mendoza, 140 P.3d 30 (Colo. App. 2005), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 169 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2007).

For purposes of § 16-10-103 (1)(k) or section (b)(1)(XII) of this rule, the public utilities commission is not a public law enforcement agency, because it is charged primarily with the regulation of civil matters and only has incidental penal enforcement authority. People v. Carter, 2015 COA 24M-2, 402 P.3d 480.

For purposes of § 16-10-103 (1)(k) or section (b)(1)(XII) of this rule, the environmental protection agency is properly characterized as an investigatory and rulemaking body, and not a law enforcement agency. People v. Simon, 100 P.3d 487 (Colo. App. 2004).

Division of youth corrections (DYC) within the department of human services is a public law enforcement agency within the meaning of § 16-10-103 (1)(k) and section (b)(1)(XII) of this rule. The court erroneously denied defendant's challenge for cause to a prospective juror employed by the DYC. People v. Sommerfeld, 214 P.3d 570 (Colo. App. 2009).

An employee of a community corrections facility is an employee of a public law enforcement agency within the meaning of § 16-10-103 (1)(k) and section (b)(1)(XII) of this rule. People v. Romero, 197 P.3d 302 (Colo. App. 2008).

The office of the state attorney general is a law enforcement agency for purposes of § 16-10-103 (1)(k). People v. Novotny, 356 P.3d 829 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 2014 CO 18, 320 P.3d 1194.

D. Determination of Juror's Fitness.

Court is trier of qualifications of jurors. Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889).

Extent of examination by trial judge. The trial judge may examine prospective jurors on any matter relevant to their competence as jurors. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974).

A trial court should do one of three things if a prospective juror indicates an unwillingness to apply the law: (1) Dismiss the juror for cause; (2) conduct rehabilitative questioning following up on the juror's concerning statements before denying the challenge for cause; or (3) make findings on the record explaining why the juror's statements indicating an unwillingness or inability to follow the law should be disregarded in light of other seemingly inconsistent statements. People v. Marciano, 2014 COA 92M, 411 P.3d 831.

Court to determine if juror indifferent. This rule makes the trial court the trier of the qualifications of the jurors when challenged on the ground of having formed opinions, and it is for that court to determine, as a matter of fact, whether the juror stands indifferent. Thompson v. People, 26 Colo. 496, 59 P. 51 (1899); Solander v. People, 2 Colo. 48 (1873); Jones v. People, 6 Colo. 452, 45 Am. R. 526 (1882); Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889); Power v. People, 17 Colo. 178, 28 P. 1121 (1892); Leick v. People, 136 Colo. 535, 322 P.2d 674, cert. denied, 357 U.S. 922, 78 S. Ct. 1363, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1366 (1958).

While a challenge based upon the interest or bias or prejudice of a juror is somewhat different from that based upon the grounds of having formed an opinion, so far as the determination of his qualifications is concerned, the principle is the same; and as this rule makes the trial court trier of the qualifications of jurors when challenged upon the grounds of having formed opinions, it is for that court to determine as a matter of fact whether the juror stands indifferent. Imboden v. People, 40 Colo. 142, 90 P. 608 (1907); Minich v. People, 8 Colo. 440, 9 P. 4 (1885); Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889); Thompson v. People, 26 Colo. 496, 59 P. 51 (1899).

"Undue hardship" may include financial burden. What constitutes ''undue hardship'' sufficient to excuse a juror lies within the discretion of the trial court, and includes one for whom jury service would impose an undue financial burden. People v. Reese, 670 P.2d 11 (Colo. App. 1983).

Trial judge determines as a fact the fitness of the jurors to hear and determine an issue. Leick v. People, 136 Colo. 535, 322 P.2d 674, cert. denied, 357 U.S. 922, 78 S. Ct. 1363, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1366 (1958).

And appellate court to review trial judge's determination. The placing of discretion in the trial judge in jury selection procedures does not permit appellate courts to abdicate their responsibility to ensure that the requirements of fairness are fulfilled. Morgan v. People, 624 P.2d 1331 (Colo. 1981).

But trial court's determination will not be disturbed on review. Where a trial court is satisfied that a juror can lay aside a previously formed opinion and decide a case upon its evidence, the court's decision will not be disturbed on review. Fleagle v. People, 87 Colo. 532, 289 P. 1078 (1930); Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889); Hillen v. People, 59 Colo. 280, 149 P. 250 (1915); Shank v. People, 79 Colo. 576, 247 P. 559 (1926); People v. Nunez, 698 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 737 P.2d 422 (Colo. 1987).

The trial court is in the best position to view the demeanor of a juror claiming impartiality, and the record must affirmatively demonstrate that the trial court abused its discretion before its decision can be disturbed on appeal. People v. Russo, 713 P.2d 356 (Colo. 1986); People v. Christopher, 896 P.2d 876 (Colo. 1995).

A new trial may be required where a juror deliberately misrepresents or knowingly conceals information relevant to a challenge for cause or a preemptory challenge; however, where the juror's nondisclosure was inadvertent, the defendant must show that the nondisclosed fact was such as to create an actual bias either in favor of the prosecution or against the defendant. People v. Christopher, 896 P.2d 876 (Colo. 1995).

Absent abuse of discretion. If the trial judge is persuaded that a juror would fairly and impartially try the issues, his denial of a challenge for cause should not be disturbed, except where such denial is clearly an abuse of discretion. Leick v. People, 136 Colo. 535, 322 P.2d 674, cert. denied, 357 U.S. 922, 78 S. Ct. 1363, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1366 (1958); Solander v. People, 2 Colo. 48 (1873); Jones v. People, 2 Colo. 351 (1874); Jones v. People, 6 Colo. 452, 45 Am. R. 526 (1882); Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889); Thompson v. People, 26 Colo. 496, 59 P. 51 (1899); McGonigal v. People, 74 Colo. 270, 220 P. 1003 (1923); Shank v. People, 79 Colo. 576, 247 P. 559 (1926).

Since trial judge in best position to observe. While a trial judge hears the questions put to a juror and the answers given, observes a juror's demeanor while being interrogated, and discerns through the use of his eyes, ears, and intelligence wherein truth and credit should be given, a reviewing court does not have the benefit of this personal observation which is so important in judging the credibility of a juror. Leick v. People, 136 Colo. 535, 322 P.2d 674, cert. denied, 357 U.S. 922, 78 S. Ct. 1363, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1366 (1958).

The ultimate decision of whether or not to grant a challenge for cause is one for the trial court's sound discretion, since the factors of credibility and appearance which are determinative of bias are best observed at the trial court level. Nailor v. People, 200 Colo. 30, 612 P.2d 79 (1980).

The need for a careful evaluation of the competence of potential jurors to assess the defendant's guilt or innocence solely on the evidence admitted at trial, and the serious practical problems involved with these assessments, are sound reasons for placing great discretion in the trial court in the jury selection procedures. Morgan v. People, 624 P.2d 1331 (Colo. 1981).

IV. PEREMPTORY CHALLENGES.

Section 16-10-104 controls over section (d). Peremptory challenges, while not constitutionally required, are deemed to be an effective means of securing a more impartial and better qualified jury and, as such, are an important right of an accused. While also having an incidental effect on trial procedure, § 16-10-104, is primarily an expression of policy concerning this right of the accused, a substantive matter, and, thus, controls over section (d) of this rule. People v. Hollis, 670 P.2d 441 (Colo. App. 1983).

Although § 16-10-104 refers to the number of challenges in capital cases, it does not define "capital case". By contrast, section (d)(1) of this rule does define the term. The rule and the statute, therefore, do not ''conflict'' in the sense of being irreconcilable or necessarily incompatible with each other, and the rule can be given effect without producing a result irreconcilable with the plain language of the statute. People v. Reynolds, 159 P.3d 684 (Colo. App. 2006).

There is no conflict between the number of peremptory challenges provided by § 16-10-104 and section (d)(4) of this rule regarding nonreduction of peremptory challenges where there has been a waiver. Where counsel waives a peremptory challenge, counsel does not lose that challenge and can still take advantage of all available peremptory challenges to which the party is entitled, so long as, after waiver, at least one new juror is called into the jury box. People v. Terhorst, 2015 COA 110, 360 P.3d 239.

The time for determining the number of peremptory challenges is the time voir dire is commenced. People v. Hollis, 670 P.2d 441 (Colo. App. 1983).

Number of peremptory challenges allowed is governed by the statute and rule in effect at the time voir dire is conducted. People v. Priest, 672 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1983).

Party has absolute right to use all peremptory challenges granted him by this rule, and any frustration thereof, whether by erroneous ruling, false information, or concealment constitutes reversible error. Harris v. People, 113 Colo. 511, 160 P.2d 372 (1945).

And unnecessary use of peremptory challenges not error where not fatal. Where a challenge by the accused to a juror for cause should have been sustained, but the objectionable juror was subsequently peremptorily challenged by defendant, and, at the time of going to trial, defendant had left unused seven peremptory challenges, the error was not fatal to the judgment. Minich v. People, 8 Colo. 440, 9 P. 4 (1885); Solander v. People, 2 Colo. 48 (1873); Jones v. People, 2 Colo. 351 (1874).

But error where peremptory challenges exhausted unnecessarily. Where a challenge is properly made, but is overruled by the court, and the challenging party afterwards exhausted his peremptory challenges, using one of them on the disqualified juror, the action of the court in denying the challenge is error to the substantial prejudice of the party who made the challenge. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Carson, 21 Colo. App. 604, 123 P. 680 (1912); Denver City Tramway Co. v. Kennedy, 50 Colo. 418, 117 P. 167 (1911); People v. Maes, 43 Colo. App. 365, 609 P.2d 1105 (1979); People v. Russo, 677 P.2d 386 (Colo. App. 1983).

Appellate review not precluded by invited error where a defendant does not use a peremptory challenge to excuse a juror for whom the defendant's challenge for cause was denied. People v. Garcia, 2018 COA 180, __ P.3d __.

Reversal of a criminal conviction for other than structural error is not required absent an express legislative mandate or an appropriate case-specific outcome-determinative analysis. Allowing a defendant fewer peremptory challenges than authorized or than exercised by the prosecution is not structural error requiring reversal. People v. Novotny, 2014 CO 18, 320 P.3d 1194 (overruling People v. Macrander, 828 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1992), People v. Lefebre, 5 P.3d 295 (Colo. 2000), and other holdings to the contrary); People v. Alfaro, 2014 CO 19, 320 P.3d 1191; People v. Roldan, 2014 CO 22, 322 P.3d 922; People v. Montero-Romero, 2014 CO 23, 322 P.3d 923; People v. Wise, 2014 COA 83, 348 P.3d 482.

Prejudice is shown if defendant exhausts all of his peremptory challenges and one of those challenges is expended on a juror who should have been removed for cause. A defendant is not required to request an additional peremptory challenge to preserve this issue on appeal. People v. Prator, 833 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1992).

However, defendant must show exhaustion on appeal. Where defendant claims error in denial of his challenge of a juror for cause who was later excused by peremptory challenge, but makes no showing that all of the peremptory challenges to which defendant was entitled were exercised, nor is it shown that he was deprived of the right to challenge any other prospective juror because he was forced to exhaust his peremptory challenges, even assuming that the court should have sustained the challenge for cause, there can be no prejudice to the rights of the defendant resulting from the denial of such challenge. Skeels v. People, 145 Colo. 281, 358 P.2d 605 (1961).

Where the trial court improperly removed jurors for cause and the prosecution subsequently used all of its peremptory challenges, the prosecution enjoyed an unfair tactical advantage in determining the makeup of the jury, detrimentally affecting the rights of the defendant and requiring a new trial. Improperly dismissing some jurors for cause had the effect of granting additional peremptory challenges to the prosecution. It was irrelevant that the defendant had full ability to use his peremptory challenges. The prosecution's relatively greater ability to remove jurors it viewed as objectionable was independently prejudicial to the defendant's rights, and the court presumed prejudice to the defendant. People v. Lefebre, 5 P.3d 295 (Colo. 2000), overruled in People v. Novotny, 2014 CO 18, 320 P.3d 1194.

Defendant must object to the use of excess peremptory challenges. Right to object to prosecution's use of more than statutorily allowed number of peremptory challenges is waived unless there is timely objection by the defendant. Righi v. People, 145 Colo. 457, 359 P.2d 656 (1961).

Judge may grant peremptory challenge of juror after his acceptance. Although there is no provision in section (d), for the trial judge to exercise his discretion, in a proper case the trial judge may properly exercise his discretion, upon a showing of good cause, and grant a peremptory challenge even after the juror has been accepted. Simms v. People, 174 Colo. 85, 482 P.2d 974 (1971).

Section (d)(3) allows the court to add peremptory challenges to either or both sides, but does not require the court to do so. People v. Heller, 698 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1984), rev'd on other grounds, 712 P.2d 1023 (Colo. 1986).

Applicability of right of 10 peremptory challenges to adjudicative stage of a juvenile proceeding. People in Interest of T.A.W., 38 Colo. App. 175, 556 P.2d 1225 (1976).

V. CUSTODY OF JURY.

This rule implements traditional practice of trial courts in this state. Segura v. People, 159 Colo. 371, 412 P.2d 227 (1966).

Colorado permits the separation of jurors even in capital cases where assented to by the attorneys for the parties, although the supreme court has expressed its disapproval of the practice in serious criminal cases. Segura v. People, 159 Colo. 371, 412 P.2d 227 (1966).

But rule requires sequestration of jurors in first-degree murder case unless requirement waived by the accused. Tribe v. District Court, 197 Colo. 433, 593 P.2d 1369 (1979); Segura v. People, 159 Colo. 371, 412 P.2d 227 (1966).

Defendant's personal assent as opposed to counsel's alone is not mandatory for such waiver in capital cases. Segura v. People, 159 Colo. 371, 412 P.2d 227 (1966).

Showing of prejudice necessary for error where counsel agrees to separation. Where defense counsel expressly agrees to separation of the jury in a capital case, error cannot be predicated on that procedure in the absence of a showing of prejudice to the defendant. Segura v. People, 159 Colo. 371, 412 P.2d 227 (1966).

And, in such a case, the defendant has burden of proof. Segura v. People, 159 Colo. 371, 412 P.2d 227 (1966).

Burden of showing prejudice from separation of a deliberating jury in a noncapital case also rests upon the defendant. People v. Maestas, 187 Colo. 107, 528 P.2d 916 (1974).

And absent a showing of prejudice, separation is not grounds for reversal. People v. Maestas, 187 Colo. 107, 528 P.2d 916 (1974).

Determination of whether prejudice has occurred during jury sequestration is within the sound discretion of the trial court and only where that discretion has been abused will a new trial be ordered. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974).

Trial of a first-degree murder charge is a "capital case" for purposes of jury sequestration under section (f), even though the district attorney does not intend to qualify the jury for consideration of the death penalty or to seek the imposition of the death penalty in the event of a conviction. People ex rel. Faulk v. District Court, 667 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1983) (decided prior to 1983 amendment of this rule); People v. Jones, 677 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1983), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 711 P.2d 1270 (Colo. 1986).

While the rule does not expressly forbid a trial court from allowing jurors to predeliberate, those juror discussions are not allowed in criminal cases in Colorado. People v. Preciado-Flores, 66 P.3d 155 (Colo. App. 2002).

VI. ALTERNATE JURORS.

Alternate jurors must be discharged at the time the jury retires to deliberate; any replacement of a regular juror by an alternate must occur prior to such time. People v. Burnette, 753 P.2d 773 (Colo. App. 1987), aff'd, 775 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1989) (decided prior to 1993 amendment).

Section 16-10-105 controls over section (e) of this rule because the statute provides substantive, in addition to procedural, direction to the trial court. Carrillo v. People, 974 P.2d 478 (Colo. 1999).

Trial court has the authority under both § 16-10-105 and section (e) of this rule to replace a juror with an alternate after jury deliberations have commenced. Carrillo v. People, 974 P.2d 478 (Colo. 1999).

If a trial court interrupts deliberations of a jury and suspends the jury's fact finding functions to investigate allegations of juror misconduct, the court's inquiry must not intrude into the deliberative process. In the exercise of judicial discretion, before a juror is dismissed from a deliberating jury due to an allegation of juror misconduct, the court must make findings supporting a conclusion that the allegedly offending juror will not follow the court's instructions. Garcia v. People, 997 P.2d 1 (Colo. 2000).

Prejudice is presumed when alternate juror replaces regular juror during deliberations. People v. Burnette, 775 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1989); Carrillo v. People, 974 P.2d 478 (Colo. 1999).

Presence of alternate juror during jury's deliberations sufficiently impinges upon defendant's constitutional right to a jury that renders its verdict in secret as to create a presumption of prejudice that requires reversal if not rebutted, and, where it is unclear from the record whether the alternate juror was actually present during the jury deliberations, the issue should be remanded for an evidentiary hearing. People v. Boulies, 690 P.2d 1253 (Colo. 1984).

Presence of alternate juror amounts to harmless error when the evidence supporting the defendant's guilt was overwhelming and the juror was only present for jury's deliberations for approximately ten minutes. James v. People, 2018 CO 72, 426 P.3d 336.

Presumption of prejudice held sufficiently rebutted where juror was replaced for an obvious and bona fide hearing impairment, court carefully instructed remaining jurors and the alternate juror to start their deliberations anew, the jury physically tore up and discarded their notes from the earlier deliberations, and the second set of deliberations took two hours longer than the first. Carrillo v. People, 974 P.2d 478 (Colo. 1999).

Presumption of prejudice may be rebutted only by a showing that trial court took extraordinary precautions to ensure that defendant would not be prejudiced and that, under the circumstances of the case, such precautions were adequate to achieve that result. People v. Burnette, 775 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1989).

Procedures instituted by the trial court did not meet the People v. Burnette standard. People v. Patterson, 832 P.2d 1083 (Colo. App. 1992).

Reversible error. Where trial court replaced regular juror with alternate juror during jury deliberations but did not ask regular jurors if they were capable of disregarding their previous deliberations or if they would be receptive to an alternate juror's attempt to assert a non-conforming view and did not ask alternate juror about his activities after being discharged or his present ability to serve on the jury, trial court did not take extraordinary measures to ensure that defendant would not be prejudiced by such mid-deliberation replacement and, as a result thereof, defendant's conviction required reversal. People v. Burnette, 753 P.2d 773 (Colo. App. 1987), aff'd, 775 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1989).

Absent a showing of prejudice, a defendant's failure to timely object to the separation of the jury during a trial constitutes a waiver of sequestration. Jones v. People, 711 P.2d 1270 (Colo. 1986).

Defendant did not waive right to challenge the procedure followed in accomplishing substitution of juror by consenting to the fact of substitution. People v. Patterson, 832 P.2d 1083 (Colo. App. 1992).

Court did not abuse its discretion by declining to prohibit or limit juror questions. Although the jurors asked hundreds of questions, the questions did not have a negative effect on the efficiency of the trial, did not turn the jurors into investigators or advocates, and did not shift the burden of proof to defendant. People v. Garrison, 2012 COA 132M, 303 P.3d 117.

Applied in People v. Avery, 736 P.2d 1233 (Colo. App. 1986).

VII. JUROR QUESTIONS.

Juror questioning in a criminal trial does not, in and of itself, violate a defendant's constitutional rights to a fair and impartial jury. Medina v. People, 114 P.3d 845 (Colo. 2005).

Where the court errs by asking an improper question from the jury, the impact of the question should be reviewed for harmless error. Medina v. People, 114 P.3d 845 (Colo. 2005).

Trial court did not commit reversible error by posing jury's questions to witnesses without first consulting defense counsel. When an improper question from the jury is asked of a witness, the proper course is not to apply structural error but to review the impact of the trial court's ruling for harmless error. People v. Zamarippa-Diaz, 187 P.3d 1120 (Colo. App. 2008).

Rule 25. Disability of Judge

If by reason of absence from the district, death, sickness, or other disability, the judge before whom the defendant was tried is unable to perform the duties to be performed by the court after a verdict or finding, any other judge regularly sitting in or assigned to the court may perform those duties. If the substitute judge is satisfied that he cannot perform those duties because he did not preside at the trial, or for any other reason, he may, in his discretion, grant a new trial.

ANNOTATION

Substitution of judges is permitted so long as a justifiable reason for the substitution appears in the record. Substitution need not be required by an emergency or other situation beyond the control of the original judge to be justifiable. People v. Little, 813 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where the reason for substituting judges does not appear in the record, the case must be remanded for statement of the reason. The sentence will only be affirmed thereafter if the reason is one specified in the rule. If the reason is not one of those specified in the rule, the sentence will be vacated and the defendant will be resentenced by the original judge. People v. Little, 813 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1991).

Case remanded to trial court for the judge who tried the case to explain on the record why he recused himself before sentencing. People v. Brewster, 240 P.3d 291 (Colo. App. 2009).

Sentencing judge's explanation for the absence of the trial judge was inadequate, and the sentencing judge was incorrect in her finding that, because she heard motions in the case and reviewed the record, she was authorized to sentence the defendant. The record does not indicate the reason for substitution or whether there was a proper basis for the trial judge not to impose sentence. People v. Childress, 2012 COA 116, 409 P.3d 365, rev'd on other grounds, 2015 CO 65M, 363 P.3d 155.

Rule does not apply where conviction was the result of a guilty plea and not a trial and because a revocation hearing on a deferred judgment is not a trial. People v. Rivera-Bottzeck, 119 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2004).

The requirement that the same judge impose sentence after a trial, except for justifiable reasons to substitute another judge, does not apply to resentencing proceedings. People v. Holwuttle, 155 P.3d 447 (Colo. App. 2006).

Rule 26. Evidence

In all trials the testimony of witnesses shall be taken orally in open court, unless otherwise provided by law.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For comment, ''Reporter's Privilege: Pankratz v. District Court'', see 58 Den. L.J. 681 (1981). For article, ''Good-Faith Exception to the Exclusionary Rule: The Fourth Amendment is Not a Technicality'', see 11 Colo. Law. 704 (1982). For article, ''People v. Opening statements and arguments of lawyers are not evidence. People v. Jacobs, 179 Colo. 182, 499 P.2d 615 (1972).

Such arguments are designed only to sway findings. Arguments to the court are not matters of evidence, have no probative value, and are designed only to sway the court's findings and conclusions. People In Interest of B. L. M. v. B. L. M., 31 Colo. App. 106, 500 P.2d 146 (1972).

II. FUNCTION OF JUDGE AND JURY.

Order of proof and presentation of witnesses is within sound discretion of the trial court, and error may not be predicated thereon in the absence of a showing of prejudice. Martinez v. People, 177 Colo. 272, 493 P.2d 1350 (1972).

Allowing prosecution to recall witnesses for further cross-examination after defense rests its case is matter pertaining to proof and is within sound discretion of trial judge. People v. Lewis, 180 Colo. 423, 506 P.2d 125 (1973).

Jury is permitted to draw any and all reasonable inferences of guilt from the evidence before it. Huser v. People, 178 Colo. 300, 496 P.2d 1035 (1972).

Effect of waiving jury trial. Where the defendant voluntarily waived a jury trial, the trial judge had no recourse but to examine the evidence and rule on its admissibility, and the defendant cannot be heard to complain, when he voluntarily, and with advice of counsel, created a situation which by necessity made the trial judge both the one who decides if evidence is admissible and the one who renders the verdict. People v. Mascarenas, 181 Colo. 268, 509 P.2d 303 (1973).

The credibility of witnesses, including experts, is within the province of the jury as the fact finder and the jury's obvious acceptance of the testimony by the prosecution's experts is not subject to reversal. People v. Moore, 841 P.2d 320 (Colo. App. 1992).

III. WITNESSES.

A. Testimony.

It is axiomatic that witnesses should relate facts and not conclusions. Elliott v. People, 176 Colo. 373, 490 P.2d 687 (1971).

But exception when witness must summarize impressions of senses. An exception to the rule that a witness may only relate facts exists when a witness has personally observed the physical activity of another and summarizes his sensory impressions thereof because they can hardly be described in any other manner. Elliott v. People, 176 Colo. 373, 490 P.2d 687 (1971).

Especially where witness qualifies conclusionary statement. Where a witness qualifies his conclusion immediately subsequent to defendant's objection by stating that defendant ''looked like'' he was going to do a certain act, the trial court commits no error in overruling defendant's objection to such testimony. Elliott v. People, 176 Colo. 373, 490 P.2d 687 (1971).

Admission of unresponsive testimony not per se wrong. There is nothing per se wrong with the admission into evidence of testimony which may be unresponsive, provided that it is relevant for some purpose. People v. Maestas, 183 Colo. 378, 517 P.2d 461 (1973).

Testimony as to possible places of incarceration is not to be placed before a jury. People v. Scheidt, 186 Colo. 142, 526 P.2d 300 (1974).

The trial court did not commit plain error in allowing the prosecution to elicit testimony during its case-in-chief showing the victim's character for peacefulness. Defense counsel raised self-defense as an affirmative defense during opening statements and elicited testimony to support the affirmative defense during cross examination of a prosecution witness. People v. Baca, 852 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in requiring defendant to present his expert testimony in court rather than through videoconferencing. People v. Casias, 2012 COA 117, 312 P.3d 208.

B. Corroboration.

Defendant may be convicted upon uncorroborated testimony of accomplice. Davis v. People, 176 Colo. 378, 490 P.2d 948 (1971).

Corroborating evidence defined. Corroborating evidence is evidence, either directly or by proof of surrounding facts and circumstances, that tends to establish the participation of the defendant in the commission of the offense. Davis v. People, 176 Colo. 378, 490 P.2d 948 (1971).

IV. ADMISSIBILITY.

A. In General.

Trial court did not err by admitting gun where there was conflicting testimony concerning the gun's origin since the lack of a positive identification of the gun affected the weight to be given the evidence, not the admissibility. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

All facts proving crime charged admissible. All the facts which are necessary to prove the crime charged, when linked to the chain of events which supports that crime, are admissible. People v. Anderson, 184 Colo. 32, 518 P.2d 828 (1974).

Weakness in chain of evidence addresses weight of evidence. Where the chain of evidence is complete, any weakness in the chain goes merely to the weight of the evidence and not to its admissibility. People v. Sanchez, 184 Colo. 25, 518 P.2d 818 (1974).

Admission of cumulative evidence is within the discretion of the trial court and its ruling will not be overturned unless a clear abuse of discretion appears. People v. Manier, 184 Colo. 44, 518 P.2d 811 (1974).

On rebuttal, party may introduce any competent evidence to explain, refute, counteract, or disprove proof of other party, even if evidence also tends to support the party's case in chief. People v. Lewis, 180 Colo. 423, 506 P.2d 125 (1973); People v. Knight, 167 P.3d 141 (Colo. App. 2006).

Propriety of permitting surrebuttal evidence is within discretion of trial court. People v. Hutto, 181 Colo. 279, 509 P.2d 298 (1973).

Where defendant seeks to discuss on surrebuttal matters that are not a reply to new evidence of prosecution, but have been specifically covered in earlier testimony, the trial court does not commit an abuse of discretion in denying defendant's request. People v. Martinez, 181 Colo. 27, 506 P.2d 744 (1973).

Except where defendant meeting matter introduced by prosecution on rebuttal. Defendants should always be permitted to introduce, as surrebuttal, evidence which tends to meet any new matter introduced by prosecution on rebuttal; otherwise, it is within discretion of trial court to allow or deny surrebuttal. People v. Martinez, 181 Colo. 27, 506 P.2d 744 (1973).

When error in admission of evidence not curable by instructions to jury. Error in admitting evidence may be cured by instructing the jury to disregard it, unless such evidence is so prejudicial that it is unlikely that the jury will be able to erase it from their minds; if it is so prejudicial, a mistrial should be ordered. Edmisten v. People, 176 Colo. 262, 490 P.2d 58 (1971).

An error in exposing to the jury certain inadmissible evidence may be cured by instructing the jury to disregard it; however, when such evidence is highly prejudicial, it is conceivable that, but for its exposure, the jury may not have found the defendant guilty, and the trial court's cautionary instruction to disregard it will not suffice. People v. Goldsberry, 181 Colo. 406, 509 P.2d 801 (1973).

Remarks by judge may not constitute reversible error. Casual remarks of the trial judge, made while passing upon objections to testimony, although ill-advised, do not constitute reversible error when not so couched as to especially reflect upon defendant. McCune v. People, 179 Colo. 262, 499 P.2d 1184 (1972).

Nor correct comments by district attorney on evidence. Where the record shows beyond a doubt that the testimony implicated the companions of defendant as accomplices, any statement by the district attorney with regard to those persons as accomplices, after such a showing, is within the boundaries of proper comment. Fernandez v. People, 176 Colo. 346, 490 P.2d 690 (1971).

Trial court's curative instruction, which directed jurors not to consider evidence relating to other transactions allegedly involving defendant, cured any errors resulting from admission of such evidence in ''theft by receiving'' prosecution where evidence of defendant's ''theft by receiving'' was overwhelming. Vigil v. People, 731 P.2d 713 (Colo. 1987).

B. Confessions and Admissions.

Admissibility of defendant's statement to be determined at trial. Where a defendant is given a full ''Miranda'' warning following his arrest, the admissibility of the statements he made as evidence must be determined by the court at the time of trial rather than on interlocutory appeal under Rule 41.2, Crim. P. People v. Vaughns, 175 Colo. 369, 489 P.2d 591 (1971).

Outside presence of jury. The trial court must make a determination of the admissibility of a confession, which entails a determination of the propriety of the ''Miranda'' warning, outside of the presence of the jury, at an in camera hearing. Perez v. people, 176 Colo. 505, 491 P.2d 969 (1971).

Including issue of voluntariness. Whenever voluntariness in an issue in a trial, there must be a hearing before the trial judge and a determination made on that issue. People v. Sanchez, 180 Colo. 119, 503 P.2d 619 (1972).

As to be admissible, confession must be free and voluntary; that is, it must not be extracted by any sort of threats or violence, nor obtained by any direct or implied promises, however slight. People v. Pineda, 182 Colo. 385, 513 P.2d 452 (1973).

Where the defendant makes a voluntary, knowing, and intelligent waiver of his constitutional rights, the trial court's ruling that an oral statement of the defendant is admissible is not error. Dyett v. People, 177 Colo. 370, 494 P.2d 94 (1972).

Two-step procedure is proper to resolve issue of voluntariness of confession: First, the trial judge must determine whether the confession is voluntary; and, second, if the confession is voluntary and is admitted into evidence, the trial judge should instruct the jury on the weight to be given the confession. People v. Shearer, 181 Colo. 237, 508 P.2d 1249 (1973).

Admissibility need only be established by preponderance of evidence. People v. Shearer, 181 Colo. 237, 508 P.2d 1249 (1973).

A trial judge only has to find that a defendant's statement is voluntary by a preponderance of the evidence to justify submission of the statement to the jury. People v. Smith, 179 Colo. 413, 500 P.2d 1177 (1972).

Although waiver of rights must be found beyond a reasonable doubt. Before a criminal defendant's extrajudicial statement is admissible as evidence against him, a trial court must find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was fully informed of his constitutional rights and that he intelligently and expressly waived them. People v. Vigil, 175 Colo. 373, 489 P.2d 588 (1971).

And the burden is upon the state to show attendant circumstances sufficient from which a knowing and intelligent waiver may be implied. Roybal v. People, 178 Colo. 259, 496 P.2d 1019 (1972).

Or testimony inadmissible. Where the state does not meet its burden of showing by clear and convincing evidence that defendant was represented by counsel at a lineup, lineup testimony is properly excluded. Fresquez v. People, 178 Colo. 220, 497 P.2d 1246 (1972).

Total circumstances and conduct of accused must be considered. In passing on whether a statement is voluntary and whether the accused waived his rights, the court must consider and examine the totality of the facts and circumstances of the case, as well as the conduct of the accused. Duncan v. People, 178 Colo. 314, 497 P.2d 1029 (1972).

Findings must be supported by evidence. Where the findings of the court entered after an in camera hearing are that the statements were understandingly and voluntarily given, that defendant at the time had full knowledge of his rights, and the findings are supported by the evidence, it is not error to admit defendant's statements with evidence. People v. Gallegos, 180 Colo. 238, 504 P.2d 343 (1972).

Appellate review. An appellate court is bound to accept the trial court's findings and ruling on the admissibility of a confession, if the evidence is sufficient to support the trial court's determination. Redmond v. People, 180 Colo. 24, 501 P.2d 1051 (1972).

Where trial court's finding that accused's confession was voluntary and admissible is supported by competent evidence, it will not be disturbed on appeal. People v. Shearer, 181 Colo. 237, 508 P.2d 1249 (1973).

Trial court's findings of facts on the voluntariness of a confession will be upheld on review if supported by adequate evidence in the record. People v. Pineda, 182 Colo. 385, 513 P.2d 452 (1973); People v. McIntyre, 789 P.2d 1108 (Colo. 1990).

Evidence held sufficient to show intelligent waiver of rights. Jorgensen v. People, 178 Colo. 8, 495 P.2d 1130 (1972); McClain v. People, 178 Colo. 103, 495 P.2d 542 (1972).

Prior refusal does not make subsequent voluntary statement inadmissible. When the police fully honor a defendant's refusal to make a statement, the fact of a prior refusal to make any statement should not taint a statement subsequently given voluntarily and with full advisement of rights. Dyett v. People, 177 Colo. 370, 494 P.2d 94 (1972).

When Miranda warning not necessary. Where defendant is not in custody nor deprived of his freedom when a police officer asks a question and the investigation has not focused upon any individual, then the Miranda warning is not necessary, since the defendant is not in custody, and no error is committed in admitting a statement into evidence. Walker v. People, 175 Colo. 173, 489 P.2d 584 (1971).

Effect of intoxication on admissibility of statement. Carroll v. People, 177 Colo. 288, 494 P.2d 80 (1972).

Police testimony as to defendant's oral confession was proper and permissible in all its aspects, where the record indicates that before being questioned the defendant was advised of her complete rights; that she read and signed a rights advisement form; that she understood her rights; that she indicated a willingness to talk; and that she freely and voluntarily told the police about her involvement in the crime. People v. Gallegos, 181 Colo. 264, 509 P.2d 596 (1973).

Admonition to jury does not cure erroneous admission of incriminating statements. An admonition or an instruction to the jury to disregard involuntary incriminating statements does not cure the erroneous admission of such statements. Edmisten v. People, 176 Colo. 262, 490 P.2d 58 (1971).

Entire statement is admissible if any portion thereof is admissible. McCune v. People, 179 Colo. 262, 499 P.2d 1184 (1972).

But burden of showing continuity or relevance in series of statements, or among various parts of a single statement, is on the party seeking to have the entire series or statement admitted. McCune v. People, 179 Colo. 262, 499 P.2d 1184 (1972).

Consequently, admission of only the relevant portions of a statement is not error where there is no showing of continuity or relevance between the admitted portions of the statement and the remainder of the statement. McCune v. People, 179 Colo. 262, 499 P.2d 1184 (1972).

Moreover, when the trial court admits into evidence a duplicate copy in addition to the original copy of a formal statement, which has been likewise corrected and signed by the defendant, the evidence is merely cumulative, and there is no abuse of discretion in its admission. Jorgensen v. People, 178 Colo. 8, 495 P.2d 1130 (1972).

Independent proof of corpus delicti required. An accused's extra-judicial confession or statement is not sufficient to sustain a conviction without proof of the corpus delicti independent of the statement or confession. People v. Maestas, 181 Colo. 180, 508 P.2d 782 (1973); People v. Applegate, 181 Colo. 339, 509 P.2d 1238 (1973); People v. Smith, 182 Colo. 31, 510 P.2d 893 (1973).

Use of evidence from uncounseled witness against third party. No reason exists for exclusion of evidence obtained from an uncounseled witness, so long as the evidence obtained is not offered against that witness. People v. Knapp, 180 Colo. 280, 505 P.2d 7 (1973).

When reference to defendant's silence is reversible error. Not every reference to defendant's exercise of his fifth amendment right to remain silent mandates automatic reversal; the relevant inquiry is whether the prosecution ''utilized defendant's silence as a means of creating an inference of guilt''. People v. Key, 185 Colo. 72, 522 P.2d 719 (1974); People v. Benevidez, 679 P.2d 125 (Colo. App. 1984).

Defendant's statement held to be voluntary when given in a hospital five hours after a serious accident when he was alert, resting, and not under the effects of medication. Defendant willingly participated, no threats were made to secure his cooperation. People v. Miller, 829 P.2d 443 (Colo. App. 1991).

Defendant was not in custody when he was in the hospital for medical treatment. Confinement to a hospital bed is insufficient alone to constitute custody. People v. Miller, 829 P.2d 443 (Colo. App. 1991).

There was a valid waiver of defendant's Miranda rights when the defendant nodded his head in response to an officer's question concerning whether he understood his rights. A valid waiver need not be express, but may be inferred from actions and words. People v. Miller, 829 P.2d 443 (Colo. App. 1991).

Defendant was not in custody when she was in the hospital even though she had been given morphine prior to her making certain incriminating statements. Expert testimony indicated that the morphine she had been given would not have affected her ability to think, speak, and understand the situation. People v. DeBoer, 829 P.2d 447 (Colo. App. 1991).

C. Exclusionary Rule.

Annotator's note. For further annotations concerning search and seizure, see § 7 of art. II, Colo. Const., part 3 of article 3 of title 16, and Crim. P. 41.

Exclusionary rule has traditionally barred from trial physical, tangible materials obtained either during, or as the direct result of, an unlawful invasion of a defendant's rights by the police. People v. Vigil, 175 Colo. 373, 489 P.2d 588 (1971).

Applicability of "fruit of the poisonous tree" doctrine. To apply the "fruit of the poisonous tree" doctrine, the fruit of the search must have been obtained as the direct result of a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights — such a violation is said to taint the tree and, in turn, the fruit. People v. Vigil, 175 Colo. 373, 489 P.2d 588 (1971); People v. Potter, 176 Colo. 510, 491 P.2d 974 (1971).

Standing to object to illegal seizure. A person who is only aggrieved by the admission of evidence illegally seized from a third person lacks standing to object. People v. Knapp, 180 Colo. 280, 505 P.2d 7 (1973).

Test of admissibility of evidence seized in lawful search following an unlawful search is whether, granting establishment of the primary illegality, the evidence to which instant objection is made has been arrived at by exploitation of that illegality, or instead by means sufficiently distinguishable to be purged of the primary taint. People v. Hannah, 183 Colo. 9, 514 P.2d 320 (1973).

Defendant's allegedly criminal acts were sufficiently attenuated from any illegal conduct of sheriff's deputies so that exclusion of evidence was not appropriate. Evidence of a new crime committed in response to an unlawful trespass is admissible. People v. Doke, 171 P.3d 237 (Colo. 2007).

Information in sheriff deputy's affidavit, when considered separately and as a whole, failed to establish a substantial basis for the magistrate's determination that probable cause existed to issue the warrant. People v. Hoffman, 293 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 2012 CO 66, 289 P.3d 24.

Deputy who conducted the search and who was the same officer who prepared the deficient affidavit either knew or should have known that the warrant he obtained based on his own affidavit was lacking in probable cause, and thus it was objectively unreasonable for him to rely on it. People v. Hoffman, 293 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 2012 CO 66, 289 P.3d 24.

Trial court erred when it concluded that (1) probable cause existed to issue the search warrant, and, (2) even absent probable cause, the officers acted in good faith in executing the warrant. People v. Hoffman, 293 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 2012 CO 66, 289 P.3d 24.

D. In-Court Identification.

Admissibility of in-court identification after illegal lineup. Where evidence is presented showing that an in-court identification of the defendant has an independent origin other than an illegal lineup and the trial court so finds, the in-court identification is admissible. People v. Bowen, 176 Colo. 302, 490 P.2d 295 (1971).

Determination of independent basis at "in camera hearing". A trial judge's determination at an "in camera hearing" that an independent basis exists for in-court identification of defendant provides a proper foundation for admission of identification testimony before the jury. People v. Marion, 182 Colo. 435, 514 P.2d 327 (1973).

And reviewing court will not substitute its judgment. Where trial judge, after considering the totality of the circumstances at an "in camera hearing", permits the introduction of identification testimony, he does not abuse his discretion, and reviewing court will not substitute its judgment for that of the trial court. People v. Knapp, 180 Colo. 280, 505 P.2d 7 (1973).

Burden of proof is on prosecution. Where there is a violative lineup identification of a defendant, the burden of proof is on the prosecution to show an untainted identification of the defendant at trial. People v. Bowen, 176 Colo. 302, 490 P.2d 295 (1971).

Clear and convincing evidence required that identification from witness' own recollection. It is the burden of the prosecution to show by clear and convincing evidence that any suggestion was not present and that the identification of the defendant is the product of the witness's own recollection. Constantine v. People, 178 Colo. 16, 495 P.2d 208 (1972); Sandoval v. People, 180 Colo. 180, 503 P.2d 1020 (1972).

Suggestive circumstances do not necessitate reversal. Suggestive circumstances at an out-court identification will not by themselves necessitate reversal of a conviction. The concern of court is to prevent extrajudicial identification so unduly suggestive that, as matter of law, it results in substantial likelihood of mistaken in-court identification. People v. Pacheco, 180 Colo. 39, 502 P.2d 70 (1972).

Nor merely cumulative identification. Even if extrajudicial identifications were inadmissible hearsay, where, in light of the other material evidence relating defendants to the crime, such identification is clearly cumulative and any error harmless. Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972).

Behavior of witness at confrontation with defendant bears on credibility of the witness's identification of the defendant at the trial. People v. Bugarin, 181 Colo. 57, 507 P.2d 879 (1973).

Independent in-court identification of defendant held sufficient to admit into evidence. McGregor v. People 176 Colo. 309, 490 P.2d 287 (1971).

E. Codefendants.

Testimony of accomplice must be scrutinized and acted upon with great caution. People v. Gomez, 189 Colo. 91, 537 P.2d 297 (1975).

Evidence admissible in separate trial also admissible in joint trial. Where evidence would be admissible against defendant in a separate trial, there is no prejudice as a result of the admission of that evidence in a joint trial. Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972).

And evidence inadmissible in separate trial admissible in joint trial with limiting instruction. It is not reversible error to admit a statement into evidence which would not be admissible against one of the defendants in a separate trial where the court gives a limiting instruction and the evidence of that defendant's involvement is overwhelming, even though it would be better trial procedure not to admit the statement. Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972).

Articles in possession of codefendant may be admitted. Where defendant and his codefendant jointly participated in the criminal venture, they acted in concert in furtherance of a common illegal purpose, and each, as to the other, was an accomplice; hence, admitting in evidence as against defendant, the articles found in the possession of his codefendant is not error where they were a part of the state's case against both defendants. Miller v. People, 141 Colo. 576, 349 P.2d 685, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 851, 81 S. Ct. 97, 5 L. Ed. 2d 75 (1960).

Codefendant cannot object to evidence of the history of the joint undertaking, even though it involves the commission of a crime by one or more of the other codefendants, if the history of the enterprise might throw light on the motive he or his codefendants might have had for committing another crime and which history constitutes a chain of circumstances throwing some light on the probability of their having jointly undertaken to commit the crime charged. Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972).

Examination of coconspirator concerning guilty plea arising out of same events. People v. Craig, 179 Colo. 115, 498 P.2d 942, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1077, 93 S. Ct. 690, 34 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1972).

F. Circumstantial.

Circumstantial evidence is not relegated to secondary status but is to be considered under the same criteria as direct evidence. People v. Durbin, 187 Colo. 230, 529 P.2d 630 (1974).

Conviction of crime may be based upon circumstantial evidence. Diebold v. People, 175 Colo. 96, 485 P.2d 900 (1971).

Circumstantial evidence, when viewed in the light most favorable to the prosecution, can provide proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Salas, 189 Colo. 111, 538 P.2d 437 (1975).

And quantum of proof required same as for direct evidence. The quantum of proof where guilt is founded upon circumstantial evidence is the same as where it is based on direct evidence. Diebold v. People, 175 Colo. 96, 485 P.2d 900 (1971).

So that evidence not compatible with hypothesis of innocence. Where a conviction is sought on circumstantial evidence alone, the prosecution must not only show beyond a reasonable doubt that the alleged facts and circumstances are true, but the facts and circumstances must be such as are incompatible, upon any reasonable hypothesis, with the innocence of the defendant and incapable of explanation upon any reasonable hypothesis other than that of the guilt of the defendant. People v. Calise, 179 Colo. 162, 498 P.2d 1154 (1972).

In a circumstantial evidence case, the evidence must be consistent with guilt and inconsistent with any reasonable hypothesis of innocence. Roybal v. People, 178 Colo. 259, 496 P.2d 1019 (1972); People v. Vigil, 180 Colo. 104, 502 P.2d 418 (1972); People v. Larsen, 180 Colo. 140, 503 P.2d 343 (1972).

And exclusion of every possible theory other than guilt is not required, when referring to the sufficiency of circumstantial evidence. People v. Florez, 179 Colo. 176, 498 P.2d 1162 (1972).

Test is exclusion of every rational hypothesis, which means reasonable hypothesis. People v. Florez, 179 Colo. 176, 498 P.2d 1162 (1972).

Where sufficient question is raised by circumstantial evidence, the finding of the jury is conclusive. Elliott v. People, 176 Colo. 373, 490 P.2d 687 (1971).

Specific intent proved by circumstantial evidence. Specific intent is ordinarily inferable from the facts, and proof thereof is necessarily by circumstantial evidence. Elliott v. People, 176 Colo. 373, 490 P.2d 687 (1971).

Circumstantial evidence held sufficient to justify inference of criminal intent. Evans v. People, 175 Colo. 269, 486 P.2d 1062 (1971).

Fingerprint evidence may in some instances be sufficient to support conviction where that evidence is tied directly to the commission of the crime and no explanation other than guilt exists. Solis v. People, 175 Colo. 127, 485 P.2d 903 (1971).

Fingerprints warrant a conviction when the fingerprints clearly and unequivocally establish that the accused committed the crime. Hervey v. People, 178 Colo. 38, 495 P.2d 204 (1972).

G. Documentary.

Use of photographs. Photographs may be used to graphically portray the appearance and condition of a deceased and the extent of existing wounds and injuries and are competent evidence of any relevant matters which a witness may describe in words. Gass v. People, 177 Colo. 232, 493 P.2d 654 (1972).

Photographs may be used to graphically portray, among other things, the scene of a crime, the identification of a victim, the appearance and condition of the deceased, and the location, nature, and extent of the wounds or injuries, all of which matters are relevant. People v. Jones, 184 Colo. 96, 518 P.2d 819 (1974).

Photographs are competent evidence of any relevant matter which is competent for a witness to describe in words. People v. Jones, 184 Colo. 96, 518 P.2d 819 (1974).

Test for admissibility of photographs rests on whether the probative value of the photographs is "far outweighed" by their potential inflammatory effect on the jury. People v. White, 199 Colo. 82, 606 P.2d 847 (1980).

Test for admissibility applied in People v. Franklin, 683 P.2d 775 (Colo. 1984); People v. Marquiz, 685 P.2d 242 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 726 P.2d 1105 (Colo. 1986).

Not inadmissible because of shocking content. That shocking details of a crime may be revealed by photographs does not render them inadmissible if they are otherwise relevant. Gass v. People, 177 Colo. 232, 493 P.2d 654 (1972); People v. Jones, 184 Colo. 96, 518 P.2d 819 (1974).

Rather, admissibility discretionary with trial court. The trial court has discretion to determine whether a photographic exhibit is unnecessarily gruesome and inflammatory. People v. Jones, 184 Colo. 96, 518 P.2d 819 (1974).

Decision not disturbed absent abuse. Unless an abuse of discretion is shown, a trial court's decision as to admissibility of a photograph will not be disturbed on review. People v. Jones, 184 Colo. 96, 518 P.2d 819 (1974).

Standard for review of admission of pictures into evidence is whether they were without probative value and they served only to incite the jurors to passion, prejudice, vengeance, hatred, disgust, nausea, revolt, and all of the human emotions that are supposed to be omitted from the jury's deliberations. Carroll v. People, 177 Colo. 288, 494 P.2d 80 (1972).

Photographs which should not be used. Photographs such as mug shots which necessarily import prior criminality to the defendant should not be used as evidence at trial. People v. Bugarin, 181 Colo. 57, 507 P.2d 879 (1973).

Although no prejudice in use of mugshot of confederate. Mugshot of defendant's confederate, used by the district attorney for identification purposes, where codefendant was tried separately and the mugshot was taken as a result of the charges in the present case, did not import prior criminal conduct on the defendant's part; no prejudice to defendant resulted by the use of the photograph of his confederate and codefendant for identification purposes in defendant's trial. People v. York, 189 Colo. 16, 537 P.2d 294 (1975).

Pretrial photographic identification. Where the pretrial photographic identification was not, as a matter of law, tainted with impermissible suggestiveness, it is not incumbent upon the prosecution to establish at trial an independent basis for the in-court identification. People v. Opson, 632 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1980).

Out-of-court identification by photographic array held unduly suggestive. People v. Stevens, 642 P.2d 39 (Colo. App. 1981).

Waiver of error regarding admission of photographs. Where no question as to the admission of a photographic exhibit has been raised on appeal, any error has been waived. People v. Jones, 184 Colo. 96, 518 P.2d 819 (1974).

Weight to be given fingerprint evidence for trier of fact. Where a proper foundation was laid for the admission of a fingerprint, the weight to be afforded the fingerprint evidence was for the trier of the fact. People v. Gomez, 189 Colo. 191, 537 P.2d 297 (1975).

Generally, old fingerprint card inadmissible. In the usual case, where other sample prints are available, a fingerprint card made in connection with prior criminal activity should not be admitted because of the danger of disclosing a past criminal record. Serratore v. People, 178 Colo. 341, 497 P.2d 1018 (1972).

Admissibility of tape recording in discretion of trial court. The decision as to the admissibility of a tape recording is one that rests in the sound discretion of the trial court. People v. Quintana, 189 Colo. 330, 540 P.2d 1097 (1975).

H. Exhibits.

Use of exhibits from earlier trial not prejudicial. Fact that certain exhibits used in defendant's trial had court reporter's identification marks on them remaining from their use in the codefendant's trial did not result in any prejudice, and at most, the marks constituted harmless error which is not ground for reversal. People v. Gallegos, 181 Colo. 264, 509 P.2d 596 (1973).

Exhibits of doubtful admissibility to be kept from view of jury. Matters of evidence which are of doubtful admissibility should not be placed on counsel's table where they may readily be seen by a trial jury. Zamora v. People, 175 Colo. 340, 487 P.2d 1116 (1971).

Proper admission of exhibits presumed where not certified as part of appellate record. Where appellate court is unable to appraise the alleged prejudicial effect of exhibits because none are certified as a part of the record on review, the reviewing court may presume that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting them into evidence. Gass v. People, 177 Colo. 232, 493 P.2d 654 (1972).

Reconstructed scene inadmissible where accuracy disputed. Where an exhibit has been arranged simply to portray a scene and thereby support testimonial contentions, and when other witnesses dispute the accuracy or correctness of the reconstructed scene, trial court should not admit the evidence. People v. Wright, 182 Colo. 87, 511 P.2d 460 (1973).

V. ON REVIEW.

Waiver of right to appeal admission of testimony. Where defendant does not move the trial court to strike testimony complained of, such is a waiver of his right to appeal. Larkin v. People, 177 Colo. 156, 493 P.2d 1 (1972).

Absent serious prejudicial error. Where contemporaneous objection to the admission of evidence on the grounds offered for reversal is not made, then, absent serious prejudicial error, the court will not review the issue. Duncan v. People, 178 Colo. 314, 497 P.2d 1029 (1972).

Lack of contemporaneous objection at trial constitutes waiver of objections to admission of evidence, and such issues may not be raised on appeal; if they are, they will not be considered unless errors are so fundamental as to seriously prejudice basic rights of defendant. Larkin v. People, 177 Colo. 156, 493 P.2d 1 (1972); People v. Vigil, 180 Colo. 104, 502 P.2d 418 (1972).

On review, evidence is viewed in light most favorable to the jury's verdict. People v. Lankford, 185 Colo. 445, 524 P.2d 1382 (1974).

On the issue of sufficiency of the evidence to sustain a jury's verdict, the evidence, which includes all reasonable inferences which may be drawn therefrom, must be viewed in the light which most favors the jury's verdict. People v. Trujillo, 184 Colo. 387, 524 P.2d 1379 (1974).

Reviewing court is required to view the evidence in the light most supportive of the jury's verdict, for purposes of appeal. People v. Eades, 187 Colo. 74, 528 P.2d 382 (1974).

Where there is an overwhelming amount of evidence in the record that supports the jury's verdict, that verdict cannot be set aside on review. People v. Barker, 189 Colo. 148, 538 P.2d 109 (1975).

Because the jury is presumed to have adopted that evidence which supports its verdict. People v. Lankford, 185 Colo. 445, 524 P.2d 1382 (1974).

Reversal not to be predicated on admission of own evidence. A defendant cannot predicate reversible error on the admission of evidence he offered as a part of his defense. Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972).

Appellate court will not review weight of evidence jury found sufficient. Where the jury has found the guilt of an accused to have been proven beyond a reasonable doubt, a court on review will not weigh the evidence. Schermerhorn v. People, 175 Colo. 256, 486 P.2d 428 (1971).

A reviewing court cannot invade the province of the jury by making a redetermination on conflicting evidence. People v. Elliston, 181 Colo. 118, 508 P.2d 379 (1973).

The supreme court will not substitute its judgment for that of the jury in resolving conflicts in the evidence. People v. Saavedra, 184 Colo. 90, 518 P.2d 283 (1974); People v. O'Donnell, 184 Colo. 434, 521 P.2d 771 (1974).

Nor reassess credibility of witnesses. The supreme court will not substitute its judgment for that of the jury in assessing the credibility of witnesses. People v. Saavedra, 184 Colo. 90, 518 P.2d 283 (1974); People v. O'Donnell, 184 Colo. 434, 521 P.2d 771 (1974).

Appellate court must look at evidence in state's favor after conviction. Where the evidence was conflicting in many particulars, the court on appeal must look at it in the light most favorable to the state in determining whether there is substantial evidence to support the verdict against defendant. People v. Focht, 180 Colo. 259, 504 P.2d 1096 (1972).

When reviewing the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain a conviction, it must be examined in the light most favorable to the prosecution. People v. Scheidt, 182 Colo. 374, 513 P.2d 446 (1973).

Evidence sufficient to sustain judgment. Martin v. People, 178 Colo. 94, 495 P.2d 537 (1972).

For reversal, questionable evidence must substantially influence verdict. To constitute reversible error, the questionable evidence must have had a substantial influence on the verdict.

People v. Thomas, 189 Colo. 490, 542 P.2d 387 (1975).

The trial court did not commit plain error in allowing the prosecution to elicit testimony during its case-in-chief showing the victim's character for peacefulness. During opening statements, the defense counsel raised the affirmative defense of self-defense. In addition, defense counsel elicited testimony to support the affirmative defense during cross examination of a prosecution witness. People v. Baca, 852 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1992).

In addition, the court did not abuse its discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial on the basis that the court improperly allowed cumulative evidence of the defendant's flight to be admitted into evidence. Even though the prosecution elicited testimony during cross-examination that the defendant was living under an assumed name, without establishing the relevance of the evidence as instructed by the court, the court issued a curative instruction to counter any unfair prejudice to the defendant. People v. Baca, 852 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1992).

Rule 26.1. Determination of Foreign Law

A party who intends to raise an issue concerning the law of a foreign country shall give reasonable written notice. The court, in determining foreign law, may consider any relevant material or source, including testimony, whether or not submitted by a party. The court's determination shall be treated as a ruling on a question of law.

Rule 26.2. Written Records

Rule 27. Proof of Official Record

Deleted by amendment November 9, 2006, effective January 1, 2007.

Rule 28. No Colorado Rule

Rule 29. Motion for Acquittal

(a) Motion for Judgment of Acquittal. Motions for directed verdict are abolished and motions for judgment of acquittal shall be used in their place. The court on motion of a defendant or of its own motion shall order the entry of a judgment of acquittal of one or more offenses charged in the indictment or information, or complaint, or summons and complaint after the evidence on either side is closed, if the evidence is insufficient to sustain a conviction of such offense or offenses. If a defendant's motion for judgment of acquittal at the close of the evidence offered by the prosecution is not granted, the defendant may offer evidence without having reserved the right. The court may not reserve ruling on a motion for judgment of acquittal made at the close of the People's case.

(b) Reservation of Decision on Motion. If a motion for a judgment of acquittal is made at the close of all the evidence, the court may reserve decision on the motion, submit the case to the jury, and decide the motion either before the jury returns a verdict or after it returns a verdict of guilty or is discharged without having returned a verdict.

(c) Motion After Verdict or Discharge of Jury. If the jury returns a verdict of guilty or is discharged without having returned a verdict, a motion for judgment of acquittal may be made or renewed within 14 days after the jury is discharged or within such further time as the court may fix during the 14-day period. If a verdict of guilty is returned, the court may on such motion set aside the verdict and enter judgment of acquittal. If no verdict is returned, the court may enter judgment of acquittal. It shall not be necessary to the making of such a motion that such a similar motion has been made prior to the submission of the case to the jury.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Judge has more leeway in granting in trial to court. In a trial to the court, the judge sits also as the trier of fact, and, thus, he has considerably more leeway in granting a motion for judgment of acquittal than if the case were tried before a jury. People v. Kirkland, 174 Colo. 362, 483 P.2d 1349 (1971).

Rule as basis for jurisdiction. Edwards v. People, 176 Colo. 478, 491 P.2d 566 (1971); People v. Ware, 187 Colo. 28, 528 P.2d 224 (1974); People v. Gould, 193 Colo. 176, 563 P.2d 945 (1977).

Applied in People v. Berry, 191 Colo. 125, 550 P.2d 332 (1976); People v. Maestas, 196 Colo. 245, 586 P.2d 4 (1978); People v. Paulsen, 198 Colo. 458, 601 P.2d 634 (1979); People in Interest of G.L., 631 P.2d 1118 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hoffman, 655 P.2d 393 (Colo. 1982).

II. MOTION FOR JUDGMENT OF ACQUITTAL.

Prosecution's burden to withstand motion. To withstand a motion for a judgment of acquittal, the prosecution has the burden of establishing a prima facie case of guilt and must introduce sufficient evidence to establish guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Bennett, 183 Colo. 125, 515 P.2d 466 (1973); People v. Ramos, 708 P.2d 1347 (Colo. 1985); People v. Hollenbeck, 944 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1996).

The prosecution is given the benefit of every reasonable inference which might fairly be drawn from the evidence as long as there is a logical and convincing connection between the facts established and the conclusion inferred. People v. Hollenbeck, 944 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1996).

The proper standard to be applied to a defendant's motion for acquittal is whether the relevant admissible evidence, both direct and circumstantial, when viewed in the light most favorable to the prosecution, is substantial and sufficient to support a conclusion by a reasonable mind that the defendant is guilty of the charge beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Gonzales, 666 P.2d 123 (Colo. 1983); People v. Newton, 940 P.2d 1065 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd on other grounds, 966 P.2d 563 (Colo. 1998); People v. Madison, 176 P.3d 793 (Colo. App. 2007).

Prima facie case against defendant required. The primary question for determining the merits of a motion under this rule is: Did the prosecution establish a prima facie case against the defendant? People v. Gomez, 189 Colo. 91, 537 P.2d 297 (1975).

When the state introduces evidence on its case in chief from which the jury may properly infer the essential elements of the crime, the state has then made out a "prima facie" case impregnable against a motion for acquittal. People v. Chavez, 182 Colo. 216, 511 P.2d 883 (1973); People v. Rivera, 37 Colo. App. 4, 542 P.2d 90 (1975).

Or questions for jury's determination. A court properly denies a defendant's motion for acquittal at the conclusion of all of the evidence where the question of credibility of the witnesses and the ultimate guilt of defendant remain, for such matters are for the jury's determination. Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972).

Where record contains ample evidence to sustain a conviction, the trial court is correct in denying the defendant's motion for judgment of acquittal. People v. Small, Jr., 177 Colo. 118, 493 P.2d 15 (1972); People v. Adams, 678 P.2d 572 (Colo. App. 1984).

Standard is same for trial to court or to jury. The standard for determining the merits of a motion for a judgment of acquittal is the same whether the trial is to the court or to a jury. People v. Gomez, 189 Colo. 91, 537 P.2d 297 (1975).

When refusal of motion at end of state's case may be reviewed. When an accused moves for acquittal at the close of the state's case, he is not entitled to have an adverse ruling on the motion reviewed unless he stands on the motion. Silcott v. People, 176 Colo. 442, 492 P.2d 70 (1971); People v. Olinger, 180 Colo. 58, 502 P.2d 79 (1972); People v. Becker, 181 Colo. 384, 509 P.2d 799 (1973).

If defendant introduces evidence following denial of a motion for acquittal made at the close of the state's case, the correctness of the ruling is determined from the state of the evidence at the end of the trial. Silcott v. People, 176 Colo. 442, 492 P.2d 70 (1971); People v. Becker, 181 Colo. 384, 509 P.2d 799 (1973).

But review not on state's evidence alone. Where, upon trial court's denial of a defendant's motion for acquittal at close of the state's case, the defendant proceeds to offer evidence warranting submission of case to jury, defendant cannot assert error on the state's evidence alone. People v. Olinger, 180 Colo. 58, 502 P.2d 79 (1972).

Effect of denial of motion. When a trial court denies a defendant's motion for acquittal, it in effect rules that the evidence presented by the state is entirely consistent with the defendant's guilt and that, upon any reasonable hypothesis, this evidence is not also consistent with the defendant's innocence. Nunn v. People, 177 Colo. 87, 493 P.2d 6 (1972); People v. Hankin, 179 Colo. 70, 498 P.2d 1116 (1972).

Role of trial judge in passing upon motion. In passing upon a motion for judgment of acquittal, the trial judge is required to give full consideration to the right of the jury to determine the credibility of witnesses and the weight to be afforded evidence, as well as the right to draw all justifiable inferences of fact from the evidence. People v. Bennett, 183 Colo. 125, 515 P.2d 466 (1973).

When a trial judge is confronted with a motion for a judgment of acquittal at either the close of the prosecution's case, or the close of all of the evidence, he must determine whether the evidence before the jury is sufficient in both quantity and quality to submit the issue of the defendant's guilt or innocence to the jury. People v. Bennett, 183 Colo. 125, 515 P.2d 466 (1973); People v. Franklin, 645 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1982).

The issue before the trial judge in passing upon a motion for judgment of acquittal is whether the relevant evidence, both direct and circumstantial, when viewed as a whole and in the light most favorable to the prosecution, is substantial and sufficient to support a conclusion by a reasonable mind that the defendant is guilty of the charge beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Bennett, 183 Colo. 125, 515 P.2d 466 (1973); People v. Waggoner, 196 Colo. 578, 595 P.2d 217 (1979); People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981); People v. Gomez, 632 P.2d 586 (Colo. 1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 943, 102 S. Ct. 1439, 71 L. Ed. 2d 655 (1982); People v. Andrews, 632 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1981); People v. Franklin, 645 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1982); People v. Brassfield, 652 P.2d 588 (Colo. 1982); People v. Renstrom, 657 P.2d 461 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983); People v. Graham, 678 P.2d 1043 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1216, 104 S. Ct. 2660, 81 L. Ed. 2d 366 (1984); People v. Paiva, 765 P.2d 581 (Colo. 1988); People v. Williams, 827 P.2d 612 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Ramirez, 30 P.3d 807 (Colo. App. 2001).

When ruling on a motion for judgment of acquittal, the trial court must consider both the prosecution and the defense evidence. In performing this function, the court is bound by five well-established principles of law. First, the court must give the prosecution the benefit of every reasonable inference, which might be fairly drawn from the evidence. Second, the determination of the credibility of witnesses is solely within the province of the jury. Third, the trial court may not serve as a thirteenth juror and determine what specific weight should be accorded to various pieces of evidence or by resolving conflicts in the evidence. Fourth, a modicum of relevant evidence will not rationally support a conviction beyond a reasonable doubt. Finally, verdicts in criminal cases may not be based on guessing, speculation, or conjecture. People v. Sprouse, 983 P.2d 771 (Colo. 1999); People v. Beatty, 80 P.3d 847 (Colo. App. 2003).

Judge not to invade province of jury. In passing upon a motion for judgment of acquittal, the trial judge should not attempt to serve as a thirteenth juror or invade the province of the jury, but should prevent a case from being submitted to the jury when the prosecution has failed to meet its burden of proof. People v. Bennett, 183 Colo. 125, 515 P.2d 466 (1973); People v. Ramirez, 30 P.3d 807 (Colo. App. 2001).

The determination of the credibility of witnesses is a matter solely within the province of the jury. Only when the testimony of a witness is so palpably incredible and so totally unbelievable as to be rejected as a matter of law can a court properly take this function from a jury. People v. Franklin, 645 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1982); People v. Ramirez, 30 P.3d 807 (Colo. App. 2001).

Testimony is ''incredible as a matter of law'' if it is in conflict with nature or fully established or conceded facts. People v. Ramirez, 30 P.3d 807 (Colo. App. 2001).

Testimony that is merely biased, inconsistent, or conflicting is not incredible as a matter of law. People v. Ramirez, 30 P.3d 807 (Colo. App. 2001).

Evidence must be viewed favorably to state. In ruling on a motion for judgment of acquittal, the court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the people. People v. Chavez, 182 Colo. 216, 511 P.2d 883 (1973).

The trial court must give the prosecution the benefit of every reasonable inference which might be fairly drawn from the evidence. People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983).

Where prosecution's evidence is insufficient to support conviction in that it does not prove all the elements of the offense charged, the court should enter a judgment of acquittal. People v. Rutt, 179 Colo. 180, 500 P.2d 362 (1972).

Juvenile court erred when it denied motion for acquittal where there was a constructive amendment variance between the charge and the evidence presented at trial. People ex rel. H.W., III, 226 P.3d 1134 (Colo. App. 2009).

Or fails to establish guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Where the testimony is not sufficiently clear and convincing, standing alone, to establish guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, the trial court should grant a defendant's motion for acquittal at the end of all the evidence. Davis v. People, 176 Colo. 378, 490 P.2d 948 (1971).

When viewing the evidence upon a motion for acquittal, the trial judge must determine whether a reasonable mind would conclude that the defendant's guilt as to each material element of the offense was proven beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Bennett, 183 Colo. 125, 515 P.2d 466 (1973); People v. Ramos, 708 P.2d 1347 (Colo. 1985).

Test for denial of motion where guilt proven by circumstantial evidence. Where the guilt of the defendant is proven by circumstantial evidence, the test for denial of a motion for judgment of acquittal is whether there is evidence in the record from which a jury can find beyond a reasonable doubt that the circumstances are such as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis of innocence. People v. Naranjo, 181 Colo. 273, 509 P.2d 1235 (1973).

Substantial evidence test affords same status to circumstantial evidence as to direct evidence, and an exclusively circumstantial case need not exclude every reasonable hypothesis other than guilt to withstand a motion for a judgment of acquittal. People v. Andrews, 632 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1981).

In passing upon a motion for judgment of acquittal, the same test for measuring the sufficiency of evidence should apply, whether the evidence is direct or circumstantial. People v. Bennett, 183 Colo. 125, 515 P.2d 466 (1973).

A motion for judgment of acquittal does not preserve a challenge to the foundation for expert testimony that was admitted without objection. Insofar as defendant relied solely on the purported lack of an adequate foundation for the expert opinion, defendant waived the insufficiency of evidence argument. People v. Wheeler, 170 P.3d 817 (Colo. App. 2007).

Ruling against the state is a "final judgment". Although the granting of motions to quash, demurrers, pleas in bar, pleas in abatement, motions in arrest of judgment, and the declaration of a statute unconstitutional have been abolished by Crim. P. 12(a) and Crim. P. 29(a), the legal effect of the present nomenclature for these procedures is the same, that is, a ruling adverse to the state effectively terminates its prosecution of the defendant and results in a "final judgment". People v. Cochran, 176 Colo. 364, 490 P.2d 684 (1971).

A trial court's ruling granting a defendant's motion for judgment of acquittal at the close of the prosecution's evidence is not a final order unless and until the court terminates the trial by dismissing the jury. Before that time, the trial court retains authority to reconsider its ruling. Thus, the court could submit the case to the jury on a lesser included offense. People v. Scott, 10 P.3d 686 (Colo. App. 2000).

Defendants in Colorado are on notice that a midtrial order granting a motion for judgment of acquittal is not final and is subject to change until the jury is dismissed. People v. Madison, 176 P.3d 793 (Colo. App. 2007).

District attorney may appeal. Since the issue of sufficiency of the evidence as postured where the trial court has granted a defendant's motion for judgment of acquittal, involves a question of law, the district attorney is given authority to appeal. People v. Kirkland, 174 Colo. 362, 483 P.2d 1349 (1971).

Though such an appeal is in most instances nonproductive. An appeal after the trial judge has granted a motion for judgment of acquittal upon the completion of the state's evidence on the ground that the evidence is insufficient is, in most instances, a completely nonproductive exercise. People v. Kirkland, 174 Colo. 362, 483 P.2d 1349 (1971).

Trial court's decision not set aside where adequately supported. Upon appeal of the denial of motion for judgment of acquittal, where the trial court is the trier of fact, its decision will not be set aside when adequately supported by the evidence, even though a portion of that evidence may be in conflict. Stewart v. People, 175 Colo. 304, 487 P.2d 371 (1971).

Denial of motion for acquittal upheld. White v. People, 175 Colo. 119, 486 P.2d 4 (1971); Marn v. People, 175 Colo. 242, 486 P.2d 424 (1971); Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 971 (1972); Sergent v. People, 177 Colo. 354, 497 P.2d 983 (1972); Hervey v. People, 178 Colo. 38, 495 P.2d 204 (1972); People In Interest of B. L. M. v. B. L. M., 31 Colo. App. 106, 500 P.2d 146 (1972); People v. Olona, 180 Colo. 299, 505 P.2d 372 (1973); People v. Thomas, 181 Colo. 317, 509 P.2d 592 (1973).

Denial of motion for judgment of acquittal held error. Johns v. People, 179 Colo. 8, 497 P.2d 1253 (1972); Velarde v. People, 179 Colo. 207, 500 P.2d 125 (1972).

Granting of motion for judgment of acquittal disapproved. People v. Franklin, 645 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1982); People v. Gonzales, 666 P.2d 123 (Colo. 1983); People v. Madison, 176 P.3d 793 (Colo. App. 2007).

Judgment of acquittal upheld. People v. Emeson, 179 Colo. 308, 500 P.2d 368 (1972); People v. Theel, 180 Colo. 348, 505 P.2d 964 (1973).

III. MOTION AFTER VERDICT OR DISCHARGE OF JURY.

Standard applicable to motions for acquittal made before a case goes to the jury also applies to motions made after verdict or discharge. The court shall order the entry of a judgment of acquittal if the evidence is insufficient to sustain a conviction of such offense. People v. Waggoner, 196 Colo. 578, 595 P.2d 217 (1979).

Motion may be renewed after verdict. When a motion for judgment of acquittal is made at the close of all the evidence and denied, the motion may be renewed after verdict. People v. Chapman, 174 Colo. 545, 484 P.2d 1234 (1971).

Motion satisfies requirement of motion for new trial. The filing of a motion for acquittal satisfies the purpose of a required motion for a new trial, since the only purpose of requiring a motion for new trial is to afford a fair opportunity to the trial court to correct its own errors, and, thus, where a defendant who does not want a new trial repeatedly asserts a motion for acquittal throughout the trial, the denial of the motion puts the defendant in a position to seek review of the judgment. Haas v. People, 155 Colo. 371, 394 P.2d 845 (1964).

Court cannot modify jury verdict under this rule. Where there were no instructions tendered, given, or refused on any offense other than the offense charged in the information, but the trial court modified the verdict of the jury, Rule 29(c), Crim. P., delineates the power and discretion of the court under the circumstances, and, accordingly, the cause will be remanded to the trial court with directions to reinstate the verdict of the jury and to rule on defendant's combined motion for judgment of acquittal or, in the alternative, for a new trial. People v. Chapman, 174 Colo. 545, 484 P.2d 1234 (1971).

If the evidence, although conflicting, supports the jury's verdict of guilty, the verdict must be upheld. People v. Emeson, 179 Colo. 308, 500 P.2d 368 (1972).

Jury verdicts shall not be reversed for inconsistency if the crimes charged required different elements of proof and the jury could find from the very same evidence that the element of one crime was present while finding that the element of another crime was absent. People v. Strachan, 775 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1989).

When a trial judge detects a material deficiency in the evidence after a careful examination of it and expresses a strong and abiding belief that the jury's verdict of guilty cannot stand, it becomes his responsibility to vacate the verdict. People v. Emeson, 179 Colo. 308, 500 P.2d 368 (1972).

Court may not sua sponte order a judgment of acquittal after the date it has "fixed" pursuant to section (c), and any extension of time after that date is a nullity for purposes of entertaining a motion for judgment of acquittal. People v. Darland, 200 Colo. 276, 613 P.2d 1310 (1980).

Even if victim was grossly inaccurate or confused about the incidents, it was not physically impossible for assaults to have occurred as she testified they did, and victim's therapist testified that inconsistencies and contradictions in her story were normal for a child of recurrent abuse. Thus, child victim's testimony was not incredible as a matter of law, and it was error for trial court to grant defendant's motion for judgment of acquittal notwithstanding the verdict on that basis. People v. Ramirez, 30 P.3d 807 (Colo. App. 2001).

Rule 30. Instructions

A party who desires instructions shall tender his proposed instructions to the court in duplicate, the original being unsigned. All instructions shall be submitted to the parties, who shall make all objections thereto before they are given to the jury. Only the grounds so specified shall be considered on motion for a new trial or on review. Before argument the court shall read its instructions to the jury, but shall not comment upon the evidence. Such instructions may be read to the jury and commented upon by counsel during the argument, and they shall be taken by the jury when it retires. All instructions offered by the parties, or given by court, shall be filed with the clerk and, with the endorsement thereon indicating the action of the court, shall be taken as a part of the record of the case.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Limitations of the Power of Courts in Instructing Juries'', see 6 Dicta 23 (Mar. 1929). For article, ''Criminal Procedure'', which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with the failure to instruct on lesser included offense, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev.

191 (1985). For article, ''Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986'', which discusses a case relating to jury instructions, see 15 Colo. Law. 1616 (1986).

"Instruction" construed. An instruction is an exposition of the principles of law applicable to a case, or to some branch or phase of a case, which the jury is bound to apply in order to render the verdict, establishing the rights of the parties in accordance with the facts proved. Kolkman v. People, 89 Colo. 8, 300 P. 575 (1931).

Jury presumed to understand and heed. In the absence of a showing to the contrary, it is presumed that the jury understands instructions and heeds them. People v. Motley, 179 Colo. 77, 498 P.2d 339 (1972); People v. Jacobs, 179 Colo. 182, 499 P.2d 615 (1972); People v. Knapp, 180 Colo. 280, 505 P.2d 7 (1973).

Thorpe, 40 Colo. App. 159, 570 P.2d 1311 (1977); People v. Padilla, 638 P.2d 15 (Colo. 1981); People v. Swanson, 638 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1981); People v. Mack, 638 P.2d 257 (Colo. 1981); People v. Founds, 631 P.2d 1166 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Dillon, 633 P.2d 504 (Colo. App. 1981); Massey v. People, 649 P.2d 1070 (Colo. 1982); People v. Handy, 657 P.2d 963 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Jones, 665 P.2d 127 (Colo. App. 1982).

II. DUTY TO INSTRUCT.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, ''Jury Nullification and the Rule of Law'', see 17 Colo. Law. 2151 (1988).

Purpose of this rule is to enable the trial judge to prevent error from occurring and to correct an error if an improper instruction is tendered. People v. Barker, 180 Colo. 28, 501 P.2d 1041 (1972).

The procedure set forth in this rule affords counsel the opportunity to structure closing arguments based on the instructions which will govern the jury's deliberations. People v. Bastin, 937 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court has a duty to instruct the jury properly on all of the elements of the offenses charged. People v. Bastin, 937 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court has a corresponding duty to correct erroneous instructions. People v. Bastin, 937 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1996).

Counsel has a duty to assist the court by objecting to erroneous instructions and by tendering correct instructions. Arellano v. People, 177 Colo. 286, 493 P.2d 1362 (1972); Fresquez v. People, 178 Colo. 220, 497 P.2d 1246 (1972); People v. Zapata, 759 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1988).

It is incumbent on counsel to object to the court's proposed instruction, if defective or deficient, and to request and tender correct instructions, or instructions that have been overlooked or omitted by the court. People v. Sharpe, 183 Colo. 64, 514 P.2d 1138 (1973).

And to request instruction. It is the responsibility of a party's counsel to request an instruction if he believed circumstances warranted, and, having failed to do so, the party cannot afterwards complain that such instruction was not given. Edwards v. People, 73 Colo. 377, 215 P. 855 (1923); Rhodus v. People, 158 Colo. 264, 406 P.2d 679 (1965).

All objections must be made prior to submission to jury. Defendant must make all objections which he has to instructions prior to their submission to the jury. People v. O'Donnell, 184 Colo. 104, 518 P.2d 945 (1974); People v. Tilley, 184 Colo. 424, 520 P.2d 1046 (1974).

In determining the propriety of any one instruction, the instructions must be considered as a whole, and, if the instructions as a whole properly instruct a jury, then there is no error. People v. Kurts, 721 P.2d 1201 (Colo. App. 1986).

Failure to instruct the jury properly with respect to an essential element of the offense charged generally constitutes reversible error. People v. Williams, 707 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Gracey, 940 P.2d 1050 (Colo. App. 1996).

The trial court's failure to re-instruct the jury on the presumption of innocence and the burden of proof prior to closing arguments did not constitute structural or plain error. The court instructed the jury on these matters before the trial and reminded the jury of these instructions before closing arguments. The court also pointed jurors to their handbooks that included the instruction. This was enough to indicate that jurors were aware of the proper standard of review. People v. Baenziger, 97 P.3d 271 (Colo. App. 2004).

Jury notebooks are not to supplant the requirement of this rule that jurors be orally instructed prior to closing arguments. People v. Baenziger, 97 P.3d 271 (Colo. App. 2004).

The practice of instructing the jurors immediately prior to closing arguments has many benefits, including ensuring that the jury hears and considers all the applicable law before deliberations and aiding the overall comprehension of the jury. Because the presumption of innocence and the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt are so critical in a criminal case, it is especially important to instruct the jury on those points at the close of the case.

People v. Baenziger, 97 P.3d 271 (Colo. App. 2004).

It was not plain error that the court only instructed the jury about defendant's right not to testify during voir dire, but not immediately before closing arguments as required by this rule. People v. Deleon, 2017 COA 140, __ P.3d __.

B. Law of the Case.

Duty to instruct on all issues. The trial court has a duty to properly instruct the jury on every issue presented, and the failure to do so with respect to the essential elements of the crime charged constitutes plain error. People v. Archuleta, 180 Colo. 156, 503 P.2d 346 (1972).

Ingrained in the law is the right of an accused to insist that the court instruct the jury on all legal questions in order to reach a true verdict. People v. Woods, 179 Colo. 441, 501 P.2d 117 (1972).

It is the trial court's duty to instruct the jury on all matters of law which it may consider. People v. Alvarez, 187 Colo. 290, 530 P.2d 506 (1975).

Trial court has duty to instruct the jury on the law, properly, plainly, and accurately, on every issue presented. People v. Zapata, 759 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd on other grounds, 779 P.2d 1307 (Colo. 1989).

Instruction directing the jury to accept as fact any portion of a witness' testimony invades the province of the jury. People v. Roybal, 775 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1989).

Thus, in a felony child abuse case where the defendant raised the affirmative defense of religious healing, the defendant's tendered instruction asking the court to instruct the jury that the court had determined as a matter of law that the defendant was acting in good faith and that the defendant was a duly accredited practitioner of a recognized church or religion would have invaded the province of the jury, and therefor was properly denied. People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Whether or not requested to do so. The court has a duty to fully instruct the jury on every issue presented, whether requested to do so or not. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974).

Instructions to the jury should be confined to the law of the case, leaving the facts to be determined by the jury. Sopris v. Truax, 1 Colo. 89 (1868); Rumley v. People, 149 Colo. 132, 368 P.2d 197 (1962); People v. Bercillio, 179 Colo. 383, 500 P.2d 975 (1972).

And to issues for which evidence has been presented. Instructions should relate to and be confined to issues concerning which evidence has been presented. Rumley v. People, 149 Colo. 132, 368 P.2d 197 (1962).

Including presumptions of fact. It is the duty of the court to draw the attention of the jury to the points in the case and to presumptions of fact, which the law authorizes them to deduce from the evidence. Hill v. People, 1 Colo. 436 (1872).

As well as issues presented by pleadings. No instruction should be given by the court, either on its own motion or at the request of counsel, which tenders an issue that is not presented by the pleadings or supported by the evidence or which deviates therefrom in any material respect. Martinez v. People, 166 Colo. 524, 444 P.2d 641 (1968); Luna v. People, 170 Colo. 1, 461 P.2d 724 (1969).

Instructions must be plain and accurate. It is the duty of the trial court to instruct the jury so plainly and accurately on the law of the case that they may comprehend the principles involved. Rumley v. People, 149 Colo. 132, 368 P.2d 197 (1962); People v. Garcia, 690 P.2d 869 (Colo. App. 1984).

It is bad practice to give to the jury instruction on abstract propositions of law not called for by the evidence even though the instruction is harmless. Nilan v. People, 27 Colo. 206, 60 P. 485 (1900).

The trial court should instruct on a principle of law when there is some evidence to support it, but should not instruct on abstract principles of law unrelated to the issues in controversy. People v. Kurts, 721 P.2d 1201 (Colo. App. 1986).

Or excerpts from court opinions. Mere abstract statements of law or excerpts from court opinions generally should not be given as instructions. Rumley v. People, 149 Colo. 132, 368 P.2d 197 (1962).

Or law review article. To allow counsel to read an opinion from a law review article on the credibility of eyewitness identifications would have substituted the writer for the judge, and usurped the trial court's duty to instruct on the law. People v. Alvarez, 187 Colo. 290, 530 P.2d 506 (1975).

Sufficiency of instruction determined by facts of case. The question of the sufficiency of instructions must be determined always by the facts of each case. Rumley v. People, 149 Colo. 132, 368 P.2d 197 (1962).

Requested instruction not justified by the evidence is properly refused. Morletti v. People, 72 Colo. 7, 209 P. 796 (1922); Kinselle v. People, 75 Colo. 579, 227 P. 823 (1924); Dickson v. People, 82 Colo. 233, 259 P. 1038 (1927); Rumley v. People, 149 Colo. 132, 368 P.2d 197 (1962).

And refusal is not error. Where the court finds that there is no evidence of a certain matter, it is not error to refuse to instruct thereon. McCune v. People, 179 Colo. 262, 499 P.2d 1184 (1972).

C. Defendant's Theory.

Accused in a criminal case is entitled to an instruction based on his theory of the case. Martinez v. People, 166 Colo. 524, 444 P.2d 641 (1968); Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972); People v. Montague, 181 Colo. 143, 508 P.2d 388 (1973); People v. Griego, 183 Colo. 419, 517 P.2d 460 (1973); People v. White, 632 P.2d 609 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Anaya, 732 P.2d 1241 (Colo. App. 1986), rev'd on other grounds, 764 P.2d 779 (Colo. 1988); People v. Banks, 804 P.2d 203 (Colo. App. 1990).

An instruction embodying a defendant's theory of the case must be given by the trial court if the record contains any evidence to support the theory, the rationale being the belief that it is for the jury and not the court to determine the truth of the defendant's theory. People v. Nunez, 841 P.2d 261 (Colo. 1992).

A trial court has an affirmative obligation to cooperate with counsel to either correct the tendered theory of the case instruction or to incorporate the substance of such in an instruction drafted by the court. People v. Nunez, 841 P.2d 261 (Colo. 1992).

Although an alibi defense not an affirmative defense so as to place on the People the burden of proof to rebut, and trial court did not err by refusing a theory of case instruction treating alibi as an affirmative defense, defendant was entitled to a properly worded instruction setting forth his theory of the case. People v. Nunez, 824 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1991).

As constitutional right. A defendant has a constitutional right to have a lucid, accurate, and comprehensive statement by the court to the jury of the law on the subject from his standpoint. Bustamonte v. People, 157 Colo. 146, 401 P.2d 597 (1965).

No matter how improbable or unreasonable the contention, a defendant is entitled to an appropriate instruction upon the hypothesis that it might be true. Johnson v. People, 145 Colo. 314, 358 P.2d 873 (1961); People v. Moya, 182 Colo. 290, 512 P.2d 1155 (1973); People v. Banks, 804 P.2d 203 (Colo. App. 1990); People v. Nunez, 841 P.2d 261 (Colo. 1992); People v. Gordon, 32 P.3d 575 (Colo. App. 2001).

Or poorly drafted. The fact that an instruction on the defendant's theory may be ineptly worded, grammatically incorrect, or inaccurate in some particular does not excuse the trial court from properly instructing on the theory of defense, assuming there is evidence to support such an instruction. People v. Moya, 182 Colo. 290, 512 P.2d 1155 (1973).

Failure to give instruction requires new trial. Where no instruction is given by the trial court embodying the theory of defendant, a new trial must be had. Johnson v. People, 145 Colo. 314, 358 P.2d 873 (1961).

Because the determination of the truth of defendant's theory is a jury function, it is error for the court to refuse to give defendant's instruction on the theory of his defense. People v. Moya, 182 Colo. 290, 512 P.2d 1155 (1973); Nora v. People, 176 Colo. 454, 491 P.2d 62 (1971).

No new trial required if erroneous instruction causes no prejudice. Where instruction implied that one nonessential factor was an element of the crime, but jury's finding on that point was immaterial to the verdict and defense counsel was not unfairly misled in formulating closing argument or prevented from arguing any meritorious defense, denial of defense's motion for mistrial was not an abuse of discretion. People v. Bastin, 937 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1996).

The failure to give a jury instruction on a defendant's theory of the case constitutes reversible error. People v. Nunez, 841 P.2d 261 (Colo. 1992).

Instruction must be grounded upon evidence and in proper form. A defendant under certain circumstances is entitled to an instruction based on his theory of the case, but it must be grounded upon the evidence and not a mere fanciful invention of counsel nor one involving an impossibility, and it must be in proper form. Marn v. People, 175 Colo. 242, 486 P.2d 424 (1971); Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972).

Defendant is entitled to an instruction on his theory of the case subject to two conditions: The instruction must be in proper form, and must be supported by evidence in the record. People v. Duran, 185 Colo. 359, 524 P.2d 296 (1974).

Defendant's jury instruction on his theory of the case must be in proper form and based on evidence in the record. People v. Griego, 183 Colo. 419, 517 P.2d 460 (1973).

A defendant is entitled to an instruction on his theory of the case, provided it is grounded in the evidence. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974).

A defendant is entitled to instructions consistent with his theory of the case if there is evidence to support it. People v. Nace, 182 Colo. 127, 511 P.2d 501 (1973); People v. Travis, 183 Colo. 255, 516 P.2d 121 (1973); People v. Meller, 185 Colo. 389, 524 P.2d 1366 (1974); People v. Shearer, 650 P.2d 1293 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Banks, 804 P.2d 203 (Colo. App. 1990).

General instruction should be adapted to defendant's theory. When a general instruction does not particularly direct the jury's attention to defendant's theory, it is the duty of the court either to correct the tendered instruction or to give the substance of it in an instruction drafted by the court. Nora v. People, 176 Colo. 454, 491 P.2d 62 (1971).

Or supplementary instruction given. If a statutory instruction does not fit a particular case, or if it is given and yet other supplementary instructions are needed to state a defendant's position, then such, when properly worded and tendered, should be submitted to the jury. Bustamonte v. People, 157 Colo. 146, 401 P.2d 597 (1965).

No instruction where no theory other than denial set forth. When a tendered instruction does not set forth any theory of the case other than a general denial, is merely a restatement of defendant's evidence without any resultant theory, and is merely another attempt to reargue the case, the defendant is not entitled to have it reiterated in instructions given by the court. Marn v. People, 175 Colo. 242, 486 P.2d 424 (1971); People v. Cole, 926 P.2d 164 (Colo. App. 1996).

A defendant is not entitled to an instruction on a theory of the case that is simply a denial of the charges and a trial court may also refuse to give a tendered theory of the case instruction which contains argumentative matter or which is merely a restatement of the defendant's evidence. People v. Gracey, 940 P.2d 1050 (Colo. App. 1996).

Defendant not entitled to different instructions concerning same subject. Though a defendant is entitled to an instruction on his theory of the case, he is not entitled to different instructions, all concerning the same general subject, and each couched in only slightly different verbiage. Bennett v. People, 168 Colo. 360, 451 P.2d 443 (1969).

A properly worded instruction setting forth defendant's theory, when supported by the evidence, should always be given by a trial court unless the defendant's theory is encompassed in other instructions to the jury. People v. Moya, 182 Colo. 290, 512 P.2d 1155 (1973); People v. Meller, 185 Colo. 389, 524 P.2d 1366 (1974).

All that is required is that the theory of the case be accurately embodied in the instructions given by the court. McCune v. People, 179 Colo. 262, 499 P.2d 1184 (1972); People v. Montague, 181 Colo. 143, 508 P.2d 388 (1973).

The trial court properly rejected defendant's theory of defense instruction on the grounds that it was argumentative, did little more than summarize defendant's version of the incident, and was encompassed within the other instructions. People v. Lee, 18 P.3d 192 (Colo. App. 2000).

Once a principle is covered it is not error to refuse to repeat the instruction in other language. McCune v. People, 179 Colo. 262, 499 P.2d 1184 (1972); People v. Montague, 181 Colo. 143, 508 P.2d 388 (1973).

Instruction may be refused where jury otherwise adequately instructed. Where the jury is adequately instructed by the court and defendant's instructions would add nothing, it is not error to refuse to give instructions tendered by the defendant. Yerby v. People, 176 Colo. 115, 489 P.2d 1308 (1971); People v. Focht, 180 Colo. 259, 504 P.2d 1096 (1972); People v. Shearer, 650 P.2d 1293 (Colo. App. (1982); People v. Cole, 926 P.2d 164 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Gordon, 32 P.3d 575 (Colo. App. 2001).

No error occurred when trial court refused to give instruction requested by defendant which merely restated points covered by other instructions and reiterated a general denial of guilt. People v. Anaya, 732 P.2d 1241 (Colo. App. 1986), rev'd on other grounds, 764 P.2d 779 (Colo. 1988); People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

No abuse of discretion by court in refusal to give defendant's proposed misidentification instructions when such instructions were repetitive, were substantially included in stock instructions, and placed undue emphasis on a single issue presented by the evidence. People v. Zapata, 759 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd on other grounds, 779 P.2d 1307 (Colo. 1989); People v. Harte, 131 P.3d 1180 (Colo. App. 2005).

Where tendered instructions do not contain a correct statement of the law, and the instructions given by the court adequately advise the jury of the refusal to submit defendant's tendered instructions, which are covered by those given by the trial court, is not error. Quintana v. People, 178 Colo. 213, 496 P.2d 1009 (1972).

Evidence of affirmative defense of ''treatment by spiritual means'' in criminal child abuse case was sufficient to require trial court to instruct the jury on such defense. Lybarger v. People, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Where the trial record contained substantial evidence to support the defendant's alibi theory of defense and the jury instructions set forth only the elements of the offense and the burden of proof and did not encompass or embody the defendant's defense of alibi, it was reversible error for the trial court to fail to correct the tendered alibi instruction or to incorporate an alibi instruction in the other jury instructions. People v. Nunez, 841 P.2d 261 (Colo. 1992).

III. FORM.

Object of rule. One object of this rule is that the jury may have all the instructions before them when they retire to consider their verdict, and in that view it can make but little difference whether instructions are given orally or read from a book, for, in either case, they would be equally liable to forget them. Gile v. People, 1 Colo. 60 (1867).

All instructions must be submitted to the jury in writing. Dorsett v. Crew, 1 Colo. 18 (1864); Gile v. People, 1 Colo. 60 (1867); Nieto v. People, 160 Colo. 179, 415 P.2d 531 (1966).

Failure to do so is error. Failure to submit instructions to the jury in writing has always been held to be an error. Dorsett v. Crew, 1 Colo. 18 (1864); Gile v. People, 1 Colo. 60 (1867); Nieto v. People, 160 Colo. 179, 415 P.2d 531 (1966).

Giving instructions orally not error if without prejudice. If a statement can be considered as an instruction as to the law, it being in favor of the plaintiff in error, giving it orally is at most an error without prejudice, and one that does not constitute a ground for reversal. Irving v. People, 43 Colo. 260, 95 P. 940 (1908); Martinez v. People, 124 Colo. 170, 235 P.2d 810 (1951).

Instructions cannot be orally qualified or modified. Dorsett v. Crew, 1 Colo. 18 (1864).

But failure of counsel to object to oral clarifying comments made by the trial court in response to a request by the jury, particularly where counsel is a more or less active participant in this further instructing of the jury, amounts to a waiver of any rights afforded by this rule. Valley v. People, 165 Colo. 555, 441 P.2d 14, cert. denied, 393 U.S. 925, 89 S. Ct. 256, 21 L. Ed. 2d 260 (1968).

There is no restriction to the giving of additional written instructions to the jury by the court, in a proper case, after they have retired to consider their verdict. Davis v. People, 83 Colo. 295, 264 P. 658 (1928).

But should be given in presence of counsel. Good practice requires that the court, before giving such an instruction, should call the jury into the courtroom and read it to them in the presence of counsel for both sides, unless they waive this formality, inasmuch as trial courts should not communicate with the jury on matters affecting the rights of the parties except in open court and in the presence of counsel. Ray v. People, 147 Colo. 587, 364 P.2d 578 (1961).

If not, there must be prejudice for reversible error. While the giving of an additional instruction outside of the presence of counsel is bad procedure, it is not reversible error where it does not appear that it in any manner prejudices the rights of the defendant. Ray v. People, 147 Colo. 587, 364 P.2d 578 (1961).

Comments to jury are not instructions. Comments to the jury are advisory and in no respect binding upon the jury, hence they are not instructions, and therefore they need not precede the arguments nor be reduced to writing as provided in this rule. Kolkman v. People, 89 Colo. 8, 300 P. 575 (1931).

Provided they do not modify or qualify instructions. The remarks of the trial court do not constitute an instruction within this rule where they are merely an oral direction which in no way modifies or qualifies an instruction given. Irving v. People, 43 Colo. 260, 95 P. 940 (1908).

"Instructions" to jury to revise verdicts not within rule. Where, upon verdict, the judge ''instructs'' the jury that the accused cannot be convicted of more than one offense and directs them to revise their verdict, these remarks are not instructions within the meaning of this rule. Bush v. People, 68 Colo. 75, 187 P. 528 (1920).

Nor court's answer to jury on what is charged. When the jury asks the court whether defendant is charged with a certain offense only or with that offense and another, the court's answer to the jury's question is not an instruction to the jury within the meaning of the provisions of this rule. Wiseman v. People, 179 Colo. 101, 498 P.2d 930 (1972).

Trial court's response to jury's question concerning instructions outside the presence of defense counsel was reversible error because it was a denial of the constitutional right to counsel. Such error is harmless only if so demonstrated beyond a reasonable doubt. If jury's question shows a fundamental misunderstanding of the instructions, it is prejudicial to the defendant. Leonardo v. People, 728 P.2d 1252 (Colo. 1986).

Three instructions on one page not error. Where trial court instructed jury by placing three instructions on one sheet of paper — instructions related to the burden of proof, the presumption of innocence, and reasonable doubt — and defendant contends the jury was thereby confused, but no contention is made that the instructions did not properly set forth the law, and defendant has totally failed to suggest how these three instructions, if given on three separate sheets of paper, would have resulted in greater clarity, nor does he explain how the placing of the instructions on one sheet of paper would confuse the jury, this claim of error is totally without merit. People v. Romero, 182 Colo. 50, 511 P.2d 466 (1973).

The court committed harmless error in failing to give the jury cautionary hearsay instructions after each hearsay witnesses' testimony. Three hearsay witnesses testified in sequence, the court gave the cautionary instruction following the testimony of the last hearsay witness and during the general charge to the jury, and the hearsay testimony corroborated the testimony of other witnesses. People v. Valdez, 874 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1994).

IV. CONTENT.

A. In General.

No instruction which is contradictory in itself is good. Magwire v. People, 77 Colo. 149, 235 P. 339 (1925).

Irreconcilable instructions require reversal. Where instructions given by the court are irreconcilable, and it is impossible to say which the jury followed or what the verdict would have been but for the error, a reversal is imperative. Clair v. People, 9 Colo. 122, 10 P. 799 (1886); White v. People, 76 Colo. 208, 230 P. 614 (1924).

Erroneous instruction is not cured by another covering the same point which is correct. Mackey v. People, 2 Colo. 13 (1873); Lybarger v. People, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Cumulative effect of improper instruction with proper instruction was to provide the jury with mixed messages and did not dispel the potential for harm created by erroneous instruction. Lybarger v. People, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

All instructions are to be taken together, and what might mislead, when considered by itself, may be corrected by another passage of the charge. Forte v. People, 57 Colo. 450, 140 P. 789 (1914); Clarke v. People, 64 Colo. 164, 171 P. 69 (1918); Taylor v. People, 21 Colo. 426, 42 P. 652 (1895); Ausmus v. People, 47 Colo. 167, 107 P. 204 (1910).

Instructions in a case must be read and considered as a whole. McCune v. People, 179 Colo. 262, 499 P.2d 1184 (1972); People v. Casey, 185 Colo. 58, 521 P.2d 1250 (1974).

In determining the effect of a particular instruction, it must be read in conjunction with the other instructions. People v. Manier, 184 Colo. 44, 518 P.2d 811 (1974).

Not error if jury adequately informed. Where the instructions, when read together, adequately inform the jury of the applicable law, there is no error. Blincoe v. People, 178 Colo. 34, 494 P.2d 1285 (1972).

If, taken as a whole, the instructions adequately inform the jury of the law, there is no reversible error. People v. Manier, 184 Colo. 44, 518 P.2d 811 (1974).

Even though one instruction is not proper. Where one instruction is not entirely proper, its use does not constitute reversible error when the instructions read as a whole adequately inform the jury on the law. People v. Olona, 180 Colo. 299, 505 P.2d 372 (1973).

Where the law of the case is clearly and explicitly set forth in one point of the charge, the effect of equivocal language elsewhere is thereby eliminated. LeMaster v. People, 54 Colo. 416, 131 P. 269 (1913).

An inadequate instruction is not deemed to constitute fundamental error although it does not fully instruct the jury as to the definition of the crime, nor follows the statutory definition, where, when it is read in conjunction with the other instructions, it appears that in substance the jury is told of the elements of the crime. Morehead v. People, 167 Colo. 287, 447 P.2d 215 (1968).

The omission from one instruction of the words ''from the evidence'' does not constitute reversible error when, by other instructions, the jury is told that its findings must be based upon the evidence, and that alone. Gorman v. People, 7 Colo. 596, 31 P. 335, 31 Am. St. R. 350 (1884); Boykin v. People, 22 Colo. 496, 45 P. 419 (1896).

Improper jury instructions not grounds for reversal on appeal where defendant did not object to such instructions at trial and failed to raise such issue in motion for new trial. People v. Quintana, 701 P.2d 1264 (Colo. App. 1985).

When reversal not required despite failure to instruct on element. Where the court fails to give an instruction on one element of a crime, reversal is not called for when the prima facie case established by the state stands unrebutted, the defendant offers no defense of which he is deprived by the failure to give the instruction, and he does not object to the instructions given nor request other instructions. Ruark v. People, 164 Colo. 257, 434 P.2d 124 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1044, 88 S. Ct. 1644, 20 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1968).

It is not error to refuse cumulative instructions. Minich v. People, 8 Colo. 440, 9 P. 4 (1885).

Since requested instructions need not be given when covered by other instructions. It is not error for a trial court to fail to give a tendered instruction covering the same matter already dealt with in other instructions. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974); People v. Lee, 199 Colo. 301, 607 P.2d 998 (1980); People v. Garcia, 690 P.2d 869 (Colo. App. 1984).

Perhaps no point of law is more amply substantiated in Colorado than the rule that requested instructions which are covered by instructions given by the court are properly refused. Dougherty v. People, 1 Colo. 514 (1872); May v. People, 8 Colo. 210, 6 P. 816 (1885); Van Houton v. People, 22 Colo. 53, 43 P. 137 (1895); Benedict v. People, 23 Colo. 126, 46 P. 637 (1896); Thompson v. People, 26 Colo. 496, 59 P. 51 (1899); Covington v. People, 36 Colo. 183, 85 P. 832 (1960); O'Grady v. People, 42 Colo. 312, 95 P. 346 (1908); Campbell v. People, 55 Colo. 302, 133 P. 1043 (1913); De Rinzie v. People, 56 Colo. 249, 138 P. 1009 (1914); McKee v. People, 72 Colo. 55, 209 P. 632 (1922); Brindisi v. People, 76 Colo. 244, 230 P. 797 (1924); Roll v. People, 78 Colo. 589, 243 P. 641 (1926); Wilder v. People, 86 Colo. 35, 278 P. 594, 65 A.L.R. 1260 (1929); Abshier v. People, 87 Colo. 507, 289 P. 1081 (1930); Gould v. People, 89 Colo. 596, 5 P.2d 580 (1931); Farmer v. People, 90 Colo. 250, 7 P.2d 947 (1932); Jagger Prod. Co. v. Gylling, 90 Colo. 517, 10 P.2d 942 (1932); Updike v. People, 92 Colo. 125, 18 P.2d 472 (1933); Militello v. People, 95 Colo. 519, 37 P.2d 527 (1934).

Instructions for multiple offenses. It is error for court to instruct jury that it could convict if evidence showed crime occurred within 3 years prior to filing of information. Such instruction is only proper if evidence proves one act, but date of incident is in question. Woertman v. People, 804 P.2d 188 (Colo. 1991).

Because they tend to confuse jury. When a proposition of law is once clearly stated in the charge, a repetition thereof in the same or different language only tends to confuse the jury. Minich v. People, 8 Colo. 440, 9 P. 4 (1885).

Combining instructions not abuse of discretion. Combining in one instruction the instructions on presumption of innocence, burden of proof, and reasonable doubt does not amount to an abuse of discretion, where no prejudice is shown. People v. Sharpe, 183 Colo. 64, 514 P.2d 1138 (1973).

Particular portions of evidence should not be singled out and emphasized by special instructions. Gallegos v. People, 166 Colo. 409, 444 P.2d 267 (1968).

Special instruction unfair if not warranted by the evidence. Where the evidence does not warrant it, a special instruction is unfair and a basis for reversible error. Gallegos v. People, 166 Colo. 409, 444 P.2d 267 (1968).

When an instruction conceivably could be improved by rephrasing in certain particulars, yet it adequately states the basic requirements, then the jury is properly charged. Jorgensen v. People, 178 Colo. 8, 495 P.2d 1130 (1972).

Although an instruction may be unduly prolix, if it properly advises the jury it is not in error. Yerby v. People, 176 Colo. 115, 489 P.2d 1308 (1971).

Instruction interfering with jurors' deliberation is error. Where there is little doubt that the giving of an additional instruction interferes with the free and unbiased deliberation of the jurors, the trial court errs in acting, abusing its discretion. Mogan v. People, 157 Colo. 395, 402 P.2d 928 (1965).

A defendant's due process rights are violated when a trial court intrudes on the jury's deliberative process and deprives the jury of its fact-finding duty. People v. Gracey, 940 P.2d 1050 (Colo. App. 1996).

The court's response to the jurors' question effectively amounted to an impermissible directed verdict, where the primary contested issue at trial was the defendant's authority to borrow money from victim's account and that response left the jury with no alternative but to determine that defendant had no such authority. People v. Gracey, 940 P.2d 1050 (Colo. App. 1996).

Instruction may assume commission of a crime. In a prosecution where there was no dispute at all that a crime was committed and the only defense made is that it was done by another, that the defendants had no part in it, and that instead of encouraging or assisting the criminal they came to the rescue of the injured party, and instruction that "if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt from all the facts and circumstances and evidence in the case that these men aided, abetted and encouraged the offense then you may find them guilty as charged in this information", is not reversible error because it assumes the commission of the crime instead of requiring the jury to find such fact beyond a reasonable doubt from the evidence. Komrs v. People, 31 Colo. 212, 73 P. 25 (1903).

B. Statutory Language.

Instruction based on statute upheld. In a felony child abuse case, the court properly instructed the jury that if the prosecution proved beyond a reasonable doubt that a reason other than spiritual treatment existed demonstrating that the child was endangered, the defendant was not entitled to the affirmative defense of spiritual healing. In addition, an instruction referring to the statutory duty of a parent to provide medical care was proper. People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Trial court's decision to use instruction tracking deadly physical force language in § 18-1-704 instead of instruction containing specific language requested by defendant was not erroneous. People v. Phillips, 91 P.3d 476 (Colo. App. 2004).

It is a good rule to couch instructions in the language of a statute. Bustamonte v. People, 157 Colo. 146, 401 P.2d 597 (1965).

Objection to such instruction is not tenable. The objection that instructions in a criminal case are given in the language of a statute is not tenable. Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563, 9 P. 852 (1885).

If the language is clear. Where an instruction is worded substantially in the language of the statute, no more is required if the language is clear. People v. Dago, 179 Colo. 1, 497 P.2d 1261 (1972); People v. Pahlavan, 83 P.3d 1138 (Colo. App. 2003).

Other instructions may be proper. An instruction couched in the language of a statute is not the only type of instruction that is proper. Bustamonte v. People, 157 Colo. 146, 401 P.2d 597 (1965).

Inclusion of inapplicable provisions not necessarily error. Even in cases where the inclusion verbatim of inapplicable subsections of statutes in instructions to the jury are said to be improper, the giving of such an instruction does not, in itself, constitute reversible error. Bodhaine v. People, 175 Colo. 14, 485 P.2d 116 (1971).

When there is a discrepancy between the statutory provision cited in the charging document and the jury instructions, thereby effecting a constructive amendment to the charging document, the error is plain and requires reversal. People v. Rediger, 2018 CO 32, 416 P.3d 893.

Mere acquiescence to a jury instruction does not constitute a waiver or invited error without some record evidence that the defendant intentionally relinquished a known right. People v. Rediger, 2018 CO 32, 416 P.3d 893.

Instruction based on statute upheld. Where instructions on specific intent are phrased in the language of a statute, such instructions are proper and will be upheld on review. Blincoe v. People, 178 Colo. 34, 494 P.2d 1285 (1972).

Jury instruction which is in conflict with the legislative intent of § 18-1-407 concerning affirmative defenses should not be used. People v. Rex, 689 P.2d 669 (Colo. App. 1984).

In instructing the jury on the issue of the voluntariness of a confession, the court need not define the term since the general understanding of the word is clear. Kwiatkowski v. People, 706 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1985).

Jury instruction providing supplemental definition of "knowing" for the purposes of second degree murder was unnecessary, but was not reversible error. The trial court's instruction did not pose a barrier to the jury in considering fully the defendant's affirmative defense. People v. Baca, 852 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1992).

C. Particular Instructions.

Giving or refusal of cautionary instructions rests largely in the sound discretion of the trial court, and in the absence of a showing of an abuse of discretion and resulting prejudice to the defendant the trial court's ruling will not be disturbed. Luna v. People, 170 Colo. 1, 461 P.2d 724 (1969).

Such as on weighing testimony of private detectives. The giving of instructions as to the caution to be observed in weighing testimony of private detectives or persons employed to find evidence is based upon rules of practice rather than of law and rests largely in the discretion of the trial judge. O'Grady v. People, 42 Colo. 312, 95 P. 346 (1908).

Where the jury has been instructed to disregard tendered evidence, it must be presumed that the jury in the performance of its duty did so. People v. Goff, 187 Colo. 103, 530 P.2d 514 (1974).

Credibility of defendant's testimony. The jury may be instructed that in determining the credibility of the defendant in a criminal case testifying in his own behalf, they have a right to take into consideration the fact that he is interested in the result of the prosecution, as well as his demeanor and conduct during the trial. Minich v. People, 8 Colo. 440, 9 P. 4 (1884); Boykin v. People, 22 Colo. 496, 45 P. 419 (1896); O'Brien v. People, 42 Colo. 40, 94 P. 284 (1908).

Or of witness who has wilfully testified falsely. An instruction directing the jury that they are at liberty to disregard the entire testimony of a witness who has wilfully testified falsely to a material point is good. Minich v. People, 8 Colo. 440, 9 P. 4 (1885).

Only one instruction on credibility of witnesses necessary. The practice of giving two instructions on the creditibility of witnesses is not necessary, and is not the modern trend, for it is the better practice to give only one instruction as to credibility of witnesses. Fernandez v. People, 176 Colo. 346, 490 P.2d 690 (1971).

It is not error to deny a special instruction on credibility of eyewitnesses where a general instruction on credibility is given. People v. Ross, 179 Colo. 293, 500 P.2d 127 (1972); People v. Lopez, 182 Colo. 152, 511 P.2d 889 (1973).

Where the stock instruction on credibility includes language of caution to the jury applicable to the witnesses' testimony, it is not an abuse of the trial court's discretion to refuse another cautionary instruction. Luna v. People, 170 Colo. 1, 461, P.2d 724 (1969).

The failure of the court sua sponte to specially instruct the jury on an identification issue is not patently prejudicial where the jury is given an instruction concerning the credibility of witnesses which details the factors to be considered by them such as means of knowledge, strength of memory, and opportunities for observation. Fresquez v. People, 178 Colo. 220, 497 P.2d 1246 (1972).

But separate instruction on defendant's credibility not error. While it is unnecessary and poor practice to give the jury a separate instruction on the credibility of a defendant as a witness, the giving of such an instruction does not constitute reversible error. People v. Hankin, 179 Colo. 70, 498 P.2d 1116 (1972).

The giving of separate instruction dealing with the credibility of defendant as witness was not reversible error, although the better procedure is to give only one integrated credibility instruction. Lamb v. People, 181 Colo. 446, 509 P.2d 1267 (1973).

Including in sanity trial. In a sanity trial, the court does not commit prejudicial error by instructing the jury specifically concerning the test of defendant's credibility as a witness, while a general instruction on the credibility of witnesses is also given. Elliott v. People, 176 Colo. 373, 490 P.2d 687 (1971).

Where the evidence in a criminal case is wholly circumstantial, it is error to instruct the jury that they need not be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of each link in the chain of circumstances relied upon to establish the defendant's guilt. Clair v. People, 9 Colo. 122, 10 P. 799, 97 Am. St. R. 780 (1886).

If in ruling upon the sufficiency or insufficiency of evidence in circumstantial evidence cases judges must follow the rule that the evidence must be consistent with guilt and inconsistent with innocence, it follows that the better practice is to so advise the jury. People v. Calise, 179 Colo. 162, 498 P.2d 1154 (1972).

No error if defendant is not prejudiced. Where an instruction conveys the essence of the law to be applied in regard to circumstantial evidence and when all the instructions are read as a whole the defendant is not prejudiced by this instruction which does not include the language that ''the circumstances relied upon must be consistent with guilt and inconsistent with any reasonable hypothesis of innocence'', there is no error. People v. Hankin, 179 Colo. 70, 498 P.2d 1116 (1972).

Circumstantial evidence held sufficient basis for instruction. Yerby v. People, 176 Colo. 115, 489 P.2d 1308 (1971).

Stock instruction on presumption of innocence held inappropriate. Renfrow v. People, 176 Colo. 160, 489 P.2d 582 (1971); Brown v. People, 177 Colo. 397, 494 P.2d 587 (1972).

For instruction on presumption of innocence recommended by supreme court, see Martinez v. People, 172 Colo. 82, 470 P.2d 26 (1970).

Trial court need not instruct jury to exclude every reasonable hypothesis of innocence where the evidence of defendant's guilt was primarily direct. People v. Lopez, 182 Colo. 152, 511 P.2d 889 (1973).

A court does not err in instructing the jury that they are ''not to search for a doubt''. People v. Sharpe, 183 Colo. 64, 514 P.2d 1138 (1973).

Where instruction on presumption of innocence was given prior to recommendation of supreme court that it be reworded to exclude objectionable language, giving of such instruction was not reversible error. People v. Pacheco, 180 Colo. 39, 502 P.2d 70 (1972).

The giving of a stock instruction on the presumption of innocence does not constitute reversible error just because of its historical use. Jorgensen v. People, 178 Colo. 8, 495 P.2d 1130 (1972).

Submitting erroneous instruction on presumption of innocence would ordinarily require reversal, but only if the defendant objected to the instruction. People v. Simmons, 182 Colo. 350, 513 P.2d 193 (1973).

Instruction that defendant not compelled to testify. It is error to refuse a tendered instruction that the defendant is not compelled to testify, and that the fact that he does not testify cannot be used as an inference of guilt and should not prejudice him in any way. People v. Crawford, 632 P.2d 626 (Colo. App. 1981).

Limiting instruction on prior convictions. When defendant's prior felony convictions are elicited during his testimony, a limiting instruction is required. People v. Goldsberry, 181 Colo. 406, 509 P.2d 801 (1973).

Instructions where evidence of other crimes is used. When evidence from other crimes is used: First, the prosecutor should advise the trial court of the purpose for which he offers the evidence; secondly, if the court admits such evidence, it should then and there instruct the jury as to the limited purpose for which the evidence is being received and for which the jury may consider it; thirdly, the general charge should contain a renewal of the instruction on the limited purpose of such evidence; lastly, the offer of the prosecutor and the instructions of the court should be in carefully couched terms—they should refer to ''other transactions'', ''other acts'', or ''other conduct'' and should eschew such designations as ''similar offenses'', ''other offenses'', ''similar crimes'', and so forth. Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972); Howe v. People, 178 Colo. 248, 496 P.2d 1040 (1972).

Where evidence relating to other prior incidents of a similar nature between the defendant and the prosecuting witness is admitted, and the court gives an oral cautionary instruction to the jury on the limited relevance of similar act testimony at the conclusion of the prosecuting witness's testimony as well as a similar written instruction when the case is submitted to the jury, there is no reversible error. People v. Elliston, 181 Colo. 118, 508 P.2d 379 (1973).

Even when defendant has not requested such. Where the trial judge instructs the jury on the limited purposes for which evidence of prior felony convictions is admitted when the defendant has not requested such an instruction, such action is proper inasmuch as the judge has a duty to instruct the jury on the limited purpose for which such evidence is admissible in his general instructions. Lee v. People, 170 Colo. 268, 460 P.2d 796 (1969).

Evidence of former convictions used to attack credibility. Where testimony as to former convictions is elicited for the purpose of attacking the defendant's credibility, the court acts properly in so instructing the jury. Candelaria v. People, 177 Colo. 136, 493 P.2d 355 (1972).

When instructing a deadlocked jury deliberating a charge involving lesser offenses, the court should first ask whether there is a likelihood of progress towards a unanimous verdict upon further deliberation. If the jury indicates that a unanimous verdict is unlikely, the court should then inquire whether the jury is divided over guilt as to any one of the offenses and nonguilt as to all offenses or, instead, whether the division centers only on the particular degree of guilt. People v. Lewis, 676 P.2d 682

When a lesser offense involves elements that are not necessarily included in a greater offense, the additional instruction should set forth the nonincluded elements of the offense and should advise the jury that before the defendant can be found guilty of that particular offense each of the jurors must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant acted in such a manner so as to satisfy all of the nonincluded elements. People v. Lewis, 676 P.2d 682 (Colo. 1984).

Instruction on lesser included offense limited. The rule that an instruction on a lesser included offense is required when requested is limited to those cases where there is evidence to support such an instruction. People v. Ross, 179 Colo. 293, 500 P.2d 127 (1972).

A defendant is entitled to an instruction on a lesser included offense, unless it is clear from the evidence that the defendant is guilty of the greater offense or nothing at all. Ortega v. People, 178 Colo. 419, 498 P.2d 1121 (1972).

Mere chance of the jury's rejection of uncontroverted testimony and conviction on a lesser charge does not necessitate an instruction on the lesser charge. People v. Campbell, 678 P.2d 1035 (Colo. App. 1983).

The giving of such instruction is not mandatory. Where the court already knew that a juror disagreed with the other jurors and felt pressured to issue a verdict against her conscience, court had reasonable concern that such an instruction could be perceived as coercive. People v. Barnard, 12 P.3d 290 (Colo. App. 2000).

Defendant was not entitled to special instruction concerning testimony of immunized witnesses where, considering circumstances of case, the standard credibility instruction given by trial court was sufficient. People v. Loggins, 709 P.2d 25 (Colo. App. 1985).

There must be evidence tending to establish lower grade. In a prosecution for a crime which includes within the charge lower grades of crime, where there is any evidence tending to establish a lower grade, the jury should be instructed as to such lower grade; but, where there is no evidence tending to establish a lower grade, such lower grade should not be submitted to the jury. Carpenter v. People, 31 Colo. 284, 72 P. 1072 (1903).

Lesser nonincluded offense. A defendant is entitled to an instruction on a lesser nonincluded offense when he requests such an instruction and there is evidence to support it. People v. Best, 665 P.2d 644 (Colo. App. 1983).

Trial court's refusal to give a lesser nonincluded offense instruction does not justify reversal if the court instructed on a comparable lesser nonincluded offense. People v. Rubio, 222 P.3d 355 (Colo. App. 2009).

The decision whether to request a lesser offense instruction is a matter to be decided by counsel after consultation with the defendant. Arko v. People, 183 P.3d 555 (Colo. 2008).

Instruction on reasonable doubt upheld. Minich v. People, 8 Colo. 440, 9 P. 4 (1885); People v. Couch, 179 Colo. 324, 500 P.2d 967 (1972); People v. Focht, 180 Colo. 259, 504 P.2d 1096 (1972); People v. Rubio, 222 P.3d 355 (Colo. App. 2009).

An instruction to the jury that a reasonable doubt must be grounded upon irreconcilable evidence is incorrect, because the evidence may be insufficient to prove the charge. Mackey v. People, 2 Colo. 13 (1873).

Instruction on general intent upheld. People v. Couch, 179 Colo. 324, 500 P.2d 967 (1972).

But inadequate for specific intent crime. An instruction on general intent is inadequate guidance for a jury deliberating specific intent crime. People v. Mingo, 181 Colo. 390, 509 P.2d 800 (1973).

Instruction on specific intent read in context with other instructions which made specific reference to specific intent, requiring proof of each element beyond a reasonable doubt, adequately informs the jury of the law. People v. Couch, 179 Colo. 324, 500 P.2d 967 (1972).

Instruction omitting specific "animus" improper. An instruction which makes the question of guilt depend solely upon the intentional doing of an unlawful act constitutes prejudicial error in cases where the specific ''animus'' as a material element of the crime for which the accused is convicted is omitted. Gonzales v. People, 166 Colo. 557, 445 P.2d 74 (1968).

Instruction dealing with the effect of defendant's statement does not require for its submission that the defendant's statement reached the level of a confession or a direct admission of a crime. People v. Naranjo, 181 Colo. 273, 509 P.2d 1235 (1973).

Instruction on definition of confession held properly denied. Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972).

Instruction on weight given confession is improper comment on evidence. An instruction that tells a jury that a confession may be entitled to great weight is an improper comment upon the weight of the evidence. Fincher v. People, 26 Colo. 169, 56 P. 902 (1899).

Admonition does not cure erroneous admission of incriminating statement. An admonition or an instruction to the jury to disregard involuntary incriminating statements does not cure the erroneous admission of such statements. Edmisten v. People, 176 Colo. 262, 490 P.2d 58 (1971).

Unless such is not an issue of significance. Where the admissions of the defendant in the nature of either extrajudicial statements or a confession is not an issue of significance, the giving of an instruction on them is not grounds for relief. Yerby v. People, 176 Colo. 115, 489 P.2d 1308 (1971).

Instruction held not to be judicial comment on the evidence. People v. Olona, 180 Colo. 299, 505 P.2d 372 (1973).

Comments of counsel. Where the trial judge instructed the jury that comments of counsel were not evidence and should not be considered as such, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, it is presumed that the jury understood the instructions and heeded them. People v. Becker, 187 Colo. 344, 531 P.2d 386 (1975).

Instruction defining accomplice held not fatally erroneous. Komrs v. People, 31 Colo. 212, 73 P. 25 (1903).

Instruction on accomplice's testimony held proper. Wisdom v. People, 11 Colo. 170, 17 P. 519 (1887); People v. Small, 177 Colo. 118, 493 P.2d 15 (1972).

Instruction on evidence showing plan, scheme, and design held proper. Mays v. People, 177 Colo. 92, 493 P.2d 4 (1972).

Instruction on flight. Where there is evidence of flight as a deliberate attempt to avoid detection or arrest for a crime just committed, an instruction on flight is proper. Gallegos v. People, 166 Colo. 409, 444 P.2d 267 (1968); Nunn v. People, 177 Colo. 87, 493 P.2d 6 (1972).

Instruction on alibi held sufficient. McGregor v. People, 176 Colo. 309, 490 P.2d 287 (1971).

Instruction on alibi held liable to mislead jury and was therefore grounds for new trial. Wisdom v. People, 11 Colo. 170, 17 P. 519 (1887).

Instruction on negligence held valid. People v. Olona, 180 Colo. 299, 505 P.2d 372 (1973).

Instruction on complicity appropriate where evidence was sufficient to show that two or more persons were jointly engaged in the commission of a crime. People v. Phillips, 732 P.2d 1226 (Colo. App. 1986).

Instruction on defendant's denials and theory of case held error. Trial court's instruction that defendant's denials of charges and theory of case were issues but not evidence held incorrect statement of law and reversible error. People v. Herbison, 761 P.2d 263 (Colo. App. 1988).

State's pattern reasonable doubt jury instruction accurately describes proof beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Alvarado-Juarez, 252 P.3d 1135 (Colo. App. 2010).

Where trial court should have given an additional clarifying instruction, its failure to do so did not constitute prejudicial error where conviction could not have been affected by the lack of response to jurors' inquiry. People v. Fell, 832 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court's comment regarding whether defendant was the initial aggressor did not violate this rule and did not constitute error, much less plain error. With respect to a trial court's comments, questions, and demeanor, more than mere speculation concerning the possibility of prejudice must be demonstrated to warrant a reversal. The record must clearly establish bias, and the test is whether the trial judge's conduct so departed from the required impartiality as to deny the defendant a fair trial. People v. Martinez, 224 P.3d 1026 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 244 P.3d 135 (Colo. 2010).

Court responded to defendant's objection to prosecutor's closing argument about self-defense by finding there was "some evidence" defendant was initial aggressor. Its ruling was on a matter of law, it did not invade the fact-finding province of the jury, and court immediately instructed jurors that they were to decide the facts. People v. Martinez, 224 P.3d 1026 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 244 P.3d 135 (Colo. 2010).

Failure to give curative instruction not reversible error. Failure to give a curative instruction, in the absence of a request by defense counsel, did not constitute reversible error. People v. Rogers, 187 Colo. 128, 528 P.2d 1309 (1974).

Curative jury instruction to disregard prior invalid conviction remedied any harm that may have resulted from reference to the invalid conviction. People v. McNeely, 68 P.3d 540 (Colo. App. 2002).

Instructions as a whole held to have adequately advised jury on premeditation. Carroll v. People, 177 Colo. 288, 494 P.2d 80 (1972).

Instruction reducing prosecutor's obligation prejudicial. Prejudice to the defendant is inevitable when the court instructs the jury in such a way as to reduce the prosecution's obligation to prove each element of its case beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Kanan, 186 Colo. 255, 526 P.2d 1339 (1974); Lybarger v. People, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Cumulative instructions containing erroneous statements of law and which were at odds with the standard jury instructions on affirmative defenses had the effect of relieving the prosecution of its burden of proof in regard to affirmative defenses. Lybarger v. People, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Trial court's additional instruction in response to jury's inquiry not error because defendant acceded to instruction and the inquiry did not show any misunderstanding or confusion on a matter of law central to the defendant's guilt or innocence. People v. Phillips, 91 P.3d 476 (Colo. App. 2004).

Giving of "Allen charge" prior to September 22, 1971, held not error. People v. Lovato, 181 Colo. 99, 507 P.2d 860 (1973).

But error when no confusion in jurors' minds on the law. Ordinarily a trial judge is within his rightful province when he urges agreement upon a jury at loggerheads with itself; but this process has its limits, and it is a specifically delicate matter to importune unanimity when there is no indication of confusion or misapprehension in the minds of the jurors on the law of the case. Mogan v. People, 157 Colo. 395, 402 P.2d 928 (1965).

"Time-fuse" instruction is plain error. The giving of a "time-fuse" instruction (which grants the jury a time limit to finish its deliberations, at the end of which the jury will be dismissed) constitutes plain error and requires reversal. Allen v. People, 660 P.2d 896 (Colo. 1983).

Instruction that the jury could consider defendant's voluntary absence from the trial as evidence of guilt was not error. The court had made reasonable inquiry as to the defendant's whereabouts before continuing the trial. People v. Tafoya, 833 P.2d 841 (Colo. App. 1992).

V. MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

Failure to comply with this rule will ordinarily result being precluded from raising an objection for the first time on motion for new trial. Arellano v. People, 177 Colo. 286, 493 P.2d 1362 (1972); Fresquez v. People, 178 Colo. 220, 497 P.2d 1246 (1972).

Where grounds specified in motion are not the same as before court. Where the "grounds so specified" before the trial court are not the same as are thereafter urged in a motion for new trial, then the grounds may not be considered raised for the first time in the motion for a new trial. Zeiler v. People, 157 Colo. 332, 403 P.2d 439 (1965).

VI. ON REVIEW.

A. In General.

Errors in instructions generally not basis for collateral attack. As a general rule, errors in jury instructions do not constitute fundamental error that would provide a basis for collateral attack. People v. Shearer, 181 Colo. 237, 508 P.2d 1249 (1973).

Assumption that jury followed instructions. The reviewing court must assume, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the jury followed the court's instructions. People v. Palmer, 189 Colo. 354, 540 P.2d 341 (1975); People v. Montoya, 709 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 736 P.2d 1208 (Colo. 1987).

And that court properly instructed jury. On review, in the absence of all of the instructions, it will be assumed that the trial court properly instructed the jury on the law applicable to the facts and the issues. Luna v. People, 170 Colo. 1, 461 P.2d 724 (1969).

Error benefiting party not prejudicial. Where one is benefited by an error in submitting or failing to submit an instruction, he cannot claim prejudicial error. Atwood v. People, 176 Colo. 183, 489 P.2d 1305 (1971).

A party cannot complain when an instruction given is more favorable to him than the one refused. Lowdermilk v. People, 70 Colo. 459, 202 P. 118 (1921); Abshier v. People, 87 Colo. 507, 289 P. 1081 (1930).

Where a court errs in giving an instruction that prejudices the state rather than the defendant in that it increases the state's burden beyond that required, no grounds for reversal are created. Early v. People, 178 Colo. 167, 496 P.2d 1021 (1972).

No error where instructions support defendant's theory. Defendant cannot try the case on one theory and claim error on appeal where the trial court, in instructing the jury, acquiesced in that theory. People v. Lankford, 185 Colo. 445, 524 P.2d 1382 (1974).

Or where approved by defense. Assignments of error based on instructions specifically approved by the defense will not be considered. Giacomozzi v. People, 72 Colo. 13, 209 P. 798 (1922).

No error where defendant acquitted. Where the requested instructions went only to the question of a charge of which the defendant was acquitted, the refusal to give the instructions is not subject to review. Hughes v. People, 175 Colo. 351, 487 P.2d 810 (1971).

Mere nondirection where no instruction is requested is not error. Brown v. People, 20 Colo. 161, 36 P. 1040 (1894); West v. People, 60 Colo. 488, 156 P. 137 (1915); Clarke v. People, 64 Colo. 164, 171 P. 69 (1918); Rowan v. People, 93 Colo. 473, 26 P.2d 1066 (1933).

In reviewing claims based on clerical errors in instructions, the court must assume that the jury took a common sense view of the instruction. People v. Turner, 730 P.2d 333 (Colo. App. 1986).

For court to determine the effect of particular instruction, it must be read in conjunction with the other instructions. People v. Zapata, 759 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd on other grounds, 779 P.2d 1307 (Colo. 1989).

Under the doctrine of invited error, a party cannot complain where he has been the instrument for injecting error in the case, and any error caused by the failure of the trial court to give the jury an instruction due to the defendant's objections is error injected by the defendant and cannot be complained of on appeal. People v. Collins, 730 P.2d 293 (Colo. 1986).

When a party injects or invites error in trial proceedings, he cannot later seek reversal on appeal because of that error. People v. Zapata, 759 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd on other grounds, 779 P.2d 1307 (Colo. 1989); People v. Jacobson, 2017 COA 92, __ P.3d __.

Defense counsel's failure to object to instructional errors does not amount to invited error. People v. Hoggard, 2017 COA 88, __ P.3d __.

Invited error does not apply when there is no plausible strategic motive for defense counsel's failure to object, therefore making it an oversight, not a strategy. People v. Hoggard, 2017 COA 88, __ P.3d __.

A claim of plain error relative to a jury instruction must be tested by examining the sufficiency of the instructions as a whole. People v. Turner, 730 P. 2d 333 (Colo. App. 1986).

The cumulative effect of improper jury instructions that contained erroneous statements of law which relegated to the jury the function of determining whether an affirmative defense was available in a case and which had the effect of relieving the prosecution of its burden of proof in regard to the affirmative defense was plain error even though a proper jury instruction was provided with the improper jury instruction. The proper jury instruction was insufficient to dispel the potential harm created by the erroneous jury instructions. Lybarger v. People, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Failure to instruct jury on element not necessarily structural, requiring reversal. If element uncontested, supported by overwhelming evidence, and jury verdict would have been same absent error, failure to instruct harmless. People v. Geisendorfer, 991 P.2d 308 (Colo. App. 1999).

A trial court commits constitutional error when it correctly instructs the jury regarding the elements of the crime but instructs the jury that, as a matter of law, the prosecution has satisfied its burden of proving one of the elements, thereby withdrawing that element from the jury's consideration. People v. Gracey, 940 P.2d 1050 (Colo. App. 1996).

B. Requirements.

Failure to object at trial bars review. Where appellants argue that certain of the instructions given were erroneous, but they failed to raise any objection to these instructions at trial, offered no alternative instructions, and then failed to raise the issue in their motion for a new trial, an appellate court will not ordinarily review the assignment of error. People v. Buckner, 180 Colo. 65, 504 P.2d 669 (1972). See Morehead v. People, 167 Colo. 287, 447 P.2d 215 (1968); Tanksley v. People, 171 Colo. 77, 464 P.2d 862 (1970).

Trial counsel must specify which instructions he is objecting to and tender correct instructions, and having failed to so object at trial, the issue cannot be raised on appeal. People v. Green, 183 Colo. 25, 514 P.2d 769 (1973).

Where defendant did not object to the jury instruction, nor offer a substitute, or include the asserted ground in his motion for new trial, consequently, it will not be considered for the first time on appeal. Lamb v. People, 181 Colo. 446, 509 P.2d 1267 (1973).

An appellate court ordinarily does not notice objections to instructions not raised at the trial court level. Keady v. People, 32 Colo. 57, 74 P. 892 (1903); Buschman v. People, 80 Colo. 173, 249 P. 652 (1926); Ruark v. People, 164 Colo. 257, 434 P.2d 124 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1044, 88 S. Ct. 1644, 20 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1968).

Ordinarily, the supreme court will not take note of erroneous instructions in the absence of a contemporaneous objection which gives the trial court an opportunity to correct error in its proceedings. People v. Meller, 185 Colo. 389, 524 P.2d 1366 (1974).

Unless manifest prejudice amounting to plain error. Where the defendant does not object to an instruction given, or tender any alternate instruction which might more adequately set forth the law, his assignment of error is not valid unless there is manifest prejudice amounting to plain error. People v. Bercillio, 179 Colo. 383, 500 P.2d 975 (1972).

Where defendant did not tender his own instructions, nor did he object to the instructions given, nor did he raise objections to the instructions in his motion for a new trial, a reviewing court is not required to review the arguments raised for the first time, and would not do so unless fundamental error appears. People v. Manier, 184 Colo. 44, 518 P.2d 811 (1974).

Where a defendant failed to object to the adequacy of the jury instructions in his motion for a new trial, a judgment will not be reversed unless plain error occurred. People v. Frysig, 628 P.2d 1004 (Colo. 1981).

Where defendant only made a general objection to jury instructions, and failed to make a timely specific objection, supreme court will not consider argument by defendant that instructions were in error, absent plain error. People v. O'Donnell, 184 Colo. 104, 518 P.2d 945 (1974).

Where the defendant failed to make any objection prior to submission of the instructions, absent plain error, the court would not consider the defendant's arguments on review. People v. Tilley, 184 Colo. 424, 520 P.2d 1046 (1974); People v. Casey, 185 Colo. 58, 521 P.2d 1250 (1974).

Where defendant did not challenge the giving of the instruction at trial, only error so substantial as to constitute plain error requires reversal. People v. Turner, 730 P.2d 333 (Colo. App. 1986).

Within the meaning of rule 52. Review as to an alleged error not previously specified to the trial court is precluded unless the alleged error be deemed ''plain error'' within the meaning of Crim. P. 52(b). People v. Brionez, 39 Colo. App. 396, 570 P.2d 1296 (1977).

"Plain error" rule must be read in harmony with this rule. People v. Barker, 180 Colo. 28, 501 P.2d 1041 (1972).

Review confined to whether plain error present. Where an instruction issue is raised for the first time on appeal, review is confined to a consideration of whether the error falls within the definition of plain error. People v. Barker, 180 Colo. 28, 501 P.2d 1041 (1972); People v. Zapata, 759 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd on other grounds, 779 P.2d 1307 (Colo. 1989); People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991); People v. Knight, 167 P.3d 141 (Colo. App. 2006); People v. Hoggard, 2017 COA 88, __ P.3d __.

Where instructions used by the trial court fail to define the statutory terms, failure to object to the tendered instructions or raise any constitutional objection to the statute at the trial court level raises the standard of review to one of ''plain error''. People v. Cardenas, 42 Colo. App. 61, 592 P.2d 1348 (1979).

Appellate court reviews only for plain error where defendant fails to make all objections to the jury instructions before the instructions are submitted to the jury. People v. Sweeney, 78 P.3d 1133 (Colo. App. 2003).

No plain error where a reasonable jury would not interpret the instructions to permit two aggravated robbery convictions where defendant took property from only one victim during a single episode. People v. Sweeney, 78 P.3d 1133 (Colo. App. 2003).

"Plain error" not found. Where an instruction is not objected to by defendant when tendered by the court, the defendant does not tender a ''proper'' instruction, and he does not mention the asserted error in instruction in a motion for new trial, there is no plain error. People v. Green, 178 Colo. 77, 495 P.2d 549 (1972).

Where from the court's review of all instructions it was satisfied that there was no ''plain error'' in the giving of the instruction which the defendant challenged for the first time on appeal, there was no need to discuss the several arguments advanced by the defendant. People v. Spinuzzi, 184 Colo. 412, 520 P.2d 1043 (1974).

Broad objection insufficient for review. An objection in broad coverage, giving no basis whatever to point up with some reasonable particularity the nature of any shortcoming, is no objection at all and is not entitled to consideration on review. Cruz v. People, 165 Colo. 495, 441 P.2d 22 (1968).

Where a great number of instructions are given, most of them dependent to some extent on each other, then, where they are full and fair to the defendant in a criminal case by stating the law correctly, an appellate court will not review them, or any part of them, upon a vague and general charge of error. Jones v. People, 6 Colo. 452, 45 Am. R. 526 (1882).

Where instructions are given as a general charge and the exceptions are only general in their character, the party excepting is not in position to urge his objection on appeal. Liggett v. People, 26 Colo. 364, 58 P. 144 (1899).

Refusal to give instruction not error if no prejudice. The court's refusal to give defendant's tendered instruction is not error where no prejudice to defendant is shown or apparent in record. Young v. People, 180 Colo. 62, 502 P.2d 81 (1972).

Jury instruction that if defendant was found to be the initial aggressor he was not entitled to benefit of self-defense was harmless error. There was no real possibility the jury was misled and the instruction was at most cumulative of another instruction concerning self-defense. People v. Manzanares, 942 P.2d 1235 (Colo. App. 1996).

Where record does not disclose any request during trial for the submission to the jury of a question, an appellate court declines to pass on the question of error in failure to submit. McClary v. People, 79 Colo. 205, 245 P. 491 (1926); McNulty v. People, 180 Colo. 246, 504 P.2d 335 (1972).

No error in trial court's instruction on deadly weapon or in court's response to jury's question on deadly weapon where defense did not object to the instruction or tender an alternative instruction or object to the court's referral to the instruction in answering the question, and, in some circumstances, fists may be considered a deadly weapon. People v. Pennese, 830 P.2d 1085 (Colo. App. 1991).

Jury instruction providing supplemental definition of "knowing" for the purposes of second degree murder was unnecessary, but was not reversible error. The trial court's instruction did not pose a barrier to the jury in considering fully the defendant's affirmative defense. People v. Baca, 852 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1992).

Rule 31. Verdict

(a) Submission and Finding. (1) Forms of Verdict. Before the jury retires the court shall submit to it written forms of verdict for its consideration.

(2) Retirement of Jury. When the jury retires to consider its verdict, the bailiff shall be sworn or affirmed to conduct the jury to some private and convenient place, and to the best of his ability to keep the jurors together until they have agreed upon a verdict. The bailiff shall not speak to any juror about the case except to ask if a verdict has been reached, nor shall he allow others to speak to the jurors. When they have agreed upon a verdict, the bailiff shall return the jury into court. However, in any case except where the punishment may be death or life imprisonment, the court, upon stipulation of counsel for all parties, may order that if the jury should agree upon a verdict during the recess or adjournment of court for the day, it shall seal its verdict, to be retained by the foreman and delivered by the jury to the judge at the opening of the court, and that thereupon the jury may separate, to meet in the jury box at the opening of court. Such a sealed verdict may be received by the court as the lawful verdict of the jury.

(3) Return. The verdict shall be unanimous and signed by the foreman. It shall be returned by the jury to the judge in open court.

(b) Several Defendants. If there are two or more defendants, the jury at any time during its deliberations may return a verdict or verdicts with respect to a defendant or defendants as to whom it has agreed; if the jury cannot agree with respect to all, the defendant or defendants as to whom it does not agree may be tried again.

(c) Conviction of Lesser Offense. The defendant may be found guilty of an offense necessarily included in the offense charged or of an attempt to commit either the offense charged or an offense necessarily included therein if the attempt is an offense.

(d) Poll of Jury. When a verdict is returned and before it is recorded, the jury shall be polled at the request of any party or upon the court's own motion. If upon the poll there is not unanimous concurrence, the jury may be directed to retire for further deliberations or may be discharged.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Jury's verdict must be allowed to stand if supported by substantial evidence. People v. Chavez, 182 Colo. 216, 511 P.2d 883 (1973).

Appellate courts cannot direct entry of directed verdicts of guilt. People v. Smith, 181 Colo. 203, 510 P.2d 315 (1973).

Applied in People v. Morris, 190 Colo. 215, 545 P.2d 151 (1976); People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981).

II. SUBMISSION AND FINDING.

A. Forms of Verdict.

Where the crime charged can be committed in alternative ways, the written verdict form should not lump the ways together in the disjunctive or conjunctive, although the charge in the statute may be made in the disjunctive and the charge in the information may be made in the conjunctive. Hernandez v. People, 156 Colo. 23, 396 P.2d 952 (1964).

Separate verdicts should be submitted or else there should be a general verdict given as a counterpart of the not guilty verdict, since evidence of any of the alternative ways a crime can be committed will support a general verdict. Hernandez v. People, 156 Colo. 23, 396 P.2d 952 (1964).

B. Retirement of Jury.

All communications should be made in open court with the parties afforded an opportunity to make timely objections to any action by the court or jury which might be deemed irregular. Barriner v. District Court, 174 Colo. 447, 484 P.2d 774 (1971).

Informal communications improper. Informal communications between the court and jury via the bailiff are improper. Barriner v. District Court, 174 Colo. 447, 484 P.2d 774 (1971).

Prejudice required to set aside verdict for improper jury communication. In order to constitute grounds for setting aside verdict because of unauthorized or improper communication with the jury, the defendant must show that he was prejudiced thereby. People v. Davis, 183 Colo. 228, 516 P.2d 120 (1973).

Informal communication between court and jury must be examined in order to determine whether it is prejudicial. Ray v. People, 147 Colo. 587, 364 P.2d 578 (1961).

Determination of prejudice within court's discretion. The determination of whether prejudice has occurred because of unauthorized or improper communication with the jury is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and only where that discretion has been abused will the verdict be set aside and a new trial ordered. People v. Davis, 183 Colo. 228, 516 P.2d 120 (1973).

Communication without prejudice not reversible error. Where the communication does not disclose that any prejudice whatever resulted to defendants, such communication between court and jury does not constitute reversible error. Ray v. People, 147 Colo. 587, 364 P.2d 578 (1961).

This rule must receive a reasonable construction as prohibiting only communications of an improper or unnecessary character. McLean v. People, 66 Colo. 486, 180 P. 676 (1919).

Ordinary physical necessities of jurors must be provided for. McLean v. People, 66 Colo. 486, 180 P. 676 (1919).

Where trial testimony is read to the jury at its request during its deliberations, it is essential that the court observe caution that evidence is not so selected, nor used in such a manner, that there is a likelihood of it being given undue weight or emphasis by the jury, for this would be prejudicial abuse of discretion and constitute grounds for reversal. Settle v. People, 180 Colo. 262, 504 P.2d 680 (1972).

Such reading is discretionary with trial court. The overwhelming weight of authority is that the reading of all or part of the testimony of one or more of the witnesses at trial, criminal or civil, at the specific request of the jury during its deliberations is discretionary with the trial court. Settle v. People, 180 Colo. 262, 504 P.2d 680 (1972).

Court must determine whether jury is deadlocked. The trial court fails to exercise its power with that degree of caution which the circumstances demand where it fails to determine as a matter of fact that the jury is hopelessly deadlocked immediately before its discharge. Barriner v. District Court, 174 Colo. 447, 484 P.2d 774 (1971).

When "consent" to discharge deemed invalid. Defendant's ''consent'' to the discharge of the jury has no force or validity where the conditions and assumptions upon which the consent is based are never legally met, such as where defendant agreed to a future situation where the jury was ''hopelessly deadlocked'' when he had a right to anticipate that the court would follow the usual procedures in discharging a jury, and not the declaration of a mistrial based upon hearsay and procedural violations of the bailiff done totally off the record and out of court where no objection to the procedure was possible. Barriner v. District Court, 174 Colo. 447, 484 P.2d 774 (1971).

C. Return.

Verdict in a criminal case should be certain and devoid of ambiguity, though it need not follow strict rules of pleading or be otherwise technical. Yeager v. People, 170 Colo. 405, 462 P.2d 487 (1969).

Else conviction will not stand. When the language of the verdict permits reasonable uncertainty, defendant's conviction cannot be permitted to stand. Yeager v. People, 170 Colo. 405, 462 P.2d 487 (1969).

Sealed verdict must be returned the next juridical day. Where the parties stipulated that the court direct the jury to the effect that should they agree upon a verdict during the recess or adjournment of court for the day, the jury should seal their verdict and thereafter, in the absence of defendant and his counsel, and without their knowledge, the court instructed the jury to return verdict one week later instead of the next juridical day, as this rule contemplates, such practice was improper. Denny v. People, 106 Colo. 328, 104 P.2d 610 (1940).

Unanimity is required only with respect to the ultimate issue of defendant's guilt or innocence of the crime charged and not with respect to alternative means by which the crime was committed. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981); People v. Vigil, 678 P.2d 554 (Colo. App. 1983).

Unanimity in a verdict does not require the jurors to be in agreement as to specific elements of the crime. People v. Lewis, 710 P.2d 1110 (Colo. App. 1985).

Where the intent of the jury can be ascertained from the verdict forms submitted, there is no reversible error as a result of the omission of a reference to conspiracy in the guilty verdict form. People v. Roberts, 705 P.2d 1030 (Colo. App. 1985).

Jury verdicts will not be reversed for inconsistency when the crimes charged required different elements of proof, and the jury could find from the very same evidence that the element of one crime was present while at the same time finding that the element of another charged crime was absent. People v. Powell, 716 P.2d 1096 (Colo. 1986).

No error in the trial court's decision to reassemble the jury for further deliberation and to enter judgment on the amended verdict where facts were insufficient to support a presumption that the jury was open to the influence of others after discharge and the defendant did not request that the jurors be questioned about their contact with others during the brief period after discharge. People v. Montanez, 944 P.2d 529 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court properly instructed jury to resume deliberations where juror's statements were ambiguous and equivocal as to her concurrence in the verdict. People v. Barnard, 12 P.3d 290 (Colo. App. 2000).

III. CONVICTION OF LESSER OFFENSE.

Lesser included offense defined. If the greater of two offenses includes all the legal and factual elements of the lesser, the greater includes the lesser; but if the lesser offense requires the inclusion of some necessary element not so included in the greater offense, the lesser is not necessarily included in the greater. Sandoval v. People, 176 Colo. 414, 490 P.2d 1298 (1971).

"The offense charged" as used in section (c), encompasses any lesser included offense of the one charged. Hunter v. District Court, 184 Colo. 238, 519 P.2d 941 (1974).

Provisions of section (c) are embodiments of the rule at common law that the defendant was presumed to be on notice that he could be convicted of the crime charged or a lesser offense included therein. People v. Cooke, 186 Colo. 44, 525 P.2d 426 (1974).

Section (c) and all prior Colorado case law provide that one may be convicted of a lesser included offense of the crime charged. Hunter v. District Court, 184 Colo. 238, 519 P.2d 941 (1974).

If appellate court reverses a conviction as to a greater offense for insufficient evidence, it may direct entry of judgment on a lesser included offense supported by sufficient proof, even if jury was not instructed upon that lesser offense. People v. Valdez, 56 P.3d 1148 (Colo. App. 2002).

A criminal defendant who maintains his or her innocence at trial is not automatically barred from seeking jury instructions for a voluntary intoxication defense. If an instruction is given in that case, there must be a rational basis for it in the evidence presented at trial. After a review of the record, there was no rational basis in the evidence for the voluntary intoxication instruction. Brown v. People, 239 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2010).

Claim of innocence alone does not disentitle defendant to lesser included offense instruction. The instruction, however, must be supported by evidence at trial. There was no error in failing to instruct the jury on attempted first degree murder where victim's injuries were such that no rational jury could have found the shooter acted with anything but a premeditated intent to cause death. People v. Brown, 218 P.3d 733 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd, 239 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2010).

IV. POLL OF JURY.

A court may declare a mistrial without further questioning the jury if the record supports the determination that the jury is unlikely to reach a unanimous verdict. Section (d) specifically applies "when a verdict is returned" and contains no direction to poll jurors prior to a verdict. Although the rule contemplates that a juror may disagree with a verdict, thereby permitting the court to direct further deliberations or to discharge the jury, the rule contains no provision for the situation where the jury reports that it cannot, and likely will not, reach a verdict. People v. Rivers, 70 P.3d 531 (Colo. App. 2002).

A jury poll ordinarily requires each juror to assent in the verdict. However, the right to a jury poll is not absolute, and matters relating to the manner of conducting a jury poll are generally committed to the discretion of the trial court. People v. Phillips, 91 P.3d 476 (Colo. App. 2004).

Trial court properly refused defendant's request to poll the jury. If a single charge includes multiple degrees of offenses, the trial court may not conduct a partial verdict inquiry as to the offenses included within the charge. People v. Richardson, 184 P.3d 755 (Colo. 2008).

Where no contemporaneous objection is made to an asserted defect occurring during the polling of the jury, review on appeal is limited to whether the defect rises to the level of ordinary plain error. Because the jurors in the case orally informed the court of their unanimous verdict and the record did not show a lack of unanimity, the court perceived no plain error where twelfth juror inexplicably not polled. People v. Phillips, 91 P.3d 476 (Colo. App. 2004).

VII. JUDGMENT

Rule 32. Sentence and Judgment

(a) Presentence or Probation Investigation.

(1) When Investigation and Report Required.

(I) In General. The probation officer must make a presentence investigation and written report to the court before the imposition of sentence or granting of probation:

(a) In any case in which the defendant is to be sentenced for a felony and the court has discretion as to the punishment, or

(b) When the court so orders in any case in which the defendant is to be sentenced for a misdemeanor.

(II) Waiver. The court, with the concurrence of the defendant and the prosecuting attorney, may dispense with the presentence investigation and report unless a presentence report is required by statute, including but not limited to the requirements of section 16-11-102(1)(b), C.R.S.

(2) Court May Order Examination. The court, upon its own motion or upon the petition of the probation officer, may order any defendant who is subject to presentence investigation or who has made application for probation to submit to a mental and physical examination.

(3) Delivery of Report Copies. The probation officer must provide copies of the presentence report, including any recommendations as to probation, to the prosecuting attorney and to defense counsel or the defendant if unrepresented. The copies must be provided:

(I) At least 72 hours before the sentencing hearing, or

(II) At least 7 days before the sentencing hearing if either the prosecuting attorney, defense counsel, or the defendant if unrepresented, so requests of the court within 7 days of the time the court sets the date for the sentencing hearing. If the probation department informs the court it cannot provide the report copies at least 7 days before the sentencing hearing, the court must grant the probation department additional time to complete the report and must reset the sentencing hearing so that it is held at least 7 days after the probation department provides the report copies.

(b) Sentence and Judgment.

(1) Sentence shall be imposed without unreasonable delay. Before imposing sentence, the court shall afford the defendant an opportunity to make a statement in his or her own behalf, and to present any information in mitigation of punishment. The state also shall be given an opportunity to be heard on any matter material to the imposition of sentence. Alternatives in sentencing shall be as provided by law. When imposing sentence, the court shall consider restitution as required by section 18-1.3-603(1), C.R.S.

(2) Upon conviction of guilt of a defendant of a class 1 felony, and after the sentencing hearing provided by law, the trial court shall impose such sentence as is authorized by law. At the time of imposition of a sentence of death, the trial court shall enter an order staying execution of the judgment and sentence until further order of the Supreme Court.

(3) Judgment.

(I) A judgment of conviction shall consist of a recital of the plea, the verdict or findings, the sentence, the finding of the amount of presentence confinement, and costs, if any are assessed against the defendant, the finding of the amount of earned time credit if the defendant had previously been placed in a community corrections program, an order or finding regarding restitution as required by section 18-1.3-603, C.R.S., and a statement that the defendant is required to register as a sex offender, if applicable.

(II) If the defendant is found not guilty or for any other reason is entitled to be discharged, judgment shall be entered accordingly.

(III) All judgments shall be signed by the trial judge and entered by the clerk in the register of actions.

(c) Advisement.

(1) Where judgment of conviction has been entered following a trial, the court shall, after passing sentence, inform the defendant of the right to seek review of the conviction and sentence, and the time limits for filing a notice of appeal. The court shall at that time make a determination whether the defendant is indigent, and if so, the court shall inform the defendant of the right to the assistance of appointed counsel upon review of the defendant's conviction and sentence, and of the defendant's right to obtain a record on appeal without payment of costs. In addition, the court shall, after passing sentence, inform the defendant of the right to seek postconviction reduction of sentence in the trial court under the provisions of Rule 35(b).

(2) Where judgment of conviction has been entered following a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, the court shall, after passing sentence, inform the defendant that the defendant may in certain circumstances have the right to appellate review of the sentence, of the time limits for filing a notice of appeal, and that the defendant may have a right to seek postconviction reduction of sentence in the trial court under the provisions of Rule 35(b).

(3) When the court imposes a sentence, enters a judgment, or issues an order that obligates a defendant to pay any monetary amount, the court shall instruct the defendant as follows:

(I) If at any time the defendant is unable to pay the monetary amount due, the defendant must contact the court's designated official or appear before the court to explain why he or she is unable to pay the monetary amount;

(II) If the defendant lacks the present ability to pay the monetary amount due without undue hardship to the defendant or the defendant's dependents, the court shall not jail the defendant for failure to pay; and

(III) If the defendant has the ability to pay the monetary amount as directed by the court or the court's designee but willfully fails to pay, the defendant may be imprisoned for failure to comply with the court's lawful order to pay pursuant to the terms of this section.

(d) Withdrawal of Plea of Guilty or Nolo Contendere. A motion to withdraw a plea of guilty or of nolo contendere may be made only before sentence is imposed or imposition of sentence is suspended.

If the court decides that the final disposition should not include the charge or sentence concessions contemplated by a plea agreement, as provided in Rule 11(f) of these Rules, the court shall so advise the defendant and the district attorney and then call upon the defendant to either affirm or withdraw the plea of guilty or nolo contendere.

(e) Criteria for Granting Probation. The court in its discretion may grant probation to a defendant unless, having regard to the nature and circumstances of the offense and to the history and character of the defendant, it is satisfied that imprisonment is the more appropriate sentence for the protection of the public.

The conditions of probation shall be as the court in its discretion deems reasonably necessary to ensure that the defendant will lead a law-abiding life and to assist the defendant to do so. The court shall provide as an explicit condition of every sentence to probation that the defendant not commit another offense during the period for which the sentence remains subject to revocation.

(f) Proceedings for Revocation of Probation.

(1) At the first appearance of the probationer in court, or at the commencement of the hearing, whichever is first in time, the court shall advise the probationer as provided in Rule 5(2)(I) through (VI) of these Rules insofar as such matters are applicable, except that there shall be no right to a trial by jury in proceedings for revocation of probation.

(2) At or prior to the commencement of the hearing, the court shall advise the probationer of the charges against the probationer and the possible penalty or penalties therefor, and shall require the probationer to admit or deny the charges.

(3) At the hearing, the prosecution shall have the burden of establishing by a preponderance of the evidence the violation of a condition or conditions of probation, except that the commission of a criminal offense must be established beyond a reasonable doubt unless the probationer has been convicted thereof in a criminal proceeding. The court may, when it appears that the alleged violation of conditions of probation consists of an offense with which the probationer is charged in a criminal proceeding then pending, continue the probation revocation hearing until the termination of such criminal proceeding. Any evidence having probative value shall be received regardless of its admissibility under the exclusionary rules of evidence if the defendant is accorded a fair opportunity to rebut the evidence.

(4) If the probationer is in custody, the hearing shall be held within 14 days after the filing of the complaint, unless delay or continuance is granted by the court at the instance or request of the probationer or for other good cause found by the court justifying further delay.

(5) If the court determines that a violation of a condition or conditions of probation has been committed, it shall within 7 days after the said hearing either revoke or continue the probation. In the event probation is revoked, the court may then impose any sentence, including probation which might originally have been imposed or granted.

(g) Proceedings in the Event of Failure to Pay. When a defendant fails to pay a monetary amount imposed by the court, the court shall follow the procedures set forth in section 18-1.3-702(3), C.R.S.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Insanity and the Law'', see 39 Dicta 325 (1962). For article, ''Colorado Felony Sentencing'', see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982). For article, ''Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986'', which discusses a case relating to increased sentences after retrial, see 15 Colo. Law. 1604 (1986).

This rule is not unconstitutional because notice of a right to review is given to criminal defendants except in cases where judgment of conviction has been entered following a plea of guilty or nolo contendere. The reasonableness of the classification of defendants who have entered guilty pleas has been upheld in cases dealing with the federal counterpart. People v. Smith, 190 Colo. 449, 548 P.2d 603 (1976).

A violation of this rule does not entitle defendant to a late appeal in the absence of prejudice. In order for the defendant to bring a claim alleging he or she was deprived of the right to appeal because the court failed to comply with this rule, the defendant must bring a timely postconviction action under Crim. P. 35(c) and request a remedy of a new appeal. People v. Boespflug, 107 P.3d 1118 (Colo. App. 2004).

Applied in McClendon v. People, 175 Colo. 451, 488 P.2d 556 (1971); People v. Banks, 190 Colo. 295, 545 P.2d 1356 (1976); People v. District Court, 191 Colo. 558, 554 P.2d 1105 (1976); People v. Houpe, 41 Colo. App. 253, 586 P.2d 241 (1978); People v. Palmer, 42 Colo. App. 460, 595 P.2d 1060 (1979); People v. Baca, 44 Colo. App. 167, 610 P.2d 1083 (1980); People v. Horton, 628 P.2d 117 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Quintana, 634 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1981), overruled on other grounds in People v. Porter, 2015 CO 34, 348 P.3d 922; People v. Lawson, 634 P.2d 1019 (Colo. App. 1981); Hafelfinger v. District Court, 674 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1984); People v. Anderson, 703 P.2d 650 (Colo. App. 1985).

II. PRESENTENCE OR PROBATION INVESTIGATION.

Even where evidence has been illegally seized, its use in a presentence hearing following a guilty plea is not error. Von Pickrell v. People, 163 Colo. 591, 431 P.2d 1003 (1967).

III. SENTENCE.

Equal protection requirements. In the context of sentencing for criminal offenses, equal protection requires only that those who have committed the same offense shall be subject to the same criminal sanctions in effect at the time the offense was committed. People v. Arellano, 185 Colo. 280, 524 P.2d 305 (1974).

Imposition of sentence requires judicial discretion. The imposition of a criminal sentence in each individual case requires the exercise of judicial judgment, and it includes consideration of mitigating and aggravating circumstances, the power to impose an indeterminate sentence, and the right to suspend sentence, or the discretion to grant probation in appropriate cases. People v. Jenkins, 180 Colo. 35, 501 P.2d 742 (1972).

Which does not deny equal protection. The exercise of the judge's discretionary power in sentencing does not deny an accused equal protection of the law. People v. Jenkins, 180 Colo. 35, 501 P.2d 742 (1972).

Substance of American Bar Association standards deemed "authorized by law". The substance of the principles articulated in the American Bar Association Standards Relating to Sentencing Alternatives and Procedures § 3.5, insofar as they are consistent with the stated general purposes of the Colorado code of criminal procedure, may be deemed to be ''authorized by law'' within the meaning of section (b). People v. Lewis, 193 Colo. 203, 564 P.2d 111 (1977).

Nothing requires court to assign reasons for imposing a sentence. People v. Pauldino, 187 Colo. 61, 528 P.2d 384 (1974).

A sentencing court is required to state on the record the basic reasons for the imposition of sentence. The failure to do so creates a burdensome obstacle to effective and meaningful appellate review. People v. Luu, 983 P.2d 15 (Colo. App. 1998).

A judgment of conviction is not final until sentence is imposed. Absent a specific finding that the victim did not suffer a pecuniary loss, restitution is a mandatory part of a sentence. Thus, absent such a finding, sentencing is not final until restitution is ordered. People v. Rosales, 134 P.3d 429 (Colo. App. 2005).

Discretion to impose concurrent or consecutive sentence. A sentencing court has discretion to impose a sentence to be served concurrently with or consecutively to a sentence already imposed upon the defendant. People v. Garcia, 658 P.2d 1383 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Cullen, 695 P.2d 750 (Colo. App. 1984).

Delaying final sentencing on non-capital convictions until after sentencing on class 1 felony is appropriate where a court must sentence both for a class 1 felony and for other felonies. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

Six-year delay between defendant's conviction and legal sentencing did not divest court of jurisdiction or cause unreasonable delay, where the sentence was promptly imposed following defendant's conviction, but subsequent appeal and the defendant's election to invoke the discretionary procedure under the Sex Offender's Act of 1968 delayed the proceedings. People v. Wortham, 928 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 1996).

A six-month and seven-day sentencing delay is not presumptively prejudicial since it is substantially less than a year. The delay was not ''unreasonable'' under section (b) because the trial court imposed the delay for a legally justifiable reason, namely, to further the general assembly's intent to require trial courts to sentence recidivist offenders within an aggravated range. Trial court's sentencing delay did not violate defendant's claimed constitutional right to speedy sentencing because defendant failed to demonstrate presumptive prejudice. People v. Sandoval-Candelaria, 2014 CO 21, 321 P.3d 487.

Single sentence for more than one conviction does not constitute reversible error, although the preferable practice is to have a separate sentence for each conviction. People v. Pleasant, 182 Colo. 144, 511 P.2d 488 (1973).

Reliance by court on probation report at time sentence imposed does not abuse the defendant's rights. People v. Canino, 181 Colo. 207, 508 P.2d 1273 (1973).

Judge may consider truthfulness of voluntary statements. It is not a denial of due process for a judge, in connection with sentencing procedure, to consider the truthfulness of voluntary statements made by the defendant at a presentence hearing. People v. Quarles, 182 Colo. 321, 512 P.2d 1240 (1973).

Deferred prosecution is relevant consideration in determining the sentence. People v. Lichtenwalter, 184 Colo. 340, 520 P.2d 583 (1974).

There is no difference between plea of nolo contendere and plea of guilty for sentencing purposes. People v. Canino, 181 Colo. 207, 508 P.2d 1273 (1973).

There is no requirement that codefendants be given equal sentences. People v. Martin, 670 P.2d 22 (Colo. App. 1983).

Sentencing court should tailor sentence to defendant, keeping in mind past record, potential for rehabilitation, and protection of the public as well. People v. Alvarez, 187 Colo. 290, 530 P.2d 506 (1975).

Sentencing court should attempt to tailor the sentence to the defendant. To achieve this goal, the court should be aware of defendant's entire record including his past encounters with the criminal justice system. People v. Lichtenwalter, 184 Colo. 340, 520 P.2d 583 (1974).

Defendant must be notified when sentence will be pronounced. He has a right to be present in the court with legal counsel at that time, and he has a right of allocution before sentence is handed down which cannot be withheld from him. The failure of the court to properly insure these rights of a defendant renders invalid a sentence pronounced under those circumstances. People v. Emig, 177 Colo. 174, 493 P.2d 368 (1972).

No right to evidentiary hearing. During a discretionary sentencing proceeding, rule does not require an evidentiary hearing on the validity of any prior conviction contained in a presentence report. People v. Padilla, 907 P.2d 601 (Colo. 1995).

Prior to sentencing, the court must grant the defendant an opportunity to make a statement on his or her own behalf. The proper remedy for failing to allow the defendant to make a statement is resentencing. People v. Marquantte, 923 P.2d 180 (Colo. App. 1995); People v. Smalley, 2015 COA 140, 369 P.3d 737.

Failure to afford defendant an opportunity to speak amounts to plain error where a court does not directly address the defendant or personally invite him or her to speak. People v. Smalley, 2015 COA 140, 369 P.3d 737.

The court's inquiry whether ''other people in the court'' wanted to speak was clearly directed to the nonparties in attendance, not to the defendant. People v. Smalley, 2015 COA 140, 369 P.3d 737.

Effect of denial of allocution limited. Denial of the right of allocution under section (b) has no effect on the validity of the jury's determination of guilt. People v. Doyle, 193 Colo. 332, 565 P.2d 944 (1977).

Relief from denial is resentencing. The defendant's relief from a denial of the right of allocution under section (b) is resentencing after being afforded his right to allocution. People v. Doyle, 193 Colo. 332, 565 P.2d 944 (1977); People v. Smalley, 2015 COA 140, 369 P.3d 737.

Where the presentence report is issued to counsel immediately prior to sentencing, and the trial court's refusal to continue the sentencing hearing to another day unduly abridges the defendant's rights to present evidence in rebuttal to the information and recommendations contained in the report, his sentence must be vacated and the case remanded for resentencing after a full sentencing hearing. People v. Wright, 672 P.2d 518 (Colo. 1983).

However, the right of allocution is a statutory right, not a constitutional one, and reversal is not required if the failure to provide the defendant an opportunity to make a statement prior to sentencing is harmless. If a trial court imposes the minimum sentence permitted and does not have discretion to impose a lesser sentence, the lack of statement in allocution does not affect the sentence and is harmless. People v. Martinez, 83 P.3d 1174 (Colo. App. 2003).

Sentencing must occur without unreasonable delay. Although the general assembly has prescribed no specific time within which sentence must be imposed, section (b) requires that sentencing occur without unreasonable delay. People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981).

Although sentencing was delayed for eight years, delay was excusable because the majority of it was attributable to defendant's own actions. Moody v. Corsentino, 843 P.2d 1355 (Colo. 1993).

Although resentencing was delayed for 29 months, delay was excusable because of the timely imposition of defendant's original sentence, the substantial reduction of the original sentence upon resentencing, the consequent lack of prejudice resulting from the sentence imposed on remand, and the fact that all of the period of delay would be credited against the present sentence. People v. Luu, 983 P.2d 15 (Colo. App. 1998).

Despite six-year delay, state had no duty to set defendant's probation revocation hearing until after termination of defendant's incarceration in another jurisdiction. People v. Smith, 183 P.3d 726 (Colo. App. 2008).

One-year deferral of sentence imposition is unreasonable delay. Absent a legally justifiable reason, a one-year deferral of imposition of sentence constitutes an unreasonable delay in sentencing contrary to section (b). People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981).

Sentence imposed within statutory limits will not be disturbed. Ordinarily if a sentence imposed is within limits fixed by statute, it will not be disturbed on review. People v. Lutz, 183 Colo. 312, 516 P.2d 1132 (1973).

Choice of place of confinement is within the sound discretion of the court. People v. Weihs, 187 Colo. 124, 529 P.2d 317 (1974).

Length of term of imprisonment is within the discretion of the court. People v. Weihs, 187 Colo. 124, 529 P.2d 317 (1974).

Sentencing judge is empowered to set the minimum sentence. Guerin v. Fullerton, 154 Colo. 142, 389 P.2d 84 (1964).

Parole board has no authority to refuse to carry out the plain meaning of a sentence legally imposed by the sentencing judge. Guerin v. Fullerton, 154 Colo. 142, 389 P.2d 84 (1964).

There is no constitutional right to credit of presentence jail time against sentence imposed. People v. Coy, 181 Colo. 393, 509 P.2d 1239 (1973); People v. Nelson, 182 Colo. 1, 510 P.2d 441 (1973).

Presumption that court gave credit for presentence confinement. It will be conclusively presumed that the trial court gave credit for presentence time spent in confinement where the sentence imposed plus the prior time in confinement do not exceed the maximum possible sentence. Larkin v. People, 177 Colo. 156, 493 P.2d 1 (1972).

Or otherwise acted properly. Where sentencing judge states only that he is taking time spent in jail prior to sentencing into consideration and thereafter gives the maximum, it must be presumed that he acted properly; that is, that he took the time spent into consideration and determined, as he had the right to do, not to grant the credit. People v. Nelson, 182 Colo. 1, 510 P.2d 441 (1973).

But "giving credit" without applying it to sentence improper. Where the trial court in sentencing gives credit to the defendant for his presentence jail time but does not apply it to the maximum sentence, the court is, in fact, extending the sentence beyond the statutory limits. People v. Regan, 176 Colo. 59, 489 P.2d 194 (1971).

Credit should be reflected in record. Trial judges would be well advised to follow the practice of causing the actual time spent by the defendant in jail prior to the imposition of sentence to be reflected in the record at the time sentence is imposed. People v. Jones, 176 Colo. 61, 489 P.2d 596 (1971).

Cancellation of deferred sentence does not affect conviction. Where the trial court withdrew or cancelled the imposition of the deferred sentence, its order affected only the sentence, and did not touch the conviction. People v.

Peretsky, 44 Colo. App. 270, 616 P.2d 170 (1980).

Defendant's absence from the state was by virtue of his own conduct and was justifiable reason for delay in sentencing. Defendant was incarcerated in another state for a probation violation. People v. Gould, 844 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1992).

Two-and-one-half month delay in sentencing following defendant's return to state was not unreasonable. People v. Gould, 844 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1992).

IV. JUDGMENT.

Intent of section (c). The intent behind section (c) is to establish some minimum guarantee that knowledge of the appellate process will be conveyed to defendants. People v. Boivin, 632 P.2d 1038 (Colo. App. 1981).

Burden to show that defendant was advised of appellate rights. Once there is sufficient reason to believe that the trial court has not advised a defendant of his appellate rights, including the special rights of an indigent defendant, the burden falls upon the state to demonstrate that he was so advised. People v. Boivin, 632 P.2d 1038 (Colo. App. 1981).

No "finality" standard for double jeopardy purposes. Section (c) does not provide a standard of ''finality'' for purposes of the constitutional prohibition against being twice placed in jeopardy for the same offense. People v. District Court, 663 P.2d 616 (Colo. 1983).

For purposes of retroactive application of a new rule of law, a judgment of conviction in Colorado cannot be considered final so long as a defendant may directly appeal the conviction or sentence. People v. Sharp, 143 P.3d 1047 (Colo. App. 2005).

Oral order does not become final judgment until order signed and entered in the judgment record. People v. Ganatta, 638 P.2d 268 (Colo. 1981).

When judgment final for purposes of appeal. The final judgment was entered, for purposes of appeal, when trial court reversed its previous order imposing costs on the defendant, and therefore state's appeal, taken more than 30 days after sentencing was proper. People v. Fisher, 189 Colo. 297, 539 P.2d 1258 (1975).

For purposes of § 16-5-402 and post-conviction review, a conviction occurs when the trial court enters judgment and sentence is imposed, if there is no appeal. The limitations of § 16-5-402 are applicable to a proportionality review of a sentence imposed pursuant to the habitual criminal statutes. People v. Talley, 934 P.2d 859 (Colo. App. 1996).

Judgment in a criminal case is not final until after sentencing. Hellman v. Rhodes, 741 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1987).

An order of restitution becomes part of the sentence which, in accordance with section (c) of this rule, is part of the judgment of conviction. When a court orders a defendant, over his objection, to pay restitution to the victim or the victim's family as part of the judgment of conviction for a felony, the order of restitution is appealable pursuant to the statutory procedures applicable to the appellate review of a felony sentence. People v. Johnson, 780 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1989).

Restitution component satisfied once ordered, even though specific amount not set until two years after sentence imposed. Once restitution ordered, although not set, judgment of conviction became final and appealable, even though district court retained jurisdiction to determine restitution amount. Sanoff v. People, 187 P.3d 576 (Colo. 2008).

After the criminal court has lost the power to order restitution, it cannot alter the specific amount set while it still maintained the power to do so. In the absence of statutory authorization to determine the specific amount of restitution, notwithstanding a judgment of conviction as defined by section (b)(3), the sentencing court lacks the power to increase restitution beyond the previously set amount. Meza v. People, 2018 CO 23, 415 P.3d 303; People v. Belibi, 2018 CO 24, 415 P.3d 301.

Post-final judgment orders void when court denied defendant's motion for new trial and imposed valid sentence. People v. Campbell, 738 P.2d 1179 (Colo. 1987).

Constitutionality of imposing liability for costs. Statutes imposing liability for costs on a convicted defendant have been uniformly held to be constitutional. People v. Fisher, 189 Colo. 297, 539 P.2d 1258 (1975).

For effect of rule on habitual criminal act, see Swift v. People, 174 Colo. 259, 488 P.2d 80 (1971).

V. WITHDRAWAL OF PLEA OF GUILTY OR NOLO CONTENDERE.

A. In General.

There is no ambiguity in this rule. Glaser v. People, 155 Colo. 504, 395 P.2d 461 (1964).

No right to withdraw guilty plea. One may not, as a matter of right, have his plea of guilty withdrawn or changed. Maes v. People, 155 Colo. 570, 396 P.2d 457 (1964); McConnell v. People, 157 Colo. 235, 402 P.2d 75 (1965).

Defendant does not have an absolute right to withdraw his guilty plea at any time before the court imposes sentence. People v. Riley, 187 Colo. 262, 529 P.2d 1312 (1975).

Defendant not permitted to withdraw plea of nolo contendere. Defendant's assertion of innocence at the time his plea of nolo contendere was entered does not force the court to permit him to withdraw his plea of nolo contendere. People v. Canino, 181 Colo. 207, 508 P.2d 1273 (1973).

Section (d) does not apply to request to withdraw plea of not guilty by reason of insanity. Section (d) plainly states that only a guilty plea and a nolo contendere plea can be withdrawn. People v. Laeke, 2018 COA 78, 431 P.3d 667.

Withdrawal of plea with court's discretion. An application for the withdrawal or change of such plea is addressed to the discretion of the trial court. Maes v. People, 155 Colo. 570, 396 P.2d 457 (1964); Bradley v. People, 175 Colo. 146, 485 P.2d 875 (1971).

And court's ruling on such an application will not be reversed, except where there is a clear abuse of discretion. Maes v. People, 155 Colo. 570, 396 P.2d 457 (1964); Bradley v. People, 175 Colo. 146, 485 P.2d 875 (1971); People v. Miller, 685 P.2d 233 (Colo. App. 1984).

Showing required to permit change of plea. To warrant the exercise of discretion favorable to a defendant concerning a change of plea, there must be some showing that justice will be subverted by a denial thereof, such as where a defendant may have been surprised or influenced into a plea of guilty when he had a defense, or where a plea of guilty was entered by mistake or under a misconception of the nature of the charge, or where such plea was entered through fear, fraud, or official misrepresentation, or where it was made involuntarily for some reason. Maes v. People, 155 Colo. 570, 396 P.2d 457 (1964); Crumb v. People, 230 P.3d 726 (Colo. 2010).

Defendant is entitled to withdraw plea of guilty where, at time plea was entered, neither court nor counsel was aware of defendant's parole status so defendant was improperly advised as to the minimum sentence, and where defendant promptly moved to withdraw guilty plea when parole status became known. People v. Chippewa, 751 P. 607 (Colo. 1988).

Court should not consider sentence it intends to impose as a reason for denying motion to withdraw a guilty plea where plea was entered when neither court nor counsel was aware of defendant's parole status so that defendant was improperly advised as to minimum sentence. People v. Chippewa, 751 P.2d 607 (Colo. 1988).

Defendant's motion to withdraw guilty plea must be granted where trial judge participated in plea negotiations. Because trial judge stepped out of his role as a neutral and impartial arbiter of justice by advising defendant and making other inappropriate remarks to influence defendant to agree to plea bargain, defendant has a fair and just reason to withdraw his plea. Crumb v. People, 230 P.3d 726 (Colo. 2010).

Defendant was entitled to a hearing on motion to withdraw guilty plea where court understated minimum sentence that could be imposed and defendant's plea agreement was not in evidence. On remand, defendant must establish that his asserted belief that he would receive a sentence below the minimum sentence stated by the court was objectively reasonable. People v. Hodge, 205 P.3d 481 (Colo. App. 2008).

Right to allocution not denied where extensive pretrial inquiry did not support defendant's last minute assertion of inability to speak in English at sentencing hearing. People v. Garcia, 752 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1988).

When a defendant enters a plea agreement that includes a recommendation for a particular sentence, the fact that the sentence is rejected by the court removes the basis upon which the defendant entered his guilty plea and draws into question the voluntariness of the plea. Chae v. People, 780 P.2d 481 (Colo. 1989).

Case must be remanded to allow defendant the opportunity to affirm or withdraw his guilty plea where the trial court's rejection of the sentence recommendation contained in the plea agreement calls into question the voluntariness of that plea and the defendant had no opportunity to affirm or withdraw that plea. People v. Walker, 46 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2002).

When a defendant enters into a plea agreement that includes as a material element a recommendation for an illegal sentence and the illegal sentence is in fact imposed on the defendant, the guilty plea is invalid and must be vacated because the basis on which the defendant entered the plea included the impermissible inducement of an illegal sentence. Chae v. People, 780 P.2d 481 (Colo. 1989).

Where there is a valid plea agreement but an illegal sentence imposed to enforce the valid and legal plea, the proper remedy is to modify the sentence to effect the intent of the plea agreement. People v. Antonio-Antimo, 29 P.3d 298 (Colo. 2000).

It is not an abuse of the court's discretion to deny a motion pursuant to this rule even though the defendant is influenced by alcohol at the time of entry of a plea of guilty if the court finds that the defendant still has the mental capacity to understand the entry of a plea of guilty. People v. Lewis, 849 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1992).

For a court to permit a defendant to withdraw his or her plea, there must be a fair and just reason. In this case, defendant's allegation of sentence misapprehension was contradicted by the record and the testimony of counsel, so there was no abuse of discretion in prohibiting defendant from withdrawing his plea. People v.

Allen, 310 P.3d 83 (Colo. App. 2010), aff'd, 2013 CO 44, 307 P.3d 1102.

A claim of ineffective assistance of counsel that is conclusory or contradicted by the record is not a fair and just reason for withdrawing a guilty plea. People v. Lopez, 12 P.3d 869 (Colo. App. 2000).

Fair and just reason for withdrawal of guilty plea is established where, immediately upon learning of the potential deportation consequences, the defendant filed a motion to withdraw his guilty plea before sentencing and where prosecution did not allege any prejudice arising from the withdrawal. People v. Luna, 852 P.2d 1326 (Colo. App. 1993).

Defendant's motion to withdraw his guilty plea prior to sentencing without a hearing was duly denied, where defendant's expectation of a deferred sentence and judgment was merely a ''wish and hope'' that his counsel was unable to effectuate. People v. DiGuglielmo, 33 P.3d 1248 (Colo. App. 2001).

Defendant's postconviction motion based on the voluntariness of his guilty plea as it related to the quality of his counsel was properly denied as successive under Crim. P. 35(c)(3)(VII), where lengthy evidentiary hearing was held on defendant's motion under section (d) of this rule, claiming that his plea was not knowing, voluntary, and intelligent due to ineffective assistance of counsel. People v. Vondra, 240 P.3d 493 (Colo. App. 2010).

Court lacks jurisdiction to award relief under section (d) where a defendant has completed his deferred sentence and the withdrawal of his guilty plea has already been granted. This rule does not contemplate relief in a case in which a deferred judgment has been successfully completed. People v. Espino-Paez, 2014 COA 126M, 410 P.3d 548, aff'd, 2017 CO 61, 395 P.3d 786.

A defendant may challenge a deferred judgment under section (d) when the deferred judgment is in effect and the defendant has not yet been sentenced. People v. Figueroa- Lemus, 2018 COA 51, __ P.3d __.

A magistrate has jurisdiction to consider a juvenile's motion to withdraw a previously entered guilty plea based on ineffective assistance of counsel. It is a matter of jurisdiction, not the review of magistrate orders pursuant to C.R.M. 7, and thus the Children's Code prevails, authorizing the juvenile-court-appointed magistrate to hear any case under the court's jurisdiction, including a section (d) motion to withdraw a plea. People in Interest of J.D., 2017 COA 156, __ P.3d __.

The plain terms of section (d) require a plea to exist in order for it to be withdrawn. When defendant successfully completed a deferred judgment, defendant's plea was withdrawn and the charge was dismissed with prejudice pursuant to § 18-1.3-102 (2). Because defendant's plea had already been withdrawn and the case dismissed, there was no plea to be withdrawn. People v. Corrales-Castro, 2017 CO 60, 395 P.3d 778; Espino-Paez v. People, 2017 CO 61, 395 P.3d 786; Zafiro-Guillen v. People, 2017 CO 62, 395 P.3d 781; People v. Roman, 2017 CO 63, 395 P.3d 799.

A defendant may under section (d) challenge a guilty plea involving a deferred judgment that is still in effect. People v. Figueroa-Lemus, 2018 COA 4, __ P.3d __.

This rule allows a defendant to move for withdrawal of a guilty plea before sentence is imposed or imposition of sentence is suspended. Kazadi v. People, 2012 CO 73, 291 P.3d 16; People v. Figueroa-Lemus, 2018 COA 4, __ P.3d __.

Court has jurisdiction to review a district court's order denying a section (d) motion to withdraw a guilty plea involving a deferred judgment that is still in effect. People v. Figueroa-Lemus, 2018 COA 4, __ P.3d __.

B. Sentence Concessions.

Section (e) of this rule implements § 16-7-302 (2). People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

Rule not limited to court-approved concessions. This rule, by its terms, is not limited to those situations where the court has first concurred in, or approved of, the sentence concessions. People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

A sentence recommendation is a sentence concession whether or not the court approves or concurs. People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

It is true that the district attorney has no authority to determine the sentence. However, sentence concessions must be equated with sentence recommendations; to hold otherwise would render the reference to sentence concessions in section (e) meaningless. People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

The district attorney's agreement to recommend probation was a sentence concession contemplated by the plea agreement. People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

But not all sentence concessions by the prosecution are sentence recommendations. People v. Dawson, 89 P.3d 447 (Colo. App. 2003).

"Sentence concessions" must refer only to the prosecution's making or not opposing favorable recommendations due to specific reference to Crim. P. 11(f). Prosecutor's agreement not to seek a sentence in the aggravated range does not constitute a sentence concession. People v. Dawson, 89 P.3d 447 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court must comply with section (e). Merely informing the defendant, pursuant to Crim. P. 11(b)(5) that the court will not be bound by any recommendation or representation by anyone concerning sentencing or probation does not obviate the necessity of its complying with section (e). People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

Court is not bound by a recommendation; in its discretion it may refuse to grant the district attorney's sentence concession. People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

When plea bargain rejected, plea is not voluntary. When the trial judge rejects the plea bargain he removes it as the basis for the sentence. When this occurs, the plea can hardly be characterized as voluntary. People v. Wright, 38 Colo. App. 271, 559 P.2d 249 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

And defendant may withdraw plea. A defendant is permitted to withdraw his guilty plea where the trial court chooses not to follow the prosecutor's sentence recommendation, regardless of whether the prosecution has promised that the court will follow the recommendation. People v. Wright, 194 Colo. 448, 573 P.2d 551 (1978).

VI. REVOCATION OF PROBATION.

Power to alter sentence at time of revocation of probation is explicitly recognized in subsection (f)(5) of this rule, Crim. P. 35(a), and § 16-11-206 (5). People v. Jenkins, 40 Colo. App. 140, 575 P.2d 13 (1977).

Review of probation revocation order. Probation revocation orders are not reviewable only via Crim. P. 35, but may be reviewed by direct appeal. People v. Carr, 185 Colo. 293, 524 P.2d 301 (1974).

Issue preclusion does not apply to bar the right of a defendant to a trial where defendant had been charged with the crime of driving with a revoked license, which constituted both a violation of his probation and a new criminal act. Defendant did not have a full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue in the probation revocation hearing. A determination of guilt or innocence in a probation revocation hearing would undermine the function of the criminal trial process. Byrd v. People, 58 P.3d 50 (Colo. 2002).

Probation revocation hearings are held for different purposes, governed by different procedures, and do not protect a defendant's rights as does a criminal trial. Byrd v. People, 58 P.3d 50 (Colo. 2002).

Rule 32.1. Death Penalty Sentencing Hearing

(a) Purpose and Scope. The purpose of this rule is to establish a uniform, expeditious procedure for conducting death penalty sentencing hearings in accordance with section 18-1.3-1201, 6 C.R.S.

(b) Statement of Intention to Seek Death Penalty. In any class 1 felony case in which the prosecution intends to seek the death penalty, the prosecuting attorney shall file a written statement of that intention with the trial court no later than 63 days (9 weeks) after arraignment and shall serve a copy of the statement on the defendant's attorney of record or the defendant if appearing pro se.

(c) Date of Sentencing Hearing. After a verdict of guilt to a class 1 felony, the trial judge shall set a date for the sentencing hearing. The sentencing hearing shall be held as soon as practicable following the trial.

(d) Discovery Procedures for Sentencing Hearing. The following discovery provisions shall apply to the death penalty sentencing hearing:

(1) Aggravating Factors. Not later than 21 days after the filing of the written statement of intention required in subsection (b) of this rule, the prosecuting attorney shall provide to the defendant, and file with the court a list of the aggravating factors enumerated at section 18-1.3-1201(5), 6 C.R.S., and that the prosecuting attorney intends to prove at the hearing.

(2) Prosecution Witnesses. Not later than 21 days after the filing of the written statement of intention required in subsection (b) of this rule, the prosecuting attorney shall provide to the defendant a list of the witnesses whom the prosecuting attorney may call at the sentencing hearing and shall promptly furnish the defendant with written notification of any such witnesses who subsequently become known or the materiality of whose testimony subsequently becomes known. Along with the name of the witness, the prosecuting attorney shall furnish the witness' address and date of birth, the subject matter of the witness' testimony, and any written or recorded statement of that witness, including notes.

(3) Prosecution Books, Papers, Documents. Not later than 21 days after the filing of the written statement of intention required in subsection (b) of this rule, the prosecuting attorney shall provide to the defendant a list of the books, papers, documents, photographs, or tangible objects, and access thereto, that the prosecuting attorney may introduce at the sentencing hearing and shall promptly furnish the defendant written notification of additional such items as they become known.

(4) Prosecution Experts. As soon as practicable but not later than 63 days (9 weeks) before trial, the prosecuting attorney shall provide to the defendant any reports, recorded statements, and notes, including results of physical or mental examinations and scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons, of any experts whom the prosecuting attorney intends to call as a witness at the sentencing hearing and shall promptly furnish the defendant additional such items as they become available.

(5) Material Favorable to the Accused. Not later than 21 days after the filing of the written statement of intention required in subsection (b) of this rule, the prosecuting attorney shall make available to the defendant any material or information within the prosecuting attorney's possession or control that would tend to mitigate or negate the finding of any of the aggravating factors the prosecuting attorney intends to prove at the sentencing hearing, and the prosecuting attorney shall promptly make available to the defendant any such material or information that subsequently comes into the prosecuting attorney's possession or control.

(6) Prosecution's Rebuttal Witnesses. Upon receipt of the information required by subsection (7), the prosecuting attorney shall notify the defendant as soon as practicable but not later than 14 days before trial of any additional witnesses whom the prosecuting attorney intends to call in response to the defendant's disclosures.

(7) Defendant's Disclosure.

(A) Subject to constitutional limitations, the defendant shall provide the prosecuting attorney with the following information and materials not later than 35 days before trial:

(I) A list of witnesses whom the defendant may call at the sentencing hearing. Along with the name of the witness, the defendant shall furnish the witness's address and date of birth, the subject matter of the witness's testimony, and any written or recorded statement of that witness, including notes, that comprise substantial recitations of witness statements and relate to the subject matter of the testimony;

(II) A list of the books, papers, documents, photographs, or tangible objects, and access thereto, that the defendant may introduce at the sentencing hearing;

(III) Any reports, recorded statements, and notes of any expert whom the defendant may call as a witness during the sentencing hearing, including results of physical or mental examinations and scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons.

(B) Any material subject to this subsection (7) that the defendant believes contains self-incriminating information that is privileged from disclosure to the prosecution prior to the sentencing hearing shall be submitted by the defendant to the trial judge under seal no later than 49 days before trial. The trial judge shall review any material submitted under seal pursuant to this paragraph (B) to determine whether it is in fact privileged.

(I) Any material submitted under seal pursuant to this paragraph (B) that the judge finds to be privileged from disclosure to the prosecution prior to the sentencing hearing shall be provided forthwith to the prosecution if the defendant is convicted of a class 1 felony.

(II) If the trial judge finds any of the material submitted under seal pursuant to this paragraph (B) to be not privileged from disclosure to the prosecution prior to the sentencing hearing, the trial judge shall notify the defense of its findings and allow the defense 7 days after such notification in which to seek a modification, review or stay of the court's order requiring disclosure.

(III) The trial judge may excise information it finds privileged from information it finds not privileged in order to disclose as provided in (II) above.

(8) Regulation of Discovery and Sanctions. No party shall be permitted to rely at the sentencing hearing upon any witness, material, or information that is subject to disclosure pursuant to this rule until it has been disclosed to the opposing party. The trial court, upon a showing of good cause, may grant an extension of time to comply with the requirements of this rule. If it is brought to the attention of the court that a party has failed to comply with this rule or with an order issued pursuant to this rule, the court may enter an order against such party that the court deems just under the circumstances, and which is consistent with constitutional limitations, including but not limited to an order to permit the discovery or inspection of materials not previously disclosed, to grant a continuance, to prohibit the offending party from introducing the information and materials, or impose sanctions against the offending party.

Rule 32.2. Death Penalty Post-Trial Procedures

(a) Purpose and Scope. The purpose of this rule is to establish a fair, just and expeditious procedure for conducting trial court review of any post-trial motions and of any post-conviction motions, and for conducting appellate review of direct appeal and post-conviction review appeal in class one felony cases in which a sentence of death is imposed, as directed by section 16-12-201, et seq.

(b) Trial Court Procedure.

(1) Stay of Execution. The trial judge, upon the imposition of a death sentence, shall set the time of execution pursuant to section 18-1.3-1205 and enter an order staying execution of the judgment and sentence until receipt of an order from the supreme court. The trial court shall immediately mail to the supreme court a copy of the judgment, sentence, and mittimus.

(2) Motions for New Trial. The defendant may file any post-trial motions, pursuant to Crim. P. 33, no later than 21 days after the imposition of sentence. The trial court, in its discretion, may rule on such motion before or after the sentencing hearing, but must rule no later than 91 days (13 weeks) after the imposition of sentence.

(3) Advisement and Order. Within 7 days after the imposition of a sentence of death, the court shall hold a hearing (advisement date) and shall advise the defendant pursuant to sections 16-12-204 and 205. On the advisement date, the court shall:

(I) Appoint new counsel to represent the defendant concerning direct appeal and post-conviction review matters absent waiver by the defendant;

(II) Make specific findings as to whether any waiver by the defendant of the right to post-conviction review, direct appeal, or the appointment of new counsel is made knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently;

(III) Order the prosecuting attorney to deliver to counsel for the defendant within 7 days of the advisement date one copy of all material and information in the prosecuting attorney's possession or control that is discoverable under Crim. P. 16 or pertains to punishment, unless such material and information has been previously provided to that counsel. Costs of copying and delivery of such material and information shall be paid by the prosecuting attorney;

(IV) If new counsel is appointed for the defendant, order defendant's trial counsel, at his or her cost, to deliver a complete copy of trial counsel's file to new counsel within 7 days of the advisement date;

(V) Direct that any post-conviction review motions be filed within 154 days (22 weeks) of the advisement date; and

(VI) Order the production of three copies of a certified transcript of all proceedings in the case: one for the supreme court, one for the prosecution and one for the defense. Transcripts that are completed by the advisement date will be immediately provided to the prosecution and to defense counsel to the extent that counsel does not already possess those transcripts. All other transcripts shall be completed and delivered within 21 days of the advisement date or within 21 days of any subsequent hearing.

(4) Resolution of Post-conviction Motions. The court, upon receipt of any motion raising post-conviction review issues, as described in section 16-12-206, shall promptly determine whether an evidentiary hearing is necessary, and if so, shall schedule the matter for hearing within 63 days (9 weeks) of the filing of such motions and enter its order on all motions within 35 days of the hearing. If no evidentiary hearing is required, the trial court shall rule within 35 days of the last day for filing the motions.

(5) Record on Appeal. In an appeal under this rule, the trial court shall designate the entire trial court record as the record on appeal. Within 21 days of the filing of the unitary notice of appeal, the trial court shall deliver to the supreme court any portion of the record not previously delivered under subsection (b)(3)(VI) of this rule.

(6) Extension of Time. Upon a showing of extraordinary circumstances that could not have been foreseen and prevented, the court may grant an extension of time with regard to the time requirements of sections (b)(2), (3), (4) and (5) of this rule.

(c) Appellate Procedure.

(1) Unitary Notice of Appeal. The notice of appeal for the direct appeal and the notice of appeal for all post-conviction review shall be filed by unitary notice in the supreme court within 7 days after the trial court's order on post-conviction review motions, or within 7 days after the expiration of the deadline for filing post-conviction review motions if none have been filed. The unitary notice of appeal need conform only to the requirements of sections (1), (2), (6) and (8) of C.A.R. 3(g).

(2) Briefs. Counsel for defendant shall file an opening brief no later than 182 days (26 weeks) after the filing of the notice of appeal. The prosecution shall file an answer brief no later than 126 days (18 weeks) after filing of the opening brief. Counsel for defendant may file a reply brief no later than 63 days (9 weeks) after filing of the answer brief. Extensions of time will not be granted except on a showing of extraordinary circumstances that could not have been foreseen and prevented. The opening brief may not exceed 250 pages or, in the alternative, 79, 250 words; the answer brief may not exceed 250 pages or, in the alternative, 79, 250 words; and the reply brief may not exceed 100 pages or, in the alternative, 31,700 words. The Supreme Court may approve extensions not to exceed 75 pages or, in the alternative, 23,775 words for the opening and answer briefs, and 50 pages or 15, 850 words for the reply brief upon a showing of compelling need.

(3) Consolidation. Any direct appeal, any appeal of post-conviction review proceedings, and the review required by section 18-1.3-1201 (6) (a), shall be consolidated and resolved in one proceeding before the supreme court.

(4) Further Proceedings.

(I) After the supreme court resolves the appeal, ineffective assistance of counsel on direct appeal may only be raised by a petition for rehearing filed in the supreme court, pursuant to section 16-12-204;

(II) Any notice of appeal concerning a trial court decision entered pursuant to section 16-12-209 or concerning any second or subsequent request for relief filed by the defendant, shall be filed in the supreme court within 35 days of the entry of the trial court's order. Such appeal shall be governed by the Colorado appellate rules as may be modified by the supreme court in case-specific orders designed to expedite the proceedings.

(d) Sanctions. The trial court and the supreme court may impose sanctions on counsel for willful failure to comply with this rule.

This rule shall apply to class one felony offenses committed on or after January 1, 1998 for which a sentence of death is imposed.

ANNOTATION

Section 16-12-208 (3) does not impose an absolute two-year time limit on presenting a unitary appeal to the supreme court. Rather the statute directs the supreme court to create the limit in court rules. An absolute two-year time extension prohibition does not exist either in statute or rule. This rule implements the legislature's direction by imposing a series of highly specific time limits designed to meet the two-year goal when it can be accomplished without violating the defendant's constitutional rights or the legislature's expressly articulated goals. People v. Owens, 228 P.3d 969 (Colo. 2010).

Rule 33. New Trial

(a) Motions for New Trial or Other Relief Optional. The party claiming error in the trial of any case may move the trial court for a new trial or other relief. The party, however, need not raise all the issues it intends to raise on appeal in such motion to preserve them for appellate review. If such a motion is filed, the trial court may dispense with oral argument on the motion after it is filed.

(b) Motions for New Trial or Other Relief Directed by the Court. The court may direct a party to file a motion for a new trial or other relief on any issue. The failure of the party to file such a motion when so ordered shall preclude appellate review of the issues ordered to be raised in the motion. The party, however, need not raise all the issues it intends to raise on appeal in such motion to preserve them for appellate review.

(c) Motion; Contents; Time. The court may grant a defendant a new trial if required in the interests of justice. The motion for a new trial shall be in writing and shall point out with particularity the defects and errors complained of. A motion based upon newly discovered evidence or jury misconduct shall be supported by affidavits. A motion for a new trial based upon newly discovered evidence shall be filed as soon after entry of judgment as the facts supporting it become known to the defendant, but if a review is pending the court may grant the motion only on remand of the case. A motion for a new trial other than on the ground of newly discovered evidence shall be filed within 14 days after verdict or finding of guilt or within such additional time as the court may fix during the 14-day period.

(d) Appeal by Prosecution. The order of the trial court granting the motion is a final order reviewable on appeal.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For note, ''The Criminal Jury and Misconduct in Colorado'', see 36 U. Colo. L. Rev. 245 (1964). For article, ''Criminal Procedure'', which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with a motion for a new trial based on recanted testimony, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 189 (1985).

Prior to April 1974 motion for new trial not required. Prior to April 1974 there was no express language in any of the rules of criminal procedure or appellate rules that required a motion for new trial. People v. Martinez, 190 Colo. 507, 549 P.2d 758 (1976).

Motion does not bar double jeopardy protection against retrial. A motion for a new trial does not relinquish the right to invoke double jeopardy guarantees against retrial of the charge upon which no verdict was returned. Ortiz v. District Court, 626 P.2d 642 (Colo. 1981).

Federal court will deny "habeas corpus" where defendant fails to exhaust remedies under this rule. Tanksley v. Warden of State Penitentiary, 429 F.2d 1308 (10th Cir. 1970).

Granting or denying motion for new trial does not constitute an appealable final judgment. People v. Jones, 690 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1984).

Applied in People v. Pearson, 190 Colo. 313, 546 P.2d 1259 (1976); People v. Coca, 39 Colo. App. 264, 564 P.2d 431 (1977); People v. Vigil, 39 Colo. App. 371, 570 P.2d 13 (1977); People v. App. 1983); People v. Anderson, 703 P.2d 650 (Colo. App. 1985).

II. NO REVIEW UNLESS MOTION MADE.

Lack of contemporaneous objection is waiver. Lack of contemporaneous objection to testimony at time of trial constitutes waiver of new trial, and issue cannot be raised on appeal. People v. Routa, 180 Colo. 386, 505 P.2d 1298 (1973).

Where defendant failed to object to an identification procedure at his preliminary hearing, and he made no objection to victim's testimony concerning the preliminary hearing identification at the trial or in his motion for new trial, defendant could not assert this objection for the first time on appeal. People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980).

Appellate review is generally limited to errors presented to trial court for its consideration by a motion for new trial. Vigil v. People, 196 Colo. 522, 587 P.2d 1196 (1978).

Only matters contained in the motion for new trial will be considered on appeal. Quintana v. People, 152 Colo. 127, 380 P.2d 667, cert. denied, 375 U.S. 863, 84 S. Ct. 132, 11 L. Ed. 2d 89 (1963); Cook v. People, 129 Colo. 14, 266 P.2d 776 (1954); Rueda v. People, 141 Colo. 502, 348 P.2d 957, cert. denied, 362 U.S. 923, 80 S. Ct. 673, 4 L. Ed. 2d 744 (1960); Wilson v. People, 143 Colo. 544, 354 P.2d 588 (1960); Dyer v. People, 148 Colo. 22, 364 P.2d 1062 (1961); Peterson v. People, 153 Colo. 23, 384 P.2d 460 (1963); Brown v. People, 158 Colo. 561, 408 P.2d 981 (1965); Lucero v. People, 158 Colo. 568, 409 P.2d 278 (1965).

Failure to raise an issue in the motion for a new trial deprives the appellate court of jurisdiction to consider it unless the issue is one involving plain error affecting the substantial rights of the defendant. People v. Peterson, 656 P.2d 1301 (Colo. 1983).

Failure to file a motion for new trial precludes consideration of issues raised on appeal. People v. Hallman, 44 Colo. App. 530, 624 P.2d 347 (1980); People v. Ullerich, 680 P.2d 1306 (Colo. App. 1983).

Matters which counsel intends to raise on appeal must be preserved in a motion for a new trial. Diebold v. People, 175 Colo. 96, 485 P.2d 900 (1971).

When errors alleged with regard to the admission of testimony were not raised during the trial or in the defendant's motion for a new trial, they need not be considered on appeal. Ortega v. People, 178 Colo. 419, 498 P.2d 1121 (1972).

Absent a properly filed and acted on motion for new trial, appellate review is precluded. People v. Nisted, 653 P.2d 60 (Colo. App. 1980).

Filing notice of appeal divests court of power to grant motion. Once the notice of appeal is filed, the trial court is left powerless to grant a motion for a new trial. People v. Dillon, 655 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1982).

Motion prerequisite for review of probation revocation. A motion for new trial is a prerequisite for appellate review of a revocation of probation except when the propriety of a sentence is being appealed as provided in Rule 4(c), C.A.R. People v. Hallman, 44 Colo. App. 530, 624 P.2d 347 (1980).

And motion required for review of revocation of deferred sentence. Compliance with the motion for a new trial requirement of section (a) is a prerequisite for appellate review of a trial court's judgment revoking a deferred sentence, and imposing a sentence. Hallman v. People, 652 P.2d 173 (Colo. 1982).

Reasons need not be set forth in denial of motion. When a motion for a new trial is denied, reasons need not be set forth, because the motion is the basis and foundation for review of the judgment on appeal. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 186, 512 P.2d 264 (1973).

But where there is a claim that the trial court committed plain error which was prejudicial to substantial rights of the defendant, appellate review may be had without the issue being raised in a new trial motion. People v. Ullerich, 680 P.2d 1306 (Colo. App. 1983).

III. MOTION, CONTENTS, TIME.

A. In General.

Purpose of a motion for a new trial is to accord the trial judge a fair opportunity to consider and correct, if necessary, any erroneous rulings, and to acquaint him with the specific objection to those rulings. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 186, 512 P.2d 264 (1973).

The only purpose of requiring a motion for a new trial is to correct the trial court's own errors. Haas v. People, 155 Colo. 371, 394 P.2d 845 (1964).

Timely motion for new trial is not jurisdictional in the sense that without it the court would lack authority to adjudicate the subject matter. People v. Moore, 193 Colo. 81, 562 P.2d 749 (1977).

Unlike cases governed by the rules of civil procedure, in a criminal case the timely filing of a motion for new trial is not a jurisdictional prerequisite to the appeal of a judgment of conviction. People v. Masamba, 39 Colo. App. 197, 563 P.2d 382 (1977).

An untimely filed motion for new trial does not divest an appellate court of jurisdiction to consider the issues raised on appeal which are also presented in the motion. People v. Hallman, 44 Colo. App. 530, 624 P.2d 347 (1980).

Trial court may grant extension of filing time. In contrast to the provisions of the rules of civil procedure governing motions for new trial, upon a showing of excusable neglect the trial court is authorized under the criminal rules of procedure to grant an extension of time for filing the motion for new trial after the original 10 days had expired, or, after the expiration of any extended date granted by the trial court. People v. Masamba, 39 Colo. App. 197, 563 P.2d 382 (1977).

Trial court may grant extensions to file a motion for a new trial that is filed after the initial 15-day period if the motion to extend is filed within time period of the previous extension granted by the court. People v. Clark, 2015 COA 44, 370 P.3d 197.

Defendant may show excusable neglect for late filing. Where the prosecution objects to the late filing of a motion for new trial prior to the time of hearing on the motion, the defendant is afforded the opportunity to show, pursuant to Rule 45(b)(2), Crim. P., that the late filing was due to excusable neglect. People v. Masamba, 39 Colo. App. 197, 563 P.2d 382 (1977).

Timeliness issue held waived. The prosecution, by failing to object to the trial court's hearing and deciding the new trial motion, waived their right to raise the timeliness issue on appeal. People v. Moore, 193 Colo. 81, 562 P.2d 749 (1977).

Where there was no affirmative showing in the record on appeal that the prosecution objected to the late filing of defendant's motion for new trial prior to the time it was ruled upon by the trial court, that objection was deemed waived, and the prosecution was estopped to raise it for the first time on appeal. People v. Masamba, 39 Colo. App. 197, 563 P.2d 382 (1977).

Granting of motion is in court's discretion. Where an error is called to the court's attention for the first time in a motion for new trial, the question of whether a new trial should be granted involves the exercise of the court's discretion. Abeyta v. People, 145 Colo. 173, 358 P.2d 12 (1960).

Such as for misconduct of counsel. The question of whether a new trial should be granted for misconduct of counsel in his remarks to the jury rests in the sound judicial discretion of the trial court. Lee v. People, 170 Colo. 268, 460 P.2d 796 (1969).

And this discretion will not be interfered with on appeal unless it manifestly appears that such discretion has been abused. Lee v. People, 170 Colo. 268, 460 P.2d 796 (1969).

But this rule includes mandatory provision that motion based on newly discovered evidence be supported by affidavits, and this provision is impervious to judicial discretion. People ex rel. J.P.L., 214 P.3d 1072 (Colo. App. 2009).

The standard by which to judge a court's grant of a new trial under this rule is whether the court abused its discretion. People v. Jones, 942 P.2d 1258 (Colo. App. 1996).

Motion for new trial after trial on merits preserves errors alleged in sanity trial. A motion for a new trial after trial on the merits is sufficient to preserve for appeal errors alleged in the sanity trial, because the judgment declaring the defendant sane is not final for appeal purposes until defendant is found guilty of the crime charged. People v. Osborn, 42 Colo. App. 376, 599 P.2d 937 (1979).

For differing considerations governing effect of time limitations in criminal cases and in civil cases, see People v. Moore, 193 Colo. 81, 562 P.2d 749 (1977).

In order for a new trial to be granted on the basis of a prosecutor's remarks, in the absence of a contemporaneous objection, they must be particularly egregious. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

No basis in the record to conclude the jury's review of a silent videotape during deliberations was in any way prejudicial and the trial court therefore properly denied defendant's motion for a mistrial or new trial on this basis. People v. Blecha, 940 P.2d 1070 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd, 962 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1998).

For purposes of section (c), "entry of judgment" includes both a verdict or finding of guilt and defendant's sentencing. If defendant has not been sentenced, a motion filed under section (c) is timely. People v. Bueno, 2013 COA 151, 411 P.3d 53, aff'd, 2018 CO 4, 409 P.3d 320.

B. Contents.

Points of error must be raised with particularity. This rule requires the filing of a motion for new trial in which points of error must be raised with particularity. Feldstein v. People, 159 Colo. 107, 410 P.2d 188 (1966). See Jobe v. People, 158 Colo. 571, 408 P.2d 972 (1965); Cruz v. People, 165 Colo. 495, 441 P.2d 22 (1968).

Attention should be drawn specifically to the alleged objectionable rulings in a motion for a new trial, and general objections and assignments of error fall far short of calling to the court's attention any specific error made in connection with its rulings. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 186, 512 P.2d 264 (1973).

To give guidance to court. When the motion for a new trial does not set forth with particularity the reason that a new trial is required, a vacuum exists which leaves the trial judge without direction and without guidance as to how the new trial should be conducted. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 186, 512 P.2d 264 (1973).

Testimony treated as substance of affidavit. A witness's testimony on direct examination may be treated as constituting the substance of the affidavit required for a new trial. Hernandez v. People, 175 Colo. 155, 486 P.2d 24 (1971).

C. Based on Newly Discovered Evidence.

Motion regarded with disfavor. A motion for new trial on grounds of newly discovered evidence is regarded with disfavor. People v. Gallegos, 187 Colo. 6, 528 P.2d 229 (1974); People v. Jones, 690 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Phillips, 732 P.2d 1226 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Williams, 827 P.2d 612 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Leonard, 872 P.2d 1325 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Graham, 876 P.2d 68 (Colo. App. 1994).

A motion for new trial based on newly discovered evidence is generally not looked upon with great favor because to do otherwise would encourage counsel to neglect to gather all available evidence for the first trial and, if unsuccessful, then to become diligent in securing other evidence to attempt to reverse the outcome on a second trial. People v. Mays, 186 Colo. 123, 525 P.2d 1165 (1974); People v. Scheidt, 187 Colo. 20, 528 P.2d 232 (1974).

Motion addressed to court's discretion. A motion for new trial based upon newly discovered evidence is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. People v. Gallegos, 187 Colo. 6, 528 P.2d 229 (1974).

And unless an abuse of discretion is affirmatively shown, the denial of a motion for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence will not be disturbed on appeal. People v. Gallegos, 187 Colo. 6, 528 P.2d 229 (1974); People v. Jones, 690 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Phillips, 732 P.2d 1226 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Leonard, 872 P.2d 1325 (Colo. App. 1993).

The denial of a motion for a new trial based upon newly discovered evidence will not be overturned unless there has been shown a clear abuse of the trial court's discretion. People v. Scheidt, 187 Colo. 20, 528 P.2d 232 (1974).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion for new trial due to newly discovered evidence because the evidence probably would not have resulted in an acquittal on retrial. People v. Leonard, 872 P.2d 1325 (Colo. App. 1993).

To succeed on motion for new trial based upon newly discovered evidence, the defendant should show that the evidence was discovered after the trial; that defendant and his counsel exercised diligence to discover all possible evidence favorable to the defendant prior to and during the trial; that the newly discovered evidence is material to the issues involved, and not merely cumulative or impeaching; and that on retrial the newly discovered evidence would probably produce an acquittal. People v. Scheidt, 187 Colo. 20, 528 P.2d 232 (1974); People v. Jones, 690 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Williams, 827 P.2d 612 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Gee, 2015 COA 151, 371 P.3d 714.

Showing of diligent search and inquiry is a cardinal prerequisite of a new trial based upon newly discovered evidence. Isbell v. People, 158 Colo. 126, 405 P.2d 744 (1965); Pieramico v. People, 173 Colo. 276, 478 P.2d 304 (1970); People v. Jones, 690 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1984).

When defense was aware of the possibility that someone else committed the crime but didn't pursue the theory and instead chose to rely on alibi witness, the motion for new trial was properly denied. People v. Stephens, 689 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1984).

Else motion will be denied. Where the newly discovered evidence was cumulative in nature and could, with the exercise of due diligence, have been discovered before trial, motion for new trial was properly denied. People v. Mays, 186 Colo. 123, 525 P.2d 1165 (1974).

When evidence could have been discovered with reasonable diligence and the result of the trial would probably not have been changed if the evidence had been presented, the trial court properly denied the motion for a new trial. People v. Phillips, 732 P.2d 1226 (Colo. App. 1986).

Denial for motion for new trial based upon newly discovered evidence was proper where the asserted newly discovered evidence was either merely cumulative or impeaching and was neither material to the issues involved nor would it have probably produced a verdict of acquittal on retrial. People v. Williams, 827 P.2d 612 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Graham, 876 P.2d 68 (Colo. App. 1994).

Evidence must be of character to probably bring about acquittal. Newly discovered evidence must be of such a character as to probably bring about an acquittal verdict if presented at another trial. People v. Scheidt, 187 Colo. 20, 528 P.2d 232 (1974); People v. Jones, 690 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1984).

As where codefendant is induced. Where the motion for new trial sets forth as newly discovered evidence the fact that following defendant's conviction the charge against a codefendant is dismissed, and that this casts grave doubt as to the truth of his testimony that no promise had been made to him, then the ends of justice require that the court conduct a hearing with the additional consideration of any probative evidence on the question of whether there was any inducement to procure the codefendant's testimony, the extent and nature thereof, if so, and then grant or deny the motion. Mitchell v. People, 170 Colo. 117, 459 P.2d 284 (1969).

Evidence showing verdict influenced by false testimony sufficient. If newly discovered evidence is of such a character as to make it appear that the verdict was probably influenced by false or mistaken testimony and that upon another trial the result would probably, or might, be different, or even doubtful, then a new trial should be granted. Cheatwood v. People, 164 Colo. 334, 435 P.2d 402 (1967); Baker v. People, 176 Colo. 99, 489 P.2d 196 (1971); DeLuzio v. People, 177 Colo. 389, 494 P.2d 589 (1972).

But cumulative evidence insufficient. Where the newly discovered evidence was cumulative in nature and could, with the exercise of due diligence, have been discovered before trial, and the outcome of the case on retrial would probably be the same, motion for new trial was properly denied. People v. Mays, 186 Colo. 123, 525 P.2d 1165 (1974).

Evidence to discredit expert testimony insufficient. Newly discovered evidence that would merely tend to discredit or impeach expert testimony would not be grounds for a new trial. Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972).

Evidence held not newly discovered as contemplated by this rule. Steward v. People, 179 Colo. 31, 498 P.2d 933 (1972).

Evidence within the defendant's knowledge before trial does not constitute newly discovered evidence as a basis for a new trial. People v. Gallegos, 187 Colo. 6, 528 P.2d 229 (1974).

Where defendant filed a motion for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence, such evidence being that defendant was threatened with death if he testified in his own behalf and such threat was made without the knowledge of his attorney, the motion was properly denied since this was not a case of newly discovered evidence as the evidence presented consisted of facts which obviously were known to the defendant at the time of his trial. People v. Drumright, 189 Colo. 26, 536 P.2d 38 (1975).

Magistrate did not abuse his discretion in denying motion for a new trial where movant failed to file mandatory supporting affidavits with the motion and magistrate denied motion based on this deficiency. People ex rel. J.P.L., 214 P.3d 1072 (Colo. App. 2009).

A defendant who has pled guilty is not entitled to request a new trial under this rule because the defendant has been convicted not after trial but upon his or her own admissions. People v. Ambos, 51 P.3d 1070 (Colo. App. 2002).

D. Based on Other Grounds.

Trial court did not abuse discretion by denying motion for a new trial without a hearing where several hearings were set that had to be continued because of defendant's hostility and unwillingness to cooperate with counsel. People v. Eckert, 919 P.2d 962 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant a hearing on his motion for a new trial based on ineffective assistance of counsel where defendant failed to allege any acts or omissions of defense counsel that deprived him of a defense. In the absence of particularized facts supporting defendant's assertion of ineffective assistance of counsel, it was within the trial court's discretion to deny defendant a hearing on the motion. People v. Esquivel-Alaniz, 985 P.2d 22 (Colo. App. 1999).

Motion alleging ineffective assistance of counsel was properly denied without a hearing. Defendant elected to raise ineffective assistance of counsel claim in a motion under this rule and is bound by the standards of review for that motion under this rule and not those of Crim. P. 35. Denial of a motion under this rule without a hearing is reviewed for an abuse of discretion. People v. Lopez, 2015 COA 45, 399 P.3d 129.

Motion denied where defendant received fair, although not perfect, trial. Although defendant did not receive a perfect trial, he did receive a fair trial, and because the law of Colorado entitles him to nothing more, his motion for a new trial was denied. People v. Scheidt, 182 Colo. 374, 513 P.2d 446 (1973).

Fact that jury deliberates less than 45 minutes does not warrant the granting of a new trial. People v. Elliston, 181 Colo. 118, 508 P.2d 379 (1973).

Evidence which is cumulative or corroborative will normally not support the granting of a motion for new trial. People v. Gallegos, 187 Colo. 6, 528 P.2d 229 (1974).

Discovery of evidence unlikely to change verdict insufficient. A new trial is not required whenever a combing of the prosecutor's files after the trial has disclosed evidence possibly useful to the defense but not likely to have changed the verdict. Sandoval v. People, 180 Colo. 180, 503 P.2d 1020 (1972).

New trial on basis of prosecution asking improper questions denied. People v. Knapp, 180 Colo. 280, 505 P.2d 7 (1973).

In order to justify a new trial based on a tainted jury, the defendant must show evidence of prejudice. People v. Barger, 732 P.2d 1225 (Colo. App. 1986).

Prejudice occurring during jury sequestration. The determination of whether prejudice has occurred during jury sequestration is within the sound discretion of the trial court and only where that discretion has been abused will a new trial be ordered. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974).

Presence of armed uniformed officers in courtroom insufficient. The court did not abuse its discretion in overruling defendant's motion for a new trial where defendant asserted that the presence of two armed uniformed officers in the courtroom constituted prejudicial error. People v. Romero, 182 Colo. 50, 511 P.2d 466 (1973).

Phone call by juror insufficient, absent showing of prejudice. It is not error to fail to grant a new trial because a juror allegedly makes a phone call out of the bailiff's presence, which is not shown to be prejudicial to the defendant. People v. Peery, 180 Colo. 161, 503 P.2d 350 (1972).

Improper communications to jury are presumptively prejudicial, especially if the communications deal with the punishment or sentencing of a defendant. People v. Cornett, 685 P.2d 224 (Colo. App. 1984).

Juror misconduct. Defendant must establish the truth of the allegations on which he bases his motion for a new trial and produce evidence of the alleged juror misconduct. People v. Stephens, 689 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1984).

Allegations on which motion based must be supported by evidence. Mere hearsay allegations in an affidavit will warrant denial of motion. People v. Hernandez, 695 P.2d 308 (Colo. App. 1984).

Failure to establish the truth of hearsay allegations contained in an affidavit will warrant denial of a motion for a new trial based on alleged juror misconduct. People v. Rogers, 706 P.2d 1288 (Colo. App. 1985).

Misconduct of juror in sleeping through defense counsel's closing argument sufficiently prejudiced defendant to warrant a new trial. People v. Evans, 710 P.2d 1167 (Colo. App. 1985).

Untruthful answers on voir dire concerning material matters do not entitle a party to a new trial per se. Under some circumstances, however, a juror's nondisclosure of information during jury selection may be grounds for a new trial. Allen v. Ramada Inn, Inc., 778 P.2d 291 (Colo. App. 1989).

Only undisclosed information material to defendant's theory of the case and which might have affected the outcome of the trial will mandate reversal. People v. Rogers, 706 P.2d 1288 (Colo. App. 1985).

Jurors learning of a co-defendant's guilty plea and capture of another co-defendant through the media insufficient absent a showing of prejudice. People v. Heller, 698 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1984), rev'd on other grounds, 712 P.2d 1023 (Colo. 1986).

Rule 34. Arrest of Judgment

The court shall arrest judgment if the indictment or information, complaint, or summons and complaint does not charge an offense, or if the court was without jurisdiction of the offense charged. The motion in arrest of judgment shall be made within 14 days after verdict or finding of guilt or within such further time as the court may fix during the 14-day period. A motion in arrest of judgment may be set forth alternatively as a part of a motion for a new trial.

Source: Entire rule amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective July 1, 2012.

ANNOTATION

Sufficiency of information may be raised after trial by motion. The sufficiency of an information is a matter of jurisdiction, which may be raised after trial by a motion in arrest of judgment. People v. Garner, 187 Colo. 294, 530 P.2d 496 (1975).

Denial of motion held correct. People v. Ingersoll, 181 Colo. 1, 506 P.2d 364 (1973).

Rule 35. Postconviction Remedies

(a) Correction of Illegal Sentence. The court may correct a sentence that was not authorized by law or that was imposed without jurisdiction at any time and may correct a sentence imposed in an illegal manner within the time provided herein for the reduction of sentence.

(b) Reduction of Sentence. The court may reduce the sentence provided that a motion for reduction of sentence is filed (1) within 126 days (18 weeks) after the sentence is imposed, or (2) within 126 days (18 weeks) after receipt by the court of a remittitur issued upon affirmance of the judgment or sentence or dismissal of the appeal, or (3) within 126 days (18 weeks) after entry of any order or judgment of the appellate court denying review or having the effect of upholding a judgment of conviction or sentence. The court may, after considering the motion and supporting documents, if any, deny the motion without a hearing. The court may reduce a sentence on its own initiative within any of the above periods of time.

(c) Other Remedies.

(1) If, prior to filing for relief pursuant to this paragraph (1), a person has sought appeal of a conviction within the time prescribed therefor and if judgment on that conviction has not then been affirmed upon appeal, that person may file an application for postconviction review upon the ground that there has been a significant change in the law, applied to the applicant's conviction or sentence, allowing in the interests of justice retroactive application of the changed legal standard.

(2) Notwithstanding the fact that no review of a conviction of crime was sought by appeal within the time prescribed therefor, or that a judgment of conviction was affirmed upon appeal, every person convicted of a crime is entitled as a matter of right to make application for postconviction review upon the grounds hereinafter set forth. Such an application for postconviction review must, in good faith, allege one or more of the following grounds to justify a hearing thereon:

(I) That the conviction was obtained or sentence imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States or the constitution or laws of this state;

(II) That the applicant was convicted under a statute that is in violation of the Constitution of the United States or the constitution of this state, or that the conduct for which the applicant was prosecuted is constitutionally protected;

(III) That the court rendering judgment was without jurisdiction over the person of the applicant or the subject matter;

(IV) Repealed.

(V) That there exists evidence of material facts, not theretofore presented and heard, which, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, could not have been known to or learned by the defendant or his attorney prior to the submission of the issues to the court or jury, and which requires vacation of the conviction or sentence in the interest of justice;

(VI) Any grounds otherwise properly the basis for collateral attack upon a criminal judgment; or

(VII) That the sentence imposed has been fully served or that there has been unlawful revocation of parole, probation, or conditional release.

(3) One who is aggrieved and claiming either a right to be released or to have a judgment of conviction set aside on one or more of the grounds enumerated in section (c)(2) of this Rule may file a motion in the court which imposed the sentence to vacate, set aside, or correct the sentence, or to make such order as necessary to correct a violation of his constitutional rights. The following procedures shall apply to the filing and hearing of such motions:

(I) Any motion filed outside of the time limits set forth in § 16-5-402, 6 C.R.S., shall allege facts which, if true, would establish one of the exceptions listed in § 16-5-402 (2), 6 C.R.S.

(II) Any motion filed shall substantially comply with the format of Form 4 and shall substantially contain the information identified in Form 4, Petition for Postconviction Relief Pursuant to Crim. P. 35(c). See Appendix to Chapter 29.

(III) If a motion fails to comply with Subsection (II) the court shall return to the defense a copy of the document filed along with a blank copy of Form 4 and direct that a motion in substantial compliance with the form be filed within 49 days.

(IV) The court shall promptly review all motions that substantially comply with Form 4, Petition for Postconviction Relief Pursuant to Crim. P. 35(c). In conducting this review, the court should consider, among other things, whether the motion is timely pursuant to § 16-5-402, whether it fails to state adequate factual or legal grounds for relief, whether it states legal grounds for relief that are not meritorious, whether it states factual grounds that, even if true, do not entitle the party to relief, and whether it states factual grounds that, if true, entitle the party to relief, but the files and records of the case show to the satisfaction of the court that the factual allegations are untrue. If the motion and the files and record of the case show to the satisfaction of the court that the defendant is not entitled to relief, the court shall enter written findings of fact and conclusions of law in denying the motion. The court shall complete its review within 63 days (9 weeks) of filing or set a new date for completing its review and notify the parties of that date.

(V) If the court does not deny the motion under (IV) above, the court shall cause a complete copy of said motion to be served on the prosecuting attorney if one has not yet been served by counsel for the defendant. If the defendant has requested counsel be appointed in the motion, the court shall cause a complete copy of said motion to be served on the Public Defender. Within 49 days, the Public Defender shall respond as to whether the Public Defender's Office intends to enter on behalf of the defendant pursuant to § 21-1-104(1)(b), 6 C.R.S. In such response, the Public Defender shall identify whether any conflict exists, request any additional time needed to investigate, and add any claims the Public Defender finds to have arguable merit. Upon receipt of the response of the Public Defender, or immediately if no counsel was requested by the defendant or if the defendant already has counsel, the court shall direct the prosecution to respond to the defendant's claims or request additional time to respond within 35 days and the defendant to reply to the prosecution's response within 21 days. The prosecution has no duty to respond until so directed by the court. Thereafter, the court shall grant a prompt hearing on the motion unless, based on the pleadings, the court finds that it is appropriate to enter a ruling containing written findings of fact and conclusions of law. At the hearing, the court shall take whatever evidence is necessary for the disposition of the motion. The court shall enter written or oral findings either granting or denying relief within 63 days (9 weeks) of the conclusion of the hearing or provide the parties a notice of the date by which the ruling will be issued.

If the court finds that defendant is entitled to postconviction relief, the court shall make such orders as may appear appropriate to restore a right which was violated, such as vacating and setting aside the judgment, imposing a new sentence, granting a new trial, or discharging the defendant. The court may stay its order for discharge of the defendant pending appellate court review of the order. If the court orders a new trial, and there are witnesses who have died or otherwise become unavailable, the transcript of testimony of such witnesses at the trial which resulted in the vacated sentence may be used at the new trial.

(VI) The court shall deny any claim that was raised and resolved in a prior appeal or postconviction proceeding on behalf of the same defendant, except the following:

(a) Any claim based on evidence that could not have been discovered previously through the exercise of due diligence;

(b) Any claim based on a new rule of constitutional law that was previously unavailable, if that rule has been applied retroactively by the United States Supreme Court or Colorado appellate courts.

(VII) The court shall deny any claim that could have been presented in an appeal previously brought or postconviction proceeding previously brought except the following:

(a) Any claim based on events that occurred after initiation of the defendant's prior appeal or postconviction proceeding;

(b) Any claim based on evidence that could not have been discovered previously through the exercise of due diligence;

(c) Any claim based on a new rule of constitutional law that was previously unavailable, if that rule should be applied retroactively to cases on collateral review;

(d) Any claim that the sentencing court lacked subject matter jurisdiction;

(e) Any claim where an objective factor, external to the defense and not attributable to the defendant, made raising the claim impracticable.

(VIII) Notwithstanding (VII) above, the court shall not deny a postconviction claim of ineffective assistance of trial counsel on the ground that all or part of the claim could have been raised on direct appeal.

(IX) The order of the trial court granting or denying the motion is a final order reviewable on appeal.

Defendant not entitled to relief where sentence legal and constitutional. Where the sentence is within statutory limits and does not infringe upon the defendant's constitutional rights, he is not entitled to relief under this rule. People v. Mieyr, 176 Colo. 90, 489 P.2d 327 (1971).

Previously, this rule provided in resentencing for credit for time already served. Stafford v. People, 165 Colo. 328, 438 P.2d 696 (1968).

And made filing a motion under this rule a prerequisite to habeas corpus. Ralston v. People, 161 Colo. 523, 423 P.2d 326 (1967).

This rule establishes postconviction remedies and is not an appropriate means to challenge rulings made in extradition proceedings. Hodges v. Barry, 701 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1985).

A habeas corpus petition seeking relief available under section (c) should be treated as a section (c) motion. Leske v. Golder, 124 P.3d 863 (Colo. App. 2005).

Article II, § 16, of the Colorado Constitution does not create a constitutional right to counsel in a hearing under this rule. People v. Duran, 757 P.2d 1096 (Colo. App. 1988).

The district court was not obliged to consider a subsequent motion that plainly treated the same issues as the original motion filed pursuant to section (c). People v. Adams, 905 P.2d 17 (Colo. App. 1995).

A defendant may not use a proceeding under this rule to relitigate issues that were fully and finally resolved in an earlier appeal. People v. Johnson, 638 P.2d 61 (Colo. 1981); People v. Reali, 950 P.2d 645 (Colo. App. 1997).

A handwritten letter that does not assert any claims for defendant's section (c) motion does not toll the time limit in § 16-5-402. People v. Stovall, 2012 COA 7M, 284 P.3d 151.

Defendant needs only "assert", not necessarily "establish", a right to be released before being entitled to relief under section (c). People v. Gallegos, 975 P.2d 1135 (Colo. App. 1998).

Defendant does not have a constitutional right to counsel in a postconviction proceeding under this rule but does have a limited statutory right to counsel. An attorney appointed to assist defendant with a proceeding under this rule who determines that defendant's claims are without merit may inform the court that he or she believes the claims are without merit and request permission to withdraw. If counsel is permitted to withdraw, defendant is not entitled to appointment of new counsel. People v. Starkweather, 159 P.3d 665 (Colo. App. 2006).

A limited statutory right to counsel exists for a hearing pursuant to §§ 21-1-103 and 21-1-104 and the waiver of such right to counsel must be made voluntarily but need not be knowingly and intelligent. People v. Duran, 757 P.2d 1096 (Colo. App. 1988).

No constitutional right to postconviction counsel exists; however, a limited statutory right exists. The statutory right to postconviction counsel is neither automatic nor unlimited. It is limited to cases where a defendant's section (c) petition is not wholly unfounded and has arguable merit, as determined by the court and the state public defender's office. Silva v. People, 156 P.3d 1164 (Colo. 2007).

If postconviction counsel is required according to the limited statutory right, that counsel must provide effective assistance as measured by the two-pronged test of Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S. Ct. 2052, 80 L. Ed. 2d 674 (1984). Silva v. People, 156 P.3d 1164 (Colo. 2007).

Defendant has constitutional right to counsel at resentencing hearing resulting from order granting section (a) motion based on an illegal sentence. Defendant has right to counsel at all critical stages of a criminal proceeding, and a sentencing hearing is a critical stage. There was no doubt that the purpose of the hearing was to resentence the defendant; this was not merely a clerical error. However, the error was harmless because defendant was represented by privately retained counsel at the resentencing hearing. People v. Fritts, 2014 COA 103, __ P.3d __.

"Collateral attack" as used in § 16-5-402 includes relief sought pursuant to this rule. People v. Robinson, 83 P.2d 832 (Colo. App. 1992).

Collateral attack on an adjudication of habitual criminality includes relief sought under this rule. People v. Hampton, 876 P.2d 1236 (Colo. 1994).

Defendant is not precluded from filing both a timely section (b) motion and a section (c) motion after conclusion of the direct appeal. People v. Metcalf, 979 P.2d 581 (Colo. App. 1999).

The limitation period cannot commence until there is a right to pursue a collateral attack. People v. Manzanares, 85 P.3d 604 (Colo. App. 2003).

Petitioner not entitled to appointed counsel when asserted claim for relief is wholly unfounded. Brinklow v. Riveland, 773 P.2d 517 (Colo. 1989); People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

Plain error occurs if waiver of statutory right to counsel in postconviction proceeding is involuntary. People v. Duran, 757 P.2d 1096 (Colo. App. 1988).

Without alleging specific facts in a section (c) motion that might appear in record to substantiate general allegations, defendant not entitled to have trial record provided to him at correctional facility. People v. Manners, 878 P.2d 71 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court has no authority to retain jurisdiction over a defendant after sentencing for the reason that the law may be changed by a subsequent court decision even though the court, at the time of sentencing, is aware of a case appealed to the state supreme court which may change the interpretation of statute regarding credit against the sentence for presentence confinement. People v. Mortensen, 856 P.2d 45 (Colo. App. 1993).

Motions under this rule are subject to statutory limitations in § 16-5-402. People v. Robinson, 833 P.2d 832 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Wiedemer, 852 P.2d 424 (Colo. 1993); People v. Wiedemer, 852 P.2d 449 (Colo. 1993); People v. Rodriguez, 914 P.2d 230 (Colo. 1996); People v. Ambos, 51 P.3d 1070 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

The time limits in § 16-5-402 (1) are specifically categorized by level of offense, so, in a case in which defendant is convicted of a class 1 felony and other felonies, the time limit for the class 1 felony does not control the time limit for all of the convictions that are not class 1 felonies. Defendant's challenges to the non-class 1 felonies in a section (c) motion were subject to the three-year statute of limitations. People v. Stovall, 2012 COA 7M, 284 P.3d 151.

Statutory limitations in § 16-5-402 do not usurp the supreme court's rulemaking authority. While the statute has an incidental effect on judicial procedure, it is primarily an expression of public policy, and therefore it prevails over terms of section (c)(3) of this rule stating that motion may be filed ''at any time''. People v. Robinson, 833 P.2d 832 (Colo. App. 1992).

Justifiable excuse or excusable neglect would be established if the public defender's conflict of interest was the reason for not filing a motion for post-conviction relief on behalf of defendant. People v. Chang, 179 P.3d 240 (Colo. App. 2007).

Justifiable excuse or excusable neglect would be established if the public defender's failure to file a motion for post-conviction relief on behalf of defendant was the result of ineffective counsel. People v. Chang, 179 P.3d 240 (Colo. App. 2007).

No justifiable excuse or excusable neglect where defendant waited to file his section (c) motion until he could accumulate an "unassailable mass" of research studies. The studies cited by defendant, unapplied academic theories, did not constitute evidence, let alone new evidence, for purposes of his motion. People v. Bonan, 2014 COA 156, 357 P.3d 231.

In a hearing pursuant to this rule, the burden rests on the defendant to show that (1) counsel's performance was deficient, and (2) counsel's deficient performance prejudiced the defense of the defendant. People v. Duran, 757 P.2d 1096 (Colo. App. 1988); People v. Valdez, 789 P.2d 406 (Colo. 1990).

Evidentiary hearing was required on defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel, although not every such motion requires an evidentiary hearing. People v. Thomas, 867 P.2d 880 (Colo. 1994).

Defendant could not be deprived of opportunity to prove counsel's choices lacked sound strategic motive unless the existing record clearly established otherwise or those choices could not have been prejudicial in any event. Ardolino v. People, 69 P.3d 73 (Colo. App. 2003).

Defendant entitled to evidentiary hearing as long as the allegations of his motion, in light of the existing record, were not clearly insufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome of the trial by demonstrating a reasonable probability that but for counsel's challenged conduct, the defendant would not have been convicted. Ardolino v. People, 69 P.3d 73 (Colo. App. 2003).

A second section (c) motion cannot be used procedurally to raise mere ineffective assistance of counsel in a prior section (c) proceeding. The ineffectiveness of appointed postconviction counsel does not constitute a statutory violation, because a defendant has no statutory right to such counsel. People v. Silva, 131 P.3d 1082 (Colo. App. 2005).

Rule does not provide a method for reviewing the punishment assessed in a punitive contempt proceeding. In order to seek relief under this rule, a person must have been convicted of a crime. Conduct that results in punitive sanctions being imposed for contempt is not a common law or statutory crime. Benninghoven v. Dees, 849 P.2d 906 (Colo. App. 1992).

Section (c)(3) requires a hearing and the entry of findings of fact and conclusions of law where defendant who was mistakenly released from custody before serving second sentence sought credit for time spent at liberty. People v. Stark, 902 P.2d 928 (Colo. App. 1995).

Failure to review motion within 60 days as required by section (c)(3)(IV) does not entitle defendant to relief nor deprive the court of subject matter jurisdiction. The time limit is properly categorized as directory rather than jurisdictional. People v. Osorio, 170 P.3d 796 (Colo. App. 2007).

Requirement that a copy of a motion be served on public defender is triggered when the court finds it necessary to consider matters outside of the motion, files, and record of the case. People v. Davis, 2012 COA 14, 272 P.3d 1167.

The district court is required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law in every determination of a motion made pursuant to section (c)(3). People v. Breaman, 939 P.2d 1348 (Colo. 1997).

A defendant cannot bring an illegal sentence claim under section (a) if the sentence is consistent with the statutory scheme but imposed in an unconstitutional manner. Instead, the defendant must bring the claim under section (c)(2)(I). People v. Wenzinger, 155 P.3d 415 (Colo. App. 2006).

Prosecution may file a section (a) motion to correct illegal sentence. People v. White, 179 P.3d 58 (Colo. App. 2007).

The court simply stating, in denying a motion made pursuant to section (c)(3), that it "accepted appointed counsel's status report" was contrary to the requirement that the court make its own finding of facts and conclusions of law. People v. Breaman, 939 P.2d 1348 (Colo. 1997).

Motion for post-conviction relief was timely when filed less than three years after the final decision on defendant's appeal. People v. Rivera, 964 P.2d 561 (Colo. App. 1998).

For purposes of the time limit within which a section (c) motion must be filed, a defendant's conviction is final when his or her appeal rights have been exhausted. More specifically, it is final when the supreme court denies defendant's petition for a writ of certiorari and the mandate issues. People v. Stanley, 169 P.3d 258 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court did not err in denying a section (c) motion as untimely where defendant did not raise a direct appeal or collateral attack of his Virginia conviction until almost 14 years after his conviction had entered. People v. Landis, 9 P.3d 1165 (Colo. App. 2000).

A defendant cannot use this rule to relitigate matters fully and finally resolved in an earlier appeal. Moreover an argument will be precluded if its review is nothing more than a second appeal on the same issues on some recently contrived constitutional theory. People v. Rodriguez, 914 P.2d 230 (Colo. 1996); People v. Martinez, 36 P.3d 201 (Colo. App. 2001); Leske v. Golder, 124 P.3d 863 (Colo. App. 2005).

A properly filed section (b) motion tolls the one-year limitation period in § 2244(d)(1) of the federal Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996. Robinson v. Golder, 443 F.3d 718 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 867, 127 S. Ct. 166, 166 L. Ed. 2d 118 (2006).

Pro se defendant's failure to file a section (c) motion on form 4 does not deprive the trial court of subject matter jurisdiction. Section (c)(3)(II) requires only that pro se motions substantially comply with form 4. People v. Stanley, 169 P.3d 258 (Colo. App. 2007).

Appeal permitted of subsequent motion under section (a) raising same issues as prior motion. Although the state has an important interest in the finality of criminal convictions, section (a) does not contain the limiting language in section (c)(3)(IV) that bars relief for claims raised and resolved in prior postconviction proceedings. People v. Jenkins, 2013 COA 76, 305 P.3d 420.

Criminal defendant not barred by section (c)(3)(VII) from pursuing a statute of limitations claim in the postconviction proceeding because a claimed statute of limitations violation in a criminal case implicates the court's subject matter jurisdiction. People v. Butler, 2017 COA 117, 431 P.3d 643.

Section (a) does not entitle a defendant to resentencing on counts with legal sentences when the court is resentencing on a count with an illegal sentence. Hunsaker v. People, 2015 CO 46, 351 P.3d 388.

But, if a sentence is subject to correction on one count, section (b) authorizes the court to reconsider and reduce the legal sentences on the other counts after it has corrected the entire sentence. Hunsaker v. People, 2015 CO 46, 351 P.3d 388.

Applied in Sides v. Tinsley, 333 F.2d 1002 (10th Cir. 1964); Sepulveda v. Colo., 335 F.2d 581 (10th Cir. 1964); Watson v. Patterson, 358 F.2d 297 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 876, 87 S. II. CORRECTION OF ILLEGAL SENTENCE.

When an original sentence is illegal, resentencing does not constitute double jeopardy even if the subsequent sentence is longer than the original, and even though the defendant has begun serving the original sentence. People v. District Court, 673 P.2d 991 (Colo. 1983).

Court may correct an error in sentencing, and double jeopardy is not implicated when trial court corrects a sentencing error and imposes a longer sentence. People v. White, 179 P.3d 58 (Colo. App. 2007).

Where sentence is illegal, sentencing court may correct it at any time. People v. Bradley, 169 Colo. 262, 455 P.2d 199 (1969); Mulkey v. Sullivan, 753 P.2d 1226 (Colo. 1988); Downing v. People, 895 P.2d 1046 (Colo. 1995).

The imposition of an illegal sentence may be reviewed and corrected at any time. People v. Favors, 42 Colo. App. 263, 600 P.2d 78 (1979).

When an illegal sentence is corrected pursuant to section (a), it renews the three-year deadline for collaterally attacking the original judgment of conviction pursuant to section (c). Leyva v. People, 184 P.3d 48 (Colo. 2008).

When original judgment of conviction contains an illegal sentence on one count, the entire sentence is illegal. Leyva v. People, 184 P.3d 48 (Colo. 2008); People v. Bassford, 2014 COA 15, 343 P.3d 1003.

The sentence is therefore subject to correction and the judgment of conviction is subject to amendment, making the judgment of conviction not final or fully valid. Leyva v. People, 184 P.3d 48 (Colo. 2008).

Court has right and duty to set aside void sentence at any time. People v. Emig, 177 Colo. 174, 493 P.2d 368 (1972).

So long as court retains jurisdiction. Where a trial court has jurisdiction of a person of the defendant and of the subject matter, and has imposed a sentence in error, the court retains jurisdiction to correct the sentence. Conversely, if the original sentence is a valid one, the trial court loses jurisdiction to change the sentence. Smith v. Johns, 187 Colo. 388, 532 P.2d 49 (1975).

And where statutory provision changes erroneous sentence automatically, court loses jurisdiction. There is no irreconcilable inconsistency between § 16-11-303 which deals with a person wrongfully sentenced to a definite term in the state reformatory, and section (a) of this rule. Section 16-11-303, changes the erroneous sentence automatically and a court, in altering the original sentence, acts in excess of jurisdiction. Smith v. Johns, 187 Colo. 388, 532 P.2d 49 (1975).

The term "illegal sentence" no longer appears in section (a). That sentence was replaced with ''a sentence that was not authorized by law''. Under the current version of section (a), the only circumstance in which a sentence is ''not authorized by law'' is when it is inconsistent with the statutory scheme outlined by the legislature. People v. Wenzinger, 155 P.3d 415 (Colo. App. 2006); People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

Illegal sentence is a sentence not in full compliance with sentencing statutes. Delgado v. People, 105 P.3d 634 (Colo. 2005); People v. White, 179 P.3d 58 (Colo. App. 2007).

The sentence included an illegal parole term, therefore, it was an illegal sentence in its entirety. The imposition of an illegal sentence does not commence the 120-day deadline for filing a section (b) motion; only legal sentences trigger the rule's timeliness requirement. Delgado v. People, 105 P.3d 634 (Colo. 2005).

Because an illegal sentence represents a type of jurisdictional defect, the trial court retains the authority to correct its own error. The 120-day time limit applies only if the court is asked to ''correct a sentence imposed in an illegal manner''. If the sentence itself is illegal, the court may act at any time. People v. White, 179 P.3d 58 (Colo. App. 2007).

Defendant's claim that he was not given complete range of testing required by statute prior to sentencing is, in essence, a claim that the sentence was imposed in an illegal manner under section (a), and should have been asserted within 120 days of sentencing. People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

Jurisdiction of appellate court. Where the district attorney claims that the trial court improperly considered the presumptive sentencing law and the defendant's conduct in prison as factors in evaluating a motion under section (b) for reduction of sentence, and that the trial court gave no consideration to the aggravated nature of the crimes for which the defendant was convicted, these claims are questions of law implicating the propriety of the proceeding itself and are sufficient to invoke appellate jurisdiction. People v. Bridges, 662 P.2d 161 (Colo. 1983).

Matter of illegal sentence need not be raised on appeal. There is no requirement contained in this rule that the matter of an illegal sentence must be raised on appeal from the conviction or be thereafter waived. People v. Bradley, 169 Colo. 262, 455 P.2d 199 (1969).

Successive postconviction motions under section (a) subject to law of the case doctrine. Under law of the case doctrine, where appropriate, a court may overlook the doctrine and grant relief where manifest injustice would result. People v. Tolbert, 216 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2007).

Sentence to mandatory parole for attempted sexual assault committed between July 1, 1996 and July 1, 2002 is illegal. People v. Tolbert, 216 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2007).

Action of judge in changing sentence without notice and hearing improper. The action of the sentencing judge in changing an original sentence without notice to the defendant and without opportunity for a hearing is improper, for while this rule permits a judge to correct a sentence of his own motion, where proper grounds exist, it does not permit him to do so without notice to the prisoner and an opportunity afforded for a hearing. Guerin v. Fullerton, 154 Colo. 142, 389 P.2d 84 (1964).

Inmate had a protected liberty interest in a suspended sentence where his original sentence mandated a 10-year suspension when and if defendant could show successful completion of sex offender treatment. Defendant was entitled to due process protections before the trial court could modify the sentence. The court's order vacating the 10-year sentence reduction, sua sponte, denied defendant due process of law. The court erred in denying defendant's section (a) motion to correct the illegal sentence. People v. Sisson, 179 P.3d 193 (Colo. App. 2007).

Upon defendant commencing sentence, judge cannot change sentence upon parole board's recommendation. The sentencing judge does not have the authority on the recommendation of the parole board to change a sentence he imposed upon a defendant after he commences serving his sentence, for such authority is present only when the sentence is erroneous or void under section (a), and not where the original sentence imposed is legal. Guerin v. Fullerton, 154 Colo. 142, 389 P.2d 84 (1964).

And trial court cannot alter or amend commuted sentence imposed by the governor, because he has the exclusive power to grant reprieves, commutations, and pardons after conviction under § 7 of art. IV, Colo. Const. People ex rel. Dunbar v. District Court, 180 Colo. 107, 502 P.2d 420 (1972).

Where several sentences concurrent, argument that some of sentences invalid falls. Where the defendant assumes that his sentences for several crimes are to run consecutively, but the governing judgments made the serving of all the sentences concurrent, the argument that some, but not all, sentences are invalid falls. Santistevan v. People, 177 Colo. 329, 494 P.2d 75 (1972).

Sentence illegal where defendant not afforded benefit of amendatory legislation. A sentence imposed by the trial court which does not afford the defendant the benefit of amendatory legislation is not a valid and legal sentence. As such, it was subject to correction by the trial court at any time. People v. Jenkins, 40 Colo. App. 140, 575 P.2d 13 (1977).

But defendant convicted of theft by receiving does not receive ameliorative benefit when retroactive application of amendatory legislation is clearly not intended by its own terms. Legislation that amended theft by receipt statute to provide that amendment shall apply to acts committed on or after July 1, 1985 makes it clear that amendment is to be applied prospectively only. People v. McCoy, 764 P.2d 1171 (Colo. 1988).

Court may correct sentence to conform to "nolo contendere" plea. Error is harmless where after a court corrects a sentence it conforms to the advisement given a defendant pursuant to a plea of "nolo contendere". People v. Baca, 179 Colo. 156, 499 P.2d 317 (1972).

Sentence in error because extraordinary aggravating circumstances not found. Judge erred in sentencing a 19-year-old beyond the presumptive range because extraordinary aggravating circumstances justifying the sentence were not found even though the defendant was accused of committing five felonies in a nine-month period, including an arrest while on probation. People v. Jenkins, 674 P.2d 981 (Colo. App. 1983), rev'd on other grounds, 687 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1984).

An unlawful sentence may be corrected by a sentencing court at any time. People v. Reynolds, 907 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court may correct the mittimus where the trial court neglected to specify that its sentence included a mandatory period of parole. People v. Mayes, 981 P.2d 1106 (Colo. App. 1999).

Post-conviction motions that challenge the manner in which a plea is taken, such as whether the person was properly advised about the plea, are not challenges to the legality of the sentence and are properly brought pursuant to section (c), not section (a). People v. Green, 36 P.3d 125 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Salinas, 55 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2002).

Post-conviction motion challenging revocation of probation without a determination of ability to pay restitution should be brought under section (c), not section (a). People v. Shepard, 151 P.3d 580 (Colo. App. 2006).

There is no constitutional right to credit of presentence jail time against sentence imposed. People v. Coy, 181 Colo. 393, 509 P.2d 1239 (1973).

There is no constitutional right to credit for time spent in jail before sentence. People v. Nelson, 182 Colo. 1, 510 P.2d 441 (1973).

But credit for presentence jail time presumed. Wherever it is possible, as a matter of mechanical calculation, that credit could have been given for presentence jail time, it will be conclusively presumed that it was given. This means that where the actual sentence imposed plus the time spent in jail prior to sentence do not exceed the maximum sentence which could be imposed, it will be conclusively presumed that the sentencing court gave the defendant credit for the presentence time spent in confinement. Maciel v. People, 172 Colo. 8, 469 P.2d 135 (1970).

Where sentencing judge states only that he is taking time spent in jail prior to sentencing into consideration and thereafter gives the maximum, it must be presumed that he acted properly; that is, that he took the time spent into consideration and determined, as he had the right to do, not to grant the credit. People v. Nelson, 182 Colo. 1, 510 P.2d 441 (1973).

And such rule outweighs any possible unfairness. The problems and expenditure of resources which would be caused by allowing each prisoner to attempt to demonstrate that in his particular case credit for presentencing confinement was not given outweighs any possible unfairness. Maciel v. People, 172 Colo. 8, 469 P.2d 135 (1970).

Defendants found not entitled to credit for presentence jail time. People v. Puls, 176 Colo. 71, 489 P.2d 323 (1971).

Use of polygraph results precluded at hearing to correct sentence. A jury determination of a defendant's guilt, which is upheld on appeal, precludes the use of the results of a polygraph examination on the issue of the defendant's guilt at a hearing to correct a sentence. People v. Reynolds, 638 P.2d 43 (Colo. 1981).

Department of corrections may not intervene in a criminal case in order to file a motion to correct an illegal sentence. People v. Ham, 734 P.2d 623 (Colo. 1987).

Appellate review precluded by the failure of the people to object at the sentencing hearing to the imposition of a sentence within the presumptive range when the defendant was convicted of possession of contraband while in a correctional institution, or to request the trial court, pursuant to this rule, to correct the sentence. People v. Gallegos, 764 P.2d 76 (Colo. 1988).

If court determines sentence must be vacated, if original sentence was based at least in some important part upon the testimony of witnesses at original sentencing hearing, and if original sentencing judge unavailable, there must be a new evidentiary hearing granted before a new sentence can be imposed. People v. Chetelat, 833 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 1991).

Rule does not provide a method for reviewing the punishment assessed in a punitive contempt proceeding. In order to seek relief under this rule, a person must have been convicted of a crime. Conduct that results in punitive sanctions being imposed for contempt is not a common law or statutory crime. Benninghoven v. Dees, 849 P.2d 906 (Colo. App. 1992).

Claim that trial court's amended judgment and mittimus unlawfully increased defendant's sentence should have been brought as a motion to correct an illegal sentence. Graham v. Cooper, 874 P.2d 390 (Colo. 1994) (decided prior to 2004 amendment).

A claim that the trial court aggravated a sentence in violation of Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 120 S. Ct. 2348, 147 L. Ed. 2d 435 (2000), and Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 124 S. Ct. 2531, 159 L. Ed. 2d 403(2004), is cognizable under section (c) and not section (a). People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

Court order that changed sentence by eliminating suspended portion of it constituted an imposition of a sentence within the meaning of section (a) of this rule. Defendant was entitled, therefore, to proceed under section (a) to obtain relief. People v. Sisson, 179 P.3d 193 (Colo. App. 2007).

Where defendant's challenge alleges that department of corrections (DOC) sentenced him under the wrong discretionary parole statute, section (a) does not give the trial court the authority to decide the issues raised in the defendant's motion because defendant's challenge was not to his sentence, but rather to an act of the DOC. People v. Huerta, 87 P.3d 266 (Colo. App. 2004).

Because section (b) provides a mechanism for the reduction of a sentence rather than for the correction of an illegal sentence, the court erred in attempting to correct an illegal sentence by modifying rather than reducing it under section (b). People v. Bassford, 2014 COA 15, 343 P.3d 1003.

The court properly corrected illegal sentence, pursuant to a motion under section (c), but preserved provisions of valid and legal plea agreement. People v. Antonio-Antimo, 29 P.3d 298 (Colo. 2000).

By entering into a plea agreement, defendant waives his or her Apprendi right to have any fact (the crime of violence charge) that increases the penalty beyond the prescribed maximum submitted to a jury and proved beyond a reasonable doubt. The plea agreement stated defendant waived his right to a jury trial and the right to have every element proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Thus, by pleading guilty the defendant waived the right to a factual basis for the charge and in effect admitted beyond a reasonable doubt the elements of the offense. People v. Munkus, 60 P.3d 767 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Andracki, 68 P.3d 526 (Colo. App. 2002).

In the case of the defendant's plea agreement, the term "illegal sentence" should be given its plain and ordinary meaning. Defendant's plea agreement did not use that term in the sense that it is used in this rule. In interpreting a plea agreement, the court focuses on the meaning a reasonable person would have attached to the agreement at the time the agreement was entered into. A reasonable person would understand the term ''illegal sentence'' as used in defendant's plea agreement to mean a sentence that is unlawful in some way. Defendant did not violate her plea agreement because the agreement did not waive her right to raise a challenge under Blakely to her aggravated sentence on appeal. Because defendant did not violate her plea agreement, the prosecution cannot withdraw from it. People v. Barton, 174 P.3d 786 (Colo. 2008).

Failure to consider and fix amount of restitution at sentencing results in illegal sentence. People v. Dunlap, 222 P.3d 364 (Colo. App. 2009).

Finality of judgment of conviction not affected by illegal sentence due to failure to consider and fix restitution at time of sentencing in circumstances where defendant has already directly appealed conviction and lost and, likewise, has failed to obtain postconviction relief from trial court and review by appellate court. Defendant may neither appeal anew from original conviction or the denial of a postconviction motion, nor may defendant seek application of cases announced after the conclusion of the direct appeal. People v. Dunlap, 222 P.3d 364 (Colo. App. 2009).

Exclusion of DNA evidence not required. Where DNA evidence was obtained from defendant as a condition of probation as part of a plea bargain that resulted in an illegal sentence, the case does not implicate the judicially created exclusionary rule: (1) Constitutional error did not involve the police; and (2) the conduct failed the ''assessment of flagrancy'' test in that the conduct was not sufficiently deliberate that exclusion could meaningfully deter it. People v. Glasser, 293 P.3d 68 (Colo. App. 2011).

Defendant's claim that the trial court erred in determining the amount of restitution is timed barred. Defendant is neither challenging the statutory basis for the award of restitution nor the court's subject matter jurisdiction to enter the order, but the manner in which the restitution hearing was conducted. A claim that the sentence was imposed in an illegal manner must be brought within 120 days. People v. Bowerman, 258 P.3d 314 (Colo. App. 2010).

Defendant's motion was not time barred because the order to correct the illegal sentence renewed the three-year deadline to file a collateral attack pursuant to section (c). People v. Baker, 2017 COA 102, __ P.3d __.

Guilty verdicts for both attempted after deliberation first degree murder and attempted extreme indifference first degree murder did not require inconsistent findings of fact; therefore, the sentences were not illegal. The information alleged different victims for the different charges, so it is not inconsistent to conclude that defendant had the specific intent to take the life of the specific targets and also showed an extreme indifference to life in general to the other persons. People v. Stovall, 2012 COA 7M, 284 P.3d 151.

Defendant has constitutional right to counsel at resentencing hearing resulting from order granting section (a) motion based on an illegal sentence. Defendant has right to counsel at all critical stages of a criminal proceeding, and a sentencing hearing is a critical stage. There was no doubt that the purpose of the hearing was to resentence the defendant; this was not merely a clerical error. However, the error was harmless because defendant was represented by privately retained counsel at the resentencing hearing. People v. Fritts, 2014 COA 103, 411 P.3d 842.

III. REDUCTION OF SENTENCE.

A. In General.

Rule constitutional. Section (b) is a valid procedural rule promulgated pursuant to the rule-making power of the supreme court under § 21 of art. VI, Colo. Const., and it does not encroach upon the governor's exclusive power of commutation under § 7 of art. IV, Colo. Const. People v. Smith, 189 Colo. 50, 536 P.2d 820 (1975).

As section (b), which suspends the finality of the conviction for a period of 120 days from the time sentence is imposed, or for 120 days after final disposition on appeal, to allow the filing of a motion for a reduction of sentence in the trial court, suspends the concept of finality of a criminal judgment of conviction, the rule does not offend the separation of powers doctrine under art. III, Colo. Const., nor the executive power of commutation. The court retains jurisdiction during the 120-day period for the filing of a motion for reduction of sentence. People v. Smith, 189 Colo. 50, 536 P.2d 820 (1975).

Rule allows court to reconsider, in interests of justice, the sentence previously imposed, in the light of all relevant and material factors in the particular case which may or may not have been initially considered by the court and, in its sound discretion, to resentence the defendant to a lesser term within the statutory limits. People v. Smith, 189 Colo. 50, 536 P.2d 820 (1975); People v. Malacara, 199 Colo. 243, 606 P.2d 1300 (1980).

This rule provides the trial court an opportunity to reconsider, in the interest of justice, a sentence previously imposed. Spann v. People, 193 Colo. 53, 561 P.2d 1268 (1977).

The purpose of section (b) is to permit the trial court to reexamine the propriety of a sentence previously imposed. People v. Lyons, 44 Colo. App. 126, 618 P.2d 673 (1980).

But section (b) cannot expand the trial court's authority in resentencing beyond that which it had initially. Death penalty statute, as it existed in 1993, mandated that a death sentence shall be binding unless the court, pursuant to the statute, determines the verdict was clearly erroneous. The trial court's determination that the sentence was not clearly erroneous, therefore, precludes granting postconviction relief under section (b) of this rule. People v. Dunlap, 36 P.3d 778 (Colo. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1095, 122 S. Ct. 884, 151 L. Ed. 2d 722 (2002).

But failure to appeal initial sentence forecloses later challenge. A defendant who fails to appeal an initial sentence is foreclosed from challenging that sentence later by means of motion under section (b). People v. Boykin, 631 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1981) (but see Mikkleson v. People, 199 Colo. 319, 618 P.2d 1101 (1980)); Swainson v. People, 712 P.2d 479 (Colo. 1986).

More than one sentence reduction is not permitted by former § 16-11-309 when read in conjunction with this rule. Although multiple sentence reductions are permitted under this rule if the sentence is reduced to a term within statutory limits, more than one sentence reduction under former § 16-11-309 would be outside the statutory limits. People v. Belgard, 58 P.3d 1077 (Colo. App. 2002).

Jurisdiction to modify sentence retained only until conviction final. A trial court retains jurisdiction to take a ''second look'' at a sentence previously imposed only before the judgment of conviction underlying the sentence has become final. People v. Lyons, 44 Colo. App. 126, 618 P.2d 673 (1980); Swainson v. People, 712 P.2d 479 (Colo. 1986).

If an illegal sentence is imposed, the time for filing a Crim. P. 35(b) motion does not start to run. The time period is triggered only by the imposition of a legal sentence. People v. Dean, 894 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1994).

And conviction final 120 days after sentence imposed or appellate process concluded. For purposes of the rule's sentence reduction provisions, a conviction is final 120 days after the imposition of sentence when that conviction is not appealed, and 120 days after the conclusion of the appellate process if the conviction or sentence is directly appealed. People v. Lyons, 44 Colo. App. 126, 618 P.2d 673 (1980); Swainson v. People, 712 P.2d 479 (Colo. 1986).

Where the defendant does not appeal his conviction but, some years later, challenges his conviction by a motion under section (c), which motion is denied by the trial court, the court of appeals' affirmance of the trial court's denial is not a ''judgment'' of that court ''having the effect of upholding a judgment of conviction'' and, thus, does not trigger a new 120-day period for filing a section (b) motion for reduction of sentence. People v. Akins, 662 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1983).

Timely filing of a section (b) motion suspends finality of sentence while the court reconsiders the original sentence. There is no support for the view that a sentence is final once a mandate is received. Ghrist v. People, 897 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1995).

Framework for review of motions under section (b). First, the reviewing court must determine the timeliness of the motion, considering both when it is filed and when it is heard. The defendant's motivation for any delay attributable to the defendant is relevant to this determination, but delays that result from the court's inability to hear the matter should not be assessed against the defendant. Second, the court may consider all evidence presented at the hearing. Ghrist v. People, 897 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1995).

Section (b) of this rule does not limit the evidence the trial court may consider. Ghrist v. People, 897 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1995).

Decision to reduce a sentence is entrusted to the sound discretion of the trial court. Ghrist v. People, 897 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1995).

Defendant required to file motion for reduction of sentence within 120 days after the date of successful completion of regimented inmate training program. This rule provides a 120-day time limitation for the filing of a motion for reduction of sentence, and § 17-27.7-104 requires that a motion to reduce sentence must be brought pursuant to section (b). People v. Campbell, 75 P.3d 1151 (Colo. App. 2003).

Jurisdiction retained after 120 days. If the defendant was unconstitutionally deprived of the opportunity to file his motion because of ineffective assistance of counsel, the trial court would have jurisdiction 120 days after the sentence is imposed and could extend the time limit for filing. Swainson v. People, 712 P.2d 479 (Colo. 1986).

Therefore, it was error for the district court to dismiss defendant's motion without making any factual findings, on his claim of ineffective assistance of counsel. Swainson v. People, 712 P.2d 479 (Colo. 1986).

One hundred twenty days to file a motion is not extended by Crim. P. 45 based upon family considerations or lack of knowledge of the law. The only excusable neglect recognized for extending the time to file a rule 35 motion is ineffective assistance of counsel. People v. Delgado, 83 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 105 P.3d 634 (Colo. 2005).

Defendant should not be penalized for pursuing his right of appeal, or for any delay in deciding that matter. Ghrist v. People, 897 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1995).

But change in parole board policy not grounds for modification of defendant's sentence under section (c)(2)(v), and section (b) does not provide basis for review of a sentence if motion filed beyond 120-day time period required by rule. People v. Sorenson, 824 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1991).

When defendant has filed a motion for reduction of sentence within 120 days after the imposition of sentence, this rule vests the court with jurisdiction to rule on the motion for a reasonable period of time after the expiration of the 120-day filing period. If the court fails to rule within a reasonable period of time, and the defendant fails to take reasonable efforts to secure an expeditious ruling on the motion, the motion may be deemed abandoned. People v. Fuqua, 764 P.2d 56 (Colo. 1988); People v. Cagle, 807 P.2d 1233 (Colo. App. 1991); Herr v. People, 198 P.3d 108 (Colo. 2008).

Delay for the purpose of establishing a record of good behavior in the department of corrections is impermissible. A section (b) motion is not a license to wait and reevaluate the sentencing decision in the light of subsequent developments. People v. Piotrowski, 855 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1992); Ghrist v. People, 897 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1995).

Burden of going forward with motion pursuant to section (b) is on the defendant and a delay of 532 days is unreasonable and indicates that defendant abandoned the motion. Mamula v. People, 847 P.2d 1135 (Colo. 1993).

Appeal of final judgment terminates trial court jurisdiction and does not restore it until the events described in sections (b)(2) and (b)(3) take place. People v. District Court, 638 P.2d 65 (Colo. 1981).

Executive branch authorized to modify sentence after conviction final. The executive branch of government, not the judiciary, has the sole authority to modify a legally imposed criminal sentence after the conviction upon which it is based has become final. People v. Lyons, 44 Colo. App. 126, 618 P.2d 673 (1980).

Power to alter sentence at time of revocation of probation is explicitly recognized in § 16-11-206 (5), Crim. P. 32(f)(5), and section (b) of this rule. People v. Jenkins, 40 Colo. App. 140, 575 P.2d 13 (1977) (decided prior to 1979 amendment of this rule).

Court obligated to exercise discretion in deciding whether to modify previously imposed sentence. The court has an affirmative obligation to exercise judicial discretion in deciding whether to modify the sentence previously imposed and to base the decision on relevant evidence, not personal whim. Spann v. People, 193 Colo. 53, 561 P.2d 1268 (1977); People v. Culbertson, 198 Colo. 153, 596 P.2d 1200 (1979); People v. Dunlap, 36 P.3d 778 (Colo. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1095, 122 S. Ct. 884, 151 L. Ed. 2d 722 (2002).

Implicit in a proceeding pursuant to section (b) is the duty of the trial court to use its discretion when considering the defendant's motion. Mikkleson v. People, 199 Colo. 319, 618 P.2d 1101 (1980); People v. Ellis, 873 P.2d 22 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where evidence in support of defendant's section (b) motion was nearly identical to that presented at the sentencing hearing, trial court effectively considered all relevant evidence, and the findings it made at the sentencing hearing were sufficient to support its later exercise of discretion in denying defendant's motion. People v. Busch, 835 P.2d 582 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Dunlap, 36 P.3d 778 (Colo. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1095, 122 S. Ct. 884, 151 L. Ed. 2d 722 (2002).

And is trial court's duty to consider all relevant and material factors, including new evidence, as well as facts known at the time the original sentence was pronounced. Spann v. People, 193 Colo. 53, 561 P.2d 1268 (1977); People v. Culbertson, 198 Colo. 153, 596 P.2d 1200 (1979); People v. Ellis, 873 P.2d 22 (Colo. App. 1993).

The trial court in proceedings pursuant to section (b) must consider all relevant and material factors which may affect the decision on whether to reduce the original sentence. Mikkleson v. People, 199 Colo. 319, 618 P.2d 1101 (1980).

But judicial discretion is not personal discretion. Judicial discretion cannot be distorted to camouflage or insulate from appellate review a decision based on the judge's personal caprice, hostility, or prejudice. Spann v. People, 193 Colo. 53, 561 P.2d 1268 (1977).

Personal whim, hostility, or prejudice must not be basis for trial court's decision. People v. Culbertson, 198 Colo. 153, 596 P.2d 1200 (1979).

Court considering a motion for reduction of sentence filed pursuant to § 17-27.7-104 must give complete consideration to all pertinent information provided by the offender, the offender's attorney, and the district attorney. People v. Smith, 971 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1999).

Trial court properly exercised judicial discretion under this section and complied with requirements of § 17-27.7-104 where, after careful review of case file, pre-sentence report, recommendation from regimented training program, and documents submitted by defendant, defendant's attorney, and prosecution, the court concluded that crime of vehicular assault was serious enough to warrant denial of motion for sentence reduction after completion of regimented inmate training program under § 17-27.7-103. People v. Ellis, 873 P.2d 22 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court gave complete consideration to defendant's section (b) motion even though the record did not contain any information provided by defendant, his attorney, or the district attorney after defendant's acceptance into the regimented inmate training program. The court should not be precluded from ruling on defendant's motion simply because none of those entitled to provide additional information to the court chose to do so. People v. Morales-Uresti, 934 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1996).

Defendant's argument that his denial for sentence reduction was based on race was without merit. Although defendant alleged that because he was African-American, he had been treated more harshly than a Caucasian inmate whose sentence had been modified, the two offenders were convicted of different offenses. People v. Ellis, 873 P.2d 22 (Colo. App. 1993).

District attorney may withdraw from plea agreement when judge modifies sentence imposed. If a trial judge in the exercise of his discretion under this rule modifies or reduces a sentence imposed pursuant to a plea agreement, the district attorney must be permitted, in his discretion, to withdraw from the plea agreement, reinstate the charges which were dismissed, and proceed to trial as though no agreement had been made. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 195 Colo. 34, 575 P.2d 4 (1978).

But district attorney not permitted to withdraw from plea agreement when sentence reduced pursuant to the regimented inmate training program in § 17-27.7-104. Because the plea agreement did not foreclose the future possibility of a reduction in sentence, the court-ordered sentence reduction could not amount to a substantial and material breach of the agreement between the parties. Keller v. People, 29 P.3d 290 (Colo. 2000).

Generally, ruling on section (b) motion deemed final judgment, reviewable on appeal. When the trial court rules on a defendant's motion, filed pursuant to section (b), it is a final judgment as to the issue raised, and such ruling, except where the issue is propriety of sentence, is reviewable on appeal to the appropriate court. People v. Malacara, 199 Colo. 243, 606 P.2d 1300 (1980).

There is no right of appeal as to a trial court's denial of a motion for reduction of sentence under this rule when the issue presented to and resolved by the court concerns the propriety of the sentence. People v. Busch, 835 P.2d 582 (Colo. App. 1992).

Standard of review of sentencing by trial court is whether court abused discretion. People v. Mikkleson, 42 Colo. App. 77, 593 P.2d 975 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 199 Colo. 314, 618 P.2d 1101 (1980); People v. Hudson, 709 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1985).

And decision not reversed on appeal absent abuse. Absent an abuse of discretion, the decision of the reviewing court on a motion for the reduction of sentence under this rule will not be reversed. People v. Sundstrom, 638 P.2d 831 (Colo. App. 1981).

American bar association standards relating to appellate review of sentences were used by court of appeals to review sentence imposed by trial court. People v. Hudson, 709 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1985).

Disjunctive provisions of section (b) intended to recognize the different times at which a sentence might become final. People v. Cagle, 807 P.2d 1233 (Colo. App. 1991).

Defendant cannot appeal motion's denial where issue one of propriety of sentence. A defendant has no right to appeal a denial of his motion filed pursuant to section (b) where the issue before the appellate court is the propriety of his sentence. People v. Malacara, 199 Colo. 243, 606 P.2d 1300 (1980); McKnight v. People, 199 Colo. 313, 607 P.2d 1007, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 873, 101 S. Ct. 214, 66 L. Ed. 2d 94 (1980); People v. Kerns, 629 P.2d 102 (Colo. 1981).

Where the intrinsic fairness of defendants' sentence is reviewed by the trial court in proceedings pursuant to section (b), those determinations are not reviewed again on appeal. People v. Lopez, 624 P.2d 1301 (Colo. 1981).

An argument challenging the intrinsic fairness of the sentence imposed and not the sentencing procedure utilized by the trial court will not be reconsidered on appeal to the supreme court. People v. Nemnich, 631 P.2d 1121 (Colo. 1981).

There is no right of appeal to the denial by a trial court of a section (b) motion where the issue presented and resolved concerns the propriety of the sentence. People v. Dennis, 649 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1982).

Or where issue treated as such. An appeal of the trial court's reduction of the defendant's sentence pursuant to this rule, seeking a further reduction of the sentence, is treated as an appeal of the ''denial'' of a section (b) motion raising the issue of the ''propriety of the sentence'', and is therefore dismissed. People v. Foster, 200 Colo. 283, 615 P.2d 652 (1980).

Because sex offender registration is not part of a sentence, a trial court cannot reconsider a sexually violent predator designation under section (b) of this rule. People v. Brosh, 2012 COA 216M, 297 P.3d 1024.

Court may not sua sponte treat section (b) proceeding as section (c) proceeding. People v. Guitron, 191 Colo. 284, 552 P.2d 304 (1976).

Failure of trial court to exercise any discretion renders proceeding defective. The failure of a trial court to exercise any discretion at all in reviewing a section (b) motion in effect renders the proceeding itself defective, and an appeal therefrom directly raises the issue of the propriety of that proceeding. Mikkleson v. People, 199 Colo. 319, 618 P.2d 1101 (1980).

Such as where court refuses to consider mitigation information or make findings. It is only in such situations where the trial court has refused to consider any information in mitigation and does not make findings in support of its decision, that an error in denying a section (b) motion is sufficient to invoke appellate jurisdiction. Mikkleson v. People, 199 Colo. 319, 618 P.2d 1101 (1980).

Where trial judge acts arbitrarily or capriciously, judgment vacated. Where the trial court exercises its discretion arbitrarily or capriciously, basing its decision to deny the petitioner's motion under section (b) on personal considerations rather than on the evidence, the trial court's judgment is vacated, and the motion is remanded for a prompt hearing before a different trial judge. Spann v. People, 193 Colo. 53, 561 P.2d 1268 (1977).

Facts constituting abuse of discretion regarding court denial of work-release program. People v. Morrow, 197 Colo. 244, 591 P.2d 1026 (1979).

Court may not increase an offender's original sentence unless it was erroneously imposed or is void. Downing v. People, 895 P.2d 1046 (Colo. 1995).

Term of imprisonment that was longer than offender's original sentence constituted an increase in the sentence for purposes of section (b), regardless of whether the sentence was served in a community corrections facility under less severe conditions. Downing v. People, 895 P.2d 1046 (Colo. 1995).

Since the granting of probation greatly reduces the level of restraint imposed on defendant, essentially allowing him to remain at liberty while complying with the terms of his probation, it does constitute a reduction under section (b), even when the length of the sentence increased. People v. Santana, 961 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1997).

B. Proportionality Review.

Proportionality determinations are reviewed de novo on appeal, because an appellate court is not bound by a trial court's conclusions of law. People v. Medina, 926 P.2d 149 (Colo. App. 1996).

Three-part test adopted by U.S. supreme court in Solem v. Helm applies when reviewing proportionality of sentences under habitual-criminal statutes: (1) The gravity of the offense and the harshness of the penalty; (2) the sentences imposed on other criminals in the same jurisdiction; and (3) the sentences imposed for the commission of the same crime in other jurisdictions. People v. Cisneros, 855 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1993).

Request for proportionality review alleging that sentence violates the eighth amendment to the U.S. constitution is subject to the limitation period set forth in § 16-5-402. People v. Moore-El, 160 P.3d 393 (Colo. App. 2007).

Concurrent life sentences held disproportionate where underlying crimes were relatively minor, none posed a major threat to society, and although defendant had a lengthy record, approval of a life sentence under the circumstances would drastically lower the "grave and serious" threshold. People v. Medina, 926 P.2d 149 (Colo. App. 1996).

IV. OTHER POSTCONVICTION REMEDIES.

A. General Purpose and Scope of Postconviction Review.

Postconviction relief is founded upon constitutional principles. People v. Bucci, 184 Colo. 367, 520 P.2d 580 (1974).

Rule is concerned with the validity of a sentence and judgment. Saiz v. People, 156 Colo. 43, 396 P.2d 963 (1964).

A request for return of property is not within the scope of this rule, which is limited to challenges to a defendant's conviction or sentence. People v. Wiedemer, 692 P.2d 327 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Chavez, 2018 COA 139, __ P.3d __.

Court may not sua sponte treat section (b) proceeding as section (c) proceeding. Where the proceeding is simply a proceeding under section (b) for the reduction of sentence, it is not within the province of the court, sua sponte, to treat it as a proceeding under section (c) and pass upon whether the defendant's guilty plea should be set aside, even though it is argued that the reduction was a part of a plea bargaining. People v. Guitron, 191 Colo. 284, 552 P.2d 304 (1976).

Unless motion clearly raises section (c) issues. Where the defendant's motion seeks relief under section (b), but in substance it clearly raises issues and seeks relief available under section (c), the motion should be considered a motion for postconviction relief under section (c). People v. Ivery, 44 Colo. App. 511, 615 P.2d 80 (1980).

Section (c) authorizes a trial court to vacate a conviction for a motion filed only by a defendant, not the prosecution. People v. Wood, 2016 COA 134, 434 P.3d 663, rev'd on other grounds, 2019 CO 7, 433 P.3d 585.

Rule sets forth standards and procedure for postconviction relief. This rule sets the applicable standards and procedure required of a court when a motion to vacate, set aside, or correct a sentence is filed. Roberts v. People, 158 Colo. 76, 404 P.2d 848 (1965).

And this rule similar to federal provision. Section (c) of this rule provides a method for postconviction relief to those sentenced by state courts in Colorado which is substantially the same as that of 28 U.S.C. § 2255. Henry v. Tinsley, 344 F.2d 109 (10th Cir. 1965); Ruark v. Tinsley, 350 F.2d 315 (10th Cir. 1965); Saxton v. Patterson, 370 F.2d 112 (10th Cir. 1966); Breckenridge v. Patterson, 374 F.2d 857 (10th Cir. 1967), cert. dismissed, 389 U.S. 801, 88 S. Ct. 9, 19 L. Ed. 2d 56 (1967).

Section (c) of this rule authorizes postconviction relief without regard to time limitations for any sentence that ''exceeded the maximum authorized by law, or is otherwise not in accordance with the sentence authorized by law''. People v. Emig, 676 P.2d 1156 (Colo. 1984).

Rule creates entirely new postconviction remedy. Section (c) of this rule is intended to fill the void created by the narrowness of the Colorado concept of ''habeas corpus'' by creating an entirely new postconviction remedy. Peters v. Dillon, 227 F. Supp. 487 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd, 341 F.2d 337 (10th Cir. 1965).

And attains same purpose as obsolete "habeas corpus" writ. The writ of ''habeas corpus coram nobis'' being obsolete, its purpose now is attained by the filing of a motion to set aside judgment. Grandbouche v. People, 104 Colo. 175, 89 P.2d 577 (1939); Hackett v. People, 158 Colo. 304, 406 P.2d 331 (1965).

This rule affords all remedies which are available through writ of "habeas corpus". People ex rel. Wyse v. District Court, 180 Colo. 88, 503 P.2d 154 (1972); People v. Santisteven, 868 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1993).

Section (c) affords a convicted person all the remedies which are available through a writ of habeas corpus. People v. Bucci, 184 Colo. 367, 520 P.2d 580 (1974).

An improperly filed pro se habeas corpus petition should be treated as a section (c) motion in order to provide review on the merits of the claims raised by a petitioner. Chatfield v. Colo. Court of Appeals, 775 P.2d 1168 (Colo. 1989).

Pro se habeus corpus petition was improperly filed in case where an invalid judgment of conviction and sentence were rendered since relief was available under this rule and Crim. P. 36 and the district court should have treated petition as motion under section (c)(2) of this rule. Kailey v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 807 P.2d 563 (Colo. 1991).

Rather than dismissing an improper habeas corpus petition, the court should convert such petition into a motion under section (c) of this rule where the petitioner is acting pro se, the petitioner raises issues in the habeas corpus petition which should have been raised in a motion under section (c) of this rule, and the petitioner's claims are not barred by the statute of limitations. Graham v. Gunter, 855 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1993).

"Habeas corpus" is not proper remedy to gain review of purported constitutional violations. Breckenridge v. Patterson, 374 F.2d. 857 (10th Cir. 1967), cert. dismissed, 389 U.S. 801, 88 S. Ct. 9, 19, L. Ed. 2d 56 (1967).

Rather, the proper procedure is motion under this rule, followed by an appeal. Breckenridge v. Patterson, 374, F.2d 857 (10th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 389 U.S. 801, 88 S. Ct. 9, 19 L. Ed. 2d 56 (1967).

And "habeas corpus" petition raising constitutional questions treated as motion under this rule. Where the issues before a trial court in a ''habeas corpus'' proceeding raise substantive constitutional questions, the issues are within the purview of postconviction remedy, and the petition for ''habeas corpus'' will be treated as a motion under section (c). Dodge v. People, 178 Colo. 71, 495 P.2d 213 (1972).

Under section (c)(3), the court must hold an evidentiary hearing unless the motion, the files, and the record of the case clearly establish that the allegations presented in the motion are without merit and do not warrant postconviction relief. White v. Denver District Court, 766 P.2d 632 (Colo. 1988).

A habeas corpus petition that seeks relief available under this rule should be treated as a motion under this rule based upon the substantive constitutional issues raised therein, rather than upon the label placed on the pleading. White v. Denver Dist. Ct., 766 P.2d 632 (Colo. 1988); DePineda v. Price, 915 P.2d 1278 (Colo. 1996).

Defendant's challenges to procedures by which he was sentenced rather than the legality of his confinement may be raised by means of a motion under section (c) but not by means of a habeas corpus petition. Jones v. Zavaras, 926 P.2d 579 (Colo. 1996).

Prisoner required to pursue remedies under rule before petitioning for "habeas corpus". The requirement that a prisoner must pursue his remedies under this rule before petitioning for ''habeas corpus'' does not constitute a suspension of the writ of ''habeas corpus''. People ex rel. Wyse v. District Court, 180 Colo. 88, 503 P.2d 154 (1972).

So trial court judge abuses discretion when prematurely proceeds with "habeas corpus" hearing. When a motion for postconviction relief is heard and denied by one trial court judge and an appeal is pending, if the defense attorney files a ''habeas corpus'' petition on the same grounds, it is an abuse of discretion for a second trial court judge to proceed with a hearing on the ''habeas corpus'' petition. People ex rel. Wyse v. District Court, 180 Colo. 88, 503 P.2d 154 (1972).

A motion under section (c) must be filed in the sentencing court because that court maintains the records relating to the conviction and sentence. Jones v. Zavaras, 926 P.2d 579 (Colo. 1996).

Defendant may proceed pro se during postconviction proceedings pursuant to this rule. People v. Jones, 665 P.2d 127 (Colo. App. 1982).

Contention that defendant has been wrongfully deprived of confinement credit is properly put forward in a motion under this rule at the time when defendant claims a right to be released. People v. Lepine, 744 P.2d 81 (Colo. 1987).

An order of a trial court granting or denying a motion filed under section (c) is a final order reviewable on appeal. Such order becomes final after the period in which to perfect an appeal expires. People v. Janke, 852 P.2d 1271 (Colo. App. 1992).

This rule governing postconviction remedies did not provide basis for granting habeas corpus relief where petition was not filed under postconviction rule, even though petition was assigned case number of petitioner's original criminal action. People v. Calyer, 736 P.2d 1204 (Colo. 1987).

Defendant's motion does not seek relief from the judgment and sentence of the trial court but rather against the department of corrections. Therefore, it is not a claim cognizable under section (c). People v. Carrillo, 70 P.3d 529 (Colo. App. 2002).

This rule does not address postconviction claim that defendant is being unconstitutionally denied the opportunity to be considered for parole. Naranjo v. Johnson, 770 P.2d 784 (Colo. 1989).

Former clients are not required to obtain postconviction relief before bringing a malpractice action against their criminal defense attorneys. Rantz v. Kaufman, 109 P.3d 132 (Colo. 2005).

The doctrine of issue preclusion can be used under appropriate circumstances to prevent a criminal defendant from relitigating issues that have been decided against him or her in a motion under section (c) in a subsequent malpractice suit. Rantz v. Kaufman, 109 P.3d 132 (Colo. 2005).

Failure to seek or obtain postconviction relief is not a bar to bringing a malpractice suit. Smith v. Truman, 115 P.3d 1279 (Colo. 2005).

When a postconviction claim is properly presented for evaluation on the merits, but is premised on trial error that was not preserved, the court must review the claim for plain error, employing the prejudice test articulated in Wilson v. People, 743 P.2d 415 (Colo. 1987). People v. Versteeg, 165 P.3d 760 (Colo. App. 2006).

B. When Review Available.

Previously, this rule was entitled Post Conviction Remedy for Prisoner in Custody. Hudspeth v. People, 151 Colo. 5, 375 P.2d 518 (1962), cert. denied, 375 U.S. 838, 84 S. Ct. 82, 11 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1963).

And previously limited to prisoner in custody. This rule was once expressly limited to where a prisoner was attacking a sentence under which he was ''then'' in custody. Hackett v. People, 158 Colo. 304, 406 P.2d 331 (1965).

Such as person to whom probation granted. A person to whom probation has been granted is considered to be in ''custody under sentence'' and may raise a question as to whether his plea was voluntary. People v. Burger, 180 Colo. 415, 505 P.2d 1308 (1973).

Presently, court cannot deny motion for sole reason petitioner not in custody. At the present time, on a sufficient section (c) motion, a trial court would not be justified in summarily denying the motion for the sole reason that a petitioner is not in custody under sentence pursuant to a conviction which he seeks to vacate. Hooker v. People, 173 Colo. 226, 477 P.2d 376 (1970).

And this rule now applies to one who is aggrieved and claiming either a right to be released or to have a judgment of conviction set aside. Hooker v. People, 173 Colo. 226, 477 P.2d 376 (1970).

A defendant who enters a guilty plea is entitled to file a section (c) motion based on newly discovered evidence, and the rule does not limit postconviction review to those who have been convicted after trial or after entering an Alford plea. People v. Mason, 997 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd on other grounds, 25 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2001).

Postconviction relief is presently available where constitutional rights have been violated during trial. People v. Hubbard, 184 Colo. 243, 519 P.2d 945 (1974).

Where defendant contended that the trial court imposed its sentence in an illegal manner, and not that it was an illegal sentence, defendant was required to file his motion within 120 days of the imposition of sentence. People v. Swainson, 674 P.2d 984 (Colo. App. 1983).

Motion to dismiss may be treated as one filed pursuant to this rule. Where a motion to dismiss is filed after the defendant has pleaded guilty to and is sentenced for the charge involved, the trial court may elect to treat the motion as one filed pursuant to this rule. Wixson v. People, 175 Colo. 348, 487 P.2d 809 (1971).

And review provided subsequent to appeal. The very purpose of a section (c) motion is to provide a postconviction remedy subsequent to an appeal to review constitutional errors made at trial. Lucero v. People, 173 Colo. 94, 476 P.2d 257 (1970).

Or where time for appeal has passed. This rule provides for postconviction remedies to attack an unconstitutionally conducted trial although the time for appeal has passed. Baca v. Gobin, 165 Colo. 593, 441 P.2d 6 (1968).

And in spite of fact appeal was dismissed for failure to file the requisite motion for new trial, and that the alleged error could have been raised had such an appeal been properly brought, nevertheless, where the error asserted would be a violation of a constitutionally protected right, it may be raised in a section (c) motion. Sackett v. People, 176 Colo. 18, 488 P.2d 885 (1971).

Motion based upon change in law may be filed before conviction becomes "final". Motions pursuant to section (c) and § 18-1-410 (1)(f) may be filed at any time before the conviction becomes ''final'', which does not take place until the date when a petition for rehearing, timely filed, has been denied. Litsey v. District Court, 193 Colo. 341, 565 P.2d 1343 (1977) (decided prior to 1979 amendment).

Where an appellant files a motion for a postconviction review of his sentence based on a significant change in the law before his conviction becomes ''final'', the court has jurisdiction to entertain his motion for relief. People v. Thomas, 185 Colo. 395, 525 P.2d 1136 (1974).

Relief from a validly imposed sentence because of amendatory legislation is only available if requested before a conviction becomes final. People v. Johnson, 638 P.2d 61 (Colo. 1981).

Authority to modify sentence after conviction final. After a conviction has become final, relief from a validly imposed sentence cannot be obtained through the judiciary but must instead be sought through the executive department by way of commutation. People v. Akins, 662 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1983); People v. Piotrowski, 855 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1993).

The limitations of § 16-5-402 are applicable to a proportionality review of a sentence imposed pursuant to the habitual criminal statutes. People v. Talley, 934 P.2d 859 (Colo. App. 1996).

Because § 16-5-402 (1.5) is discretionary and because defendant's motion was premised on recent authority of constitutional magnitude, appellate court addressed the motion despite its untimeliness. People v. Gardner, 55 P.3d 231 (Colo. App. 2002).

Defendant need not affirmatively assert that relief sought has not been previously denied, although an appeal duplicating an appeal previously denied may be dismissed. People v. Robinson, 833 P.2d 832 (Colo. App. 1992).

Issue raised on appeal may be reviewed when section (b) motion was inadvertently excluded from remainder of record transmitted to court and exclusion was not appellant's fault. People v. Olivas, 911 P.2d 675 (Colo. App. 1995).

Review is appropriate when issues concern the sentencing proceeding and not the propriety of sentence itself. People v. Olivas, 911 P.2d 675 (Colo. App. 1995).

Claims related to the department of corrections' sex offender classification are not reviewable under section (c)(2). The proper claim is suit against the department of corrections. People v. McMurrey, 39 P.3d 1221 (Colo. App. 2001).

Ripeness of claim for review. Sections (c)(2) and (3) require an allegation that the applicant has a present right to be released because the sentence was imposed in violation of the constitution or laws of the United States or of Colorado and the sentence imposed was not in accordance with the sentence authorized by law. People v. Shackelford, 729 P.2d 1016 (Colo. App. 1986).

Convict, who alleged that the department of corrections was incorrectly computing good-time credits for purposes of parole eligibility but who did not assert any defect in the sentence imposed upon him, and who presented his claim prior to the time when, even by his own calculations, he would be eligible for parole, did not present a dispute that was ripe for adjudication and did not state a cognizable claim. People v. Shackelford, 729 P.2d 1016 (Colo. App. 1986).

State waived time bar to section (c) motion by not raising it in trial court. People v. St. John, 934 P.2d 865 (Colo. App. 1996).

When defendant entitled to review even though sentence served. When a defendant has completed service of a sentence and belatedly seeks postconviction relief, he may be charged with the burden of showing a present need for such relief. A sufficient showing is made when the defendant establishes that he is facing prosecution or has been convicted and the challenged conviction or sentence may be, or has been, a factor in sentencing for the current offense. People v. Montoya, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983).

A claim under this rule is not barred by a failure to challenge the conviction earlier as long as a postconviction motion states a claim cognizable under this rule, such as where the motion asserts facts which, if true, would invalidate a previously entered guilty plea, and the claim has not been fully and finally resolved in a prior judicial proceeding, the defendant is entitled to judicial review of the asserted error. People v. Montoya, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983).

A person seeking postconviction relief must allege with particularity in his motion that present need exists for relief sought and the present need must continue to exist until the time of the hearing on motion and, if a new present need arises prior to a hearing on motion for postconviction relief, defendant may amend his original pleading to reflect the change. Moland v. People, 757 P.2d 137 (Colo. 1988).

Appellate court cannot review allegations not raised in a motion or hearing under section (c). People v. Goldman, 923 P.2d 374 (Colo. App. 1996).

Constitutional error alleged need no longer be of sort not subject to appellate review. There is no longer any adherence to the rule that the constitutional error alleged must be of a sort not effectively subject to review on appeal from a conviction. People v. Bradley, 169 Colo. 262, 455 P.2d 199 (1969); Whitman v. People, 170 Colo. 189, 460 P.2d 767 (1969).

The fact that defendant did not raise a constitutional claim on direct appeal does not preclude the defendant from raising the claim in a motion under section (c) or from seeking appellate review of the trial court's denial of such a motion. The defendant is entitled to review of a motion under this rule so long as the motion states a claim cognizable under this rule and the claim has not been fully and finally resolved in a prior judicial proceeding. People v. Corichi, 18 P.3d 807 (Colo. App. 2000).

Defendant who has voluntarily and knowingly waived right to contest validity of prior convictions cannot apply for postconviction relief under section (c). People v. Gurule, 748 P.2d 1329 (Colo. App. 1987).

But this rule is not a substitute for appeal or writ of error. People v. Shearer, 181 Colo. 237, 508 P.2d 1249 (1973).

A motion under this rule is not a substitute for a writ of error. People v. Crawford, 183 Colo. 166, 515 P.2d 631 (1973).

And constitutional error previously disposed of on appeal cannot be raised again. An error consisting of a violation of constitutional rights of a defendant may be raised in a section (c) proceeding so long as it was not previously raised and disposed of on appeal. People v. Bradley, 169 Colo. 262, 455 P.2d 199 (1969); Whitman v. People, 170 Colo. 189, 460 P.2d 767 (1969).

Where various matters raised in a motion under this rule have been considered on appeal and no constitutional issues are raised, the motion should be denied without hearing, as provided in this rule. McKenna v. People, 160 Colo. 369, 417 P.2d 505 (1966).

Where a question is reviewed in depth in connection with the defendant's appeal, the matter is not subject to further review under section (c). Moore v. People, 174 Colo. 570, 485 P.2d 114 (1971).

Once an issue has been reviewed on appeal it cannot be raised again by a petition to vacate judgment and sentence. Gallegos v. People, 175 Colo. 553, 488 P.2d 887 (1971).

Unless otherwise required in the interests of justice, any grounds for postconviction relief which have been fully and finally litigated on a writ of error should not be relitigated. Morse v. People, 180 Colo. 49, 501 P.2d 1328 (1972).

This rule is a vehicle for correcting errors of constitutional magnitude which were not previously raised and ruled upon. People v. Shearer, 181 Colo. 237, 508 P.2d 1249 (1973).

An issue can be raised by a section (c) motion only when the alleged error involves a constitutional right and was not previously the subject of review on a writ of error. People v. Hill, 182 Colo. 253, 512 P.2d 257 (1973).

Equitable principles permit a motion for postconviction relief to be denied without a hearing when the ground for postconviction relief relied upon has been fully and finally litigated in the proceedings leading to judgment of conviction, including an earlier appeal, and the interests of justice do not otherwise require another hearing. People v. Trujillo, 190 Colo. 497, 549 P.2d 1312 (1976).

Once a claim has been raised and disposed of by the supreme court in an earlier appeal, it cannot be raised again in a later section (c) motion. People v. Johnson, 638 P.2d 61 (Colo. 1981); People v. Davis, 759 P.2d 742 (Colo. App. 1988).

As there must be some finality in reviewing process. Although section (c) is primarily intended to provide procedure which will permit judicial review of alleged constitutional infirmities in criminal proceedings, it is couched in language which recognizes that there must be some finality in the reviewing process. People v. Hubbard, 184 Colo. 243, 519 P.2d 945 (1974).

Rule not intended to establish perpetual review. This rule was not intended to establish a procedure which would allow continuing review of issues previously decided against the defendant. People v. Hubbard, 184 Colo. 243, 519 P.2d 945 (1974).

Generally, this rule is not intended to provide a repetitive review of alleged errors. Buckles v. People, 162 Colo. 51, 424 P.2d 774 (1967).

Postconviction proceedings are provided as a method of preventing injustices from occurring after a defendant has been convicted and sentenced, but not for the purpose of providing a perpetual right of review to every defendant in every case. People v. Hampton, 187 Colo. 131, 528 P.2d 1311 (1974).

Second appellate review of the propriety of a sentence is prohibited. People v. Malacara, 199 Colo. 243, 606 P.2d 1300 (1980); People v. Jenkins, 687 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1984).

A defendant is prohibited from using a proceeding under this rule to relitigate issues fully and finally resolved in an earlier appeal. People v. Johnson, 638 P.2d 61 (Colo. 1981); DePineda v. Price, 915 P.2d 1278 (Colo. 1996).

A defendant is precluded from raising an issue under this rule if its review would be nothing more than a second appeal. DePineda v. Price, 915 P.2d 1278 (Colo. 1996).

But if a significant change in the interpretation of the law, of constitutional magnitude, is determined after the defendant's direct appeal is affirmed, and if the change is binding precedent, then it is proper for the court of appeals to exercise its discretion to review the defendant's claims raised under this rule in a subsequent appeal. People v. Close, 22 P.3d 933 (Colo. App. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 48 P.3d 528 (Colo. 2002).

Rights of accused balanced against right to have final court determination. It is necessary to balance the rights of the accused to review a trial with postconviction proceedings against the right of society to have finality in court determinations. People v. Shearer, 181 Colo. 237, 508 P.2d 1249 (1973).

Thus, American Bar Association Standards for Criminal Justice are to be followed. In balancing the rights of the accused in postconviction proceedings against the recurring problems which face the courts and society, the supreme court of Colorado has elected to follow the American Bar Association Standards for Criminal Justice relating to delayed applications for relief. People v. Hampton, 187 Colo. 131, 528 P.2d 1311 (1974).

When appeal time expires, petitioner must show entitlement to relief. When the time for appeal has expired, there must be a showing by the petitioner that he would be entitled to relief under section (c). Valdez v. District Court, 171 Colo. 436, 467 P.2d 825 (1970).

As must defendant who has completed challenged sentence. Where the defendant seeking postconviction relief has completed the sentences which were imposed on his challenged convictions, he has the burden of establishing a present need for relief under this rule. People v. Hampton, 187 Colo. 131, 528 P.2d 1311 (1974).

Where the defendant has long since served his sentence, time has dimmed memories, and court records are misplaced or unavailable, the defendant has the burden of demonstrating a present need for section (c) relief. People v. Bucci, 184 Colo. 367, 520 P.2d 580 (1974).

A defendant who has fully discharged the sentence imposed against him and any parole obligation associated with the sentence, but who has made no further showing of the present need for relief, is not entitled to relief under section (c) of this rule. People v. Graham, 793 P.2d 600 (Colo. App. 1989).

Motions under section (c) are subject to § 16-5-402 (1), which prohibits a person convicted under a criminal statute from collaterally attacking the validity of the conviction unless the attack is commenced within three years of the conviction. People v. Green, 36 P.3d 125 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Salinas, 55 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

However, an exception to the time limit in § 16-5-402 (1), exists if a defendant demonstrates that the failure to seek timely relief was the result of justifiable excuse or excusable neglect. People v. Green, 36 P.3d 125 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Salinas, 55 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2002).

But the allegation that there was "justifiable excuse or excusable neglect" without specificity is insufficient and time barred. People v. Salinas, 55 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2002).

Because there is no requirement that appellate counsel advise a defendant of time limitations for seeking postconviction relief, the absence of such advice is not a justifiable excuse for defendant's neglect. People v. Alexander, 129 P.3d 1051 (Colo. App. 2005).

Counsel's affirmative and erroneous advice about the immigration consequences of a defendant's plea may constitute justifiable excuse or excusable neglect for failure to pursue timely collateral relief, and therefore merits a hearing. If a trial court finds that justifiable excuse or excusable neglect exists for a late filing, then the trial court should determine the merits of the defendant's section (c) motion. People v. Martinez-Huerta, 2015 COA 69, 363 P.3d 754.

Postconviction motions that challenge the manner in which a plea is taken, such as whether the person was properly advised about the plea, are not challenges to the legality of the sentence and are properly brought pursuant to section (c), not section (a). People v. Green, 36 P.3d 125 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Salinas, 55 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2002).

When a deferred judgment and sentence agreement remains unrevoked, review under this rule is not available as it establishes postconviction remedies, and no conviction has entered. People ex rel. K.W.S., 192 P.3d 579 (Colo. App. 2008).

Defendant who pleads guilty may not bring an as-applied equal protection postconviction challenge. People v. Ford, 232 P.3d 260 (Colo. App. 2009).

A defendant can challenge a sexually violent predator designation pursuant to section (c). The sexually violent predator designation is part of the criminal judgment that may be challenged under section (c). People v. Baker, 2017 COA 102, __ P.3d __.

C. Grounds Justifying Relief.

1. In General.

Previously, this rule specifically limited the trial court's power to grant relief to situations where: (1) The sentence was imposed in violation of the constitution or laws of Colorado or of the United States; or (2) the court imposing the sentence was without jurisdiction to do so; or (3) the sentence was in excess of the maximum sentence authorized by law; or (4) the statute for the violation of which the sentence was imposed was unconstitutional or was repealed before the prisoner contravened its provisions. Saiz v. People, 156 Colo. 43, 396 P.2d 963 (1964); Hammons v. People, 156 Colo. 484, 400 P.2d 199 (1965).

2. Change of Law.

Section (c)(1) appropriate where change intervenes before imposition of sentence. A defendant is given the right to make application for postconviction review when there has been a significant change in the law, applied to defendant's conviction or sentence, allowing in the interests of justice retroactive application of the changed legal standard. Hence, section (c)(1) is especially appropriate where a change in the law intervenes before conviction is had and sentence is imposed. People v. Thomas, 185 Colo. 395, 525 P.2d 1136 (1974).

Where amendatory legislation mitigating the penalty for the offense became effective prior to imposition of the sentence, the defendant is entitled as a matter of law to be sentenced thereunder, although probation is imposed before the legislation and revocation with sentencing afterwards. People v. Jenkins, 40 Colo. App. 140, 575 P.2d 13 (1977).

Standing to challenge conviction based upon change of law. Section (c) is proper motion for obtaining postconviction relief in circumstance in which one of the statutes under which the defendant was charged was later held unconstitutional, and therefore defendant had standing to bring such a motion. People v. Crespin, 682 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1984), rev'd on other grounds, 721 P.2d 688 (Colo. 1986).

But where court overrules prior fourth amendment holding, suppression issues become moot upon entry of a guilty verdict and relief properly denied. People v. Waits, 695 P.2d 1176 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 724 P.2d 1329 (Colo. 1986).

Retroactive application of amendments to § 17-2-103 (12), providing that a parole officer shall request that parole revocation proceedings be deferred pending a disposition of a criminal charge, denied under this rule because section (c)(1) provides a remedy to an offender whose conviction or sentence is affected by a change in the law during the pendency of a direct appeal of such conviction or sentence, but not to an offender claiming the benefit of changes in the law that occur during the pendency of other postconviction proceedings. People v. White, 804 P.2d 247 (Colo. App. 1990).

A defendant whose conviction is affirmed on direct appeal may collaterally attack that conviction in a postconviction motion on the ground that state lost the authority to prosecute his conviction during the pendency of the direct appeal because the legislature changed the penalty for the crime of conviction. People v. Cali, 2018 COA 61, __ P.3d __.

3. Constitutionally Infirm Judgment.

Section (c) provides procedural mechanism to attack a conviction which is constitutionally infirm. People v. Ivery, 44 Colo. App. 511, 615 P.2d 80 (1980).

Sufficiency of the evidence is a constitutional issue, cognizable under section (c)(2). People v. Nunez, 673 P.2d 53 (Colo. App. 1983).

Postconviction questions pertaining to constitutionality of judgment of conviction are solely within rule. Shearer v. Patterson, 159 Colo. 319, 411 P.2d 247 (1966).

Defendant's mandatory sentence to life imprisonment without the possibility of parole is unconstitutional pursuant to Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 460, 132 S. Ct. 2455, 183 L. Ed. 2d 407 (2012). Defendant's sentence of life without parole violates the eighth amendment because it was imposed without any opportunity for the sentencing court to consider whether the punishment was just and appropriate in light of defendant's age, maturity, and the other factors discussed in Miller. People v. Gutierrez-Ruiz, 2014 COA 109, 383 P.3d 44.

A claim that the trial court aggravated a sentence in violation of Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), and Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296 (2004), is cognizable under section (c) and not section (a). People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

Contention that sentence violates double jeopardy prohibition of the fifth amendment of the U.S. constitution is cognizable under section (c). People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

Contention that sentencing scheme set forth in Colorado Sex Offender Lifetime Supervision Act violates equal protection is cognizable under section (c) of this rule. People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

Contention that Colorado Sex Offender Lifetime Supervision Act violates due process because it does not provide for a continuing opportunity to be heard and does not give offenders a meaningful chance to demonstrate their rehabilitation is cognizable under section (c) of this rule. People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

Contention that trial court used an unreliable test in sentencing defendant in violation of due process is cognizable under section (c) of this rule. People v. Collier, 151 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2006).

If motion specifies violation of constitutional rights, hearing required. If a defendant's motion to vacate, or any attachments thereto, specify matters which are deemed to have violated his constitutional rights, then it would be incumbent upon the trial court to treat this motion in the nature of a section (c) motion and conduct a hearing to determine if there was a violation of any of the constitutional rights of the defendant. DeBaca v. People, 170 Colo. 415, 462 P.2d 496 (1969).

Submission of the constitutionally infirm crime of extreme indifference murder under a general verdict to jury was not harmless error beyond a reasonable doubt. Crespin v. People, 721 P.2d 688 (Colo. 1986).

4. Unlawful Revocation of Sentence.

Rule provides remedy for revocation of deferred sentence. A defendant may either appeal an order revoking a deferred sentence, pursuant to C.A.R. 1, or file a motion for postconviction review, pursuant to section (c) of this rule. People v. Boykin, 631 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1981).

As an order revoking deferred sentence is equivalent of revocation of conditional release for purposes of section (c)(2)(VII). People v. Boykin, 631 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1981).

Offender is not entitled to relief under section (c) of this rule when record demonstrates that offender was given statutorily required administrative review prior to termination from a community corrections program by the trial court in its role as the referring agency. People v. Rogers, 9 P.3d 371 (Colo. 2000).

5. Invalid Guilty Plea.

State courts empowered to determine validity of pleas. Section (c) confers jurisdiction upon the state courts to hear and determine allegations which go to the validity of a petitioner's plea of guilty. Patterson v. Hampton, 355 F.2d 470 (10th Cir. 1966).

As such allegations raise no question justiciable in "habeas corpus". Allegations of a petition which go to the validity of petitioner's plea of guilty are properly brought under this rule and raises no question properly justiciable in habeas corpus. Stewart v. Tinsley, 157 Colo. 441, 403 P.2d 220 (1965); Martinez v. Tinsley, 158 Colo. 236, 405 P.2d 943 (1965).

Defendant entitled to opportunity to prove allegations of coercion. No matter how improbable allegations of coercion may be, so long as they are not completely incredible, a defendant is entitled to the opportunity of trying to prove them at a hearing. Von Pickrell v. People, 163 Colo. 591, 431 P.2d 1003 (1967).

And entitled to withdraw plea made under influence of drugs. If the defendant can show that he was under the influence of tranquilizing drugs at the time he changed his plea to guilty, to the extent that the guilty plea was not a free and voluntary act, he would be entitled to withdraw that plea and go to trial on a plea of not guilty, particularly where he alleges that he has a valid defense to the charges against him. Von Pickrell v. People, 163 Colo. 591, 431 P.2d 1003 (1967).

Failure of court to advise or make inquiry precludes treating plea as voluntary. Failure of the trial court to advise or to make a proper inquiry precludes treating the defendant's plea of guilty as a voluntary and intelligent waiver of his constitutional rights, so defendant may withdraw his plea of guilty and be permitted to plea anew. People v. Harrington, 179 Colo. 312, 500 P.2d 360 (1972).

And elements of crime charged must be explained in understandable terms. A guilty plea cannot stand as voluntarily and knowingly entered unless the defendant understands the nature of the crime charged, and this requirement is not met unless the critical elements of the crime charged are explained in terms which are understandable to the defendant. People v. Gorniak, 197 Colo. 289, 593 P.2d 349 (1979).

But a defendant may plead guilty to a crime which does not exist and for which he could not be convicted at trial, and because the defendant receives a substantial benefit by pleading guilty to the lesser charges, postconviction relief will be denied. People v. Waits, 695 P.2d 1176 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 724 P.2d 1329 (Colo. 1986).

Defendant need not be advised on right to remain silent in competency evaluation for a postconviction motion under section (c) if the evaluation is not being used to establish guilt. No self-incrimination issue exists, and procedural safeguards of § 16-8-117 do not apply because defendant already confessed, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced. People v. Karpierz, 165 P.3d 753 (Colo. App. 2006).

The defendant must receive advisement of mandatory parole requirement when entering into a plea agreement so that the defendant has the requisite knowledge of the consequences of the plea agreement. Without sufficient advisement, the plea agreement can be withdrawn. People v. Seaney, 36 P.3d 81 (Colo. App. 2000).

Hearing granted where no showing defendant aware of difference between felony and misdemeanor. Where the record fails to show defendant was aware of difference between felony and misdemeanor offenses when pleading guilty, he should be granted a hearing on his petition for postconviction relief. People v. Rivera, 185 Colo. 337, 524 P.2d 1082 (1974).

Existence of prejudice resulting from ineffective assistance of counsel is not determined by underlying ''truth'' of a guilty plea, but rather by whether there is a reasonable probability that defendant would not have pleaded guilty but for counsel's failure to make him aware of the consequences of such plea. People v. Garcia, 799 P.2d 413 (Colo. App. 1990).

Defendant who pleaded guilty to first degree sexual assault was resentenced to reflect terms of plea bargain as interpreted by court. Defendant's plea was based on court's interpretation of plea bargain that, if qualified under ''good time law'', he would serve no more than one-half of sentence agreed upon, but after defendant entered his plea, parole board determined that parole was discretionary, not mandatory, for sex offenders and that defendant may be required to serve the full sentence on his conviction. People v. Wilbur, 873 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court did not cause defendant's plea to be involuntarily made, where neither the People nor the trial court represented that defendant would be released on parole at any particular time, the court specifically stated to defendant that it would not be bound by any representations made to defendant concerning the penalty to be imposed or the granting or denial of probation, and neither the trial court nor the prosecutor referred to the parole board's early release policy. People v. Lustgarden, 914 P.2d 488 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court's failure to advise defendant of the possibility of being sentenced pursuant to the Sex Offenders Act, former §§16-13-201 to 16-13-216, was not grounds to set aside defendant's guilty plea entered a decade earlier; the failure to so advise was harmless since the defendant was not originally sentenced under the Act. People v. Lustgarden, 914 P.2d 488 (Colo. App. 1995).

Defendant's postconviction motion based on the voluntariness of his guilty plea as it related to the quality of his counsel was properly denied as successive under section (c)(3)(VII) of this rule, where lengthy evidentiary hearing was held on defendant's Crim. P. 32(d) motion claiming that his plea was not knowing, voluntary, and intelligent due to ineffective assistance of counsel. People v. Vondra, 240 P.3d 493 (Colo. App. 2010).

In the context of a guilty plea, the prejudice prong of Strickland v. Washington requires a defendant to show that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's errors, defendant would not have pleaded guilty and would have insisted on going to trial. ''Reasonable probability'' means a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome and is a standard somewhat lower than a preponderance of the evidence. The standard presents an objective inquiry that asks not whether the defendant likely would have been acquitted at trial but whether counsel's conduct affected the outcome of the plea process. Some objective evidence must corroborate the defendant's testimony that he or she would have made a different decision about the plea if he or she had been properly advised. In the end, the defendant must convince the court that a decision to reject the plea bargain would have been rational under the circumstances. People v. Sifuentes, 2017 COA 48M, 410 P.3d 730.

Because defendant established a reasonable probability that his plea counsel's deficient performance affected the outcome of the plea process, he must be allowed to withdraw his guilty plea. People v. Sifuentes, 2017 COA 48M, 410 P.3d 730.

Defendant showed prejudice from his counsel's erroneous advice about the immigration consequences of his guilty plea. Rejecting the guilty plea offer and going to trial would have been a rational decision for defendant. People v. Sifuentes, 2017 COA 48M, 410 P.3d 730.

Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 130 S. Ct. 1473, 176 L. Ed. 2d 284 (2010), requires that a defense attorney give ''correct advice'', that is, advice that informs his or her client about the risk of deportation arising from a guilty plea. This advice need not be unequivocal, and it does not require counsel to tell a defendant that his plea will subject him to mandatory removal, presumptively mandatory deportation, or automatic or mandatory deportation. Because deportation is not automatic after conviction for a deportable offense, Padilla does not require an attorney to advise a client that he or she will, with 100 percent certainty, be deported. Taking into account the language counsel actually uses and the circumstances of the noncitizen client (such as the ability to read and understand English), a criminal defense attorney may provide effective assistance even when using equivocal terms such as ''likely'', ''strong chance'', or ''probably''. People v. Juarez, 2017 COA 127, __ P.3d __.

Plea counsel's failure to advise defendant on mandatory deportation, while error, did not prejudice defendant. Because federal law was clear and straightforward, plea counsel's failure to advise client that removal was mandated for the plea on a controlled substance charge resulted in ineffective assistance of counsel. Defendant could not show prejudice, however, because testimony at hearing established that defendant's overriding goal was to avoid prison, and it would not have been rational under the circumstances for defendant to change his plea. People v. Campos-Corona, 2013 COA 23, 343 P.3d 983.

Plea counsel was not ineffective when he advised defendant that his plea on a controlled substance charge would ''probably result in deportation''. Although a noncitizen defendant is deportable under federal law for a controlled substance conviction, deportation is not guaranteed. Counsel is required to inform his or her client of the risk of deportation arising from a guilty plea, but counsel is not required to say that the plea will result in mandatory deportation. People v. Juarez, 2017 COA 127, __ P.3d __.

6. Deprivation of Appellate Rights.

Constitutional violation where deprivation of appellate rights by fraud or deception. A deprivation of constitutional rights has been held to exist where factors such as fraud or deception imposed upon a convicted person by his attorney deprive him of his appellate rights. Haines v. People, 169 Colo. 136, 454 P.2d 595 (1969).

Otherwise, meritorious grounds for appellate review must be shown. Where a motion for postconviction relief is based on an alleged deprivation of the right to appeal, meritorious grounds for appellate review must be shown. Haines v. People, 169 Colo. 136, 454 P.2d 595 (1969).

Indigent defendant is entitled to obtain a free transcript when necessary to exercise the right of appeal. People v. Shearer, 181 Colo. 237, 508 P.2d 1249 (1973).

So long as furnishing of free transcript not "vain and useless" gesture. To warrant the furnishing of a free transcript, the petitioner must make some showing that the furnishing of such would not be just a ''vain and useless'' gesture, but that he is entitled to relief under this rule. Valdez v. District Court, 171 Colo. 436, 467 P.2d 825 (1970); Romero v. District Court, 178 Colo. 200, 496 P.2d 1049 (1972).

Inasmuch as such would be the infliction of a needless expense. As to the right to have a free transcript on appeal, where petitioner does not come within the requirements of section (c) and no showing has been made why a very expensive transcript will be of any use to him, then the infliction of the needless expense to prepare such upon a small local unit of government under these circumstances would be an injustice. Peirce v. People, 158 Colo. 81, 404 P.2d 843 (1965).

Allegations of ineffective assistance of counsel in appellate proceedings may be considered by the trial court in connection with motion for postconviction relief. People v. Williams, 736 P.2d 1229 (Colo. App. 1986).

Attorney's performance found to be patently deficient in proceeding under this rule alleging ineffective assistance of counsel where such attorney failed to file a petition for writ of certiorari in a timely fashion after receiving three extensions of time from supreme court. People v. Valdez, 789 P.2d 406 (Colo. 1990).

Motion for postconviction relief under this rule denied where defendant failed to establish that he had suffered prejudice due to patently deficient performance of attorney in handling criminal appeal. People v. Valdez, 789 P.2d 406 (Colo. 1990).

A motion or petition for habeas corpus is a collateral attack that may be dismissed upon the defendant's death, since doing so does not deprive the defendant of the right to appeal the conviction. People v. Valdez, 911 P.2d 703 (Colo. App. 1996).

The doctrine of abatement ab initio in this state does not extend to cases pending on certiorari review. Rather, where a defendant dies after he already has been afforded the protections of a direct appeal as of right, the interests of justice would not be served by abating the conviction. People v. Griffin, 2014 CO 48, 328 P.3d 91.

7. Other Grounds.

Issue involving jurisdiction of court to impose certain sentence is subject to review under section (c). Johnson v. People, 174 Colo. 75, 482 P.2d 105 (1971).

A defendant may not plead guilty to a crime after the general assembly has expressly repealed the statute defining that crime. Defendant's plea to first degree assault pursuant to § 18-3-202 (1)(d), after such section was repealed, was illegal and, because it was material to his plea agreement, his plea agreement was vacated. People v. Wetter, 985 P.2d 79 (Colo. App. 1999).

Due process failure where jury would not have convicted with later discovered evidence. If with later discovered evidence the jury would not have convicted the defendant, it can be said that the conviction can be laid at the door of inadequate preparation on the part of both sides, and this has the magnitude of a failure to due process, calling for a new trial. People v. Armstead, 179 Colo. 387, 501 P.2d 472 (1972).

Where prior conviction is decreed a nullity by final judgment of court of appeals. The defendant cannot ''reaffirm'' the validity of a prior conviction at an habitual offender hearing when the court of appeals has decreed by final judgment that the prior conviction is a nullity. People v. Dugger, 673 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1983).

Invited error doctrine not applicable as basis for denying postconviction relief. Defendant should not be estopped from challenging conviction on grounds that he invited the error by successfully objecting to submission of a special verdict form where court found that although the use of a general verdict form prevented a means of determining whether error raised in postconviction motion was harmless, the use of a general verdict form did not induce error by the trial court. People v. Crespin, 682 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1984), rev'd on other grounds, 721 P.2d 688 (Colo. 1986).

Ineffective assistance of counsel. Defendant has burden to show inadequate representation, and a conviction will not be set aside unless, based on record as a whole, there was a denial of fundamental fairness. People v. Gies, 738 P.2d 398 (Colo. 1987); People v. Karpierz, 165 P.3d 753 (Colo. App. 2006).

There is no need to inquire into trial errors or prejudice if trial counsel is found to be incompetent as a matter of law. In such case as trial counsel is found to be incompetent as a matter of law, defendant is entitled to new trial for this reason alone. People v. Kenny, 30 P.3d 734 (Colo. App. 2000).

Trial counsel conflict of interest. If the trial court determines that a conflict of interest existed, such conflict adversely affected counsel's conduct, and that defendant did not voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently waive the right to conflict-free representation, judgment of conviction must be vacated and a new trial should be conducted. People v. Kenny, 30 P.3d 734 (Colo. App. 2000).

Strickland ineffective assistance standard requires that the court evaluate the evidence from the perspective of defense counsel as of the time of the representation in question and to indulge a strong presumption that defense counsel's efforts constituted effective assistance. People v. Naranjo, 840 P.2d 319 (Colo. 1992).

If the court determines defense counsel's performance was not constitutionally deficient, it need not consider the prejudice prong of the ineffective assistance test. People v. Sparks, 914 P.2d 544 (Colo. App. 1996).

Strickland test, while based on the constitutional right to counsel, is applicable to the determination of whether a defendant has received effective assistance of counsel in a postconviction proceeding. People v. Hickey, 914 P.2d 377 (Colo. App. 1995).

In order to obtain relief based on a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel, a defendant must affirmatively prove both that his counsel's performance fell below the standard of professional reasonableness and that such performance prejudiced him, i.e., that there is reasonable probability that, but for such deficient performance, the outcome at trial would have been different. People v. Palmer, 888 P.2d 348 (Colo. App. 1994); People v. Washington, 2014 COA 41, 345 P.3d 950.

Ineffective assistance of counsel may arise when an attorney's representation is intrinsically improper because of an actual conflict of interest. However, to make a showing of actual conflict of interest, the defendant must demonstrate a basis for the underlying ineffective assistance of counsel challenges. No basis was found where claim of ineffective assistance of counsel was based on bare allegations of failure to file an appeal with no showing of the existence of grounds for an appeal. People v. Rhorer, 946 P.2d 503 (Colo. App. 1997), rev'd on other grounds, 967 P.2d 147 (Colo. 1998).

To succeed on a motion for new trial based on newly discovered evidence, the defendant must show that the evidence was discovered after the trial; that defendant and his counsel exercised diligence to discover all possible evidence favorable to the defendant prior to and during the trial; that the newly discovered evidence is material to the issues involved and not merely cumulative or impeaching; and lastly, that the newly discovered evidence is of such character as probably to bring about an acquittal verdict if presented at another trial. People v. Muniz, 928 P.2d 1352 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Tomey, 969 P.2d 785 (Colo. App. 1998); People v. Mason, 997 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd on other grounds, 25 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2001).

Question in evaluating probability that new evidence would bring about an acquittal is not whether the court, in its experience, would consider a particular witness credible, but rather whether a reasonable jury would probably conclude that there existed a reasonable doubt of guilt based on all evidence, including the new evidence, as developed in the course of trial. People v. Estep, 799 P.2d 405 (Colo. 1990).

Defendant entitled to a new trial upon the withdrawal of his guilty plea based upon newly discovered evidence. The defendant must present evidence from which the trial court may reasonably conclude that: (1) The newly discovered evidence was discovered after the entry of the plea, and in the exercise of reasonable diligence by the defendant and his or her counsel, could not have been discovered earlier; (2) the charges that the People filed against the defendant, or the charges to which the defendant pleaded guilty were actually false or unfounded; and (3) the newly discovered evidence would probably bring about a verdict of acquittal in a trial. People v. Schneider, 25 P.3d 755 (Colo. 2001); Mason v. People, 25 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2001).

An Alford plea and a guilty plea are the same for purposes of analysis under Schneider. People v. Schneider, 25 P.3d 755 (Colo. 2001).

A trial court may consider corroborating evidence in assessing a recanting witness's credibility. People v. Schneider, 25 P.3d 755 (Colo. 2001).

Trial court record demonstrated defendant was aware that a crime of violence charge would increase his potential sentence and supported trial court's denial of motion to vacate upon finding that defendant's plea was knowingly and voluntarily entered. People v. Palmer, 888 P.2d 348 (Colo. App. 1994).

It is extremely unlikely that a reasonable jury would acquit the defendant of drug charges in a new trial at which a witness now states, six years after the original trial, that she placed the drugs in the defendant's wallet. The trial court found it ''rather incredible'' that the witness would not mention that she had put the drugs in his wallet during the first trial and that the witness did not know that the defendant was in prison until six years later. The witness' testimony was further weakened by the fact that she was no longer subject to prosecution for her conduct and the fact that her testimony conflicted with her affidavit with respect to where she obtained the drugs. People v. Muniz, 928 P.2d 1352 (Colo. App. 1996).

A defendant who enters a guilty plea is entitled to file a motion for post-conviction relief based on newly discovered evidence. People v. Tomey, 969 P.2d 785 (Colo. App. 1998).

District court exceeded its statutory jurisdiction by ordering that defendant not have custody of her children as a condition of probation, since juvenile courts have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the legal custody of any child who is dependent and neglected under § 19-1-104. People v. Forsythe, 43 P.3d 652 (Colo. App. 2001).

D. Grounds Not Justifying Relief.

1. In General.

Mere error, unless of constitutional dimension, is no grounds for postconviction relief. People v. Crawford, 183 Colo. 166, 515 P.2d 631 (1973).

Such as failure to follow rule's formal requirements. For collateral relief such as habeas corpus to be available, more than a failure to follow the formal requirements of a rule of criminal procedure must be shown. Martinez v. Ricketts, 498 F. Supp. 893 (D. Colo. 1980).

Trial court's failure to readvise defendant of elements of crime at providency hearing is not fatal to the conviction where record shows that defendant's plea was knowingly and understandingly made. People v. Reyes, 713 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1985).

Trial court's alleged error in refusing to permit defendant's wife to testify as to his nonviolent character and prior sexual conduct and allegation that prosecutor's remarks during cross-examination and closing argument were so prejudicial as to constitute reversible error were not proper grounds for postconviction relief. People v. Williams, 736 P.2d 1229 (Colo. App. 1986).

Alleged defects in grand jury proceedings do not constitute grounds for relief from conviction, because once a defendant has been found guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, the issue of probable cause found at a grand jury proceeding becomes moot. People v. Tyler, 802 P.2d 1153 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court's failure to advise defendant of the mandatory parole term did not constitute reversible error. Because the length of the defendant's sentence was less than the maximum that he was advised he could receive, the trial court properly determined that defendant had entered a valid guilty plea. Consequently, it committed no error in denying defendant's motion under this rule. People v. Tyus, 776 P.2d 1143 (Colo. App. 1989).

Trial court's failure to advise defendant of mandatory parole term at the time he pleaded guilty to probation violation was not error because court had previously advised defendant when he pleaded guilty to the charge. People v. Wright, 53 P.3d 730 (Colo. App. 2002).

Where mittimus does not reference a mandatory period of parole, remand is required for correction of the mittimus rather than granting defendant's section (c) motion. People v. Barth, 981 P.2d 1102 (Colo. App. 1999).

Allowing witness for defendant to appear in jail clothing is not reversible error where defendant cannot show he was prejudiced thereby. People v. Walters, 796 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1990); People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2001).

Trial court's instruction that the jury could consider defendant's voluntary absence from the trial as evidence of guilt was not error. The court had made reasonable inquiry as to the defendant's whereabouts before continuing the trial. People v. Tafoya, 833 P.2d 841 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where the only issue raised in a motion under this rule concerns the construction of statutes, failure of the trial court to make findings of fact and conclusions of law is harmless and does not require reversal. People v. Young, 908 P.2d 1147 (Colo. App. 1995).

Defense counsel's failure to inform defendant of mandatory consecutive sentences did not result in ineffective assistance of counsel. The record supported the trial court's conclusion that defendant would not have accepted a plea bargain sentence in excess of 20 years, therefore defense counsel's failure to inform defendant of the mandatory consecutive sentence provision did not result in prejudice. People v. Williams, 908 P.2d 1157 (Colo. App. 1995).

Defendant cannot claim ineffective assistance of counsel for failing to perfect appeal while defendant was a fugitive. Counsel's performance could not have prejudiced defendant by forcing forfeiture of an appeal because, by fleeing from justice while his appeal was pending, defendant himself forfeited his right to appellate review. People v. Brown, 250 P.3d 679 (Colo. App. 2010).

Application of mandatory parole period did not violate equal protection where person is sentenced differently than others in same felony ''class''. Defendant is only ''similarly situated'' with defendants who commit the same or similar acts. People v. Friesen, 45 P.3d 784 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Walker, 75 P.3d 722 (Colo. App. 2002).

2. Procedural Errors.

Review on grounds of duplicity in charge is proper only by appeal to the conviction and not by means of this rule. Specht v. People, 156 Colo. 12, 396 P.2d 838 (1964).

And mere surplusage in charge does not require court to hold a full-blown hearing into a motion to vacate, where it could be clearly seen from the motion itself that the particular matter was without merit, such being a matter of form not affecting the ''real merits'' of the offense charged. Carter v. People, 161 Colo. 10, 419 P.2d 654 (1966).

Defendant cannot collaterally attack untrue record of arraignment and plea. Where the record as to arraignment and plea is not true, the defendant must reasonably call the defect to the court's attention by a motion for correction of error, but he cannot collaterally attack it. Madrid v. People, 148 Colo. 149, 365 P.2d 39 (1961).

Hearing not required by delay where not oppressive or arbitrary. Where the record does not disclose any objection to a delay made by the defendant at the time of trial and the defendant's motion under this rule does not set forth any facts showing that the delay was in any manner oppressive or arbitrary, that he was in any way deprived of any defense, or that any witness was unavailable, then under such circumstances, the court is not required to hold an evidentiary hearing. Valdez v. People, 174 Colo. 268, 483 P.2d 1333 (1971).

Attack on credibility of witnesses for the state is a matter not reviewable by motion under this rule, since it does not raise a constitutional question. Taylor v. People, 155 Colo. 15, 392 P.2d 294 (1964).

Nor is admissibility of exhibit based on alleged lack of foundation. The issue as to the admissibility of an exhibit based on an alleged lack of foundation not based on any constitutional ground is not one which can form the basis for relief under section (c). Walters v. People, 166 Colo. 90, 441 P.2d 647 (1968).

Tactical error regarding trial strategy insufficient basis for relief. Where counsel makes an informed decision regarding trial strategy and offers several theories of defense, only one of which is challenged as having been ineffectively presented at trial, this tactical error does not provide the necessary basis for postconviction relief. People v. Stroup, 624 P.2d 913 (Colo. App. 1980).

As are, generally, errors in jury instructions. As a general rule, errors in jury instructions do not constitute fundamental error that would provide a basis for collateral attack. People v. Shearer, 181 Colo. 237, 508 P.2d 1249 (1973).

And failure to appoint counsel on appeal. The failure to appoint counsel to carry an appeal does not authorize, or even permit, the setting aside of a judgment and sentence under this rule. Rather, the proper remedy is another request that he be appointed counsel to examine the trial record. Cruz v. People, 157 Colo. 479, 405 P.2d 213 (1965), cert. denied, 383 U.S. 915, 86 S. Ct. 905, 15 L. Ed. 2d 669 (1966).

3. Plea Bargaining and Disparate Sentences.

Allegation of plea bargaining, standing alone, is not sufficient upon which to base a charge of coercion of a guilty plea. Smith v. People, 162 Colo. 558, 428 P.2d 69 (1967).

Due process not denied where judge considers truthfulness of defendant's presentence statements. It is not a denial of due process for a judge, in connection with sentencing procedure, to consider the truthfulness of voluntary statements made by the defendant at a presentence hearing. People v. Quarles, 182 Colo. 321, 512 P.2d 1240 (1973).

And relief cannot be given for disparity in sentences. A defendant is not entitled to relief under section (c) based on a lack of equal protection of the law due to the disparity of the sentences between himself and a codefendant. People v. Jenkins, 180 Colo. 35, 501 P.2d 742 (1972).

Nor where defendant alleges that prison conditions constitute cruel and unusual punishment. The defendant's allegations that conditions at a prison constitute cruel and unusual punishment, making his sentence more onerous than that contemplated by the sentencing judge, do not present a claim for relief under this rule. People v. Sundstrom, 638 P.2d 831 (Colo. App. 1981).

Defendant need not be advised on right to remain silent in competency evaluation for a postconviction motion under section (c) if the evaluation is not being used to establish guilt. No self-incrimination issue exists, and procedural safeguards of § 16-8-117 do not apply because defendant already confessed, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced. People v. Karpierz, 165 P.3d 753 (Colo. App. 2006).

Retrospective competency determination for a postconviction motion under section (c) was sufficient because the postconviction court had access to three contemporaneous competency evaluations of the defendant and transcripts of the plea and sentencing hearings, which contained defendant's statements to the court. The fact that the postconviction court did so five years later does not invalidate its findings. People v. Pendleton, 2015 COA 154, 374 P.3d 509.

4. Failure to Take Appeal.

Mere failure to take appeal cannot support collateral attack. The mere failure, or even neglect, to take an appeal, ''standing alone'', whether excusable or not, raises no constitutional question, and, hence, does not support a collateral attack. Haines v. People, 169 Colo. 136, 454 P.2d 595 (1969); People v. Rhorer, 946 P.2d 503 (Colo. App. 1997), rev'd on other grounds, 967 P.2d 147 (Colo. 1998).

Unless party precluded from appealing. Where a party has not availed himself of the normal appeal procedure, unless he has been effectively precluded from doing so, he cannot thereafter seize upon this remedy in order to seek relief from alleged grievances which are properly the subject of an appeal. Taylor v. People, 155 Colo. 15, 392 P.2d 294 (1964).

Or where true prejudice to petitioner. Where a petitioner's time to sue out an appeal has long since passed and he has effectively and knowingly waived his right to file a motion for a new trial, he cannot, in the absence of any showing of true prejudice which could bring him under this rule, be heard to complain that his waiver had a legal effect he did not then contemplate. Peirce v. People, 158 Colo. 81, 404 P.2d 843 (1965).

E. Motion and Hearing.

1. When Hearing Granted.

If allegations set forth proper grounds for relief, court must grant prompt hearing. Patterson v. Hampton, 355 F.2d 470 (10th Cir. 1966).

If a motion under section (c) sets forth facts constituting grounds for relief from a sentence, a prompt hearing by the trial court must be granted, unless the motions, files, and records satisfactorily show that the prisoner is not entitled to relief. Allen v. People, 157 Colo. 582, 404 P.2d 266 (1965); Roberts v. People, 158 Colo. 76, 404 P.2d 848 (1965); Coleman v. People, 174 Colo. 94, 482 P.2d 378 (1971).

When defense counsel's ineffective assistance deprives defendant of a hearing on the merits of his or her postconviction claim, the remedy is to provide such a hearing. Thus, vindication of this statutory right trumps society's interest in the finality of convictions. People v. Valdez, 178 P.3d 1269 (Colo. App. 2007).

Even when the record clearly demonstrates that postconviction counsel was ineffective in representing defendant through counsel's delay, proof of acquiescence could show defendant abandoned an ineffective assistance of counsel claim or waived the right to effective assistance of counsel. People v. Valdez, 178 P.3d 1269 (Colo. App. 2007).

Whether a waiver of effective assistance of counsel was voluntary is a question of fact for the trial court. People v. Valdez, 178 P.3d 1269 (Colo. App. 2007).

The allegation that defense counsel failed to inform defendant of his or her right to appeal plus the fact that the court did not advise the defendant of his or her right to appeal is sufficient to warrant an evidentiary hearing. People v. Boespflug, 107 P.3d 1118 (Colo. App. 2004).

Evidentiary hearing not required where only legal issues to be decided by judge. An evidentiary hearing is not required under this rule where the motion, files, and record present only issues of law, or where the motion itself fails to specify the facts supporting the constitutional claim. People v. Trujillo, 190 Colo. 497, 549 P.2d 1312 (1976); People v. Johnson, 195 Colo. 350, 578 P.2d 226 (1978).

Hearing unnecessary, and motion dismissed, where record shows no entitlement to relief. A motion under this rule may be dismissed without a hearing in the case where the motion, the files, and the record show to the satisfaction of the court that the prisoner is not entitled to relief. Whitman v. People, 170 Colo. 189, 460 P.2d 767 (1969).

This rule permits a trial judge to deny the motion without granting a hearing, but only in those cases where the motion, the files, and the record in the case clearly establish that the allegations presented in the defendant's motion are without merit and do not warrant postconviction relief. People v. Hutton, 183 Colo. 388, 517 P.2d 392 (1973); People v. Breaman, 924 P.2d 1139 (Colo. App. 1996).

Where the motion and the record of the case show, to the satisfaction of the court, that the prisoner is not entitled to relief, a hearing is not necessary. People v. Velarde, 200 Colo. 374, 616 P.2d 104 (1980).

A motion under section (c) may be dismissed without a hearing if the motion, the files, and the record clearly establish that the defendant is not entitled to relief. People v. Hartkemeyer, 843 P.2d 92 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Ruiz, 935 P.2d 68 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Mayes, 981 P.2d 1106 (Colo. App. 1999); People v. Moriarity, 8 P.3d 566 (Colo. App. 2000); People v. Martinez, 36 P.3d 201 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Salinas, 55 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Vieyra, 169 P.3d 205 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court did not err in failing to grant defendant a hearing where the court referred only to information in the motion, record, and files in denying defendant's motion. People v. Fernandez, 53 P.3d 773 (Colo. App. 2002).

An investigator's report attached to the prosecution's response to a motion under this rule is not a pleading as contemplated by section (c)(3)(V). Therefore, the court cannot consider it in denying the motion without a hearing. People v. Smith, 2017 COA 12, 413 P.3d 195.

Although the court may, after considering the motion and supporting documents, deny a motion pursuant to Crim. P. 35 without a hearing, the court may not grant the motion without a hearing. People v. Davis, 849 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 871 P.2d 769 (Colo. 1994).

The court is required to allow the public defender's office to respond to a defendant's request for counsel during a postconviction hearing. People v. Higgins, 2017 COA 57, 413 P.3d 298.

The district court erred by departing from the postconviction relief procedure outlined in sections (c)(3)(IV) and (c)(3)(V) by sending a copy of defendant's postconviction motion to the prosecution and, after receiving the prosecution's response, denying the motion without a hearing and without response from the public defender's office. People v. Higgins, 2017 COA 57, 413 P.3d 298.

Under section (c)(3)(V), a defendant need not both request appointment of an attorney and object to the court's failure to allow the public defender to respond to preserve a claim that the district court erred by not sending the motion to the public defender's office. A defendant need only request appointed counsel in a section (c) motion to preserve such a claim. People v. Higgins, 2017 COA 57, 413 P.3d 298.

Court of appeals erred in vacating respondent's guilty plea based upon allegations contained in his or her section (c) motion. However, since the allegations, if true, may entitle respondent to relief, the district court must conduct an evidentiary hearing to ascertain the veracity of respondent's claims. People v. Simpson, 69 P.3d 79 (Colo. 2003).

Before accepting a defendant's guilty plea, a trial court must adequately advise the defendant regarding a mandatory parole period. Appropriate remedy is to remand for a hearing to determine if defendant was aware of a mandatory parole term and, if not, whether he nevertheless would have pled guilty. People v. Calderon, 992 P.2d 1201 (Colo. App. 1999).

2. Sufficiency of Allegations.

Bald allegation of constitutional error is sufficient for review when specific facts are not pleaded to support the claim. People v. Bruebaker, 189 Colo. 219, 539 P.2d 1277 (1975).

Bare allegations of incompetence or coercion are not sufficient to entitle a defendant to an evidentiary hearing in section (c) proceeding. Von Pickrell v. People, 163 Colo. 591, 431 P.2d 1003 (1967); Bradley v. People, 175 Colo. 146, 485 P.2d 875 (1971).

Bare allegations of incompetency of counsel are not sufficient to entitle a defendant to an evidentiary hearing in a proceeding under section (c). Moore v. People, 174 Colo. 570, 485 P.2d 114 (1971); People v. Osorio, 170 P.3d 796 (Colo. App. 2007).

Bare assertions of mental exhaustion on the part of the defendant because of a series of continuances resulting in less than a month's delay is not equivalent to mental incompetence. Bradley v. People, 175 Colo. 146, 485 P.2d 875 (1971).

And evidentiary hearings will not be granted on vague conclusional charges. DeBaca v. District Court, 163 Colo. 516, 431 P.2d 763 (1967).

As where motion alleges sentence is "illegal" in violation of fourth and fifth amendments. It is impossible to glean from a motion any clear indication of how petitioner's constitutional rights may have been violated in connection with his conviction and sentence in the trial court where the motion does no more than allege that the sentence of the trial court was ''illegal'' and should be vacated because it was imposed in ''violation of the fourth and fifth amendments'', as such a motion contains no exposition of any facts from which a trial court could detect any basis for unconstitutional action or inaction. Hooker v. People, 173 Colo. 226, 477 P.2d 376 (1970).

Specific facts to support the claim must appear in petition for postconviction relief. DeBaca v. District Court, 163 Colo. 516, 431 P.2d 763 (1967).

A defendant need only assert facts that, if true, would provide a basis for relief to warrant a hearing. People v. Simpson, 69 P.3d 79 (Colo. 2003).

Petitioner must allege ultimate facts with particularity. The petitioner has the burden to allege with particularity ultimate facts which support a conclusion that a judicial proceeding is illegal or irregular. Melton v. People, 157 Colo. 169, 401 P.2d 605 (1965), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 1014, 86 S. Ct. 624, 15 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1966).

Motion for section (c) review is insufficient where it does not specify facts which constitute the basis for the unconstitutional charge. DeBaca v. People, 170 Colo. 415, 462 P.2d 496 (1969).

Motion that fails to contain sufficient allegations to support the claim asserted as the basis for relief may be dismissed for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. People v. Bossert, 772 P.2d 618 (Colo. 1989).

And, failing specific facts, no hearing. Failing specific facts to support a claim, no issue is raised which demands an evidentiary hearing. DeBaca v. District Court, 163 Colo. 516, 431 P.2d 763 (1967).

If the motion contains no allegations of facts upon which relief can be granted, there is no requirement that an evidentiary hearing be had or that an attorney be appointed to represent the defendant. Kostal v. People, 167 Colo. 317, 447 P.2d 536 (1968); People v. Lyons, 196 Colo. 384, 585 P.2d 916 (1978).

And motion, and relief, denied. In a proceeding to compel the trial court to grant the defendant a free transcript of all proceedings had in connection with his criminal conviction, such may be refused where the defendant fails to allege sufficient facts which would warrant the granting of the transcript or which would warrant the granting of relief under section (c). Valdez v. District Court, 171 Colo. 436, 467 P.2d 825 (1970).

A motion for review in the trial court as contemplated by the provisions of this rule is insufficient and may be summarily denied where it does not specify the facts which constitute the basis for the unconstitutional charge. Hooker v. People, 173 Colo. 226, 477 P.2d 376 (1970); People v. Rodriguez, 914 P.2d 230 (Colo. 1996).

However, that prisoner's factual allegations seem unbelievable or improbable is not the test set forth in this rule for determining whether a hearing should or should not be afforded the prisoner; unless the motion itself, the files, or the record of the case show that the prisoner is not entitled to relief, he must be given an opportunity to support his allegations with evidence presented at a hearing. Roberts v. People, 158 Colo. 76, 404 P.2d 848 (1965).

Court of appeals erred in vacating respondent's guilty plea based upon allegations contained in his or her section (c) motion. However, since the allegations, if true, may entitle respondent to relief, the district court must conduct an evidentiary hearing to ascertain the veracity of respondent's claims. People v. Simpson, 69 P.3d 79 (Colo. 2003).

Court may dismiss a motion without a hearing if the motion, the files, and the record clearly establish the right to relief. People v. Simons, 826 P.2d 382 (Colo. App. 1991).

Defendant must allege with particularity in the motion that a present need exists for the relief sought such as the applicant may be disadvantaged in obtaining parole under a later sentence. People v. Santisteven, 868 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1993).

Denial of free transcript not an abuse of discretion. Court did not abuse its discretion when it denied a request for free use of a transcript when an indigent defendant failed to demonstrate that he may be entitled to relief under section (c) and that the transcript might contain facts that substantiate his claim. Jurgevich v. District Ct., 907 P.2d 565 (Colo. 1995).

3. Contemporaneous Objection and Waiver.

Like habeas corpus, proceeding under this rule governed by equitable principles. This rule affords a convicted person the remedies which are available through a writ of habeas corpus, and like the federal habeas corpus proceeding, a proceeding under this rule is governed by equitable principles. People v. Trujillo, 190 Colo. 497, 549 P.2d 1312 (1976); People v. Bravo, 692 P.2d 325 (Colo. App. 1984).

Relief denied where right to counsel waived at trial. A trial court properly denies postconviction relief when the defendant knowingly waived his right to be represented by counsel at trial. Martinez v. People, 166 Colo. 132, 442 P.2d 422, cert. denied, 393 U.S. 990, 89 S. Ct. 474, 21 L. Ed. 2d 453 (1968).

Rule is not designed to eliminate the requirement for contemporaneous objection and certain rights not raised at trial will be considered waived. Morse v. People, 180 Colo. 49, 501 P.2d 1328 (1972).

Failure to raise search and seizure issue at trial tantamount to waiver. The contemporaneous objection rule applies to search and seizure issues, and the failure to raise the objection of an illegal search and seizure by proper objection at the trial level is tantamount to a waiver, in which case a trial court properly denies a motion for relief under section (c) based thereon. Brown v. People, 162 Colo. 406, 426 P.2d 764 (1967).

As is failure to raise identification issue. Where there never was an issue raised in the trial as to the identification of defendant, this is a contrived issue, and a trial court is correct in refusing an evidentiary hearing based on petitioner's objection to lineup procedures. Whitman v. People, 170 Colo. 189, 460 P.2d 767 (1969).

And failure to allege lack of speedy trial in motion to dismiss. Where the defendant claims that he pleaded guilty because he was promised that after he had entered his plea the trial court would consider a motion to dismiss for lack of a speedy trial, but makes no such allegation in his motion to dismiss, and there is nothing in the record which could even lead to the inference that such a promise might have been made, the court will not consider the argument. Wixson v. People, 175 Colo. 348, 487 P.2d 809 (1971).

One who pleads guilty cannot claim search and seizure illegal. One who pleads guilty is not in a position to successfully move for vacation of judgment on claims of an alleged illegal search and seizure. Von Pickrell v. People, 163 Colo. 591, 431 P.2d 1003 (1967).

No issue exists as to legality of plea bargain where sentence given vacated. Where the defendant first admitted his guilt upon being promised a minimum sentence prior to his first sentencing, but, upon being given more than that amount of time, his first sentence is vacated, the issue of the legality of his first plea bargain no longer exists in a subsequent motion. James v. People, 162 Colo. 577, 427 P.2d 878 (1967).

4. Burden of Proof.

Legality of prior judgment and proceedings presumed. When attacking a conviction and sentence by a motion under this rule, the legality of the judgment and the regularity of the proceedings leading up to the judgment are presumed. Melton v. People, 157 Colo. 169, 401 P.2d 605 (1965), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 1014, 86 S. Ct. 624, 15 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1966); Lamb v. People, 174 Colo. 441, 484 P.2d 798 (1971).

When a defendant attacks a conviction and sentence by a motion under section (c), the legality of the judgment and the regularity of the proceedings leading up to the judgment are presumed. People v. Brewer, 648 P.2d 167 (Colo. App. 1982).

Burden of proof of allegations in a section (c) motion rests with petitioner. Bresnahan v. People, 175 Colo. 286, 487 P.2d 551 (1971); Bresnahan v. Patterson, 352 F. Supp. 1180 (D. Colo. 1973); People v. McClellan, 183 Colo. 176, 515 P.2d 1127 (1973); Kailey v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 807 P.2d 563 (Colo. 1991); People v. Fleming, 867 P.2d 119 (Colo. App. 1993), rev'd on other grounds, 900 P.2d 19 (Colo. 1995); People v. Sickich, 935 P.2d 70 (Colo. App. 1996).

Pleas of guilty induced by threats or promises are not valid, but upon postconviction procedures to set aside such a plea, it becomes the burden of the petitioner to establish that the plea was entered because of coercion. Normand v. People, 165 Colo. 509, 440 P.2d 282 (1968).

The burden is on the defendant section (c) hearing to show that his plea was entered because of coercion. People v. Brewer, 648 P.2d 167 (Colo. App. 1982).

And measure of proof on motion is ordinarily proof by preponderance of evidence. Bresnahan v. People, 175 Colo. 286, 487 P.2d 551 (1971); People v. Malouff, 721 P.2d 159 (Colo. App. 1986).

The burden is upon the defendant to establish by at least the preponderance of the evidence the allegations of his section (c) motion. Lamb v. People, 174 Colo. 441, 484 P.2d 798 (1971); People v. McClellan, 183 Colo. 176, 515 P.2d 1127 (1973).

In a Crim. P. 35(c) proceeding, the legality of the judgment and the regularity of the proceedings leading up to the judgment are presumed. The burden is upon the movant to establish by a preponderance of the evidence the allegations of the motion for post-conviction relief. If the evidence supports the district court's findings and order, the decision will not be disturbed on review. People v. Hendricks, 972 P.2d 1041 (Colo. App. 1998), rev'd on other grounds, 10 P.3d 1231 (Colo. 2000).

District court properly required that petitioner who improperly filed habeus corpus petition establish entitlement to relief under this rule by a preponderance of evidence since the motion should have been treated by the court as a motion under section (c)(2) of this rule. Kailey v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 807 P.2d 563 (Colo. 1991).

State is under no duty to present any evidence if it believes that petitioner has failed to meet that burden. Bresnahan v. Patterson, 352 F. Supp. 1180 (D. Colo. 1973).

Court need not grant defendant's motion because it denies state's motion for dismissal at the conclusion of the defendant's evidence. Bresnahan v. People, 175 Colo. 286, 487 P.2d 551 (1971).

As denial afforded no effect on whether defendant meets burden. A state motion to dismiss and its denial can be afforded no effect as to whether the defendant meets his burden under this rule. Bresnahan v. People, 175 Colo, 286, 487 P.2d 551 (1971).

5. Evidence Examined.

Section (c) hearing criminal, not civil. A section (c) hearing is but one phase of a criminal proceeding, and it is not a civil proceeding. Bresnahan v. District Court, 164 Colo. 263, 434 P.2d 419 (1967).

Trial judge may utilize the complete trial record insofar as possible and pertinent when he rules on a section (c) motion. Bresnahan v. People, 175 Colo. 286, 487 P.2d 551 (1971).

And judge should identify all documents before him at time of trial. The trial judge should identify for the purposes of the record in the section (c) hearing all documents, letters, and reports which were before him as of the time he permitted the defendant to plead at trial, such identification should be made without regard to the ultimate admissibility of the particular document at the section (c) hearing, and the documents thus identified should then be furnished to counsel for petitioners for the purpose of inspection, copying, and use by counsel in the section (c) hearing as applicable rules permit. Bresnahan v. District Court, 164 Colo. 263, 434 P.2d 419 (1967).

However, rule's purpose cannot be disposed of by reference to trial record alone. The purpose of a section (c) hearing is to take evidence pertinent to the allegations, which cannot be disposed of by reference to the trial record alone. Bresnahan v. People, 175 Colo. 286, 487 P.2d 551 (1971).

And absence of transcript of prior hearing not necessarily equivalent to silent record. The absence of a transcript of a prior providency hearing is not necessarily equivalent to a silent record at the postconviction review hearing, and whether a knowing and voluntary guilty plea was entered by the defendant may be determined by any evidence adduced at his section (c) hearing. People v. Brewer, 648 P.2d 167 (Colo. App. 1982).

Taking of depositions governed by criminal rules and statutory provision. The taking of any deposition to be used in a section (c) hearing is governed by the rules on criminal procedure and the Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without a State in Criminal Proceedings, contained in § 16-9-201 et seq. Bresnahan v. District Court, 164 Colo. 263, 434 P.2d 419 (1967).

And so subpoenas may be served on out-of-state residents to compel attendance. That the Rules of Civil Procedure do not govern the taking of depositions in connection with a section (c) hearing is without prejudice to the right of a petitioner to serve subpoenas in accordance with the Rules of Criminal Procedure and § 16-9-201 et seq. on out-of-state residents and thereby compel their attendance at a section (c) hearing. Bresnahan v. District Court, 164 Colo. 263, 434 P.2d 419 (1967).

Defendant's attorney for prior hearing and sentencing may testify in postconviction relief hearing. Regarding the voluntariness of a guilty plea, the defendant's knowledge of the elements of the crime may be developed in a postconviction relief hearing, and the defendant's attorney for the prior hearing and sentencing may testify in the postconviction relief hearing that the defendant knew and understood all the elements of the crime charged. People v. Keenan, 185 Colo. 317, 524 P.2d 604 (1974).

6. Role of Petitioner and Judge.

Petitioner's presence generally necessary. If an evidentiary hearing under section (c) is required, then the petitioner's presence would be necessary under most circumstances. Hooker v. People, 173 Colo. 226, 477 P.2d 376 (1970).

And assistance of counsel essential, unless claim wholly unfounded. An accused has a right to counsel at every stage of the proceeding, and, in the absence of a knowing and intelligent waiver, the assistance of counsel is essential in postconviction proceedings, unless the asserted claim for relief is wholly unfounded. People v. Hubbard, 184 Colo. 243, 519 P.2d 945 (1974).

Where no hearing is necessary, no error is committed where petitioner is absent. Hooker v. People, 173 Colo. 226, 477 P.2d 376 (1970).

Or where case is submitted on agreed statements of facts. Applications for postconviction relief can appropriately be decided on the merits without a plenary evidentiary hearing and without the expense, risk, and inconvenience of transporting the applicants, if in custody, from the prison to the courthouse; such a summary disposition is proper in all cases where there is no factual issue and where the case is submitted on an agreed statement of facts. Dabbs v. People, 175 Colo. 273, 486 P.2d 1053 (1971).

Rule contemplates hearing wherever possible before trial judge who presided over the case. A disqualification because he is familiar with what occurred at the trial renders the rule anomalous; familiarity with the circumstances surrounding the trial does not render the judge a material witness. Bresnahan v. Luby, 160 Colo. 455, 418 P.2d 171 (1966).

Trial court erred in not holding a hearing on defendant's motions and instead directing defense counsel to conduct an investigation of pertinent allegations and accepting counsel's conclusion that they lacked merit. Such procedure was inappropriate first because defense counsel should not be placed in a position of warranting the validity of his client's assertions, and second because a court in passing upon the validity of a party's assertions must reach its own independent evaluation of such assertions. People v. Breaman, 924 P.2d 1139 (Colo. App. 1996).

Weight and credibility given evidence within court's province. The weight and credibility to be given to the testimony of witnesses in a section (c) hearing is within the province of the trial court. Lamb v. People, 174 Colo. 441, 484 P.2d 798 (1971).

Where the trial court found polygraph evidence to be of little weight, it was fully entitled to make such finding as the trier of facts on a motion for postconviction relief. People v. Armstead, 179 Colo. 387, 501 P.2d 472 (1972).

Under this rule, the trial court determines all issues of fact and law. Swift v. People, 174 Colo. 259, 488 P.2d 80 (1971).

And makes findings and conclusions. In a section (c) hearing the trial court is bound to determine the issues and make findings of fact and conclusions of law. Bresnahan v. People, 175 Colo. 286, 487 P.2d 551 (1971).

Question of whether defendant's burden of proof is met is answered by findings made by the trial judge. Bresnahan v. People, 175 Colo. 286, 487 P.2d 551 (1971).

Page-long comments, analysis, and conclusions by the trial judge are sufficient to establish that the requirement of this rule, that findings and conclusions must be made, was met. People v. Crater, 182 Colo. 248, 512 P.2d 623 (1973).

Judge's findings are based upon trial record and evidence taken as postconviction hearing. Bresnahan v. People, 175 Colo. 286, 487 P.2d 551 (1971).

Findings and conclusions required under rule must sufficiently set forth basis of ruling. People v. Crater, 182 Colo. 248, 512 P.2d 623 (1973); People v. Breaman, 924 P.2d 1139 (Colo. App. 1996).

Unconstitutional to place undue emphasis on findings not supported by record. A denial of due process under this rule will exist when the trial court places undue emphasis on findings not supported by the record, and the denial is compounded when the trial court arbitrarily refuses to permit defense counsel to point out to the court the fact that matters not in evidence are being considered. Noland v. People, 175 Colo. 6, 485 P.2d 112 (1971).

Trial court lacked jurisdiction to entertain motion to reconsider order denying motion under section (b) filed more than 120 days after the date of sentencing. People v. Gresl, 89 P.3d 499 (Colo. App. 2003).

F. Determination.

1. Relief Granted.

Resentencing where long-time intervals and defendant's status changes from juvenile to adult. Long-time intervals between the arrest and the making of the charge, between the arrest and the arraignment, and between the arrest and time of the appointment of an attorney to represent a defendant require a reversal and a remand of a case to the trial court for the purpose of vacating its prior sentence and resentencing a defendant when defendant's sentence was adversely affected by a change in status from juvenile to adult. England v. People, 175 Colo. 236, 486 P.2d 1055 (1971).

New trial required where defendant's trial attorneys fail to present any favorable evidence. Where the defendant fails to receive a fair trial because of the failure of his trial attorneys to present any of the evidence favorable to the defendant which was clearly available and discoverable by even rudimentary investigation, and as a result the damaging prosecution's version of the incident is allowed to remain uncontradicted and unimpeached, even though there was evidence to challenge it, the defendant was denied his constitutional right to a fair trial, which requires that the defendant's conviction be vacated and that he be afforded a new trial. People v. Moya, 180 Colo. 228, 504 P.2d 352 (1972).

Inquiry into question of effectiveness of counsel. Where guilty plea subjected defendant to deportation proceedings, inquiry must begin with initial determination that defense counsel in criminal case was aware that his client was an alien, and therefore was reasonably required to research relevant immigration law. People v. Pozo, 746 P.2d 523 (Colo. 1987).

Guilty plea vacated where no explanation of elements of charge given defendant. Where the record of the hearing held under section (c) is devoid of any evidence that the defendant understood the nature of the charge, and the only explanation of the charge to the defendant was in the wording of the information, which the court did not even read to him, and the court admits on the record that no explanation was given defendant of the elements of the charge, and there is no other indication that he received the requisite knowledge from other sources, his plea of guilty was improperly accepted and had to be vacated. People v. Brown, 187 Colo. 244, 529 P.2d 1338 (1974).

And where plea results in sentence far in excess to that promised. Where a guilty plea results in a sentence far in excess of that which was promised by the district attorney, the prisoner is entitled to have the sentence vacated and to go to trial on a plea of not guilty when he alleges that he has a valid defense to the charge. Roberts v. People, 158 Colo. 76, 404 P.2d 848 (1965).

And violation not remedied by resentencing defendant to same term for lesser offense. Resentencing a defendant years later to substantially the same term for a lesser offense does not remedy the violation of the defendant's right to withdraw his guilty plea or have a determination at the time of the trial whether or not he was guilty ''as charged'' for a greater offense. Burman v. People, 172 Colo. 247, 472 P.2d 121 (1970).

Amended sentence invalid where defendant and attorney not notified and not present. An amended sentence handed down by the trial court is invalid where neither the defendant nor his attorney are notified of resentencing, neither is present, and the substantial rights of defendant are violated by these omissions. People v. Emig, 177 Colo. 174, 493 P.2d 368 (1972).

Where jury not qualified to fix death penalty, entry of life-imprisonment sentence authorized. In a first-degree case, where the United States supreme court affirms the guilty verdict and invalidates the punishment portion of the verdict only because the jury was not constitutionally qualified to fix the death penalty, leaving the sole statutory alternative as to punishment available to the jury that of life imprisonment, the entry by the court of such a judgment is a mere ministerial act within the power and authority of the trial judge under the terms and within the contemplation of section (c). Segura v. District Court, 179 Colo. 20, 498 P.2d 926 (1972).

Defendant cannot serve a county jail sentence while incarcerated in the penitentiary, and, conversely, he cannot serve a penitentiary sentence in the county jail. People v. Emig, 177 Colo. 174, 493 P.2d 368 (1972).

Defendant cannot serve a misdemeanor sentence consecutively to a felony sentence while being held by corrections department. People v. Green, 734 P.2d 616 (Colo. 1987); People v. Battle, 742 P.2d 952 (Colo. App. 1987).

2. Relief Denied.

Where confession's admission harmless error, defendant not prejudiced. Even assuming that a confession was involuntarily made, where its admission is harmless error, there is no prejudice to any substantive right of the petitioner. Melton v. People, 157 Colo. 169, 401 P.2d 605 (1965), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 1014, 86 S. Ct. 624, 15 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1966).

Assistance of counsel effective where no evidence full consideration not given case. The effective assistance of counsel is not denied the defendant where there is no evidence to support the assertion that counsel did not keep defendant informed or that anything but full consideration was given to his case. People v. Crater, 182 Colo. 248, 512 P.2d 623 (1973).

And constitutional for attorney not retained to give postconviction testimony. Postconviction testimony of an attorney contacted, but not retained, on behalf of the defendant discloses no violation of defendant's constitutional right to counsel. LaBlanc v. People, 177 Colo. 250, 493 P.2d 1089 (1972).

Petitioner found not entitled to relief for denial of effective assistance of counsel. People v. Stephenson, 187 Colo. 120, 528 P.2d 1313 (1974).

District court made detailed and extensive findings in determining that, while defense counsel's performance fell below the range of competency expected from him in certain areas, such deficiencies did not result in prejudice to defendant. Therefore, trial court did not err in denying defendant's section (c) motion. People v. Hendricks, 972 P.2d 1041 (Colo. App. 1998), rev'd on other grounds, 10 P.3d 1231 (Colo. 2000).

Even if counsel had presented certain witness's testimony and other evidence of the events surrounding the giving of defendant's statements in a successful effort to suppress them, in light of overwhelming independent evidence that defendant committed this offense, there was no reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different. Similarly, trial court did not err in determining that trial counsel's performance was not deficient in deciding not to raise the issue of defendant's competency. People v. Hendricks, 972 P.2d 1041 (Colo. App. 1998), rev'd on other grounds, 10 P.3d 1231 (Colo. 2000).

Voluntary guilty plea not set aside. A plea of guilty should not be set aside if a factual basis exists for the plea and if the defendant has knowledge of the elements of the crime and enters the plea voluntarily. People v. Hutton, 183 Colo. 388, 517 P.2d 392 (1973).

And plea voluntary where considered, deliberate, advised choice. Where the record indicates a considered, deliberate, advised choice on the part of the defendant to change his plea from not guilty to guilty, the trial court's finding that the guilty plea is voluntary and not coerced is amply supported by the record of the proceedings at the time of the entry of the plea, it not being shown to be otherwise by any evidence presented at the hearing on a section (c) motion. Workman v. People, 174 Colo. 194, 483 P.2d 213 (1971).

And where defendant represented by able counsel and understands elements of charge. Where at all relevant times the defendant was represented by able counsel and neither in his motion to vacate the guilty plea, nor in the hearing thereon conducted under this rule, was there any indication that he did not understand the elements of the charge, the substance of the circumstances surrounding the plea indicates that it was voluntarily made with an understanding of the elements of the charge. People v. Edwards, 186 Colo. 129, 526 P.2d 144 (1974).

Guilty plea upheld where trial judge makes careful and thorough inquiry of defendant. Where the trial court fully complied with the requirements of Crim. P. 11, before granting a defendant's request to withdraw his previous plea and to enter a guilty plea, but the defendant alleges in his Crim. P. 35(c) motion that his plea of guilty was entered because of fear and duress, the plea will be upheld when the record reflects that the trial judge did with care and thoroughness make inquiry of the defendant in order to assure himself that the defendant's act of pleading guilty was his free and voluntary act. Lamb v. People, 174 Colo. 441, 484 P.2d 798 (1971).

Where the record on its face shows that the trial court in a providency hearing advised the petitioner of the possible sentence term, the sentence imposed was within that range, and the trial court did not treat the offense as a second offense, an evidentiary hearing on the petitioner's contention that the sentencing court failed to properly inform him of the possible penalties for crimes to which he entered a guilty plea is not required and the motion for relief will be denied. Hyde v. Hinton, 180 Colo. 324, 505 P.2d 376 (1973).

The failure to advise a defendant of the provisions of mandatory parole after the defendant has entered into a plea agreement and the stipulated sentence and mandatory parole period is less than the maximum sentence the court could have imposed upon the defendant is harmless error, thus the court affirmed the trial court's order summarily denying the defendant's motion under this rule. People v. Munoz, 9 P.3d 1201 (Colo. App. 2000).

Failure to convey a plea offer is deficient performance by defense counsel and a violation of the standard practice that a defense attorney should follow, but the failure did not constitute prejudice against defendant requiring reversal because the record did not show reasonable probability that the defendant would have accepted the offer if it had been timely communicated. People v. Perry, 68 P.3d 472 (Colo. App. 2002).

No credit for presentence jail time where time taken into consideration in sentencing. Where the defendant is sentenced by the judge after the judge is advised of the time that the defendant has spent in jail before the sentence is imposed, where the defendant is advised by the judge at the time sentence is imposed that the time he spent in custody was taken into consideration in determining his sentence, and where the sentence imposed, plus the time spent in custody, is far less than the maximum penalty prescribed by law, the defendant is not entitled to credit for presentence jail time through a postconviction proceeding. People v. Puls, 176 Colo. 71, 489 P.2d 323 (1971).

Failure to provide transcript on appeal found not to prejudice defendant. People v. Shearer, 181 Colo. 237, 508 P.2d 1249 (1973).

The equitable doctrine of laches may be invoked to bar postconviction relief. People v. Bravo, 692 P.2d 325 (Colo. App. 1984).

Defendant pleading guilty was sufficiently informed of mens rea element of the offense of rape by information read to him that contained the term "feloniously" and, therefore, postconviction relief was properly denied. Wilson v. People, 708 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1985).

Present need standard for postconviction relief not established under collateral attack statute for 30-year-old conviction for violations of municipal ordinances. City and County of Denver v. Rhinehart, 742 P.2d 948 (Colo. App. 1987).

The trial court was correct in denying defendant's motion under this rule since defendant, who was extradited to Colorado for trial on two charges, was not entitled to credit in second sentence for time spent in confinement prior to imposition of first sentence, if the first sentence had allowed presentence confinement credit for that period of time. People v. Garcia, 757 P.2d 1110 (Colo. App. 1988).

Court correctly denied section (c) motion and held that no conflict of interest existed to defeat defendant's right to counsel. Public defender represented both the defendant and another person against whom the authorities had no evidence, but whom the defendant had admitted to be a co-participant in the burglary. The court stated that the defendant could not seek to profit from the collapse of a self-created situation. People v. Wood, 844 P.2d 1299 (Colo. App. 1992).

Defendant may not seek review of felony conviction under section (c) because, under the plea agreement, judgment and sentencing did not enter but were deferred. People v. Kazadi, 284 P.3d 70 (Colo. App. 2011), aff'd, 2012 CO 73, 291 P.3d 16; People v. Espino-Paez, 2014 COA 126M, 410 P.3d 548, aff'd, 2017 CO 61, 395 P.3d 786.

When a criminal defendant, who pled guilty to charge, dies while his appeal for relief from his sentence is pending, an abatement of the underlying conviction is not warranted. People v. Rickstrew, 961 P.2d 1139 (Colo. App. 1998).

A witness's exercise of the privilege against self-incrimination does not give rise to a violation of the defendant's right to a fair trial or to present a defense. People v. Coit, 50 P.3d 936 (Colo. App. 2002).

Because the United States supreme court's decision in Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36 (2004), established a procedural, not a substantive, rule and it was not a "watershed" rule, Crawford does not apply retroactively to cases on collateral review where the defendant's conviction became final prior to Crawford. Under prior case law, out-of-court statements properly admitted. People v. Edwards, 101 P.3d 1118 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 129 P.3d 977 (Colo. 2006).

G. Successive Motions.

Repetitive postconviction proceedings with some legal and factual claims not afforded by constitution. Although postconviction relief is grounded upon constitutional principles, it does not afford any person the right to clog the judicial machinery with repetitive postconviction proceedings seeking relief on the same principles of law and the same factual claims. People ex rel. Wyse v. District Court, 180 Colo. 88, 503 P.2d 154 (1972).

Defendant is unauthorized to file successive motions based upon same or similar allegations in the hope that a sympathetic judicial ear may eventually be found. People v. Hubbard, 184 Colo. 243, 519 P.2d 945 (1974).

Especially where defendant fails to seek review of denial of first similar claim. Where the defendant fails to avail himself of the right to have review of the propriety of the trial court's denial of his motion and thereafter files a second motion to vacate in which he reurges the same grounds raised in the first motion, the trial court under section (c), need not entertain such second and successive motion. Henson v. People, 163 Colo. 302, 430 P.2d 475 (1967).

The court is not required to entertain successive motions for similar postconviction relief on behalf of the same prisoner. Graham v. Zavaras, 877 P.2d 363 (Colo. 1994); People v. Harmon, 3 P.3d 480 (Colo. App. 2000).

Standards on successive motions for review. In the case of a successive motion for postconviction review, the appropriate consideration is whether the defendant's constitutional claim has been fully and finally litigated in the prior postconviction proceeding. People v. Billips, 652 P.2d 1060 (Colo. 1982).

The doctrine of res judicata is not an appropriate standard for the resolution of postconviction claims. People v. Billips, 652 P.2d 1060 (Colo. 1982).

Collateral estoppel inapplicable. Although the doctrine of estoppel is as applicable to criminal proceedings as it is to civil proceedings, it is inapplicable in a section (c) proceeding. People v. Wright, 662 P.2d 489 (Colo. App. 1982).

All allegations relating to constitutional violations should be included in single motion. In light of the right to counsel in postconviction proceedings, all allegations relating to the violation of a defendant's constitutional rights should be included in a single section (c) motion. People v. Hubbard, 184 Colo. 243, 519 P.2d 945 (1974).

All allegations relating to the violation of defendant's constitutional rights should be included in a single section (c) motion. People v. Bucci, 184 Colo. 367, 520 P.2d 580 (1974).

And failure to do so results in summary denial of second similar application. The failure of an application to contain all factual and legal contentions will, unless special circumstances exist, ordinarily result in a second application containing such grounds being summarily denied. People v. Scheer, 184 Colo. 15, 518 P.2d 833 (1974).

And prisoner deliberately withholding ground for postconviction relief waives right to second hearing. If a prisoner deliberately withholds one of two grounds for postconviction relief at the time of filing his first application, he may be deemed to have waived his right to a hearing on the second ground in subsequent application. This interpretation is not intended to eliminate any judicial determination on the merits of a prisoner's claims, but rather is to ensure that all claims are considered in one proceeding. People v. Hubbard, 184 Colo. 243, 519 P.2d 945 (1974).

Section (c)(3)(VIII) supersedes prior case law holding that a defendant can raise new postconviction claims in a second section (c) motion if the first section (c) motion was filed pro se. Filing a section (c) motion pro se does not allow a defendant to file a second section (c) motion raising new postconviction claims. People v. Taylor, 2018 COA 175, __ P.3d __.

Second motion dismissed unless failure to include newly-asserted grounds in first motion excusable. If a second or successive motion is filed, it may be summarily dismissed without a hearing unless the trial judge finds that the failure to include newly asserted grounds for relief in the first motion is excusable. People v. Hubbard, 184 Colo. 243, 519 P.2d 945 (1974).

Such as where defendant urges incompetency of counsel representing him in first hearing. Ordinarily, a defendant would be expected to raise the matter of competency of counsel in a section (c) proceeding, but where his trial counsel is still representing him, and this same counsel prepares the motion of a new trial which does not mention the subject and a new counsel then comes into the case, then under these particular circumstances, if the defendant wishes to urge the point of incompetency of his initial counsel, he may attempt to raise the point in a further section (c) proceeding in the trial court. Stone v. People, 174 Colo. 504, 485 P.2d 495 (1971).

Such as where the factual and legal allegations raised in the second motion have not previously been fully and finally decided. People v. Wimer, 681 P.2d 967 (Colo. App. 1983).

In the absence of special circumstances, courts need not consider successive requests for the same relief based on the same or similar allegations on behalf of the same prisoner. People v. Holmes, 819 P.2d 541 (Colo. App. 1991).

Because defendant did not know of the changed double jeopardy standard when the defendant filed his first motion under section (c), the provisions of section (c)(1) mandate that the defendant's application for relief is not barred under the provisions of section (c)(3). People v. Allen, 843 P.2d 97 (Colo. App. 1992).

Defendant's actions in specifically withdrawing those claims from the trial court's consideration at an earlier proceeding which he argues should have been addressed in the second proceeding, constitute an abandonment of those claims. People v. Abeyta, 923 P.2d 318 (Colo. App. 1996).

Defendant's section (c) motion raising cognizable constitutional claims is not successive merely because he had unsuccessfully attempted to raise those claims in his prior appeal. People v. Diaz, 985 P.2d 83 (Colo. App. 1999).

Defendant's postconviction motion based on the voluntariness of his guilty plea as it related to the quality of his counsel was properly denied as successive under section (c)(3)(VII) of this rule, where lengthy evidentiary hearing was held on defendant's Crim. P. 32(d) motion claiming that his plea was not knowing, voluntary, and intelligent due to ineffective assistance of counsel. People v. Vondra, 240 P.3d 493 (Colo. App. 2010).

Missouri v. Seibert, 542 U.S. 600 (2004), not a "watershed rule of criminal procedure". Therefore it is not applied retroactively to defendant's conviction that was final prior to its announcement. Court properly denied hearing on defendant's section (c) motion because it did not meet the exception in section (c)(3)(VI)(b). People v. McDowell, 219 P.3d 332 (Colo. App. 2009).

Subsection (c) does not bar as successive judicial review of parole revocation procedures following appeal to the parole board because the parole statute, § 17-2-201 (4)(b), explicitly provides for judicial review of parole revocation. People v. Melnick, 2019 COA 28, 440 P.3d 1228.

H. Review on Appeal.

Appellate review of decisions made under this rule may be made. Henry v. Tinsley, 344 F.2d 109 (10th Cir. 1965); Ruark v. Tinsley, 350 F.2d 315 (10th Cir. 1965).

Including review of order denying relief. Previously, it was not clear whether an order denying relief sought under this rule was appealable. Nevertheless, denial of such relief can now be appealed. Smith v. Tinsley, 223 F. Supp. 68 (D. Colo. 1963).

An order of a trial court denying a motion to vacate is a final order reviewable on appeal. Henson v. People, 163 Colo. 302, 430 P.2d 475 (1967).

Question raised for first time in postconviction motion properly before appellate court. A question presented on appeal which was raised for the first time in a postconviction motion and has not been previously considered or disposed of on appeal is properly before an appellate court. Trujillo v. People, 178 Colo. 136, 496 P.2d 1026 (1972).

Including matters not raised in new trial motion. While it is true that on appeal an appellate court will not consider a matter not raised in a new trial motion, this constraint does not apply to a section (c) motion. Lucero v. People, 173 Colo. 94, 476 P.2d 257 (1970).

But matters not contained in motion cannot be considered on appeal. The ground that certain exhibits were erroneously received upon trial because of an alleged lack of foundation, not having been contained in the section (c) motion filed in the trial court, cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. Walters v. People, 166 Colo. 90, 441 P.2d 647 (1968).

Issue not raised in motion or hearing not reviewable. An issue not raised in either section (c) motion or at the trial court hearing is not properly before the appellate court for review. People v. McClellan, 183 Colo. 176, 515 P.2d 1127 (1973); People v. Simms, 185 Colo. 214, 523 P.2d 463 (1974).

Relief pursuant to section (b) of this rule is discretionary and the exercise of the sentencing court's discretion is generally not subject to appeal. However, defendant's appeal was not barred where the sentencing court declined to entertain the defendant's motion and exercise its discretion for the reason that it erroneously considered itself bound to impose a sentence to the department of corrections by statute. Shipley v. People, 45 P.3d 1277 (Colo. 2002).

Defendant's claim of statutory violation in imposition of consecutive sentences is barred in postconviction proceeding because it was available to defendant to be raised on his direct appeal and was not raised at that time. People v. Banks, 924 P.2d 1161 (Colo. App. 1996).

To merely charge that a trial proceeding was "unconstitutional" is wholly insufficient as a basis for relief or review in an appellate court. Peirce v. People, 158 Colo, 81, 404 P.2d 843 (1965).

Where motion specifies grounds for relief, trial court conducts hearing before appeal determined. Before the merits of an appeal can be determined, it might be necessary first that the trial court conduct a hearing into the merits of the allegations made in the petition for section (c) relief where the motion sets forth facts constituting proper grounds for relief. Roberts v. People, 158 Colo. 76, 404 P.2d 848 (1965); Black v. People, 166 Colo. 358, 443 P.2d 732 (1968).

And hearing should be granted where facts supporting claim appear outside record. Where the very basis of defendant's claim of error is that the trial court should have granted an evidentiary hearing because the facts he alleges in his motion do not appear in the record, then, however regular the proceedings might appear from the trial transcript, it still might be the case that the petitioner did not make an intelligent and understanding waiver of his constitutional rights at trial if the facts on which petitioner's claim is predicated are outside the record, and the court should have granted evidentiary hearing. Von Pickrell v. People, 163 Colo. 591, 431 P.2d 1003 (1967).

Otherwise, state to furnish transcript on appeal to justify trial court's determination. Where the defendant asserts that his plea was involuntary for reasons not appearing on the record, it is incumbent on the state to provide the appellate court with a transcript which shows that the trial court at the time of a guilty plea made such inquiry as to justify its determination without a hearing on a section (c) petition that defendant's plea was voluntarily made. Von Pickrell v. People, 163 Colo. 591, 431 P.2d 1003 (1967).

Trial court's judgment not disturbed where evidence amply supports findings. Where the evidence before the trial court amply supports the findings and holding of the trial court, the judgment of the trial court on a section (c) motion will not be disturbed on review. Lamb v. People, 174 Colo. 441, 484 P.2d 798 (1971).

Vacation of guilty plea not upset absent extreme circumstances. When a trial judge holds a hearing on a section (c) motion and determines after hearing the testimony that the interests of justice require the vacation of a guilty plea and that a trial be held on the question of guilt or innocence, this determination will not be upset by an appellate court, except in extreme circumstances. People v. Gantner, 173 Colo. 92, 476 P.2d 998 (1970).

Denial of motion upheld where sufficient evidence to convict the defendant is found. People v. Grass, 180 Colo. 346, 505 P.2d 1301 (1973).

Including testimony of defendant at postconviction hearing concerning truth of probation report. Where a motion under this rule asserts that the defendant was denied the opportunity to confront the witnesses furnishing the information contained in a probation report which he contends was incorrect and prejudicial to him, but at the hearing on this motion defendant was permitted to testify concerning the truth of the matters contained in the probation report and to give his explanation of them, the record supports the trial court's denial of the motion. Wolford v. People, 178 Colo. 203, 496 P.2d 1011 (1972).

Trial court errs in not setting aside conviction where massive, prejudicial publicity. A trial court errs in determining that it cannot compare present day standards of newspaper conduct to past happenings in denying a motion under section (c) to set aside the conviction of a defendant, since the line of cases culminating in Sheppard v. Maxwell, 384 U.S. 333, 86 S. Ct. 1507, 16 L. Ed. 2d 600 (1966), hold that the publicity can be so ''massive, pervasive, and prejudicial'' that the denial of a fair trial may be presumed, and the court therefore also erred in holding that a showing must be made that the jurors were actually and directly affected by the publicity. Walker v. People, 169 Colo. 467, 458 P.2d 238 (1969).

And order denying motion reversed where rule on judicial plea-bargain inquiry not followed. The failure of a trial court to follow the requirements of Crim. P. 11, as to the inquiry to be conducted before the acceptance of a plea necessitates a reversal of the order of the trial court denying defendant's section (c) motion. Westendorf v. People, 171 Colo. 123, 464 P.2d 866 (1970).

Denial of motion reversed with directions to conduct new hearing. People v. Burger, 180 Colo. 415, 505 P.2d 1308 (1973).

Trial court erred in denying defendant's motion where defendant was not advised that, in addition to any term of incarceration, a separate and additional term of parole was a required consequence of his plea. People v. Espinoza, 985 P.2d 68 (Colo. App. 1999).

Setting definite execution date in order granting stay of execution not unconstitutional. The fact that an appellate court sets definite execution date in order granting a stay of execution pending the determination of postconviction relief is not ''suggestion of predetermination'' in violation of due process and does not constitute an implied direction to deny petitioner relief. Bell v. Patterson, 279 F. Supp. 760 (D. Colo. 1968), aff'd, 402 F.2d 394 (10th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 955, 91 S. Ct. 2279, 29 L. Ed. 2d 865 (1971).

Court of appeals has jurisdiction to decide if trial court erred in granting a new trial under postconviction relief motion when issues in motion were brought pursuant to the ''other remedies'' portion of this rule. People v. Naranjo, 821 P.2d 836 (Colo. App. 1991).

An order of a trial court granting or denying a motion filed under section (c) is a final order reviewable on appeal. Such order becomes final after the period in which to perfect an appeal expires. People v. Janke, 852 P.2d 1271 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Ovalle, 51 P.3d 1073 (Colo. App. 2002).

Since an appellate court is not in as good a position as the trial court to make factual findings, the court of appeals erred in vacating respondent's conviction where the trial court denied the section (c) motion without a hearing. People v. Simpson, 69 P.3d 79 (Colo. 2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's section (c) motion without an evidentiary hearing on ineffective assistance of counsel claim. The defendant received sufficient notice from the Crim. P. 11 advisement form and had an affirmative obligation to request clarification at the providency hearing. People v. DiGuglielmo, 33 P.3d 1248 (Colo. App. 2001).

Once a final order under this rule is entered, the only means by which a trial court may alter, amend, or vacate such order is by an appropriate motion under C.R.C.P. 59 or 60. Accordingly, people's argument that the doctrine of law of the case authorizes trial court to reconsider final order is rejected. People v. Janke, 852 P.2d 1271 (Colo. App. 1992).

I. Federal Habeas Corpus.

In Colorado, habeas corpus is not a substitute for review by an appeal. Martinez v. Patterson, 382 F.2d 1002 (10th Cir. 1967).

Federal relief denied where state remedies under this rule not exhausted. A federal court will deny habeas corpus where one fails to exhaust state remedies by failing to seek state review of a trial court's denial of a motion under this rule. Breckenridge v. Patterson, 374 F.2d 857 (10th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 389 U.S. 801, 88 S. Ct. 9, 19 L. Ed. 2d 56 (1967); Kanan v. Denver Dist. Court, 438 F.2d 521 (10th Cir. 1971).

Where the petitioner fails to raise any of his allegations of error in state courts either by direct appeal or by means of this rule, he has not exhausted his state remedies on these issues and cannot obtain habeas corpus relief from the federal courts. Thompson v. Ricketts, 500 F. Supp. 688 (D. Colo. 1980).

But mere availability of possible remedy under this rule cannot preclude federal writ of habeas corpus. Smith v. Tinsley, 223 F. Supp. 68 (D. Colo. 1963). But see Breckenridge v. Patterson, 374 F.2d 857 (10th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 389 U.S. 801, 88 S. Ct. 9, 19 L. Ed. 2d 56 (1967); Kanan v. Denver Dist. Court, 438 F.2d 521 (10th Cir. 1971).

Section (c)(3)(VI)'s bar on claims raised and resolved in a prior appeal or postconviction proceeding has no effect on the availability of federal habeas corpus review where new trial motion was based on the same facts as a later-raised claim under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), but the Brady claim was not raised in the new trial motion. Lebere v. Abbott, 732 F.3d 1224 (10th Cir. 2013).

Postconviction hearing unnecessary where state supreme court decision already controls question. Where the Colorado supreme court reaches a conclusion on the substantive issue stating it in such a way that under ordinary circumstances a trial court would feel bound by the decision, even though it is only dictum, and would therefore deny a motion made pursuant to section (c), on the grounds that the Colorado supreme court has already decided the question, then, for all practical purposes, the petitioner has exhausted his state remedies, and a petition for federal habeas corpus is proper. Peters v. Dillon, 227 F. Supp. 487 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd, 341 F.2d 337 (10th Cir. 1965).

State remedies exhausted by prior prosecution of state habeas action. Where the federal habeas corpus act requires that a defendant exhaust one of his available alternative state remedies, the maintenance of a motion under this rule is not necessary where there has been prior prosecution of a habeas corpus action. Martinez v. Tinsley, 241 F. Supp. 730 (D. Colo. 1965).

A state post-conviction application for relief remains "pending" when it could have been but wasn't dismissed on grounds of abandonment. Thus, the limitations period for a federal habeas petition was tolled while the post-conviction application worked its way through the state courts. Fisher v. Raemisch, 762 F.3d 1030 (10th Cir. 2014).

There is no constitutionally mandated requirement that appellate counsel advise a defendant about the time limitation for filing a petition under 28 U.S.C. section 2254, even if defendant were to testify that he told appellate counsel he was interested in pursuing section 2254 relief. People v. Gutierrez-Ruiz, 2014 COA 109, 383 P.3d 44.

Rule 36. Clerical Mistakes

Clerical mistakes in judgments, orders, or other parts of the record and errors in the record arising from oversight or omission may be corrected by the court at any time and after such notice, if any, as the court orders.

ANNOTATION

Correction of error discretionary. The language of this rule indicates that the decision to correct an error is discretionary rather than mandatory. Quintana v. People, 200 Colo. 258, 613 P.2d 1308 (1980).

Judge may correct grammar and strike meaningless repetitions. A judge may correct or amend a record, to make certain perfunctory changes to correct grammar, and to strike meaningless repetitions. People v. Emeson, 179 Colo. 308, 500 P.2d 368 (1972).

And may correct mittimus to reflect sentence actually imposed. Where a mittimus recites what purports to be the sentence imposed, but a clerical error in the mittimus quite obviously does not reflect the actual sentence intended to be imposed by the sentencing judge, the order of the trial judge correcting the mittimus to reflect the sentences actually imposed by the sentencing judge is the proper procedure. People v. Mason, 188 Colo. 410, 535 P.2d 506 (1975).

But cannot correct mistakes after commutation of sentence. Since the courts lack jurisdiction to alter or amend a commuted sentence imposed by the executive, a motion under this rule to correct clerical oversights in sentencing may not be granted after commutation. People

v. Quintana, 42 Colo. App. 477, 601 P.2d 637 (1979), aff'd, 200 Colo. 258, 613 P.2d 1308 (1980).

Clerical error in judgment of conviction, sentence, and mittimus concerning the sentences imposed for sexual assault and kidnapping is proper grounds for remand to correct the error. People v. Turner, 730 P.2d 333 (Colo. App. 1986).

Prosecutor's request to amend restitution order did not merely correct a scrivener's error, but affected defendant's substantive rights by making his sentence more onerous. The prosecution erred in the amount of restitution requested in its motion for restitution, despite having knowledge of the correct amount in the presentence investigation report. Once the final sentence was entered, the order could not be amended under § 18-1.3-603 (3)(a), and this rule cannot be used to obtain that result. People v. McLain, 2016 COA 74, 411 P.3d 1037.

Rule 37. Appeals from County Court

(a) Filing Notice of Appeal and Docketing Appeal. The district attorney may appeal a question of law, and the defendant may appeal a judgment of the county court in a criminal action under simplified procedure to the district court of the county. To appeal the appellant shall, within 35 days after the date of entry of the judgment or the denial of posttrial motions, whichever is later, file notice of appeal in the county court, post such advance costs as may be required for the preparation of the record and serve a copy of the notice of appeal upon the appellee. He shall also, within such 35 days, docket the appeal in the district court and pay the docket fee. No motion for new trial or in arrest of judgment shall be required as a prerequisite to an appeal, but such motions if filed shall be pursuant to Rule 33(b) of these Rules.

(b) Contents of Notice of Appeal and Designation of Record. The notice of appeal shall state with particularity the alleged errors of the county court or other grounds relied upon for the appeal, and shall include a stipulation or designation of the evidence and other proceedings which the appellant desires to have included in the record certified to the district court. If the appellant intends to urge upon appeal that the judgment or a finding or conclusion is unsupported by the evidence or is contrary to the evidence, the appellant shall include in the record a transcript of all evidence relevant to such finding or conclusion. The appellee shall have 14 days after service upon him of the notice of appeal to file with the clerk of the county court and serve upon the appellant a designation of any additional parts of the transcript or record which he deems necessary. The advance cost of preparing the additional record shall be posted by the appellant with the clerk of the county court within 7 days after service upon him of the appellee's designation, or the appeal will be dismissed. If the district court finds that any part of the additional record designated by the appellee was unessential to a complete understanding of the questions raised by the appeal, it shall order the appellee to reimburse the appellant for the cost advanced for the preparation of such part without regard to the outcome of the appeal.
