Rule 1. Scope of Rules

(a) Procedure Governed. These rules govern the procedure in the supreme court, court of appeals, district courts, and in the juvenile and probate courts of the City and County of Denver, in all actions, suits and proceedings of a civil nature, whether cognizable as cases at law or in equity, and in all special statutory proceedings, with the exceptions stated in Rule 81. These rules shall be liberally construed, administered, and employed by the court and the parties to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action.

Rules of civil procedure governing county courts shall be in accordance with Chapter 25 of this volume. Rules of Procedure governing probate courts and probate proceedings in the district courts shall be in accordance with these rules and Chapter 27 of this volume. (In case of conflict between rules, those set forth in Chapter 27 shall control.) Rules of Procedure governing juvenile courts and juvenile proceedings in the district courts shall be in accordance with these rules and Chapter 28 made effective on the same date as these rules. In case of conflict between rules those set forth in Chapter 28 shall control. Rules of Procedure in Municipal Courts are in Chapter 30.

(b) Effective Date. Amendments of these rules shall be effective on the date established by the Supreme Court at the time of their adoption, and thereafter all laws in conflict therewith shall be of no further force or effect. Unless otherwise stated by the Supreme Court as being applicable only to actions brought after the effective date of an amendment, they govern all proceedings in actions brought after they take effect and also all further proceedings in actions then pending, except to the extent that in the opinion of the court their application in a particular action pending when the rules take effect would not be feasible or would work injustice, in which event the former procedure applies.

(c) How Known and Cited. These rules shall be known and cited as the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure, or C.R.C.P.

Source: (c) amended and adopted December 5, 1996, effective January 1, 1997; (b) amended and adopted February 1, 2012, nunc pro tunc January 1, 2012, effective immediately; (a) amended and adopted and comments added and adopted May 28, 2015, effective July 1, 2015, for cases filed on or after July 1, 2015.

Cross references: For exemption of certain statutory proceedings from the rules of civil procedure, see C.R.C.P. 81.

[1] The 2015 amendments are the next step in a wave of reform literally sweeping the nation. This reform movement aims to create a significant change in the existing culture of pretrial discovery with the goal of emphasizing and enforcing Rule 1's mandate that discovery be administered to make litigation just, speedy, and inexpensive. One of the primary movers of this reform effort is a realization that the cost and delays of the existing litigation process is denying meaningful access to the judicial system for many people.

[2] The changes here are based on identical wording changes proposed for the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. They are designed to place still greater emphasis on the concept that litigation is to be treated at all times, by all parties and the courts, to make it just, speedy, and inexpensive, and, thereby, noticeably to increase citizens' access to justice.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

The requirements of the rules may be waived by failure to file objection. Continental Air Lines v. City & County of Denver, 129 Colo. 1, 266 P.2d 400 (1954).

The requirements may be waived by consent. Rose v. Agricultural Ditch & Reservoir Co., 69 Colo. 232, 193 P. 671 (1920); Continental Air Lines v. City & County of Denver, 129 Colo. 1, 266 P.2d 400 (1954).

Where sufficient objection is made at the proper time and place, there is no alternative but to enforce the applicable rule. Continental Air Lines v. City & County of Denver, 129 Colo. 1, 266 P.2d 400 (1954).

Violation of a rule of civil procedure does not create a private cause of action. Weiszmann v. Kirkland and Ellis, 732 F. Supp. 1540 (D. Colo. 1990).

Applied in Murray v. District Court, 189 Colo. 217, 539 P.2d 1254 (1975); Inwood Indus., Inc. v. Priestley, 37 Colo. App. 78, 545 P.2d 732 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 543, 560 P.2d 822 (1976); Smith v. Bridges, 40 Colo. App. 171, 574 P.2d 511 (1977); Sherman v. District Court, 637 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1981); In re Brantley, 674 P.2d 1388 (Colo. App. 1983).

II. PROCEDURE GOVERNED.

Law reviews. For article, ''Shall Colorado Procedure Conform with the Proposed Federal Rules of Civil Procedure?'', see 15 Dicta 5 (1938). For article, ''The Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 527 (1951).

Section 21 of the Colorado Constitution's article VI confers upon the supreme court the power to make rules governing practice in civil cases. Colo. River Water Conservation Dist. v. Rocky Mt. Power Co., 174 Colo. 309, 486 P.2d 438 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 996, 92 S. Ct. 1245, 31 L. Ed. 2d 465 (1972).

The Colorado rules of civil procedure are patterned after the federal rules. Lucas v. District Court, 140 Colo. 510, 345 P.2d 1064 (1959).

These rules provide a complete and orderly procedure for the trial and determination of civil actions. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. Marshall, 136 Colo. 200, 315 P.2d 198 (1957).

At law or equity. The rules of civil procedure provide for the application of the rules to the procedure in all actions, suits, or proceedings of a civil nature, whether cognizable at law or in equity. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. Marshall, 136 Colo. 200, 315 P.2d 198 (1957).

Rules of civil procedure apply to habeas corpus actions when the rules are not in conflict with habeas corpus statutes. Zaborski v. Dept. of Corr., 812 P.2d 236 (Colo. 1991).

The primary purpose of the rules of civil procedure is to simplify and clarify procedure and to expedite litigation. Swan v. Zwahlen, 131 Colo. 184, 280 P.2d 439 (1955); Seymour v. District Court, 196 Colo. 102, 581 P.2d 302 (1978).

The rules indicate clearly a general policy to disregard narrow technicalities and to bring about the final determination of justiciable controversies without undue delay. Swan v. Zwahlen, 131 Colo. 184, 280 P.2d 439 (1955).

Taking into consideration the general policy of the rules, they should be liberally construed. Swan v. Zwahlen, 131 Colo. 184, 280 P.2d 439 (1955); Crosby v. Kroeger, 138 Colo. 55, 330 P.2d 958 (1958); Roosevelt v. Beau Monde Co., 152 Colo. 567, 384 P.2d 96 (1963); Colo. River Water Conservation Dist. v. Rocky Mt. Power Co., 174 Colo. 309, 486 P.2d 438 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 996, 92 S. Ct. 1245, 31 L. Ed. 2d 465 (1972); Moses v. Moses, 180 Colo. 397, 505 P.2d 1302 (1973).

Amendments to pleadings should be granted in accordance with overriding purposes of rules of civil procedure — to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action. Varner v. District Court, 618 P.2d 1388 (Colo. 1980).

Technical errors or defects in proceedings not affecting the substantial rights of parties should be disregarded. Moses v. Moses, 180 Colo. 397, 505 P.2d 1302 (1973).

A strict technical application of time requirements is punitive. While unjustified delay in complying with procedural requirements is not condoned, to apply a strict technical application of time requirements appears to be a punitive disposition of the litigation, resulting in an arbitrary denial of substantial justice, contrary to the spirit of the rules of civil procedure. Moses v. Moses, 180 Colo. 397, 505 P.2d 1302 (1973); Semental v. Denver County Court, 978 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1999) (construing substantially similar language in CRCP 501).

The rules permit a court to deal with a case on the merits and look through form to substance; such was the state of the law in Colorado prior to the adoption of these rules. Waite v. People, 83 Colo. 162, 262 P. 1009 (1928).

Although substantive rights are not affected, the rules of civil procedure are procedural, and there is no attempt under them to affect the substantive rights of litigants. Crowley v. Hardman Bros., 122 Colo. 489, 223 P.2d 1045 (1950).

Special statutory procedures supersede the Colorado rules of civil procedure and must be followed. In re Oxley, 182 Colo. 206, 513 P.2d 1062 (1973).

Language in § 37-92-304 (3) to be construed with section (a). Section 37-92-304 (3)'s mandatory language that hearings shall be held where a protest has been filed and on cases of rereferral by a water referee to a water judge must be construed together with section (a) of this rule. In re Bunger v. Uncompahgre Valley Water Users Ass'n, 192 Colo. 159, 557 P.2d 389 (1976).

Mental health proceedings are not adversary. Where a proceeding is an inquiry into the mental condition of a defendant who has been committed under a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity, the proceeding is not an adversary proceeding in the usual sense of a case which is controlled by the rules of civil procedure. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Historically, the supreme court has considered mental health proceedings to be special statutory proceedings. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Juvenile proceedings are governed by the procedural rules contained in the Colorado Children's Code. People ex rel. M.C.L., 671 P.2d 1339 (Colo. App. 1983).

Applied in Senne v. Conley, 110 Colo. 270, 133 P.2d 381 (1943); Berryman v. Berryman, 115 Colo. 281, 172 P.2d 446 (1946); Bridges v. Ingram, 122 Colo. 501, 223 P.2d 1051 (1950); Stalford v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 128 Colo. 441, 263 P.2d 436 (1953); Stull v. District Court, 135 Colo. 86, 308 P.2d 1006 (1957); Graham v. District Court, 137 Colo. 233, 323 P.2d 635 (1958); Sprott v. Roberts, 154 Colo. 252, 390 P.2d 465 (1964); Rasmussen v. Freehling, 159 Colo. 414, 412 P.2d 217 (1966); Greco v. Pullara, 166 Colo. 465, 444 P.2d 383 (1968); In re Blair, 42 Colo. App. 270, 592 P.2d 1354 (1979).

III. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Applied in Chamberlin v. Chamberlin, 108 Colo. 538, 120 P.2d 641 (1941) (former code of civil procedure effective to April 6, 1941).

Rule 2. One Form of Action

There shall be one form of action to be known as ''civil action''.

ANNOTATION

The rules of civil procedure are designed to dispense with ritualistic, common-law, forms-of-action pleading. Bernstein v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 149 Colo. 150, 368 P.2d 780 (1962).

The rules of civil procedure clearly provide for only one form of action. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. Marshall, 136 Colo. 200, 315 P.2d 198 (1957).

This rule abolishes distinction between actions at law and in equity. Dunlap v. Sanderson, 456 F. Supp. 971 (D. Colo. 1978).

It is immaterial whether an action is one for damages or one for specific performance, since, under this rule, there is but one form of action. McKenzie v. Crook, 110 Colo. 29, 129 P.2d 906 (1942).

This rule providing for one form of action does not abrogate the common law or equity rules relative to the right of one partner to sue another partner. L.H. Heiselt, Inc. v. Brown, 108 Colo. 562, 120 P.2d 644 (1941).

Applied in Uhl v. Fox, 31 Colo. 13, 498 P.2d 1177 (1972).

Rule 3. Commencement of Action

(a) How Commenced. A civil action is commenced (1) by filing a complaint with the court, or (2) by service of a summons and complaint. If the action is commenced by the service of a summons and complaint, the complaint must be filed within 14 days after service. If the complaint is not filed within 14 days, the service of summons shall be deemed to be ineffective and void without notice. In such case the court may, in its discretion, tax a reasonable sum in favor of the defendant to compensate the defendant for expense and inconvenience, including attorney's fees, to be paid by the plaintiff or his attorney. The 14 day filing requirement may be expressly waived by a defendant and shall be deemed waived upon the filing of a responsive pleading or motion to the complaint without reserving the issue.

(b) Time of Jurisdiction. The court shall have jurisdiction from (1) the filing of the complaint, or (2) the service of the summons and complaint; provided, however, if more than 14 days elapses after service upon any defendant before the filing of the complaint, jurisdiction as to that defendant shall not attach by virtue of the service.

Source: Entire rule amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b).

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to § 34 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Applied in Havens v. Hardesty, 43 Colo. App. 162, 600 P.2d 116 (1979); DiChellis v. Peterson Chiropractic Clinic, 630 P.2d 103 (Colo. App. 1981); Styers v. Mara, 631 P.2d 1138 (Colo. App. 1981); Johnson v. McCaughan, Carter & Scharrer, 672 P.2d 221 (Colo. App. 1983).

II. HOW COMMENCED.

A. Complaint or Summons.

An action is commenced by the filing of a complaint or by the service of a summons, which gives a court jurisdiction over the plaintiff and of the action, but not over the person of a defendant, as this can only be acquired through legal service of process. Nelson v. District Court, 136 Colo. 467, 320 P.2d 959 (1957).

For historical review of this alternative procedure, see Haley v. Breeze, 16 Colo. 167, 26 P. 343 (1891); Stevens v. Carson, 21 Colo. 280, 40 P. 569 (1895).

The initial pleading is not required to be filed at the time of the service of summons, but ten days thereafter. Ardison v. Villa, 248 F.2d 226 (10th Cir. 1957).

While a case may pend indefinitely on the filing of the complaint alone, if its status is challenged by the administrative action of the court or by motion to dismiss, then a showing must be made to justify the delay in effecting service of process. Nelson v. Blacker, 701 P.2d 135 (Colo. App. 1985); Cullen v. Phillips, 30 P.3d 828 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where a summons relied upon as an initial pleading does not purport to set forth the claim for relief upon which the action or proceedings is based, it is merely a writ, not a pleading, which must follow within 10 days. Ardison v. Villa, 248 F.2d 226 (10th Cir. 1957).

Complaint fixes the nature of a suit. Miller v. Carnation Co., 33 Colo. App. 62, 516 P.2d 661 (1973).

Filing of an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission charge does not constitute the filing of a ''complaint'' within the meaning of this rule. Bennett v. Furr's Cafeterias, Inc., 549 F. Supp. 887 (D. Colo. 1982).

B. Dismissal.

Dismissal is discretionary. Authority to dismiss an action for failure to file the complaint within the time prescribed rests in the sound legal discretion of the court, because the phrase ''may be dismissed'' is not the language of a command nor of a penalty; it indicates rather that it is discretionary. Knight v. Fisher, 15 Colo. 176, 25 P. 78 (1890); Burkhardt v. Haycox, 19 Colo. 339, 35 P. 730 (1894).

This discretion should not be arbitrarily exercised. Knight v. Fisher, 15 Colo. 176, 25 P. 78 (1890); Burkhardt v. Haycox, 19 Colo. 339, 35 P. 730 (1894).

It would not be proper to dismiss the cause even though jurisdiction of defendant's person is lacking where the action is instituted and jurisdiction of the court is acquired by the filing of the complaint. Everett v. Wilson, 34 Colo. 476, 83 P. 211 (1905).

Dismissals under this rule are without prejudice and do not operate as an adjudication on the merits. Morehart v. Nat'l Tea Co., 29 Colo. App. 465, 485 P.2d 907 (1971).

Case reinstated where seasonable complaint mislaid. Where a case has, arbitrarily and ''ex parte'', been dismissed at the instance of defendant without notice to plaintiff on the alleged ground of failure to file the complaint within ten days, the court may, on a showing that the complaint had been seasonably lodged in the clerk's office and had been mislaid, set aside the dismissal and reinstate the case. Howell v. Goldberg, 98 Colo. 412, 56 P.2d 1330 (1936).

Allowance of attorney's fees held erroneous. Where there is no evidence as to whether the complaint was or was not filed, no expression of the opinion by the trial court that the action was vexatiously commenced, and no evidence as to what amount would constitute a reasonable attorney's fee to be taxed as costs, an allowance of attorney's fees under this rule is erroneous. Schwarz v. Ulmer, 149 Colo. 601, 370 P.2d 889 (1962).

III. TIME OF JURISDICTION.

Jurisdiction of the subject matter attaches in the court upon the filing of the complaint according to section (b) of this rule; and, when all parties involved make a general appearance, the court then has exclusive jurisdiction over both the subject matter and the parties, and no other court of coordinate power can interfere with its action. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Miller, 135 Colo. 575, 313 P.2d 998 (1957); Powder Mtn. Painting v. Peregrine Joint Venture, 899 P.2d 279 (Colo. App. 1994).

On the filing date, the court acquires jurisdiction. On the date that a complaint is filed stating facts which, if proven, would authorize the court to enter a judgment in favor of the plaintiff and against defendant, an action is pending on such date, and on such date the court acquires jurisdiction thereof. Powell v. Nat'l Bank, 19 Colo. App. 57, 74 P. 536 (1903).

Jurisdiction not properly invoked when court order entered. Gutierrez v. District Court, 183 Colo. 264, 516 P.2d 647 (1973); White v. Dept. of Inst., 883 P.2d 575 (Colo. App. 1994).

Rule 4. Process

(a) To What Applicable. This Rule applies to all process except as otherwise provided by these rules.

(b) Issuance of Summons by Attorney or Clerk. The summons may be signed and issued by the clerk, under the seal of the court, or it may be signed and issued by the attorney for the plaintiff. Separate additional or amended summons may issue against any defendant at any time. All other process shall be issued by the clerk, except as otherwise provided in these rules.

(c) Contents of Summons. The summons shall contain the name of the court, the county in which the action is brought, the names or designation of the parties, shall be directed to the defendant, shall state the time within which the defendant is required to appear and defend against the claims of the complaint, and shall notify the defendant that in case of the defendant's failure to do so, judgment by default may be rendered against the defendant. If the summons is served by publication, the summons shall briefly state the sum of money or other relief demanded. The summons shall contain the name, address, and registration number of the plaintiff's attorney, if any, and if none, the address of the plaintiff. Except in case of service by publication under Rule 4(g) or when otherwise ordered by the court, the complaint shall be served with the summons. In any case, where by special order personal service of summons is allowed without the complaint, a copy of the order shall be served with the summons.

(d) By Whom Served. Process may be served within the United States or its Territories by any person whose age is eighteen years or older, not a party to the action. Process served in a foreign country shall be according to any internationally agreed means reasonably calculated to give notice, the law of the foreign country, or as directed by the foreign authority or the court if not otherwise prohibited by international agreement.

(e) Personal Service. Personal service shall be as follows:

(1) Upon a natural person whose age is eighteen years or older by delivering a copy thereof to the person, or by leaving a copy thereof at the person's usual place of abode, with any person whose age is eighteen years or older and who is a member of the person's family, or at the person's usual workplace, with the person's supervisor, secretary, administrative assistant, bookkeeper, human resources representative or managing agent; or by delivering a copy to a person authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process.

(2) Upon a natural person whose age is at least thirteen years and less than eighteen years, by delivering a copy thereof to the person and another copy thereof to the person's father, mother, or guardian, or if there be none in the state, then by delivering a copy thereof to any person in whose care or control the person may be; or with whom the person resides, or in whose service the person is employed; and upon a natural person under the age of thirteen years by delivering a copy to the person's father, mother, or guardian, or if there be none in the state, then by delivering a copy thereof to the person in whose care or control the person may be.

(3) Upon a person for whom a conservator has been appointed, by delivering a copy thereof to such conservator.

(4) Upon any form of corporation, partnership, association, cooperative, limited liability company, limited partnership association, trust, organization, or other form of entity that is recognized under the laws of this state or of any other jurisdiction, (including any such organization, association or entity serving as an agent for service of process for itself or for another entity) by delivering a copy thereof to the registered agent for service as set forth in the most recently filed document in the records of the secretary of state of this state or of any other jurisdiction, or that agent's secretary or assistant, or one of the following:

(A) An officer of any form of entity having officers, or that officer's secretary or assistant;

(B) A general partner of any form of partnership, or that general partner's secretary or assistant;

(C) A manager of a limited liability company or limited partnership association in which management is vested in managers rather than members, or that manager's secretary or assistant;

(D) A member of a limited liability company or limited partnership association in which management is vested in the members or in which management is vested in managers and there are no managers, or that member's secretary or assistant;

(E) A trustee of a trust, or that trustee's secretary or assistant;

(F) The functional equivalent of any person described in paragraphs (A) through (E) of this subsection (4), regardless of such person's title, under:

(I) the articles of incorporation, articles of organization, certificate of limited partnership, articles of association, statement of registration, or other documents of similar import duly filed or recorded by which the entity or any or all of its owners obtains status as an entity or the attribute of limited liability, or

(II) the law pursuant to which the entity is formed or which governs the operation of the entity;

(G) If no person listed in subsection (4) of this rule can be found in this state, upon any person serving as a shareholder, member, partner, or other person having an ownership or similar interest in, or any director, agent, or principal employee of such entity, who can be found in this state, or service as otherwise provided by law.

(5) Repealed.

(6) Upon a municipal corporation, by delivering a copy thereof to the mayor, city manager, clerk, or deputy clerk.

(7) Upon a county, by delivering a copy thereof to the county clerk, chief deputy, or county commissioner.

(8) Upon a school district, by delivering a copy thereof to the superintendent.

(9) Upon the state by delivering a copy thereof to the attorney general.

(10) (A) Upon an officer, agent, or employee of the state, acting in an official capacity, by delivering a copy thereof to the officer, agent, or employee, and by delivering a copy to the attorney general.

(B) Upon a department or agency of the state, subject to suit, by delivering a copy thereof to the principal officer, chief clerk, or other executive employee thereof, and by delivering a copy to the attorney general.

(C) For all purposes the date of service upon the officer, agent, employee, department, or agency shall control, except that failure to serve copies upon the attorney general within 7 days of service upon the officer, agent, employee, department, or agency shall extend the time within which the officer, agent, employee, department, or agency must file a responsive pleading for 63 days (9 weeks) beyond the time otherwise provided by these Rules.

(11) Upon other political subdivisions of the State of Colorado, special districts, or quasi-municipal entities, by delivering a copy thereof to any officer or general manager, unless otherwise provided by law.

(12) Upon any of the entities or persons listed in subsections (4) through (11) of this section (e) by delivering a copy to any designee authorized to accept service of process for such entity or person, or by delivery to a person authorized by appointment or law to receive service of process for such entity or person. The delivery shall be made in any manner permitted by such appointment or law.

(f) Substituted Service. In the event that a party attempting service of process by personal service under section (e) is unable to accomplish service, and service by publication or mail is not otherwise permitted under section (g), the party may file a motion, supported by an affidavit of the person attempting service, for an order for substituted service. The motion shall state (1) the efforts made to obtain personal service and the reason that personal service could not be obtained, (2) the identity of the person to whom the party wishes to deliver the process, and (3) the address, or last known address of the workplace and residence, if known, of the party upon whom service is to be effected. If the court is satisfied that due diligence has been used to attempt personal service under section (e), that further attempts to obtain service under section (e) would be to no avail, and that the person to whom delivery of the process is appropriate under the circumstances and reasonably calculated to give actual notice to the party upon whom service is to be effective, it shall:

(1) authorize delivery to be made to the person deemed appropriate for service, and

(2) order the process to be mailed to the address(es) of the party to be served by substituted service, as set forth in the motion, on or before the date of delivery. Service shall be complete on the date of delivery to the person deemed appropriate for service.

(g) Other Service. Except as otherwise provided by law, service by mail or publication shall be allowed only in actions affecting specific property or status or other proceedings in rem. When service is by publication, the complaint need not be published with the summons. The party desiring service of process by mail or publication under this section (g) shall file a motion verified by the oath of such party or of someone in the party's behalf for an order of service by mail or publication. It shall state the facts authorizing such service, and shall show the efforts, if any, that have been made to obtain personal service and shall give the address, or last known address, of each person to be served or shall state that the address and last known address are unknown. The court, if satisfied that due diligence has been used to obtain personal service or that efforts to obtain the same would have been to no avail, shall:

(1) Order the party to send by registered or certified mail a copy of the process addressed to such person at such address, requesting a return receipt signed by the addressee only. Such service shall be complete on the date of the filing of proof thereof, together with such return receipt attached thereto signed by such addressee, or

(2) Order publication of the process in a newspaper published in the county in which the action is pending. Such publication shall be made once each week for five successive weeks. Within 14 days after the order the party shall mail a copy of the process to each person whose address or last known address has been stated in the motion and file proof thereof. Service shall be complete on the day of the last publication. If no newspaper is published in the county, the court shall designate one in some adjoining county.

(h) Manner of Proof. Proof of service shall be made as follows:

(1) If served personally, by a statement, certified by the sheriff, marshal or similar governmental official, or statement duly acknowledged under oath by any other person completing the service as to date, place, and manner of service;

(2) Repealed.

(3) If served by mail, by an affidavit showing the date of the mailing with the return receipt attached, where required;

(4) If served by publication, by the affidavit of publication, together with an affidavit as to the mailing of a copy of the process where required;

(5) If served by waiver, by the written admission or waiver of service by the person or persons served, duly acknowledged, or by their attorney;

(6) If served by substituted service, by a duly acknowledged statement as to the date, place, and manner of service, accompanied by an affidavit that the process was also mailed to the party to be served by substituted service, setting forth the address(es) where the process was mailed.

(i) Waiver of Service of Summons. A defendant who waives service of a summons does not thereby waive any objection to the venue or to the jurisdiction of the court over the defendant.

(j) Amendment. At any time in its discretion and upon such terms as it deems just, the court may allow any process or proof of service thereof to be amended, unless it clearly appears that material prejudice would result to the substantial rights of the party against whom the process is issued.

(k) Refusal of Copy. If a person to be served refuses to accept a copy of the process, service shall be sufficient if the person serving the process knows or has reason to identify the person who refuses to be served, identifies the documents being served, offers to deliver a copy of the documents to the person who refuses to be served, and thereafter leaves a copy in a conspicuous place.

(l) No Colorado Rule.

(m) Time Limit for Service. If a defendant is not served within 63 days (nine weeks) after the complaint is filed, the court —on motion or on its own after notice to the plaintiff —shall dismiss the action without prejudice against that defendant or order that service be made within a specified time. But if the plaintiff shows good cause for the failure, the court shall extend the time for service for an appropriate period. This subdivision (m) does not apply to service in a foreign country under rule 4(d).

Due process requires notice by actual or substituted service of process. Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

Purpose of the requirement for serving process and a copy of the complaint upon party defendant is to give that party notice of the commencement of the proceedings so that the party has an opportunity to attend and prepare a defense. Swanson v. Precision Sales & Serv., 832 P.2d 1109 (Colo. App. 1992).

Mere failure to obtain proper service does not warrant dismissal of the cause of action. United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

The question of proper service is a factual question to be resolved based upon a preponderance of the evidence. If a court's jurisdiction is contested by means of a C.R.C.P. 12(b)(1) motion and there are contested issues of fact, the trial court is required to hold an evidentiary hearing to resolve those issues. Werth v. Heritage Int'l Holdings, PTO, 70 P.3d 627 (Colo. App. 2003).

Knowledge of a defendant of the pendency of an action cannot be substituted for service of process, for courts acquire jurisdiction in actions ''in rem'' as well as in actions ''in personam'' by lawful service of lawful process or by voluntary appearance. Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

A judgment rendered without service, or upon the unauthorized appearance of an attorney, is void, and all proceedings had thereunder are as to all persons, irrespective of notice or bona fides, absolute nullities. Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

Absence of legal service or authorized appearance is jurisdictional, and, without jurisdiction, no judgment whatever will be entered, nor rights acquired thereunder. Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958); United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

When jurisdiction has been obtained by the service of process, actual or constructive, all subsequent proceedings are an exercise of jurisdiction, and however erroneous, they are not void, but voidable only, and not subject to collateral attack. Brown v. Tucker, 7 Colo. 30, 1 P. 221 (1883).

It is not incumbent upon a defendant to do anything to make service of process upon him valid or regular. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

Proper service question of fact. Whether personal or substituted service on a party has been properly made is a question of fact to be resolved by the trial court. Stubblefield v. District Court, 198 Colo. 569, 603 P.2d 559 (1979); People in Interest of S.C., 802 P.2d 1101 (Colo. App. 1989).

Service on wrong person confers no jurisdiction. Where the person intended to be sued is named as defendant and service is had on a different person who is not acting for, nor an agent of, the defendant, such service confers no jurisdiction over either the person named in the process or the person actually served. Havens v. Hardesty, 43 Colo. App. 162, 600 P.2d 116 (1979).

Distinction between subject matter jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction. Long-arm statute, § 13-1-124, together with defendant's note submitting to jurisdiction of Colorado courts for purposes of enforcement, conferred subject matter jurisdiction. However, in absence of valid service of process, court lacked personal jurisdiction and judgment was void. United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

An objection to lack of personal jurisdiction relates to the power of a court to compel a defendant to appear and to defend or face entry of a default judgment. And, an objection to service of process is directed to the manner of notifying a defendant that a plaintiff seeks to have a court exercise personal jurisdiction over the defendant. United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

When a delay in service is not found to be the product of either wrongful conduct or a formal impediment to service, then service is not within a reasonable time and the case should be dismissed. Malm v. Villegas, 2015 CO 4, 342 P.3d 422.

An extraordinary delay in effecting service — a delay measured in years rather than days — can be justified only by extraordinary circumstances. Taylor v. HCA-Healthone LLC, 2018 COA 29, 417 P.3d 943.

The 63-day period specified by subsection (m) is not a hard deadline. Rather, the expiration of the 63-day period gives the court discretion to choose among three courses of action: (1) To give the plaintiff notice that it is contemplating dismissing the case for lack of service and ask the plaintiff to show good cause why it should not; (2) to order that service be made within a specified time; or (3) to dismiss the case without prejudice after giving the plaintiff notice. Curry v. Zag Built LLC, 2018 COA 66, 433 P.3d 125.

Interaction with notice-of-claim requirements in the Construction Defect Action Reform Act (CDARA). CDARA contemplates the situation in which a plaintiff may file a claim in court before sending a notice of claim to a prospective defendant; in that situation the action is stayed pending compliance with § 13-20-803.5. After the stay is lifted, the 63-day time limit begins to run again. Curry v. Zag Built LLC, 2018 COA 66, 433 P.3d 125.

A court abuses its discretion if it dismisses a complaint without giving the plaintiff notice and an opportunity to respond. Curry v. Zag Built LLC, 2018 COA 66, 433 P.3d 125.

An amendment to a complaint is permitted to relate back only where a new party had timely knowledge of the original action and the original complaint provided fair and adequate notice of the new claim in the amended complaint. Maldonado v. Pratt, 2016 COA 171, 409 P.3d 630.

An amendment to a civil claim will not relate back to the original complaint under the relation-back test unless the new party receives notice of the institution of the action within the period provided by section (m) of this rule. Maldonado v. Pratt, 2016 COA 171, 409 P.3d 630.

Applied in Blank v. District Court, 190 Colo. 114, 543 P.2d 1255 (1975); Burrows v. Greene, 198 Colo. 167, 599 P.2d 258 (1979); People v. Hurst, 200 Colo. 537, 618 P.2d 1113 (1980); People v. Dutton, 629 P.2d 103 (Colo. 1981).

Service of notice in proceedings under § 14-10-105 of Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act is governed by the rules of civil procedure. In re Henne, 620 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1980).

Proceedings commenced under § 37-92-302 (1)(a) are not subject to service of process requirements of rule but rather are handled through the unique resume-notice provisions of § 37-92-302 (3). Gardner v. State, 200 Colo. 221, 614 P.2d 357 (1980).

Proceedings commenced under Torrens Land Registration Act are not subject to service of process requirements of this rule but rather are handled through the notice provisions of the Torrens Act. Rael v. Taylor, 876 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1994).

III. ISSUANCE OF SUMMONS AND OTHER PROCESS.

Law reviews. For article, ''The Federal Rules from the Standpoint of the Colorado Code'', see 17 Dicta 170 (1940).

Annotator's note. Since section (b) of this rule is similar to § 35 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The summons provided for by this rule is not a writ or process within the meaning of the constitution; there is no definition of ''process'', given by any accepted authority, which implies that any writ or method by which a suit is commenced is necessarily ''process''. A party is entitled to notice and to a hearing under the constitution before he can be affected, but it is nowhere declared or required that such notice shall be only a writ issuing out of a court. Comet Consol. Mining Co. v. Frost, 15 Colo. 310, 25 P. 506 (1890).

A summons may be signed by an attorney and need not be under seal of court. Rand v. Pantagraph Co., 1 Colo. App. 270, 28 P. 661 (1891).

When a clerk has been appointed by a judge, so long as the appointment is not revoked, the clerk or his deputy alone has power to discharge the clerical duties of the office, and a summons issued and signed by the judge is void, notwithstanding the disqualification of the clerk to act on account of absence or sickness. McNevins v. McNevins, 28 Colo. 245, 64 P. 199 (1901).

A judge may elect to perform the duties of clerk of his court, and, when he does so elect, he is authorized to issue and sign all processes from his court. McNevins v. McNevins, 28 Colo. 245, 64 P. 199 (1901).

A summons not issued and signed either by the clerk or plaintiff's attorney is no summons. Russell v. Craig, 10 Colo. App. 428, 51 P. 1017 (1897).

The service of an unsigned summons does not effectively bring defendants within the jurisdiction of the court. Brown v. Amen, 147 Colo. 468, 364 P.2d 735 (1961).

An acceptance of service of a purported summons which was signed by neither the clerk nor plaintiff's attorney would be no acceptance of service of summons. Russell v. Craig, 10 Colo. App. 428, 51 P. 1017 (1897).

Entry of appearance by defendant to an action waives objections to summons or service thereof. Russell v. Craig, 10 Colo. App. 428, 51 P. 1017 (1897); Brown v. Amen, 147 Colo. 468, 364 P.2d 735 (1961).

Summons issued upon a defective, but amendable, complaint is not void. A complaint which is defective, but amendable, cannot be regarded as entirely void, nor can a summons be so regarded merely because it is issued upon such a complaint. And it is of no importance that a copy of the original complaint was attached to the summons as served upon the respondents, because they are bound to take notice of the rule relating to amendments, and, if they choose to act on the assumption either that the plaintiff would not seek an amendment or that the court would not permit one, they do so at their peril. Goodman v. City of Ft. Collins, 164 F. 970 (8th Cir. 1908).

IV. CONTENTS OF SUMMONS.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals", see 36 Dicta 5 (1959).

Annotator's note. Since section (c) of this rule is similar to § 36 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The summons is a process by which parties are brought into court, so as to give a court jurisdiction over their persons. Fletcher v. District Court, 137 Colo. 143, 322 P.2d 96 (1958).

The purpose of a summons is to notify the defendant that an action has been brought against him, by whom, the place and court in which the same is brought, the relief demanded, and the time within which he must appear and answer in order to escape a judgment by default. Burkhardt v. Haycox, 19 Colo. 339, 35 P. 730 (1894).

The form of a summons is prescribed by law, and whatever that form may be, it must be observed at least substantially. Fletcher v. District Court, 137 Colo. 143, 322 P.2d 96 (1958).

The provisions of this rule concern the essential content of a summons. Susman v. District Court, 160 Colo. 475, 418 P.2d 181 (1966).

Provision of law is mandatory. Where the law expressly directs that process shall be in a specified form and issued in a particular manner, such a provision is mandatory, and a failure on the part of the proper official to comply with the law in that respect will render such process void. Smith v. Aurich, 6 Colo. 388 (1883).

A summons must contain all that is required by this rule whether deemed needful or not. Fletcher v. District Court, 137 Colo. 143, 322 P.2d 96 (1958).

A summons which does not meet the requirements of the law is a nullity. Fletcher v. District Court, 137 Colo. 143, 322 P.2d 96 (1958).

If the summons is void, there is no jurisdiction over the parties. Fletcher v. District Court, 137 Colo. 143, 322 P.2d 96 (1958).

The summons must be prejudicial to be void. It is manifest without argument that a defect in the summons which will be sufficient to constitute it void or erroneous must be of such a character as to mislead the defendant to his prejudice, and to prejudicially affect, or tend to so affect, some substantial right. Rich v. Collins, 12 Colo. App. 511, 56 P. 207 (1898).

There is a wide difference between a total failure and an inaccuracy or incompleteness of a required statement, especially so where the inaccuracy does not prejudicially affect a party nor tend in any manner to his injury. Rich v. Collins, 12 Colo. App. 511, 56 P. 207 (1898).

If all of the material objects are clearly accomplished by the process, although other language be used than that of the rule, it would be unreasonable to say that the defendant might be heard to complain. Kimball v. Castagnio, 8 Colo. 525, 9 P. 488 (1885).

If copy served on defendant is sufficient, deficiencies in certified copy are immaterial. Where a certified copy of a summons obtained from the clerk of the court below, and purporting to have been served on defendant, is deficient, but the copy of the summons certified to the court in the transcript of the record as served on the defendant does not show such deficiency, an objection that the summons served in the action is deficient will not be considered. Tabor v. Goss & Phillips Mfg. Co., 11 Colo. 419, 18 P. 537 (1888).

A reference to the complaint for particulars does not aid a defective summons. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Nichols, 8 Colo. 188, 6 P. 512 (1884); Fletcher v. District Court, 137 Colo. 143, 322 P.2d 96 (1958).

B. Naming of Parties.

Rules make no exception to naming requirement. The rules of civil procedure make no exception in ''in rem'' actions, as distinguished from ''in personam'' actions, to the requirement that defendants be named if their names are known or be designated as ''unknown'' when such is the case. Barker v. District Court, 199 Colo. 416, 609 P.2d 628 (1980).

The words "et al." do not satisfy requirements that parties shall be named. Smith v. Aurich, 6 Colo. 388 (1882).

An abbreviation of person's name may suffice to identify party. Rich v. Collins, 12 Colo. App. 511, 56 P. 207 (1899).

The omission of defendant's middle initial in a summons is immaterial, since in legal contemplation such initial constitutes no part of a person's name. Clark v. Nat'l Adjusters, Inc., 140 Colo. 593, 348 P.2d 370 (1959).

Naming of defendants insufficient. The designations, ''owner'' and ''operator'', in the caption of the case, without naming them, when those persons were known to the district attorney, are not in compliance with the requirements of the rules of civil procedure that a party defendant shall be named unless his name is unknown. Barker v. District Court, 199 Colo. 416, 609 P.2d 628 (1980).

C. Nature of Action.

Early provision required summons to state "the cause and general nature of the action". Barndollar v. Patton, 5 Colo. 46 (1879) (decided under repealed Civil Code 1887, § 34).

By a subsequent proviso it became no longer necessary. Burkhardt v. Haycox, 19 Colo. 339, 35 P. 730 (1894); Rich v. Collins, 12 Colo. App. 511, 56 P. 207 (1899).

Even under the early provision, statement of nature of action was not necessary if copy of complaint was served. Swem v. Newell, 19 Colo. 397, 35 P. 734 (1894).

D. Relief Demanded.

Summons which fails to comply with the provision of this rule, which provides that it shall briefly state the sum of money or other relief demanded in the action, is fatally defective, and a motion to quash should be sustained. Farris v. Walter, 2 Colo. App. 450, 31 P. 231 (1892).

A summons in a suit for contribution which states that the action is brought to recover judgment for such amount as should be found to be due from each defendant is not vulnerable to a motion to quash on the ground that it does not state the amount of money demanded. Taylor v. Hake, 92 Colo. 330, 20 P.2d 546 (1933).

Prayer for relief can be aided by statements in complaint where copy thereof is served with summons. Sage Inv. Co. v. Haley, 59 Colo. 504, 149 P. 437 (1915).

Under early proviso, reference to this pleading in no way aided a defective description in summons. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Nichols, 8 Colo. 188, 6 P. 512 (1884) (decided under repealed Civil Code 1887, § 34).

This rule does not require that a copy of the complaint must be served with the summons. Smith v. Aurich, 6 Colo. 388 (1882); Seeley v. Taylor, 17 Colo. 70, 28 P. 461 (1891), 28 P. 723 (1892).

Summons in an action based on tort for false representations should show that the action is to recover damages for obtaining money from plaintiff by false and fraudulent representations or by deceit. Erisman v. McCarty, 77 Colo. 289, 236 P. 777 (1925).

Action shown to be on contract. A summons stating that the action is for the recovery of money and interest thereon as well as attorney fees, according to the terms of each, shows that the action is on contract. Erisman v. McCarty, 77 Colo. 289, 236 P. 777 (1925).

The phrase, "in consequence of certain acts and doings of said defendants", is too indefinite to be capable of itself of imparting any information whatever, as to what the defendant is called upon to answer, nor can an expression so void of advice be aided by reference to the complaint. Smith v. Aurich, 6 Colo. 388 (1882).

The relief demanded does not limit the plaintiff in respect to the remedy which he may have; the court will disregard the prayer and rely upon the facts alleged and proved as the basis of its remedial action. Nevin v. Lulu & White Silver Mining Co., 10 Colo. 357, 15 P. 611 (1887); Powell v. Nat'l Bank, 19 Colo. App. 57, 74 P. 536 (1903).

Principle that clerk must look to summons alone for amount may apply only to entry of judgment. Where there is no imperative reason insofar as service and notice and the entry of default are concerned why the summons should state the sum of money demanded, the contention that the clerk must look to the summons alone for the amount demanded can be applied only to the lawful power of the clerk to enter the judgment, and when the clerk does not enter the judgment, but only enters the default, this contention fails for lack of application. Griffing v. Smith, 26 Colo. App. 220, 142 P. 202 (1914).

Applied in Ardison v. Villa, 248 F.2d 226 (10th Cir. 1957).

V. BY WHOM SERVED.

Law reviews. For article, ''Constitutional Law'', see 32 Dicta 397 (1955). For article, ''International Service of Process Under the Hague Convention and Colorado Law'', see 41 Colo. Law. 79 (November 2012).

Annotator's note. Since section (d) of this rule is similar to § 39 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The words "or by any person not a party to the action" are intended to mean any other person competent to make the service, which, of necessity, excludes the attorneys in the case, they being incompetent. Nelson v. Chittenden, 53 Colo. 30, 123 P. 656 (1912).

The service of a summons by a plaintiff in the cause is void, and a judgment entered in the absence of the defendant and upon such service is a nullity. Toenniges v. Drake, 7 Colo. 471, 4 P. 790 (1884).

Service of process by an employee of counsel who is not counsel or associate counsel is proper service and does not violate the provisions of this rule requiring service to be made by any person not a party to the action. People in Interest of T.G., 849 P.2d 843 (Colo. App. 1992).

Server is not required to go outside county in which action is pending. The sheriff, or person not a party to the action, to whom the summons in a civil action is delivered for service is not in his search for the defendant required to go outside the county in which the action brought is pending. The return thereon by such officer or person that defendant cannot after diligent search be found therein constitutes a proper and sufficient basis for publication of summons. Gamewell v. Strumpler, 84 Colo. 459, 271 P. 180 (1928).

The sheriff loses his official character when he passes out of his own county, so that in serving a summons in another county he acts merely as an individual, and such service must be shown by his affidavit. His mere return, unsworn, is no evidence of the service, and judgment rendered upon such return of service, not otherwise shown, is void. Munson v. Pawnee Cattle Co., 53 Colo. 337, 126 P. 275 (1912).

Service as authorized by international agreement is not the exclusive means of serving a defendant located in a foreign country under section (d). This provision only applies to service that occurs in a foreign country and does not prohibit another form of service within the United States if otherwise authorized. Substituted service is a valid alternative to service abroad. Willhite v. Rodriguez-Cera, 2012 CO 29, 274 P.3d 1233.

For note, ''Service of Process in Colorado: A Proposed Revision of Rule Four'', see 41 U. Colo. L. Rev. 569 (1969).

Annotator's note. Since section (e) of this rule is similar to § 40 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This rule requires that a "copy" of the summons be served, not a duplicate original. Hocks v. Farmers Union Co-op. Gas & Oil Co., 116 Colo. 282, 180 P.2d 860 (1947).

The rule is satisfied where a transcript of the original summons, bearing the names of the clerk and counsel for the plaintiff in typewriting is served; actual signatures were not necessary. Hocks v. Farmers Union Co-op. Gas & Oil Co., 116 Colo. 282, 180 P.2d 860 (1947).

Voluntary appearance of a party is equivalent to personal service of process. Munson v. Luxford, 95 Colo. 12, 34 P.2d 91 (1935).

In motions to quash the service of process, the plaintiffs in such actions have the burden, after challenge, of establishing by competent evidence all facts essential to jurisdiction. Harvel v. District Court, 166 Colo. 520, 444 P.2d 629 (1968).

Clear and convincing proof by defendant is required. If the return on a summons is in proper form and shows service in accordance with the rule, the burden is upon defendant to overthrow the return by clear and convincing proof. Gibbs v. Ison, 76 Colo. 240, 230 P. 784 (1924).

Mere failure to obtain proper service does not warrant dismissal of the cause of action. Fletcher v. District Court, 137 Colo. 143, 322 P.2d 96 (1958).

A cause of action filed may remain so indefinitely pending service of process upon the parties. Fletcher v. District Court, 137 Colo. 143, 322 P.2d 96 (1958).

Counsel impliedly authorized to accept service of process. Where an attorney is hired to commence a lawsuit, he is authorized to accept service of process in a closely related judicial proceeding. Southerlin v. Automotive Elec. Corp., 773 P.2d 599 (Colo. App. 1988).

B. Upon Natural Persons.

Law reviews. For article, ''In Re: The Mourners'', see 6 Dicta 7 (April 1929).

A registered agent may be served in the same manner as a "natural person" under this rule. Goodman Assocs., LLC v. WP Mtn. Props., LLC, 222 P.3d 310 (Colo. 2010).

Service of process on defendant's registered agent was proper where delivered to agent's assistant at defendant's workplace. Agent's failure to receive process because of his own carelessness and neglect does not invalidate its proper service. Goodman Assocs., LLC v. WP Mtn. Props., LLC, 222 P.3d 310 (Colo. 2010).

This rule requires that the copy of the summons and complaint be ''delivered'' to the proper person. Martin v. District Court, 150 Colo. 577, 375 P.2d 105 (1962).

Clearly, by its own terms, the rule does not require that this ''delivery'' be accompanied by a reading aloud of the documents so served, or by explaining what they are, or by verbally advising the person sought to be served as to what he or she should do with the papers. Martin v. District Court, 150 Colo. 577, 375 P.2d 105 (1962); Goodman Assocs., LLC v. WP Mtn. Props., LLC, 222 P.3d 310 (Colo. 2010).

The term "usual place of abode" has generally been construed to mean the place where that person is actually living at the time service is attempted. Neher v. District Court, 161 Colo. 445, 422 P.2d 627 (1967); Security State Bank v. Weingardt, 42 Colo. App. 219, 597 P.2d 1045 (1979).

It is not synonymous with "domicile". Neher v. District Court, 161 Colo. 445, 422 P.2d 627 (1967); Sec. State Bank v. Weingardt, 42 Colo. App. 219, 597 P.2d 1045 (1979).

Upon one's induction into the armed forces, his parent's home ceases to be his place of abode, and it does not matter in this regard that some of his clothing and personal belongings remain there or that he intends to return to his mother's home, wherever it may be, as soon as his military service is terminated. While filial love binds him to his parents wherever they may be, and their home is his for lack of another, it is no longer his ''actual place of abode'' within the intendment of the rule. Neher v. District Court, 161 Colo. 445, 422 P.2d 627 (1967).

The term "family" includes husband's adult daughter who was visiting him at the time of service. In re Eisenhuth, 976 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1999).

Service of summons upon an infant over the age of 14 years, but not upon the guardian, no guardian ''ad litem'' being appointed, but the record reciting that the infant defendant appeared by his next friend as well as by attorney was sufficient service and the appearance was authorized. Filmore v. Russell, 6 Colo. 171 (1881).

C. Upon Unincorporated Associations.

Annotator's note. Since section (e)(4) of this rule is similar to that section of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The general rule at common law was that where the obligation was joint only, all the joint obligors must be made parties defendant and must be sued jointly. Sargeant v. Grimes, 70 F.2d 121 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 293 U.S. 568, 55 S. Ct. 79, 79 L. Ed. 667 (1934).

The purpose of this rule is to change the common-law rule and provide a procedure whereby a partnership could be sued upon a partnership obligation, service made upon one or more but not all of the partners, and a judgment rendered binding the partnership and its property as well as the individual property of the partners served as partners. Sargeant v. Grimes, 70 F.2d 121 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 293 U.S. 568, 55 S. Ct. 79, 79 L. Ed. 667 (1934).

This rule only provides a method of suing a partnership in addition to the remedy already existing. Peabody v. Oleson, 15 Colo. App. 346, 62 P. 234 (1900).

This rule is cumulative merely and does not affect the right to sue all the members of a firm by their several individual names and obtain a joint judgment against them as partners. Peabody v. Oleson, 15 Colo. App. 346, 62 P. 234 (1900).

It makes the service of summons upon one partner sufficient to bring the partnership into court and bind its property by the judgment. Peabody v. Oleson, 15 Colo. App. 346, 62 P. 234 (1900).

Service of summons includes serving member of family over 18 at residence. Service of summons upon a member of a partnership by leaving a copy of the summons and complaint at his usual place of residence with a member of his family over 15 (now 18) years of age is sufficient service on a partnership under this rule. Barnes v. Colo. Springs & C. C. D. Ry., 42 Colo. 461, 94 P. 570 (1908).

No personal judgment can be obtained against the partners not served; as to them, the judgment rendered can bind only their interests in the partnership property. The judgment should be against the partnership, and in a proper manner, the individual property of the member or members served might be reached for the purpose of satisfying it. Peabody v. Oleson, 15 Colo. App. 346, 62 P. 234 (1900); Ellsberry v. Block, 28 Colo. 477, 65 P. 629 (1901); Blythe v. Cordingly, 20 Colo. App. 508, 80 P. 495 (1905).

A judgment against a partnership binds the joint property of the associates and the separate property of members duly served with process. Denver Nat'l Bank v. Grimes, 97 Colo. 158, 47 P.2d 862 (1935).

Where in an action upon a partnership debt only one of two partners was served with summons and a judgment was entered against the individual partner served, but no judgment was entered against the partnership and the other partner was afterwards brought in by ''scire facias'' and a judgment was entered against said partner as for an individual debt, then, in the absence of a judgment against the firm, it was error to render judgment against the other partner for the individual debt. Ellsberry v. Block, 28 Colo. 477, 65 P. 629 (1901).

A judgment on copartnership promissory notes merged the notes into the judgment, although only one of the partners was served with summons or appeared in the action, and suit could not thereafter be maintained on the notes against the partners not served. Blythe v. Cordingly, 20 Colo. App. 508, 80 P. 495 (1905).

Any member being served with summons has notice that he may appear in the case and set up any defense to the partnership liability or to his liability as a partner. Denver Nat'l Bank v. Grimes, 97 Colo. 158, 47 P.2d 862 (1935); Sargeant v. Grimes, 70 F.2d 121 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 293 U.S. 568, 55 S. Ct. 79, 79 L. Ed. 667 (1934).

Court has jurisdiction of a partner who is served for purposes of proceeding to final judgment against him. A judgment having been entered against a partnership and execution thereon having been returned unsatisfied under the provisions of this rule, the court has and continues to have jurisdiction of a partner who had been served with summons for the purpose of proceeding to final judgment against him. Denver Nat'l Bank v. Grimes, 97 Colo. 158, 47 P.2d 862 (1935).

Service upon a partner in a partnership that, in turn, is a partner in a second partnership does not provide notice to the second partnership with sufficient notice of suit against it. Bush v. Winker, 892 P.2d 328 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd, 907 P.2d 79 (Colo. 1995).

Mere knowledge of the general partner of a partnership, which, in turn, is a partner in a second partnership, that a legal proceeding is pending is not a substitute for service upon the proper entity. Bush v. Winker, 892 P.2d 328 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd, 907 P.2d 79 (Colo. 1995).

An amendment adding name of another partner is not a change of the cause of action. Where an action is brought against a partnership under the proper partnership name and against one partner who is served with summons, an amendment setting forth the name of another partner and making him a party to the action is not a change of the cause of action by changing the parties to the contract sued on where the partnership named in the amendment and the matter sued on are the same as those named in the original. Adamson v. Bergen, 15 Colo. App. 396, 62 P. 629 (1900).

An action may be maintained against a subordinate or branch organization or association upon a mutual benefit insurance policy where the policy is the obligation of the subordinate or branch association, although the association is under the control of, and the certificate is under the seal of, a supreme lodge. On such a policy an action is properly brought against them under its associate name. Endowment Rank of K. P. v. Powell, 25 Colo. 154, 53 P. 285 (1898).

Ruling denying motion to quash service is appealable order. Where the defendant appears specially and moves to quash the service of summons upon the ground that the service under section (e)(4) of this rule is ineffective and void, then, when the trial court overrules this motion, this ruling denying the defendants' motion to quash the service of summons is an appealable order. Wells Aircraft Parts Co. v. Allan J. Kayser Co., 118 Colo. 197, 194 P.2d 326 (1947).

D. Upon Corporations.

Determining corporate presence within the state is resolved by: (1) Leaving the matter in the sound discretion of a trial court; (2) distinguishing between those cases where merely the internal affairs of a corporation are involved and those cases where the corporation has had transactions with third persons; and (3) considering the equities of the case. Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. v. District Court, 138 Colo. 270, 332 P.2d 208 (1958).

The question of what constitutes doing business is a fact to be determined as any other fact. Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. v. District Court, 138 Colo. 270, 332 P.2d 208 (1958).

The contracting of a debt is a sufficient doing of business within this state to render a corporation amenable to the courts of this state if jurisdiction could be obtained by service of process as provided in this rule. Colo. Iron-Works v. Sierra Grande Mining Co., 15 Colo. 499, 25 P. 325 (1890).

The Colorado supreme court has not condemned the manner of service of process under this rule as being unfair or as failing to give notice. Focht v. Southwestern Skyways, Inc., 220 F. Supp. 441 (D. Colo. 1963), aff'd, 336 F.2d 603 (10th Cir. 1964).

To bind a corporation, the service of process must be upon the identical agent provided by the rule. Great W. Mining Co. v.

Woodmas of Alston Mining Co., 12 Colo. 46, 20 P. 771 (1888).

Section (e)(1) requires either personal service or substituted service at the party's usual place of business, with the party's stenographer, bookkeeper, or chief clerk. People in Interest of S.C., 802 P.2d 1101 (Colo. App. 1989).

Service upon the vice-president of a corporation is sufficient even though the return does not show that the president could not be found in the county. Comet Consol. Mining Co. v. Frost, 15 Colo. 310, 25 P. 506 (1890).

Determination of whether a person is a general agent of a corporation for service of process requires an analysis of that person's duties, responsibilities, and authority. Denman v. Great Western Ry. Co., 811 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1990).

Delivery of suit papers to corporation's registered agent may be accomplished in the same manner as service on a "natural person" under section (e)(1). Thus, delivery of such papers to a registered agent's ''stenographer, bookkeeper, or chief clerk'' constitutes delivery to that agent. Merrill Chadwick Co. v. October Oil Co., 725 P.2d 17 (Colo. App. 1986); Swanson v. Precision Sales & Serv., 832 P.2d 1109 (Colo. App. 1992).

Secretary's corporate employer which was the sole shareholder of defendant corporation and whose president was the defendant corporation's registered agent held to be registered agent's ''stenographer'' under rule authorizing service of process on natural person's stenographer. Swanson v. Precision Sales & Serv., 832 P.2d 1109 (Colo. App. 1992).

Service held proper where secretary was performing service directly for registered agent at the same address that he had listed as defendant's corporation's registered office since it was reasonable to conclude that the secretary would have given registered agent notice of service. Swanson v. Precision Sales & Serv., 832 P.2d 1109 (Colo. App. 1992).

Service of process on defendant was proper where two copies of summons were served on an agent representing both defendants in the case and the summons did not specifically indicate which of the two defendants was being served. A party assumes the risk that errors in transmittal of service of process by its registered agent, who also receives service of process for numerous other entities, will bind the principal. Brown Grain & Livestock, Inc. v. Union Pac. Res. Co., 878 F.2d 157 (Colo. App. 1994).

Nonresident officer not on business may be served in state. Under this rule service is legally sufficient when made on an officer of a corporation whose residence is in another state and who is at the time of service temporarily in this state on business not connected with the corporation; the fact that such officer invited such service would be pertinent in determining the validity thereof. Venner v. Denver Union Water Co., 40 Colo. 212, 90 P. 623 (1907).

Service may properly be made upon agent of receivers who have displaced ordinary officers. The receivers of a foreign corporation, who by their appointment as such displace the ordinary officers of a corporation, are to be treated as foreign receivers, and if the return of the sheriff shows a service that would have been sufficient upon the corporation under its ordinary management, it must be equally sufficient if made upon an agent of the receivers when the affairs of the corporation are under the management of the latter. Ganebin v. Phelan, 5 Colo. 83 (1879).

Under this rule, service is proper upon the agent of a foreign corporation if made within the state. White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, 160 Colo. 491, 418 P.2d 527 (1966).

Corporation was properly served when the individual registered agent was properly served and thus the trial court had in personam jurisdiction. Merrill Chadwick Co. v. October Oil Co., 725 P.2d 17 (Colo. App. 1986).

Service shall be made upon agent in county where action is brought. In a suit against a foreign corporation, service must be made upon it by delivering a copy of the summons to its agent found within the county where the action is brought. Venner v. Denver Union Water Co., 15 Colo. App. 495, 63 P. 1061 (1900).

It is only in such agent not found within the county that substituted service is valid. Venner v. Denver Union Water Co., 15 Colo. App. 495, 63 P. 1061 (1900).

Service upon stockholder is a nullity unless agent is not found. Service upon a stockholder, unless there is a failure to find the agent, is a nullity. Venner v. Denver Union Water Co., 15 Colo. App. 495, 63 P. 1061 (1900).

A person engaged in settling an insurance loss in state is an agent. Where a foreign insurance corporation employs an adjusting company to settle a loss sustained in Colorado and an employee of the latter company is given the insurance company's files and drafts for payment of any sum agreed upon in settlement of the claim and invested with full power to make the adjustment, then, in these circumstances, such an employee of the adjustment company is the agent of the insurance company, and service of process on him is service on the latter company. Union Mut. Life Co. v. District Court, 97 Colo. 108, 47 P.2d 401 (1935).

In an action against a corporation upon a claim for services by an agent assigned by such agent to plaintiff, service of summons upon the agent who assigned the claim is not a sufficient service on the corporation. White House Mt. Gold Mining Co. v. Powell, 30 Colo. 397, 70 P. 679 (1902).

Service may be had upon stockholder. It is only in the event that no agent is found in the county that service may be had upon a stockholder. Venner v. Denver Union Water Co., 15 Colo. App. 495, 63 P. 1061 (1900).

VII. PERSONAL SERVICE OUTSIDE THE STATE.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, ''Some Footnotes to the 1945 Statutes'', see 22 Dicta 130 (1945). For article, ''Constitutional Law'', see 32 Dicta 397 (1955). For article, ''Another Decade of Colorado Conflicts'', see 33 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 139 (1961). For article, ''Colorado's Short-Arm Jurisdiction'', see 37 U. Colo. L. Rev. 309 (1965). For article, ''Rule-Making in Colorado: An Unheralded Crisis in Procedural Reform'', see 38 U. Colo. L. Rev. 137 (1966).

B. Natural Persons.

Law reviews. For article, ''Conflict of Laws, Constitutional Law, Elections'', see 30 Dicta 449 (1953). For article, ''Civil Remedies and Civil Procedure'', see 30 Dicta 465 (1953).

This rule relating to personal service outside the state is confined to the question of who is, or who is not, a resident of the state of Colorado. Kellner v. District Court, 127 Colo. 320, 256 P.2d 887 (1953).

Burden of proof is on plaintiff. When the question of Colorado residence is raised and a denial thereof is prima facie made, the burden of establishing, or proving, that defendants are in fact residents of Colorado is on plaintiffs. Kellner v. District Court, 127 Colo. 320, 256 P.2d 887 (1953).

"Residence" and "domicile" are commonly taken as being synonymous, notwithstanding that in precise usage they are not convertible terms. Rust v. Meredith Publ.Co., 122 F. Supp. 879 (D. Colo. 1954).

"Place of abode" is not necessarily synonymous with "domicile". The term ''usual place of abode'' has generally been construed to mean the place where that person is actually living at the time service is attempted; it is not necessarily synonymous with ''domicile''. Neher v. District Court, 161 Colo. 445, 422 P.2d 627 (1967).

Residence is determined by intention of parties supported by acts. Domicile, or residence as used in this rule, in a legal sense, is determined by the intention of the parties. But while intention seems to be the controlling element, it is not always conclusive unless the intention is fortified by some act or acts in support thereof. Kellner v. District Court, 127 Colo. 320, 256 P.2d 887 (1953).

The issue of domicile is a compound question of fact and intention. Kellner v. District Court, 127 Colo. 320, 256 P.2d 887 (1953).

A change of voting place surely is compelling evidence of the intention of making a change of residence. Kellner v. District Court, 127 Colo. 320, 256 P.2d 887 (1953).

Residence may commence in another state before a definite county or precinct is fixed for a permanent residence. Kellner v. District Court, 127 Colo. 320, 256 P.2d 887 (1953).

C. Other Than Natural Persons.

A corporation organized under the laws of one state is a resident of that state under whose laws it was created and cannot be a resident of any other state. Rust v. Meredith Publ. Co., 122 F. Supp. 879 (D. Colo. 1954).

Even if a corporation has permission to carry on a business in another state upon compliance with the laws of the other state, such permission and compliance does not make it a resident of such other state. Rust v. Meredith Publ. Co., 122 F. Supp. 879 (D. Colo. 1954).

D. Status or In Rem.

Under this rule, service is good if it can be said that the action is one affecting a specific ''status'' or is a proceeding ''in rem''. Owen v. Owen, 127 Colo. 359, 257 P.2d 581 (1953).

Colorado recognizes the concept "in rem" or "quasi in rem" jurisdiction acquired through attachment or garnishment of the defendant's property within the state by providing for service of process on owners of specific property without regard to residence or domicile. A judgment which is rendered in such a case operates solely upon the res attached. George v. Lewis, 204 F. Supp. 380 (D. Colo. 1962).

Service outside state for divorce is valid. Personal service outside the state when made upon a defendant in an action for divorce is valid, since an action for divorce unquestionably is an action ''in rem''. Owen v. Owen, 127 Colo. 359, 257 P.2d 581 (1953).

The rule is not applicable to proceedings for annulment in that matrimonial ''status'' is not the subject. Owen v. Owen, 127 Colo. 359, 257 P.2d 581 (1953).

VIII. OTHER SERVICE.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, ''Again — How Many Times?'', see 21 Dicta 62 (1944).

Annotator's note. Since section (g) of this rule is similar to § 45 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Where no judgment "in personam" is sought by plaintiffs against a nonresident defendant, the service of summons by publication is proper. Hoff v. Armbruster, 125 Colo. 324, 244 P.2d 1069 (1952).

In cases affecting specific property or in other proceedings in rem, section (g) specifically authorizes service by publication upon a nonresident. In re Ramsey, 34 Colo. App. 338, 526 P.2d 319 (1974).

Proceedings by wife to charge husband's property with alimony is a proceeding "in rem". Where the plaintiff seeks to charge her husband's property with her alimony, and to set aside conveyances made in fraud of her rights, the suit is a proceeding ''in rem'' within the meaning of this rule. Hanscom v. Hanscom, 6 Colo. App. 97, 39 P. 885 (1895).

A creditor's bill is a proceeding in rem, within the meaning of this rule. Shuck v. Quackenbush, 75 Colo. 592, 227 P. 1041 (1924).

Actions "in the nature of actions in rem" may be supported by constructive service as fully as those truly ''in rem''. Kern v. Wilson, 91 Colo. 355, 14 P.2d 1014 (1932).

Service by publication of summons in actions "in rem" is not limited to cases involving real estate, but may apply to those involving personal property as well. Hoff v. Armbruster, 125 Colo. 324, 244 P.2d 1069 (1952).

Where plaintiff fails to initiate a traditional in rem action or a quasi in rem action in a negligence suit, service by publication was improper. ReMine ex rel. Liley v. District Court, 709 P.2d 1379 (Colo. 1985).

Substituted service is not available outside the state. Unlike residents, nonresidents must be served personally under the plain language of section (f)(1). United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

Substituted service under section (f) is a valid alternative to service abroad. While this provision requires documents to be mailed abroad, the international agreement on personal service in the foreign country does not apply because the transmittal of documents abroad is not required to effectuate service under this provision. Willhite v. Rodriguez-Cera, 2012 CO 29, 274 P.3d 1233.

B. By Mail.

The mandatory requirements of this rule include a verified motion by either the plaintiff or counsel in his behalf for an order for service by mail, a hearing ''ex parte'', and entry of an order of court directing the clerk to send a copy of process by mail to known out-of-state defendants. Jones v. Colescott, 134 Colo. 552, 307 P.2d 464 (1957).

Where a plaintiff does not follow this rule and omits not one but many mandatory steps set out therein, it is error to permit a judgment to stand. Jones v. Colescott, 134 Colo. 552, 307 P.2d 464 (1957).

If summons is properly addressed but not received, it will be presumed that postage was not prepaid. Where it is shown that a copy of the summons in a cause brought against a nonresident defendant was properly addressed and mailed to the defendant whose place of residence was well known, where he had resided for years, and where he was accustomed to receive his mail-matter regularly, but that the same was not received by him, it will be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the sender omitted to prepay the postage. Morton v. Morton, 16 Colo. 358, 27 P. 718 (1891).

IX. PUBLICATION.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, ''A Tax Title Quieted'', see 6 Dicta 9 (Nov. 1928). For article, ''How Many Times?'', see 19 Dicta 231 (1942). For article, ''Again — How Many Times?'', see 21 Dicta 62 (1944). For article, ''Motion for Publication of Summons in Quiet Title Proceedings'', see 26 Dicta 182 (1949).

Annotator's note. Since section (h) of this rule is similar to § 45 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The law requires that personal service shall be had whenever it is obtainable. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

When some evidence indicates the whereabouts of the absent party, any form of substituted service must have a reasonable chance of giving that party actual notice of the proceeding. Synan v. Haya, 15 P.3d 1117 (Colo. App. 2000).

Publication must be for one of enumerated cases. To render a publication of summons effective for any purpose, it must be made in one of the enumerated cases. Hanscom v. Hanscom, 6 Colo. App. 97, 39 P. 885 (1895).

The ground for such service must exist, that is, that the defendant cannot be personally served within the state. Hanshue v. Charles B. Marvin Inv. Co., 67 Colo. 189, 184 P. 289 (1919).

In cases affecting specific property or in other proceedings in rem, sections (g) and (h) specifically authorize service by publication upon a nonresident. In re Ramsey, 34 Colo. App. 338, 526 P.2d 319 (1974).

Service by publication in the state where property is located is not always constitutionally adequate in quasi in rem actions. Synan v. Haya, 15 P.3d 1117 (Colo. App. 2000).

Section (h) controls number of publications for child custody jurisdiction act. Since § 14-13-106 (1)(d) does not specify the number of times that publication is required to effect notice under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act, section (h) of this rule controls. In re Blair, 42 Colo. App. 270, 592 P.2d 1354 (1979).

Service by publication is last resort. In case service may not be had either personally or by mailing or other substituted service, then service by publication is permissible as a final and last resort. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

Constructive service by publication is a right given by this rule. O'Rear v. Lazarus, 8 Colo. 608, 9 P. 621 (1885); Beckett v. Cuenin, 15 Colo. 281, 25 P. 167 (1890); Trowbridge v. Allen, 48 Colo. 419, 110 P. 193 (1910); Empire Ranch & Cattle Co. v. Coldren, 51 Colo. 115, 117 P. 1005 (1911); Jotter v. Marvin, 67 Colo. 548, 189 P. 19 (1919).

Every material requirement in relation to service by publication must be strictly complied with to give the court jurisdiction. O'Rear v. Lazarus, 8 Colo. 608, 9 P. 621 (1885); Beckett v. Cuenin, 15 Colo. 281, 25 P. 167 (1890); Davis v. John Mouat Lumber Co., 2 Colo. App. 381, 31 P. 187 (1892); Trowbridge v. Allen, 48 Colo. 419, 110 P. 193 (1910); Empire Ranch & Cattle Co. v. Coldren, 51 Colo. 115, 117 P. 1005 (1911); Jotter v. Marvin, 67 Colo. 548, 189 P. 19 (1919); Robinson v. Clauson, 142 Colo. 434, 351 P.2d 257 (1960); Hancock v. Boulder County Pub. Trustee, 920 P.2d 854 (Colo. 1995).

Constructive service is in derogation of the common law, making it imperative that there must be a strict compliance with every requirement of this rule; failure in this respect is fatal. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

Compliance with every condition of this rule must affirmatively appear from the record. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

But order for publication needs not precede the beginning of publication. Where plaintiff expressly advised the court of all relevant facts and circumstances, including the fact that she had already begun publication, no prejudice resulted and neither the service nor the judgment was invalid. Hancock v. Boulder County Pub. Trustee, 920 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1995).

Nothing excuses omissions or insufficient statements. Beckett v. Cuenin, 15 Colo. 281, 25 P. 167 (1890); Sylph Mining & Milling Co. v. Williams, 4 Colo. App. 345, 36 P. 80 (1894); Trowbridge v. Allen, 48 Colo. 419, 110 P. 193 (1910); Empire Ranch & Cattle Co. v. Coldren, 51 Colo. 115, 117 P. 1005 (1911); Robinson v. Clauson, 142 Colo. 434, 351 P.2d 257 (1960).

Courts are jealous of abuses in the application thereof. While experience demonstrates that this mode of giving a court jurisdiction of the person is necessary in many instances, yet courts are jealous of abuses in the application thereof; hence, they tolerate the omission of no material step required by law in connection therewith. Israel v. Arthur, 7 Colo. 5, 1 P. 438 (1883).

Where a plaintiff does not follow this rule and omits not one but many mandatory steps set out therein, it is error to permit a judgment to stand. Jones v. Colescott, 134 Colo. 552, 307 P.2d 464 (1957).

Failure to comply with due diligence requirements voids judgment. Where plaintiff in a quiet title action failed to exercise due diligence in determining the whereabouts of the record owners of property before resorting to service by publication, the judgment obtained against the record owners was void. Owens v. Tergeson, 2015 COA 164, 363 P.3d 826.

This necessity to strictly follow the rule has long been established. O'Rear v. Lazarus, 8 Colo. 608, 9 P. 621 (1885); Davis v. John Mouat Lumber Co., 2 Colo. App. 381, 31 P. 187 (1892).

If rule is not complied with, the service may be collaterally attacked. In obtaining constructive service of process by publication, a compliance with the method pointed out by this rule must be observed, and if the record being offered in evidence shows affirmatively that its provisions relating to service by publication were not complied with, it may be attacked in a collateral proceeding. Trowbridge v. Allen, 48 Colo. 419, 110 P. 193 (1910).

The recital in a judgment that service was complied with does not change this rule. Trowbridge v. Allen, 48 Colo. 419, 110 P. 193 (1910).

The motion and affidavit upon which the order for constructive service is entered takes precedence over recitals in a judgment. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

The authorities are in conflict as to whether the constructive service may be presumed regular where record is silent. Israel v. Arthur, 7 Colo. 5, 1 P. 438 (1883).

Rule seems to be that record must show. Where reliance is placed wholly upon service by publication, the rule seems to be that the record must affirmatively show all the essential jurisdictional facts. This rule is not entirely undisputed, but it is sanctioned by the weight of authority and is founded upon excellent reason. O'Rear v. Lazarus, 8 Colo. 608, 9 P. 621 (1885).

If record is not silent no presumption can be indulged in. Where the record is not silent on this subject and where it affirmatively appears therein that the court did not have jurisdiction of the person, no such presumption can be indulged in. Clayton v. Clayton, 4 Colo. 410 (1878); Israel v. Arthur, 7 Colo. 5, 1 P. 438 (1883).

Errors in the service of summons by publication may be waived by the appearance and answer of defendant to the merits. New York & B. M. Co. v. Gill, 7 Colo. 100, 2 P. 5 (1883).

Applied in George v. Lewis, 228 F. Supp. 725 (D. Colo. 1964).

B. On Verified Motion.

Under this rule a verified motion must state the facts authorizing the service and show the efforts, if any, that have been made to make personal service within the state, and it must name the known defendants who are outside the state and their last known addresses, or that the addresses are unknown. Jones v. Colescott, 134 Colo. 552, 307 P.2d 464 (1957).

In the motion and affidavit, the applicant must be forthright and explicit in setting forth all of the pertinent facts in order that the court may have before it the complete picture to enable correct evaluation and determination whether service by publication is justified or required under the circumstances. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958); Hancock v. Boulder County Pub. Trustee, 920 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1995).

The validity of constructive service is dependent upon the good faith of the plaintiff and the accuracy of the statements contained in his verified motion upon which the order for publication is based. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958); Hancock v. Boulder County Pub. Trustee, 920 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1995).

If plaintiff in any way misrepresents the facts, either actively or merely by failure to reveal them, then it follows as a matter of course that an order directing constructive service of process by publication is invalid. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

Anything short of the full disclosure of all known pertinent facts is a fraud upon the court and renders void any decree thereafter entered. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

To simply go through the form of legalism without a fair disclosure of existing known facts is of no avail. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954); Weber v. Williams, 137 Colo. 269, 324 P.2d 365 (1958).

Where the plaintiff knows the address of, and how to reach, the defendant in another jurisdiction so as to permit personal service of summons upon him, but instead resorts to publication in a newspaper defendant would be unlikely to see, such conduct is repugnant to equity and constitutes fraud nullifying a decree which is obtained by reason of it. Coppinger v. Coppinger, 130 Colo. 175, 274 P.2d 328 (1954).

Where it appears from the affidavit for publication that the affiant, after due diligence, is unable to learn the whereabouts, residence, or post-office address of a defendant, coupled with further statements that he either resides out of the state, or has departed therefrom without the intention of returning, or is concealing himself to avoid the service of process, it logically follows that the defendant is either a nonresident of the state, has departed from the state without the intention of returning, or is concealing himself to avoid the service of process. Hanshue v. Marvin Inv. Co., 67 Colo. 189, 184 P. 289 (1919).

To obtain an order for service by publication an affidavit to that end must show, among other things, that the defendant resides out of the state, or that he has departed from the state without intention of returning, or that he is concealing himself to avoid service of process; it must also give his post-office address if known, or if unknown show that fact. Robinson v. Clauson, 142 Colo. 434, 351 P.2d 257 (1960).

Verified motion for service by publication held sufficient. Hancock v. Boulder County Pub. Trustee, 920 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1995).

Where a verified motion filed for publication of a summons contains no statement that defendant is a nonresident of the state, that he has departed the state without intention of returning, or that he is concealing himself to avoid service of process, and it is recited in the motion that defendant's whereabouts are unknown, but there is no statement that he could not ''be served by personal service in the state'', then, in the absence of this mandatory requirement, the motion is fatally defective, and the court is without jurisdiction to proceed. Sine v. Stout, 119 Colo. 254, 203 P.2d 495 (1949).

Constructive service of summons founded upon an affidavit which fails to comply with this rule is without effect. Empire Ranch & Cattle Co. v. Gibson, 22 Colo. App. 617, 126 P. 1103 (1912).

Such an affidavit is essential. An affidavit by a person authorized by law to make the same and containing the statements required by this rule is an essential prerequisite to give the court jurisdiction to proceed. Trowbridge v. Allen, 48 Colo. 419, 110 P. 193 (1910); Empire Ranch & Cattle Co. v. Coldren, 51 Colo. 115, 117 P. 1005 (1911); Millage v. Richards, 52 Colo. 512, 122 P. 788 (1912).

Since this rule requires an affidavit to matters involving legal opinion and conclusions of law and fact, it contemplates that such an affidavit will be made upon the only basis on which such opinions and conclusions can be reached. Jotter v. Marvin, 67 Colo. 548, 189 P. 19 (1920).

Affiant's knowledge of matters stated in his affidavit must of necessity frequently rest upon information derived from others, and where this is so it is generally sufficient to aver upon information and belief that such matters are true; in such cases belief is to be considered an absolute term, and perjury may be assigned on such affidavit, if false. Jotter v. Marvin, 67 Colo. 548, 189 P. 19 (1920).

The chief test of the sufficiency of the affidavit is whether it is so clear and certain that an indictment for perjury may be sustained on it if false. Jotter v. Marvin, 67 Colo. 548, 189 P. 19 (1920).

Where the averment made applies to many defendants, both individual and corporate, taken together with the failure to give the post-office addresses of any of the defendants or to state that they are unknown, strongly suggests an effort to conceal all, rather than to furnish any, information by which notice of the suit would possibly reach any of the defendants. Gibson v. Wagner, 25 Colo. App. 129, 136 P. 93 (1913).

To state that the residence is unknown is not in strict compliance with this rule which requires an affidavit for publication of summons to state that the post-office address is unknown. Robinson v. Clauson, 142 Colo. 434, 351 P.2d 257 (1960).

Where an affidavit for the publication of the summons states that certain defendants named, ''either reside out of the state or have departed therefrom, or concealed themselves to avoid process, and that their post-office address is unknown to affiant'' is a compliance with this rule. Hanshue v. Marvin Inv. Co., 67 Colo. 189, 184 P. 289 (1919).

Where the affidavit sets forth that the officers of a company "reside out of the state", the affidavit is sufficient. Jotter v. Marvin Inv. Co., 67 Colo. 555, 189 P. 22 (1920).

C. The Order.

The object of the publication of summons is to give notice to the defendant of a suit pending and of its purpose. Webster v. Heginbotham, 23 Colo. App. 229, 129 P. 569 (1913), aff'd, 58 Colo. 351, 145 P. 1165 (1915).

Where the judgment is found upon substituted service of summons the defendant's name must be correctly given in the notice, although the doctrine of ''idem sonans'' applies to records, such as judgments. Robinson v. Clauson, 142 Colo. 434, 351 P.2d 257 (1960).

The failure of the publication notice to contain the forename or Christian name of the party is ordinarily held to prevent a court from obtaining jurisdiction over him. Robinson v. Clauson, 142 Colo. 434, 351 P.2d 257 (1960).

Initial letters only are sufficient. Where the papers do not give the full Christian names of all the parties, but give the initial letters thereof only, this is sufficient. Webster v. Heginbotham, 23 Colo. App. 229, 129 P. 569 (1913), aff'd, 58 Colo. 351, 145 P. 1165 (1915).

It must be evident to every person that a published notice, using the name by which the defendant is commonly known in the community, will as readily attract his attention as if his real name were used, particularly where the initials are the same, and that the use of the name as commonly known will much more readily and probably attract the attention of his acquaintances and friends by whom information might be communicated to him than if the publication had been by his real name by which he was not commonly known. Webster v. Heginbotham, 23 Colo. App. 229, 129 P. 569 (1913), aff'd, 58 Colo. 351, 145 P. 1165 (1915).

Evidence of identity must be made. Upon mere publication of the summons in which one is named as defendant, those claiming under a similar name are not affected unless there is evidence of the identity in fact of former name with the latter one. Bloomer v. Cristler, 22 Colo. App. 238, 123 P. 966 (1912).

D. Period of Time.

A delay of five months between the return of the original summons by the sheriff and the making of the order of publication does not invalidate the order of publication nor render the service void. Richardson v. Wortman, 34 Colo. 374, 83 P. 381 (1905).

Publication must be for four weeks. Jones v. Colescott, 134 Colo. 552, 307 P.2d 464 (1957).

The clerk must within 15 days after the order of publication mail a copy of the process to each of the persons whose addresses are known. Jones v. Colescott, 134 Colo. 552, 307 P.2d 464 (1957).

Service is complete on last day of publication. By presumption of law a defendant who is served with summons by publication is charged with knowledge that service will be complete on the day of the last publication. Netland v.

Baughman, 114 Colo. 148, 162 P.2d 601 (1945).

Default judgment entered prior to time allowed is error. After constructive service by publication, a judgment by default entered before the expiration of the time allowed to plead or answer is premature, and in a direct proceeding to review a judgment shown to have been so entered prematurely, a reversal for error must be granted. Netland v. Baughman, 114 Colo. 148, 162 P.2d 601 (1945).

X. MANNER OF PROOF.

Annotator's note. Since section (i) of this rule is similar to § 49 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The return serves no purpose except to show to the court that there has been service and to make a record thereof, so that the court's jurisdiction will appear forever. Sawdey v. Pagosa Lumber Co., 78 Colo. 185, 240 P. 334 (1925).

It is the service of summons that confers jurisdiction over the person of a defendant, not the return. Sawdey v. Pagosa Lumber Co., 78 Colo. 185, 240 P. 334 (1925).

The return of service is not aided by presumption. Venner v. Denver Union Water Co., 15 Colo. App. 495, 63 P. 1061 (1900).

A sheriff's return of service is prima facie evidence of the facts recited therein. Gibbs v. Ison, 76 Colo. 240, 230 P. 784 (1924); Neher v. District Court, 161 Colo. 445, 422 P.2d 627 (1967).

The prima facie evidence represented by a return of service must be overcome by clear and convincing proof. Stegall v. Stegall, 756 P.2d 384 (Colo. App. 1987).

Showing may be sufficient to overcome prima facie showing. Where there is a showing, even though not as detailed as may be desirable, which nonetheless is sufficient as a matter of law to overcome the prima facie showing made by a sheriff's return, the service must therefore be set aside. Neher v. District Court, 161 Colo. 445, 422 P.2d 627 (1967).

An insufficient return should be amended. It is the duty of a person serving a summons to amend his return, by leave of court, as soon as he knows that it is erroneous or insufficient. Sawdey v. Pagosa Lumber Co., 78 Colo. 185, 240 P. 334 (1925).

An erroneous return does not detract from a valid service. Clark v. Nat'l Adjusters, Inc., 140 Colo. 593, 348 P.2d 370 (1959).

Service of summons by acknowledgment is sufficient and gives the court full jurisdiction. Wilson v. Carroll, 80 Colo. 234, 250 P. 555 (1926).

It is the voluntary return that constitutes valid service. It is not alone the delivery of the summons to defendant, but the voluntary return thereof to plaintiff with her written acknowledgment thereon which constitutes valid and sufficient service. Seeley v. Taylor, 17 Colo. 70, 28 P. 461 (1891), 28 P. 723 (1892).

It may be voluntary though accompanied by bitter reproaches. That the writings on the summons constituting an acceptance of service are accompanied by bitter reproaches and severe denunciations of plaintiff by defendant does not change the fact that he received copies of the summons and voluntarily acknowledged and returned the same to plaintiff with full knowledge of the nature and purpose of the action which the plaintiff had brought against him. Seeley v. Taylor, 17 Colo. 70, 28 P. 461 (1891), 28 P. 723 (1892).

Even if defendant says in one part of the indorsement that he did not know the meaning of the summons, it is still good where his whole language taken together clearly shows that he did know and that he returned them to plaintiff that he might secure whatever earthly law might do for him. Seeley v. Taylor, 17 Colo. 70, 28 P. 461 (1891), 28 P. 723 (1892).

Where no appeal is taken from a trial judge's order in which he ruled adversely on a preliminary motion questioning under this rule jurisdiction, the right has been waived. Wells Aircraft Parts Co. v. Allan J. Kayser Co., 118 Colo. 197, 194 P.2d 326 (1947).

In termination of parental rights case, omission of the process server's verified signature is insufficient to cause prejudice to father's case where father acknowledged he received the notices and petitions. Allowing an amendment to cure the defect serves the best interests of the children. In re Petition of Taylor, 134 P.3d 579 (Colo. App. 2006).

XI. AMENDMENT.

A summons is subject to amendment by the court. Erdman v. Hardesty, 14 Colo. App. 395, 60 P. 360 (1900) (decided under § 41 of the former code of civil procedure, which was replaced by the rules of civil procedure in 1941).

Originals not to be treated as sacrosanct. As with most pleadings and writings in the nature of pleadings, the purpose of justice is best served not by treating originals as sacrosanct, but rather by permitting the parties to ensure that the issues, as ultimately framed, represent the parties' true positions. Brown v. Schumann, 40 Colo. App. 336, 575 P.2d 443 (1978).

XII. TIME LIMIT FOR SERVICE.

Section (m) requires notice before dismissal, but does not require notice after expiration of the service deadline. The sixty-three-day deadline is a condition precedent only to dismissal or a new deadline. Taylor v. HCA-Healthone LLC, 2018 COA 29, 417 P.3d 943.

Rule 5. Service and Filing of Pleadings and Other Papers

(a) Service: When Required. Except as otherwise provided in these rules, every order required by its terms to be served, every pleading subsequent to the original complaint unless the court otherwise orders because of numerous defendants, every paper relating to discovery required to be served upon a party unless the court otherwise orders, every written motion other than one which may be heard ex parte, and every written notice, appearance, demand, offer of judgment, designation of record on appeal, and similar paper shall be served upon each of the parties. No service need be made on parties in default for failure to appear except that pleadings asserting new or additional claims for relief against them shall be served upon them in the manner provided for service of summons in Rule 4.

(b) Making Service: (1) Service under C.R.C.P. 5(a) on a party represented by an attorney is made upon the attorney unless the court orders personal service upon the party. A resident attorney, on whom pleadings and other papers may be served, shall be associated as attorney of record with any out-of-state attorney practicing in any courts of this state.

(2) Service under C.R.C.P. 5(a) is made by:

(A) Delivering a copy to the person served by:

(i) handing it to the person;

(ii) leaving it at the person's office with a clerk or other person in charge, or if no one is in charge, leaving it in a conspicuous place in the office; or

(iii) if the person has no office or the office is closed, leaving it at the person's dwelling house or usual place of abode with someone 18 years of age or older residing there;

(B) Mailing a copy to the last known address of the person served. Service by mail is complete on mailing;

(C) If the person served has no known address, leaving a copy with the clerk of the court; or

(D) Delivering a copy by any other means, including E-Service, other electronic means or a designated overnight courier, consented to in writing by the person served. Designation of a facsimile phone number or an email address in the filing effects consent in writing for such delivery. Parties who have subscribed to E-Filing, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 121 Section 1-26 § 1.(d), have agreed to receive E-Service. Service by other electronic means is complete on transmission; service by other consented means is complete when the person making service delivers the copy to the agency designated to make delivery. Service by other electronic means or overnight courier under C.R.C.P. 5(b)(2)(D) is not effective if the party making service learns that the attempted service did not reach the person to be served.

(c) Service: Numerous Defendants. In any action in which there are unusually large numbers of defendants, the court, upon motion or of its own initiative, may order that service of the pleadings of the defendants and replies thereto need not be made as between the defendants and that any cross claim, counterclaim, or matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense contained therein shall be deemed to be denied or avoided by all other parties and that the filing of any such pleading and service thereof upon the plaintiff constitutes due notice of it to the parties. A copy of every such order shall be served upon the parties in such manner and form as the court directs.

(d) Filing Certificate of Service. All papers after the initial pleading required to be served upon a party, together with a certificate of service, must be filed with the court within a reasonable time after service, but disclosures under Rule C.R.C.P. 26(a)(1) or (2) and the following discovery requests and responses shall not be filed until they are used in the proceeding or the court orders otherwise: (i) depositions, (ii) interrogatories, (iii) requests for documents or to permit entry upon land, and (iv) requests for admission.

(e) Filing with Court Defined. The filing of pleadings and other papers with the court as required by these rules shall be made by filing them with the clerk of the court, except that the judge may permit the papers to be filed with the judge, in which event the judge shall note thereon the filing date and forthwith transmit them to the office of the clerk. A paper filed by E-Filing in compliance with C.R.C.P. 121 Section 1-26 constitutes a written paper for the purpose of this Rule. The clerk shall not refuse to accept any paper presented for filing solely because it is not presented in proper form as required by these rules or any local rules or practices.

(f) Inmate Filing and Service. Except where personal service is required, a pleading or paper filed or served by an inmate confined to an institution is timely filed or served if deposited in the institution's internal mailing system on or before the last day for filing or serving. If an institution has a system designed for legal mail, the inmate must use that system to receive the benefit of this rule.

Although this rule does not specifically refer to an "offer of settlement", it includes any "similar paper", which would include an "offer of settlement" pursuant to § 13-17-202. Serving an offer via facsimile, therefore, was proper under this rule. Dillen v. HealthOne, L.L.C., 108 P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2004).

Applied in Bd. of Water Works v. Pueblo Water Works Employees Local 1045, 196 Colo. 308, 586 P.2d 18 (1978); Stubblefield v. District Court, 198 Colo. 569, 603 P.2d 559 (1979); Black ex rel. Bayless v. Cullar, 665 P.2d 1029 (Colo. App. 1983).

II. SERVICE: WHEN REQUIRED.

A judgment of dismissal with prejudice entered without notice is void and subject to direct or collateral attack. Thompson v. McCormick, 138 Colo. 434, 335 P.2d 265 (1959); Radinsky v. Kripke, 143 Colo. 454, 354 P.2d 500 (1960).

It is the substance, not the form, of a request to the court which controls the necessity for proper notice. Phillips v. Phillips, 155 Colo. 538, 400 P.2d 450 (1964); Cont'l Oil Co. v. Benham, 163 Colo. 255, 430 P.2d 90 (1967).

Where the issues of fact tendered by a motion "ex parte" in effect and in substance constitute a new and additional claim for relief against defendants in default, they are therefore entitled to service of notice of filing such a motion which effectively and substantially is a pleading asserting a new and additional claim in accordance with section (a) of this rule. Cont'l Oil Co. v. Benham, 163 Colo. 255, 430 P.2d 90 (1967).

Failure to serve any cross claim is not an inexcusable failure to comply with section (a) of this rule which relates to the service of pleadings and does not constitute inexcusable neglect where there is ample time prior to the date set for trial for the filing of any answer to the cross-complaint and counterclaim and where it is not apparent how the substantial rights of any litigant can in any manner be prejudiced by permitting such. Gould & Preisner, Inc. v. District Court, 149 Colo. 484, 369 P.2d 554 (1962).

This rule is without pertinence where one has made an appearance. Section (a) of this rule is without pertinence where C.R.C.P. 55(b)(2), as an express exception, requires the giving of notice of application for judgment to one who has appeared, even though he may be in default at the time. Holman v. Holman, 114 Colo. 437, 165 P.2d 1015 (1946).

Since defendant's right to plead in an action continues after the date beyond which plaintiff can set the cause for trial, he is, although in default in such an action, entitled to notice of amendment of complaint affecting the jurisdiction of the court, in order to plead as contemplated by C.R.C.P. 15(a), section (a) of this rule notwithstanding. Myers v. Myers, 110 Colo. 412, 135 P.2d 235 (1943).

Where parties waive time requirements for responsive pleadings but stipulation is silent on notice provisions, service requirements of this rule apply. Bernhagen v. Burton, 694 P.2d 880 (Colo. App. 1984).

Failure to serve prompt notice is harmless error and does not affect validity of order, where the party against whom a parental rights termination motion was filed had been aware for months that a termination was scheduled, and where service was made 22 days before the hearing. People in Interest of M.M., 726 P.2d 1108 (Colo. 1986).

III. SERVICE: HOW MADE.

Law reviews. For article, ''One Year Review of Domestic Relations'', see 37 Dicta 55 (1960). For comment on Zika v. Eckel appearing below, see 35 U. Colo. L. Rev. 283 (1963).

Under this rule a party whose appearance is of record should be served personally or through his counsel. Zerobnick v. City & County of Denver, 139 Colo. 139, 337 P.2d 11 (1959).

Proper service on attorney binds client. During the course of a proceeding, service of papers on the attorney of record, where service upon the attorney is proper, binds the client until the attorney is discharged or substituted out of the case in a manner provided by law. Pearson v. Pearson, 141 Colo. 336, 347 P.2d 779 (1959).

Service by mail upon the attorney of record in an administrative hearing is sufficient. North Glenn Sub. Co. v. District Court, 187 Colo. 409, 532 P.2d 332 (1975).

Service must be at address in pleading. The requirement that an attorney is required to specify his office address when he enters an appearance, together with the requirements of this rule, makes it apparent that service must be upon an attorney at the address listed in the pleading. People v. Buscarello, 706 P.2d 805 (Colo. App. 1985).

It is not sufficient to mail notice to a different office of the district attorney than that specified in the pleadings. People v. Buscarello, 706 P.2d 805 (Colo. App. 1985).

Where a second amended complaint did not assert any claims for relief against defendants which were not included in the first amended complaint, and the second amended complaint was served upon the defendant's attorney of record who had appeared for them on their motion to quash service of process after service of the first amended complaint, the trial court did not err in entering default judgments against them, inasmuch as it was unnecessary to serve the second amended complaint personally, since section (b)(1) of this rule provides that service upon a party represented by an attorney shall be made upon the attorney. McHenry F. S., Inc. v. Clausen, 30 Colo. App. 253, 491 P.2d 592 (1971).

Notice to one's attorney to take a deposition is in all respects sufficient and complete. Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. District Court, 126 Colo. 217, 247 P.2d 903 (1952).

Party is not entitled to subpoena or mileage allowance. When a party is noticed to appear for the taking of his deposition, he is not entitled to a subpoena nor to a per diem allowance or mileage. Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. District Court, 126 Colo. 217, 247 P.2d 903 (1952).

Attorneys who have once entered an appearance for a litigant and are thereafter discharged are not agents of a litigant for service of notice, even though they were required to remain attorneys of record when the trial court refuses to permit the withdrawal of their appearance, for the court cannot create or continue the relationship of attorney and client by denying the request of discharged lawyers to withdraw their appearance. Phillips v. Phillips, 155 Colo. 538, 400 P.2d 450 (1964).

Service of trial notice on counsel who has been discharged months previously is ineffectual for any purpose. Thompson v. McCormick, 138 Colo. 434, 335 P.2d 265 (1959).

The court may order service upon a party himself, even though he is represented by an attorney, in cases where the court deems such service necessary. Zika v. Eckel, 150 Colo. 302, 372 P.2d 165 (1962).

Where absence and neglect of attorney for defendant is well known to all parties, it is incumbent upon the court to direct service of notice of trial setting upon defendant personally. Zika v. Eckel, 150 Colo. 302, 372 P.2d 165 (1962).

Applied in In re Cooper, 113 P.3d 1263 (Colo. App. 2005).

IV. FILING WITH COURT.

Filing is a ministerial task which a judge may undertake. Stroh v. Johnson, 194 Colo. 411, 572 P.2d 840 (1978).

The fact that a judge is not currently assigned to a particular case does not impair his power, as an officer of the court, to accept papers for the purpose of filing them in that court. Stroh v. Johnson, 194 Colo. 411, 572 P.2d 840 (1978).

Where the judge fails to strictly adhere to this rule, defendant cannot take advantage of such if plaintiff's counsel acted in accordance with section (e) of this rule when the judge permitted the motion to be filed with him. Sprott v. Roberts, 154 Colo. 252, 390 P.2d 465 (1964).

If correctional facility where plaintiff was incarcerated had no system for legal mail, plaintiff's complaint was timely filed and must be reinstated because it was deposited with the facility's internal mail system on or before the filing deadline, even though the trial court received the complaint after the deadline. If the correctional facility did have a legal mail system and plaintiff failed to deposit the complaint with the system on or before the filing deadline, then the trial court correctly dismissed the complaint as untimely. Wallin v. Cosner, 210 P.3d 479 (Colo. App. 2009).

Rule 6. Time

(a) Computation. (1) In computing any period of time prescribed or allowed by these rules, the day of the act, event, or default from which the designated period of time begins to run shall not be included. Thereafter, every day shall be counted, including holidays, Saturdays or Sundays. The last day of the period so computed shall be included, unless it is a Saturday, a Sunday, or a legal holiday, in which event the period runs until the end of the next day which is not a Saturday, a Sunday, or a legal holiday. The ''next day'' is determined by continuing to count forward when the period is measured after an event and backward when measured before an event.

(2) As used in this Rule, ''Legal holiday'' includes the first day of January, observed as New Year's Day; the third Monday in January, observed as Martin Luther King Day; the third Monday in February, observed as Washington-Lincoln Day; the last Monday in May, observed as Memorial Day; the fourth day of July, observed as Independence Day; the first Monday in September, observed as Labor Day; the second Monday in October, observed as Columbus Day; the 11th day of November, observed as Veteran's Day; the fourth Thursday in November, observed as Thanksgiving Day; the twenty-fifth day of December, observed as Christmas Day, and any other day except Saturday or Sunday when the court is closed.

(b) Enlargement. When by these rules or by a notice given thereunder or by order of court an act is required or allowed to be done at or within a specified time, the court for cause shown may, at any time in its discretion (1) with or without motion or notice, order the period enlarged if request therefor is made before the expiration of the period originally prescribed or as extended by a previous order or (2) upon motion made after the expiration of the specified period permit the act to be done where the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect; but it may not extend the time for taking any action under Rule 60(b) and may extend the time for taking any action under Rule 59 only as allowed by that rule.

(c) Unaffected by Expiration of Term. Repealed.

(d) For Motions — Affidavits. Repealed.

(e) Additional Time After Service Under C.R.C.P. 5(b)(2)(B), (C), or (D). Repealed.

[1] After the particular effective date, time computation in most situations is intended to incorporate the Rule of Seven. Under the Rule of Seven, a day is a day, and because calendars are divided into 7-day week intervals, groupings of days are in 7-day or multiples of 7-day intervals. Groupings of less than 7 days have been left as they were because such small numbers do not interfere with the underlying concept. Details of the Rule of Seven reform are set forth in an article by Richard P. Holme, 41 Colo. Lawyer, Vol. 1, P 33 (January 2012).

[2] Time computation is sometimes ''forward,'' meaning starting the count at a particular stated event [such as date of filing] and counting forward to the deadline date. Counting ''backward'' means counting backward from the event to reach the deadline date [such as a stated number of days being allowed before the commencement of trial]. In determining the effective date of the Rule of Seven time computation/otime interval amendments having a statutory basis, said amendments take effect on July 1, 2012 and regardless of whether time intervals are counted forward or backward, both the time computation start date and deadline date must be after June 30, 2012. Further, the time computation/otime interval amendments do not apply to modify the settings of any dates or time intervals set by an order of a court entered before July 1, 2012.

The provisions of section (e) authorize the addition of three days to the prescribed period for taking certain actions following service by mail. However, the time for filing a C.R.C.P. 59 motion is specifically triggered either by entry of judgment in the presence of the parties or by mailing of notice of the court's entry of judgment if all parties were not present when judgment was entered. As a result, section (e) is not applicable to the filing of C.R.C.P. 59 motions. Wilson v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 931 P.2d 523 (Colo. App. 1996).

The provision of section (e) authorizing the addition of three days for service by e-filing does not apply to statutorily proscribed time periods. This rule does not extend the time period for accepting an offer of settlement under § 13-17-202. Montoya v. Connolly's Towing, Inc., 216 P.3d 98 (Colo. App. 2008).

Section (e) does not modify statutory time period for petitions to review workers' compensation orders. Speier v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 181 P.3d 1173 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applied in Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 35 Colo. App. 252, 539 P.2d 137 (1975); Joslins Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 541 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1975); SCA Servs., Inc. v. Gerlach, 37 Colo. App. 20, 543 P.2d 538 (1975); Reiger v. Reiger, 39 Colo. App. 471, 566 P.2d 722 (1977); People ex rel. Garrison v. Lamm, 622 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1980); Cortez v. Brokaw, 632 P.2d 635 (Colo. App. 1981); Nat'l Account Sys. v. District Court, 634 P.2d 48 (Colo. 1981); Kofoed v. Blecker, 644 P.2d 74 (Colo. App. 1981); Marks v. District Court, 643 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1982); Blecker v. Kofoed, 672 P.2d 526 (Colo. 1983); Garcia v. Title Ins. Co. of Minnesota, 712 P.2d 1114 (Colo. App. 1985).

II. COMPUTATION.

Day of the act or event from which period runs not to be included in computation. In computing any period of time prescribed or allowed by statute, the day of the act or event from which the designated period of time begins to run is not to be included, but the last day of the period is to be included. Cade v. Regensberger, 804 P.2d 238 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where a complaint is filed on Saturday, and an adjudication had on the following Thursday, such adjudication is invalid for failure to comply with the statutory requirement of five days' notice of the commencement of the proceedings, Saturday being the filing date and therefore eliminated, and Sunday being excluded under this rule, since, the adjudication was held one day less than the minimum requirement of notice. Okerberg v. People, 119 Colo. 529, 205 P.2d 224 (1949).

A motion for a new trial filed on Monday, the eleventh day after the entry of judgment, is timely. Bursack v. Moore, 165 Colo. 414, 439 P.2d 993 (1968).

In computing the time for serving subpoenas, computation shall not include the day of the act or intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays. Thus, subpoenas which were served on Friday morning, directing the witnesses to appear on Monday morning, were not served 48 hours before the time the witnesses were to appear and were properly quashed. Wilkerson v. State, 830 P.2d 1121 (Colo. App. 1992).

The procedural computation of time for Colorado state courts' civil proceedings specified in section (a)(1) does not govern the computation of time periods provided in § 13-80-102. Williams v. Crop Prod. Servs., Inc., 2015 COA 64, 361 P.3d 1075.

Applied in N.E., Inc. v. Iliff & Monaco Assocs., 890 P.2d 146 (Colo. App. 1994).

III. ENLARGEMENT.

A. In General.

By its own clear terms, section (b) of this rule does not apply to a time period specified by the Colorado appellate rules. The phrase "these rules" plainly refers to the Colorado rules of civil procedure, of which this rule is a part. Farm Deals, LLLP v. State, 2012 COA 6, 300 P.3d 921.

Section (b) does not apply to the statutory deadline for payment of jury fees. If a statute sets forth a particular deadline or procedure, court-promulgated rules do not apply. Premier Members Fed. Credit Union v. Block, 2013 COA 128, 312 P.3d 276.

The trial court has broad latitude under section (b)(2) in permitting enlargement of time within which to file responsive pleadings. People v. McBeath, 709 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1985).

The time limits set by the court cannot be extended by a stipulation of the parties to a motion requesting an extension, unless the court approves. Moyer v. Empire Lodge Homeowner's Assoc., 78 P.3d 313 (Colo. 2003).

The granting of an extension of the period allowed for the filing of a reporter's transcription with the clerk rests within the sound discretion of the trial court. Mitchell v. Espinosa, 125 Colo. 267, 243 P.2d 412 (1952).

The action taken will not be disturbed on review in the absence of a clear showing of abuse of that discretion. Mitchell v. Espinosa, 125 Colo. 267, 243 P.2d 412 (1952); Farmer v. Norm "Fair Trade" Stamp, Inc., 164 Colo. 156, 433 P.2d 490 (1967).

Where a reporter's transcript is lodged with the clerk late after the entry of judgment, no application having been made for extension of time pursuant to section (b) of this rule, the reporter's transcript will be ordered stricken from the record on appeal. Hildenbrandt v. Hall, 129 Colo. 16, 269 P.2d 708 (1954).

Where it is clearly manifest that no attempt was made to comply with the provisions concerning the filing of reporter's transcripts, nor was any relief sought from their more or less strict requirements through resort to the simple procedure provided by section (b) of this rule, it is the disagreeable duty of an appellate court to be obliged to adhere to established precedent that the reporter's transcript be stricken from the record on appeal. Continental Air Lines v. City & County of Denver, 129 Colo. 1, 266 P.2d 400 (1954); Freeman v. Cross, 134 Colo. 437, 305 P.2d 759 (1957).

Where a case is before an appellate court on appeal, a motion for enlargement of time for filing a transcript of record should be made to the appellate court, not the trial court. Moreau v. Buchholz, 124 Colo. 302, 236 P.2d 540 (1951).

Removal to federal court made within extended time is timely. When the time for answer after service of summons has been extended by a state court, a motion for removal to a federal court made within the extended time is timely made. Oldland v. Gray, 179 F.2d 408 (10th Cir.), cert denied, 339 U.S. 948, 70 S. Ct. 803, 94 L. Ed. 1362 (1950).

When no motion to extend is made pursuant to this rule, it may be stricken. When one files no motion to extend, nor does the trial court on its own motion extend a period before its expiration, and after the time expires, defendant files no motion alleging excusable neglect in failing to comply with the time limitation set by the court, there is no basis for the court to deny a motion to strike the motion in view of the provisions of section (b) of this rule. AA Constr. Co. v. Gould, 28 Colo. App. 161, 470 P.2d 916 (1970).

Deposit of motion in mail on last day of extension not a sufficient filing. Where, under this rule, a 15-day period was allowed a proponent of a will to make a motion and on the fifteenth day the original motion was deposited in the United States mail for delivery to the court, such delivery was not a sufficient filing, since the deposit of the motion with the clerk, with intent that he retain it, he being in any sufficient manner notified of this purpose, is the essential thing to constitute a filing. Niles v. Shinkle, 119 Colo. 458, 204 P.2d 1077 (1949).

Amendment to timely filed objection permitted. There is no prohibition against filing an amendment to a timely filed objection to a master's report before a hearing on that objection has occurred. Rocky Mt. Power Co. v. Colo. River Water Conservation Dist., 646 P.2d 383 (Colo. 1982).

For history of section (b), see In re Van Camp, 632 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1981).

Applied in Walter v. Walter, 136 Colo. 405, 318 P.2d 221 (1957); Stuckman v. Kasal, 158 Colo. 232, 405 P.2d 948 (1965).

B. Before Expiration.

Under section (b)(1) of this rule, enlargements of time are so readily obtainable where application is made therefor within apt time that there is rarely an occasion where failure to do so would appear to be excusable. Smith v. Woodall, 129 Colo. 435, 270 P.2d 746 (1954); Freeman v. Cross, 134 Colo. 437, 305 P.2d 759 (1957).

C. After Expiration.

Extensions of time are a nullity where they are not obtained in the manner prescribed in section (b)(2) of this rule. Marcotte v. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp., 162 Colo. 131, 425 P.2d 37 (1967).

The court's failure to act on a motion to enlarge time period before the time has expired does not automatically extend an existing deadline. Moyer v. Empire Lodge Homeowner's Assoc., 78 P.3d 313 (Colo. 2003).

Court's permission on motion with cause shown is necessary. Authority, under this rule, for a court to permit a paper to be filed upon cause shown and on motion therefor, in the case of excusable neglect, is certainly not authority for such filing without permission of the court, without cause shown, and without motion therefor. Niles v. Shinkle, 119 Colo. 458, 204 P.2d 1077 (1949).

The trial court has broad latitude under the provisions of section (b)(2) of this rule. Farmer v. Norm ''Fair Trade'' Stamp, Inc., 164 Colo. 156, 433 P.2d 490 (1967).

A court of review will assume that an extension was properly made, in the absence of proper objections to the order of the court. Niles v. Shinkle, 119 Colo. 458, 204 P.2d 1077 (1949).

A trial court may, for good cause, allow an extension of time to file an answer, even though the original time limit has passed. Reap v. Reap, 142 Colo. 354, 350 P.2d 1063 (1960).

Under the language of this rule, the right to file an answer brief is lost where no request for extension of time is made within the time limit the brief was due, except upon a showing that failure to act was the result of excusable neglect. Fraka v. Malernee, 129 Colo. 87, 267 P.2d 651 (1954).

Exception not expanded to reliance on postal employee's assurance of timely delivery. The exception to the requirement of strict compliance with the time limits for filing new trial motions will not be expanded to include late filings resulting from counsel's reliance on a postal employee's assurance of timely delivery, because such expansion would be inconsistent with the language of section (b) and with the policy of giving finality to judgments after a reasonable time has been allowed to seek appellate review. Schuster v. Zwicker, 659 P.2d 687 (Colo. 1983).

"Excusable neglect" occurs when there has been a failure to take proper steps at the proper time, not in consequence of carelessness, but as the result of some unavoidable hindrance or accident. Farmers Ins. Group v. District Court, 181 Colo. 85, 507 P.2d 865, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878, 94 S. Ct. 156, 38 L. Ed. 2d 123 (1973); Moyer v. Empire Lodge Homeowner's Assoc., 78 P.3d 313 (Colo. 2003).

If statutory section expressly permits a court to accept nonparty designations filed outside the 90-day period when it determines that a "longer period is necessary", the provisions of section (b)(2) concerning demonstration of ''excusable neglect'' do not apply. Antolovich v. Brown Group Retail, Inc., 183 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2007).

In general, most such situations involve unforeseen occurrences. It is impossible to describe the myriad situations showing excusable neglect, but, in general, most situations involve unforeseen occurrences such as personal tragedy, illness, family death, destruction of files, and other similar situations which would cause a reasonably prudent person to overlook a required deadline date in the performance of some responsibility. Farmers Ins. Group v. District Court, 181 Colo. 85, 507 P.2d 865, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878, 94 S. Ct. 156, 38 L. Ed. 2d 123 (1973).

Failure to act due to carelessness and negligence is not excusable neglect. Farmers Ins. Group v. District Court, 181 Colo. 85, 507 P.2d 865, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878, 94 S. Ct. 156, 38 L. Ed. 2d 123 (1973).

Section (b) of this rule provides that a court may not extend the time for taking any action under C.R.C.P. 50(b) (provisions now in C.R.C.P. 59); therefore, filing a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict within 10 days after receipt of verdict is mandatory, and unless such motion is filed within the time prescribed the court has no power to pass on it. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

An order for the enlargement of the time within which a motion for a direct verdict after verdict can be filed is abortive in view of the specific provisions of section (b) of this rule prohibiting such enlargement. Mumm v. Adam, 134 Colo. 493, 307 P.2d 797 (1957).

A trial court cannot enlarge the time for the filing of a motion for new trial after the expiration of the specified period permitted by the rules. Austin v. Coll./Univ. Ins. Co. of Am., 30 Colo. App. 502, 495 P.2d 1162 (1972).

Rule is controlling over C.R.C.P. 60(b), as to whether a trial court may extend the period of time for filing a motion for new trial under C.R.C.P. 59(b) (now C.R.C.P. 59(d)), after the original filing period has expired. Liberty Mutual Ins. Co. v. Safeco Ins. Co., 679 P.2d 1115 (Colo. App. 1984).

District court is without discretionary power to deny a motion for default judgment where the opposing party, not an agency of the state, fails to comply with a court order requiring a certain act be done within a specified time and, after expiration of that time, fails to establish such failure to act was a result of excusable neglect. Sauer v. Heckers, 34 Colo. App. 217, 524 P.2d 1387 (1974).

A trial court is in error in extending the period of redemption after the redemption period had already expired; redemption is a purely statutory matter, and there is no rule that would allow the court to enlarge it. AA Constr. Co. v. Gould, 28 Colo. App. 161, 470 P.2d 916 (1970).

Applied in Business & Prod. Promotion, Inc. v. East Tincup, Inc., 154 Colo. 268, 389 P.2d 851 (1964).

IV. UNAFFECTED BY EXPIRATION OF TERM.

Section (c) of this rule held inapplicable where section (b) excludes matters under C.R.C.P. 59(e). Green v. Hoffman, 126 Colo. 104, 251 P.2d 933 (1952).

CHAPTER 2

Pleadings and Motions

ANALYSIS BY RULE

CHAPTER 2

PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS

Rule 7. Pleadings Allowed: Form of Motions

(a) Pleadings. There shall be a complaint and answer; a reply to a counterclaim denominated as such; an answer to a cross-claim, if the answer contains a cross-claim; a third-party complaint, if a person who was not an original party is summoned under the provisions of Rule 14; a third-party answer, if a third-party complaint is served; and there may be a reply to an affirmative defense. No other pleading shall be allowed, except upon order of court.

(b) Motions and Other Papers.

(1) An application to the court for an order shall be made by motion which, unless made during a hearing or trial, shall be made in writing, shall state with particularity the grounds therefor, and shall set forth the relief or order sought. The requirement of writing is fulfilled if the motion is stated in a written notice of the hearing of the motion.

(2) These rules applicable to captions, signing and other matters of form of pleadings apply to all motions and other papers provided for by these rules.

(c) Demurrers, Pleas, etc., Abolished. Demurrers, pleas, and exceptions for insufficiency of a pleading shall not be used.

(d) Agreed Case, Procedure. Parties to a dispute which might be the subject of a civil action may, without pleadings, file, in the court which would have had jurisdiction if an action had been brought, an agreed statement of facts. The same shall be supported by an affidavit that the controversy is real and that it is filed in good faith to determine the rights of the parties. The matters shall then be deemed an action at issue and all proceedings thereafter shall be as provided by these rules.

Cross references: For counterclaims and cross claims, see C.R.C.P. 13; for third-party practice, see C.R.C.P. 14.

II. PLEADINGS.

Law reviews. For article, ''Comments on the Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 22 Dicta 154 (1945). For standard pleading samples to be used in quiet title litigation, see 50 Dicta 39 (1953).

Strictly speaking, one no longer proceeds by complaint, but rather by claim for relief. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

Where no reply is ordered and defendants desire to rely on an affirmative defense, they must set forth the affirmative defense in the answer. Trustee Co. v. Bresnahan, 119 Colo. 311, 203 P.2d 499 (1949).

A reply to an affirmative defense is merely permissive. McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977).

Where no reply is required, defendants are put on notice that any matter in avoidance of their defense will be deemed in issue before the court. Davis v. Bonebrake, 135 Colo. 506, 313 P.2d 982 (1957).

An alternative direction to reply or elect to stand is not an unequivocal order to reply within the meaning of the final sentence of section (a) of this rule. North Poudre Irrigation Co. v. Hinderlider, 112 Colo. 467, 150 P.2d 304 (1944).

Where no counterclaim is advanced, plaintiff has no duty to reply. Where neither the pleadings of defendants nor the answers of interveners advanced a counterclaim, plaintiff, under section (a) of this rule, had no primary duty to reply to either. North Poudre Irrigation Co. v. Hinderlider, 112 Colo. 467, 150 P.2d 304 (1944).

Where defendant set up an agreement in its answer which was tantamount to a counterclaim, plaintiff was not required to plead the defenses asserted thereto. Colo. Woman's Coll. v. Bradford-Robinson Printing Co., 114 Colo. 237, 157 P.2d 612 (1945).

The rules specifically authorize the inclusion of counterclaims in replies to counterclaims, and the analogous federal rules have been so interpreted by the federal courts. T. L. Smith Co. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 444, 431 P.2d 454 (1967).

There is nothing inherently improper about asserting a counterclaim in a reply to a counterclaim. T. L. Smith Co. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 444, 431 P.2d 454 (1967).

Summons held to be writ, not a pleading. Where a summons informed the defendant that he had been sued by the plaintiffs for damages as a result of an automobile collision and did not purport to set forth the claim for relief upon which the action or proceedings was based, it was merely a writ, and not a pleading, which, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 3(a), must follow within 10 days after the service of summons. Ardison v. Villa, 248 F.2d 226 (10th Cir. 1957).

III. MOTIONS AND OTHER PAPERS.

Law reviews. For article, ''In the Matter of Ex Parte Restraining Orders, Injunctions and Writs of Ne Exeat in Divorce Cases'', see 9 Dicta 190 (1932). For article, ''Expediting Court Procedure'', see 10 Dicta 113 (1933).

Section (b)(1) of this rule is mandatory. Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952).

Oral motion cannot be properly considered by trial court. Where a husband failed to pay temporary alimony awarded his wife, the wife filed a motion for citation requiring him to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt for such failure, and in the hearing on the citation an order suspending the monthly payments of alimony was made on oral motion, it was held that the oral motion under the circumstances could not properly be considered by the trial court. Wright v. Wright, 122 Colo. 179, 220 P.2d 881 (1950).

Approved oral motions are nullities where rule is not complied with. Where upon oral motion and without notice, plaintiff obtained ex parte a nunc pro tunc order extending his time to lodge the reporter's transcript, and also obtained a further extension of time ex parte, but not nunc pro tunc, by again oral motion and without notice, it was held that the ''purported'' extensions of time were in each instance a nullity because neither was obtained in the manner prescribed in C.R.C.P. 6 (b)(2) and section (b)(1) of this rule. Marcotte v. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp., 162 Colo. 131, 425 P.2d 37 (1967).

Motions made incidental to a hearing need not be reduced to writing. Motions made at a hearing that are obviously incidental to the hearing itself, such as motions to exclude evidence, for a directed verdict, or for a mistrial, etc., are motions which are recorded in the minutes of a hearing or trial, and it is for this reason that such motions need not be reduced to writing and notice thereof given. Wright v. Wright, 122 Colo. 179, 220 P.2d 881 (1950).

Rule 11 sanctions are applicable to motions and other papers pursuant to Rule 7 (b)(2). Jensen v. Matthews-Price, 845 P.2d 542 (Colo. App. 1992).

Default judgment motion must be in writing setting forth grounds therefor. A party fails to follow C.R.C.P. 55 (f) as to default judgments on substituted service where he does not apply for the judgment by written motion setting forth with particularity the grounds in support of the motion and the relief sought as required by section (b)(1) of this rule. Norton v. Raymond, 30 Colo. App. 338, 491 P.2d 1403 (1971).

Statement in motion held insufficient to inform court. Where motion to dismiss complaint stated that ''the said complaint is not in accordance to the 1935 Colorado Statutes Annotated, and was filed in violation thereof, and contrary to the said statutes in such case made and provided'', the statement was insufficient to inform the court concerning the nature of the grounds upon which the dismissal was sought. Gordon Inv. Co. v. Jones, 123 Colo. 253, 227 P.2d 336 (1951).

Notice requirement where motion to reinstate jail sentence is treated as civil proceeding. Where a motion to reinstate a jail sentence imposed following conviction of vagrancy under a city ordinance, and the case is treated as a civil proceeding, it is incumbent upon a city to serve a copy of such motion or a written notice of hearing thereon upon the defendant personally or through his counsel, and where counsel has withdrawn, such notice must be served upon the defendant personally under section (b)(1) of this rule. Zerobnick v. City & County of Denver, 139 Colo. 139, 337 P.2d 11 (1959).

IV. DEMURRERS, PLEAS, ETC. ABOLISHED.

Law reviews. For article, ''Comments on the Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 22 Dicta 154 (1945).

Under this rule, a demurrer to a complaint would be considered a motion to dismiss. Henderson v. Greeley Nat'l Bank, 111 Colo. 365, 142 P.2d 480 (1943).

V. AGREED CASE.

Annotator's note. Since section (d) of this rule is similar to § 310 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Affidavit required by this rule must be filed. Considering a cause as a proceeding brought on an agreed statement is error where there is no compliance with the filing of the affidavit required by section (d) of this rule. Mesch v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 133 Colo. 223, 293 P.2d 300 (1956).

Relief sought must be expressed in agreement. Where parties waive process and pleading and come before the court upon an agreed case, the nature of the relief sought must be expressed in the agreement. Central City Water Co. v. Kimber, 1 Colo. 475 (1872).

If there is no agreement, a court is not empowered to do anything. Under section (d) of this rule, the court acquires jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter by force of the agreement, and if nothing is expressed as to the judgment or decree to be rendered upon the facts stated, the court is not empowered to do anything whatever. Central City Water Co. v. Kimber, 1 Colo. 475 (1872).

Parties cannot merely demand information as to their rights. If parties may go before a court with a naked statement of facts, and demand information as to their rights, without more, the courts will become schools of instruction with little time to attend to their proper and legitimate duties. Central City Water Co. v. Kimber, 1 Colo. 475 (1872).

Inadvertent omission of facts from statement may be relieved against. A stipulation in a case by both parties made for convenience and expedition, but by which counsel inadvertently admit facts not in accord with the premises and injurious to their client, may be relieved against. Welsh v. Noyes, 10 Colo. 133, 14 P. 317 (1890).

To strike out a portion of a stipulation on the suggestion of one party is error if such part is material; rather, the entire stipulation should be canceled. Welsh v. Noyes, 10 Colo. 133, 14 P. 317 (1890).

A party may amend ad damnum in agreed statement. Autrey v. Bowen, 7 Colo. App. 408, 43 P. 908 (1884).

In a case heard on an agreed statement of facts, it is not necessary to move for a new trial. Clayton v. Smith, 1 Colo. 95 (1868).

An agreed statement of facts in an action already pending is not an agreed case. Wagner-Stockbridge Mercantile & Drug Co. v. Goddard, 33 Colo. 387, 80 P. 1038 (1905); Truesdale v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 44 Colo. 416, 99 P. 63 (1908).

Motion instituting suit held not to comply with requirements for agreed statement. Mesch v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 133 Colo. 223, 293 P.2d 300 (1956).

Applied in Metropolitan Denver Sewage Disposal Dist. No. 1 v. Farmers Reservoir & Irrigation Co., 179 Colo. 36, 499 P.2d 1190 (1972).

Rule 8. General Rules of Pleading

(a) Claims for Relief. A pleading which sets forth a claim for a relief whether an original claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or a third-party claim, shall contain: (1) If the court is of limited jurisdiction, a short and plain statement of the grounds upon which the court's jurisdiction depends; (2) a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief; and (3) a demand for judgment for the relief to which the pleader claims to be entitled. No dollar amount shall be stated in the prayer or demand for relief. Relief in the alternative or of several different types may be demanded. Each pleading containing an initial claim for relief in a civil action, other than a domestic relations, probate, water, juvenile, or mental health action, shall be accompanied by a completed Civil Cover Sheet in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 1.2 (JDF 601), at the time of filing. Failure to file the cover sheet shall not be considered a jurisdictional defect in the pleading but may result in a clerk's show cause order requiring its filing.

(b) Defenses; Form of Denials. A party shall state in short and plain terms his defenses to each claim asserted and shall admit or deny the averments of the adverse party.

If he is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of an averment, he shall so state and this has the effect of a denial. Denials shall fairly meet the substance of the averments denied. When a pleader intends in good faith to deny only a part or a qualification of an averment, he shall specify so much of it as is true and material and shall deny only the remainder. Unless the pleader intends in good faith to controvert all the averments of the preceding pleading, he may make his denials as specific denials of designated averments or paragraphs, or he may generally deny all the averments except such designated averments or paragraphs as he expressly admits; but, when he does so intend to controvert all its averments, including averments of the grounds upon which the court's jurisdiction depends, he may do so by general denial subject to the obligations set forth in Rule 11.

(c) Affirmative Defenses and Mitigating Circumstances. In pleading to a preceding pleading, a party shall set forth affirmatively accord and satisfaction, arbitration and award, assumption of risk, contributory negligence, discharge in bankruptcy, duress, estoppel, failure of consideration, fraud, illegality, injury by fellow servant, laches, license, payment, release, res judicata, statute of frauds, statute of limitations, waiver, and any other matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense. Any mitigating circumstances to reduce the amount of damage shall be affirmatively pleaded. When a party has mistakenly designated a defense as a counterclaim or a counterclaim as a defense, the court on terms, if justice so requires, shall treat the pleading as if there had been a proper designation.

(d) Effect of Failure to Deny. Averments in a pleading to which a responsive pleading is required, other than those as to the amount of damage, are admitted when not denied in the responsive pleading. Averments in a pleading to which no responsive pleading is required shall be taken as denied or avoided. Averments in a pleading to which a responsive pleading is permitted but not required shall be taken as denied or avoided if no responsive pleading is filed.

(e) Pleading to be Concise and Direct; Consistency.

(1) Each averment of a pleading shall be simple, concise, and direct. When a pleader is without direct knowledge, allegations may be made upon information and belief. No technical forms of pleading or motions are required. Pleadings otherwise meeting the requirements of these rules shall not be considered objectionable for failure to state ultimate facts as distinguished from conclusions of law.

(2) A party may set forth two or more statements of a claim or defense alternately or hypothetically, either in one count or defense or in separate counts or defenses. When two or more statements are made in the alternative and one of them if made independently would be sufficient, the pleading is not made insufficient by the insufficiency of one or more of the alternative statements. A party may also state as many separate claims or defenses as he has regardless of consistency and whether based on legal or on equitable grounds or on both. All statements shall be made subject to the obligations set forth in Rule 11.

(f) Construction of Pleadings. All pleadings shall be so construed as to do substantial justice.

II. CLAIMS FOR RELIEF.

Law reviews. For article, ''Comments on the Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 22 Dicta 154 (1945). For article, ''The End of Uncertainty: The Colorado Supreme Court Adopts the Plausibility Pleading Standard'', see 46 Colo. Law. 27 (Feb. 2017).

This rule provides that plaintiff's complaint shall set forth a "claim for relief". Lamborn v. Eshom, 132 Colo. 242, 287 P.2d 43 (1955).

Complaint shall contain a short and plain statement. This rule provides that a complaint shall contain a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief. Weick v. Rickenbaugh Cadillac Co., 134 Colo. 283, 303 P.2d 685 (1956).

This rule contemplates notice to the opposing party concerning that which he is expected to defend. Bryant v. Hand, 158 Colo. 56, 404 P.2d 521 (1965).

The theory of pleading is to give an adversary notice of what is to be expected at trial. Lyons v. Hoffman, 31 Colo. App. 306, 502 P.2d 980 (1972).

A complaint must advise defendant of relief sought and grounds thereof. A complaint under the rules of civil procedure to be sufficient as a claim against a motion to dismiss is required to advise defendant of the nature of the relief sought against him and the grounds thereof. People ex rel. Bauer v. McCloskey, 112 Colo. 488, 150 P.2d 861 (1944).

Under this rule the essential element of a complaint is "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief''. Bernstein v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 149 Colo. 150, 368 P.2d 780 (1962); DiChellis v. Peterson Chiropractic Clinic, 630 P.2d 103 (Colo. App. 1981).

Plaintiff is not required to set out "a cause of action" under the rules of civil procedure. Smith v. Mills, 123 Colo. 11, 225 P.2d 483 (1950).

Theories of action are no longer significant. Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesbury, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

The rules of civil procedure were intended to deemphasize the theory of a "cause of action" and to place the emphasis upon the facts giving rise to the asserted claim. Bridges v. Ingram, 122 Colo. 501, 223 P.2d 1051 (1950); Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

One does not stand or fall on a "theory" or "cause of action", as obtained under the practice prior to adoption of the rules. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

The basic theory of plaintiff's pleading under the present rule is that the transaction or occurrence is the subject matter of a claim, rather than the legal rights arising therefrom. Brown v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 121 Colo. 502, 218 P.2d 1063 (1950).

A generalized summary of the case that affords fair notice is all that is required. Smith v. Mills, 123 Colo. 11, 225 P.2d 483 (1950).

Since the purpose of a complaint under the rules of civil procedure is to afford the defendant reasonable notice of the general nature of the matter presented. Vance v. St. Charles Mesa Water Ass'n, 170 Colo. 313, 460 P.2d 782 (1969); DiChellis v. Peterson Chiropractic Clinic, 630 P.2d 103 (Colo. App. 1981).

The purpose of this rule is not to require the pleader to set forth the facts with particularity, but merely to apprize the adverse party of the nature of his claim. Bridges v. Ingram, 122 Colo. 501, 223 P.2d 1051 (1950); Smith v. Mills, 123 Colo. 11, 225 P.2d 483 (1950); Rasmussen v. Freehling, 159 Colo. 414, 412 P.2d 217 (1966); Discovery Land & Dev.

Co. v. Colo.-Aspen Dev. Corp., 40 Colo. App. 292, 577 P.2d 1101; D'Amico v. Smith, 42 Colo. App. 369, 600 P.2d 84 (1979).

The chief function of a complaint is to give notice. Bridges v. Ingram, 122 Colo. 501, 223 P.2d 1051 (1950); Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957); Spomer v. City of Grand Junction, 144 Colo. 207, 355 P.2d 960 (1960); Kluge v. Wilson, 167 Colo. 526, 448 P.2d 786 (1968); Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesbury, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969); Brown v. Central City Opera House Ass'n, 36 Colo. App. 334, 542 P.2d 86 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 372, 553 P.2d 64 (1976).

But a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim for relief that is plausible on its face. Case law interpreting the state rules of civil procedure reflects first and foremost a preference to maintain uniformity in the interpretation of the federal and state rules of civil procedure and a willingness to be guided by the United States supreme court's interpretation of corresponding federal rules. It is thus appropriate for the state to adopt for state complaints the new plausible-on-its-face standard for federal complaints adopted by the United States supreme court in lieu of the prior federal and state standard that deemed a complaint sufficient unless it appears beyond doubt on the face of the complaint that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the claims alleged. Warne v. Hall, 2016 CO 50, 373 P.3d 588.

Failure to specify in a complaint the precise statute on which claim is based does not prevent plaintiff from seeking attorney fees. Plaintiff is only required to put defendant on notice that damages and reasonable attorney fees are being sought for defendant's failure to pay severance as provided in employment agreement. Fang v. Showa Entetsu Co., 91 P.3d 419 (Colo. App. 2003).

Plaintiff is entitled to receive relief regardless of claim in demand. While a demand for judgment is necessary, if the plaintiff is entitled to any relief under his stated claim, such relief may be granted, regardless of the specific relief contained in the demand for judgment. DiChellis v. Peterson Chiropractic Clinic, 630 P.2d 103 (Colo. App. 1981).

Precatory language no bar to treatment of document as complaint. Where a document is signed ''plaintiff'' and submitted along with a petition and unsigned order to waive the docket fee, the use of precatory language does not prevent the document from being a complaint. DiChellis v. Peterson Chiropractic Clinic, 630 P.2d 103 (Colo. App. 1981).

Under this rule pleadings need only serve notice of the claim asserted and need not express a complete recitation of all the facts which support the cause of action. Blake v. Samuelson, 34 Colo. App. 183, 524 P.2d 624 (1974); Eliminator, Inc. v. 4700 Holly Corp., 681 P.2d 536 (Colo. App. 1984); Bain v. Town of Avon, 820 P.2d 1133 (Colo. App. 1991).

If sufficient notice concerning the transaction involved is afforded the adverse party, the theory of the pleader is not important. Bridges v. Ingram, 122 Colo. 501, 223 P.2d 1051 (1950); Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957); Spomer v. City of Grand Junction, 144 Colo. 207, 355 P.2d 960 (1960); Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961); Vance v. St. Charles Mesa Water Ass'n, 170 Colo. 313, 460 P.2d 782 (1969).

Substance rather than appellation controls. The substance of the claim rather than the appellation applied to the pleading by the litigant is what controls. Brown v. Central City Opera House Ass'n, 36 Colo. App. 334, 542 P.2d 86 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 372, 553 P.2d 64 (1976).

If from the allegations of a complaint the plaintiff is entitled to relief under any theory, it is sufficient to state a claim. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

If, under the facts, the substantive law provides relief upon any "theory", the cause should proceed to judgment. Bridges v. Ingram, 122 Colo. 501, 223 P.2d 1051 (1950); Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957); Spomer v. City of Grand Junction, 144 Colo. 207, 355 P.2d 960 (1960); Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

Under this rule a complaint is sufficient if it contains a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief. Hinsey v. Jones, 159 Colo. 326, 411 P.2d 242 (1966); Shapiro and Meinhold v. Zartman, 823 P.2d 120 (Colo. 1992); Elliott v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 865 P.2d 859 (Colo. App. 1993).

A complaint is sufficient if the pleader clearly identifies the transaction which forms the basis of his claim. Kluge v. Wilson, 167 Colo. 526, 448 P.2d 786 (1968).

A complaint need not express all facts that support the claim but need only serve notice of the claim asserted. Grizzell v. Hartman Enters., Inc., 68 P.3d 551 (Colo. App. 2003).

Plaintiff need not anticipate the assertion of the statute of limitations and negate its effect in his complaint, for the defendants may waive such defense. Davis v. Bonebrake, 135 Colo. 506, 313 P.2d 982 (1957).

An amended complaint shall state a claim. A claim alleged in an amended complaint arising out of and connected with the occurrence pleaded in the original complaint shall state a claim entitling plaintiffs to relief. Espinoza v. Gurule, 144 Colo. 381, 356 P.2d 891 (1960).

A plaintiff is not required to file an amended complaint repeating allegations contained in claims later dismissed, when the claims are incorporated by reference in a claim not dismissed. Hadley v. Moffat County Sch. Dist. RE-1, 681 P.2d 938 (Colo. 1984).

If a party states any claim and proves it by a preponderance of the evidence, he is entitled to relief, without regard to a specific theory or cause of action. Spomer v. City of Grand Junction, 144 Colo. 207, 355 P.2d 960 (1960); Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesbury, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

Issues joined upon matters which are immaterial to a claim are surplusage and need not be proved. Spomer v. City of Grand Junction, 144 Colo. 207, 355 P.2d 960 (1960).

The prayer of a complaint is not the statement of the cause of action. Flemming v. Colo. State Bd. of Educ., 157 Colo. 45, 400 P.2d 932 (1965).

A prayer is a necessary part of a claim for relief under this rule. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

The prayer of the complaint was not formerly an essential part of the pleading, and the cause of action was not to be determined therefrom, but resort thereto could be had not only to determine what the pleader intended by the complaint itself but what his adversary might be led to believe therefrom. Green v. Davis, 67 Colo. 52, 185 P. 369 (1919) (decided under repealed Code of Civil Procedure which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

Under previous code, the form of the prayer seemed to be immaterial. Waterbury v. Fisher, 5 Colo. App. 362, 38 P. 846 (1894), aff'd, 23 Colo. 256, 47 P. 277 (1896); Powell v. Nat'l Bank of Commerce, 19 Colo. App. 57, 74 P. 536 (1903).

If the allegations of the complaint state a cause of action or show one entitled to relief, it should be granted regardless of the remedy sought. Flemming v. Colo. State Bd. of Educ., 157 Colo. 45, 400 P.2d 932 (1965).

If one misconceives his remedy, court will not be deprived of jurisdiction. If the allegations of the petition are such as to invoke both the jurisdiction of the court and to entitle the petitioner, on the face thereof, to some relief, the mere fact that one misconceives his remedy will not deprive the court of jurisdiction to act. In re Legislative Reapportionment, 150 Colo. 380, 374 P.2d 66 (1962).

The court will grant the relief entitled under the facts pleaded. If the plaintiff has stated a cause of action for any relief, it is immaterial what he designates it or what he has asked for in his prayer, for the court will grant him the relief to which he is entitled under the facts pleaded. Berryman v. Berryman, 115 Colo. 281, 172 P.2d 446 (1946).

A party cannot avoid facts or their legal significance by the form of his complaint; basic facts control. Maes v. Tuttoilmondo, 31 Colo. App. 248, 502 P.2d 427 (1972).

A complaint is not subject to a motion to dismiss if it shows that the pleader is entitled to some relief ''upon any theory of the law''. Hinsey v. Jones, 159 Colo. 326, 411 P.2d 242 (1966).

A dismissal of the action is error. If any of the allegations of the complaint, as amended, give notice to the defendants of a claim for relief and there is some competent evidence produced at the trial upon which relief could be granted, a dismissal of the action is error. Spomer v. City of Grand Junction, 144 Colo. 207, 355 P.2d 960 (1960).

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim was improperly sustained where the complaint set out all the allegations necessary for an absolute divorce and the prayer was for a judicial separation, for the allegations plainly showed that plaintiff was entitled to relief, though not to the specific relief prayed. Berryman v. Berryman, 115 Colo. 281, 172 P.2d 446 (1946).

If a plaintiff declares his intention of seeking a particular form of relief and of refusing all other relief, the legality or propriety of the relief sought might properly be determined on a motion to dismiss, though the complaint states facts entitling plaintiff to other relief than that he seeks. Berryman v. Berryman, 115 Colo. 281, 172 P.2d 446 (1946).

When it appears on the face of the complaint, or is admitted, that the complaint does not state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the claim is barred, the court has no jurisdiction of the subject matter, and the court can, for that reason, grant a motion to dismiss on this ground. Fort Collins-Loveland Water Dist. v. City of Fort Collins, 174 Colo. 79, 482 P.2d 986 (1971).

Where the prayer is for ''interest and costs of suit'', it is sufficient to meet the requirements of § 13-21-101 entitling a plaintiff to interest on the verdict from the date of filing a complaint. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

A complaint stated a claim for relief for damages when it contained allegations of the relationship between bank and depositor and that the defendant bank had disbursed funds of the plaintiff depositor without the latter's authority and in violation of the agreement between them. Henderson v. Greeley Nat'l Bank, 111 Colo. 365, 142 P.2d 480 (1943); Rivera v. Central Bank & Trust Co., 155 Colo. 383, 395 P.2d 11 (1964).

Claim stated where attached exhibit made part of complaint by reference. Where claims under mining agreements were at issue and a blank form of these agreements was set out in the complaint with no date stated, no allegation as to with whom made, no consideration stated, and no statements as to its terms, such did not render the complaint insufficient to state a claim, since an exhibit attached to the complaint and by reference made a part thereof listed the claims allegedly owned, the names of the owners who executed the agreements, and the book and page where these executed agreements could be found on record. Gold Uranium Mining Co. v. Chain O'Mines Operators, 128 Colo. 399, 262 P.2d 927 (1953).

Suit by acquitted person for return of arrest record not dismissed for failure to state a claim. When a person has been acquitted of a crime and denied the return of the arrest record without justification, a suit by the person alleging violation of the right of privacy is not to be dismissed for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Davidson v. Dill, 180 Colo. 123, 503 P.2d 157 (1972).

Complaint held not to be a "short and plain statement". A 15-page complaint containing some 100 separately numbered paragraphs seeking damages from one or all or any combination of some nine different defendants, together with a seven-page amendment, was not considered a ''short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief'' as envisioned by this rule. Ripple & Howe, Inc. v. Fensten, 156 Colo. 322, 399 P.2d 97 (1965).

Complaint did not comply with section (a). Where complaint is 30 pages long with an additional 10 pages of attached exhibits, consists of 178 separate paragraphs setting forth 36 separate claims for relief, and incorporates other portions of the complaint over 400 times, the plaintiffs did not comply with the requirements of section (a) of this rule. Borwick v. Bober, 34 Colo. App. 423, 529 P.2d 1351 (1974).

Allegations sufficient to comply with rule. Snyder v. City Council, 35 Colo. App. 32, 531 P.2d 643 (1974).

Plaintiff was merely required to set forth a legally cognizable injury causing harm for which she was entitled to some relief to meet the requirements of this rule. Dotson v. Dell L. Bernstein, P.C., 207 P.3d 911 (Colo. App. 2009).

Applied in Buena Vista Bank & Trust Co. v. Lee, 191 Colo. 551, 554 P.2d 1109 (1976); McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977); Gardner v. State, 200 Colo. 221, 614 P.2d 357 (1980); A.R.A. Mfg. Co. v. Brady Auto Accessories, Inc., 622 P.2d 113 (Colo. App. 1980); LaFond v. Basham, 683 P.2d 367 (Colo. App. 1984).

III. DEFENSES.

Law reviews. For note, ''Pleading a Claim Barred by Statute of Limitations by Way of Recoupment'', see 7 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 204 (1935). For article, ''The Law of Libel in Colorado'', see 28 Dicta 121 (1951).

This rule provides that a defendant's answer to plaintiff's claim for relief shall be denominated "defenses". Lamborn v. Eshom, 132 Colo. 242, 287 P.2d 43 (1955).

General plea denying existence of plaintiff's cause of action is sufficient. The time within which a plaintiff must bring his action is of the very essence of his claim, and even a general plea denying existence of his cause of action is sufficient under section (b) of this rule. Denning v. A. D. Wilson & Co., 137 Colo. 372, 326 P.2d 77 (1958).

No general denial where not any foundation. This rule contemplates an answer that speaks the truth, and where none of the specific denials has any foundation in fact, a general denial should not be filed. Lewis v. Buckskin Joe's, Inc., 156 Colo. 46, 396 P.2d 933 (1964).

Defense of truth in libel suit may be raised by general denial rather than special denial. Where the complaint in a libel action alleged the published articles were ''false, defamatory, untrue and libelous'' and defendants by answer denied generally the allegation, this allegation of plaintiff and its denial by defendants presented the issue of the truth of the published articles, and under these circumstances, a special defense of truth was not required. Hadden v. Gateway W. Publishing Co., 130 Colo. 73, 273 P.2d 733 (1954).

The defense of suicide in accident policy action can be raised by general denial. In an action on an accident policy where the plaintiff alleges death of the insured as the result of an accident, the defense of suicide can be raised by a general denial, for the defendant-insurer's denial that insured met his death by accidental means is equivalent to an affirmative plea of suicide, which need not be specially pleaded. Murray v. Travelers Ins. Co., 143 Colo. 258, 352 P.2d 678 (1960).

Where no responsive pleading is filed in a case, there is no issue presented for determination. Hercules Equip. Co. v. Smith, 138 Colo. 458, 335 P.2d 255 (1959).

Where defense of fraud was stated with sufficient particularity and supported by affidavit in defendant's response to motion for partial summary judgment, it should have been incorporated in defendant's answer for the purpose of technical compliance with section (c), even though the defense is more properly asserted in an answer. Alien, Inc. v. Futterman, 924 P.2d 1063 (Colo. App. 1995).

IV. AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES AND MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES.

A. In General.

Law reviews. As to the addition of the sentence: ''Any mitigating circumstances to reduce the amount of damage shall be affirmatively pleaded'' in this rule, see ''The Federal Rules from the Standpoint of the Colorado Code'', 27 Dicta 170 (1950). For note, ''Comments on Last Clear Change — Procedure and Substance'', see 32 Dicta 275 (1955). For comment on Carpenter v. Hill appearing below, see 32 Dicta 393 (1955). For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 36 Dicta 5 (1959). For article, ''Austin v. Litvak, Colorado's Statute of Repose for Medical Malpractice Claims: An Uneasy Sleep'', see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 825 (1985).

Section (c) entitles a party to have an affirmative defense considered by the trier of fact so long as it has been properly pleaded, evidence is presented at trial to support its consideration, and the party asserting it brings it to the court's attention. Watson v. Cal-Three, LLC, 254 P.3d 1189 (Colo. App. 2011).

It is fundamental that pleas in bar must be specially pleaded. Dillinger v. North Sterling Irrigation Dist., 135 Colo. 100, 308 P.2d 608 (1957).

Where a defense is neither pleaded nor raised at any stage of the proceedings in the trial court, it cannot be urged for the first time on appeal. Bernklau v. Stevens, 150 Colo. 187, 371 P.2d 765 (1962).

Matters not presented to a trial court by pleading pursuant to this rule will not be considered by the supreme court on review. Hercules Equip. Co. v. Smith, 138 Colo. 458, 335 P.2d 255 (1959).

Rigidity of section (c) softened by C.R.C.P. 15(b). The apparent rigidity of section (c) of this rule, which states that a party shall affirmatively plead all matters constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense, is softened by C.R.C.P. 15(b), which provides that when issues not raised by the pleadings are tried by the express or implied consent of the parties, they shall be treated in all respects as if they had been raised in the pleadings. Great Am. Ins. Co. v. Ferndale Dev. Co., 185 Colo. 252, 523 P.2d 979 (1974).

The trial court errs in considering such defenses where objected to. Where such defenses are first urged upon the court orally at the trial, not having been pled as required, the trial court errs in considering such defenses, especially over the objections of opposing counsel. Maxey v. Jefferson County Sch. Dist. No. R-1, 158 Colo. 583, 408 P.2d 970 (1965).

Where no objection is made to evidence introduced in regard to an affirmative defense which has not been specifically set forth in the pleadings as required by section (c) of this rule, such issue may be treated as raised in the pleadings under C.R.C.P. 15(b). Metropolitan State Bank, Inc. v. Cox, 134 Colo. 260, 302 P.2d 188 (1956).

Issue not specifically alleged as affirmative defense may be tried by express or implied consent. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Shultz, 168 Colo. 59, 450 P.2d 70 (1969) (consent not found).

Such issue must be "intentionally and actually tried". Where there is express or implied consent to try issues not raised by the pleadings, such issues may be tried in all respects as if they had been so raised, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 15(b); however, the record must show an ''express or implied consent'' to try an issue of fact which section (c) of this rule requires to be specifically alleged as an affirmative defense and the issue must be ''intentionally and actually tried'', it not being enough that some evidence is received germane to the issue sought to be raised. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Shultz, 168 Colo. 59, 450 P.2d 70 (1969).

This rule provides for various affirmative defenses in civil actions. Indus. Comm'n v. Ewing, 160 Colo. 503, 418 P.2d 296 (1966).

This rule also provides that mitigating circumstances to reduce the amount of damages shall be affirmatively pleaded. Indus. Comm'n v. Ewing, 160 Colo. 503, 418 P.2d 296 (1966).

Burden of proving mitigation on defendants. Mitigation or failure to mitigate is an affirmative defense to be pleaded by the defendants, and the burden of proving the same is also on them. Comfort Homes, Inc. v. Peterson, 37 Colo. App. 516, 549 P.2d 1087 (1976).

It is not a plaintiff's burden to produce the evidence on which any reduction of damages is to be predicated. Comfort Homes, Inc. v. Peterson, 37 Colo. App. 516, 549 P.2d 1087 (1976).

Under this rule, affirmative defense may not be raised by motion but only by answer, the plaintiff thereafter having an opportunity to raise and try all issues relating to such defenses. Markoff v. Barenberg, 149 Colo. 311, 368 P.2d 964 (1962).

A response to an affirmative defense is not required under this rule. Where the issue of the constitutionality of a statute cited in an affirmative defense was raised and adequately briefed in the trial court, it could be addressed on appeal. Raptor Educ. Found., Inc. v. State, 2012 COA 219, 296 P.3d 352.

Where the inclusion of the affirmative defense of release in a summary judgment motion was treated as being incorporated in the defendant's answer for the purpose of technical compliance with section (c) of this rule, the supreme court held that the plaintiffs were not prejudiced in any way because the affirmative defense of release had not been included in the defendant's answer. Cox v. Pearl Inv. Co., 168 Colo. 67, 450 P.2d 60 (1969).

Where defendant did not include the affirmative defense of acknowledgment in her answer, but included the defense in her motion for judgment on the pleadings and again in her response to plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, defendant alleged acknowledgment in the motions and sufficiently raised the defense such that the court could treat the answer as amended in compliance with rule 8(c). Drake v. Tyner, 914 P.2d 519 (Colo. App. 1996).

If affirmative defense is asserted in a motion for summary judgment and responded to without objection, it is deemed incorporated into the answer. Horodyskyj v. Karanian, 5 P.3d 332 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 32 P.3d 470 (Colo. 2001).

Inclusion of affirmative defense in motion deemed incorporated in defendant's answer. When the events providing the basis of a defendant's summary judgment motion occur subsequent to the complaint and answer and are fully set forth in the motion, the inclusion of the affirmative defense in the motion is deemed incorporated in defendant's answer. Bilar, Inc. v. Sherman, 40 Colo. App. 38, 572 P.2d 489 (1977).

Even if notice requirement, in suit against city, was affirmative defense, it was deemed to be incorporated in city's answer to suit by its inclusion in city's summary judgment motion, and thus city did not waive notice requirement. Mtn. Gravel & Const. v. Cortez, 721 P.2d 698 (Colo. App. 1986).

Failure to plead an affirmative defense as required by section (c), and failure to present any evidence or argument on the matter in the district court, preclude the reviewing court from reviewing the issue. Crocker v. Colo. Dept. of Rev., 652 P.2d 1067 (Colo. 1982).

A party waives all defenses and objections which he does not present in his answer. Duke v. Pickett, 168 Colo. 215, 451 P.2d 288 (1969).

Improper assertion of affirmative defense must be objected to, or it is waived. By arguing the merits of defendant's motion for summary judgment without raising objection in the trial court as to the assertion of the affirmative defense of release initially therein, plaintiffs waived any valid objection they may have had to this procedure. Cox v. Pearl Inv. Co., 168 Colo. 67, 450 P.2d 60 (1969).

Affirmative defenses may be considered on motion for summary judgment. Lin Ron, Inc. v. Mann's World of Arts & Crafts, Inc., 624 P.2d 1343 (Colo. App. 1981); Bain v. Town of Avon, 820 P.2d 1133 (Colo. App. 1991).

B. Statute of Limitations and Laches.

A statute of limitations is an affirmative defense and hence must be affirmatively pleaded. Knighton v. Howse, 167 Colo. 530, 448 P.2d 641 (1968).

A statute of limitations defense, being affirmative in nature, must be raised by responsive pleading. Trustees of Mtg. Trust of Am. v. District Court, 621 P.2d 310 (Colo. 1980).

Limitations of time are matters which cannot be raised by a motion to dismiss. Where an independent action to obtain relief from a judgment is resorted to, the limitations of time are those of laches and the statute of limitations, matters which cannot be raised by a motion to dismiss under this rule. Terry v. Terry, 154 Colo. 41, 387 P.2d 902 (1963).

Generally a statute of limitations defense should be raised in the answer to the complaint rather than in a motion to dismiss, but this position is not universally followed. Many courts hold that the defense of limitations may be raised by a motion to dismiss where the time alleged in the complaint shows that the action was not brought within the statutory period. The adoption of F.R.C.P. 9(f) allows averments in a complaint to be tested for sufficiency in regards to time. Thus, for example, a complaint which fails to specify time so that the statutory time may be computed may properly be dismissed pursuant to a motion pursuant to C.R.C.P. 12(b)(5). Wasinger v. Reid, 705 P.2d 533 (Colo. App. 1985); Reider v. Dawson, 856 P.2d 31 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 872 P.2d 212 (Colo. 1994).

The statute of limitations is not ground for motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted under C.R.C.P. 12(b), since, under section (c) of this rule, that is a defense which must be set forth affirmatively by answer. Smith v. Kent Oil Co., 128 Colo. 80, 261 P.2d 149 (1953); Davis v. Bonebrake, 135 Colo. 506, 313 P.2d 982 (1957); Fort Collins-Loveland Water Dist. v. City of Fort Collins, 174 Colo. 79, 482 P.2d 986 (1971).

The statute of limitations cannot be the basis for dismissal on motion on the grounds that it appears from the complaint that the claim was not timely made for the reasons that in the absence of an affirmative defense based on the statute of limitations such defense is waived, and the assertion or waiver of the defense can only be determined from the answer. Furthermore, even if pleaded, the running of the statute of limitations may have been tolled, and plaintiff in his complaint is not required to anticipate the defense. Smith v. Kent Oil Co., 128 Colo. 80, 261 P.2d 149 (1953); Davis v. Bonebrake, 135 Colo. 506, 313 P.2d 982 (1957).

Under this rule, a plea in bar based upon the statute of limitations cannot be raised by motion to dismiss, it being a defense which may or may not be relied upon and, if relied upon, must be pleaded as an affirmative defense. Fletcher v. Colo. & Wyoming Ry., 141 Colo. 72, 347 P.2d 156 (1959).

A statute of limitations is a defense which is waived if not affirmatively pleaded. In re Estate of Randall v. Colo. State Hosp., 166 Colo. 1, 441 P.2d 153 (1968).

Defense of statute of limitations sufficiently raised. An allegation that a claim is barred by the statute of limitations of this state in such case made and provided is sufficient to raise the defense of limitations. Denning v. A. D. Wilson & Co., 137 Colo. 372, 326 P.2d 77 (1958).

Limitations of time cannot be raised by a motion to strike. Laches and the statute of limitations cannot be raised by motion to dismiss or strike. McPherson v. McPherson, 145 Colo. 170, 358 P.2d 478 (1960).

The statute of limitations and laches must be affirmatively pleaded in an answer. McPherson v. McPherson, 145 Colo. 170, 358 P.2d 478 (1960); Terry v. Terry, 154 Colo. 41, 387 P.2d 902 (1963).

Laches is an affirmative defense and must be pleaded. Buss v. McKee, 115 Colo. 159, 170 P.2d 268 (1946); Duke v. Pickett, 168 Colo. 215, 451 P.2d 288 (1969).

Laches is form of estoppel and contemplates an unconscionable delay in asserting one's rights which works to the defendant's prejudice or injury in relation to the subject matter of the litigation. Lin Ron, Inc. v. Mann's World of Arts & Crafts, Inc., 624 P.2d 1343 (Colo. App. 1981).

Dismissal for failure to prosecute held not to be affirmative defense of laches. Columbine Valley Mut. Imp. & Maintenance Ass'n v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 173 Colo. 321, 478 P.2d 312 (1970).

Prejudice necessary to claim laches may be couched in terms of detrimental change of position on the part of the defendant or it may be occasioned by loss of evidence, death of witnesses, or other circumstances arising during the period of delay which affect the defendant's ability to defend. Lin Ron, Inc. v. Mann's World of Arts & Crafts, Inc., 624 P.2d 1343 (Colo. App. 1981).

Evidence insufficient for level of prejudice contemplated by doctrine of laches. While failure to litigate the issue of personal liability in either of two earlier actions against a corporate entity may have been poor judicial economy, the expense and inconvenience of further litigation, without more, did not rise to the level of prejudice contemplated by the doctrine of laches, where the defendants (individual owners of a corporation) were not indispensable parties to the first action under C.R.C.P. 19, but rather permissive parties under C.R.C.P. 18. Lin Ron, Inc. v. Mann's World of Arts & Crafts, Inc., 624 P.2d 1343 (Colo. App. 1981).

C. Res Judicata.

"Res judicata" is also an affirmative defense which must be affirmatively pled by way of answer. In re Crowley's Estate, 122 Colo. 244, 221 P.2d 378 (1950); Ruth v. Dept. of Hwys., 153 Colo. 226, 385 P.2d 410 (1963); Terry v. Terry, 154 Colo. 41, 387 P.2d 902 (1963); Bakery Workers Local 240 v. Am. Bakery Workers Local 240, 165 Colo. 210, 437 P.2d 783 (1968).

The defense of res judicata is considered waived if it is not appropriately raised. In re Wright, 841 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1992); Vincent v. Clean Water Action Project, 939 P.2d 469 (Colo. App. 1997).

Although term "res judicata" not explicitly used, it is not waived where arguments raised gave adequate notice that party was defending, in part, on the basis that the parties were bound by the earlier judgment. In re Wright, 841 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1992); Vincent v. Clean Water Action Project, 939 P.2d 469 (Colo. App. 1997).

Res judicata bars relitigation not only of all issues actually decided, but of all issues that might have been decided. Pomeroy v. Waitkus, 183 Colo. 344, 517 P.2d 396 (1973).

However, res judicata applies only when there exists identity of subject matter, cause of action, parties, and capacity in the person for whom or against whom the claim is made. Also, the decision in the prior case must have been rendered on the merits. People in Interest of G.K.H., 698 P.2d 1386 (Colo. App. 1984).

A voluntary dismissal pursuant to an invalid stipulation is not a decision to which the doctrine of res judicata applies to preclude a subsequent action in dependency or neglect. People in Interest of G.K.H., 698 P.2d 1386 (Colo. App. 1984).

Res judicata holds that an existing judgment is conclusive of the rights of the parties in any subsequent suit on the same claim. Pomeroy v. Waitkus, 183 Colo. 344, 517 P.2d 396 (1973).

The defense of res judicata does not apply when the initial forum, the bankruptcy court, lacked the authority to award the full measure of the relief sought in the subsequent litigation, post-petition debts. In re Wright, 841 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1992).

Res judicata requires an identity of parties or their privies, as it would be unfair to preclude a party from litigating an issue merely because he could have litigated it against a different party. Pomeroy v. Waitkus, 183 Colo. 344, 517 P.2d 396 (1973).

Mutuality is a necessary element of defensive claim preclusion or res judicata. Foster v. Plock, 2017 CO 39, 394 P.3d 1119.

To sustain the defense of "res judicata" under section (c) of this rule, facts in support of it must be affirmatively shown either by the evidence adduced at the trial or by way of uncontroverted facts properly presented in a motion for summary judgment, or by a motion to dismiss under C.R.C.P. 12(b) where the court, on the basis of facts properly presented outside of the pleadings, is enabled to treat the same as a motion for summary judgment under C.R.C.P. 56. Ruth v. Dept. of Hwys., 153 Colo. 226, 385 P.2d 410 (1963); Saunders v. Bankston, 31 Colo. App. 551, 506 P.2d 1253 (1972).

Where facts are presented in evidence which constitute a defense of "res judicata", the court is not required to consider them when this defense was not pleaded. Bakery Workers Local 240 v. Am. Bakery Workers Local 240, 165 Colo. 210, 437 P.2d 783 (1968).

The question of "res judicata" cannot be raised by motion to dismiss. Fletcher v. Colo. & Wyoming Ry., 141 Colo. 72, 347 P.2d 156 (1959); Terry v. Terry, 154 Colo. 41, 387 P.2d 902 (1963).

Defendant may assert a claim preclusion defense for the first time in a motion to dismiss where plaintiff fails to show prejudice. Dave Peterson Elec., Inc. v. Beach Mountain Builders, Inc., 167 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2007).

It is error to sustain a motion to dismiss. Where prior adjudication is not affirmatively set up as a separate defense under this rule, but is presented by motion, it is error to sustain the motion. Kubat v. Kubat, 124 Colo. 491, 238 P.2d 897 (1951).

Party was not estopped from invoking doctrine of res judicata regarding small claims court judgment because of failure to raise doctrine in a pleading. The plaintiff could not seek to benefit from the small claims court judgment and simultaneously to prohibit defendant from using it. Vincent v. Clean Water Action Project, 939 P.2d 469 (Colo. App. 1997).

Mutuality element met where defendant in a second action was in privity with wife in the first action. Foster v. Plock, 2017 CO 39, 394 P.3d 1119.

D. Estoppel, Waiver, and Mistake.

Estoppel is an affirmative defense and must be set forth as a part of the pleadings. Kimmel v. Batty, 168 Colo. 431, 451 P.2d 751 (1969).

Collateral estoppel is in the nature of an affirmative defense which must be specifically pleaded in an answer. Banek v. Thomas, 733 P.2d 1171 (Colo. 1986).

The doctrine of collateral estoppel is designed to save judicial time and resources and relieve the burden on litigants of having to litigate claims more than once. Central Bank v. Mehaffy, Rider, Windholz, 940 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1997).

Collateral estoppel, or issue preclusion, bars relitigation of an issue determined in a prior proceeding if: (1) The issue precluded is identical to an issue actually determined in the prior proceeding; (2) the party against whom estoppel is asserted has been a party to or in privity with a party in the prior proceeding; (3) there is a final judgment on the merits in the prior proceeding; and (4) the party against whom estoppel is asserted has had a full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue in the prior proceeding. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Messina, 874 P.2d 1058 (Colo. 1994); City and County of Denver v. Block 173 Assocs., 814 P.2d 824 (Colo. 1991); Central Bank v. Mehaffy, Rider, Windholz, 940 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1997); In re Estate of Bell, 4 P.3d 504 (Colo. App. 2000); Williamsen v. People, 735 P.2d 176 (Colo. 1987); Byrd v. People, 58 P.3d 50 (Colo. 2002).

An order temporarily denying relief is not a final judgment; rather it is an interlocutory order. Therefore, a temporary order does not create collateral estoppel. M & M Management Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 979 P.2d 574 (Colo. App. 1998).

When a party has a full and fair opportunity to litigate an issue, the mere fact that the judgment was incorrect does not affect its conclusiveness. Under such circumstances, it is not unfair to apply collateral estoppel simply because the prior judgment may be wrong. Central Bank v. Mehaffy, Rider, Windholz, 940 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1997).

A court may refuse to apply collateral estoppel when there are prior inconsistent judgments against the same party. A case is not a prior inconsistent judgment if that prior judgment involves a case in a different context and with different parties. Central Bank v. Mehaffy, Rider, Windholz, 940 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1997).

If a trial court judgment is based on determinations of multiple issues, any of which standing independently would be sufficient to support the result, the judgment is not conclusive with respect to any of the issues standing alone. Any one of the five elements for a new trial could have been a reason for denying the new trial in a criminal case, and consequently, none of the elements is entitled to preclusive effect in an attorney malpractice case. Schultz v. Stanton, 198 P.3d 1253 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd on other grounds, 222 P.3d 303 (Colo. 2010).

Immunity from suit is an affirmative defense. Brown v. Rosenbloom, 34 Colo. App. 109, 524 P.2d 626 (1974), aff'd, 188 Colo. 83, 532 P.2d 948 (1975).

Matters raised by a motion to dismiss which are in the nature of avoidance, discharge, and waiver are affirmative defenses which under this rule cannot be raised by motion but only by answer. Markoff v. Barenberg, 149 Colo. 311, 368 P.2d 964 (1962).

Waiver and abandonment are special defenses in the nature of confession and avoidance which must be specially pleaded. Seeger's Estate v. Puckett, 115 Colo. 185, 171 P.2d 415 (1946).

A waiver of an asserted right must be affirmatively pleaded if it is to be used as a defense. Rudd v. Rogerson, 162 Colo. 103, 424 P.2d 776 (1967); Duke v. Pickett, 168 Colo. 215, 451 P.2d 288 (1969).

It is necessary for defendants to set forth a "lien waiver" if they desire to rely thereon under section (c) of this rule, as this is an affirmative defense. Trustee Co. v. Bresnahan, 119 Colo. 311, 203 P.2d 499 (1949).

Burden of proving estoppel, waiver, and mistake on person raising. Person who raises the affirmative defenses of estoppel, waiver, and mistake has the burden to prove the truth of the proposition asserted. Adams County Dept. of Soc. Servs. v. Frederick, 44 Colo. App. 378, 613 P.2d 642 (1980).

Mutuality is no longer required for collateral estoppel to apply, and a non-party to a judgment may invoke collateral estoppel to bar relitigation of an issue. Collateral estoppel requires only that the party against whom collateral estoppel asserted was a party in the initial proceedings. Central Bank v. Mehaffy, Rider, Windholz, 940 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1997).

As a general rule, collateral estoppel has no applicability to prior rulings in the same pending case. Central Bank v. Mehaffy, Rider, Windholz, 940 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1997).

Nonmutual defensive use of collateral estoppel is used by a defendant to bind a plaintiff to a prior judgment when that defendant was not a party to that judgment. A court's discretion to refuse to apply defensive nonmutual collateral estoppel is highly circumscribed. Central Bank v. Mehaffy, Rider, Windholz, 940 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1997).

Offensive nonmutual collateral estoppel occurs when a plaintiff seeks to foreclose a defendant from litigating an issue the defendant previously litigated unsuccessfully in another action against another party. When the doctrine of collateral estoppel was expanded to include offensive collateral estoppel, its application was made discretionary with the trial court because it does not promote judicial economy in the same way as defensive nonmutual collateral estoppel and because it often will be unfair to defendants. Central Bank v. Mehaffy, Rider, Windholz, 940 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1997).

In addition to foundational factors, court applying nonmutual offensive issue preclusion must consider: (1) Whether the party asserting issue preclusion could have joined in the first action, but instead took a "wait and see" approach; (2) the extent to which the party sought to be estopped had incentive to litigate vigorously the prior case; (3) whether the decision sought to be relied upon is inconsistent with another decision involving the party sought to be estopped; and (4) whether the second case afforded the party sought to be estopped procedural protections that were unavailable in the first case. Vanderpool v. Loftness, 2012 COA 115M, 300 P.3d 953.

Offensive issue preclusion may be waived. Party seeking to use issue preclusion offensively must raise it at the first reasonable opportunity after the court rendered the decision that had a preclusive effect. Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff's motion for directed verdict where 17 months had passed since defendant entered his guilty pleas, plaintiff objected to defendant's efforts to exclude evidence of the guilty pleas, plaintiff did not assert issue preclusion in the proposed trial management order, and plaintiff did not raise the issue until the second day of trial. Vanderpool v. Loftness, 2012 COA 115M, 300 P.3d 953.

E. Negligence Actions.

The last clear chance doctrine is a matter constituting an affirmative defense which must be pleaded, and defendant's purpose to avail himself of such defense should be stated in his answer to plaintiff's complaint. Markley v. Hilkey Bros., 113 Colo. 562, 160 P.2d 394 (1945).

Mutual denials of negligence are sufficient to raise affirmative defense of unavoidable accident. While it is the usual practice to plead unavoidable accident as an affirmative defense, the fact still remains that unavoidable accident is but a denial of negligence, and where the pleadings disclose that there were mutual denials of negligence the issue is in the case. Union P. R. R. v. Shupe, 131 Colo. 271, 280 P.2d 1115 (1955).

The issue of sudden emergency need not be stated in the complaint as an affirmative basis for relief, nor in the answer as a basis of defense; rather, notice of its applicability in any case is found in the evidence that may be offered in support of the claims or defenses. Davis v. Cline, 177 Colo. 204, 493 P.2d 362 (1972).

If negligence is a defense, defendants are deprived thereof by failing to file an affirmative pleading. Carpenter v. Hill, 131 Colo. 553, 283 P.2d 963 (1955).

The burden of alleging and proving contributory negligence rests upon the defendant under section (c) of this rule. Thorpe v. City & County of Denver, 30 Colo. App. 284, 494 P.2d 129 (1971).

Where defendant alleges in one defense of his answer that plaintiff's injuries and damages, if any, were proximately caused by plaintiff's own failure to exercise due care for his own safety, plaintiff is put on notice of defendant's contention of contributory negligence and of possibility of having to rebut showing of negligence on his part, and, therefore, it is reversible error to fail to submit issue of contributory negligence to jury. Lyons v. Hoffman, 31 Colo. App. 306, 502 P.2d 980 (1972).

"Seat belt defense" may not be pleaded affirmatively. An injured driver, or passenger, may recover the actual damages proximately caused by a tort-feasor's negligence, and the amount of such damages is not affected by, and may not be reduced, because the injured person failed to wear a seat belt, since the "seat belt defense" may not be pleaded affirmatively in defense of an action for negligence, and evidence that the injured party failed to wear a seat belt is not admissible to establish contributory negligence or to reduce the amount of the injured party's damages. Moore v. Fischer, 31 Colo. App. 425, 505 P.2d 383 (1972), aff'd, 183 Colo. 392, 517 P.2d 458 (1974).

F. Other Defenses.

An issue of accord and satisfaction is an affirmative defense under section (c) of this rule and must be specifically set forth in the pleadings. Metropolitan State Bank, Inc. v. Cox, 134 Colo. 260, 302 P.2d 188 (1956).

In an action on a foreign judgment, the defense of payment must be specially alleged in the answer. Grandbouche v. Waisner, 136 Colo. 374, 317 P.2d 328 (1957).

Failure of consideration is an affirmative defense under section (c) of this rule and C.R.C.P. 12(h), which, if not pleaded, is waived. Bernklau v. Stevens, 150 Colo. 187, 371 P.2d 765 (1962).

Statute of frauds must be pleaded. It is error to rule that an assignment is ineffective because of the statute of frauds when the statute has not been pleaded or relied upon. Ochsner v. Langendorf, 115 Colo. 453, 175 P.2d 392 (1946).

Assertion that claim is barred by the statute of frauds is an affirmative defense that must ordinarily be raised by answer and, if not, will be deemed waived. Univex Int'l, Inc. v. Orix Credit Alliance, Inc., 902 P.2d 877 (Colo. App. 1995).

It is not necessary to identify a particular statute of frauds by section number to satisfy requirements of this rule where defendant pled the statute of frauds affirmatively as a defense in its answer and listed the statute of frauds as a defense in its disclosure certificate, where the parties had sufficient opportunity to argue the issue to the trial court, and where the defendant had brought the statute to the court's attention in the form of supplemental authority in support of its motion for summary judgment. Univex Int'l, Inc. v. Orix Credit Alliance, Inc., 902 P.2d 877 (Colo. App. 1995).

Mitigation of damages must be affirmatively pleaded. Franklin v. Nolan, 28 Colo. App. 229, 472 P.2d 166 (1970).

Reimbursement for paid taxes is claim in mitigation of damages. Where defendants destroyed a valuable property relying upon a tax deed that was invalid and compensatory damages were allowed based on the value of replacing the improvements and the value of the personalty, their claim for reimbursement for taxes paid could only be a claim in mitigation of damages which must be affirmatively pleaded. Carlson v. McNeill, 114 Colo. 78, 162 P.2d 226 (1945).

Where defendant does not plead adverse possession but attempts to amend his answer at the conclusion of the trial, the court properly denies the motion, acting within its discretion. City & County of Denver v. Just, 175 Colo. 260, 487 P.2d 367 (1971).

Lack of maturity is not one of the defenses specified as mandatory subjects of affirmative pleading under section (c), and where it was apparent from the transcript that this issue was tried by the parties and fully considered by the trial court, the defendant was entitled to consideration of this defense. L.C. Fulenwider, Inc. v. Ginsberg, 36 Colo. App. 246, 539 P.2d 1320 (1975).

Reliance on advice of counsel or consultants is not an affirmative defense or mitigating circumstance, therefore defendant is not required to plead it in its answer. Antolovich v. Brown Group Retail, Inc., 183 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2007).

Rescission of contract must be pleaded. Affirmative defense that plaintiff misrepresented facts in course of negotiating employment contract with defendant would not be construed as demand for rescission where defendant did not give plaintiff or court any specific notice of its intent to rescind. Ice v. Benedict Nuclear Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 797 P.2d 757 (Colo. App. 1990).

Set-off allowed notwithstanding defendant's denomination of defense as a counterclaim. In an action by the assignee of a carrier for shipping charges on an article of furniture, a set-off for damage in transit to such article was properly allowable, notwithstanding defendant denominated defense as a counterclaim rather than set-off. Transport Clearings of Colo., Inc. v. Linstedt, 151 Colo. 166, 376 P.2d 518 (1962).

Statutory limitation on judgment not affirmative defense. The statutory limitation on judgment in § 24-10-114 is not an affirmative defense and is not waived if not presented in the pleadings, at trial, or in a motion for a new trial. City of Colo. Springs v. Gladin, 198 Colo. 333, 599 P.2d 907 (1979).

Plaintiff relying on unjust enrichment must allege that he conferred a benefit which was known to or appreciated by the defendant, and which the defendant accepted or retained, making it inequitable for him to retain the benefit without payment. Backus v. Apishapa Land & Cattle Co., 44 Colo. App. 59, 615 P.2d 42 (1980).

Making an argument for collateral estoppel in a responsive brief and not affirmatively making a motion based on the defense does not negate the duty to affirmatively plead the defense. Trujillo v. Farmers Ins. Exchange, 862 P.2d 962 (Colo. App. 1993).

Plaintiff is entitled to recover based on unjust enrichment of defendant when the plaintiff has no alternative right on an enforceable contract. Backus v. Apishapa Land & Cattle Co., 44 Colo. App. 59, 615 P.2d 42 (1980).

Filing a homestead claim was not a responsive pleading pursuant to section (c) which requires a party to affirmatively plead a previous discharge in bankruptcy. Matter of Lombard, 739 F.2d 499 (10th Cir. 1984).

Although inconsistent pleadings are permissible, a party may not assert one theory and induce reliance thereon and then shortly before trial reverse theories without acting contrary to the spirit of the rules. Gaybatz v. Marquette Minerals, Inc., 688 P.2d 1128 (Colo. App. 1984).

Buyer's claim under § 38-35-126 (3) to void installment land contract was an affirmative defense and compulsory counterclaim. As such, defense and claim should have been asserted in buyer's responsive pleading (or amended responsive pleading) or they are waived. Buyer's claim was related to seller's claim and, therefore, was a compulsory counterclaim. In addition, the primary remedy sought by buyer was rescission, which is a defense or claim which must be pleaded in accordance with section (c) of this rule. Dinosaur Park Invs., L.L.C. v. Tello, 192 P.3d 513 (Colo. App. 2008).

Insurer's general assertion of a bad faith defense did not specifically apprise plaintiff of a contract-voiding noncooperation defense, as required by section (c). Soicher v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2015 COA 46, 351 P.3d 559.

Insurer's reservation-of-rights letter was not a responsive pleading and thus was not a proper vehicle to assert either an affirmative defense or a failure of a condition precedent. Soicher v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2015 COA 46, 351 P.3d 559.

G. Election of Remedies.

Doctrine of election of remedies precludes pursuit of alternative remedies where the remedial rights sought necessarily repudiate each other. Newland v. Holland, 624 P.2d 933 (Colo. App. 1981).

Party is not required to make election of remedies where the remedies he invokes are consistent. Newland v. Holland, 624 P.2d 933 (Colo. App. 1981).

Inconsistency of demand makes election of one remedy estoppel against other remedy. It is not the fact that the causes of action are different, but the inconsistency of the demands, that makes the election of one remedial right an estoppel against the assertion of the other remedial right. Newland v. Holland, 624 P.2d 933 (Colo. App. 1981).

V. EFFECT OF FAILURE TO DENY.

Law reviews. For article, ''The Plea of Want of Consideration in Colorado'', see 3 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 168 (1931).

When an issue is tried before a court without timely objection or motion, the issue shall be deemed properly before the court despite any defect in the pleading. Butler v. Behaeghe, 37 Colo. App. 282, 548 P.2d 934 (1976).

Where it was necessary for defendants to set forth a "lien waiver" in their answer if they desired to rely thereon under section (c) of this rule, since no reply was ordered by the court, and they did not, this affirmative defense was deemed denied under section (d) of this rule. Trustee Co. v. Bresnahan, 119 Colo. 311, 203 P.2d 499 (1949).

Where no reply was required under the rules, defendants were put on notice that any matter in avoidance of their defense of the statute of limitations would be deemed in issue before the court. Davis v. Bonebrake, 135 Colo. 506, 313 P.2d 982 (1957).

Mutual mistake theory in reply to marriage dissolution petition not waived. In a dispute over a separation agreement, a theory of mutual mistake is not waived by failure to raise the issue in the reply to the petition for dissolution of marriage, since no reply is required and averments in a pleading to which no responsive pleading is required shall be taken as denied or avoided. In re Deines, 44 Colo. App. 98, 608 P.2d 375 (1980).

Applied in Alspaugh v. District Court, 190 Colo. 282, 545 P.2d 1362 (1976).

VI. PLEADING TO BE CONCISE AND DIRECT.

Law reviews. For article, ''Comments on the Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 22 Dicta 154 (1945). For article, ''The Federal Rules from the Standpoint of the Colorado Code'', see 27 Dicta 170 (1950). For article, ''One Year Review of Cases on Contracts'', see 33 Dicta 57 (1956). For note, ''One Year Review of Colorado Law — 1964'', see 42 Den. L. Ctr. J. 140 (1965).

This rule provides that no technical forms of pleading are required. Bernstein v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 149 Colo. 150, 368 P.2d 780 (1962); Vincent v. Clean Water Action Project, 939 P.2d 469 (Colo. App. 1997).

Technical rules will not be permitted to render a pleading defective where the attempt of the pleader to make the pleading more accurate and complete is frustrated at the instance of an objecting party. Boltz v. Bonner, 95 Colo. 350, 35 P.2d 1015 (1934).

Under this rule pleadings otherwise meeting the requirements of the rules are not objectionable for failure to state ultimate facts as distinguished from conclusions of law. Weick v. Rickenbaugh Cadillac Co., 134 Colo. 283, 303 P.2d 685 (1956).

Plaintiffs may state as many separate claims as they have regardless of their consistency and whether based on legal or equitable grounds or on both; the evidence will determine the appropriate relief to be granted. Apex Inv., Inc. v. Peoples Bank, 163 Colo. 325, 430 P.2d 613 (1967).

Where the same amount in question is involved in each of the claims, plaintiffs can only recover that amount. Apex Inv., Inc. v. Peoples Bank, 163 Colo. 325, 430 P.2d 613 (1967).

Where a party has alternative remedies of rescission and of damages for breach, he must elect which remedy he will base his action upon. Holscher v. Ferry, 131 Colo. 190, 280 P.2d 655 (1955).

Colorado's rules of civil procedure are designed to dispense with ritualistic, common-law, forms-of-action pleading. Bernstein v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 149 Colo. 150, 368 P.2d 780 (1962).

Colorado has a liberal policy under C.R.C.P. 2 and this rule of dispensing with the overly technical aspects of common-law pleading. Bernstein v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 149 Colo. 150, 368 P.2d 780 (1962).

The new practice is not concerned with meeting technical requirements of theories of causes of actions. Bridges v. Ingram, 122 Colo. 501, 223 P.2d 1051 (1950); Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

It no longer is necessary to elect at the peril of the pleader a particular theory or "cause of action". Weick v. Rickenbaugh Cadillac Co., 134 Colo. 283, 303 P.2d 685 (1956); Hinsey v. Jones, 159 Colo. 326, 411 P.2d 242 (1966); Behlen Mfg. Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 28 Colo. App. 300, 472 P.2d 703 (1970).

The theory of pleading is to give an adversary notice of what is to be expected at trial. Lyons v. Hoffman, 31 Colo. App. 306, 502 P.2d 980 (1972).

The modern philosophy concerning pleadings is that they do little more than indicate generally the type of litigation involved. Smith v. Mills, 123 Colo. 11, 225 P.2d 483 (1950).

In most cases it is sufficient if the pleader clearly identifies the transactions which form the basis of the claim for relief, and if upon any theory of the law relief is warranted by the evidence offered and received in support of the claim, it should not be denied because of the possible selection by counsel of the wrong technical cause of action. Weick v. Rickenbaugh Cadillac Co., 134 Colo. 283, 303 P.2d 685 (1956); Hinsey v. Jones, 159 Colo. 326, 411 P.2d 242 (1966); Behlen Mfg. Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 28 Colo. App. 300, 472 P.2d 703 (1970).

A plaintiff is not limited in evidence to those examples of conduct contained in the complaint. Since the purpose of the complaint is to provide reasonable notice of the general nature of the matter presented, it need not contain specific examples of misconduct, and therefore, it need not contain all examples of misconduct that are presented at trial. Southerland v. Argonaut Ins. Co., 794 P.2d 1102 (Colo. App. 1990).

Technical theory cannot defeat claim if pleader is entitled to relief under any theory. The technical theory of the old cause of action, as it existed under the common law and to a lesser extent under the former Code of Civil Procedure, can no longer be urged to defeat a litigation if upon any theory of law the claim stated entitles the pleader to relief. Weick v. Rickenbaugh Cadillac Co., 134 Colo. 283, 303 P.2d 685 (1956); Hinsey v. Jones, 159 Colo. 326, 411 P.2d 242 (1966).

Just because a formal court order is not sought and entered, petitioner may not be despoiled of any rights in a matter; otherwise, such a holding would be highly technical and essentially unjust. Gillespie v. District Court, 119 Colo. 242, 202 P.2d 151 (1949).

Grounds of recovery can appear partly from both allegations of fact and legal conclusions. It is not a valid objection on a motion to dismiss a complaint as insufficient that the grounds of recovery appear partly from allegations of fact and partly from allegations of legal conclusions of the pleader. People ex rel. Bauer v. McCloskey, 112 Colo. 488, 150 P.2d 861 (1944).

If the conclusions of law alleged, rather than the ultimate facts from which they flow, are accepted as not objectionable to support the claim under section (e)(1) of this rule, then the complaint is sufficient as against motion to dismiss. People ex rel. Bauer v. McCloskey, 112 Colo. 488, 150 P.2d 861 (1944).

A trial court errs in dismissing the complaint based on the contentions of the defendant that plaintiffs' "theories" are deficient in one element or another, for this is a matter of evidence and cannot be resolved by the statement of counsel. Kluge v. Wilson, 167 Colo. 526, 448 P.2d 786 (1968).

Pleadings sufficient to put contributory negligence in issue, although negligence alleged. Where plaintiff contended that, although the pleadings made it clear that defendant was alleging negligence by plaintiff, the failure to designate it as contributory negligence changed the nature of preparation necessary to meet the issue at trial, the court held that, regardless of whether it was designated as ''negligence'' or ''contributory negligence'', the pleadings did put plaintiff on notice that he might have to rebut a showing of negligence on his part, and therefore, the pleadings, although not in the best form, were adequate to put contributory negligence in issue. Lyons v. Hoffman, 31 Colo. App. 306, 502 P.2d 980 (1972).

Statute of limitations sufficiently pleaded. An allegation in a reply to a counterclaim that the counterclaim is barred by the statute of limitations in such case made and provided is a sufficient pleading to comply with section (e) of this rule. Denning v. A. D. Wilson & Co., 137 Colo. 372, 326 P.2d 77 (1958).

Where plaintiff commingles in one court several causes of action, a defendant who fails to require plaintiff to state these causes separately and files an answer by way of general denial must be prepared to meet all such causes. Smith v. Gvirtzman, 109 Colo. 314, 124 P.2d 926 (1942).

Issues not pleaded may properly be determined by the trial court by consent, express or implied, where evidence presenting such issues is tendered and received without objection. First Nat'l Bank v. Jones, 124 Colo. 451, 237 P.2d 1082 (1951).

Extraneous issues may not be tried in the absence of amendment of the pleadings where timely objection is made. First Nat'l Bank v. Jones, 124 Colo. 451, 237 P.2d 1082 (1951).

Complaint did not comply with section (e). Where complaint is 30 pages long with an additional 10 pages of attached exhibits, consists of 178 separate paragraphs setting forth 36 separate claims for relief, and incorporates other portions of the complaint over 400 times, the plaintiffs did not comply with the requirements of section (e) of this rule. Borwick v. Bober, 34 Colo. App. 423, 529 P.2d 1351 (1974).

VII. CONSTRUCTION.

Annotator's note. Since section (f) of this rule is similar to § 83 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Rulings under former practice and procedure that pleadings are construed most strongly against the pleader are not in harmony with present procedure. Spomer v. City of Grand Junction, 144 Colo. 207, 355 P.2d 960 (1960).

The rule now is that pleadings are to be construed in favor of the pleader. Spomer v. City of Grand Junction, 144 Colo. 207, 355 P.2d 960 (1960); Denver & R. G. W. R. R. v. Wood, 28 Colo. App. 534, 476 P.2d 299 (1970).

Pleadings are to be liberally construed, and doubts are to be resolved in favor of pleader. Lyons v. Hoffman, 31 Colo. App. 306, 502 P.2d 980 (1972).

The trial court in its sound discretion should allow plaintiff to amend his 42 U.S.C. § 1983 complaint if justice so requires, especially in light of the liberal construction rules regarding pro se complaints under this statute. Deason v. Lewis, 706 P.2d 1283 (Colo. App. 1985).

Under this rule all pleadings are to be so construed as to do substantial justice, and a court is empowered to grant the relief to which the parties are entitled. Fletcher v. District Court, 137 Colo. 143, 322 P.2d 96 (1958); McCoy v. People, 165 Colo. 407, 439 P.2d 347 (1968).

Though the title by which a litigant may designate a pleading is not controlling, the substance of the claim rather than the appellation applied thereto controls. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

Although a defense is labeled as an attack on subject matter jurisdiction, the specific allegations may be sufficient to raise the issue of lack of personam jurisdiction, depending on the factual context, and regardless of the attached label. Nations Enters., Inc. v. Process Equip. Co., 40 Colo. App. 390, 579 P.2d 655 (1978).

Where an alleged defect in a complaint is a mere matter of interpretation, defendant cannot interpret plaintiff out of court. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Sanger, 87 Colo. 369, 287 P. 866 (1930).

Amendment of complaint by later argument. Where there are allegations in a complaint and facts appearing in an affidavit which may be construed as supporting the theories of estoppel and waiver, and those theories are argued to the trial court, although the theories were not specifically alleged in the complaint, the trial court must treat the complaint as amended for purposes of considering a motion for summary judgment. Discovery Land & Dev. Co. v. Colo.-Aspen Dev. Corp., 40 Colo. App. 292, 577 P.2d 1101 (1977).

Objection for insufficient facts overruled if pleading can be upheld by liberal construction. While the objection for insufficient facts is not waived by answer, but may be made at any time, making it for the first time at the trial is not encouraged by the courts and when so made will be overruled if by fair implication or most liberal construction the pleading can be held to state a cause of action. Musgrove v. Brown, 93 Colo. 559, 27 P.2d 590 (1933).

Judicial notice held proper aid in construing pleading. Where the complaint and summons were entitled in the county of Teller and the complainant alleged a contract to be performed ''in the city of Victor'', not specifying in what county it was held, on motion to change the venue, that the court might take judicial notice that the city of Victor is situate in the county of Teller and construed the complaint accordingly. Gould v. Mathes, 55 Colo. 384, 135 P. 780 (1913).

Supreme court endeavors to ascertain the spirit and intent of the rules. In construing the rules of civil procedure applicable to a cause of action, the supreme court endeavors to ascertain the spirit and intent of the rules as reflected by the language employed. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

Relief granted, if consistent with the pleadings liberally construed, will not be disturbed. A judgment will not be disturbed on the ground that it is not warranted by the pleadings where the cause has been remanded merely to permit the introduction of evidence on the undetermined issues, and the facts established by the evidence entitle the party to the relief granted, which was consistent with the pleadings liberally construed. Schiffer v. Adams, 13 Colo. 572, 22 P. 964 (1889); Marriott v. Clise, 12 Colo. 561, 21 P. 909 (1889).

The admission into evidence of a copy of a revoked will was held in conformity with the pleadings under section (f) of this rule where the will had been executed when the antenuptial agreement in issue was signed and the complaint alleged that ''in view of all the circumstances, the antenuptial agreement was not fair, equitable or reasonable''. Linker v. Linker, 28 Colo. App. 131, 470 P.2d 921 (1970).

Pleading a defense of failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is sufficient to raise the issue of failure of plaintiff to join an indispensable party. Cold Springs Ranch v. Dept. of Nat. Res., 765 P.2d 1035 (Colo. App. 1988).

Rule 9. Pleading Special Matters

(a) (1) Capacity. It is not necessary to aver the capacity of a party to sue or be sued or the authority of a party to sue or be sued in a representative capacity or the legal existence of an organized association of persons that is made a party. When a party desires to raise an issue as to the legal existence of any party or the capacity of any party to sue or be sued or the authority of a party to sue or be sued in a representative capacity, he shall do so by specific negative averment, which shall include such supporting particulars as are peculiarly within the pleader's knowledge, and on such issue the party relying on such capacity, authority, or legal existence, shall establish same on the trial.

(2) Identification of Unknown Party. When a party is designated in the caption as one ''whose true name is unknown'' the pleader shall allege such matters as are within his knowledge to identify such unknown party and his connection with the claim set forth.

(3) Interest of Unknown Parties. When parties are designated in the caption as ''all unknown persons who claim any interest in the subject matter of this action'' the pleader shall describe the interests of such persons, and how derived, so far as his knowledge extends.

(4) Description of Interest. Where unknown parties claim some interest through some one or more of the named defendants, it shall be a sufficient description of their interests and of how derived to state that the interests of the unknown parties are derived through some one or more of the named defendants.

(b) Fraud, Mistake, Condition of the Mind. In all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally.

(c) Conditions Precedent. In pleading the performance or occurrence of conditions precedent, it is sufficient to aver generally that all conditions precedent have been performed or have occurred. A denial of performance or occurrence shall be made specifically and with particularity, and when so made the party pleading the performance or occurrence shall establish on the trial the facts showing such performance or occurrence.

(d) Official Document or Act. In pleading an official document or official act it is sufficient to aver that the document was issued or the act done in compliance with law.

(e) Judgment. In pleading a judgment or decision of a domestic or foreign court, judicial or quasi-judicial tribunal, or of a board or officer within the United States or within a territory or insular possession subject to the dominion of the United States, it is sufficient to aver the judgment or decision without setting forth matter showing jurisdiction to render it. A denial of jurisdiction shall be made specifically and with particularity and when so made the party pleading the judgment or decision shall establish on the trial all controverted jurisdictional facts.

(f) Time and Place. For the purpose of testing the sufficiency of a pleading, averments of time and place are material and shall be considered like all other averments of material matter.

(g) Special Damages. When items of special damage are claimed, they shall be specifically stated.

(h) [There is no section (h).]

(i) Pleading Statute. In pleading a statute of Colorado or of the United States, the same need not be set forth at length, but it shall be sufficient to refer to such statute by the appropriate designation in the official or recognized compilation thereof, or otherwise identify the same, and the court shall thereupon take judicial knowledge thereof.

II. CAPACITY.

Annotator's note. The last clause of section (a)(1) beginning with the words ''and on such issue'', is not in F.R.C.P. 9(a)(1) was added because of the decision in Home Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 94 Colo. 446, 32 P.2d 183 (1934) concerning the burden of proof.

Want of legal capacity to sue must be raised by special plea. Bohen v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 109 Colo. 283, 124 P.2d 606 (1942).

It is unnecessary to aver in the pleadings the authority of a party to sue in a representative manner. Alder v. Alder, 167 Colo. 145, 445 P.2d 906 (1968).

If a party desires to raise an issue as to the authority of a party to sue in a representative manner, he must do so by specific negative averment. Adler v. Adler, 167 Colo. 145, 445 P.2d 906 (1968).

An answer stating that the defendant is without knowledge of plaintiff's corporate existence and capacity to sue is not sufficiently specific under this rule to place that matter in issue so that plaintiff's failure to prove its capacity may properly serve as the basis for dismissal of its complaint, and does not meet this rule's requirement for a specific negative averment. Tex-Am Carriers, Inc. v. A.S.T. Brokerage, Inc., 41 Colo. App. 438, 586 P.2d 667 (1978).

Where the pleadings of the plaintiffs in error do not contain the negative averment, the issue is never before the trial court and the objection is waived. Adler v. Adler, 167 Colo. 145, 445 P.2d 906 (1968).

Neither the legal existence of a party nor its capacity to sue can be challenged by motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, for such issue can be raised only by specific negative averment, and the issue, when so raised, becomes an issue to be settled on the trial of the matter. Northwest Dev., Inc. v. Dunn, 29 Colo. App. 364, 483 P.2d 1361 (1971).

Determination whether assignee of claim for attorney's fee acted as a nonlicensed collection agency in bringing suit was not necessary where no issue concerning the capacity of assignee to sue was raised by the pleadings, the pre-trial order did not permit extension of the issues beyond those stated in the order, and the action was neither one to determine the legality of the assignment contract nor one to invoke a penalty against assignee for violation of the collection agency statute. Reilly v. Cook, McKay & Co., 152 Colo. 269, 381 P.2d 261 (1963).

Where defendant failed to file an objection to plaintiff's motion for substitution of parties and also failed to challenge the trial court's order permitting the substitution, then right to review on appeal has been waived. Thomason v. McAlister, 748 P.2d 798 (Colo. App. 1987).

Trial court had personal jurisdiction over estate after plaintiffs amended complaint to name estate and estate's special administrator as defendants instead of deceased, non-existent defendant before any answer had been filed in the case. This cured the defect in personal jurisdiction contained in the original complaint. Currier v. Sutherland, 218 P.3d 709 (Colo. 2009).

III. IDENTIFICATION OF UNKNOWN PARTY.

Under this rule, unknown persons may be made parties to a suit to quiet title to lands and may be concluded by the decree therein. Brackett v. McClure, 24 Colo. App. 524, 135 P. 1110 (1913) (decided under § 50(b) of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

IV. INTEREST OF UNKNOWN PARTIES.

V. FRAUD, MISTAKE, CONDITION OF THE MIND.

Law reviews. For article, ''Use of Summary Judgments and the Discovery Procedure'', see 24 Dicta 193 (1947).

Federal rule is substantially identical, therefore federal cases interpreting F.R.C.P. 9(b) are persuasive in interpreting C.R.C.P. 9(b). State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. v. Parrish, 899 P.2d 285 (Colo. App. 1994); Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

This rule applies to a claim of the securities commissioner for securities fraud under § 11-51-501 (1)(a) to (1)(c). Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

Fraud is never presumed. Fidelity Fin. Co. v. Groff, 124 Colo. 223, 235 P.2d 994 (1951).

This rule provides that in all averments of fraud the ''circumstances constituting fraud'' shall be stated with ''particularity''. Western Homes, Inc. v. District Court, 133 Colo. 304, 296 P.2d 460 (1956); Coon v. District Court, 161 Colo. 211, 420 P.2d 827 (1966); State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. v. Parrish, 899 P.2d 285 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where complaint alleged a conspiracy to defraud an insurance company by virtually every conceivable method of doing so, but failed to identify which of the hundreds of transactions between the parties over a period of years involved fraud, dismissal of the conspiracy claim and other claims incorporating the allegations contained in the conspiracy claim was proper. State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. v. Parrish, 899 P.2d 285 (Colo. App. 1994).

Allegations of fraud must be stated with the "particularity" required by this rule. O.K. Uranium Dev. Co. v. Miller, 140 Colo. 490, 345 P.2d 382 (1959).

Particularity requirement is intended in part to protect defendants from reputational harm that may result from unsupported allegations of fraud, a charge which involves moral turpitude. State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. v. Parrish, 899 P.2d 285 (Colo. App. 1994).

The "particularity" required includes all of the material elements of an action in fraud and deceit as such had theretofore been laid down in the numerous decisions of this court antedating the adoption of the rules of civil procedure. Ginsberg v. Zagar, 126 Colo. 536, 251 P.2d 1080 (1952); Coon v. District Court, 161 Colo. 211, 420 P.2d 827 (1966).

Particularity requirement applies to all claims "sounding in fraud", regardless of the label that a party has attached to a particular claim. State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. v. Parrish, 899 P.2d 285 (Colo. App. 1994).

Rescission based on fraud in the inducement, asserted as an affirmative defense to action on an employment contract, held insufficiently pleaded where defendant did not allege specific damage attributable to reliance on plaintiff's misrepresentations and did not include demand for rescission in complaint. Ice v. Benedict Nuclear Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 797 P.2d 757 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where defense of fraud was stated with sufficient particularity and supported by affidavit in defendant's response to motion for partial summary judgment, it should have been incorporated in defendant's answer for the purpose of technical compliance with C.R.C.P. 8(c), even though the defense is more properly asserted in an answer. Alien, Inc. v. Futterman, 924 P.2d 1063 (Colo. App. 1995).

Earlier cases defining "particularity" required in actions for fraud and deceit. Brown v. Linn, 50 Colo. 443, 115 P. 906 (1911); Kilpatrick v. Miller, 55 Colo. 419, 135 P. 780 (1913); Morrison v. Goodspeed, 100 Colo. 470, 68 P.2d 458 (1937).

Where a plaintiff alleges that specific material representations were made by a defendant, it is insufficient merely to characterize them as false, but such plaintiff must set forth the falsity thereof by direct and particular allegation of the true facts, demonstrating thereby that the representations are untrue. Ginsberg v. Zagar, 126 Colo. 536, 251 P.2d 1080 (1952).

Although this rule requires particularity in averments of fraud, it does not require detailed allegations of evidentiary facts. Northwest Dev., Inc. v. Dunn, 29 Colo. App. 364, 483 P.2d 1361 (1971).

A complaint need not identify every victim of a defendant's fraudulent activities. Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

It is sufficient to state the main facts constituting the fraud. It is not necessary to recite in the bill of complaint all the evidence that may be adduced to prove the fraud, it being sufficient merely to state the main facts or incidents which constitute the fraud. Fidelity Fin. Co. v. Groff, 124 Colo. 223, 235 P.2d 994 (1951).

Failure to allege precise dates or exact places of misrepresentations would not render fraud defense insufficient. Had the alleged fraud been pleaded with the ''particularity'' required by section (b) of this rule, the fact that the defendants failed to allege in their answer setting up the defense of fraud the precise dates upon which the misrepresentations were made, or the exact places where they were made, would not render the proposed defense legally insufficient. Coon v. District Court, 161 Colo. 211, 420 P.2d 827 (1966).

The allegations and proofs of fraud must be clear and convincing. Fidelity Fin. Co. v. Groff, 124 Colo. 223, 235 P.2d 994 (1951).

Allegations of fraud sufficiently averred. Western Homes, Inc. v. District Court, 133 Colo. 304, 296 P.2d 460 (1956).

Where plaintiff does not make a prima facie showing of actionable fraud with the particularity required by section (b) of this rule, the trial court is correct in directing a verdict for defendant and against plaintiff. Roblek v. Horst, 147 Colo. 55, 362 P.2d 869 (1961).

Where a complaint does not allege fraud with the particularity required by this rule and a motion to dismiss is filed, but neither argued nor ruled upon, and an answer thereafter filed in which the motion to dismiss is not repeated and trial proceeds on the issues framed by the complaint and answer without the sufficiency of the complaint being again challenged, an amendment to conform to the proof would have been in order under C.R.C.P. 15(b). O.K. Uranium Dev. Co. v. Miller, 140 Colo. 490, 345 P.2d 382 (1959).

Particularity requirement of section (b) of this rule does not apply to motions under C.R.C.P. 16.2(e)(10). In re Durie, 2018 COA 143, __ P.3d __.

Complaint contained sufficient allegations of fraud to satisfy the requirements of section (b) where a corporation alleged that former officers and directors misused their access to confidential information regarding customers' identities, contracts, pricing, cost data, suppliers and production techniques to compete with the corporation and produce similar products using production and fabrication process substantially similar to the corporation's confidential processes. Scott Sys., Inc. v. Scott, 996 P.2d 775 (Colo. App. 2000).

Although the court did not decide whether claims arising under the Colorado Consumer Protection Act must be pled under section (b), complaint satisfied the heightened pleading requirements when it contained facts that alleged that a corporation had deceived consumers about their goods' geographic origins. People ex rel. Suthers v. Mandatory Poster, 260 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2009).

VI. CONDITIONS PRECEDENT.

Law reviews. For article, ''One Year Review of Contracts'', see 35 Dicta 18 (1958).

Annotator's note. (1) The last clause of section (c) beginning with the words ''and when so made'' is not in F.R.C.P. 9(c) and was added because of the decision in Home Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 94 Colo. 446, 32 P.2d 183 (1934) concerning the burden of proof.

(2) Since section (c) of this rule is similar to § 72 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This rule provides that in pleading performance or occurrence of condition precedent, it is sufficient to aver generally that all conditions precedent have been performed or have occurred but that a denial of performance ''shall be made specifically and with particularity''. Lively v. Price, 165 Colo. 111, 437 P.2d 526 (1968).

This rule permits a plaintiff to plead generally the performance of all conditions. Sullivan v. McCarthy, 136 Colo. 150, 314 P.2d 901 (1957).

Complaint on bond may adopt general averment. A complaint on a bond which prescribes conditions to be performed by the obligee in order to fix the liability of the obligor may effectually adopt the general averment of conditions performed. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Newton, 50 Colo. 379, 115 P. 897 (1911).

Plaintiff under the allegation of performance of an insurance contract can prove waiver of policy requirements by the company. Southern Sur. Co. v. Farrell, 79 Colo. 53, 244 P. 475 (1926).

Complaint failing to allege performance by plaintiff is fatally defective. A complaint based upon a contract executory as to the plaintiff which is silent upon the question of plaintiff's performance and contains no averments which, if true, would excuse performance is fatally defective. Armor v. Fisk, 1 Colo. 148 (1869); Jones v. Perot, 19 Colo. 141, 34 P. 728 (1893); Bd. of Pub. Works v. Hayden, 13 Colo. App. 36, 56 P. 201 (1899); Mulford v. Central Life Assurance Soc'y, 25 Colo. App. 527, 139 P. 1044 (1914); Galligan v. Bua, 77 Colo. 386, 236 P. 1016 (1925).

It is not defective for failure to state plaintiff "duly" performed all conditions. In an action on a hail insurance policy where the allegations of the complaint substantially complied with this provision, it is held that it was not defective because it failed to state that plaintiff ''duly'' performed all of the conditions of the contract. Great Am. Ins. Co. v. Scott, 89 Colo. 99, 299 P. 1051 (1931).

It is error to refuse filing of answer denying performance. Where the petition alleged performance of the contract on the part of the petitioner, an answer denying the allegations of performance in the petition created a material issue, and it was error to refuse to permit it to be filed. Bd. of Pub. Works v. Hayden, 13 Colo. App. 36, 56 P. 201 (1899).

Defendant must specially allege nonperformance of conditions precedent. Where an averment of performance of conditions precedent is allowed in the complaint, the rule is that if a defendant relies upon nonperformance he must specially allege the condition or conditions on the nonperformance of which he relies and negate their performance. Helvetia Swiss Fire Ins. Co. v. Allis Co., 11 Colo. App. 264, 53 P. 242 (1898); Pennsylvania Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Ornauer, 39 Colo. 498, 90 P. 846 (1907); Nat'l Sur. Co. v. Queen City Land Co., 63 Colo. 105, 164 P. 722 (1917).

Denial must be made specifically and with particularity. If an adverse party denies the performance of any such conditions, the rule requires that such denial shall be made specifically and with particularity. Sullivan v. McCarthy, 136 Colo. 150, 314 P.2d 901 (1957).

Plaintiff is not obliged to prove performance of condition precedent not put in issue by defendant. Under this rule in an action where a plaintiff alleges generally the performance of all conditions precedent and defendant denies with particularity the performance of specific conditions, the plaintiff is not obliged to prove performance of a condition precedent with reference to which the defendant has tendered no issue. Sullivan v. McCarthy, 136 Colo. 150, 314 P.2d 901 (1957).

Insurer did not sufficiently assert plaintiff's noncooperation as a failure of a condition precedent. General denial of plaintiff's allegation that she had performed all obligations imposed under insurance policy did not satisfy the requirement that insurer plead the denial of the performance of a condition precedent ''specifically and with particularity'' as required by section (c). Soicher v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2015 COA 46, 351 P.3d 559.

Insurer's reservation-of-rights letter was not a responsive pleading and thus was not a proper vehicle to assert either an affirmative defense or a failure of a condition precedent. Soicher v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2015 COA 46, 351 P.3d 559.

VII. JUDGMENT.

Annotator's note. The last sentence of section (e) is not in F.R.C.P. 9(e) and was added because of the decision in Home Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 94 Colo. 446, 32 P.2d 183 (1934) concerning the burden of proof.

The manner of pleadings of this rule is prescribed not only to simplify the pleadings relating to judgments, but also to apprise the pleader of a judgment or decision of a court that it is being challenged for jurisdictional reasons as well as the particular grounds of the attack upon it, and for the further purpose of preventing final judgments and decisions of courts from being overthrown unadvisedly. Lamberson v. Thomas, 146 Colo. 539, 362 P.2d 180 (1961).

The party pleading a foreign judgment must establish all jurisdictional facts when denial of jurisdiction is made with particularity by the opponent. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. White, 146 Colo. 595, 362 P.2d 196 (1961).

A general denial of the validity of the decree is not sufficient to assail it. Lamberson v. Thomas, 146 Colo. 539, 362 P.2d 180 (1961).

If plaintiff intends to attack a decree upon jurisdictional grounds, he is required to give notice to the defendants by specifically denying jurisdiction and alleging with particularity the grounds showing lack of jurisdiction. Lamberson v. Thomas, 146 Colo. 539, 362 P.2d 180 (1961).

The mandatory provisions of this rule are not waived by the first pleaders having alleged jurisdictional facts in support of a judgment or decree. Lamberson v. Thomas, 146 Colo. 539, 362 P.2d 180 (1961).

Contrary rulings by the court under the former code are no longer authority in Colorado. Lamberson v. Thomas, 146 Colo. 539, 362 P.2d 180 (1961).

Fraud which will be available to a defendant in his attack upon a foreign judgment is fraud which has deprived him of the opportunity to make a full and fair defense. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. White, 146 Colo. 595, 362 P.2d 196 (1961).

Where the very jurisdictional facts alleged as fraud were those heard and decided by the foreign court, no good reason appears why defendants should be permitted to relitigate this matter, they having had their day in court thereon. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. White, 146 Colo. 595, 362 P.2d 196 (1961).

The doctrine of "res judicata" must be applied to questions of jurisdiction in cases arising in state courts involving application of the full faith and credit clause where under the law of the state in which the original judgment was rendered such adjudications are not susceptible to collateral attack. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. White, 146 Colo. 595, 362 P.2d 196 (1961).

The doctrine of "res judicata" applies to adjudications of the person or of the subject matter where such adjudications have been made in proceedings in which those questions were in issue and in which the parties were given full opportunity to litigate. Superior Distrib. Co. v. White, 146 Colo. 595, 362 P.2d 196 (1961).

Court may take judicial notice of doctrine or rule of law adopted in previous action. The rule which precludes a court from taking judicial notice of its own records in other actions, unless properly introduced in evidence, does not prevent it from noticing the doctrine or rule of law adopted by the court in the first action and applying that principle under the theory of ''stare decisis'' in the second action. Wasinger v. Miller, 154 Colo. 61, 388 P.2d 250 (1964).

The trial court can properly take judicial notice of the fact that defendants had a right established by a previous action in its court and as to the wording used in that judgment, which wording later needed interpretation. Wasinger v. Miller, 154 Colo. 61, 388 P.2d 250 (1964).

In order that an action may be maintained in one state upon a judgment recovered in another state, it is necessary that the judgment should be a valid and final adjudication, remaining in full force and virtue in the state of its rendition, and capable of being there enforced by final process. Gobin v. Citizens' State Bank, 92 Colo. 350, 20 P.2d 1007 (1933) (decided under § 71 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941); Ginsberg v. Gifford, 144 Colo. 186, 355 P.2d 657 (1960); Superior Distrib. Corp. v. McCrory, 144 Colo. 457, 356 P.2d 961 (1960).

Complaint need not "specifically" allege that foreign judgment "can be enforced". It is not essential to a complaint based upon a foreign judgment that the allegations ''specifically'' state that the judgment sued upon ''can be enforced'' in the jurisdiction in which it was entered where the allegations in substance allege that the judgment is a valid and final adjudication remaining in full force in the state of its rendition and capable of being there enforced by final process, for under the liberalized rules of civil procedure, it is the substance of the complaint rather than the form that is paramount. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. Zarelli, 143 Colo. 358, 352 P.2d 967 (1960); Ginsberg v. Gifford, 144 Colo. 186, 355 P.2d 657 (1960).

Where the pleadings show that a foreign judgment is a contingent, inconclusive adjudication, interlocutory in nature, the complaint is insufficient to state an enforceable claim on a foreign judgment. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. McCrory, 144 Colo. 457, 356 P.2d 961 (1960).

VIII. TIME AND PLACE.

Where the complaint on its face fails to make the material allegation of place, a motion to dismiss is good. Sprott v. Roberts, 154 Colo. 252, 390 P.2d 465 (1964).

A motion to dismiss based on the fact that the complaint facially established a jurisdictional defect because of a violation of the statute of limitations has the effect of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, as averments of time will be considered in determining the sufficiency of the pleadings. People v. Steinberg, 672 P.2d 543 (Colo. App. 1983).

IX. SPECIAL DAMAGES.

Law reviews. For article, ''The Law of Libel in Colorado'', see 28 Dicta 121 (1951). For article, ''Loss of Use as an Element of Damages'', 28 Dicta 277 (1951). For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 66 (1963).

Special damages must be specifically set forth in complaint. Where the loss of the business use of plaintiff's car was not the usual and natural consequence of any wrongful act on defendant's part, the damages, if any, which he sustained resulting from defendant's acts were required to be specifically set forth in his complaint. Rogers v. Funkhouser, 121 Colo. 13, 212 P.2d 497 (1949).

Purpose of requiring that special damages be pled with specificity is essentially one of notice. Rodriquez v. Denver & R. G. W. R. R., 32 Colo. App. 378, 512 P.2d 652 (1973).

Only when a party seeks to recover such damages as are not the usual and natural consequence of the wrongful act complained of must special damages be specially pled. Rodriquez v. Denver & R. G. W. R. R., 32 Colo. App. 378, 512 P.2d 652 (1973).

Special damages may be considered by the court when not pleaded. Where special damages are not pleaded by plaintiff as required by section (g) of this rule, but defendant neither attacks the sufficiency of the complaint nor objects to evidence introduced relevant thereto, the trial court may, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 15(b), consider the matter of special damages and enter judgment for such amount as warranted by the evidence. Carlson v. Bain, 116 Colo. 526, 182 P.2d 909 (1947).

Where the amended complaint of the plaintiffs did not plead special damages and the record disclosed that the defendant was put on notice of the claim for special damages as early as the pre-trial conference, the trial court's admission of the evidence and grant of leave to amend the complaint to conform to the proof upon motion of the plaintiffs was in conformity with the discretion of C.R.C.P. 15(b). Welborn v. Sullivant, 167 Colo. 35, 445 P.2d 215 (1968); Karakehian v. Boyer, 900 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1994).

Complaint in breach of contract suit "specifically stated" items of special damage where it was alleged that as a result of defendants' refusal to permit plaintiffs to use water specified in an agreement to exchange property, plaintiffs were damaged in that they were forced to drill a well on their own property and that there was also some loss of business and profits in the operation of their tourist court. Hinsey v. Jones, 159 Colo. 326, 411 P.2d 242 (1966).

The only claims of defamation which may be maintained without allegation and proof of special damages are claims of libel per se, or claims of libel per quod where the alleged defamatory words meet certain of the specific criteria required in claims of slander per se. Fort v. Holt, 508 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 1973).

X. PLEADING STATUTE.

Allegation that action is barred by statute does not require specific citation. Under the rules of pleading the allegation that an action is barred by the statute in such case made and provided is certainly a reference to the statute on which a plaintiff relies and does not require specific citation to chapter and page. Denning v. A.D. Wilson & Co., 137 Colo. 372, 326 P.2d 77 (1958).

Instruction on statute not objectionable where complaint fails to specifically refer to statute. Instruction covering the subject of damages which are recoverable for wrongful death was not objectionable because plaintiff had failed to specifically refer in his complaint to the wrongful death statute. Reidesel v. Blank, 158 Colo. 340, 407 P.2d 30 (1965).

Court may allow amendment to more specifically plead statute subsequent to proof for clarification. After proof had been offered under the issues tendered and some question arose as to whether the statute of limitations had been pleaded, it was permissible for the court to permit counsel leave to amend by more specifically pleading the statute of limitations for the purpose of clarification. Munro v. Eshe, 113 Colo. 19, 156 P.2d 700 (1944).

Rule 10. Form and Quality of Pleadings, Motions and Other Documents

(a) Caption; Names of Parties. Every pleading, motion, E-filed document under C.R.C.P. 121 (1-26), or any other document filed with the court (hereinafter ''document'') in both civil and criminal cases shall contain a caption setting forth the name of the court, the title of the action, the case number, if known to the person signing it, the name of the document in accordance with Rule 7(a), and the other applicable information in the format specified by paragraph (d) and the captions illustrated by paragraph (e) or (f) of this rule. In the complaint initiating a lawsuit, the title of the action shall include the names of all the parties to the action. In all other documents, it is sufficient to set forth the name of the first-named party on each side of the lawsuit with an appropriate indication that there are also other parties (such as ''et al.''). A party whose name is not known shall be designated by any name and the words ''whose true name is unknown''. In an action in rem, unknown parties shall be designated as ''all unknown persons who claim any interest in the subject matter of this action''.

(b) Paragraphs; Separate Statements. All averments of claim or defense shall be made in numbered paragraphs, the contents of each of which shall be limited as far as practicable to a statement of a single set of circumstances. A paragraph may be referred to by its paragraph number in all succeeding documents. Each claim founded upon a separate transaction or occurrence, and each defense other than denials, shall be stated in a separate count or defense whenever a separation facilitates the clear presentation of the matters set forth.

(c) Incorporation by Reference; Exhibits. A statement in a document may be incorporated by reference in a different part of the same document or in another document. An exhibit to a document is a part thereof for all purposes.

(d) General Rule Regarding Paper Size, Format, and Spacing. All documents filed after the effective date of this rule, including those filed through the E-Filing System under C.R.C.P. 121 (1-26), shall meet the following criteria:

(1) Paper: Where a document is filed on paper, it shall be on plain, white, 8 1/2 by 11 inch paper (recycled paper preferred).

(2) Format: All documents shall be legible. They shall be printed on one side of the page only (except for E-Filed documents).

(II) Font: No less than twelve (12) point font shall be used for all documents, including footnotes.

(III) Case Caption Information: All documents shall contain the following information arranged in the following order, as illustrated by paragraphs (e) and (f) of this rule, except that documents issued by the court under the signature of the clerk or judge should omit the attorney section as illustrated in paragraphs (e)(2) and (f)(2). Individual boxes should separate this case caption information; however, vertical lines are not mandatory.

Court name and mailing address.
Name of parties.
Name, address, and telephone number of the attorney or pro se party filing the document. Fax number and e-mail address are optional.
Attorney registration number.
Document title.

On the right side:
An area for ''Court Use Only'' that is at least 2 1/2 inches in width and 1 3/4 inches in length (located opposite the court and party information).

Case number, division number, and courtroom number (located opposite the attorney information above).

(3) Spacing: The following spacing guidelines should be followed.

(I) Single spacing for all:
Affidavits
Complaints, Answers, and Petitions
Criminal Informations and Complaints
Interrogatories and Requests for Admissions
Notices
Pleading forms (all case types)
Probation reports
All other documents not listed in subsection (II) below

(II) Double spacing for all:
Briefs and Legal Memoranda
Depositions
Documents that are complex or technical in nature
Jury Instructions
Motions
Petitions for Rehearing
Petitions for Writ of Certiorari
Petitions pursuant to C.A.R. 21
Transcripts

(4) Signature Block: All documents which require a signature shall be signed at the end of the document. The attorney or pro se party need not repeat his or her address, telephone number, fax number, or e-mail address at the end of the document.

(e) Illustration of Preferred Case Caption Format:

(1) Preferred Caption for documents initiated by a party:

[Designation of Court from subsection (g) below] Court Address:

(h) The forms of case captions provided for in this rule replace those forms of captions otherwise provided for in other Colorado rules of procedure, including but not limited to the Colorado Rules of County Court Procedure, the Colorado Rules of Procedure for Small Claims Courts, and the Colorado Appellate Rules. These forms of case captions apply to criminal cases, as well as civil cases.

(i) State Judicial Pre-Printed or Computer-Generated Forms. Forms approved by the State Court Administrator's Office (designated ''JDF'' or ''SCAO'' on pre-printed or computer-generated forms), forms set forth in the Colorado Court Rules, volume 12, C.R.S., (including those pre-printed or computer-generated forms designated ''CRCP'' or ''CPC'' and those contained in the appendices of volume 12, C.R.S.), and forms generated by the state's judicial electronic system, ''ICON,'' shall conform to criteria established by the State Court Administrator's Office with the approval of the Colorado Supreme Court. Such forms, whether preprinted or computer-generated, shall employ a form of caption similar to those contained in this rule, contain check-off boxes for the court designation, have at least a 9-point font, and 1 inch left margin, 1/2 inch right and bottom margins, and at least 1 inch top margin, except that for forms designated ''JDF'' or ''SCAO'' the requirement of at least 1 inch for the top margin shall apply to forms created or revised on and after April 5, 2010.

[1] This rule sets forth forms of case captions for all documents that are filed in Colorado courts, including both criminal and civil cases. The purpose of the form captions is to provide a uniform and consistent format that enables practitioners, clerks, administrators, and judges to locate identifying information more efficiently. Judges are encouraged in their orders to employ a caption similar to that found in paragraph (e)(2).

[2] The preferred case caption format for documents initiated by a party is found in paragraph (e)(1). The preferred caption for documents issued by the court under the signature of a clerk or judge is found in paragraph (e)(2). Because some parties may have difficulty formatting their documents to include vertical lines and boxes, alternate case caption formats are found in paragraphs (f)(1) and (f)(2). However, the box format is the preferred and recommended format.

[3] The boxes may be vertically elongated to accommodate additional party and attorney information if necessary. The ''court use'' and ''case number'' boxes, however, shall always be located in the upper right side of the caption.

[4] Forms approved by the State Court Administrator's Office (designated ''JDF'' or ''SCAO''), forms set forth in the Colorado Court Rules, volume 12, C.R.S. (including those designated ''CRCP'' or ''CPC'' and those contained in the appendices of volume 12, C.R.S.), and forms generated by the state's judicial electronic system, ''ICON,'' shall conform to criteria established by the State Court Administrator's Office as approved by the Colorado Supreme Court. This includes preprinted and computer-generated forms. JDF and SCAO forms and a flexible form of caption which allows the entry of additional party and attorney information are available and can be downloaded from the Colorado courts web page at http://www.courts.state.co.us/scao/Forms.htm.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Pleadings, Rules 7 to 25'', see 28 Dicta 368 (1951). For article, ''Pleadings and Motions: Rules 7-16'', see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 542 (1951).

Actions may be brought only by and against legal entities. Actions may be brought only by legal entities and against legal entities. There must be some ascertainable persons, natural or artificial, to whom judgments are awarded and against whom they may be enforced. Barker v. District Court, 199 Colo. 416, 609 P.2d 628 (1980).

II. CAPTION; NAMES OF PARTIES.

Law reviews. For article, ''The Federal Rules from the Standpoint of the Colorado Code'', see 17 Dicta 170 (1940). For article, ''Motion for Publication of Summons on Quiet Title Proceedings'', see 26 Dicta 182 (1949). For article, ''Standard Pleading Samples to Be Used in Quiet Title Litigation'', see 30 Dicta 39 (1953). For article, ''Federal Practice and Procedure'', which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with John Doe pleadings, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 220 (1985).

Naming exception is not applicable to verdicts and judgments. A verdict is not a pleading, and those who formulated in C.R.C.P. 10(a) an exception to naming parties in pleadings did not have any intention of making the same exception for verdicts and judgments. Lewis v. Buckskin Joe's, Inc., 156 Colo. 46, 396 P.2d 933 (1964).

There is no exception to naming requirement. The rules of civil procedure make no exception in ''in rem'' actions, as distinguished from ''in personam'' actions, to the requirement that defendants be named if their names are known or be designated as ''unknown'' when such is the case. Barker v. District Court, 199 Colo. 416, 609 P.2d 628 (1980).

Naming of defendants insufficient. The designations, ''owner'' and ''operator'', in the caption of the case, without naming them, when those persons were known to the district attorney, are not in compliance with the requirements of the rules of civil procedure that a party defendant shall be named unless his name is unknown. Barker v. District Court, 199 Colo. 416, 609 P.2d 628 (1980).

Rule is only an attempt to standardize the method of form by which all complaints are to be made, not a device by which claims may be forever preserved. Watson v. Unipress, Inc., 733 F.2d 1386 (10th Cir. 1984).

There is no indication in the rule that naming a "John Doe" defendant operates to toll the statute of limitations, nor have any Colorado courts recognized that the rule was intended to toll the statute or in any manner preserve any claims against later identified parties. Watson v. Unipress, Inc., 733 F.2d 1386 (10th Cir. 1984).

The public has an interest in disclosure of who the parties to an action are. A party may use a pseudonym for the name of a party upon a motion to the court. The court in determining whether use of a pseudonym for a party is appropriate shall evaluate: Whether the justification asserted by the requesting party is merely to avoid the annoyance and criticism that may attend any litigation or is to preserve privacy in a matter of a sensitive and highly personal nature; whether identification poses a risk of retaliatory physical or mental harm to the requesting party or to innocent non-parties; whether the action is against a governmental or a private party; whether the plaintiff would be compelled to admit his or her intention to engage in illegal conduct, thereby risking criminal prosecution; and the risk of unfairness to the opposing party from allowing an action against it to proceed anonymously. A pseudonym may not be used merely to avoid embarrassment, humiliation, or economic loss. Doe v. Heitler, 26 P.3d 539 (Colo. App. 2001).

III. ADOPTION BY REFERENCE; EXHIBITS.

Annotator's note. Since section (c) of this rule is similar to rule 2 of the former supreme court rules, cases construing that rule are included in the annotations to this rule.

Section (c) was intended to eliminate unnecessary repetition. Borwick v. Bober, 34 Colo. App. 423, 529 P.2d 1351 (1974).

This rule was intended to prevent the necessity of repeating the parts relevant to a later count, and it was expected that pleaders would refer only to the relevant parts by the words ''as in the first cause of action stated'' or their equivalent, as was the custom at common law. Fulton Inv. Co. v. Farmers Reservoir & Irrigation Co., 76 Colo. 472, 231 P. 61 (1925).

The pleader has no right to adopt wholesale all the allegations of a previous cause of action. Fulton Inv. Co. v. Farmers Reservoir & Irrigation Co., 76 Colo. 472, 231 P. 61 (1925).

This rule permits a document to be made a part of a pleading by attaching it as an exhibit, and in so attaching it, it amounts to the same thing as if it were set forth in the body of the pleading, as was the practice before the rule. Sparks v. Eldred, 78 Colo. 55, 239 P. 730 (1925).

Rule 11. Signing of Pleadings

(a) Obligations of Parties and Attorneys. Every pleading of a party represented by an attorney shall be signed by at least one attorney of record in his individual name. The initial pleading shall state the current number of his registration issued to him by the Supreme Court. The attorney's address and that of the party shall also be stated. A party who is not represented by an attorney shall sign his pleadings and state his address. Except when otherwise specifically provided by rule or statute, pleadings need not be verified or accompanied by affidavit. The signature of an attorney constitutes a certificate by him that he has read the pleading; that to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief formed after reasonable inquiry, it is well grounded in fact and is warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law, and that it is not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation. If a pleading is not signed it shall be stricken unless it is signed promptly after the omission is called to the attention of the pleader. If the current registration number of the attorney is not included with his signature, the clerk of the court shall request from the attorney the registration number. If the attorney is unable to furnish the court with a registration number, that fact shall be reported to the clerk of the Supreme Court, but the clerk shall nevertheless accept the filing. If a pleading is signed in violation of this Rule, the court, upon motion or upon its own initiative, shall impose upon the person who signed it, a represented party, or both, an appropriate sanction, which may include an order to pay to the other party or parties the amount of the reasonable expenses incurred because of the filing of the pleading, including a reasonable attorney's fee, provided, however, that failing to be registered shall be governed by Rule 227.

Reasonable expenses, including a reasonable attorney's fee, shall not be assessed if, after filing, a voluntary dismissal or withdrawal is filed as to any claim, action or defense, within a reasonable time after the attorney or party filing the pleading knew, or reasonably should have known, that he would not prevail on said claim, action, or defense.

(b) Limited Representation. An attorney may undertake to provide limited representation in accordance with Colo.RPC 1.2 to a pro se party involved in a court proceeding. Pleadings or papers filed by the pro se party that were prepared with the drafting assistance of the attorney shall include the attorney's name, address, telephone number and registration number. The attorney shall advise the pro se party that such pleading or other paper must contain this statement. In helping to draft the pleading or paper filed by the pro se party, the attorney certifies that, to the best of the attorney's knowledge, information and belief, this pleading or paper is (1) well-grounded in fact based upon a reasonable inquiry of the pro se party by the attorney, (2) is warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification or reversal of existing law, and (3) is not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation. The attorney in providing such drafting assistance may rely on the pro se party's representation of facts, unless the attorney has reason to believe that such representations are false or materially insufficient, in which instance the attorney shall make an independent reasonable inquiry into the facts. Assistance by an attorney to a pro se party in filling out pre-printed and electronically published forms that are issued through the judicial branch for use in court are not subject to the certification and attorney name disclosure requirements of this Rule 11(b).

Limited representation of a pro se party under this Rule 11(b) shall not constitute an entry of appearance by the attorney for purposes of C.R.C.P. 121, section 1-1 or C.R.C.P. 5(b), and does not authorize or require the service of papers upon the attorney. Representation of the pro se party by the attorney at any proceeding before a judge, magistrate, or other judicial officer on behalf of the pro se party constitutes an entry of an appearance pursuant to C.R.C.P. 121, section 1-1. The attorney's violation of this Rule 11(b) may subject the attorney to the sanctions provided in C.R.C.P. 11(a).

The rule imposes the following independent duties on an attorney or litigant who signs a pleading: (1) Before a pleading is filed, there must be a reasonable inquiry into the facts and the law; (2) based on this investigation, the signer must reasonably believe that the pleading is well grounded in fact; (3) the legal theory asserted in the pleading must be based on existing legal principles or a good faith argument for the modification of existing law; and (4) the pleading must not be filed for the purpose of causing delay, harassment, or an increase in the cost of litigation. Maul v. Shaw, 843 P.2d 139 (Colo. App. 1992).

The standard established by this rule focuses on what should have been done before a pleading was filed, and trial court's award of attorney fees to person wrongfully sued, even though the case was dismissed, was not abuse of discretion where the plaintiffs were not prevented from conducting additional investigation to establish whether they were suing the correct party. Switzer v. Giron, 852 P.2d 1320 (Colo. App. 1993).

Sanction under this rule can be imposed only, as the rule itself states, if a pleading is signed in violation of the rule and not on the basis of any post-signing, post-filing conduct by the attorney. SRS, Inc. v. Southward, 2012 COA 19, 272 P.3d 1179.

Inquiry under section (a) of this rule does not turn on the outcome of the case; instead, it turns on whether attorney met the reasonable inquiry and proper purpose threshold in preparing and signing the pleading. The rule's explicit application to the signing attorney or pro se party signing the pleading is clear and unambiguous. While pleadings may identify other attorneys who may have had some role in the case, the signature requirement is designed to hold only the signing attorney responsible for the required certification. If more than one attorney signs a pleading, each one who has signed the pleading is responsible for the certification. People v. Trupp, 51 P.3d 985 (Colo. 2002).

Section (a) requires a signature and holds the signing attorney responsible for the certificate. Certification by signature requirement vindicates rule's purpose: To deter the filing of frivolous actions and pleadings. It personalizes the responsibility of the person who has undertaken to certify the pleading. Here, only the attorney who signed complaint and amended complaint at issue is answerable to the motion for sanctions. Presiding disciplinary judge erred by ordering attorney whose name appeared in the signature block on both pleadings, but who did not sign either of the pleadings, to respond to motion for sanctions. People v. Trupp, 51 P.3d 985 (Colo. 2002).

Abuse of discretion for presiding disciplinary judge to hold that assistant attorney regulation counsel violated rule when she advanced claim that attorney had violated C.R.P.C. 8.4(c). No evidence that assistant attorney regulation counsel failed to investigate either the facts or the law and she did not misrepresent them in the complaint. People v. Trupp, 92 P.3d 923 (Colo. 2004).

Compliance with this rule should be had in all pleadings. Lewis v. Buckskin Joe's, Inc., 156 Colo. 46, 396 P.2d 933 (1964).

Even though C.R.P.C. 1.2(c) allows unbundling of legal services, an attorney remains obligated to comply with section (b) of this rule. In re Merriam, 250 B.R. 724 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2000).

This rule is applicable to motions and other papers pursuant to C.R.C.P. 7(b)(2), and sanctions may be imposed for violation. An attorney or litigant who signs a motion or other paper has the same obligation as the signer of a pleading to ensure that the document is factually and legally justified. Jensen v. Matthews-Price, 845 P.2d 542 (Colo. App. 1992).

Sanctions are improper where allegations set forth in response brief were based on statements made during witness' deposition. Jensen v. Matthews-Price, 845 P.2d 542 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court abused its discretion when, as a sanction for filing a disclosure certificate signed by plaintiff's former attorney's paralegal rather than the plaintiff herself, the court limited the witnesses the plaintiff could call to the defendant and herself. Defendants did not suffer any prejudice as a result of the improper signing of the certificate since the filing served its purpose of timely informing them of the evidence plaintiff intended to present at trial. Keith v. Valdez, 934 P.2d 897 (Colo. App. 1997).

This rule contemplates an answer that speaks the truth. Lewis v. Buckskin Joe's, Inc., 156 Colo. 46, 396 P.2d 933 (1964).

Where none of the specific denials has any foundation in fact, a general denial should not be filed. Lewis v. Buckskin Joe's, Inc., 156 Colo. 46, 396 P.2d 933 (1964).

This rule grants authority for subjecting an attorney to appropriate disciplinary action. Nelson v. District Court, 136 Colo. 467, 320 P.2d 959 (1957).

Court may impose appropriate sanctions for violation of rule, including reasonable expenses incurred because of the filing of the pleadings. Schmidt Const. Co. v. Becker-Johnson Corp., 817 P.2d 625 (Colo. App. 1991).

Assessment of costs should await final judgment and become a part thereof, thus subject to review. Nelson v. District Court, 136 Colo. 467, 320 P.2d 959 (1957).

To warrant the trial court's exercise of discretion in ordering sanctions against a client under the rule, the trial court must find and the record must confirm some nexus between the proscribed conduct and a specific undertaking by or knowledge of the client that the rule is being violated. Maul v. Shaw, 843 P.2d 139 (Colo. App. 1992); Domenico v. Sw. Props. Venture, 914 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court's discretion. Whether attorney fees are awarded under this rule is within the trial court's discretion and will not be disturbed unless the discretion is abused. Findings of the trial court that the plaintiff bank's claims of fraud were not groundless or frivolous were supported by the record, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion for sanctions. First Interstate Bank v. Berenbaum, 872 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1993).

A state court cannot impose sanctions under this rule for the conduct of an attorney during a federal court proceeding even if the proceeding is part of a single litigation that also includes state law claims heard by the state court, because the decision to impose such sanctions is necessarily a matter within the jurisdiction of the court in which the conduct occurred. Boulder County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Kraft Bldg. Contractors, 122 P.3d 1019 (Colo. App. 2005).

Award of attorney fees against plaintiff's attorney appropriate use of trial court's discretion given attorney's allegations as to the personal conduct of individuals who had not been joined in the action, insistence on relitigating issues when the court had made it clear that those issues were moot, reckless allegations of wrongdoing by individuals and attorneys without a showing of competent investigation or facts to support the allegations, and a request for fines or imprisonment without any showing to support such a request. Carder, Inc. v. Cash, 97 P.3d 174 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court was not obligated to assess attorney fees as a sanction for a violation of this rule when the attorney presented a rational argument, based on documentary evidence and established principles of contract interpretation, in support of his position. E-470 Pub. Hwy. Auth. v. Jagow, 30 P.3d 798 (Colo. App. 2001), aff'd on other grounds, 49 P.3d 1151 (Colo. 2002).

Sanctions are for the benefit of a party and not a nonparty. Roberts-Henry v. Richter, 802 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1990).

Victim of a frivolous lawsuit has a duty to mitigate attorney fees incurred in defending the lawsuit by taking reasonable measures to extricate himself or herself from the frivolous lawsuit at the earliest possible time. Consequently, trial court should not have awarded attorney fees incurred in pursuing defendant's counterclaims after plaintiff dismissed its original complaint against defendants. Boulder County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Kraft Bldg. Contractors, 122 P.3d 1019 (Colo. App. 2005).

This rule imposes sanctions upon those who violate its provisions, it does not preclude relief under C.R.C.P. 60(b)(1). Domenico v. Sw. Props. Venture, 914 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1995).

The failure to sign a complaint is not jurisdictional, but is subject to correction upon being called to the attention of the court. Harris v. Mun. Court, 123 Colo. 539, 234 P.2d 1055 (1951).

Failure of attorney representing county department of social services to sign verified dependency petition held to be harmless. People in Interest of A.M., 786 P.2d 476 (Colo. App. 1989).

County attorney not immune from award of fees under this rule when filing petition for temporary guardianship under § 26-3.1-104. Stepanek v. Delta County, 940 P.2d 364 (Colo. 1997).

Omission of party's address does not warrant dismissal. The original failure to comply with this rule by omitting the address of the party does not warrant dismissal of an action. Glickman v. Mesigh, 200 Colo. 320, 615 P.2d 23 (1980).

An independent claim based upon an alleged violation of this rule may not be asserted in a proceeding separate from the underlying cause of action. Henry v. Kemp, 829 P.2d 505 (Colo. App. 1992).

Defendant in legal malpractice action entitled to hearing on his or her claim for sanctions under this rule and § 13-17-102. When a party requests a hearing regarding the award of attorney fees and costs under § 13-17-102, the trial court must conduct an evidentiary hearing. Because the trial court denied the motion without conducting a hearing on defendant's motion for sanctions, remand is required for a hearing. Brown v. Silvern, 141 P.3d 871 (Colo. App. 2005).

Applied in People v. Breazeale, 190 Colo. 17, 544 P.2d 970 (1975); Caldwell v. District Court, 644 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1982); Pietrafeso v. D.P.I., Inc., 757 P.2d 1113 (Colo. App. 1988).

Rule 12. Defenses and Objections — When and How Presented — by Pleading or Motion — Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

(a) When Presented.

(1) A defendant shall file his answer or other response within 21 days after the service of the summons and complaint. The filing of a motion permitted under this Rule alters these periods of time, as follows:

(A) if the court denies the motion or postpones its disposition until the trial on the merits, the responsive pleadings shall be filed within 14 days after notice of the court's action;

(B) if the court grants a motion for a more definite statement, or for a statement in separate counts or defenses, the responsive pleadings shall be filed within 14 days after the service of the more definite statement or amended pleading.

(2) If, pursuant to special order, a copy of the complaint is not served with the summons, or if the summons is served outside of Colorado or by publication, the time limit for filings under subsections (a)(1) and (e) of this Rule shall be within 35 days after the service thereof.

(3) A party served with a pleading stating a cross-claim against that party shall file an answer thereto within 21 days after the service thereof.

(4) The plaintiff shall file a reply to a counterclaim in the answer within 21 days after the service of the answer.

(5) If a reply is made to any affirmative defense, such reply shall be filed within 21 days after service of the pleading containing such affirmative defense.

(6) If a pleading is ordered by the court, it shall be filed within 21 days after the entry of the order, unless the order otherwise directs.

(b) How Presented. Every defense, in law or in fact, to a claim for relief in any pleading, whether a claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, shall be asserted in the responsive pleading thereto if one is required, except that the following defenses may at the option of the pleader be made by separate motion filed on or before the date the answer or reply to a pleading under C.R.C.P. 12(a) is due:

(1) lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter;
(2) lack of jurisdiction over the person;
(3) insufficiency of process;
(4) insufficiency of service of process;
(5) failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted; or
(6) failure to join a party under C.R.C.P. 19.

No defense or objection is waived by being joined with one or more other defenses or objections in a responsive pleading or with any other motion permitted under this Rule or C.R.C.P. 98. If a pleading sets forth a claim for relief to which the adverse party is not required to file a responsive pleading, the adverse party may assert at the trial any defense in law or fact to that claim for relief. If, on a motion asserting the defense numbered (5) to dismiss for failure of the pleading to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, matters outside the pleading are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in C.R.C.P. 56, and all parties shall be given reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by C.R.C.P. 56.

(c) Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings. After the pleadings are closed but within such time as not to delay the trial, any party may move for judgment on the pleadings. If, on a motion for judgment on the pleadings, matters outside the pleadings are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Rule 56, and all parties shall be given reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by Rule 56.

(d) Preliminary Hearings. The defenses specifically enumerated in subsections (1)-(6) of section (b) of this Rule, whether made in a pleading or by motion, and the motion for judgment mentioned in section (c) of this Rule, shall be heard and determined before trial on application of any party, unless the court orders that the hearing and determination thereof be deferred until the trial.

(e) Motion for Separate Statement or for More Definite Statement. Within the time limits for filings under subsections (a)(1) and (a)(2) of this Rule, the party may file a motion for a statement in separate counts or defenses or for a more definite statement of any matter that is not averred with sufficient definiteness or particularity to enable the party properly to prepare a responsive pleading. If the motion is granted and the order of the court is not obeyed within 14 days after notice of the order or within such other time as the court may fix, the court may strike the pleading to which the motion was directed or make such order as it deems just.

(f) Motion to Strike. Upon motion filed by a party within the time for responding to a pleading or, if no responsive pleading is permitted by these rules, upon motion filed by a party within 21 days after the service of any pleading, motion, or other paper, or upon the court's own initiative at any time, the court may order any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter stricken from any pleading, motion, or other paper. The objection that a responsive pleading or separate defense therein fails to state a legal defense may be raised by motion filed under this section (f).

(g) Consolidation of Defenses in Motion. A party who makes a motion under this Rule may join with it any other motions herein provided for and then available to that party. If a party makes a motion under this Rule but omits therefrom any defense or objection then available to that party which this Rule permits to be raised by motion, that party shall not thereafter make a motion based on the defense or objection so omitted, except a motion as provided in section (h)(2) of this Rule on any of the grounds there stated.

(h) Waiver or Preservation of Certain Defenses.

(1) A defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person, insufficiency of process, or insufficiency of service of process is waived: (A) If omitted from a motion in the circumstances described in section (g); or (B) if it is neither made by motion under this Rule nor included in a responsive pleading or an amendment thereof permitted by Rule 15(a) to be made as a matter of course.

(2) A defense of failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, a defense of failure to join a party under Rule 19, and an objection of failure to state a legal defense to a claim may be made in any pleading permitted or ordered under Rule 7(a), or by motion for judgment on the pleadings, or at the trial on the merits.

(3) Whenever it appears by suggestion of the parties or otherwise that the court lacks jurisdiction of the subject matter, the court shall dismiss the action.

[1] The practice of pleading every affirmative defense listed in C.R.C.P. 8(c), irrespective of a factual basis for the defense, is improper under C.R.C.P. 11(a). The pleading of affirmative defenses is subject not only to C.R.C.P. 8(b), which requires a party to ''state in short and plain terms his defense to each claim asserted,'' but also to C.R.C.P. 11(a): ''The signature of an attorney constitutes a certificate by him that he has read the pleading; that to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief formed after reasonable inquiry, it is well grounded in fact and is warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law, and that it is not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation.'' Some affirmative defenses are also subject to the special pleading requirements of C.R.C.P. 9. To the extent a defendant does not have sufficient information under Rule 11(a) to plead a particular affirmative defense when the answer must be filed but later discovers an adequate basis to do so, the defendant should move to amend the answer to add the affirmative defense.

If the plaintiff fails to establish that the trial court has subject matter jurisdiction, the court must dismiss the matter. Any other order or judgment entered by the court would be void and unenforceable. Adams County Dept. of Soc. Serv. v. Huynh, 883 P.2d 573 (Colo. App. 1994).

II. WHEN PRESENTED.

Law reviews. For article, ''Mandamus and Other Writs'', see 18 Dicta 333 (1941).

Court has discretion to grant dismissal motion where pleadings not timely filed. Where a motion to dismiss is made because a reply is not filed in time, it is within the sound discretion of the court to grant it. Munro v. Eshe, 113 Colo. 19, 156 P.2d 700 (1944).

The court lacks authority to enter a final judgment prior to the expiration of the time fixed in the summons and by this rule for defendant to appear, and where such a judgment is entered, it is void. Erickson v. Groomer, 139 Colo. 32, 336 P.2d 296 (1959).

A judgment by default entered before the expiration of the time allowed to plead or answer is premature, and in a direct proceeding to review a judgment shown to have been so entered prematurely, a reversal for error must be granted. Netland v. Baughman, 114 Colo. 148, 162 P.2d 601 (1945).

Party's right to notice prior to entry of default, under C.R.C.P. 55(b)(2), is not extinguished by the fact that his appearance in the action was not made within the time required for an answer under section (a) of this rule. Carls Constr., Inc. v. Gigliotti, 40 Colo. App. 535, 577 P.2d 1107 (1978).

Issues concerning subject matter jurisdiction may be raised at any time. Sanchez v. State, 730 P.2d 328 (Colo. 1986); People in Interest of Clinton, 742 P.2d 946 (Colo. App. 1987).

A defendant may seek dismissal for failure to state a claim at any stage in the proceedings prior to the entry of judgment. Colo. Land & Res., Inc. v. Credithrift of Am., Inc., 778 P.2d 320 (Colo. App. 1989).

Court order extending time must conform to this rule. Order of court extending the time within which the defendant might answer or plead, which is entered pursuant to authority expressly granted to the court by C.R.C.P. 6(b), does not derogate from the requirements of section (a) of this rule. Oldland v. Gray, 179 F.2d 408 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 339 U.S. 948, 70 S. Ct. 803, 94 L. Ed. 1362 (1950).

Where defendants did not interpose a motion to dismiss until nearly one year after the filing of the complaint, there was no abuse of discretion in denying the motion. Hoy v. Leonard, 13 Colo. App. 449, 59 P. 229 (1899) (decided under former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

Applied in Carls Constr., Inc. v. Gigliotti, 40 Colo. App. 535, 577 P.2d 1107 (1978).

III. HOW PRESENTED.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, ''Use of Summary Judgments and the Discovery Procedure'', see 24 Dicta 193 (1947). For note, ''Comments on Last Clear Chance — Procedure and Substance'', see 32 Dicta 275 (1955). For article, ''Another Decade of Colorado Conflicts'', see 33 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 139 (1961). For article, '''Trinity' Hearings: Understanding Colorado Governmental Immunity Act Motions to Dismiss'', see 33 Colo. Law. 91 (December 2004).

This rule is patterned after F.R.C.P. 12(b). Treadwell v. District Court, 133 Colo. 520, 297 P.2d 891 (1956); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

Like its federal counterpart, this rule is based on the theory that the quick presentation of defenses and objections should be encouraged and that successive motions which prolong such presentation should be carefully limited. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

In this rule there is no provision for a "special" appearance. Treadwell v. District Court, 133 Colo. 520, 297 P.2d 891 (1956).

Section (b) of this rule did away with "general" and "special" appearances. At Home Magazine v. District Court, 194 Colo. 331, 572 P.2d 476 (1977).

The trial court must determine if under any theory of law plaintiff would be entitled to relief, for if relief could be granted under such circumstances, then the complaint is sufficient. Denver & R. G. W. R. R. v. Wood, 28 Colo. App. 534, 476 P.2d 299 (1970).

A trial court is not required to make findings of fact or conclusions of law when ruling on a motion to dismiss under section (b) of this rule. Jamison v. People, 988 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1999).

Although there exists no procedural rule specifically designed to address dismissal or transfer of a case on the basis of a forum selection clause, sections (b)(1) and (b)(5) are not appropriate mechanisms for addressing such clause. Edge Telecom, Inc. v. Sterling Bank, 143 P.3d 1155 (Colo. App. 2006).

For a discussion of the appropriate method of evaluation of a motion to dismiss based on a forum selection clause, see Edge Telecom, Inc. v. Sterling Bank, 143 P.3d 1155 (Colo. App. 2006).

Plaintiff must have remedial interest which is recognized and can be enforced. In order to withstand a challenge, the plaintiff must have, in the claim asserted, a remedial interest which the law of the forum can recognize and enforce. Nelson v. Nelson, 31 Colo. App. 63, 497 P.2d 1284 (1972).

Plaintiff has the burden to prove jurisdiction. Reynolds v. State Bd. for Cmty. Colls., 937 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1996).

A plaintiff has the burden of proving that the trial court has jurisdiction to hear the case. Pfenninger v. Exempla, Inc., 12 P.3d 830 (Colo. App. 2000).

Where claims contain allegations which, if established upon trial, would entitle one to relief, a motion to dismiss would be erroneous to grant. Colo. Nat'l Bank v. F. E. Biegert Co., 165 Colo. 78, 438 P.2d 506 (1968).

When one pleads ultimate facts which, if supported by adequate proof, would justify a recovery, then he is entitled to his day in court to attempt to prove his allegations. McDonald v. Lakewood Country Club, 170 Colo. 355, 461 P.2d 437 (1969).

The supreme court will not consider waived defenses in an original proceeding. The supreme court will not subvert the theory underlying section (b) of this rule and the clear language of sections (g) and (h)(1) of this rule by considering the matter of defenses in an original proceeding for writ of prohibition when those defenses were clearly waived. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

A trial judge, in denying a motion under this rule, did not grant relief from the waiver imposed by section (h)(1) of this rule, by granting 20 days ''to answer or otherwise plead'', as this language cannot be stretched into permission to file another motion under section (b) of this rule, since such a motion is not a pleading. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

Dismissal of judgment debtor's action to enforce settlement agreement error. Judgment debtor's action to enforce settlement agreement against judgment creditor's wife was not collateral attack on judgment and therefore could be enforced by separate action for specific performance. Tripp v. Parga, 764 P.2d 369 (Colo. App. 1988).

Applied in Wright v. Creative Corp., 30 Colo. App. 575, 498 P.2d 1179 (1972); Commercial Indus. Const., Inc. v. Anderson, 683 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1984).

B. Lack of Jurisdiction.

In testing the jurisdictional limit of courts the body of the complaint must be looked to to determine the amount in controversy and not the ''ad damnum'' clause. If the allegations of the complaint showed that the amount that could have been recovered was within the jurisdiction of the court, the fact that plaintiff's damage was alleged in a greater amount would not defeat the jurisdiction. Sams Automatic Car Coupler Co. v. League, 25 Colo. 129, 54 P. 642 (1898) (decided under section 56 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

With respect to a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the plaintiff has the burden to prove jurisdiction, and an appellate court reviewing a trial court's decision uses a mixed standard of review under which the trial court's evidentiary findings are reviewed under the clear error standard, and the trial court's legal conclusions are reviewed de novo. Bazemore v. Colo. State Lottery Div., 64 P.3d 876 (Colo. App. 2002).

Trial court erred in treating plaintiff's alleged lack of capacity to sue as a lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Ashton Props., Ltd. v. Overton, 107 P.3d 1014 (Colo. App. 2004).

The defenses of insufficiency of process and lack of jurisdiction over the person are defenses which may be made by motion under section (b) of this rule. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

Although the lack of jurisdiction is not raised by the parties, an appellate court may take note of this lack of jurisdiction on its own motion. Moschetti v. Liquor Licensing Auth., 176 Colo. 281, 490 P.2d 299 (1971).

A motion to quash is a proper method of raising the question of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant where the statutory requirements providing for service of process on nonresident motorists were not met, and where, in any event, such service was improper because defendant was not a nonresident at the time of the accident out of which the action arose. Carlson v. District Court, 116 Colo. 330, 180 P.2d 525 (1947).

A party may appear generally and still raise objections to jurisdiction of the person. Treadwell v. District Court, 133 Colo. 520, 297 P.2d 891 (1956).

Such a motion must be filed in apt time, and the question cannot be raised after answers and other motions as to the merits have been filed. Treadwell v. District Court, 133 Colo. 520, 297 P.2d 891 (1956).

If a motion to quash for lack of jurisdiction of a person is made before answer, then the jurisdiction of the court over the person is properly raised and stands in question until the motion is disposed of. Treadwell v. District Court, 133 Colo. 520, 297 P.2d 891 (1956).

In determining proper jurisdiction as between district court and probate court, the court must look at the facts alleged, the claims asserted, and the relief requested. Here, where the complaints were premised upon defendant's alleged legal malpractice in the drafting of the estate instruments, the estate planning, and the implementation of the estate plan, the complaints were not considered probate claims, and, therefore, jurisdiction lay with the district court not the probate court. Levine v. Katz, 192 P.3d 1008 (Colo. App. 2006).

Probate court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over claims of legal malpractice where plaintiff does not seek to recover assets of the estate. Levine v. Katz, 167 P.3d 141 (Colo. App. 2006).

Generally, the issue of immunity under the Colorado Governmental Immunity Act (CGIA) is a question of subject matter jurisdiction to be decided pursuant to section (b)(1). Kittinger v. City of Colo. Springs, 872 P.2d 1265 (Colo. App. 1993); Fogg v. Macaluso, 892 P.2d 271 (Colo. 1995); Armstead v. Memorial Hosp., 892 P.2d 450 (Colo. App. 1995); DiPaolo v. Boulder Valley Sch. Dist., 902 P.2d 439 (Colo. App. 1995); Sanchez v. Sch. Dist. 9-R, 902 P.2d 450 (Colo. App. 1995); Hallam v. City of Colo. Springs, 914 P.2d 479 (Colo. App. 1995); Norsby v. Jensen, 916 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1995); Johnson v. Reg'l Transp. Dist., 916 P.2d 619 (Colo. App. 1995); Reynolds v. State Bd. for Cmty. Colls., 937 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1996); Harris v. Reg'l Transp. Dist., 15 P.3d 782 (Colo. App. 2000); Wark v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 47 P.3d 711 (Colo. App. 2002).

Standing treated as a question of subject matter jurisdiction under section (b)(1). Grand Valley Citizens v. Colo. Oil & Gas, 298 P.3d 961 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 2012 CO 52, 279 P.3d 646.

The trial court is the fact finder and may hold an evidentiary hearing to resolve any factual dispute upon which the existence of its subject matter jurisdiction under the CGIA may turn. Lyons v. City of Aurora, 987 P.2d 900 (Colo. App. 1999).

Where a plaintiff has sued a governmental entity and that entity interposes a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the plaintiff has the burden of demonstrating that governmental immunity has been waived. However, because there is no presumption against state court jurisdiction and because the court must construe statutes that grant governmental immunity narrowly, the plaintiff should be afforded the reasonable inferences of this evidence. When the alleged jurisdictional facts are in dispute, the trial court should conduct an evidentiary hearing and enter findings of fact. When there is no evidentiary dispute, the trial court may rule without a hearing. Tidwell v. City & County of Denver, 83 P.3d 75 (Colo. 2003).

Motion brought under section (b)(1) is not the proper vehicle to decide questions of first amendment immunity. A defendant's claim that he has immunity under the first amendment invokes the court's authority to adjudicate the case; the court is considering whether the defendant is immune from an improperly instigated suit, not whether it has the authority to decide the case. Accordingly, summary judgment is the appropriate procedure to employ in this context. Krystkowiak v. W.O. Brisben Cos., 90 P.3d 859 (Colo. 2004).

State court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to issue writ of mandamus to federal officer. Hansen v. Long, 166 P.3d 248 (Colo. App. 2007).

Tribal sovereign immunity is properly raised in a motion to dismiss. The state bears the burden of establishing by a preponderance of the evidence that the trial court has subject matter jurisdiction over defendants. Cash Advance & Pref. Cash Loans v. State, 242 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2010).

Trial court erred in attempting to resolve the various material questions of fact presented to it without holding an evidentiary hearing to resolve those issues. Werth v. Heritage Int'l Holdings, PTO, 70 P.3d 627 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court may determine jurisdictional issue without an evidentiary hearing if it accepts all of plaintiffs assertions of fact as true. In such cases, the jurisdictional issue may be determined as a matter of law, and the appellate court reviews the trial court's ruling de novo. Hansen v. Long, 166 P.3d 248 (Colo. App. 2007); Asphalt Specialties, Co. v. City of Com-

Notice issues arising under the CGIA must be decided pursuant to section (b)(1), rather than by summary judgment and, depending on the case, the trial court may allow limited discovery and conduct an evidentiary hearing before deciding the notice issue. Capra v. Tucker, 857 P.2d 1346 (Colo. App. 1993); Norsby v. Jensen, 916 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1995).

The standards of section (b)(5) of this rule and C.R.C.P. 56 should not be applied in a CGIA motion to dismiss. When a plaintiff sues a governmental entity and that entity moves to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, the plaintiff has the burden of proving jurisdiction under section (b)(1). The court may conduct a hearing under Trinity Broadcasting of Denver, Inc. v. City of Westminster, 848 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1993), at which the parties may present evidence related to all issues of immunity, including facts not in dispute. After the hearing, the court must weigh the evidence and decide the facts to satisfy itself of its power to hear the case. In doing so, the court must afford the plaintiff the reasonable inferences from his or her evidence. The same lenient standard applies to facts related to both the jurisdictional issue and the merits of the case. Dennis v. City & County of Denver, 2016 COA 140, 419 P.3d 997, rev'd on other grounds, 2018 CO 37, 418 P.3d 489.

Sovereign immunity issues concern subject matter jurisdiction and are determined in accordance with this section. Any factual dispute upon which the existence of jurisdiction may turn is for the district court to resolve, and an appellate court will not disturb the factual findings of the district court unless they are clearly erroneous. Swieckowski v. City of Fort Collins, 934 P.2d 1380 (Colo. 1997); Mason v. Adams, 961 P.2d 540 (Colo. App. 1997).

A section (b)(1) motion to dismiss on grounds of immunity under the CGIA raises a jurisdictional issue. The plaintiff has the burden of demonstrating jurisdiction. When the alleged jurisdictional facts are in dispute, trial court should conduct an evidentiary hearing before ruling on the jurisdictional issue. Where there is no evidentiary dispute, governmental immunity or waiver of immunity is a matter of law, and trial court may rule on the jurisdictional issue without a hearing. Padilla ex rel. Padilla v. Sch. Dist. No. 1, 25 P.3d 1176 (Colo. 2001).

District court erred in dismissing case on the grounds of lack of jurisdiction due to CGIA immunity when the conduct in question occurred in the operation of a jail. Immunity does not apply to injuries resulting from the negligent operation of a jail, regardless of whether conduct was willful and wanton. Therefore, a district court should not address allegations that a public employee engaged in willful and wanton conduct in the operation of a jail via section (b)(1) and the evidentiary hearing described in Trinity Broadcasting of Denver, Inc. v. City of Westminster, 848 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1993). Hernandez v. City & County of Denver, 2018 COA 151, 439 P.3d 57.

A motion to compel arbitration is a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction which cannot be resolved by the presumptive truthfulness of the complaint but which must be determined in a factual hearing. Eychner v. Van Vleet, 870 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1993).

If the defendant answers as to the merits of the allegations of the complaint without embodying the motion to quash, then the jurisdictional question is thereby waived. Treadwell v. District Court, 133 Colo. 520, 297 P.2d 891 (1956).

Two-pronged test for standing. First, the plaintiff must have suffered an injury in fact, and second, this harm must have been to a legally protected interest. Grand Valley Citizens v. Colo. Oil & Gas, 298 P.3d 961 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 2012 CO 52, 279 P.3d 646.

Procedural injury, as well as substantive injury, may confer standing. Procedural injury consists of harm to an intangible or noneconomic interest such as a citizen's interest in ensuring that governmental units conform to the state constitution. Such injuries may exist solely by virtue of statutes creating legal rights. Grand Valley Citizens v. Colo. Oil & Gas, 298 P.3d 961 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 2012 CO 52, 279 P.3d 646.

For purposes of standing, substantive injury may consist of the risk of environmental injuries to places used by plaintiff. Therefore, persons who owned or used land three miles from potential natural gas drilling activity were entitled to challenge a denial of their right to a hearing on the issuance of permits. Grand Valley Citizens v. Colo. Oil & Gas, 298 P.3d 961 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 2012 CO 52, 279 P.3d 646.

Allegation of harm to a protected interest is sufficient to confer standing. A civil plaintiff claiming to have been injured by a defendant's actions has standing to sue even if a court, upon reaching the merits, ultimately determines that the defendant committed no wrong. Grand Valley Citizens v. Colo. Oil & Gas, 298 P.3d 961 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 2012 CO 52, 279 P.3d 646.

Application of the long-arm statute, constitutional due process, and the minimum-contacts test are properly raised by a nonresident defendant under section (b)(2). Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

Because the long-arm statute extends jurisdiction to the maximum extent allowed by the due process clause, the due process inquiry is controlling. Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

The nature of the minimum contacts required depends on whether the plaintiff alleges specific or general jurisdiction. Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

Specific jurisdiction is properly exercised over a nonresident defendant where the injuries triggering litigation arise out of and are related to significant activities directed by the defendant toward the forum state. The court should apply a two-part test to determine (1) whether the defendant purposefully availed himself or herself of the privilege of conducting business in the forum state, and (2) whether the litigation arises out of the defendant's forum-related contacts. Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

Contacts with the forum state must be established by the defendant, not by the unilateral activity of those who claim some relationship with the defendant. Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

Once the requisite minimum contacts are established, they must be considered in light of other factors to determine whether the assertion of personal jurisdiction would comport with notions of fair play and substantial justice, that is, whether jurisdiction over the defendant would be reasonable. Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

Individual contacts must not be viewed in isolation, but considered in their totality. Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

A factor bearing on the reasonableness of asserting personal jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant alleged to have violated the Colorado Securities Act is that the securities commissioner can file suit only in Denver district court. Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

A "relief defendant", who is not accused of violating substantive law but who holds assets essential to providing relief for a plaintiff's financial losses, may reasonably be compelled to appear in the forum state due to her role in a fraudulent scheme. Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

A party may move to dismiss an action under this rule by asserting the applicability of the doctrine of forum non conveniens as a ground for refusal by the court to exercise jurisdiction over a transitory cause of action which arose outside the state. Allison Drilling Co. v. Kaiser Steel Corp., 31 Colo. App. 355, 502 P.2d 967 (1972).

The doctrine of forum non conveniens must be applied with restraint and only after a proper showing has been made. What constitutes a proper showing must, of necessity, turn on the particular facts of each case. Allison Drilling Co. v. Kaiser Steel Corp., 31 Colo. App. 355, 502 P.2d 967 (1972).

The doctrine of forum non conveniens is founded upon the equitable power of a court to refuse, in its sound discretion, to exercise jurisdiction over a transitory cause of action when, after a consideration of all relevant factors, the ends of justice strongly indicate that the action may be more appropriately tried in a different forum. Allison Drilling Co. v. Kaiser Steel Corp., 31 Colo. App. 355, 502 P.2d 967 (1972).

Among the relevant factors which a court should consider in reaching its determination of forum non conveniens are: The relative availability of sources of evidence and the burden of defense and prosecution in one forum rather than another, the relative availability and accessibility of an alternative forum, the availability of compulsory process for attendance of unwilling witnesses and the cost of obtaining attendance of willing witnesses, the interest of the state in providing a forum for its residents, and the interest of the state in the litigation measured by the extent to which the defendant's activities within the state gave rise to the cause of action, as well as factors of public interest. Allison Drilling Co. v. Kaiser Steel Corp., 31 Colo. App. 355, 502 P.2d 967 (1972).

The thrust of forum non conveniens is not to determine the perfect forum but to provide a vehicle for choice between two or more alternative forums to avoid the hardship and expense of the one that is clearly inconvenient. Allison Drilling Co. v. Kaiser Steel Corp., 31 Colo. App. 355, 502 P.2d 967 (1972).

A plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing of threshold jurisdiction, which may be determined from the allegations of the complaint, to withstand defendant's motion to dismiss under section (b)(2) of this rule. Pioneer Astro Indus., Inc. v. District Court, 193 Colo. 409, 566 P.2d 1067 (1977).

If a section (b)(2) jurisdictional challenge is decided on documentary evidence alone, the trial court's role is to determine whether the plaintiff successfully asserted a prima facie case of personal jurisdiction over each defendant. In making that assessment, any disputed issues of material jurisdictional fact must be resolved in favor of the plaintiff. Archangel Diamond Corp. v. Lukoil, 123 P.3d 1187 (Colo. 2005); Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007); Rome v. Reyes, 2017 COA 84, 401 P.3d 75.

If the court determines that plaintiff made a prima facie showing of personal jurisdiction over each defendant, the trial court may still hold an evidentiary hearing to resolve the issue fully prior to trial or proceed to trial. Archangel Diamond Corp. v. Lukoil, 123 P.3d 1187 (Colo. 2005); Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007).

A trial court must not weigh and resolve disputed facts raised in section (b)(2) motion unless it conducts an evidentiary hearing. Archangel Diamond Corp. v. Lukoil, 123 P.3d 1187 (Colo. 2005); First Horizon Merch. Servs., Inc. v. Wellspring Capital Mgmt., LLC, 166 P.3d 166 (Colo. App. 2007); Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007); Griffith v. SSC Pueblo Belmont Oper. Co., 2016 CO 60M, 381 P.3d 308.

Trial court erroneously denied motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction because facts alleged by plaintiff were insufficient to demonstrate, and trial court failed to consider, whether corporate defendant was essentially at home in Colorado. The trial court did not properly apply the test for general jurisdiction because, although it found that defendant had ''continuous and systematic'' contacts with Colorado, it did not go on to determine whether those contacts rendered the defendant essentially at home in the state. Moreover, the facts alleged by plaintiff were insufficient to demonstrate general jurisdiction over defendant where the facts alleged merely indicated that defendant solicited and facilitated some business in the state. Clean Energy Collective v. Borrego Solar, 2017 CO 27, 394 P.3d 1114.

When out-of-state parent corporation may be answerable for actions of in-state subsidiary. First, the trial court must determine whether to pierce the corporate veil and impute the resident subsidiary's contacts to the nonresident parent company. If so, the contacts of both may be considered together. If not, the contacts of each entity with the forum state must be considered separately. Griffith v. SSC Pueblo Belmont Oper. Co., 2016 CO 60M, 381 P.3d 308; Meeks v. SSC Colo. Springs Colonial Columns Oper. Co., 2016 CO 61, 380 P.3d 126.

Trial court should have held a hearing and made substantial factual findings before applying the ''distinct entities'' test to determine whether piercing the corporate veil and subjecting the nonresident parent of a resident subsidiary to either general or specific personal jurisdiction was appropriate. Meeks v. SSC Colo. Springs Colonial Columns Oper. Co., 2016 CO 61, 380 P.3d 126.

Factors to be considered before piercing the corporate veil are set forth in Griffith v. SSC Pueblo Belmont Oper. Co., 2016 CO 60M, 381 P.3d 308.

Distinction between general and specific personal jurisdiction. A corporation may be subject to specific personal jurisdiction when it has ''certain minimum contacts'' with Colorado and the cause of action arises out of those contacts. However, exercising general personal jurisdiction over a nonresident corporation exposes it to suits in this state for any and all claims against it, even if the parties and events underlying a claim have no connection to the state. Therefore, a company is subject to general jurisdiction only where it is incorporated, has its principal place of business, or is ''essentially at home''. Griffith v. SSC Pueblo Belmont Oper. Co., 2016 CO 60M, 381 P.3d 308.

Defenses not raised by motion are waived. Sections (g) and (h)(1) of this rule make it expressly clear that if a party makes a motion under section (b) of this rule and, in doing so, omits the defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person or insufficiency of process, and such defenses were available to him at the time the motion was made, then the omitted defenses are waived, and the defendant may not raise them by subsequent motion or in his answer. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

Clearly erroneous standard must be followed in appellate review of trial court determination regarding subject matter jurisdiction. DiPaolo v. Boulder Valley Sch. Dist., 902 P.2d 439 (Colo. App. 1995); Norsby v. Jensen, 916 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1995); Lyon v. Amoco Prod. Co., 923 P.2d 350 (Colo. App. 1996); Reynolds v. State Bd. for Cmty. Colls., 937 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1996); Lyons v. City of Aurora, 987 P.2d 900 (Colo. App. 1999).

A reviewing court may apply section (b)(1) to the record without a remand if the court is satisfied that all relevant evidence has been presented to the trial court. DiPaolo v. Boulder Valley Sch. Dist., 902 P.2d 439 (Colo. App. 1995); Norsby v. Jensen, 916 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1995).

If the court is satisfied that all the relevant evidence has been presented to the trial court, it may apply section (b)(1) to the record before it without remanding the case for an evidentiary hearing. Capra v. Tucker, 857 P.2d 1346 (Colo. App. 1993); Norsby v. Jensen, 916 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1995).

The statements that gave rise to plaintiff's claims of slander were issued within the constitutionally protected context of the first amendment of the U.S. Constitution because they occurred during a church meeting concerning whether to terminate the plaintiff as the church's pastor. The Colorado supreme court has recognized that the courts have no authority to determine claims that directly concern a church's choice of minister and, therefore, the trial court properly refused to exercise jurisdiction. Seefried v. Hummel, 148 P.3d 184 (Colo. App. 2005).

A court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over minister's claim against church for compensation not paid where resolution of the claim would require the court to determine whether the minister adequately performed his ecclesiastical duties. Jones v. Crestview S. Baptist Church, 192 P.3d 571 (Colo. App. 2008).

Colorado state courts have jurisdiction over private actions under the Telephone

Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), 47 U.S.C. § 227, under the supremacy clause of the United States Constitution, and the TCPA does not limit this jurisdiction, even assuming congress could do so. When congress created a private right of action that could be prosecuted in state courts, it was acknowledging that the states could apply their own rules of procedure to such an action, but it did not intend to require that any state adopt a further law or rule of court to allow the prosecution of such actions in its courts. The supremacy clause requires the exercise of such jurisdiction as the state court possesses. Consumer Crusade, Inc. v. Affordable Health Care Solutions, Inc. v. 121 P.3d 350 (Colo. App. 2005).

"If otherwise permitted" phrase under TCPA provisions creating a private right of action is merely an acknowledgment by congress that states have the right to structure their own court systems and that state courts are not obligated to change their procedural rules to accommodate TCPA claims. Under this view, no state can refuse to entertain a private TCPA action, but a state is not compelled to adopt a special procedural rule for such actions. Consumer Crusade, Inc. v. Affordable Health Care Solutions, Inc., 121 P.3d 350 (Colo. App. 2005).

A Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over claims filed against a financial institution that is subsequently placed in receivership where the claimant failed to exhaust the administrative claims process set forth in the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989, codified at 12 U.S.C. § 1821(d). Liberty Bankers Life v. First Citizens, 2014 COA 151, 411 P.3d 111.

Omission of a party's name from a Colorado anti-discrimination act charging document should be considered under the relation-back doctrine, C.R.C.P. 15 (c). Craig v. Masterpiece Cakeshop, Inc., 2015 COA 115, 370 P.3d 272, rev'd on other grounds, __ U.S. __, 138 S. Ct. 1719, 201 L. Ed. 2d 35 (2018).

Because the three requirements for application of the relation-back doctrine were satisfied, the administrative law judge did not err when he denied respondents' motion to dismiss. Craig v. Masterpiece Cakeshop, Inc., 2015 COA 115, 370 P.3d 272, rev'd on other grounds, __ U.S. __, 138 S. Ct. 1719, 201 L. Ed. 2d 35 (2018).

C. Insufficiency of Process.

The defenses of insufficiency of process and lack of jurisdiction over the person are defenses which may be made by motion under section (b) of this rule. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

Denial of motion to quash service of process is error. Denial of a party's motion to quash service of process under this rule is error if party has not been properly served under C.R.C.P. 4(e)(5) and (f)(2). Pioneer Astro Indus., Inc. v. District Court, 193 Colo. 409, 566 P.2d 1067 (1977).

There was no waiver of defense of insufficiency of service of process, raised by motion to quash, where the court did not rule on the question on previous motion to quash. Pioneer Astro Indus., Inc. v. District Court, 193 Colo. 409, 566 P.2d 1067 (1977).

A party who seeks to set aside a judgment and plead to the merits has thereby entered a general appearance and waived the right to question a summons. Wells Aircraft Parts Co. v. Allan J. Kayser Co., 118 Colo. 197, 194 P.2d 326 (1947).

D. Failure to State a Claim upon which Relief can be Granted.

Federal jurisprudence under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) is persuasive, since the federal rule is identical to section (b)(5) of this rule. Yadon v. Lowry, 126 P.3d 332 (Colo. App. 2005); Walker v. Van Laningham, 148 P.3d 391 (Colo. App. 2006).

And the Colorado supreme court has always preferred to interpret state rules of civil procedure harmoniously with similarly worded federal rules. Warne v. Hall, 2016 CO 50, 373 P.3d 588.

A section (b)(5) motion to dismiss tests the sufficiency of the complaint. In assessing such a motion a court must accept all matters of material fact in the complaint as true and view the allegations in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and may grant the motion only if the plaintiff's factual allegations cannot support a claim as a matter of law. Asphalt Specialties, Co. v. City of Commerce City, 218 P.3d 741 (Colo. App. 2009).

The primary difference between section (b)(1) and section (b)(5) is that under section (b)(1) the trial court is permitted to make findings of fact. Under section (b)(5) it is not; it must take the allegation of the complaint as true and draw all inferences in favor of the plaintiff. Medina v. State, 35 P.3d 443 (Colo. 2001); Schwindt v. Hershey Food Corp., 81 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2003).

To the extent that the trial court's conclusion that a tow truck was merely an extension of the vehicle being pushed by it was a finding of fact, such a finding could not be made in the context of a motion under section (b)(5). Titan Indem. Co. v. Sch. Dist. No. 1, 129 P.3d 1075 (Colo. App. 2005).

Generally, the issue of immunity under the CGIA is a question of subject matter jurisdiction to be decided pursuant to section (b)(1). Kittinger v. City of Colo. Springs, 872 P.2d 1265 (Colo. App. 1993); Fogg v. Macaluso, 892

P.2d 271 (Colo. 1995); Armstead v. Memorial Hosp., 892 P.2d 450 (Colo. App. 1995); DiPaolo v. Boulder Valley Sch. Dist., 902 P.2d 439 (Colo. App. 1995); Sanchez v. Sch. Dist. 9-R, 902 P.2d 450 (Colo. App. 1995); Norsby v. Jensen, 916 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1995); Reynolds v. State Bd. for Cmty. Colls., 937 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1996); Medina v. State, 17 P.3d 178 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd, 35 P.3d 443 (Colo. 2001).

A motion to dismiss pursuant to section (b)(5) tests the sufficiency of a plaintiff's complaint. Such a motion is looked on with disfavor and should not be granted unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts that would entitle him or her to relief. The court must accept all averments of material fact as true, and all the allegations in the complaint must be viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. The court reviews the trial court's ruling de novo. Verrier v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 77 P.3d 873 (Colo. App. 2003); Sweeney v. United Artists Theater Circuit, Inc., 119 P.3d 538 (Colo. App. 2005); Allen v. Steele, 252 P.3d 476 (Colo. 2011).

In narrow circumstances, when allegations indicate the existence of an affirmative defense that will bar the award of any remedy, a party may raise an affirmative defense in a motion to dismiss. Where an employee brought a claim under § 24-34-402.5 (1), the affirmative defense raised by the employer under § 24-34-402.5 (1)(a) was a proper basis for its motion to dismiss. Williams v. Rock-Tenn Servs., Inc., 2016 COA 18, 370 P.3d 638.

Motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim are viewed with disfavor and are rarely granted under ''notice pleadings''. Davidson v. Dill, 180 Colo. 123, 503 P.2d 157 (1972); Dunlap v. Colo. Springs Cablevision, Inc., 829 P.2d 1286 (Colo. 1992); Story v. Bly, 217 P.3d 872 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 241 P.3d 529 (Colo. 2010); Denver Post Corp. v. Ritter, 255 P.3d 1083 (Colo. 2011).

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is viewed with disfavor, and should be granted only if it clearly appears that the plaintiff would not be entitled to any relief under the facts pleaded. Nat'l Sur. Corp. v. Citizens State Bank, 41 Colo. App. 580, 593 P.2d 362 (1978), aff'd, 199 Colo. 497, 612 P.2d 70 (1980).

Whether a claim is stated must be determined solely from the complaint. In passing on a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim, the court must consider only those matters stated within the four corners thereof. Dillinger v. North Sterling Irrigation Dist., 135 Colo. 100, 308 P.2d 608 (1957); McDonald v. Lakewood Country Club, 170 Colo. 355, 461 P.2d 437 (1969); Dunlap v. Colo. Springs Cablevision, Inc., 829 P.2d 1286 (Colo. 1992); Fluid Tech., Inc. v. CVJ Axles, Inc., 964 P.2d 614 (Colo. App. 1998); Kratzer v. Colo. Intergovernmental Risk Share Agency, 18 P.3d 766 (Colo. App. 2000).

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim must be decided solely on the basis of allegations stated in the complaint. Foster Lumber Co. v. Weston Constructors, Inc., 33 Colo. App. 436, 521 P.2d 1294 (1974); Nat'l Camera, Inc. v. Sanchez. 832 P.2d 960 (Colo. App. 1991).

Upon review of a grant of a motion to dismiss under section (b)(5) of this rule, it must be assumed that the material allegations of the complaint are true. Schmaltz v. St. Luke's Hosp., 33 Colo. App. 351, 521 P.2d 787 (1974), modified, 188 Colo. 353, 534 P.2d 781 (1975).

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim must be considered on its merits like a motion for summary judgment and cannot be deemed confessed by a failure to respond. Therefore, trial court erred in failing to consider the merits of plaintiffs' claims for relief as required by section (b)(5) in resolving defendant's motion to dismiss. Hemmann Mgmt. Servs. v. Mediacell, Inc., 176 P.3d 856 (Colo. App. 2007).

Plain language of this rule precludes a party from filing a motion under section (b)(5) after filing a responsive pleading. BSLNI, Inc. v. Russ T. Diamonds, Inc., 2012 COA 214, 293 P.3d 598.

"Matters outside the pleadings", consideration of which requires the court to convert a motion for dismissal into a motion for summary judgment, does not include a document referred to in the complaint, notwithstanding that the document is not formally incorporated by reference or attached to the complaint. Yadon v. Lowry, 126 P.3d 332 (Colo. App. 2005); Walker v. Van Laningham, 148 P.3d 391 (Colo. App. 2006).

The same is true of counterclaims and cross claims. Whether or not counterclaims and cross claims state a claim upon which relief could be granted, the court must look to the four corners of the pleading in question to determine whether a claim is stated. Colo. Nat'l Bank v. F. E. Biegert Co., 165 Colo. 78, 438 P.2d 506 (1968).

Although a court primarily considers the pleadings, certain matters of public record may also be taken into account, and matters that are properly the subject of judicial notice may be considered without converting the motion for dismissal into a motion for summary judgment. Walker v. Van Laningham, 148 P.3d 391 (Colo. App. 2006).

Judicial notice of prior pleadings, orders, judgments, and other items appearing in the court records of prior litigation are "matters outside the pleadings" that invoke the requirement that a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim be treated instead as one for summary judgment under C.R.C.P. 56. Bristol Bay Prod., LLC v. Lampack, 2013 CO 60, 312 P.3d 1155.

Collateral estoppel or "issue preclusion" should be argued as part of a motion for summary judgment under C.R.C.P. 56, not a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under section (b)(5) of this rule. Bristol Bay Prod., LLC v. Lampack, 2013 CO 60, 312 P.3d 1155.

Application of the discovery rule to limitation period was a factual question that could not be resolved in a ruling under section (b)(5). Bell v. Land Title Guar. Co., 2018 COA 70, 422 P.3d 613.

A motion to dismiss based on an affirmative defense should be converted to a motion for summary judgment if the court considers matters outside the complaint when ruling on the motion. If the bare allegations of the complaint reveal that the affirmative defense applies, the court need not convert the motion. Prospect Dev. v. Holland & Knight, 2018 COA 107, 433 P.3d 146.

Upon a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the facts of the complaint should be taken as true. Denver & R. G. W. R. R. v. Wood, 28 Colo. App. 534, 476 P.2d 299 (1970).

In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the trial court must accept the facts of the complaint as true and determine whether, under any theory of law, plaintiff is entitled to relief. If relief could be granted under such circumstances, the complaint is sufficient. Schlitters v. State, 787 P.2d 656 (Colo. App. 1989); Chidester v. Eastern Gas & Fuel Assoc., 859 P.2d 222 (Colo. App. 1992); Rosenthal v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 908 P.2d 1095 (Colo. 1995); Flatiron Linen, Inc. v. First Amer. State Bank, 1 P.2d 244 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 23 P.3d 1209 (Colo. 2001); W.O. Brisben Co., Inc. v. Krystkowiak, 66 P.3d 133 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 90 P.3d 859 (Colo. 2004); Dotson v. Dell L. Bernstein, P.C., 207 P.3d 911 (Colo. App. 2009).

But a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim for relief that is plausible on its face. Case law interpreting the state rules of civil procedure reflects first and foremost a preference to maintain uniformity in the interpretation of the federal and state rules of civil procedure and a willingness to be guided by the United States supreme court's interpretation of corresponding federal rules. It is thus appropriate for the state to adopt for state complaints the new plausible-on-its-face standard for federal complaints adopted by the United States supreme court in lieu of the prior federal and state standard that deemed a complaint sufficient unless it appears beyond doubt on the face of the complaint that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the claims alleged. Warne v. Hall, 2016 CO 50, 373 P.3d 588.

Material allegations must be taken as admitted. When deciding whether a complaint is sufficient to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the material allegations of the complaint must be taken as admitted. Nelson v. Nelson, 31 Colo. App. 63, 497 P.2d 1284 (1972); Saunders v. Bankston, 31 Colo. App. 551, 506 P.2d 1253 (1972).

On appeal from the dismissal of a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, the material allegations of the complaint must be taken as admitted. Fort v. Holt, 508 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 1973).

When reviewing a motion to dismiss, the court must accept the material allegations of the complaint as true and the complaint cannot be dismissed unless it appears that the non-moving party is entitled to no relief under any statement of facts which may be proved in support of the claims. Douglas County Nat. Bank v. Pfeiff, 809 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court is not required to accept complaint's legal conclusions or factual claims at variance with the express terms of documents attached to the complaint. When documents are attached to a complaint, the legal effect of the documents is determined by their contents rather than by allegations in the complaint. Thus, trial court need not consider the allegations of the complaint as true and in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, if such consideration would conflict with the attached documents. Stauffer v. Stegemann, 165 P.3d 719 (Colo. App. 2006).

Court is not required to accept as true legal conclusions that are couched as factual allegations. Denver Post Corp. v. Ritter, 255 P.3d 1083 (Colo. 2011).

Since under the present rules a motion to dismiss is treated as a demurrer, it must be assumed that the allegations of a petition are true. Nielsen v. Nielsen, 111 Colo. 344, 141 P.2d 415 (1943).

A motion for failure to state a claim is not identical to a demurrer. While motion under section (b) of this rule, for ''failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted'', may in some cases serve the purpose of a demurrer and is analogous to it in some respects, it is not an identical attack. People ex rel. Bauer v. McCloskey, 112 Colo. 488, 150 P.2d 861 (1944).

A party's capacity to sue may not be raised by motion to dismiss. A party who wishes to raise the issue of capacity must do so by specific negative averment. Ashton Props., Ltd. v. Overton, 107 P.3d 1014 (Colo. App. 2004).

In a complaint, a plaintiff need not set forth the underlying facts giving rise to the claim with precise particularity, especially as to those matters reasonably unknown to him and within the cognizance of the defendants. Shockley v. Georgetown Valley Water & San. Dist., 37 Colo. App. 434, 548 P.2d 928 (1976).

When it appears on the face of the complaint, or is admitted, that the complaint does not state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the claim is barred, the court has no jurisdiction of the subject matter, and the court can, for that reason, grant a motion to dismiss on this ground. Fort Collins-Loveland Water Dist. v. City of Fort Collins, 174 Colo. 79, 482 P.2d 986 (1971).

Want of merit may consist of an absence of substantive law to support a claim of the type alleged. Nelson v. Nelson, 31 Colo. App. 63, 497 P.2d 1284 (1972).

A complaint will not be dismissed unless it appears to a certainty that plaintiff would be entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of claim. People ex rel. Bauer v. McCloskey, 112 Colo. 488, 150 P.2d 861 (1944); Nelson v. Nelson, 31 Colo. App. 63, 497 P.2d 1284 (1972).

Where complaint against a partner in a limited liability partnership lacks any factual allegations explaining how limited partner could be individually liable for alleged retaliatory discharge, the complaint is deficient in stating a claim. Middlemist v. BDO Seidman, LLP, 958 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1997).

A complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief. Davidson v. Dill, 180 Colo. 123, 503 P.2d 157 (1972); Kratzer v. Colo. Intergovernmental Risk Share Agency, 18 P.3d 766 (Colo. App. 2000).

It is error to dismiss a complaint if plaintiff can be granted relief under any state of facts which may be proved in support of the claim. Fort v. Holt, 508 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 1973).

Where a plaintiff in his complaint states a case entitling him to some relief, a motion to dismiss the action should not be granted. Stapp v. Carb-Ice Corp., 122 Colo. 526, 224 P.2d 935 (1950); Dillinger v. North Sterling Irrigation Dist., 135 Colo. 100, 308 P.2d 608 (1957).

It is error to grant a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted if in fact a ''relievable'' claim is stated. Gold Uranium Mining Co. v. Chain O'Mines Operators, Inc., 128 Colo. 399, 262 P.2d 927 (1953).

Where payee of checks and its insurer pled that bank paid checks payable to corporation upon forged endorsements, the plaintiffs properly stated a cause of action for conversion against the bank, and the trial court therefore erred in granting the bank's motion to dismiss under section (b)(5). Citizens State Bank v. Nat'l Sur. Corp., 199 Colo. 497, 612 P.2d 70 (1980).

A court errs in granting a defendant's motion to dismiss under section (b)(5) of this rule, when claims are sufficient statements of a cause of action for which relief may be granted. Wright v. Creative Corp., 30 Colo. App. 575, 498 P.2d 1179 (1972).

Only where a complaint fails to give defendants notice of the claims asserted is dismissal under section (b)(5) proper. Shockley v. Georgetown Valley Water & San. Dist., 37 Colo. App. 434, 548 P.2d 928 (1976).

Denial of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is not prejudicial to movant where claim was included in a stipulated trial management order, giving movant sufficient notice that the claim would be tried. People ex rel. Suthers v. Mandatory Poster, 260 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2009).

Failure to specifically request relief under a particular claim, where complaint included a general request for relief, is not sufficient grounds to dismiss claim on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. People ex rel. Suthers v. Mandatory Poster, 260 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2009).

Failure to state claim where special damages in libel per quod action are not pleaded results in dismissal of complaint. Since special damages are an essential element of an action for libel per quod, plaintiff is required to specifically plead them, and if the plaintiff fails to do so, the trial court can then dismiss the plaintiff's complaint under section (b)(5) of this rule for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Bernstein v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 149 Colo. 150, 368 P.2d 780 (1962).

Where it is clear that plaintiffs have no standing to assert a claim upon which relief can be granted, the action is properly dismissed under section (b)(5) of this rule. Clark v. City of Colo. Springs, 162 Colo. 593, 428 P.2d 359 (1967).

Individual shareholders were not entitled to relief where no injury suffered. Where the complaint alleged only that the individual plaintiffs were shareholders of the corporation and that the corporation sustained damages as a result of defendants' actions, plaintiffs, as individual shareholders, suffered no individually redressable injury thereby, and their complaint was properly dismissed because it stated no claim upon which they were entitled to relief. Northwest Dev., Inc. v. Dunn, 29 Colo. App. 364, 483 P.2d 1361 (1971).

Permission to amend should be given where there is possibility of adequate statement of claim. While a judgment of dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which the relief can be granted may be entered upon a motion for summary judgment, such judgment must specifically disclose the inadequacy of the complaint as the ground therefor, and permission to amend should be given where there is a possibility by amendment of an adequate statement of claim. Smith v. Mills, 123 Colo. 11, 225 P.2d 483 (1950).

When a person has been acquitted of a crime and denied the return of the arrest record without justification, a suit by the person alleging violation of the right to privacy is not to be dismissed for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Davidson v. Dill, 180 Colo. 123, 503 P.2d 157 (1972).

Discovery not required. If a challenged complaint sufficiently states a claim for relief, the trial court may not require the plaintiff to undertake discovery merely to withstand a motion to dismiss. Shockley v. Georgetown Valley Water & San. Dist., 37 Colo. App. 434, 548 P.2d 928 (1976).

It is appropriate for a trial court to treat a motion for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted as a motion for summary judgment when it is necessary to consider the factual circumstances and the party against whom the motion is filed is accorded an opportunity to respond with evidence and counter-affidavits. Brannan Sand & Gravel v. F.D.I.C., 928 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1996), rev'd on other grounds, 940 P.2d 393 (Colo. 1997).

Order granting summary judgment where a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted must be affirmed if the pleadings, together with any affidavits filed in support of the motion, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969); Fort Collins Motor Homes, Inc. v. City of Ft. Collins, 30 Colo. App. 445, 496 P.2d 1074 (1972).

Where statute provided defendant with only qualified immunity, and plaintiff's allegations, if accepted as true, adequately asserted ''willful and wanton'' misconduct abrogating such immunity, dismissal was not proper. Holland v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 883 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1994).

Employee's allegation that his demotion was in violation of the policies and procedures of the employer and therefore constituted a breach of contract was sufficient to survive a motion to dismiss, but the employee's allegation that the demotion constituted extreme and outrageous conduct failed to state a cognizable claim. Salimi v. Farmers Ins. Group, 684 P.2d 264 (Colo. App. 1984).

Employee's mere allegation of termination from employment because of compliance with the employer's safety policy, rather than any allegation of breach of contract for failure of the employer to comply with its own discharge procedures or a termination for cause provision specified in any handbook distributed to the employee, was insufficient to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Corbin v. Sinclair Marketing, Inc., 684 P.2d 265 (Colo. App. 1984).

In considering a motion to dismiss a damages claim by an employee against a co-employee based upon a defense or immunity provided by § 8-41-104, the county court erred in not considering matters outside the pleadings where issues regarding the defense were absent from the pleadings and in not treating the motion as one for summary judgment under C.R.C.P. 56. Popovich v. Irlando, 811 P.2d 379 (Colo. 1991).

In reviewing a motion to dismiss a complaint, the appellate court can consider only matters stated therein and must not go beyond the confines of the pleading, for in reviewing the action of the trial court in dismissing a complaint for failure to state a claim, the appellate court is in the same position as the trial judge. McDonald v. Lakewood Country Club, 170 Colo. 355, 461 P.2d 437 (1969).

In evaluating such motions, trial courts and appellate courts apply the same standards. Van Wyk v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 996 P.2d 193 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 27 P.3d 377 (Colo. 2001).

The appellate court reviews a trial court's determination on a motion to dismiss de novo, and, like the trial court, must accept all averments of material fact contained in the complaint as true. Fluid Tech., Inc. v. CVJ Axles, Inc., 964 P.2d 614 (Colo. App. 1998).

Because the substance, rather than the name or denomination of a pleading determines its character and sufficiency, a ruling on a motion made in limine that sought to dismiss a claim for failure of pleading was properly reviewed de novo, not under an abuse of discretion standard. People ex rel. Suthers v. Mandatory Poster, 260 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2009).

Both courts must view complaint's allegations favorable to plaintiff. When ruling upon a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim, a trial court and a reviewing court must view the allegations of the complaint in a light most favorable to the plaintiff. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971); Halverson v. Pikes Peak Fam. Counseling, 795 P.2d 1352 (Colo. 1990); Nat'l Camera, Inc. v. Sanchez, 832 P.2d 960 (Colo. App. 1991); Story v. Bly, 217 P.3d 872 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 241 P.3d 529 (Colo. 2010).

In so testing all matters well pleaded will be assumed to be true. Colo. Nat'l Bank v. F. E. Biegert Co., 165 Colo. 78, 438 P.2d 506 (1968).

In determining whether a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is to be granted, all matters well pleaded must be considered to be true, and the trial court can consider only those matters stated in the complaint. Abts v. Bd. of Educ., 622 P.2d 518 (Colo. 1980).

A motion to dismiss based on the exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act does not go to the subject matter jurisdiction of the court, therefore, an evidentiary hearing is neither required nor appropriate. The trial court did not err in ruling on employer's motion without such a hearing. Schwindt v. Hershey Food Corp., 81 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2003).

Colorado state courts have jurisdiction over private actions under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), 47 U.S.C. § 227, under the supremacy clause of the United States Constitution, and the TCPA does not limit this jurisdiction, even assuming congress could do so. When congress created a private right of action that could be prosecuted in state courts, it was acknowledging that the states could apply their own rules of procedure to such an action, but it did not intend to require that any state adopt a further law or rule of court to allow the prosecution of such actions in its courts. The supremacy clause requires the exercise of such jurisdiction as the state court possesses. Consumer Crusade, Inc. v. Affordable Health Care Solutions, Inc., 121 P.3d 350 (Colo. App. 2005).

"If otherwise permitted" phrase under TCPA provisions creating a private right of action is merely an acknowledgment by congress that states have the right to structure their own court systems and that state courts are not obligated to change their procedural rules to accommodate TCPA claims. Under this view, no state can refuse to entertain a private TCPA action, but a state is not compelled to adopt a special procedural rule for such actions. Consumer Crusade, Inc. v. Affordable Health Care Solutions, Inc., 121 P.3d 350 (Colo. App. 2005).

Trial court properly granted dismissal of state law claims under section (b)(5) on grounds that such claims were preempted by federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) legislation. Fact that former employees were not entitled to bring a cause of action under ERISA did not mean that state law claims could not be preempted. Houdek v. Mobil Oil Corp., 879 P.2d 417 (Colo. App. 1994).

Question not before district court was not before supreme court. Where the question as to whether the complaint failed to state facts on which a claim of relief could be based was not placed before the district court by motion under this rule, a fortiori, it was not before the supreme court. Allen v. Evans, 193 Colo. 61, 562 P.2d 752 (1977).

Party was properly dismissed based upon holding that an employer or business may not recover against a third party for economic losses it suffered as a result of the third party's tortious injury to its employee. Gonzalez v. Yancey, 939 P.2d 525 (Colo. App. 1997).

Motion to dismiss was properly granted where there was no evidence that petitioner could have proffered regarding the importance of assisted suicide to his belief system that would exempt him, or his designated third persons, on first amendment grounds from the provisions of § 18-3-104. Sanderson v. People, 12 P.3d 851 (Colo. App. 2000).

Defendant's actions do not constitute either a taking or a damaging of plaintiffs' property, and, therefore, the complaint, even when viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs, cannot sustain a claim for inverse condemnation. Therefore, the district court properly dismissed plaintiffs' inverse condemnation claim pursuant to defendant's section (b)(5) motion. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo. v. Van Wyk, 27 P.3d 377 (Colo. 2001).

Plaintiff's takings claim was improperly dismissed based on a ruling that claim was not ripe. Even though final condemnation proceedings had not been instituted, plaintiffs alleged that they had already been harmed, and those allegations must be viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs. Therefore, the claim was ripe. G & A Land, LLC v. City of Brighton, 233 P.3d 701 (Colo. App. 2010).

With regard to plaintiffs' claim for trespass, the complaint does not allege specific physical damage to their property resulting from the intangible intrusions of which they complained. Because plaintiffs have not alleged physical damage, plaintiffs cannot prove trespass based on the alleged intangible intrusions. Nor have plaintiffs alleged any tangible intrusions upon their property to support a claim of trespass. Therefore, the complaint, when viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs, cannot support a cause of action for trespass and was properly dismissed by the district court. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo. v. Van Wyk, 27 P.3d 377 (Colo. 2001).

Respondent failed to state a claim for intentional interference with contractual relations against petitioner. Under the Nonprofit Corporation Act, neighborhood association could not individually bind its members, including petitioner, to a contract its president signed. At all times, individual members of the neighborhood association, including petitioner, were free to disassociate from the association and to express their own views about the proposed development. Respondent's complaint failed to allege petitioner's first amendment rights were limited by the settlement agreement. The complaint essentially pointed to the fact petitioner exercised his or her first amendment rights without alleging that the exercise of such rights was improper. Further, there is no allegation that petitioner's exercise of his constitutional rights persuaded, intimated, or intentionally made it impossible for the association to perform its contract. Krystkowiak v. W.O. Brisben Cos., 90 P.3d 859 (Colo. 2004).

Plaintiffs' complaint satisfies both of the requirements necessary to allege a nuisance. Thus, the nuisance section of plaintiffs' complaint sufficiently states a nuisance claim, and the district court improperly dismissed the nuisance claim. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo. v. Van Wyk, 27 P.3d 377 (Colo. 2001).

Motion to dismiss should have been denied on the basis that a joint venturer cannot shield itself from liability on the grounds that the joint venture was prohibited by the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Bebo Constr. Co. v. Mattox & O'Brien, 998 P.2d 475 (Colo. App. 2000).

Motion to dismiss is properly granted when plaintiffs lack standing because the complaint does not show actual injury to a legally protected right. Kreft v. Adolph Coors Co., 170 P.3d 854 (Colo. App. 2007).

Motion to dismiss was properly granted under section (b)(5) where plaintiff claimed undercharges resulted in defendant's unjust enrichment. There is nothing unjust about retaining a benefit conferred gratuitously. Berenergy Corp. v. Zab, Inc., 94 P.3d 1232 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd on other grounds, 136 P.3d 252 (Colo. 2006).

Motion to dismiss was properly granted as a matter of law when the allegations in the complaint were too vague, insubstantial, and attenuated to support plaintiff's legal malpractice claims. Bristol Co., LP v. Osman, 190 P.3d 752 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court properly dismissed complaint under section (b)(5) alleging city council's use of anonymous ballot procedure to fill city council vacancies and to appoint municipal judge was prohibited under Colorado open meetings law (COML). COML does not impose specific voting procedures on local public bodies let alone one that prohibits the use of anonymous ballots. COML is silent as to whether the votes taken need to be recorded in a way that identifies which elected official voted for which candidate. Rather, COML only requires that the public have access to meetings of local public bodies and be able to observe the decision-making process. Henderson v. City of Fort Morgan, 277 P.3d 853 (Colo. App. 2011).

Plaintiffs failed to state a constitutional due process claim upon which relief can be granted. Plaintiffs did not cite any authority supporting the theory that a board of county commissioners' failure to act on a citizen petition implicates due process. Moss v. Bd. of County Comm'rs for Boulder County, 2015 COA 35, 411 P.3d 918.

Mutuality is a necessary element of defensive claim preclusion or res judicata. Foster v. Plock, 2017 CO 39, 394 P.3d 1119.

Appellate court erred in dismissing appeal by finding that mutuality was not required, but, because the defendant in the second action was in privity with wife in the first action and therefore mutuality was met, the supreme court affirmed the case. Foster v. Plock, 2017 CO 39, 394 P.3d 1119.

Court properly dismissed one claim and erred in dismissing two other claims pursuant to section (b)(5). Court properly dismissed plaintiff's claim for civil theft for failure to state a claim under section (b)(5). Court erred in dismissing plaintiff's claims for conversion and unjust enrichment. Unlike civil theft, conversion and unjust enrichment do not require wrongdoing on the part of the defendant and thus the plaintiff sufficiently plead both claims. Scott v. Scott, 2018 COA 25, 428 P.3d 626.

E. Failure to Join Parties.

Where defendants contended that the failure to join all the children of a deceased as his heirs constituted a failure to join indispensable parties under section (b)(6) of this rule in a creditor's action on a deed of trust executed to deceased and defendant, the deceased's children were held not indispensable parties, inasmuch as, when deceased died, there was no estate probated, no personal representative appointed, and no determination of heirship. Greco v. Pullara, 166 Colo. 465, 444 P.2d 383 (1968).

Failure to name all stockholders as parties plaintiff does not render the complaint fatally defective for failure to join an indispensable party, since the stockholders are neither necessary nor proper parties in an action filed by a corporation. Northwest Dev., Inc. v. Dunn, 29 Colo. App. 364, 483 P.2d 1361 (1971).

Pleading a defense of failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is sufficient to raise the issue of failure of plaintiff to join an indispensable party. Cold Springs Ranch v. Dept. of Nat. Res., 765 P.2d 1035 (Colo. App. 1988).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying county's motion to dismiss under sections (b)(5) and (b)(6) of this rule and C.R.C.P. 19(a) for failure to join landowners as indispensable parties. A finding that county land use department abused its discretion by refusing to perform ministerial task of accepting application of fire protection district in no way implicated landowner's interests as to make them indispensable parties. Nor did fire protection district's request for a declaration that project could proceed absent an amendment to the planned unit development (PUD). At root, question presented involved which process the district was required to employ in order to build a fire station. This determination did not impair the landowners' ability to protect their interests because, whether the court required a location and extent review, as the district sought, or an amendment to the PUD, which the county believed to be required, the landowners would have had the opportunity to be heard and protect their interests through the applicable statutory processes. Hygiene Fire Prot. Dist. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 205 P.3d 487 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd on other grounds, 221 P.3d 1063 (Colo. 2009).

Court erred in dismissing case for failure to join a party under C.R.C.P. 19. Defendant's husband's estate did not need to be joined because complete relief could be accorded between plaintiff and defendant. The defendant was in possession of the life insurance proceeds at issue and the estate had no interest in those proceeds since they were not part of the estate assets. Scott v. Scott, 2018 COA 25, 428 P.3d 626.

F. Statute of Limitations.

Laches and the statute of limitations cannot be raised by motion to dismiss or strike. McPherson v. McPherson, 145 Colo. 170, 358 P.2d 478 (1960).

The statute of limitations is not ground for a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. McPherson v. McPherson, 145 Colo. 170, 358 P.2d 478 (1960).

The statute of limitations is not ground for motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted under section (b) of this rule, since under C.R.C.P. 8(c), that is a defense which must be set forth affirmatively by answer. Smith v. Kent Oil Co., 128 Colo. 80, 261 P.2d 149 (1953); Davis v. Bonebrake, 135 Colo. 506, 313 P.2d 982 (1957); Fort Collins-Loveland Water Dist. v. City of Fort Collins, 174 Colo. 79, 482 P.2d 986 (1971).

The statute of limitations is not a basis for dismissal on motion on the ground that it appears from the complaint that the claim is barred for failure to timely file suit, for the reason that in the absence of an affirmative defense based on the statute such defense is waived, and the assertion or waiver of the defense can only be determined from the answer. Furthermore, even if pleaded, the running of the statute may have been tolled, and plaintiff in his complaint is not required to anticipate the defense. Smith v. Kent Oil Co., 128 Colo. 80, 261 P.2d 149 (1953).

Statute of limitations may be raised by motion to dismiss. The statute authorizing forfeiture for a public nuisance is penal in nature. In an action premised on a penal statute as opposed to a civil claim, the statute of limitations is jurisdictional in nature, in that it specifies the time period during which a cause of action exists. Since the statute of limitations is jurisdictional, it may be raised at any stage of the proceeding, including a motion to dismiss. People v. Steinberg, 672 P.2d 543 (Colo. App. 1983).

Appellate review of order granting motion to dismiss on statute of limitations grounds is de novo. Meyerstein v. City of Aspen, 282 P.3d 456 (Colo. App. 2011).

G. Other Grounds.

The constitutionality of an act may be raised and considered on motion to dismiss. Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960) (unfair practices act).

Courts should be wary of dismissing a case where the pleadings show that an alleged violation of a constitutional right is at issue, since fundamental rights and important public policy questions are necessarily involved. Davidson v. Dill, 180 Colo. 123, 503 P.2d 157 (1972).

In an order denying the motion to dismiss where the issues involved are purely questions of law and no good purpose would be served in requiring the filing of individual claims before an administrative agency, whose presumed expertise would not be helpful in resolving legal as distinguished from factual issues, a dismissal is not appropriate. Hamilton v. City & County of Denver, 176 Colo. 6, 490 P.2d 1289 (1971).

A complaint may be dismissed on motion if it is clearly without any merit. Nelson v. Nelson, 31 Colo. App. 63, 497 P.2d 1284 (1972).

To sustain the defense of "res judicata" facts in support of it must be affirmatively shown either by the evidence adduced at the trial under C.R.C.P. 8(c), or by way of uncontroverted facts properly presented in a motion for summary judgment, or by a motion to dismiss under section (b) of this rule where the court, on the basis of facts properly presented outside of the pleadings, is enabled to treat the same as a motion for summary judgment under C.R.C.P. 56. Ruth v. Dept. of Hwys., 153 Colo. 226, 385 P.2d 410 (1963).

Where prior case is decided in same court where a second case is filed and records of prior case are before court for consideration, that court may properly treat a motion to dismiss as one for summary judgment and consider defense of ''res judicata'' on its merits.

Saunders v. Bankston, 31 Colo. App. 551, 506 P.2d 1253 (1972).

Affirmative defenses may be considered on motion for summary judgment. Lin Ron, Inc. v. Mann's World of Arts & Crafts, Inc., 624 P.2d 1343 (Colo. App. 1981).

Venue motions shall be filed together. C.R.C.P. 98(e)(1), when read together with this rule, requires that all venue motions except those based on C.R.C.P. 98(c)(3), (f)(2), and (g) must be filed together. Bd. of Land Comm'rs v. District Court, 191 Colo. 185, 551 P.2d 700 (1976).

The granting of a motion to dismiss a complaint is not in and of itself a final and reviewable order of judgment to which a writ of error will lie. District 50 Metro. Recreation Dist. v. Burnside, 157 Colo. 183, 401 P.2d 833 (1965).

Motion to dismiss converted to motion for summary judgment. Following a hearing on plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction, the court heard and granted defendants' motion to dismiss. With consent of all parties, the evidence presented in the injunction hearing was considered by the court in ruling on the dismissal motion. Under section (b) of this rule this consideration of matters outside the pleadings made the motion one for summary judgment. Kolwicz v. City of Boulder, 36 Colo. App. 142, 538 P.2d 482 (1975).

IV. MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS.

Law reviews. For article, ''Again — How Many Times?'', see 21 Dicta 62 (1944).

Judgment on the pleadings is appropriate if, from the pleadings, the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Trip v. Parga, 847 P.2d 165 (Colo. App. 1992); City & County of Denver v. Qwest Corp., 18 P.3d 748 (Colo. 2001).

Motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted treated as motion for summary judgment. Enger v. Walker Field, 181 Colo. 253, 508 P.2d 1245 (1973).

Where the trial court, in ruling upon a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, considered affidavit submitted by the parties, the motion should have been treated as one for summary judgment. Foster Lumber Co. v. Weston Constructors, Inc., 33 Colo. App. 436, 521 P.2d 1294 (1974).

A judgment of dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted may be entered upon a motion for summary judgment. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

Where the record before the trial court, which it considered in ruling on the motion to dismiss, contained substantial material in the form of depositions and deposition exhibits and in argument on the motion, counsel quoted from the said depositions and deposition exhibits, and the court considered all relevant material contained in the exhibits or depositions, the action taken by the court must be considered a ruling on the motion for summary judgment under section (c) of this rule, which can be made at any time. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

Judgment must disclose no genuine issue as to material fact regarding complaint's adequacy. A judgment of dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted must specifically disclose that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact relating to the adequacy of the complaint. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

Allegations construed strictly against movant. In considering a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the court must construe the allegations of the pleadings strictly against the movant. Strout Realty, Inc. v. Snead, 35 Colo. App. 204, 530 P.2d 969 (1975).

In considering on appeal a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the court must construe the allegations of the pleadings strictly against the movant and must consider the allegations of the opposing party's pleadings as true. Abts v. Bd. of Educ., 622 P.2d 518 (Colo. 1980).

Allegations of opposing parties' pleadings considered true. In considering a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the court must consider the allegations of the opposing parties' pleadings as true. Strout Realty, Inc. v. Snead, 35 Colo. App. 204, 530 P.2d 969 (1975).

A motion for judgment on the pleadings should not be sustained unless it appears that pleadings are such that no amendment could be made. Lammon v. Zamp, 81 Colo. 90, 253 P. 1056 (1927); Kingsbury v. Vreeland, 58 Colo. 212, 144 P. 887 (1914); McLaughlin v. Niles Co., 88 Colo. 202, 294 P. 954 (1930).

Where, after the pleadings in a case are settled, there is no issue of law or fact left for determination, judgment on the pleadings is properly entered. Atterbury v. Nat'l Union Fire Ins. Co., 94 Colo. 518, 31 P.2d 489 (1934).

It is immaterial whether the court considers the judgment of dismissal proper under this rule or as a summary judgment under C.R.C.P. 56 if the defendant is entitled to judgment under either thereof. Haigler v. Ingle, 119 Colo. 145, 200 P.2d 913 (1948).

Second amended complaint sufficient. A second amended complaint plainly asserting an allegation not contained in earlier amended complaint was sufficient to survive a motion for dismissal notwithstanding similarity of wording to earlier amended complaint. Chappell v. Bonds, 677 P.2d 955 (Colo. App. 1983).

A motion to dismiss based on the fact that the complaint facially established a jurisdictional defect because of a violation of the statute of limitations has the effect of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, as averments of time will be considered in determining the sufficiency of the pleadings. People v. Steinberg, 672 P.2d 543 (Colo. App. 1983).

Criteria for determining reversible error in granting motion applied. Where a ruling on a motion to dismiss is considered a ruling on a motion for summary judgment, whether the court committed reversible error in granting the motion for dismissal must be tested against the legal criteria for granting a motion for summary judgment. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

Court's ruling that the issue of paternity could not be raised in the child support proceeding because it had been previously litigated was based on undisputed facts, and was tantamount to a partial judgment on the pleadings or a partial summary judgment. McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977).

Appellate court shall review complaint as trial court does. In reviewing the action of a trial court in dismissing a complaint for failure to state a claim, an appellate court is in the same position as the trial judge and must consider only matters stated within the four corners of the pleading. Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981).

V. MOTION FOR SEPARATE, OR MORE DEFINITE, STATEMENT.

Law reviews. For article, ''Use of Summary Judgments and the Discovery Procedure'', see 24 Dicta 193 (1947).

Granting of motion for bill of particulars is in court's discretion. Whether to grant or deny a motion for a bill of particulars in accordance with section (e) of this rule calls into play the sound discretion of the court. Morgan v. Brinkhoff, 145 Colo. 78, 358 P.2d 43 (1960).

Even prior to the adoption of this rule a motion to require a complaint to be made more specific was addressed to the sound legal discretion of the trial court. Mulligan v. Smith, 32 Colo. 404, 76 P. 1063 (1904); Hall v. Cudahy, 46 Colo. 324, 104 P. 415 (1909); Louden Irrigating Canal & Reservoir Co. v. Neville, 75 Colo. 536, 227 P. 562 (1924) (decided under section 69 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

Bills of particulars ordinarily should not be utilized to unduly expand the pleadings where discovery is the proper method for obtaining information falling outside the category of ultimate facts. Morgan v. Brinkhoff, 145 Colo. 78, 358 P.2d 43 (1960).

After denial of a motion to dismiss, the trial court has the discretion to allow the plaintiff an opportunity to supply an essential allegation by a more definite statement and is not bound to dismiss the complaint in the first instance for failure to plead such. Bernstein v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 149 Colo. 150, 368 P.2d 780 (1962).

Plaintiff allowed to supply essential allegation of special damages by a more definite statement. In an action for damages for libel ''per quod'', the trial court had discretion to allow the plaintiff the opportunity of supplying the essential allegation of special damages by a more definite statement; it was not bound to dismiss the complaint entirely under the circumstances. Bernstein v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 149 Colo. 150, 368 P.2d 780 (1962).

VI. MOTION TO STRIKE.

Law reviews. For article, ''The Federal Rules from the Standpoint of the Colorado Code'', see 17 Dicta 170 (1940). For article, ''Comments on the Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 22 Dicta 154 (1945). For article, ''Litigating Disputes Involving the Medical Marijuana Industry'', see 41 Colo. Law. 103 (August 2012).

Annotator's note. Since section (f) of this rule is similar to § 66 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Where a complaint contains redundant matter, advantage cannot be taken thereof on motion to require the complaint to be made more specific; rather, the proper remedy is by motion to strike. Commonwealth Co. v. Nunn, 17 Colo. App. 117, 67 P. 342 (1902).

It is not error to refuse to strike out pleas which are merely cumulative and which tender the same issue as an objectionable plea subsequently filed. Glenn v. Brush, 3 Colo. 26 (1876).

It is not error to strike out allegations that are simply a recital of the motives of defendant in doing the acts complained of by plaintiff, which add nothing to the cause of action stated. Equitable Sec. Co. v. Montrose & Delta Canal Co., 20 Colo. App. 465, 79 P. 747 (1905).

On a motion to strike on the ground that a pleading is a sham, it is not the province of the court to determine the veracity of the respective parties, for that is a question of fact to be determined on the trial; rather, the duty of the court is to determine whether an issue of fact is presented, not to try that issue. Midwest Fuel & Timber Co. v. Steele, 111 Colo. 458, 142 P.2d 1011 (1943); Kullgren v. Navy Gas & Supply Co., 112 Colo. 331, 149 P.2d 653 (1944).

Once a pleading is accepted for filing, the striking of a pleading is not a proper sanction for failure to pay a docket fee. Miller v. Charnes, 694 P.2d 348 (Colo. App. 1984).

The court can on its own motion amend by striking out. Elzroth v. Murphy, 75 Colo. 5, 223 P. 760 (1923).

VII. CONSOLIDATION OF DEFENSES.

This rule makes it expressly clear that if a party makes a motion under section (b) of this rule and, in doing so, omits the defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person or insufficiency of process, and such defenses were available to him at the time the motion was made, then the omitted defenses are waived, and defendant may not raise them by subsequent motion or in his answer. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

The supreme court will not consider waived defenses in an original proceeding. The supreme court will not subvert the theory underlying section (b) of this rule and the clear language of sections (g) and (h)(1) of this rule by considering the matter of defenses in an original proceeding for writ of prohibition when those defenses were clearly waived. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

VIII. WAIVER OR PRESERVATION OF CERTAIN DEFENSES.

Law reviews. For article, ''Comments on the Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 22 Dicta 154 (1945).

Section (h)(1) of this rule makes it expressly clear that if a party makes a motion under section (b) of this rule, and in doing so omits the defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person or insufficiency of process, and such defenses were available to him at the time the motion was made, then the omitted defenses are waived, and the defendant may not raise them by subsequent motion or in his answer. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

The supreme court will not consider waived defenses in an original proceeding. The supreme court will not subvert the theory underlying section (b) of this rule and the clear language of sections (g) and (h)(1) of this rule by considering the matter of defenses in an original proceeding for writ of prohibition when those defenses were clearly waived. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

A trial judge did not grant relief from the waiver imposed by this rule, in denying a motion under section (b) of this rule by granting 20 days ''to answer or otherwise plead'', as this language cannot be stretched into permission to file another motion under section (b) of this rule, since such a motion is not a pleading. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 172 Colo. 311, 472 P.2d 128 (1970).

A party may, by its actions, waive the court's lack of in personam jurisdiction, and, even when jurisdiction over the person is raised as an issue, it must be preserved and brought to the attention of the trial court at a reasonable time. Nations Enters., Inc. v. Process Equip. Co., 40 Colo. App. 390, 579 P.2d 655 (1978).

Section (h)(2) of this rule cannot be interpreted to mean that a party with the necessary information to make a motion for joinder of an indispensable party at his disposal can sit back and raise it at any point in the proceedings, when the only effect of the motion under the circumstances would be to protect himself and not the person alleged to be indispensable. Such an interpretation would violate the direction of C.R.C.P. 1, that the rules shall be liberally construed to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action. Greco v. Pullara, 166 Colo. 465, 444 P.2d 383 (1968).

The question of jurisdiction may be raised at any stage of an action, and that, too, without an assignment of error on the subject. Peaker v. Southeastern Colo. Water Conservancy Dist., 174 Colo. 210, 483 P.2d 232 (1971).

Failure to raise subject matter jurisdiction objection in court in which action is filed does not waive right to raise the objection in court to which action is transferred. Luebke v. Luebke, 143 P.3d 1088 (Colo. App. 2006).

Defenses and objections not presented as required by the rules of civil procedure are deemed waived. Maxly v. Jefferson County Sch. Dist. No. R-1, 158 Colo. 583, 408 P.2d 970 (1965).

Assertion of a compulsory counterclaim alone is insufficient to waive a personal jurisdiction defense. Giduck v. Niblett, 2014 COA 86, 408 P.3d 856.

Under C.R.C.P. 8(c) and section (h) of this rule, a party waives all defenses and objections which he does not present in his answer. Duke v. Pickett, 168 Colo. 215, 451 P.2d 288 (1969).

Laches and waiver must be affirmatively set forth in the answer under C.R.C.P. 8(c) and section (h) of this rule. Duke v. Pickett, 168 Colo. 215, 451 P.2d 288 (1969).

Failure of consideration is an affirmative defense which, if not pleaded, is waived under C.R.C.P. 8(c) and section (h) of this rule. Bernklau v. Stevens, 150 Colo. 187, 371 P.2d 765 (1962).

An affirmative defense cannot be urged for the first time on appeal. Where such a defense is neither pleaded nor raised at any stage of the proceedings in the trial court, it cannot be urged for the first time on appeal. Bernklau v. Stevens, 150 Colo. 187, 371 P.2d 765 (1962); Davis v. Gourdin, 831 P.2d 497 (Colo. App. (1992).

A motion to dismiss which has been previously denied can be renewed before the same judge, and there is no good reason for adopting a contrary view merely because the case is transferred to another judge. Denver Elec. & Neon Serv. Corp. v. Gerald H. Phipps, Inc., 143 Colo. 530, 354 P.2d 618 (1960).

Where a court does not have jurisdiction, the remedy is not change of venue but rather dismissal of the action. Larrick v. District Court, 177 Colo. 237, 493 P.2d 647 (1972).

IX. FORM OF JUDGMENT.

Findings of fact and conclusions of law are not required when ruling on a motion under this rule or under C.R.C.P. 56. United Bank of Denver v. Ferris, 847 P.2d 146 (Colo. App. 1992).

Findings of fact and conclusions of law are unnecessary on decisions under the rule, except those granting involuntary dismissal pursuant to C.R.C.P. 41(b) for failure to prosecute with diligence. Henderson v. Romer, 910 P.2d 48 (Colo. App. 1995).

Rule 13. Counterclaim and Cross Claim

(a) Compulsory Counterclaims. A pleading shall state as a counterclaim any claim which at the time of filing the pleading the pleader has against any opposing party, if it arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim and does not require for its adjudication the presence of third parties of whom the court cannot acquire jurisdiction. But the pleader need not state the claim if:

(1) At the time the action was commenced the claim was the subject of another pending action, or

(2) The opposing party brought suit upon his claim by attachment or other process by which the court did not acquire jurisdiction to render a personal judgment on that claim, and the pleader is not stating any counterclaim under this Rule 13.

(b) Permissive Counterclaim. A pleading may state as a counterclaim any claim against an opposing party not arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim.

(c) Counterclaim Exceeding Opposing Claim. A counterclaim may or may not diminish or defeat the recovery sought by the opposing party. It may claim relief exceeding in amount or different in kind from that sought in the pleading of the opposing party.

(d) [There is no section (d).]

(e) Counterclaim Maturing or Acquired After Pleading. A claim which either matured or was acquired by the pleader after serving his pleading may, with the permission of the court, be presented as a counterclaim by supplemental pleading.

(f) Omitted Counterclaim. When a pleader fails to set up a counterclaim through oversight, inadvertence, or excusable neglect, or when justice requires, he may by leave of court set up the counterclaim by amendment.

(g) Cross Claim Against Coparty. A pleading may state as a cross claim any claim by one party against a coparty arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter either of the original action or of a counterclaim therein or relating to any property that is the subject matter of the original action. Such cross claim may include a claim that the party against whom it is asserted is or may be liable to the cross claimant for all or part of a claim asserted in the action against the cross claimant.

(h) Joinder of Additional Parties. Persons other than those made parties to the original action may be made parties to a counterclaim or cross claim in accordance with the provisions of Rules 19 and 20.

(i) Separate Trials; Separate Judgments. If the court orders separate trials as provided in Rule 42 (b), judgment on a counterclaim or cross claim may be rendered in accordance with the terms of Rule 54 (b) when the court has jurisdiction so to do, even if the claims of the opposing party have been dismissed or otherwise disposed of.

(j) Claims Against Assignee. Except as otherwise provided by law as to negotiable instruments, any claim, counterclaim, or cross claim which could have been asserted against an assignor at the time of or before notice of an assignment, may be asserted against his assignee, to the extent that such claim, counterclaim, or cross claim does not exceed recovery upon the claim of the assignee.

(k) Claims Against Personal Representative. The death of a person shall not prejudice the rights of a third person to assert a claim, cross claim, or counterclaim surviving death against the personal representative of the deceased in the time and manner provided by law.

A counterclaim is a claim presented by a defendant in opposition to or deduction from the claim of the plaintiff. Transport Clearings of Colo., Inc. v. Linstedt, 151 Colo. 166, 376 P.2d 518 (1962).

A counterclaim is a species of setoff or recoupment of a broad and liberal character. Transport Clearings of Colo., Inc. v. Linstedt, 151 Colo. 166, 376 P.2d 518 (1962).

One who seeks relief by cross-bill or counterclaim and actively presses his claim thereby invokes the court's jurisdiction in the case so that he cannot thereafter question the authority of the court to pass upon all questions raised between himself and his adversary. T.L. Smith Co. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 444, 431 P.2d 454 (1967).

One may not claim that he was present only for the limited objectives of his answer and counterclaim. T.L. Smith Co. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 444, 431 P.2d 454 (1967).

There is nothing inherently improper about asserting a counterclaim in a reply to a counterclaim. T.L. Smith Co. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 444, 431 P.2d 454 (1967).

The rules of civil procedure specifically authorize the inclusion of counterclaims in replies to counterclaims, and the analogous federal rules have been so interpreted by the federal courts. T.L. Smith Co. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 444, 431 P.2d 454 (1967).

This rule applies in a court foreclosure action. There is no reason why the rules applicable to responsive pleadings and counterclaims should not apply to court foreclosures as they do to any other civil action not specifically exempted. Torbit v. Griffith, 37 Colo. App. 460, 550 P.2d 350 (1976).

II. COMPULSORY.

Law reviews. For note, ''Pleading a Claim Barred by Statute of Limitations by Way of Recoupment'', see 7 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 204 (1935). For article, ''Elmer Lumpkin Pinch-Hits for the Judge on Rule 14'', see 19 Dicta 250 (1942). For article, ''Comments on the Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 22 Dicta 154 (1945).

The purpose of subsection (a) is to prevent a multiplicity of lawsuits arising from one set of circumstances, and a party who fails to plead a compulsory counterclaim is barred from raising the claim in a later action against a person who was a plaintiff or in privity with a plaintiff in the prior action. Grynberg v. Phillips, 148 P.3d 446 (Colo. App. 2006); Allen v. Martin, 203 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2008).

An appellate court reviews de novo a trial court's determination that a claim is a compulsory counterclaim. Grynberg v. Phillips, 148 P.3d 446 (Colo. App. 2006); Allen v. Martin, 203 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2008).

A "setoff" is embraced in the term "counterclaim". First Nat'l Bank v. Lewis, 57 Colo. 124, 139 P. 1102 (1914) (decided under § 63 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

A setoff arising from the same subject matter or occurrence as plaintiff's claim is a compulsory counterclaim which must be affirmatively pleaded. Corbin Douglass, Inc. v. Kelley, 28 Colo. App. 369, 472 P.2d 764 (1970); Grynberg v. Rocky Mountain Natural Gas, 809 P.2d 1091 (Colo. App. 1991).

Counterclaims arising out of events unrelated to the event in the complaint are not compulsory counterclaims. Bohlender v. Oster, 165 Colo. 164, 439 P.2d 999 (1968).

A counterclaim arises out of the same transaction or occurrence as an initial claim if the subject matter of the counterclaim is logically related to the subject matter of the initial claim. Allen v. Martin, 203 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2008).

Under this rule the best test of a compulsory counterclaim inquires into the logical relationship between the opposing claims. Visual Factor, Inc. v. Sinclair, 166 Colo. 22, 441 P.2d 643 (1968); Sladek v. dePlomb, 981 F. Supp. 1364 (D. Colo. 1997); In re Estate of Krotiuk, 12 P.3d 302 (Colo. App. 2000).

The logical relationship test inquires, ''Is there any logical relation between the claim and the counterclaim?'' McCabe v. United Bank, 657 P.2d 976 (Colo. App. 1982).

A counterclaim is "logically" related to the opposing party's claim where separate trials on each of their respective claims would involve a substantial duplication of effort and time by the parties and the courts. Beathune v. Cain, 30 Colo. App. 321, 494 P.2d 603 (1971).

A logical relationship exists when the counterclaim arises from the same ''aggregate of operative facts'' as the opposing party's claim. McCabe v. United Bank, 657 P.2d 976 (Colo. App. 1982).

Any claim that a party might have against an opposing party which is logically related to the claim brought by the opposing party and which is not within the exceptions stated in the pertinent rule is a compulsory counterclaim. Visual Factor, Inc. v. Sinclair, 166 Colo. 22, 441 P.2d 643 (1968); Beathune v. Cain, 30 Colo. App. 321, 494 P.2d 603 (1971).

A legal malpractice claim is a compulsory counterclaim in an action to collect attorney fees if the malpractice claim arises from the same representation as the collection action. Allen v. Martin, 203 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2008).

Even though the evidence needed to establish the opposing claims may differ. A counterclaim may be compulsory where it arises from the same events even though the evidence needed to establish the opposing claims may be quite different. Visual Factor, Inc. v. Sinclair, 166 Colo. 22, 441 P.2d 643 (1968); Grynberg v. Rocky Mountain Natural Gas, 809 P.2d 1091 (Colo. App. 1991); Sladek v. dePlomb, 981 F. Supp. 1364 (D. Colo. 1997).

Where a compulsory counterclaim is not raised in the pleadings or otherwise put into issue, the trial court is precluded from rendering a finding on the matter. Corbin Douglass, Inc. v. Kelley, 28 Colo. App. 369, 472 P.2d 764 (1970).

The failure to assert a compulsory counterclaim bars the assertion of such claim in a subsequent action. Beathune v. Cain, 30 Colo. App. 321, 494 P.2d 603 (1971); Wood v. Jensen, 41 Colo. App. 301, 585 P.2d 309 (1978); Sladek v. dePlomb, 981 F. Supp. 1364 (D. Colo. 1997); In re Estate of Krotiuk, 12 P.3d 302 (Colo. App. 2000).

The purpose of the rule is to avoid multiple lawsuits between the parties to a transaction or occurrence. In re Estate of Krotiuk, 12 P.3d 302 (Colo. App. 2000).

A trial court does not err in granting a motion for summary judgment on the ground that the claim made in the case is compulsory counterclaim which should have been raised in another action and is therefore barred. Visual Factor, Inc. v. Sinclair, 166 Colo. 22, 441 P.2d 643 (1968).

The effect of a voluntary dismissal of a compulsory counterclaim is similar to the failure to file such a claim. The purpose of this rule is to require parties to present all of their existing claims simultaneously to the court or to be forever barred. Therefore, the trial court did not err in ruling that appellant's voluntary dismissal of a compulsory counterclaim in a previous action precluded litigation of that claim in a subsequent case. Grynberg v. Phillips, 148 P.3d 446 (Colo. App. 2006).

A divorce action subsequent to one for separate maintenance is not barred by this rule as a compulsory counterclaim which should have been asserted in the earlier complaint for separate maintenance, inasmuch as C.R.C.P. 81(b) provides that the rules of civil procedure do not govern procedure and practice in actions in divorce or separate maintenance where they may conflict with the procedure and practice provided by the applicable statutes; provided that a decree granting separate maintenance shall not bar either party from ''subsequently'' bringing and maintaining an action for divorce. Moats v. Moats, 168 Colo. 120, 450 P.2d 64 (1969).

No trial by jury on issues raised by counterclaim. Defendants whose counterclaim raises issues which would properly be matters for jury trial in a separate action are not entitled to a jury trial under C.R.C.P. 38 where plaintiff's action invokes the equity arm of the court, since the character of the action is thereby determined. Miller v. District Court, 154 Colo. 125, 388 P.2d 763 (1964).

Express exception to compulsory counterclaim rule applies where claim has not matured at the time of the pleading, even if it arises from the same transaction or occurrence. In re Estate of Krotiuk, 12 P.3d 302 (Colo. App. 2000); Stone v. Dept. of Aviation, 453 F.3d 1271 (10th Cir. 2006); Allen v. Martin, 203 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2008).

If there is no controlling Colorado authority construing the language of C.R.C.P. 13, courts may look to federal precedent construing the almost identical F.R.C.P. 13 for guidance. In re Estate of Krotiuk, 12 P.3d 302 (Colo. App. 2000); Allen v. Martin, 203 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2008).

Here, claimant's claim for payment matured at the time he was required to file his answer, and was therefore a compulsory counterclaim in 1991 action. Accordingly, claim should have been raised in the 1991 action, and trial court properly dismissed it and granted summary judgment on that basis. This holding is consistent with the purpose of the compulsory counterclaim rule, i.e., promoting justice by avoiding multiple lawsuits between the parties to a transaction or occurrence. In re Estate of Krotiuk, 12 P.3d 302 (Colo. App. 2000).

A counterclaim that is contingent has not matured for purposes of subsection (a). Allen v. Martin, 203 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2008).

The maturity of a noncontingent counterclaim should be measured by the discovery rule, and under the rule a claim matures when the claimant knew or reasonably should have known of the general facts underlying the claim. Allen v. Martin, 203 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2008).

Buyer's claim under § 38-35-126 (3) to void installment land contract was an affirmative defense and compulsory counterclaim. As such, defense and claim should have been asserted in buyer's responsive pleading (or amended responsive pleading) or they are waived. Buyer's claim arose out of and related directly to the same contract claim seller sought to enforce against buyer. Buyer's claim was related to seller's claim and, therefore, was a compulsory counterclaim. Dinosaur Park Invs., L.L.C. v. Tello, 192 P.3d 513 (Colo. App. 2008).

Assertion of a compulsory counterclaim alone is insufficient to waive a personal jurisdiction defense. Giduck v. Niblett, 2014 COA 86, 408 P.3d 856.

Applied in Smith v. Hoyer, 697 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1984); Allen v. Martin, 203 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2008).

III. PERMISSIVE.

Law reviews. For article, ''A Victim of 'Permissive Counterclaims''', see 18 Dicta 83 (1941).

A counterclaim is a "permissive" counterclaim when it does not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence as the original cause of action, and is a separate and distinct claim. T.L. Smith v. District Court, 163 Colo. 444, 431 P.2d 454 (1967).

A claim is not a permissive counterclaim within this rule where the claims arise out of the same transaction. Visual Factor, Inc. v. Sinclair, 166 Colo. 22, 441 P.2d 643 (1968).

A court does not abuse its discretion in declining to consider as permissive counterclaims those counterclaims based on events taking place substantially prior to and unrelated to the event on which the complaint is based. Bohlender v. Oster, 165 Colo. 164, 439 P.2d 999 (1968).

Doctrine of claim preclusion does not bar permissive counterclaims that could have been, but were not required to be, raised in an initial civil action from being raised in a second civil action even if there is a final judgment in the first action, and identity of parties and subject matter between the actions. Top Rail Ranch Estates, LLC v. Walker, 2014 COA 9, 327 P.3d 321.

Claim held not to be permissive counterclaim. Visual Factor, Inc. v. Sinclair, 166 Colo. 22, 441 P.2d 643 (1968).

IV. OMITTED.

Compulsory counterclaim that ripens after commencement of action should be allowed in amended pleadings. Bobrick v. Sanderson, 164 Colo. 46, 432 P.2d 242 (1967).

Counterclaims not waived or abandoned even though defendant failed to reassert them in the answer to the amended complaint. Plaintiff failed to timely object to defendant's continued prosecution of its counterclaims and, therefore, implicitly consented to the counterclaims being tried. Mullins v. Med. Lien Mgmt., Inc., 2013 COA 134, 411 P.3d 798.

V. CROSS CLAIM.

Law reviews. For article, ''Comments on the Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 22 Dicta 154 (1945).

This rule provides that the cross claims against coparties may also include a claim that the coparty may be liable to the cross claimant for all or part of the claim asserted in the action against the cross claimant. City of Westminster v. Phillips-Carter-Osborn, Inc., 164 Colo. 378, 435 P.2d 240 (1967).

The wording of this rule is clearly permissive, not compulsory. T.L. Smith Co. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 444, 431 P.2d 454 (1967).

VI. JOINDER OF ADDITIONAL PARTIES.

Annotator's note. Since section (h) of this rule is similar to § 16 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Public policy and reason, as well as equity, required that all matters pertaining to the transaction should be adjudicated at the same time. Strang v. Murphy, 1 Colo. App. 357, 29 P. 298 (1871).

The law encourages the determination of all controversies in one action by bringing the either necessary or proper parties. Pollard v. Lathrop, 12 Colo. 171, 20 P. 251 (1888); Haldane v. Potter, 94 Colo. 558, 31 P.2d 709 (1934).

With equal discrimination, the law disapproves of bringing in parties whose presence is neither necessary nor proper. Russell v. Cripple Creek State Bank, 71 Colo. 238, 206 P. 160 (1922); Howard v. Fisher, 86 Colo. 493, 283 P. 1042 (1929); Haldane v. Potter, 94 Colo. 558, 31 P.2d 709 (1934); Tolland Co. v. First State Bank, 95 Colo. 321, 35 P.2d 867 (1934).

Jurisdiction of the subject matter is conferred by law. Davis v. Davis, 70 Colo. 37, 197 P. 241 (1921).

Jurisdiction exists even before a suit is begun. Conroy v. Cover, 80 Colo. 434, 252 P. 883 (1926).

Jurisdiction is not affected by the omission of a party. Conroy v. Cover, 80 Colo. 434, 252 P. 883 (1926).

The court is required to order an indispensable party to be brought in. Day v. McPhee, 41 Colo. 467, 93 P. 670 (1907); Conroy v. Cover, 80 Colo. 434, 252 P. 883 (1926).

This rule authorizes the joinder of parties necessary to the granting of complete relief in the determination of a counterclaim or cross claim, even though their presence is not indispensable to such determination. City of Westminster v. Phillips-Carter-Osborn, Inc., 164 Colo. 378, 435 P.2d 240 (1967).

All who are interested in the subject matter of an action should be made parties thereto, so that complete justice might be done and the rights of all parties in the subject matter of controversy finally determined. Denison v. Jerome, 43 Colo. 456, 96 P. 166 (1908); Buckhorn Plaster Co. v. Consolidated Plaster Co., 47 Colo. 516, 108 P. 27 (1910).

It is an everyday matter on trial to admit a new plaintiff when he appears to have an interest in the case. Dickson v. Retallic, 80 Colo. 78, 249 P. 2 (1926).

Waiver of right shall include other interested parties. Where, for the purpose of a complete determination of all the rights involved, others should have been made parties defendant by virtue of this rule, the failure to do so could not be considered because appellants by answering over, after demurrer on the ground of defect of parties, waived the right to raise the question on appeal. Zang v. Wyant, 25 Colo. 551, 56 P. 565 (1898).

This matter is not applicable where the court could not proceed to judgment without the presence of others who were not parties to the proceedings. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co., 44 Colo. 184, 98 P. 16 (1908). See Denison v. Jerome, 43 Colo. 456, 96 P. 166 (1908).

Where the defendant wishes to assert a claim against a codefendant and a third party, the correct procedure is to file a cross claim, combined with a motion under section (h) of this rule, to bring in the third party as an additional defendant on the cross claim. City of Westminster v. Phillips-Carter-Osborn, Inc., 164 Colo. 378, 435 P.2d 240 (1967).

A similar combination of a counterclaim and a motion under section (h) of this rule is appropriate where the claim is against the original plaintiff and a third party. City of Westminster v. Phillips-Carter-Osborn, Inc., 164 Colo. 378, 435 P.2d 240 (1967).

VII. CLAIMS AGAINST ASSIGNEE.

Annotator's note. Since section (j) of this rule is similar to § 4 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

An assignee takes no greater right than the assignor had to convey, and his rights and remedies are those of the assignor. Howard v. Fisher, 86 Colo. 493, 283 P. 1042 (1929).

Valid existing defenses may be interposed. Howard v. Fisher, 86 Colo. 493, 283 P. 1042 (1929).

Setoff against an original payee is allowed in a suit upon a promissory note by an assignee, taking it after due. First Nat'l Bank v. Lewis, 57 Colo. 124, 139 P. 1102 (1914).

Irrespective of the number of assignments, the language of this rule is as broad as it could well have been, so that a note assigned after it was due a half dozen times would be subject to any setoff or other defense that the maker had against any one or all of the assignees at the date of assignment, or before notice thereof. First Nat'l Bank v. Lewis, 57 Colo. 124, 139 P. 1102 (1914).

Owner entitled to credit only up to the amount of assignee's claim. The owner of a house was entitled to credit against building contractor's assignee for assignor's liabilities at time of assignment up to amount of assignee's claim. Jones v. Panak, 84 Colo. 62, 268 P. 535 (1928).

Applied in Jackson v. Hamm, 14 Colo. 58, 23 P. 88 (1890).

VIII. CLAIMS AGAINST PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE.

For cases construing § 64 of the former Code of Civil Procedure from which section (k) of this rule was derived, see Rathvon v. White, 16 Colo. 41, 26 P. 323 (1891); Inland Box & Label Co. v. Richie, 57 Colo. 532, 143 P. 581 (1914).

Rule 14. Third-Party Practice

(a) When Defendant May Bring in Third Party. At any time after commencement of the action a defending party, as a third-party plaintiff, may cause a summons and complaint to be served upon a person not a party to the action who is or may be liable to him for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against him. The third-party plaintiff need not obtain leave to make the service if he files the third-party complaint not later than 14 days after he serves his original answer. Otherwise he must obtain leave on motion upon notice to all parties to the action. The person served with the summons and third-party complaint, hereinafter called the third-party defendant, shall make his defenses to the third party plaintiff's claim as provided in Rule 12 and his counterclaim against the third-party plaintiff and cross claims against other third-party defendants as provided in Rule 13. The third-party defendant may assert against the plaintiff any defenses which the third-party plaintiff has to the plaintiff's claim. The third-party defendant may also assert any claim against the plaintiff arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff. The plaintiff may assert any claim against the third-party defendant arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff, and the third-party defendant thereupon shall assert his defenses as provided in Rule 12 and his counterclaim and cross claims as provided in Rule 13. Any party may move to strike the third-party claim, or for its severance or separate trial. A third-party defendant may proceed under this Rule against any person not a party to the action who is or may be liable to him for all or part of the claim made in the action against the third-party defendant.

(b) When Plaintiff May Bring in Third Party. When a counterclaim is asserted against a plaintiff, he may cause a third party to be brought in under circumstances which under this Rule would entitle a defendant to do so.

Rule 14(a): Will the Practice in Colorado Ever Catch up to the Theory?'', see 17 Colo. Law. 635 (1988).

The provisions of this rule control "third-party" procedure and practice. Susman v. District Court, 160 Colo. 475, 418 P.2d 181 (1966).

This rule permitting third-party impleader is intended to liberalize and simplify procedure. Ashford v. Burnham Aviation Serv., Inc., 162 Colo. 582, 427 P.2d 875 (1967).

The purpose of this rule is to reduce litigation by having one lawsuit do the work of two. Ashford v. Burnham Aviation Serv., Inc., 162 Colo. 582, 427 P.2d 875 (1967).

The purpose of this rule is to settle as many conflicting interests as possible in one proceeding and thus avoid circuity of action, save time, and expense, as well as eliminate a serious handicap to the defendant of a time difference between the judgment against him and a judgment in his favor against the third-party defendant. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952); Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 638 P.2d 772 (Colo. 1981).

The object of this rule is to facilitate litigation, to save costs, to bring all of the litigants into one proceeding, and to dispose of an entire matter without the expense and the labor of many suits and many trials. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952).

This rule was promulgated not only for the purpose of serving litigants but as a wise exposition of public policy. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952).

The underlying purpose of this rule is to consolidate suits that should be tried together in the interest of saving the time of the courts, parties, and witnesses and avoiding unnecessary expense. Arms Roofing Co. v. Petrie, 136 Colo. 154, 314 P.2d 903 (1957).

Purposes of rule must be balanced against prejudice. The purposes of this rule — including avoiding circuity of actions and inconsistent result — must be balanced against any prejudice the impleaded party or the original plaintiff might suffer in having the matter resolved in the same suit rather than in a separate suit brought by the original defendant. United Bank of Denver Nat'l Ass'n v. Shavlik, 189 Colo. 280, 541 P.2d 317 (1975).

This rule is not intended to be used as a means of trying two separate and distinct causes of action in the same proceeding. Arms Roofing Co. v. Petrie, 136 Colo. 154, 314 P.2d 903 (1957).

Denial of a motion, made on the day of trial, for leave to file third-party complaints is not an abuse of discretion, for the reasons that the motion is not timely made and, if granted, would result in further delay. Harris Park Lakeshore, Inc. v. Church, 152 Colo. 278, 381 P.2d 459 (1963).

Court may dismiss or deny leave to file complaint. The court may properly deny leave to file a third-party complaint, or may dismiss a third-party complaint which has been timely filed, if the claim for liability by the defendant against the third party is doubtful or if the introduction of the third-party claim would unduly complicate the case to the prejudice of the plaintiff. Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 638 P.2d 772 (Colo. 1981).

Applied in Naiman v. Warren A. Flickinger & Assocs., 43 Colo. App. 279, 605 P.2d 63 (1979).

II. WHEN DEFENDANT MAY BRING IN.

Law reviews. For article, ''Form of Third-Party Summons Modified by Colorado Supreme Court'', see 32 Dicta 230 (1955).

This rule is almost identical to F.R.C.P. 14(a). Arms Roofing Co. v. Petrie, 136 Colo. 154, 314 P.2d 903 (1957).

Third-party proceedings provide for a method whereby a party made a defendant in a law suit brought against it by a plaintiff may bring into court a party who would be liable for the claim being asserted by the plaintiff. Packaging Corp. of Am. v. Indus. Comm'n, 173 Colo. 212, 477 P.2d 367 (1970).

It is a suit to substitute a third party for the claim being brought by the plaintiff. Packaging Corp. of Am. v. Indus. Comm'n, 173 Colo. 212, 477 P.2d 367 (1970).

Third-party practice, and particularly the practice provided for in this rule, is procedural. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952).

This rule does not abridge, enlarge, or modify the substantive rights of any litigant. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952).

It creates no substantive rights. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952); Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 638 P.2d 772 (Colo. 1981).

Unless there is some substantive basis for the third-party plaintiff's claim, he cannot utilize the procedure of this rule. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952).

The third-party plaintiff must assert a substantive basis upon which the third party may be held liable to it for all or part of the plaintiff's claim. Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 638 P.2d 772 (Colo. 1981).

This rule does not establish a right of reimbursement, indemnity, or contribution. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952).

Where there is a basis for such right, this rule expedites the presentation and in some cases accelerates the accrual, of such right. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952).

Granting leave to interplead a third-party defendant is a matter of judicial discretion, but only up to the point where facts exist upon which this rule was intended to operate. Arms Roofing Co. v. Petrie, 136 Colo. 154, 314 P.2d 903 (1957).

Discretion of the court in determining whether to grant or deny a motion to interplead a third party is limited to those cases where a finding is made that the third party may be liable to the original defendant for all or part of a plaintiff's claim. Arms Roofing Co. v. Petrie, 136 Colo. 154, 314 P.2d 903 (1957).

The test to determine when a third-party defendant may be impleaded under this rule is whether the third party "is or may be liable to [the defendant] for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against [the defendant]". Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 638 P.2d 772 (Colo. 1981); Weston v. Mincomp. Corp., 698 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1985).

This rule does not permit impleading when there are separate and independent controversies between a defendant and his desired third-party defendant. Arms Roofing Co. v. Petrie, 136 Colo. 154, 314 P.2d 903 (1957).

The cases in which impleading a third-party defendant has been allowed have been cases where the third-party is liable as a guarantor, surety, insurer, or indemnifier of the principal defendant, and those in which the third-party defendant may be liable for causing the damage to the plaintiff, it being a factual question which of two people is responsible for a given injury. Arms Roofing Co. v. Petrie, 136 Colo. 154, 314 P.2d 903 (1957).

Pleadings are subsidiary and serve the ends of justice by giving notice of the issues to be litigated. Ashford v. Burnham Aviation Serv., Inc., 162 Colo. 582, 427 P.2d 875 (1967).

There is no jurisdiction over third-party defendants where rule is not complied with. Where it appears that provisions of section (a) of this rule and C.R.C.P. 4(c) concerning the essential content of summons have not been complied with, the trial court has no jurisdiction over third-party defendants, and a special appearance and motion to quash filed on behalf of them should be sustained. Susman v. District Court, 160 Colo. 475, 418 P.2d 181 (1966).

It is not necessary for plaintiff to amend his complaint to include third-party defendant. It was not essential to the validity of the judgment entered against the third-party defendant that the original plaintiff should have formally entered an amendment to his complaint to include a claim against him. Ashford v. Burnham Aviation Serv., Inc., 162 Colo. 582, 427 P.2d 875 (1967).

Where the third-party defendant not only answered the third-party complaint, but in a separate pleading undertook to answer the original complaint categorically and asserted all of the defenses he could have asserted had the plaintiff amended his complaint and alleged a claim against the third party, such an answer amounts to a waiver of amendment. Ashford v. Burnham Aviation Serv., Inc., 162 Colo. 582, 427 P.2d 875 (1967).

Where the parties litigated the issues between them just as if there had been actual notice through an amendment to the complaint stating in terms the plaintiff's claim against the third-party defendant, an amendment including the third-party defendant in the original complaint was unnecessary. Ashford v. Burnham Aviation Serv., Inc., 162 Colo. 582, 427 P.2d 875 (1967).

Retrial on third-party complaint concerning indemnity does not require retrial of original complaint. Where defendant's liability to plaintiff has been properly determined but defendant's third-party complaint was erroneously dismissed, retrial of issues under the third-party complaint does not entitle defendant to a contemporaneous retrial of the issues between himself and the plaintiff under the original complaint where the matter of the third-party complaint is one of indemnity and not that of a joint tort-feasor. Jacobson v. Dahlberg, 171 Colo. 42, 464 P.2d 298 (1970).

Leave to file third-party complaint denied. The court did not abuse its discretion in denying leave to file a third-party complaint when the third-party claims may have unduly complicated the case to the prejudice of the plaintiffs, and the third-party claims would be better handled in a separate action. Elijah v. Fender, 674 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1984).

Even though defendant may assert claim against third party who may be liable to defendant for all or part of plaintiff's claim, he may not file separate and independent claims against the third party. Martinez v. Denver Transformer Sales, 780 P.2d 49 (Colo. App. 1989).

Principal may join agent. A principal being sued by a third party for the negligent act of his agent is entitled to join the agent as a party to the suit. Schledewitz v. Consumer's Oil Co-op., Inc., 144 Colo. 518, 357 P.2d 63 (1960).

Parent may join his child who caused auto accident for contribution. Since liability of automobile owner for accident caused by his minor offspring is based upon the family purpose doctrine, where liability is predicated on a principal-agent or master-servant theory, and not wrongdoing on the part of the parent himself where there would be no contribution between joint tort-feasors, it is permissible for a parent to join his child in order to recover from him the damages for which the parent is held liable, and therefore it is error to dismiss a parent's fourth-party claim which demands that the liability, if any, be made a joint one with contribution to be ordered. Schledewitz v. Consumer's Oil Co-op., Inc., 144 Colo. 518, 357 P.2d 63 (1960).

If an insurance company has by its policy agreed to insure against liability on the part of a defendant, then a third-party procedure is justified and the third-party plaintiffs are only seeking to compel the insurance company to do that which it contracted to do. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952).

If the policy were one of indemnity rather than of liability, then this procedure would not be applicable, the insurer not being liable until an actual loss is sustained. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co. v. Cosby, 125 Colo. 468, 244 P.2d 1089 (1952).

Where an employee asserts his own claim against the state compensation insurance fund, third-party proceedings are not provided in section (a) of this rule for such a claim. Packaging Corp. of Am. v. Indus. Comm'n, 173 Colo. 212, 477 P.2d 367 (1970).

An employer cannot maintain a third-party action against industrial commission regardless of whether former employee, who brought common-law tort action against the employer for injuries sustained in an altercation with another employee in connection with his discharge from employment, was an employee at time of the altercation. Packaging Corp. of Am. v. Indus. Comm'n, 173 Colo. 212, 477 P.2d 367 (1970) (decided prior to abolition of industrial commission).

An employer's claim against the state compensation insurance fund for attorney fees is not properly a third-party claim under Rule 14(a), C.R.C.P., so dismissal without prejudice of the employer's third-party action against industrial commission would not bar such employer from bringing a separate suit against the industrial commission for attorney fees if liability therefor should arise. Packaging Corp. of Am. v. Indus. Comm'n, 173 Colo. 212, 477 P.2d 367 (1970) (decided prior to abolition of industrial commission).

The makers of a promissory note when sued by a holder in due course may not file a third-party complaint under this rule against the original payee who transferred the note before maturity without recourse, since a claim for damages by the makers against the original payee is independent and apart from the claim of the holder in due course and cannot affect such holder's right to a judgment against the makers. Arms Roofing Co. v. Petrie, 136 Colo. 154, 314 P.2d 903 (1957).

Applied in Taylor v. Peterson, 133 Colo. 218, 293 P.2d 297 (1956).

Rule 15. Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

(a) Amendments. A party may amend his pleading once as a matter of course at any time before a responsive pleading is filed or, if the pleading is one to which no responsive pleading is permitted and the action has not been placed upon the trial calendar, he may so amend it any time within 21 days after it is filed. Otherwise, a party may amend his pleading only by leave of court or by written consent of the adverse party; and leave shall be freely given when justice so requires. A party shall plead in response to an amended pleading within the time remaining for response to the original pleading or within 14 days after service of the amended pleading, whichever period may be the longer, unless the court otherwise orders.

(b) Amendments to Conform to the Evidence. When issues not raised by the pleadings are tried by express or implied consent of the parties, they shall be treated in all respects as if they had been raised in the pleadings. Such amendment of the pleadings as may be necessary to cause them to conform to the evidence and to raise these issues may be made upon motion of any party at any time, even after judgment; but failure so to amend does not affect the result of the trial of these issues. If evidence is objected to at the trial on the ground that it is not within the issues made by the pleadings, the court may allow the pleadings to be amended and shall do so freely when the presentation of the merits of the action will be subserved thereby and the objecting party fails to satisfy the court that the admission of such evidence would prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense upon the merits. The court may grant a continuance to enable the objecting party to meet such evidence.

(c) Relation Back of Amendments. Whenever the claim or defense asserted in the amended pleading arose out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth or attempted to be set forth in the original pleading, the amendment relates back to the date of the original pleading. An amendment changing the party against whom a claim is asserted relates back if the foregoing provision is satisfied and, within the period provided by Rule 4(m) for serving the summons and complaint, the party to be brought in by amendment: (1) Has received such notice of the institution of the action that he will not be prejudiced in maintaining his defense on the merits, and (2) knew or should have known that, but for a mistake concerning the identity of the proper party, the action would have been brought against him.

(d) Supplemental Pleadings. Upon motion of a party the court may, upon reasonable notice and upon such terms as are just, permit him to serve a supplemental pleading setting forth transactions or occurrences or events which have happened since the date of the pleading sought to be supplemented. Permission may be granted even though the original pleading is defective in its statement of a claim for relief or defense. If the court deems it advisable that the adverse party plead to the supplemental pleading, it shall so order, specifying the time therefor.

Source: (a) amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b); (c) amended and effective September 5, 2013.

Amended and supplemental pleadings differ in that the former relate to matters occurring before the filing of the original pleading and entirely replace the original pleading, while the latter concern events subsequent to the original pleading and constitute only additions to the earlier pleading. II. AMENDMENTS.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For note, ''One Year Review of Colorado Law — 1964'', see 42 Den. L. Ctr. J. 140 (1965).

Annotator's note. Since section (a) of this rule is similar to §§ 59 and 81 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This rule is clear and unequivocal. Renner v. Chilton, 142 Colo. 454, 351 P.2d 277 (1960).

An amendment is a defensive weapon offered one whose defective pleading is assailed. Lamar Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Truax, 95 Colo. 77, 33 P.2d 978 (1934).

No exceptions to these rights to amend are provided. Renner v. Chilton, 142 Colo. 454, 351 P.2d 277 (1960).

Amendment provision of section (a) has no counterpart in county court rules. Abts v. Bd. of Educ., 622 P.2d 518 (Colo. 1980).

Amended pleadings supersede the originals. Handy Ditch Co. v. Greeley & Loveland Irrigation Co., 86 Colo. 197, 280 P. 481 (1929); Kalish v. Brice, 130 Colo. 220, 274 P.2d 600 (1954).

Amended pleadings become the pleadings which defendant is called upon to answer. Kalish v. Brice, 130 Colo. 220, 274 P.2d 600 (1954).

Notice is essence of rule. Spiker v. Hoogeboom, 628 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1981).

This rule assumes a service of an amendment on the other party to the action, since, otherwise, that portion of the rule providing that a responsive pleading shall be within 10 days after service of the amended pleading would be meaningless. Myers v. Myers, 110 Colo. 412, 135 P.2d 235 (1943); Holman v. Holman, 114 Colo. 437, 165 P.2d 1015 (1946).

Where plaintiff has been permitted to amend the complaint without notice to the defendant, it is error for the court to deny the latter's motion — interposed before the decree becomes final — to set aside the decree and permit him to answer. Myers v. Myers, 110 Colo. 412, 135 P.2d 235 (1943); Holman v. Holman, 114 Colo. 437, 165 P.2d 1015 (1946).

A defendant brought into the cause by an amended complaint appears generally. Wyoming Nat'l Bank v. Shippey, 23 Colo. App. 225, 130 P. 1021 (1896).

Whether an amended complaint should be stricken rested in the sound discretion of the court. Youngberg v. Orlando Canal & Reservoir Co., 98 Colo. 111, 53 P.2d 651 (1935).

The striking of an amended complaint and dismissal of the action was held not to be an abuse of discretion where no permission to file the amendment was obtained, the stricken amendment was plaintiff's third attempt to make his pleading unobjectionable, and the dismissal was without prejudice. Burson v. Adamson, 87 Colo. 451, 288 P. 623 (1930).

Matter of amendment cannot be raised for first time on appeal. Where no oral or written motion requesting amendment of the written complaint is made by plaintiff at the trial level and the matter of the amendment is not raised in plaintiff's motion for new trial, the plaintiff is therefore precluded from raising this question in the supreme court for the first time. Fladung v. City of Boulder, 165 Colo. 244, 438 P.2d 688 (1968).

Generalized statement that ''even if the court were to decide that the complaint lacks some level of specificity, the court should allow the plaintiffs to amend their complaint'' was not sufficiently specific to constitute a valid motion for leave to amend the complaint. Kreft v. Adolph Coors Co., 170 P.3d 854 (Colo. App. 2007).

Mere amendment of pleadings cannot accomplish ends which are inconsistent with statutory procedures. Trustees of Mtg. Trust of Am. v. District Court, 621 P.2d 310 (Colo. 1980).

Limitations period in § 38-22-110 applies to joinder of additional parties by amendment. In the ordinary mechanic's lien case, the six-month limitations period set down in § 38-22-110 applies to joinder of additional parties by amendment. Trustees of Mtg. Trust of Am. v. District Court, 621 P.2d 310 (Colo. 1980).

Absence of authorization for amendment in § 22-42-111 reflects section's legislative intent. The absence of authorization for amendment in § 22-42-111 reasonably can be construed to reflect legislative intent that prompt resolution of election disputes must be achieved in order that the machinery of government not be slowed any more than strictly necessary to permit such disputes to be fairly resolved. Abts v. Bd. of Educ., 622 P.2d 518 (Colo. 1980).

Applied in Fischer v. District Court, 193 Colo. 24, 561 P.2d 1266 (1977).

B. Purpose and Object of Amendment.

Amendments to pleadings should be granted in accordance with overriding purposes of rules of civil procedure — to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action. Varner v. District Court, 618 P.2d 1388 (Colo. 1980); Eagle River Mobile Home Park v. District Court, 647 P.2d 660 (Colo. 1982).

Originals not to be treated as sacrosanct. As with most pleadings and writings in the nature of pleadings, the purpose of justice is best served not by treating originals as sacrosanct, but rather by permitting the parties to ensure that the issues, as ultimately framed, represent the parties' true positions. Brown v. Schumann, 40 Colo. App. 336, 575 P.2d 443 (1978); K-R Funds, Inc. v. Fox, 640 P.2d 257 (Colo. App. 1981); Zavorka v. Union Pacific R. Co., 690 P.2d 1285 (Colo. App. 1984).

Leave to amend shall be freely given when justice so requires. Zertuche v. Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., 706 P.2d 424 (Colo. App. 1985); Lutz v. District Court, 716 P.2d 129 (Colo. 1986).

Motions to amend should be freely permitted when the interests of justice would be served thereby. In re Estate of Blacher, 857 P.2d 566 (Colo. App. 1993).

Under this rule leave to amend should be freely granted. Platte Valley Motor Co. v. Wagner, 130 Colo. 365, 278 P.2d 870 (1954); Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976); H.W. Houston Constr. Co. v. District Court, 632 P.2d 563 (Colo. 1981).

Provision is made in this rule that leave to amend shall be freely given when justice so requires. Lerner v. Stone, 126 Colo. 589, 252 P.2d 533 (1952); Coffman v. Tate, 151 Colo. 533, 379 P.2d 399 (1963).

Section (a) reflects a liberal policy of amendment and encourages trial courts to look favorably on a request to amend. Nelson v. Elway, 971 P.2d 245 (Colo. App. 1998).

Substantial rights should never be sacrificed to mere forms. Sellar v. Clelland, 2 Colo. 532 (1875); Green v. Davis, 67 Colo. 52, 185 P. 369 (1919).

The rationale behind this rule is that a substantial right should never be sacrificed to mere form. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

Since the object of this rule is to permit amendments freely with the thought of making disposition of causes expeditious. Patrick v. Crowe, 15 Colo. 543, 25 P. 985 (1890); Seymour v. Fisher, 16 Colo. 188, 27 P. 240 (1891); Saint v. Guerrerio, 17 Colo. 448, 30 P. 335, 31 Am. St. R. 320 (1892); McCracken v. Montezuma Water & Land Co., 25 Colo. App. 280, 137 P. 903 (1914).

Where the effect of an amendment is to interpose a purely legal obstruction to the enforcement of a just demand, the party making the application should be allowed only what the letter of the law gives. People ex rel. Republican Publishing Co. v. Barton, 4 Colo. App. 455, 36 P. 299 (1894).

To allow an amendment without cause shown therefor as required is a violation of this provision. Collins v. Bailey, 22 Colo. App. 149, 125 P. 543 (1912).

After a judgment has been reversed by the supreme court upon appeal and the cause remanded for a new trial, the trial court might permit the pleadings to be amended whenever the ends of justice would be subserved thereby. Horn v. Reitler, 15 Colo. 316, 25 P. 501 (1890).

Rule prescribes liberal policy of amendment and encourages the courts to look favorably on requests to amend. Varner v. District Court, 618 P.2d 1388 (Colo. 1980); Eagle River Mobile Home Park v. District Court, 647 P.2d 660 (Colo. 1982).

The rule emphasizes liberality in its application. Platte Valley Motor Co. v. Wagner, 130 Colo. 365, 278 P.2d 870 (1954).

Amendments at all times should be liberally allowed when they do not lead to surprise or injury. Sellar v. Clelland, 2 Colo. 532 (1875); Green v. Davis, 67 Colo. 52, 185 P. 369 (1919).

Since this rule states no exceptions, contention that claims dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction cannot be amended is rejected. Stuart v. Frederick R. Ross Inv. Co., 773 P.2d 1107 (Colo. App. 1988).

C. When Permitted as a Matter of Right.

This rule permits a party to amend his pleading once as a matter of course at any time before a responsive pleading is filed. Kalish v. Brice, 136 Colo. 179, 315 P.2d 829 (1957); Renner v. Chilton, 142 Colo. 454, 351 P.2d 277 (1960); Fladung v. City of Boulder, 165 Colo. 244, 438 P.2d 688 (1968).

Otherwise, amendments may be made only by leave of court or with consent of the adverse party. Fladung v. City of Boulder, 165 Colo. 244, 438 P.2d 688 (1968).

Party may amend pleading within 20 days if there is no responsive pleading. Renner v. Chilton, 142 Colo. 454, 351 P.2d 277 (1960); Fladung v. City of Boulder, 165 Colo. 244, 438 P.2d 688 (1968).

Where no responsive pleading has been filed in these instances, no final judgment should be entered in the absence of a showing of record that plaintiff waived the right to file an amended complaint and elected to stand upon the allegations of the complaint to which the motion to dismiss was addressed. Passe v. Mitchell, 161 Colo. 501, 423 P.2d 17 (1967).

Where the defendant merely files a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim without an answer, plaintiff then would be entitled to amend his complaint as a matter of right. Fladung v. City of Boulder, 165 Colo. 244, 438 P.2d 688 (1968).

The court erred in overruling a plaintiff's motion to amend his complaint following an order sustaining a motion to dismiss, since plaintiff is entitled to one such amendment as a matter of right under section (a) of this rule. Renner v. Chilton, 142 Colo. 454, 351 P.2d 277 (1960); Davis v. Paolino, 21 P.3d 870 (Colo. App. 2001); Grear v. Mulvihill, 207 P.3d 918 (Colo. App. 2009).

The trial court cannot enter its judgment of dismissal until plaintiff has had at least an opportunity to amend his complaint. Sprott v. Roberts, 154 Colo. 252, 390 P.2d 465 (1964); Passe v. Mitchell, 161 Colo. 501, 423 P.2d 17 (1967).

With the filing of defendant's answer, the right to amend as a matter of course is lost. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bullock, 122 Colo. 218, 220 P.2d 877 (1950).

Plaintiff reserves the right to amend the complaint with respect to any defendants who have not filed a responsive pleading in a case where there are multiple defendants and some, but not all, have filed a responsive pleading. Grear v. Mulvihill, 207 P.3d 918 (Colo. App. 2009).

Where a party sought to prevent an amendment of his adversary's pleading by filing a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the court held that the right of amendment could not thus be cut off. Cornett v. Smith, 15 Colo. App. 53, 60 P. 953 (1900); Jones v. Ceres Inv. Co., 60 Colo. 562, 154 P. 745 (1916); Jackisch v. Quine, 62 Colo. 72, 160 P. 186 (1916); Colo. Inv. & Realty Co. v. Riverview Drainage Dist., 83 Colo. 468, 266 P. 501 (1928).

If final judgment is entered before a responsive pleading is filed, the absolute right to amend the complaint is lost and leave to amend becomes a matter of discretion for the court. Wilcox v. Reconditioned Office Sys., 881 P.2d 398 (Colo. App. 1994).

Once a final judgment is entered, a court should not allow the plaintiff to amend the complaint unless the judgment is set aside or vacated under C.R.C.P. 60. Since the plaintiff could have asserted the additional claims and added additional defendants during the three months before the court entered default judgment, there were no grounds for vacating the judgment, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying leave to amend the original complaint. Wilcox v. Reconditioned Office Sys., 881 P.2d 398 (Colo. App. 1994).

D. Amendment at Discretion of Court.

Amendment after a responsive pleading is within the discretion of the trial court. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bullock, 122 Colo. 218, 220 P.2d 877 (1950); Coon v. Guido, 170 Colo. 125, 459 P.2d 282 (1969).

Amendment of a pleading after a responsive pleading has been filed is within the discretion of the trial court. Conyers v. Lee, 32 Colo. App. 337, 511 P.2d 506 (1973).

After responsive pleadings have been filed, amendments may be made only by the leave of court. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

The granting of a motion to amend a complaint is within the discretion of the trial court. H.W. Houston Constr. Co. v. District Court, 632 P.2d 563 (Colo. 1981).

The trial court does not abuse its discretion when it denies a motion to amend which is futile. Conrad v. Imatni, 724 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1986); Bristol Co., LP v. Osman, 190 P.3d 752 (Colo. App. 2007).

The decision to grant or deny a motion to amend a complaint is committed to the sound discretion of the court and will not be reversed on review without a showing of abuse of discretion. In re Estate of Blacher, 857 P.2d 566 (Colo. App. 1993).

After issues are joined and a cause has been set for trial, a court may in the exercise of reasonable discretion and in the interest of justice permit the filing of an amended answer pleading additional defenses. Flanders v. Kochenberger, 118 Colo. 104, 193 P.2d 281 (1948).

Although a motion to amend is entitled to a lenient examination, such leniency is not without limits. Polk v. Denver Dist. Court, 849 P.2d 23 (Colo. 1993); Ajay Sports, Inc. v. Casazza, 1 P.3d 267 (Colo. App. 2000).

Court was within its discretion to deny a motion to amend the answer 62 days before trial, more than 100 days after the cut-off date for amendment of pleadings, and after defendant had sought and obtained one continuance of the trial. Ajay Sports, Inc. v. Casazza, 1 P.3d 267 (Colo. App. 2000).

Although leave to amend should generally be freely granted pursuant to section (a) of the rule, the trial court does not abuse its discretion in refusing to permit a futile amendment. Henderson v. Romer, 910 P.2d 48 (Colo. App. 1995).

In ruling on a motion to amend, the court must consider the totality of the circumstances by balancing the policy favoring the amendment of pleadings against the burden which granting the amendment may impose on the other parties. Polk v. Denver Dist. Court, 849 P.2d 23 (Colo. 1993).

In denying a motion to amend, the trial court did not abuse its discretion where: (1) The plaintiff knew of the basis for his counterclaims when filing the original pleading almost three years before and has offered no reasonable excuse for the delay in bringing the counterclaims; (2) the defendant would be prejudiced in addressing the counterclaims by requiring it to conduct additional and unanticipated discovery long after the case was filed; and (3) the motion to amend was made almost three years after filing the original answer and only five months before trial, resulting in yet another postponement of a trial date. Polk v. Denver Dist. Court, 849 P.2d 23 (Colo. 1993).

Denial of motion to amend was not an abuse of discretion where: (1) the motion was submitted after the discovery deadline and only a few months before trial; (2) the case had been pending for five years and the complaint amended five times; and (3) the moving parties failed to explain why they could not previously have added the claim for which leave to amend was sought. Francis v. Aspen Mtn. Condo. Ass'n, 2017 COA 19, 401 P.3d 125.

A trial court necessarily abuses its discretion by granting leave to amend a claim of fraud against an opposing party by joining that party's attorney, without first determining that the amendment at least advances a legal theory that can withstand a motion to dismiss. Vinton v. Virzi, 2012 CO 10, 269 P.3d 1242.

Whether amendment adding parties to action is proper is within district court's discretion. It is within the discretion of the district court to make a determination whether amendment of a complaint adding parties to a pending action is proper. Trustees of Mtg. Trust of Am. v. District Court, 621 P.2d 310 (Colo. 1980); Meyer v. Landmark Universal, Inc., 692 P.2d 1129 (Colo. App. 1984).

Courts have authority to grant leave to amend any time before final judgment, so long as they retain jurisdiction of the cause. Johnson v. Johnson, 30 Colo. 402, 70 P. 692 (1902).

Amendment to a pleading is not allowed under section (a) once final judgment is entered unless the judgment is set aside or vacated. Estate of Hays v. Mid-Century Ins. Co., 902 P.2d 956 (Colo. App. 1995).

When all claims for relief have been decided on appeal and the case is remanded for the sole purpose of awarding costs to the prevailing party, that party cannot amend its complaint to add a new claim for relief as the case is effectively over. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Carney, 97 P.3d 961 (Colo. 2004) (Carney II).

Where the appellate court remands a case to the trial court to calculate costs to be paid to the prevailing party, this is a post-judgment issue, and motions to amend a complaint to add a new claim for relief, essentially starting the litigation anew, are barred. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Carney, 97 P.3d 961 (Colo. 2004) (Carney II).

That an amendment is made after verdict is not conclusive against the validity of the order, for so long as the court retains jurisdiction of a cause, and certainly before final judgment, it has authority to grant leave to amend any pleading or proceeding therein. Johnson v. Johnson, 30 Colo. 402, 70 P. 692 (1902).

If a plaintiff files a motion to amend accompanied by an amended complaint pursuant to section (a), and if the motion, amended complaint, and summons are served on a defendant before expiration of the statute of limitations, then the statute of limitations is tolled until the trial court rules on plaintiff's motions. Moore v. Grossman, 824 P.2d 7 (Colo. App. 1991).

Permission to file an amended complaint at the close of the plaintiff's evidence is not prejudicial to the defendants where the matter set forth therein is already before the court, for, in such a situation, nothing new is injected into the case. Davis v. Bonebrake, 135 Colo. 506, 313 P.2d 982 (1957).

Since plaintiffs did not object at trial and further addressed issues not previously raised, plaintiffs consented to the trial on the unpled issues. Kennedy v. Aerr Co. 833 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1991).

Delay alone insufficient to grant defendant's motion for summary judgment. Where the plaintiff has delayed in substituting the parties until after the statute of limitations has run, delay alone, without any specifically resulting prejudice or any obvious design to harass, is not sufficient to grant defendants' motion for summary judgment. Spiker v. Hoogeboom, 628 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1981); Eagle River Mobile Home Park v. District Court, 647 P.2d 660 (Colo. 1982).

Where the party attempting to amend his pleadings is guilty of delay in seeking an amendment, it is preferable to allow the amendment subject to any conditions necessary to avoid prejudice to the opposing parties. Eagle River Mobile Home Park v. District Court, 647 P.2d 660 (Colo. 1982).

In ruling on motion to amend made long after original pleading and shortly before trial, court should weigh prejudice to opponent in granting motion against prejudice to movant in denying motion, and movant has burden to prove lack of knowledge, mistake, inadvertence, or other reason for not having made the amended claim earlier. Gaybatz v. Marquette Minerals, Inc., 688 P.2d 1128 (Colo. App. 1984).

Denial of amendment appropriate where court or other party prejudiced. Only if the opposing party can demonstrate prejudice to it (other than having the case resolved on its merits) or if the court itself is prejudiced is the denial of a motion to amend an appropriate exercise of discretion. K-R Funds, Inc. v. Fox, 640 P.2d 257 (Colo. App. 1981).

If the opposing party can demonstrate prejudice to it, the denial of a motion to amend is an appropriate exercise of discretion where the motion to amend is filed shortly before the trial date and on the eve of the discovery cut-off date and the amended claim tendered is to be supported by expert testimony which would require additional discovery by the defendant and possibly the presentation by it of independent expert testimony, the defendant demonstrates prejudice and the trial court acts within its discretion in offering the plaintiff the option of proceeding with trial as scheduled or filing the additional claim and continuing the trial date. Werkmeister v. Robinson Dairy, Inc., 669 P.2d 1042 (Colo. App. 1983).

No abuse of discretion in denial by district court of motion to amend to substitute new party as petitioner. Amendment would have been unduly prejudicial to respondents, would not have cured deficiencies in petition regarding statutory pre-filing requirements, and would have unnecessarily increased respondents' costs. Akin v. Four Corners Encampment, 179 P.3d 139 (Colo. App. 2007).

Court may properly deny leave to amend because of resulting delay, undue expense, or other demonstrable prejudice to the opposing party. Varner v. District Court, 618 P.2d 1388 (Colo. 1980); In re Estate of Blacher, 857 P.2d 566 (Colo. App. 1993).

Court improperly denied motion to amend on the basis of undue delay where: (1) The previous delay in the case was not attributable to the movant; (2) no case management order had entered, the parties had not commenced discovery, mandatory disclosures were not yet due, and no trial date had been set; and (3) the amendments included interpleader claims that were calculated to resolve the merits of the dispute in one lawsuit. Benton v. Adams, 56 P.3d 81 (Colo. 2002).

Concerns about collecting a judgment are not sufficient to support a finding of prejudice to justify denying a motion to amend. Benton v. Adams, 56 P.3d 81 (Colo. 2002).

Although the rules and caselaw prohibit a draconian approach to the amendment of pleadings, unexplained careless or thoughtless mistakes in pleadings on the part of counsel or the parties cannot be excused through amendments and continuances at the expense of fairness to opposing parties and to the judicial process. Polk v. Denver Dist. Court, 849 P.2d 23 (Colo. 1993).

Preservation of trial date insufficient justification to deny amendment. The trial court's desire to preserve the scheduled trial date is not a sufficient justification to deny a motion to amend. Eagle River Mobile Home Park v. District Court, 647 P.2d 660 (Colo. 1982).

Trial court's desire to preserve original trial date, absent a showing of prejudice to opposing party, is not sufficient to warrant court's denial of motion to amend or supplement complaint. Lutz v. District Court, 716 P.2d 129 (Colo. 1986).

Although the desire to preserve a trial date alone is not a sufficient reason to deny a motion to amend, it is still a valid factor to be considered by a trial court in ruling on such motion. Polk v. Denver Dist. Court, 849 P.2d 23 (Colo. 1993).

Trial court abused its discretion when it denied plaintiffs' motion to amend their complaint to add a claim for exemplary damages where amended complaint satisfied the burden of proof set forth in section (3)(c)(I). Stamp v. Vail Corp., 172 P.3d 437 (Colo. 2007).

Court did not abuse discretion in granting motion to amend where defendants were on notice of issue raised in amended pleading by virtue of the evidence presented, the proposed jury instructions, and a conference during trial. Anderson v. Dunton Management Co., 865 P.2d 887 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by permitting plaintiff to amend the complaint after the close of evidence to include a punitive damages claim because defendant failed to demonstrate any prejudice arising from the late amendment where both plaintiff and defendant presented evidence on the issue of whether defendant engaged in willful and wanton conduct generally. Davis v. GuideOne Mut. Ins. Co., 2012 COA 70M, 297 P.3d 950.

A trial court may grant parties leave to amend their pleadings upon remand so long as matters already settled by the appellate court are not relitigated. Union Ins. Co. v. Kjeldgaard, 820 P.2d 1183 (Colo. App. 1991).

District court erred in allowing buyer under section (a) of this rule to amend his answer to raise defense under § 38-35-126 (3) following trial after ruling immediately before trial that he would not be permitted to raise such defense. Where a defense or claim is not pleaded or intentionally and actually tried, a court cannot render a judgment thereon. This rule cannot be circumvented by allowing a party to amend his or her answer after trial where the defense or claim was not tried by express or implied consent. Further, the district court abused its discretion in effectively permitting buyer to amend his answer after trial because seller was clearly prejudiced. Dinosaur Park Invs., L.L.C. v. Tello, 192 P.3d 513 (Colo. App. 2008).

E. Subject of Amendment.

Amendment to substitute new theory is not prejudicial where notice of claim has been given. Where complaint furnishes defendant with complete notice of the circumstances and occurrence of plaintiff's claim, amendment of the complaint during trial to substitute a new theory of recovery is not prejudicial to defendant. Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

Where it is contended that an amended complaint merely adds a second cause of action to that already stated in the original complaint, it is within the discretion of the court whether the amendment should be allowed after the defendant's answer, and it is doubtful that this discretion is abused where counsel for both sides subsequently entered into an agreed statement of facts. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bullock, 122 Colo. 218, 220 P.2d 877 (1950).

Fact that proposed amendment set forth alternate theories of recovery furnished no reason to withhold permission to amend, especially where those theories were rooted in the very same transaction underlying the original complaint. Varner v. District Court, 618 P.2d 1388 (Colo. 1980).

Where a complaint is amended to provide for a different remedy, the principal consideration is whether the amended pleading will permit an expeditious disposition to be made of the case. Espinoza v. Gurule, 144 Colo. 381, 356 P.2d 891 (1960).

Where the complaint filed constitutes an election of a choice of remedies provided for by contract, an amendment to the complaint which provides for the alternative remedy in the event recovery cannot be had under the original complaint is erroneous to permit, for the plaintiff cannot pursue two inconsistent remedies. Green v. Hertz Drivurself Sys., 130 Colo. 238, 274 P.2d 597 (1954).

Amendment authorized where matter of damages not entirely known at time complaint filed. The trial court correctly authorized amendment of the complaint upon a showing that the nature and extent of plaintiff's damages were not entirely known at the time the original complaint was filed. Hildyard v. Western Fasteners, Inc., 33 Colo. App. 396, 522 P.2d 596 (1974).

An amendment to a complaint dropping equitable issue with consent of defendants and court does not create a right to a jury trial that cannot be denied. Murray v. District Court, 189 Colo. 217, 539 P.2d 1254 (1975).

The court might permit amending the complaint to show residency. Where the complaint in an action for divorce alleged that plaintiff was and had been for more than one year immediately preceding the commencement of the action a bona fide resident and citizen of the state but failed to allege that either party resided in the county in which the action was brought, the court might permit an amendment after verdict inserting in the complaint an allegation of plaintiff's residence in the county where the proof showed such residence. Johnson v. Johnson, 30 Colo. 402, 70 P. 692 (1902).

Matters purely jurisdictional may be made the subject of amendment the same as other matters of substance. Johnson v. Johnson, 30 Colo. 402, 70 P. 692 (1902).

The argument that the complaint could not be amended because the allegation of notice of a claim was "jurisdictional" is without merit, for the office of the complaint is to establish by proper factual averment that the case is within the jurisdiction of the court, and thus a defect in allegations of fact upon which the court's jurisdiction depends can be cured or supplied by amendment. Francisco v. Cascade Inv. Co., 29 Colo. App. 516, 486 P.2d 447 (1971).

It is within the province of the court to permit the striking of allegations, and leave shall be freely given when justice so requires. Barth v. Powell, 127 Colo. 78, 254 P.2d 428 (1953).

Averments stricken from a complaint might be allowed in an amended complaint in the discretion of the court. Rice v. Van Why, 49 Colo. 7, 111 P. 599 (1910).

Filing an amended complaint waives error, if any, in striking an amendment to the complaint and a bill of particulars. Burson v. Adamson, 87 Colo. 451, 288 P. 623 (1930).

Rule does not govern election contest. This rule normally applicable to a civil action does not govern an election contest. Abts v. Bd. of Educ., 622 P.2d 518 (Colo. 1980).

New parties may be added or substituted in action when the new and old parties have such an identity of interests that it can be assumed, or proved, that relation back is not prejudicial. Spiker v. Hoogeboom, 628 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1981).

Identity of interest means that the parties are so closely related in their business operations or other activities that the institution of an action against one serves to provide notice of litigation to the other. Such an identity of interest exists between past and present forms of the same enterprise. Spiker v. Hoogeboom, 628 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1981).

Amended pleading asserting an interpleader claim is not futile if it alleges facts sufficient to support a reasonable belief that exposure to double or multiple liability may exist. Certainty of exposure to double or multiple liability is not the test; rather, the allegations must meet a minimum threshold of substantiality. Benton v. Adams, 56 P.3d 81 (Colo. 2002).

F. Appellate Review.

An appellate court will not review refusal to grant leave to amend for insufficiency except when an abuse of discretion is shown. Buno v. Gomer, 3 Colo. App. 456, 34 P. 256 (1893); Klippel v. Oppenstein, 8 Colo. App. 187, 45 P. 224 (1896); Cascade Ice Co. v. Austin Bluff Land & Water Co., 23 Colo. 292, 47 P. 268 (1896); Hyman v. Jockey Club Wine, Liquor, & Cigar Co., 9 Colo. App. 299, 48 P. 671 (1897); Gambrill v. Brown Hotel Co., 11 Colo. App. 529, 54 P. 1025 (1898); Wiggington v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 51 Colo. 377, 118 P. 88 (1911); Perry v. Perry, 74 Colo. 106, 219 P. 221 (1923).

Leave to amend is within the discretion of the trial court. Absent an abuse of discretion, the supreme court will not interfere with the trial court's ruling. Polk v. Denver Dist. Court, 849 P.2d 23 (Colo. 1993); Henderson v. Romer, 910 P.2d 48 (Colo. App. 1995).

The decision whether to grant leave to amend lies within the trial court's sound discretion, and its ruling will not be disturbed on review absent a clear abuse of discretion. Lyons v. Teamsters Local Union No. 961, 903 P.2d 1214 (Colo. App. 1995).

Abuse of discretion in denying leave to amend pleadings. Where it was shown to the trial court that the filing of a counterclaim would not delay the trial or cause a postponement, that the other side did not object, and that it was a compulsory counterclaim which if denied foreclosed possible future relief, the trial court abused its discretion in denying petitioners leave to amend their pleadings. Bobrick v. Sanderson, 164 Colo. 46, 432 P.2d 242 (1967).

No error where no abuse of discretion is shown. Where a party fails to point out an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court in permitting the opposing party to amend his pleading, there is no error. Palmer Park Gardens, Inc. v. Potter, 162 Colo. 178, 425 P.2d 268 (1967); Jenkins v. Glen & Helen Aircraft, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 118, 590 P.2d 983 (1979).

Absent an abuse of discretion, the supreme court will not overrule the trial court. H.W. Houston Constr. Co. v. District Court, 632 P.2d 563 (Colo. 1981).

Generally speaking, allowing pleadings to be amended is a matter within the discretion of a trial court, not to be disturbed unless an abuse thereof is demonstrated. K-R Funds, Inc. v. Fox, 640 P.2d 257 (Colo. App. 1981).

III. TO CONFORM TO THE EVIDENCE.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For note, ''Comments on Last Clear Chance — Procedure and Substance'', see 32 Dicta 275 (1955). For comment on Carpenter v. Hill appearing below, see 32 Dicta 393 (1955).

Annotator's note. Since section (b) of this rule is similar to § 84 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Section (b) softens apparent rigidity of C.R.C.P. 8(c). The apparent rigidity of C.R.C.P. 8(c), which states that a party shall affirmatively plead all matters constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense, is softened by section (b) of this rule, which provides that when issues not raised by the pleadings are tried by the express or implied consent of the parties, they shall be treated in all respects as if they had been raised in the pleadings. Great Am. Ins. Co. v. Ferndale Dev. Co., 185 Colo. 252, 523 P.2d 979 (1974).

Pleadings are subsidiary and serve the ends of justice by giving notice of the issues to be litigated. Ashford v. Burnham Aviation Serv., Inc., 162 Colo. 582, 427 P.2d 875 (1967).

The contradiction which results in an amendment where the plaintiff testifies differently from an allegation in his complaint merely goes to the credibility of the plaintiff, and where the instruction upon credibility sets forth the test to be applied, the weight then to be given plaintiff's testimony is for the jury. Foster v. Feder, 135 Colo. 585, 316 P.2d 576 (1957).

Where the plaintiff files a pleading which is subsequently superseded by amendment, the original pleading is admissible against the pleader in the proceeding in which it is filed as evidence of admission against interest. Foster v. Feder, 135 Colo. 585, 316 P.2d 576 (1957).

Such an admission cannot be withdrawn by amendment. Where the original complaint was an admission which brought the transaction squarely within the terms of the uniform commercial code and an amendment was a withdrawal of this admission and the introduction of an entirely different theory as an effort to escape the effect of the uniform commercial code with the defendant strongly objecting when the amendment was proposed and when it was granted, it was held that its claim of surprise was well founded and that the amendment should not have been allowed. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Etter, 28 Colo. App. 511, 476 P.2d 287 (1970).

Where the parties litigated the issues between them just as if there had been actual notice through an amendment to the complaint stating in terms the plaintiff's claim against the third-party defendant, an amendment including the third-party defendant in the original complaint was unnecessary. Ashford v. Burnham Aviation Serv., Inc., 162 Colo. 582, 427 P.2d 875 (1967).

Surprise or prejudice not found. The defendant cannot claim that either surprise or prejudice resulted from the introduction of evidence regarding a certain issue allegedly not properly pled where the plaintiff's pretrial statement clearly identifies this issue. Andrikopoulos v. Broadmoor Mgt. Co., 670 P.2d 435 (Colo. App. 1983).

Where the third-party defendant not only answered the third-party complaint, but in a separate pleading undertook to answer the original complaint categorically and asserted all of the defenses he could have asserted had the plaintiff amended his complaint and alleged a claim against the third party, such an answer amounts to a waiver of amendment. Ashford v. Burnham Aviation Serv., Inc., 162 Colo. 582, 427 P.2d 875 (1967).

Complainant can recover upon the theory of extrinsic or constructive fraud under this rule where the issue of extrinsic or constructive fraud is in fact tried by express or implied consent of the parties. United States Nat'l Bank v. Barges, 120 Colo. 317, 210 P.2d 600 (1949), cert. denied, 338 U.S. 955, 70 S. Ct. 493, 94 L. Ed. 589 (1950).

Where a foreign court had jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter, its decree may not be collaterally attacked on the grounds of intrinsic fraud, and the trial court properly denied the motion to amend the return and the answer to include such an allegation of fraud based on the evidence tendered for consideration. Fahrenbruch v. People ex rel. Taber, 169 Colo. 70, 453 P.2d 601 (1969).

Trial court erred in allowing insurer to assert a belated noncooperation defense by implied consent of the parties. Although insurer mentioned noncooperation in opening statement and introduced evidence, testimony, and arguments tending to show plaintiff's lack of cooperation, this evidence was equally applicable to insurer's contention that it did not unreasonably delay paying plaintiff''s claim and to its defense of plaintiff's violation of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Soicher v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2015 COA 46, 351 P.3d 559.

B. Purpose and Object of Amendment.

The purpose of this rule is to allow litigation to be determined on the merits and not to be limited to the strict parameters of the pleadings. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Etter, 28 Colo. App. 511, 476 P.2d 287 (1970).

This rule permits amendments to conform to the evidence when issues not raised by the pleadings are tried by express or implied consent of the parties. Haffke v. Linker, 30 Colo. App. 76, 489 P.2d 1047 (1971); Cox v. Bertsch, 730 P.2d 889 (Colo. App. 1986).

This rule directs that amendment of pleadings to conform to the evidence be freely granted. Schwab v. Martin, 165 Colo. 547, 441 P.2d 17 (1968).

Care must be taken not to prejudice the case of either party. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Etter, 28 Colo. App. 511, 476 P.2d 287 (1970).

Amendment should be permitted where the presentation of the merits of the action would be subserved thereby, it cannot be claimed that it would be prejudicial upon the merits, and the granting of the motion would facilitate a fair trial of the actual issues between the litigants. Francisco v. Cascade Inv. Co., 29 Colo. App. 516, 486 P.2d 447 (1971).

Amendments under this rule should be granted after the close of the evidence only in cases where no reasonable doubt remains that the issue raised by the amendment has been intentionally and actually tried, since it is not enough that some evidence has been received germane to the issue sought to be raised. Clemann v. Bandimere, 128 Colo. 24, 259 P.2d 614 (1953); Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Shultz, 168 Colo. 59, 450 P.2d 70 (1969).

The same principles are applicable when the motion to amend the pleadings is made during the progress of the trial. Real Equity Diversification v. Covilli, 744 P.2d 756 (Colo. App. 1987).

Amendment to add a new claim should be allowed only when the issue raised by amendment has been intentionally and actually tried. It is not enough that some pertinent evidence has been heard. Pickell v. Arizona Components Co., 902 P.2d 392 (Colo. App. 1994), rev'd on other grounds, 931 P.2d 1184 (Colo. 1997).

Under this rule a liberal provision is made for amendments to conform the pleadings to the evidence. Cady v. Fraser, 122 Colo. 252, 222 P.2d 422 (1950); Underwriters Salvage Co. v. Davis & Shaw Furn. Co., 198 F.2d 450 (10th Cir. 1952).

This rule must be judiciously applied. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Etter, 28 Colo. App. 511, 476 P.2d 287 (1970).

Considerable liberality should be exercised in allowing a complaint to be amended during a trial so as to correspond with the proof. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. v. Baldwin, 53 Colo. 426, 128 P. 453 (1912).

C. Amendment at Discretion of Court.

The matter of such an amendment rests in the sound discretion of the court. Fedderson v. Goode, 112 Colo. 38, 145 P.2d 981 (1944); Pickell v. Arizona Components Co., 902 P.2d 392 (Colo. App. 1994), rev'd on other grounds, 931 P.2d 1184 (Colo. 1997).

Wide discretion is given to the trial court under this rule to permit amendment of the pleadings to conform with the evidence. Foster v. Feder, 135 Colo. 585, 316 P.2d 576 (1957).

Amendments "to conform to the proof" should not be allowed when not germane to the case as made. Buchhalter v. Myers, 85 Colo. 419, 276 P. 972 (1929).

It is error where matter constitutes a new cause of action. Where plaintiff asked leave to amend to correspond with the proof, it was held that it was error to permit him to allege matters not legitimately connected with the complaint which constituted a new cause of action and a departure from the issues as made. Buchhalter v. Myers, 85 Colo. 419, 276 P. 972 (1929).

Upon a proper application interposed in apt time it would become the duty of the trial court to permit a complaint to be amended to correspond with the proof, and it is the duty of a court of review to treat the complaint as so amended. English Lumber Co. v. Hireen, 25 Colo. App. 199, 136 P. 475 (1913).

Where at the start of the trial defendant applies for an order amending his answer to a defense which he has failed to plead affirmatively and plaintiff does not object to this request, it is within the discretion of the court to consider this defense under section (a) or (b) of this rule in view of the sweep of the evidence. White v. Widger, 144 Colo. 566, 358 P.2d 592 (1960).

Where the amended complaint did not plead a certain matter, but the record disclosed that the defendant was put on notice of the claim for that matter as early as the pre-trial conference, then the trial court's admission of the evidence and, upon motion of the plaintiffs, grant of leave to amend the complaint to conform to the proof was in conformity with the discretion of section (b) of this rule. Welborn v. Sullivant, 167 Colo. 35, 445 P.2d 215 (1968); Karakehian v. Boyer, 900 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where plaintiff establishes a prima facie case, then, under the spirit and intent of section (b) of this rule, the failure to permit the plaintiff to amend his complaint and plead matter not initially pleaded is an abuse of discretion. Martin v. Kennell, 169 Colo. 122, 453 P.2d 797 (1969); Francisco v. Cascade Inv. Co., 29 Colo. App. 516, 486 P.2d 447 (1971); Real Equity Diversification v. Coville, 744 P.2d 756 (Colo. App. 1987).

Motion to amend pleadings to conform to the proof allowed only in cases where no reasonable doubt remains that the issue raised by the amendment has been intentionally and actually tried. Absent abuse of discretion, trial court's denial of a motion pursuant to this rule will not be disturbed on appeal. Gabel v. Jefferson County Sch. Dist. R-1, 824 P.2d 26 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where parties agree to litigate on a certain theory, the trial court does not abuse its discretion by denying a motion of one of the parties made at the close of its evidence to amend its pleadings to add another claim when the other party objects to such an amendment. Quandary Land Dev. Co. v. Porter, 159 Colo. 8, 408 P.2d 978 (1965).

It is no abuse of discretion in denying motion to amend where evidence conflicting and conditional. Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiffs' motion to amend their pleading to conform to the evidence where the evidence was conflicting and conditional. Gorin v. Arizona Columbine Ranch, Inc., 34 Colo. App. 405, 527 P.2d 899 (1974).

D. Determination of Issues Not Pleaded.

Where an issue is completely foreign to the issues in the case and is not tried with the consent of the parties, it cannot be injected into the case by amendment. Haffke v. Linker, 30 Colo. App. 76, 489 P.2d 1047 (1971).

Issues not pleaded may be determined by the trial court by consent, express or implied, where evidence presenting such issues is tendered and received without objection. First Nat'l Bank v. Jones, 124 Colo. 451, 237 P.2d 1082 (1951).

Extraneous issues may not be tried in the absence of amendment of the pleadings where timely objection is made. First Nat'l Bank v. Jones, 124 Colo. 451, 237 P.2d 1082 (1951).

It is the duty of the court to consider issues raised by evidence received without objection even though no formal application is made to amend. Cady v. Fraser, 122 Colo. 252, 222 P.2d 422 (1950); Underwriters Salvage Co. v. Davis & Shaw Furn. Co., 198 F.2d 450 (10th Cir. 1952); Prato v. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co., 40 Colo. App. 1, 572 P.2d 487 (1977).

Parties who acquiesced in trial conducted at variance with the pleadings cannot complain of failure to amend the pleadings. Shively v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 159 Colo. 353, 411 P.2d 782 (1966).

Where it is apparent from the testimony, the exhibits, and the finding of the court that an issue was tried by implied consent because the record is otherwise silent, one will not be held to have waived his rights because he did not specially plead this matter either by complaint, by answer to intervener's petition, or by motion. Rose v. Rose, 119 Colo. 473, 204 P.2d 1075 (1949).

Where a certain matter is alleged in the complaint, but the evidence shows another matter and throughout the trial it is apparent that the cause is being presented upon the theory of the latter without objection, then, under section (b) of this rule, the judgment entered upon the issue actually tried would be good. United States Nat'l Bank v. Bartges, 122 Colo. 546, 224 P.2d 658 (1950), cert. dismissed, 340 U.S. 957, 71 S. Ct. 575, 95 L. Ed. 689 (1951).

When an application for the enlargement of a specifically-identified dam incorrectly stated the location of the dam but the issue of the discrepancy in location was not raised until nine months after trial, the parties impliedly consented to the trial of the enlargement at the correct location without the need to amend the application. City of Black Hawk v. City of Central, 97 P.3d 951 (Colo. 2004).

Judgment can be entered on different theory than that of pleadings. Issues not raised by the pleadings were nonetheless tried by the express consent of the parties; it is of no legal significance that the trial court entered judgment on a "theory" different from the "theory" pled in the complaint. Ward v. Nat'l Medical Ass'n, 154 Colo. 595, 392 P.2d 162 (1964); Radinsky v. Weaver, 170 Colo. 169, 460 P.2d 218 (1969).

If, under the facts, the substantive law provides relief upon any theory, the cause should proceed to judgment, and, if such be the case, the theory of the pleader is not important. Ward v. Nat'l Medical Ass'n, 154 Colo. 595, 392 P.2d 162 (1964); Radinsky v. Weaver, 170 Colo. 169, 460 P.2d 218 (1969).

While issues may properly be tried even when not pleaded, they must be deliberately presented and knowingly considered by the court. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Etter, 28 Colo. App. 511, 476 P.2d 287 (1970); Maehal Enters. v. Thunder Mtn. Custom, 313 P.3d 584 (Colo. App. 2011).

Party may not amend complaint to conform to evidence when party did not intentionally and actually try the issue sought to be raised; it is not enough that the party present some evidence germane to the issue. People v. McNamara, 275 P.3d 792 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2011).

E. Applicability.

Before the provisions of this rule apply, a trial court must first determine what are the material issues made by a complaint and if the evidence objected to at a trial is within the issues made by the pleadings. Myrick v. Garcia, 138 Colo. 298, 332 P.2d 900 (1958).

The amendment allowable or "such amendment" refers to situations where issues are not raised by the pleadings and are tried by the express or implied consent of the parties. Barnes v. Wright, 123 Colo. 462, 231 P.2d 794 (1951).

This fact is made clear by the further provision that the amendment may be made "even after judgment". Barnes v. Wright, 123 Colo. 462, 231 P.2d 794 (1951).

In an action to quiet title where defendants did not allege adverse possession, but there was evidence before the court that defendants and their predecessors in interest had occupied the land for more than 60 years prior to the commencement of the action, under section (b) of this rule it became the court's duty to determine the issue so presented as if it had been raised by the pleadings. Hodge v. Terrill, 123 Colo. 196, 228 P.2d 984 (1951).

Equitable relief not precluded. Although the plaintiffs originally sought damages in an action at law, equitable relief was not precluded where a change in circumstances altered the posture of the case and rendered the original relief sought inappropriate. Rice v. Hilty, 38 Colo. App. 338, 559 P.2d 725 (1976).

Where an unpleaded affirmative defense appears as an afterthought following the entry of judgment, although evidence with relation thereto is clearly admissible as bearing upon issues which were framed by the pleadings, the affirmative defense is not tried by express or implied consent. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Shultz, 168 Colo. 59, 450 P.2d 70 (1969).

It is error for court to go beyond pleadings where affirmative defense is not pleaded. Carpenter v. Hill, 131 Colo. 553, 283 P.2d 963 (1955).

Where an election of remedies is made plaintiff may not amend his cause of action to conform to the evidence by alleging the remedy which he did not elect at the outset, inasmuch as no proposition of law is better settled in Colorado than that a plaintiff may not play "fast and loose" with his right of election and, since the remedies are inconsistent, to permit one character of action involving one measure of damages to be pleaded and tried and another character of action involving a different measure of damages substituted at the close of the trial would of necessity be to work injustice instead of justice. Gibraltar Colo. Life Co. v. Brink, 113 Colo. 304, 157 P.2d 134 (1945).

Where a motion to dismiss is filed but neither argued nor ruled upon, an answer thereafter is filed in which the motion to dismiss is not repeated, and the trial proceeds on the issues framed by the complaint and answer without the sufficiency of the complaint being again challenged, an amendment to conform to the proof would have been in order under section (b) of this rule. O. K. Uranium Dev. Co. v. Miller, 140 Colo. 490, 345 P.2d 382 (1959).

It is not necessary for plaintiff to amend his complaint to include third-party defendant. It was not essential to the validity of the judgment entered against the third-party defendant that the original plaintiff should have formally entered an amendment to its complaint to include a claim against him. Ashford v.

Amendment shall conform to evidence allowed. Niles v. Builders Serv. & Supply, Inc., 667 P.2d 770 (Colo. App. 1983).

F. Objections.

This rule is not controlling where there are objections. This rule is not controlling where the issue presented to the jury is not raised by the pleadings and is not tried by express or implied consent of the parties because of objections to a trial of any issue not presented by the pleadings. W.T. Grant Co. v. Casady, 117 Colo. 405, 188 P.2d 881 (1948); Lininger v. Knight, 123 Colo. 213, 226 P.2d 809 (1951).

It is error to grant plaintiff leave to so amend the complaint over defendant's objection. Barnes v. Wright, 123 Colo. 462, 231 P.2d 794 (1951).

Where attention is called by plaintiff to a defective pleading by timely objections to evidence in support of a matter not pleaded by defendant, the duty of amending the unsatisfactory pleading falls upon the defendant, and unless defendant does so, such matter cannot be litigated and it is error for the court to permit it to be so. Lamar Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Truax, 95 Colo. 77, 33 P.2d 978 (1934).

A trial court's qualified ruling initially sustaining objection to the amendment of the complaint does not preclude the court from considering all of the evidence offered and received, without objection, relating to an issue and thereafter concluding that indeed the issue had been submitted to the court for its determination, and the failure to actually amend does not affect the result of the trial of the issue where the court's determination of this issue is without prejudice. Radinsky v. Weaver, 170 Colo. 169, 460 P.2d 218 (1969).

Under this rule when an issue is tried before the court without timely objection or motion, then the issue is before the court regardless of any defect in the pleading. Barbary v. Benz, 169 Colo. 408, 457 P.2d 389 (1969).

Section (b) has been interpreted to provide that when an issue is tried before the court without timely objection or motion, then the issue is deemed properly before the court despite any defect in the pleading. Great Am. Ins. Co. v. Ferndale Dev. Co., 185 Colo. 252, 523 P.2d 979 (1974); Kennedy v. Aerr Co., 833 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1991).

By failing to object to evidence introduced on a matter which is not pleaded, a party impliedly consents that the action should be tried in all respects as if the issue had been raised. Toy v. Rogers, 114 Colo. 432, 165 P.2d 1017 (1946).

Plaintiff implicitly consented to counterclaims by failing to timely object to defendant's continued prosecution of them. So, even though defendant did not reassert the counterclaims in an answer to the amended complaint, the counterclaims were not waived or abandoned. Mullins v. Med. Lien Mgmt., Inc., 2013 COA 134, 411 P.3d 798.

When issues not raised in the pleadings are tried by express or implied consent of the parties, they shall be treated as if the issues were raised in the pleadings. Kennedy v. Aerr Co., 833 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1991).

Counsel is not required to be on the alert to challenge every objectionable question or answer lest it be later made the basis of another claim than that which was intentionally and fairly tendered. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Etter, 28 Colo. App. 511, 476 P.2d 287 (1970).

Where evidence tending to prove a matter is introduced at trial without an objection that it goes to issues beyond the scope of the pleadings, then such matters are properly before the court even though they are not pleaded. Motlong v. World Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 168 Colo. 540, 452 P.2d 384 (1969).

Where pleadings fail to raise an affirmative defense which must be specifically set forth in the pleadings under C.R.C.P. 8(c), but no objection is made to evidence introduced in regard to that issue, such issue may be treated as raised in the pleadings under section (b) of this rule. Metropolitan State Bank, Inc. v. Cox, 134 Colo. 260, 302 P.2d 188 (1956).

In the absence of motion or objection when an issue not pleaded is thus presented, the pleadings become functus officio, and the parties are before the court to present such matter as they desire. Carlson v. Bain, 116 Colo. 526, 182 P.2d 909 (1947).

Where evidence raising an issue is received without objection, the issue is considered as if it had been raised in the pleadings. Craft v. Stumpf, 115 Colo. 181, 170 P.2d 779 (1946).

The issue will be so treated by the supreme court. Since an issue not raised by the pleadings is not fatal when considered in the trial without objection on anyone's part, it will be treated in the supreme court in all respects the same as if it had been raised in the pleadings. Hopkins v. Underwood, 126 Colo. 224, 247 P.2d 1000 (1952).

In the absence of motions or objections, any issue that the parties see fit to present may be considered and determined by the trial court. Carlson v. Bain, 116 Colo. 526, 182 P.2d 909 (1947).

Even where plaintiffs who were advised before trial of a tendered amendment to defendant's answer and counterclaim so as to set forth another defense made no objection thereto and one of the plaintiffs testified with reference to this defense without objection, the trial court erred in refusing to grant leave to defendant to so amend after all of the evidence had been introduced. Rogers v. Funkhouser, 121 Colo. 13, 212 P.2d 497 (1949).

Where the amended complaint did not plead a certain matter, but the record disclosed that the defendant was put on notice of the claim for that matter as early as the pre-trial conference, then the trial court's admission of the evidence and, upon motion of the plaintiffs, grant of leave to amend the complaint to conform to the proof was in conformity with the discretion of section (b) of this rule. Welborn v. Sullivant, 167 Colo. 35, 445 P.2d 215 (1968).

Where the parties appear, cross-examine witnesses, introduce evidence, and fully participate in the hearing, they therefore have notice of the hearing and the issues involved, and by their full participation in the proceedings without objection or request for a continuance waive whatever deficiencies might exist in regards to notice of the hearing. Hassler & Bates Co. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 168 Colo. 183, 451 P.2d 280 (1969).

A judgment based on issues not formed by the pleadings is not error where the issue is embraced in the stipulation of facts upon which the case is tried, and the complaint is not challenged in the trial court, since under section (b) of this rule such an issue must be treated in all respects as if it had been raised in the pleadings. Sinclair Ref. Co. v. Shakespeare, 115 Colo. 520, 175 P.2d 389 (1946).

Trial of an issue without objection constitutes trial by implied consent. To the extent that the issue of the defective condition of the brake system was not raised in the pleadings filed by the employee in a suit for injuries he sustained as he attempted to uncouple a locomotive, admission of evidence bearing on the issue without objection from the railroads constituted trial of the issue by implied consent. Tovrea v. Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Co., 693 P.2d 1016 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where special damages are not pleaded as required by C.R.C.P. 9(g), and defendant makes no objection to the evidence on which the court bases its findings as to damages no amendment is necessary, and a judgment giving both actual and special damages would stand. Carlson v. Bain, 116 Colo. 526, 182 P.2d 909 (1947).

G. When Pleading Can be Amended.

Pleadings can be so amended either at trial or subsequent to judgment. Where evidence admitted without objection clearly establishes the right of plaintiffs to their claim, then under this rule plaintiffs can amend their complaint to conform to the proof either at the trial or subsequent to the judgment. Toy v. Rogers, 114 Colo. 432, 165 P.2d 1017 (1946).

The caption of the complaint is properly amended after the trial to read that the defendants were partners where one of the defendants admitted the partnership at that time. Bamford v. Cope, 31 Colo. App. 161, 499 P.2d 639 (1972).

IV. RELATION BACK.

This rule is identical to F.R.C.P. 15(c). Denver & R. G. W. R. R. v. Clint, 235 F.2d 445 (10th Cir. 1956).

Amended petition under this rule relates back to the date of the original petition. Stalford v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 128 Colo. 441, 263 P.2d 436 (1953).

Amendment relates back to filing of original complaint. Where the claim asserted in the amended complaint arose out of the same conduct and occurrence set forth, or attempted to be set forth, in the original complaint, where the parties were the same, where the occurrence was the same, and where in both pleadings the same negligence was pleaded as the proximate cause of the accident, and where from the beginning plaintiff sought to recover damages, then, under section (c) of this rule, the amendment related back to the time of the filing of the original complaint. Denver & R. G. W. R. R. v. Clint, 235 F.2d 445 (10th Cir. 1956).

An amendment to a complaint is permitted to relate back only where a new party had timely knowledge of the original action and the original complaint provided fair and adequate notice of the new claim in the amended complaint. Maldonado v. Pratt, 2016 COA 171, 409 P.3d 630.

An amendment to a civil claim will not relate back to the original complaint under the relation-back test unless the new party receives notice of the institution of the action within the period provided by C.R.C.P. 4(m). Maldonado v. Pratt, 2016 COA 171, 409 P.3d 630.

Amended complaint which puts forth a contract claim based on the same facts as the original tort claim related back to original complaint and was not barred by the statute of limitation. Roper v. Spring Lake Dev. Co., 789 P.2d 483 (Colo. App. 1990).

Section (c) is not applicable to proceedings to review banking board chartering decisions. Columbine State Bank v. Banking Bd., 34 Colo. App. 11, 523 P.2d 474 (1974).

The doctrine of relation back is not applicable to a petition for further relief because such a petition is not an amended pleading. Subryan v. Regents of Univ. of Colo., 789 P.2d 472 (Colo. App. 1989).

Section (c) applies only to the amendment of a pleading in an ongoing action and not to the filing of a new complaint in a new case. In case where second complaint filed by plaintiff was in fact an original complaint, rather than an amended pleading that related back to the first complaint, plaintiff could not avail himself of the relation-back doctrine, and trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's second complaint as untimely filed. Kelso v. Rickenbaugh Cadillac Co., 262 P.3d 1001 (Colo. App. 2011).

The doctrine of relation back cannot be used to validate an otherwise invalid notice of lis pendens. The validity of a notice of lis pendens is determined when it is recorded. Brossia v. Rick Constr., L.T.D., 81 P.3d 1126 (Colo. App. 2003).

Substituted plaintiff's claim relates back where no prejudice to defendant. If the adverse party has had sufficient notice of the disputed occurrence and related institution of legal action so as to obviate any prejudice which might arise from the assertion of a substituted plaintiff's claim, then the substitution is allowed to relate back. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Gasper, 630 P.2d 97 (Colo. App. 1981).

Whenever an amended pleading or complaint arises out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth in the original pleading, the amendment relates back to the date of the original pleading. Halliburton v. Pub. Serv. Co., 804 P.2d 213 (Colo. App. 1990).

Relation back did not apply where plaintiff sued an uninsured motorist for negligence and later added the plaintiff's insurer based on a separate transaction or conduct arising from the plaintiff's contract of uninsured motorist coverage. In this situation there was no mistake of identity, only a failure to abide by the applicable statute of limitations. Trigg v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 129 P.3d 1099 (Colo. App. 2005).

The doctrine of relation back applies to amendments to water applications so long as the requirements of this rule do not conflict with the provisions of the Water Right Determination and Administration Act. City of Thornton v. City of Fort Collins, 830 P.2d 915 (Colo. 1992).

For an amendment to a water application to relate back to the date of the original water application, the claims in the amendment must arise from the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth in the original water application in order to insure that interested parties had notice of the claims in the amendment from the date of the original application. City of Thornton v. City of Fort Collins, 830 P.2d 915 (Colo. 1992).

Where the source, amount, and uses of water claimed in the amendments to the original water application were the same as those claimed in the amendment to such water application, the amendment related back to the date of the original water application, even though the amended application requested two water diversions and the original application requested a minimum stream flow. City of Thornton v. City of Fort Collins, 830 P.2d 915 (Colo. 1992).

Amendments made to conditional water rights application found to relate back to original application because the amendments related to the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth in original application and all interested parties had notice of the amending party's intent to appropriate a certain amount of water from a river. City of Thornton v. City of Fort Collins, 830 P.2d 915 (Colo. 1992).

Rule inapplicable to certiorari complaint filed under C.R.C.P. 106. Because invoking the relation-back doctrine of section (c) to rescue a certiorari complaint, filed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 106, would undermine the important public policies of expediting resolution of challenges to zoning and annexation proceedings and of removing municipal planning and individual properties from a cloud of uncertainty, when the original complaint fails to state a claim for relief, section (c) of this rule has no application to the proceedings or to any further pleadings which may be filed. Richter v. City of Greenwood Village, 40 Colo. App. 310, 577 P.2d 776 (1978).

Amended pleading states timely claim for judicial review because of relation back. Although a motion to amend is filed approximately one month after the 30-day period prescribed by § 24-4-106 (4) has expired, leave to amend should be granted under section (a) of this rule and because the amended pleading relates back to the date on which the original petition was filed, the pleading, as amended, states a timely claim for judicial review. Cloverleaf Kennel Club, Inc. v. Colo. Racing Comm'n, 620 P.2d 1051 (Colo. 1980).

Where the sole amendment required to bring petitioner's original petition within the State Administrative Procedure Act was the substitution of a reference to § 24-4-106 for the mistaken reference to C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4), and the pleading, if so amended, would state a claim for judicial review identical in all substantive respects to that stated in plaintiff's original petition, the amendment ''relates back'' to the original petition's filing date. People v. District Court, 200 Colo. 65, 612 P.2d 87 (1980).

An amendment which adds a party plaintiff must meet the requirements of section (c) in order for it to relate back to an earlier pleading. It is only if the addition or change in the identity of the plaintiff constitutes a mere change in the plaintiff's capacity or status, or if it consists of the substitution of a real party in interest to a previously asserted claim, that such an amendment may be deemed to relate back for limitation purposes. Ebrahimi v. E.F. Hutton & Co., Inc. 794 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1989).

Replacing a "John Doe" caption with a party's real name amounts to "changing a party" within the meaning of section (c), and thus will only relate back if all conditions specified in the rule have been satisfied. Marriott v. Goldstein, 662 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1983), overruled on other grounds, Dillingham v. Greeley Publishing Co., 701 P.2d 27 (Colo. 1985); Medina v. Schmutz Mfg. Co., 677 P.2d 953 (Colo. App. 1983), overruled on other grounds, Dillingham v. Greeley Publishing Co., 701 P.2d 27 (Colo. 1985).

By holding that replacing a ''John Doe'' caption with a party's real name amounts to changing a party, it is implicitly held that a ''John Doe'' pleading allowed by C.R.C.P. 10(a) does not operate to toll the statute of limitations against unidentified defendants. Watson v. Unipress, Inc., 733 F.2d 1386 (10th Cir. 1984).

Replacing "John Doe" caption with parties' real names does not relate back where the defendants were not named as parties within the period provided by law for commencing the action against them. Brown v. Teitelbaum, 830 P.2d 1081 (Colo. App. 1991).

Section (c) is meant to allow changes only where they result from an error such as misnomer or misidentification. Relation back is generally permitted in order to correct a misnomer where the proper party is already before the court and the effect is to merely correct the name under which the party is sued. Accordingly, a plaintiff's ignorance or misunderstanding about who is liable for her injury is not a ''mistake'' as to the defendant's identity. Lavarato v. Branney, 210 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2009).

A complaint in the district court seeking to challenge an administrative ruling concerning attorney fees entered subsequent to a decision on the merits must be filed within 30 days after the ruling and does not relate back if filed more than 30 days after such ruling. Allen Homesite Group v. Colo. Water Quality Control Comm'n, 19 P.3d 32 (Colo. App. 2000).

Notice within the period provided by law for commencing the action in section (c) includes the reasonable time allowed for service of process. Dillingham v. Greeley Publishing Co., 701 P.2d 27 (Colo. 1985); Defelice v. Johnson, 931 P.2d 548 (Colo. App. 1996).

Service of process must be had within a reasonable time. A gap of 116 days between the original filing and notice is reasonable because it falls within the appropriate time for service of process, thus relation back is appropriate. Garcia v. Schneider Energy Servs., Inc., 2012 CO 62, 287 P.3d 112.

Relation back not to circumvent statute of limitations. The doctrine of relation back in section (c) does not permit a party to maintain a claim for libel filed after the statute of limitations in § 13-80-102 has run. Even v. Longmont United Hosp. Ass'n, 629 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1981).

When a motion to amend is filed after the applicable statute of limitations had run, the petitioner may not claim the benefits of the relation-back provisions of section (c). Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints v. Tally, 654 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1982).

Amended complaint did not relate back to initial, timely complaint where new defendant did not have notice until four months after expiration of statute of limitations. O'Quinn v. Wedco Technology, 752 F. Supp. 984 (D. Colo. 1990).

Amended complaint did not relate back to initial complaint where the new defendants did not receive notice until after the expiration of the statute of limitations. Brown v. Teitelbaum, 830 P.2d 1081 (Colo. App. 1991); Currier v. Sutherland, 215 P.3d 1155 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 218 P.3d 709 (Colo. 2009).

Amended complaint did not relate back where there was no evidence that the new defendants, shooter's parents, had actual notice of the lawsuit before the end of the limitations period and court could not reasonably infer that son notified parents of the lawsuit prior to the end of the limitations period. Maldonado v. Pratt, 2016 COA 171, 409 P.3d 630.

Where plaintiff's first amended complaint was untimely, and the untimeliness was jurisdictional in nature, section (c) of this rule does not supply the necessary ''relation back'' of the amended complaint to the date on which the initial complaint was filed so as to make the amended complaint timely. Lorenz v. City of Littleton, 38 Colo. App. 16, 550 P.2d 884 (1976).

Filing of an amended complaint that merely reiterates a claim already stated in the original complaint cannot be used to alter or avoid the requirement of strict compliance with the seven-year adverse possession statute. The alleged separate and distinct claim raised in the amended complaint was supported by the factual claims raised in the original complaint, therefore the amended complaint related back to the original. Peters v. Smuggler-Durant Mining Corp., 930 P.2d 575 (Colo. 1997).

Omission of a party's name from a Colorado anti-discrimination act charging document should be considered under the relation-back doctrine in section (c). Craig v. Masterpiece Cakeshop, Inc., 2015 COA 115, 370 P.3d 272, rev'd on other grounds, __ U.S. __, 138 S. Ct. 1719, 201 L. Ed. 2d 35 (2018).

The administrative law judge did not err when he denied respondents' motion to dismiss because the three requirements for application of the relation-back doctrine were satisfied. Craig v. Masterpiece Cakeshop, Inc., 2015 COA 115, 370 P.3d 272, rev'd on other grounds, __ U.S. __, 138 S. Ct. 1719, 201 L. Ed. 2d 35 (2018).

Applied in Shepherd v. Wilhelm, 41 Colo. App. 403, 591 P.2d 1039 (1978); Best v. La Plata Planning Comm'n, 701 P.2d 91 (Colo. App. 1984); Wilson v. Goldman, 699 P.2d 420 (Colo. App. 1985); Maurer v. Young Life, 751 P.2d 653 (Colo. App. 1987).

V. SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS.

Annotator's note. Since section (c) of this rule is similar to § 80 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Facts occurring subsequent to the commencement of an action should be presented by supplemental pleadings and not by amendment to the original proceedings. Sylvester v. Jerome, 19 Colo. 128, 34 P. 760 (1893).

Matters occurring after the issues are made by the original pleadings cannot be considered or embraced in a decree unless brought into the case by supplemental pleadings. Fastenau v. Engel, 129 Colo. 440, 270 P.2d 1019 (1954).

Where leave was granted to file a supplemental petition and a petition was filed in which additional defendants were named, this so-called supplemental petition was partly an amendment to the original because it was not confined to facts which occurred after the action was commenced. Thomas v. Mahin, 76 Colo. 200, 230 P. 793 (1924).

There is no prejudice to the rights of defendant in allowing the allegation to be made by pleading styled an "amendment to the complaint", instead of denominating it a supplemental complaint, where the allegations are sufficient in substance. Macaluso v. Easley, 81 Colo. 50, 253 P. 397 (1927).

An objection that a claim for rent accruing after the commencement of the action could not have been brought into the case by amendment, but only by supplemental complaint, was held insufficient. Macaluso v. Easley, 81 Colo. 50, 253 P. 397 (1927).

Where defendant filed an amendment to an answer, but termed it a "supplemental answer", the court denied leave to file this so-called supplemental answer because a judgment on the pleadings, which had been entered, does not permit amendment of the pleadings. Kingsbury v. Vreeland, 58 Colo. 212, 144 P. 887 (1914); Lamon v. Zamp, 81 Colo. 90, 253 P. 1056 (1927); McLaughlin v. Niles Co., 88 Colo. 202, 294 P. 954 (1930).

One of the reasons for requiring a party to file a supplemental pleading to enable him to rely upon matters that have accrued since the filing of his previous pleading, is that he should enable his adversary to take issue as to such new matters. Macaluso v. Easley, 81 Colo. 50, 253 P. 397 (1927).

This rule provides reasonable notice to the opposite party. Harms v. Harms, 120 Colo. 212, 209 P.2d 552 (1949).

It follows that the opposite party must be afforded an opportunity to tender a pleading and thereby be prepared for the opportunity to meet the issue on the trial and not be surprised to his injury. Harms v. Harms, 120 Colo. 212, 209 P.2d 552 (1949).

Rule 16. Case Management and Trial Management

(a) Purpose and Scope. The purpose of this Rule 16 is to establish a uniform, court-supervised procedure involving case management which encourages professionalism and cooperation among counsel and parties to facilitate disclosure, discovery, pretrial and trial procedures. This Rule shall govern case management in all district court civil cases except as provided herein. This Rule shall not apply to domestic relations, juvenile, mental health, probate, water law, forcible entry and detainer, C.R.C.P. 106 and 120, and other similar expedited proceedings, unless otherwise ordered by the court or stipulated by the parties. This Rule 16 also shall not apply to civil actions that are governed by Simplified Procedure under C.R.C.P. 16.1, except as specifically provided in Rule 16.1. The disclosures and information required to be included in both the Case Management and Trial Management Orders interrelate to discovery authorized by these rules. The right of discovery shall not constitute grounds for failing to timely disclose information required by this Rule, nor shall this Rule constitute a ground for failing to timely disclose any information sought pursuant to discovery.

(b) Case Management Order. Not later than 42 days after the case is at issue and at least 7 days before the case management conference, the parties shall file, in editable format, a proposed Case Management Order consisting of the matters set forth in subsections (1)-(17) of this section and take the necessary actions to comply with those subsections. This proposed order, when approved by the court, shall constitute the Case Management Order and shall control the course of the action from the time the case is at issue until otherwise required pursuant to section (f) of this Rule or unless modified upon a showing of good cause. Use of the ''Proposed Case Management Order'' in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, form (JDF 622), shall comply with this section.

(1) At Issue Date. A case shall be deemed at issue when all parties have been served and all pleadings permitted by C.R.C.P. 7 have been filed or defaults or dismissals have been entered against all non-appearing parties, or at such other time as the court may direct. The proposed order shall state the at issue date.

(2) Responsible Attorney. The responsible attorney shall mean plaintiff's counsel, if the plaintiff is represented by counsel, or if not, the defense counsel who first enters an appearance in the case. The responsible attorney shall schedule conferences among the parties, and prepare and submit the Proposed Case Management Order and Trial Management Order. The proposed order shall identify the responsible attorney and provide that attorney's contact information.

(3) Meet and Confer. No later than 14 days after the case is at issue, lead counsel for each party and any party who is not represented by counsel shall confer with each other in person, by telephone, or video conference about:

(A) the nature and basis of the claims and defenses;

(B) the matters to be disclosed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(a)(1);

(C) the Proposed Case Management Order;

(D) mutually agreeable dates for the case management conference; and

(E) based thereon shall obtain from the court a date for the case management conference.

The proposed order shall state the date of and identify the attendees at any meet and confer conferences.

(4) Description of the Case. The proposed order shall provide a brief description of the case and identification of the issues to be tried. The description of the case and identification of the issues to be tried shall consist of not more than one page, double-spaced, per side.

(5) Pending Motions. The proposed order shall list all pending motions that have been filed and are unresolved. The court may decide any unresolved motion at the case management conference.

(6) Evaluation of Proportionality Factors. The proposed order shall provide a brief assessment of each party's position on the application of any factors to be considered in determining proportionality, including those factors identified in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(1).

(7) Initial Exploration of Prompt Settlement and Prospects for Settlement. The proposed order shall confirm that the possibility of settlement was discussed, describe the prospects for settlement and list proposed dates for any agreed upon or court-ordered mediation or other alternative dispute resolution.

(8) Proposed Deadlines for Amendments. The proposed order shall provide proposed deadlines for amending or supplementing pleadings and for joinder of additional parties, which unless otherwise provided by law, shall be not later than 105 days (15 weeks) after the case is at issue, and shall provide a deadline for identification of non-parties at fault, if any, pursuant to C.R.S. §13-21-111.5.

(9) Disclosures. The proposed order shall state the dates when disclosures under C.R.C.P. 26(a)(1) were made and exchanged and describe any objections to the adequacy of the initial disclosures.

(10) Computation and Discovery Relating to Damages. If any party asserts an inability to disclose fully the information on damages required by C.R.C.P. 26(a)(1)(C), the proposed order shall include a brief statement of the reasons for that party's inability as well as the expected timing of full disclosure and completion of discovery on damages.

(11) Discovery Limits and Schedule. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, discovery shall be limited to that allowed by C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2). Discovery may commence as provided in C.R.C.P. 26(d) upon service of the Case Management Order. The deadline for completion of all discovery, including discovery responses, shall be not later than 49 days before the trial date. The proposed order shall state any modifications to the amounts of discovery permitted in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2), including limitations of awardable costs, and the justification for such modifications consistent with the proportionality factors in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(1).

(12) Subjects for Expert Testimony. The proposed order shall identify the subject areas about which the parties anticipate offering expert testimony; whether that testimony would be from an expert defined in C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)(I) or in 26(a)(2)(B)(II); and, if more than one expert as defined in C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)(I) per subject per side is anticipated, the proposed order shall set forth good cause for such additional expert or experts consistent with the proportionality factors in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(1) and considering any differences among the positions of multiple parties on the same side as to experts.

(13) Proposed Deadlines for Expert Disclosures. If any party desires proposed deadlines for expert disclosures other than those in C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(C), the proposed order shall explain the justification for such modifications.

(14) Oral Discovery Motions. The proposed order shall state whether the court does or does not require discovery motions to be presented orally, without written motions or briefs, and may include such other provisions as the court deems appropriate.

(15) Electronically Stored Information. If the parties anticipate needing to discover a significant amount of electronically stored information, the parties shall discuss and include in the proposed order a brief statement concerning their agreements relating to search terms to be used, if any, and the production, continued preservation, and restoration of electronically stored information, including the form in which it is to be produced and an estimate of the attendant costs. If the parties are unable to agree, the proposed order shall include a brief statement of their positions.

(16) Trial Date and Estimated Length of Trial. The proposed order shall provide the parties' best estimate of the time required for probable completion of discovery and of the length of the trial. The court shall include the trial date in the Case Management Order, unless the court uses a different trial setting procedure.

(17) Other Appropriate Matters. The proposed order shall describe other matters any party wishes to bring to the court's attention at the case management conference.

(18) Entry of Case Management Order. The proposed order shall be signed by lead counsel for each party and by each party who is not represented by counsel. After the court's review and revision of any provision in the proposed order, it shall be entered as an order of the court and served on all parties.

(c) Pretrial Motions. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, pretrial motions, including motions in limine, shall be filed no later than 35 days before the trial date, except for motions pursuant to C.R.C.P. 56, which must be filed no later than 91 days (13 weeks) before the trial and except for motions challenging the admissibility of expert testimony pursuant to C.R.E. 702, which must be filed no later than 70 days (10 weeks) before the trial.

(d) Case Management Conference.

(1) The responsible attorney shall schedule the case management conference to be held no later than 49 days after the case is at issue, and shall provide notice of the conference to all parties.

(2) Lead counsel and unrepresented parties, if any, shall attend the case management conference in person, except as provided in subsection (d)(3) of this Rule. The court may permit the parties and/or counsel to attend the conference and any subsequent conferences by telephone. At that conference, the parties and counsel shall be prepared to discuss the proposed order, issues requiring resolution, and any special circumstances of the case.

(3) If all parties are represented by counsel, counsel may timely submit a proposed order and may jointly request the court to dispense with a case management conference. In the event that there appear to be no unusual issues, that counsel appear to be working together collegially, and that the information on the proposed order appears to be consistent with the best interests of all parties and is proportionate to the needs of the case, the court may dispense with the case management conference.

(e) Amendment of the Case Management Order. A party wishing to extend a deadline or otherwise amend the Case Management Order shall file a motion stating each proposed amendment and a specific showing of good cause for the timing and necessity for each modification sought including, where applicable, the grounds for good cause pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2)(F).

(f) Trial Management Order. No later than 28 days before the trial date, the responsible attorney shall file a proposed Trial Management order with the court. Prior to trial, a Trial Management Order shall be entered by the Court.

(1) Cases with Unrepresented Parties. If any unrepresented party will be participating in the trial, the responsible attorney shall promptly file a Notice to Set Trial Management conference after all disclosures have been served and discovery has been completed and the court shall conduct a Trial Management conference on the record and issue a Trial Management Order pursuant to subsection (f)(4) of this Rule. The responsible attorney shall submit a proposed Trial Management Order prior to the conference by filing the same with the Court and serving a copy thereof on all other parties.

(2) All Parties Represented by Counsel.

(A) If all parties are represented by counsel, lead counsel for each party shall confer with each other to develop jointly a proposed trial management order. Plaintiff's counsel shall be responsible for scheduling conferences among counsel and preparing and filing the proposed trial management order.

(B) Not later than 42 days before the trial date, each counsel shall exchange a draft of the lists of witnesses and exhibits required in subsections (f)(3)(VI)(A) and (B) of this Rule together with a copy of each documentary exhibit to be listed pursuant to subsection (f)(3)(VI)(B) of this Rule.

(C) To the extent possible, counsel shall agree to the contents of the proposed Trial Management Order. Any matter upon which all counsel cannot agree shall be designated as ''disputed'' in the proposed order and the proposed trial management order shall contain specific alternative provisions upon which agreement could not be reached. The proposed Trial Management Order shall be signed by lead counsel for each party and shall include a place for the court's approval.

(D) If there are any disputed matters or if any counsel believes that it would be helpful to conduct a Trial Management conference, the filing of the proposed Trial Management order shall be accompanied by a Notice to Set Trial Management conference, stating the reasons why such a conference is requested.

(3) Form of Trial Management Order. The proposed Trial Management Order shall contain the following matters under the following captions and in the following order:

I. STATEMENT OF CLAIMS AND DEFENSES. The parties shall set forth a brief description of the nature of the case and a summary identification of the claims and defenses remaining for trial. Any claims or defenses set forth in the pleadings which will not be at issue at trial shall be designated as ''withdrawn'' or ''resolved.''

II. STIPULATED FACTS. The parties shall set forth a plain, concise statement of all facts which the trier of fact shall accept as undisputed. If the matter is scheduled for a jury trial, a proposed jury instruction containing these undisputed facts shall be submitted as provided in section (g) of this Rule.

III. PRETRIAL MOTIONS. The parties shall list any pending motions.

IV. TRIAL BRIEFS. The parties shall indicate whether trial briefs will be filed, including a schedule for their filing. Trial briefs shall be filed no later than 14 days before the trial date.

V. ITEMIZATION OF DAMAGES OR OTHER RELIEF SOUGHT. Each claiming party shall set forth a detailed description of the categories of damages or other relief sought and a computation of any economic damages claimed.

VI. IDENTIFICATION OF WITNESSES AND EXHIBITS—JUROR NOTEBOOKS. Each party shall provide the following information:

(A) Witnesses. Each party shall attach to the proposed trial management order separate lists containing the name, address, telephone number and the anticipated length of each witness' testimony, including cross examination, (i) of any person whom the party ''will call'' and (ii) of any person whom the party ''may call'' as a witness at trial. When a party lists a witness as a ''will call'' witness, the party does not have to call the witness to testify, but must ensure that the witness will be available to testify at trial if called by any party without the necessity for any other party to subpoena the witness for the trial. For each expert witness, the list shall also indicate whether the opposing party accepts or challenges the qualifications of a witness to testify as an expert as to the opinions expressed. If there is a challenge, the list shall be accompanied by a resume setting forth the basis for the expertise of the challenged witness. Where appropriate, the court may order the parties to provide written notice to the other parties and to the court of the order in which the parties expect to present their witnesses.

(B) Exhibits. Each party shall attach to the proposed trial management order a list of exhibits including physical evidence which the party intends to introduce at trial. Unless stipulated by the parties, each list shall assign a number (for plaintiff or petitioner) or letter (for defendant or respondent) designation for each exhibit. Proposed excerpted or highlighted exhibits shall be attached. If any party objects to the authenticity of any exhibit as offered, such objection shall be noted on the list, together with the ground therefor. If any party stipulates to the admissibility of any exhibit, such stipulation shall be noted on the list. Records of regularly conducted activity to be offered pursuant to CRE 902(11) and (12) may be supported by use of Forms 37 and 38 in the Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Forms. On or before the trial date, a set of the documentary exhibits shall be provided to the court.

(C) Juror Notebooks. Counsel for each party shall confer about items to be included in juror notebooks as set forth in C.R.C.P. 47(t) and at the Trial Management conference or other date set by the Court make a joint submission to the Court of items to be included in the juror notebook. By agreement of the parties or in the discretion of the Court, important exhibits may be highlighted or excerpted and may be included in juror notebooks.

(D) Deposition and Other Preserved Testimony. If the preserved testimony of any witness is to be presented the proponent of the testimony shall provide the other parties with its designations of such testimony at least 28 days before the trial date. Any other party may provide all other parties with its designations and shall do so at least 14 days before the trial date. The proponent may provide reply designations and shall do so at least 7 days before the trial date. A copy of the preserved testimony to be presented at trial shall be submitted to the court and include the proponent's and opponent's anticipated designations of the pertinent portions of such testimony or a statement why designation is not feasible at least 3 days before the trial date. If any party wishes to object to the admissibility of the testimony or to any tendered question or answer therein, it shall be noted, setting forth the grounds therefor.

VII. TRIAL EFFICIENCIES AND OTHER MATTERS. If the anticipated length of the trial has changed, the parties shall so indicate. The parties shall also include any other matters which are appropriate under the circumstances of the case or directed by the court to be included in the proposed Trial Management Order. The parties shall confirm that they have considered ways in which the use of technology can simplify the case and make it more understandable. In all cases where a jury trial will be held, the parties shall confer regarding the amount of time requested for juror examination and provide their positions along with their reasons therefor.

(4) Approval of Trial Management Order. If a Notice to Set Trial Management Conference is filed or the Court determines that such a conference should be held, the Court shall set a trial management conference. The conference may be conducted by telephone. The court shall promptly enter the Trial Management Order.

(5) Effect of Trial Management Order. The Trial Management Order shall control the subsequent course of the trial. Modification to or divergence from the Trial Management Order, whether prior to or during trial, shall be permitted upon a demonstration that the modification or divergence could not with reasonable diligence have been anticipated. In the event of any ambiguity in the Trial Management Order, the Court shall interpret the Order in the manner which best advances the interests of justice.

(g) Jury Instructions and Verdict Forms. Counsel for the parties shall confer to develop jointly proposed jury instructions and verdict forms to which the parties agree. No later than 7 days prior to the date scheduled for commencement of the trial or such other time as the court shall direct, a set of the proposed jury instructions and verdict forms shall be filed with the courtroom clerk. The first party represented by counsel to demand a jury trial pursuant to C.R.C.P. 38 and who has not withdrawn such demand shall be responsible for filing the proposed jury instructions and verdict forms. If any jury instruction or verdict form is disputed, the party propounding the instruction or verdict form shall separately file with the courtroom clerk a set of the disputed jury instructions and verdict forms. Each instruction or verdict form shall have attached a brief statement of the legal authority on which the proposed instruction or verdict form is based. Compliance with this Rule shall not deprive parties of the right to tender additional instructions or verdict forms or withdraw proposed instructions or verdict forms at trial. All jury instructions and verdict forms submitted by the parties shall be in final form and reasonably complete. The court shall permit the use of photocopied instructions and verdict forms, without citations, in its submission to the jury.

History and Philosophy

[1] Effective differential case management has been a long-term goal of the Bench, Bar, and Public. Adoption by the Colorado Supreme Court of C.R.C.P. 121 and its practice standards in 1983; revised C.R.C.P. 16 in 1988 to require earlier disclosure of matters necessary for trial; and the Colorado Standards for Case Management—Trial Courts in 1989 were a continuing and evolving effort to achieve an orderly, fair and less expensive means of dispute resolution. Those rules and standards were an improvement over prior practice where there was no prescribed means of case management, but problems still remained. There were problems of discovery abuse, late or inadequate disclosure, lack of professionalism, slow case disposition, outrageous expense and failure to achieve an early settlement of those cases that ultimately settled.

[2] In the past several years, a recognition by the organized Bar of increasing unprofessional conduct by some attorneys led to further study of problems in our civil justice system and new approaches to resolve them. New Federal Rules of Civil Procedure were developed to require extensive early disclosure and to limit discovery. The Colorado Bar Association's Professionalism Committee made recommendations concerning improvements of Colorado's case management and discovery rules.

[3] After substantial input through surveys, seminars and Bench/Bar committees, the Colorado Supreme Court appointed a special Ad Hoc Committee to study and make recommendations concerning Colorado's Civil Rules pertaining to case management, disclosure/discovery and motions practice. Reforms of Rules 16, 26, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, 37, 51, 121 § 1-11, 121 § 1-12, 121 § 1-15, and 121 § 1-19 were developed by this Committee.

[4] The heart of the reform is a totally rewritten Rule 16 which sets forth a new system of case management. Revisions to Rules 26, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, and 37 are patterned after December 1, 1993, revisions to Federal Rules of the same number, but are not in all respects identical. Colorado Rules 16, 26, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, and 37 were developed to interrelate with each other to provide a differential case management/early disclosure/limited discovery system designed to resolve difficulties experienced with prior approaches. Changes to C.R.C.P. 121 §§ 1-11, 1-12, 1-15, and 1-19 are designed to interrelate with the case management/disclosure/discovery reform to improve motions practice. In developing these rules, the Committee paid particular attention to the 1993 revisions of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the work of the Colorado Bar Association regarding professionalism.

Operation

[5] New Rule 16 and revisions of Rules 26, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, 37, 51, and 121 §§ 1-11, 1-12, 1-15, and 1-19 are designed to accomplish early purposeful and reasonably economical management of cases by the parties with Court supervision. The system is based on communication, including required early disclosure of persons with knowledge and documents relevant to the case, which disclosure should lead in many cases to early evaluation and settlement efforts, and/or preparation of a workable Case Management Order. Lead attorneys for each party are to communicate with each other in the spirit of cooperation in the preparation of both the Case and Trial Management Orders. Court Case Management Conferences are available where necessary for any reasonable purpose. The Rules require a team effort with Court leadership to insure that only appropriate discovery is conducted and to carefully plan for and conduct an efficient and expeditious trial.

[6] Rules 16 and 26 should work well in most cases filed in Colorado District Courts. However, where a case is complex or requires special treatment, the Rules provide flexibility so that the parties and Court can alter the procedure. The importance of economy is encouraged and fostered in a number of ways, including authorized use of the telephone to conduct in-person attorney and Court conferences.

[7] The Committee acknowledges the greater length of the Rules comprising this reformed system. However, these Rules have been developed to describe and to eliminate ''hide-the-ball'' and ''hardball'' tactics under previous Disclosure Certificate and Discovery Rules. It is expected that trial judges will assertively lead the management of cases to ensure that justice is served. In the view of the Committee, abuses of the Rules to run up fees, feed egos, bludgeon opponents into submission, force unfair settlements, build cases for sanctions, or belittle others should not be tolerated.

[8] These Rules have been drafted to emphasize and foster professionalism and to deemphasize sanctions for non-compliance. Adequate enforcement provisions remain. It is expected that attorneys will strive diligently to represent their clients' best interests, but at the same time conduct themselves as officers of the Court in the spirit of the recently adopted Rules of Professional Conduct.

The purpose and scope of Rule 16 are as set forth in subsection (a). Unless otherwise ordered by the Court or stipulated by the parties, Rule 16 does not mandatorily apply to domestic relations, juvenile, mental health, probate, water law, forcible entry and detainer, Rule 120, or other expedited proceedings. Provisions of the Rule could be used, however, and Courts involved in those proceedings should consider their possible applicability to particular cases.

The ''Case Management Order'' is the central coordinating feature of the Rule 16 case management system. It comes at a relatively early but realistic time in the case. The Case Management Order governs the trial setting; contains or coordinates disclosure; limits discovery and establishes a discovery schedule; establishes the deadline for joinder of additional parties and amendment of pleadings; coordinates handling of pretrial motions; requires a statement concerning settlement; and allows opportunity for inclusion of other provisions necessary to the case.

[9] Lead counsel for each of the parties are required to confer about the nature and bases of their claims and defenses, discuss the matters to be disclosed and explore the possibilities of a prompt settlement or other resolution of the case. As part of the conferring process, lead counsel for each of the parties are required to cooperate in the development of the Case Management Order, which is then submitted to the Court for approval. If there is disagreement about any aspect of the proposed Case Management Order, or if some aspect of the case requires special treatment, the parties are entitled to an expeditious Case Management Conference. If any party is appearing pro se an automatic mandatory Case Management Conference is triggered.

[10] A time line is specified in C.R.C.P. 16(b) for the C.R.C.P. 26(a)(1) disclosures, conferring of counsel and submission of the proposed Case Management Order. The time line in section (b) is triggered by the ''at issue'' date, which is defined at the beginning of C.R.C.P. 16(b).

[11] Disclosure requirements of C.R.C.P. 26, including the duty to timely supplement and correct disclosures, together with sanction provisions of C.R.C.P. 37 for failure to make disclosure, are incorporated by reference. Because of mandatory disclosure, there should be substantially less need for discovery. Presumptive limitations on discovery are specified in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2). The limitations contained in C.R.C.P. 26 and Discovery Rules 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, and 36 are incorporated by reference and provision is made for discovery above presumptive limitations if, upon good cause shown (as defined in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2)), the particular case warrants it. The system established by C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1)(IV) requires the parties to set forth and obtain Court approval of a schedule of discovery for the case, which includes the timing and number of particular forms of discovery requests. The system established by C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1)(IV) also requires lead counsel for each of the parties to set forth the basis of and necessity for all such discovery and certify that they have advised their clients of the expenses and fees involved with each such item of discovery. The purpose of such discovery schedule and expense estimate is to bring about an advanced realization on the part of the attorneys and clients of the expense and effort involved in the schedule so that decisions can be made concerning propriety, feasibility, and possible alternatives (such as settlement or other means of obtaining the information). More stringent standards concerning the necessity of discovery contained in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2) are incorporated into C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1)(IV). A Court should not simply ''rubber-stamp'' a proposed discovery schedule even if agreed upon by counsel.

[12] A Court Case Management Conference will not be necessary in every case. It is anticipated that many cases will not require a Court Case Management Conference, but such conference is available should the parties or the Court find it necessary. Regardless of whether there is a Court Case Management Conference, there will always be the Case Management Order which, along with the later Trial Management Order, should effectively govern the course of the litigation through the trial.

The Trial Management Order is jointly developed by the parties and filed with the Court as a proposal no later than thirty days prior to the date scheduled for the trial (or at such other time as the Court directs). The Trial Management Order contains matters for trial (see specific enumeration of elements to be contained in the Trial Management Order). It should be noted that the Trial Management Order references the Case Management Order and, particularly with witnesses, exhibits, and experts, contemplates prior identification and disclosure concerning them. Except with permission of the Court based on a showing that the witness, exhibit, or expert could not have, with reasonable diligence, been anticipated, a witness, exhibit, or expert cannot be revealed for the first time in the Trial Management Order.

[13] As with the Case Management Order, Trial Management Order provisions of the Rule are designed to be flexible so as to fit the particular case. If the parties cannot agree on any aspect of the proposed Trial Management Order, a Court Trial Management Conference is triggered. The Court Trial Management Conference is mandatory if any party is appearing in the trial pro se.

[14] As with the Case Management Order procedure, many cases will not require a Court Trial Management Conference, but such a conference is available upon request and encouraged if there is any problem with the case that is not resolved and managed by the Trial Management Order.

[15] The Trial Management Order process will force the attorneys to make decisions on which claims or defenses should be dropped and identify legal issues that are truly contested. Both of those requirements should reduce the expenses associated with trial. In addition, the requirement that any party seeking damages define and itemize those damages in detail should facilitate preparation and trial of the case.

[16] Subsection (c)(IV), pertaining to designation of ''order of proof,'' is a new feature not contained in Federal or State Rules. To facilitate scheduling and save expense, the parties are required to specifically identify those witnesses they anticipate calling in the order to be called, indicating the anticipated length of their testimony, including cross-examination.

Provision is made in the C.R.C.P. 16 case management system for an orderly advanced exchange and filing of jury instructions and verdict forms. Many trial courts presently require exchange and submission of a set of agreed instructions during the trial. C.R.C.P. 16(d) now requires such exchange, conferring, and filing no later than three (3) days prior to the date scheduled for the commencement of the trial (or such other time as the Court otherwise directs).

[17] The previous substantive amendment to Rule 16(b) established presumptive discovery limits and procedures which caused filing of detailed Case Management Orders and appearing before a judge to become rare. While this reduced lawyers' time in preparing detailed orders, it also resulted in judges not being involved in pretrial case management.

[18] Among the key principles adopted by the Federal Advisory Committee on Rules of Civil Procedure, as well as the Civil Access Pilot Project (''CAPP''), is that cases move more efficiently if judges are involved directly and early in the process. (See also, ''Working Smarter, Not Harder: How Excellent Judges Manage Cases,'' at 7-20 (2014), available at http://www.actl.com).

[19] Particularly in conjunction with the principle that discovery should be in proportion to the genuine needs of the case, it was deemed important for judges, in addition to litigants, to be involved early in the pretrial process in deciding how much discovery was appropriate. Both judges and lawyers have noted that some lawyers have a financial incentive not to limit discovery. Perhaps more significant was the recognition that many lawyers engage in ''over discovery'' because of the fear (justifiable or not) that failing to engage in every conceivable means of discovery until a judge orders one to ''stop!'' could expose a trial lawyer to subsequent expensive malpractice litigation. These problems are greatly alleviated with the intervention of trial judges placing reasonable limitations on discovery and potentially excessive pretrial practices at the earliest meaningful stage of the case.

[20] CAPP required in-person initial case management conferences with the judge. These conferences followed submission of a report from the parties which included information relevant to the evaluation of proportionality as well as how the case should be handled. The analysis of CAPP reflects that this practice was widely liked by both lawyers and judges. It is desirable that there be an official order arising from the case management conference reflecting the court's input and which, importantly, provides enforcement power. Thus, Rule 16(b) has completely rewritten the rule to include requiring a joint report to the court in the form of a proposed Case Management Order. It can be approved or modified by the court to become the official order. It is to be filed with the court not later than 42 days after the case is at issue, but at least 7 days before the case management conference.

[21] The new rule lists the required contents of the proposed Case Management Order and also provides a form that can be downloaded for preparation of the proposed order. Although at first glance the new rule appears somewhat onerous, most of the information sought is relatively easy to include and should be discussed by opposing counsel or parties, in any event, at the outset of the case.

[22] The joint report/proposed Case Management Order must contain the following information, which is unchanged from former Rule 16(b)(1)-(3): the ''at issue'' date; contact information for the ''responsible attorney''; and a description of the ''meet and confer'' discussions. The joint report must also provide:

- a brief description of the case from each side, and of the issues to be tried (one page per side);
- a list of pending, unresolved motions;
- an evaluation of the proportionality factors from C.R.C.P. 26(b)(1);
- a confirmation that the parties discussed settlement and description of prospects for settlement;
- proposed deadlines for amending the pleadings;
- the dates when disclosures were made and any objections to those disclosures;
- an explanation of why, if applicable, full disclosure of damages has not been completed and when it will be;
- subjects for expert testimony with a limit of only one expert per side per subject unless good cause is established consistent with proportionality;
- acknowledgement that oral discovery motions may be required by the court;
- provision for electronic discovery when significant electronic discovery is anticipated;
- estimated time to complete discovery and length of trial so the court can set trial at the case management conference; and
- a catchall for other appropriate matters.

[23] The former provisions in Rule 16(c) related to Modified Case Management Orders are repealed as moot but are replaced with the deadlines for pretrial motions presently contained in Rule 16(b)(9).

[24] Rule 16(d) is rewritten to require personal or telephonic attendance at the case management conference by lead counsel. In anticipation that judges will not want (or need) to hold in person case management conferences in all cases, Rule 16(d)(3) allows the court to dispense with a case management conference if it is satisfied that the lawyers are working together well and the joint report contemplates appropriate and proportionate pretrial activity. However, the rule recommends that case management conferences always be held if one or more of the parties is self-represented. This gives the court the opportunity to try to keep the case and self-represented party focused and on track from the beginning.

Annotator's note. Some of the following annotations refer to cases decided under C.R.C.P. 16 as it existed prior to the 1994 repeal and readoption of that rule, effective January 1, 1995. Former C.R.C.P. 16 provided for pre-trial conferences and pre-trial orders rather than case management orders and trial management orders.

This rule is the authority under which trial courts promulgate local pre-trial rules and hold pre-trial conferences. Glisan v. Kurth, 153 Colo. 102, 384 P.2d 946 (1963).

The rule is not a mere technicality and compliance is mandatory. Danburg v. Realties, Inc., 677 P.2d 439 (Colo. App. 1984).

This rule provides that the court may direct the attorneys to appear before it for a conference to consider certain matters, and having done so, then the court shall make an order which recites the action taken at the conference, the amendments allowed to the pleadings, and the agreements made by the parties as to any of the matters considered, which limits the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admissions or agreement of counsel, and such order, when entered, controls the subsequent course of the action, unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice. Ferguson v. Hurford, 132 Colo. 507, 290 P.2d 229 (1955).

Effective use of the pre-trial conference can, and does, contribute much in meeting the problems of mounting congestion in the trial courts. Glisan v. Kurth, 153 Colo. 102, 384 P.2d 946 (1963).

To make pre-trial procedure effective, appellate interference with the trial court in this area must be kept at a minimum. Glisan v. Kurth, 153 Colo. 102, 384 P.2d 946 (1963).

In the application of the pre-trial rule, the court must be careful that devotion to the task does not lead it to deprive a litigant of his right to a trial. Glisan v. Kurth, 153 Colo. 102, 384 P.2d 946 (1963).

Civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. Based on §§ 16-8-115 to 16-8-117 and on the special nonadversary nature of a release inquiry, the participants in release proceedings do not have the broad right of discovery as provided in the rules of civil procedure. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Under C.R.C.P. 81(a), the procedure in release hearings under § 16-8-115 is so inconsistent and in conflict with the rules of civil procedure as to make civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Denial of a jury trial for failure to comply with section (d) was not an appropriate remedy and a right to a jury trial may only be lost for the reasons cited in C.R.C.P. 39(a). Wright v. Woller, 976 P.2d 902 (Colo. App. 1999).

''Lone Pine orders'', where a trial court orders plaintiffs to present prima facie evidence supporting their claims after initial disclosures, but before other discovery commences, or risk having their case dismissed, are prohibited under state law. While the supreme court revised this rule to create a ''differential case management/early disclosure/limited discovery system'', these revisions are not so substantial as to effectively overrule other supreme court holdings. Although portions of this rule and C.R.C.P. 26 may afford trial courts more discretion than they previously had, that discretion is not so broad as to allow courts to issue Lone Pine orders. And, notably, the state's version of this rule does not include the language relied upon by federal courts when issuing Lone Pine orders. Existing procedures under the Colorado rules of civil procedure sufficiently protect against meritless claims, and, therefore, a Lone Pine order was not required solely on that basis. Strudley v. Antero Res. Corp., 2013 COA 106, 350 P.3d 874, aff'd, 2015 CO 26, 347 P.3d 149.

II. DISCLOSURE.

Liberal policy regarding supplementing disclosure certificate. Just as C.R.C.P. 15 has been held to reflect the policy of liberally allowing amendments to pleadings, so too should a similar policy be followed with respect to supplementing disclosure certificates. Consolidated Hardwoods v. Alexander Const., 811 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1991).

Absent a showing of prejudice, a trial court abuses its discretion in not permitting amendment to a disclosure statement where the request is made more than 80 days prior to trial and relates to a matter that was previously known but was erroneously not included in the disclosure certificate. Consolidated Hardwoods v. Alexander Const., 811 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1991).

When a trial court's actions substantially tip the balance in an effort to avoid prejudice and delay and as a result unreasonably deny a party his or her day in court, the reviewing court must overturn the decision of the trial court. J.P. v. District Court, 873 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1994).

The district court abused its discretion in denying the petitioner's motions to endorse witnesses and freezing discovery. J.P. v. District Court, 873 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1994).

Trial court abused its discretion when, as a sanction for filing a disclosure certificate signed by plaintiff's former attorney's paralegal rather than the plaintiff herself, the court limited the witnesses the plaintiff could call to the defendant and herself. Defendants did not suffer any prejudice as a result of the improper signing of the certificate since the filing served its purpose of timely informing them of the evidence plaintiff intended to present at trial. Keith v. Valdez, 934 P.2d 897 (Colo. App. 1997).

If one party elicits opinions from another party's expert witness which are beyond the scope of the testimony described in the disclosure statement and are not of the kind which would impeach such testimony, the witness will be considered, for the purposes of the disclosure statement requirements, as the witness of the party eliciting the opinions. Freedman v. Kaiser Fund Health Plan, 849 P.2d 811 (Colo. App. 1992).

An objection on the grounds that a party has not adequately disclosed the basis for and summary of each expert witness opinion must be made within a reasonable time. Perkins v. Flatiron Structures Co. 849 P.2d 832 (Colo. App. 1992).

The purpose of the disclosure mandated by the rule is to provide parties with adequate time to prepare by obtaining relevant evidence. Williams v. Continental Airlines, Inc., 943 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1996).

Sanctions for failure to comply with disclosure rules rest in the discretion of the trial court and should not be disturbed absent an abuse of discretion. Such sanctions, which may include witness preclusion, should commensurate with the seriousness of the violation. Williams v. Continental Airlines, Inc., 943 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1996).

III. CASE MANAGEMENT ORDER.

This rule commands that a trial court shall make an order which recites the action taken at the pre-trial conference, and pursuant thereto, requires the trial court to direct the preparation of an order containing what transpired at the conference, and how the results of such conference shall control the subsequent course of the proceedings. Albright v. District Court, 150 Colo. 487, 375 P.2d 685 (1962).

The pre-trial order controls the subsequent course in the action, unless the court modifies the same at the trial to prevent manifest injustice. Ferguson v. Hurford, 132 Colo. 507, 290 P.2d 229 (1955); Harris Park Lakeshore, Inc. v. Church, 152 Colo. 278, 381 P.2d 459 (1963); Shira v. Wood, 164 Colo. 49, 432 P.2d 243 (1967); Greenlawn Sprinkler Corp. v. Forsberg, 170 Colo. 286, 461 P.2d 22 (1969); Pub. Serv. Co. v. Bd. of Water Works, 831 P.2d 470 (Colo. 1992).

Order must fully recite any action taken relative to amendments allowed to the pleadings. Gorin v. Arizona Columbine Ranch, Inc., 34 Colo. App. 405, 527 P.2d 899 (1974).

Case reinstated where a delay reduction order required both the filing of a proposed case management order and setting the case for trial within 30 days; held that the issuance of case management order then extended deadline for setting of trial another 30 days. Becker v. District Court for Arapahoe County, 969 P.2d 700 (Colo. 1998).

This rule contains no language limiting its application to the first trial only of an action; accordingly, it will govern second trial in absence of showing that orders and stipulation made at pre-trial conference will work manifest injustice. Harris Park Lakeshore, Inc. v. Church, 152 Colo. 278, 381 P.2d 459 (1963).

Disputed issues should not be resolved. In the absence of agreement or admissions by the parties, the trial court should not resolve disputed issues in a pre-trial order. Cunningham v. Spring Valley Estates, Inc., 31 Colo. App. 77, 501 P.2d 746 (1972), aff'd, 181 Colo. 435, 510 P.2d 336 (1973).

Assent is assumed, absent objection. It is assumed, in the absence of an objection, that a pre-trial order is made in cooperation with, and by assent of, the parties. Ferguson v. Hurford, 132 Colo. 507, 290 P.2d 229 (1955).

In the absence of an objection to the pre-trial order, or the part thereof with which counsel present do not agree, the order precludes any further challenge of the questions determined at the pre-trial conference. Ferguson v. Hurford, 132 Colo. 507, 290 P.2d 229 (1955); Shira v. Wood, 164 Colo. 49, 432 P.2d 243 (1967).

In the absence of an objection, all matters determined at the pre-trial conference have the force and effect of a stipulation of the parties as to the correctness thereof. Ferguson v. Hurford, 132 Colo. 507, 290 P.2d 229 (1955); Shira v. Wood, 164 Colo. 49, 432 P.2d 243 (1967); Greenlawn Sprinkler Corp. v. Forsberg, 170 Colo. 286, 461 P.2d 22 (1969).

Pretrial order, if not objected to, controls introduction of evidence at trial. Great W. Food Packers, Inc. v. Longmont Foods Co., 636 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1981).

When a party violates a court's pretrial order at trial, the opposing party must contemporaneously object to preserve the issue for appeal. People v. Dinapoli, 2015 COA 9, 369 P.3d 680.

The court errs in going beyond remaining issues. Where there is no objection to the pre-trial order, the court itself does not thereafter in any manner ''modify'' the pre-trial order, and the issue is never injected into the case on the basis of any expressed or implied consent of the parties, the trial court errs in going beyond the issues which according to the pre-trial order are the only issues remaining. Greenlawn Sprinkler Corp. v. Forsberg, 170 Colo. 286, 461 P.2d 22 (1969).

The court errs in giving instructions inconsistent with stipulations of pre-trial order. Where a pre-trial conference order, duly signed and to which no objection is made by either party, stipulates to a certain fact, which dispenses with the necessity of proof, it is error for the trial court to instruct the jury on a fact situation in a manner wholly inconsistent with the stipulation. Allison v. Trustee, 140 Colo. 392, 344 P.2d 1077 (1959).

In the absence of agreement between the parties affected, an issue cannot be resolved against one of them by the order made upon the pre-trial conference. Marsh v. Warren, 126 Colo. 298, 248 P.2d 825 (1952).

Where there is nothing in the pre-trial order which contemplates judgment against certain individuals thought to be jointly and severally liable with the defendant and their liability is never an issue in the case, there is no error in the trial court's failure to enter a joint judgment to include them. Lewis v. Martin, 30 Colo. App. 342, 492 P.2d 877 (1971).

Under this rule witnesses not listed at the pre-trial conference have been permitted to testify, and documents not listed in the pre-trial order have been admitted into evidence where such modifications of the pre-trial order were necessary to prevent injustice. Francisco v. Cascade Inv. Co., 29 Colo. 516, 486 P.2d 447 (1971).

Wide discretion is vested in trial court to allow nonlisted witnesses to testify. As purpose of such pre-trial disclosure of witnesses is to enable all parties to prepare for trial, wide discretion is vested in the trial court to determine whether a witness who has not been listed on the pre-trial order and whose name has not been disclosed to the opposing party may testify. In re Estate of Gardner, 31 Colo. App. 361, 505 P.2d 50 (1972); Wood v. Rowland, 41 Colo. App. 498, 592 P.2d 1332 (1978).

The failure to list surveillance films and the surveillant at the pre-trial stage, or to make them known prior to trial, does not mean that the defendants are conclusively prohibited from having the desired evidence admitted, but are simply taking a risk that the trial court in its discretion might refuse to modify the pre-trial order. Crist v. Goody, 31 Colo. App. 496, 507 P.2d 478 (1972).

Such a modification will be refused unless it is determined by the court to be necessary ''to prevent manifest injustice''. Crist v. Goody, 31 Colo. App. 496, 507 P.2d 478 (1972).

Where no actual prejudice would result by the admission of additional exhibits, the court should permit a modification of the list of exhibits in the pre-trial order and the admission of the exhibits in evidence in order to prevent manifest injustice. Francisco v. Cascade Inv. Co., 29 Colo. App. 516, 486 P.2d 447 (1971).

Where a document is not within the purview of the pre-trial order, but is in the possession of the defendant before the trial, it would be impossible to conclude that there is any prejudice incident to its reception in evidence. Landauer v. Juey, 143 Colo. 76, 352 P.2d 302 (1960).

A change in counsel is not sufficient in and of itself to justify vitiating a pre-trial conference order. Harris Park Lakeshore, Inc. v. Church, 152 Colo. 278, 381 P.2d 459 (1963).

A "local" rule of a district court relating to pre-trial procedure requiring counsel to approve a pre-trial order as to form and content is neither contrary to, in conflict with, nor in excess of authority granted by this rule. Albright v. District Court, 150 Colo. 487, 375 P.2d 685 (1962).

Provision of local rule does not deny a party due process. The provision of a ''local'' rule requiring attorneys to approve a pre-trial order as to substance as well as to form does not deny a party due process of law. Albright v. District Court, 150 Colo. 487, 375 P.2d 685 (1962).

The approval of the "substance" of a pre-trial order under a "local" rule of court is neither an approval by counsel of the legal effect of the order nor of the application of substantive law which may appear in said pre-trial order, but rather, is an approval only of a recital of what transpired at the pre-trial conference. Albright v. District Court, 150 Colo. 487, 375 P.2d 685 (1962).

Where the procedures prescribed in a "local" rule of a district court are in lieu of a pre-trial conference, the district court has the same power to modify a list of exhibits and other documents prepared pursuant to the local rule, as it has to modify a pre-trial order. Francisco v. Cascade Inv. Co., 29 Colo. App. 516, 486 P.2d 447 (1971).

The provision of a "local" rule does not preclude review by writ of error of matters duly objected to or reserved matters ruled upon a pre-trial conference. Albright v. District Court, 150 Colo. 487, 375 P.2d 685 (1962).

Trial court did not err in basing its damages award upon a second stipulation between the parties as to the amount of monthly rental loss even though the amount conflicted with amount specified in trial management order where stipulation entered into after entry of order. Razi v. Schmitt, 36 P.3d 102 (Colo. App. 2001).

Applied in Brown v. Hollywood Bar and Cafe, 942 P.2d 1363 (Colo. App. 1997).

IV. TRIAL MANAGEMENT ORDER.

Failure to include a claim for attorney fees in the trial management order is not a waiver of the claim. Attorney fees are neither costs nor damages, but a hybrid of each. Roberts v. Adams, 47 P.3d 690 (Colo. App. 2001).

A party is not required to call each witness on its witness list. Sovde v. Scott, 2017 COA 90, 410 P.3d 778.

Trial court did not abuse its discretion when it permitted defendants to withdraw their expert witnesses. Defendants did not have an obligation to make expert witnesses available at trial to testify because defendants had designated them as ''may call'' witnesses, not ''will call'' witnesses. Sovde v. Scott, 2017 COA 90, 410 P.3d 778.

Court applies a balancing test to determine whether a party may call opposing party's withdrawn expert. There is a presumption that a party may not call opposing party's withdrawn expert witness unless that party timely endorses the opposing party's expert. The balancing test weighs whether the expert's testimony would be cumulative; whether exclusion would result in unfair prejudice; and whether the opposing party failed to endorse its own expert. Sovde v. Scott, 2017 COA 90, 410 P.3d 778.

Rule 16.1. Simplified Procedure for Civil Actions

(a) Purpose of Simplified Procedure. The purpose of this rule, which establishes Simplified Procedure, is to provide maximum access to the district courts in civil actions; to enhance the provision of just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of civil actions; to allow earlier trials; and to limit discovery and its attendant expense.

(b) Actions Subject to Simplified Procedure. Simplified Procedure applies to all civil actions other than:

(1) civil actions that are class actions, domestic relations, juvenile, mental health, probate, water law, forcible entry and detainer, C.R.C.P. 106 and 120, or other similar expedited proceedings, unless otherwise stipulated by the parties; or

(2) civil actions in which any one party seeks monetary judgment from any other party of more than $100,000, exclusive of reasonable allowable attorney fees, interest and costs, as shown by a statement on the Civil Cover Sheet by the party's attorney or, if unrepresented, by the party, that ''In compliance with C.R.C.P. 11, based upon information reasonably available to me at this time, I certify that the value of this party's claims against one of the other parties is reasonably believed to exceed $100,000.''

(c) Civil Cover Sheet. Each pleading containing an initial claim for relief in a civil action, other than class actions, domestic relations, juvenile, mental health, probate, water law, forcible entry and detainer, C.R.C.P. 106 and 120 shall be accompanied at the time of filing by a completed Civil Cover Sheet in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 1.2 (JDF 601). Failure to file the Civil Cover Sheet shall not be considered a jurisdictional defect in the pleading but may result in a clerk's show cause order requiring its filing.

(d) Motion for Exclusion from Simplified Procedure. Simplified Procedure shall apply unless, no later than 42 days after the case is at issue as defined in C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1), any party files a motion, signed by both the party and its counsel, if any, establishing good cause to exclude the case from the application of Simplified Procedure.

(1) Good cause shall be established and the motion shall be granted if a defending party files a statement by its attorney or, if unrepresented, by the party, that ''In compliance with C.R.C.P. 11, based upon information reasonably available to me at this time, I certify that the value of this party's claims against one of the other parties is reasonably believed to exceed $100,000'' or

(2) The trial court, in its discretion, may determine other good cause for exclusion, considering factors such as the complexity of the case, the importance of the issues at stake, the parties' relative access to relevant information, the parties' resources, the importance of discovery in resolving the issues, and whether the burden or expense of proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit.

(e) Election for Inclusion Under this Rule. In actions excluded from Simplified Procedure by subsection (b)(2), within 42 days after the case is at issue, as defined in C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1), the parties may file a stipulation to be governed by this Rule.

(f) Case Management Orders. In actions subject to Simplified Procedure, the case management order requirements of C.R.C.P. 16(b)(2), (3) and (7) shall apply, except that preparing and filing a Proposed Case Management Order is not required.

(g) Trial Setting. No later than 42 days after the case is at issue, the responsible attorney shall set the case for trial pursuant to C.R.C.P. 121, section 1-6, unless otherwise ordered by the court.

(h) Certificate of Compliance. No later than 49 days after the case is at issue, the responsible attorney shall file a Certificate of Compliance stating that the parties have complied with all the requirements of sections (f), (g) and (k)(1) of this Rule or, if the parties have not complied with each requirement, shall identify the requirements which have not been fulfilled and set forth any reasons for the failure to comply.

(i) Expedited Trials. Trial settings, motions and trials in actions subject to Simplified Procedure should be given early trial settings, hearings on motions and trials, if possible.

(j) Case Management Conference. If any party believes that it would be helpful to conduct a case management conference, a notice to set a case management conference shall be filed stating the reasons why such a conference is requested. If any party is unrepresented or if the court determines that such a conference should be held, the court shall set a case management conference. The conference may be conducted by telephone.

(k) Simplified Procedure. Cases subject to Simplified Procedure shall not be subject to C.R.C.P. 16, 26-27, 31, 33 and 36, unless otherwise specifically provided in this Rule, and shall be subject to the following requirements:

(1) Required Disclosures.

(A) Disclosures in All Cases. Each party shall make disclosures pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(a)(1), 26(a)(4), 26(b)(5), 26(c), 26(e) and 26(g) no later than 28 days after the case is at issue as defined in C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1). In addition to the requirements of C.R.C.P. 26(g), the disclosing party shall sign all disclosures under oath.

(B) Additional Disclosures in Certain Actions. Even if not otherwise required under subsection (A), matters to be disclosed pursuant to this Rule shall also include, but are not limited to, the following:

(i) Personal Injury Actions. In actions claiming damages for personal or emotional injuries, the claimant shall disclose the names and addresses of all doctors, hospitals, clinics, pharmacies and other health care providers utilized by the claimant within five years prior to the date of injury who or which provided services which are related to the injuries and damages claimed, and shall produce all records from those providers or written waivers allowing the opposing party to obtain those records, subject to appropriate protective provisions obtained pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(c). The claimant shall also produce transcripts or tapes of recorded statements, documents, photographs, and video and other recorded images that address the facts of the case or the injuries sustained. The defending party shall disclose transcripts or tapes of recorded statements, any insurance company claims memos or documents, photographs, and video and other recorded images that address the facts of the case, the injuries sustained, or affirmative defenses. A party need not produce those specific records for which the party, after consultation pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(c), timely moves for a protective order from the court.

(ii) Employment Actions. In actions seeking damages for loss of employment, the claimant shall disclose the names and addresses of all persons by whom the claimant has been employed for the ten years prior to the date of disclosure, and shall produce all documents which reflect or reference the claimant's efforts to find employment since the claimant's departure from the defending party, and written waivers allowing the defending party to obtain the claimant's personnel files and payment histories from each employer, except with respect to those records for which the claimant, after consultation pursuant to C.R.C.P 26(c), timely moves for a protective order from the court. The defending party shall produce the claimant's personnel file and applicable personnel policies and employee handbooks.

(C) Document Disclosure. Documents and other evidentiary materials disclosed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 16.1(k)(1)(B) and 26(a)(1) shall be made immediately available for inspection and copying to the extent not privileged or protected from disclosure.

(2) Disclosure of Expert Witnesses. The provisions of C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(A) and (B), 26(a)(4), 26(b)(4), 26(b)(5), 26(c), 26(e) and 26(g) shall apply to disclosure of expert witnesses. Written disclosures of experts shall be served by parties asserting claims 91 days (13 weeks) before trial; by parties defending against claims 63 days (9 weeks) before trial; and parties asserting claims shall serve written disclosures for any rebuttal experts 49 days before trial. The parties shall be limited to one expert witness per side retained pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)(I), unless the trial court authorizes more for good cause shown.

(3) Mandatory Disclosure of Trial Testimony. Each party shall serve written disclosure statements identifying the name, address, telephone number, and a detailed statement of the expected testimony for each witness the party intends to call at trial whose deposition has not been taken, and for whom expert reports pursuant to subparagraph (k)(2) of this Rule have not been provided. For adverse parties or hostile witnesses a party intends to call at trial, written disclosure of the expected subject matters of the witness' testimony, rather than a detailed statement of the expected testimony, shall be sufficient. Written disclosure shall be served by parties asserting claims 91 days (13 weeks) before trial; by parties defending against claims 63 days (9 weeks) before trial; and parties asserting claims shall serve written disclosures for any rebuttal witnesses 49 days before trial.

(4) Permitted Discovery. The following discovery is permitted, to the extent allowed by C.R.C.P. 26(b)(1):

(A) Each party may take a combined total of not more than six hours of depositions noticed by the party;

(B) Not more than five requests for production of documents may be served by each party; and

(C) The parties may request discovery pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34(a)(2) (inspection of property) and C.R.C.P. 35 (medical examinations).

(5) Depositions for Obtaining Documents and for Trial. In addition to depositions allowed under subsection (k)(4)(A) of this Rule:

(A) Depositions may be taken for the sole purpose of obtaining and authenticating documents from a non-party; and

(B) A party who intends to offer the testimony of an expert or other witness may, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 30(b)(1)-(4) and (7), take the deposition of that witness for the purpose of preserving the witness' testimony for use at trial without being subject to the six-hour limit on depositions in subsection (k)(4)(A) of this Rule. Unless authorized by the court or stipulated to by the parties, such a deposition shall be taken at least 21 days before trial. In that event, any party may offer admissible portions of the witness' deposition, including any cross-examination during the deposition, without a showing of the witness' unavailability. Any witness who has been so deposed may not be offered as a witness to present live testimony at trial by the party taking the preservation deposition.

(6) Trial Exhibits. All exhibits to be used at trial which are in the possession, custody or control of the parties shall be identified and exchanged by the parties at least 35 days before trial. Authenticity of all identified and exchanged exhibits shall be deemed admitted unless objected to in writing within 14 days after receipt of the exhibits. Documents in the possession, custody and control of third persons that have not been obtained by the identifying party pursuant to document deposition or otherwise, to the extent possible, shall be identified 35 days before trial and objections to the authenticity of those documents may be made at any time prior to their admission into evidence.

(7) Limitations on Witnesses and Exhibits at Trial. In addition to the sanctions under C.R.C.P. 37(c), witnesses and expert witnesses whose depositions have not been taken shall be limited to testifying on direct examination about matters disclosed in reasonable detail in the written disclosures, provided, however, that adverse parties and hostile witnesses shall be limited to testifying on direct examination to the subject matters disclosed pursuant to subparagraph (k)(3) of this Rule. However, a party may call witnesses for whom written disclosures were not previously made for the purpose of authenticating exhibits if the opposing party made a timely objection to the authenticity of such exhibits specifying the factual issues concerning the authenticity of the exhibits.

(8) Juror Notebooks and Jury Instructions. Counsel for each party shall confer about items to be included in juror notebooks as set forth in C.R.C.P. 47(t). At the beginning of trial or at such other date set by the court, the parties shall make a joint submission to the court of items to be included in the juror notebook. Jury instructions and verdict forms shall be prepared pursuant to C.R.C.P. 16(g).

(I) Changed Circumstances. In a case under Simplified Procedure, any time prior to trial, upon a specific showing of substantially changed circumstances sufficient to render the application of Simplified Procedure unfair and a showing of good cause for the timing of the motion to terminate, the court shall terminate application of Simplified Procedure and enter such orders as are appropriate under the circumstances. Except in cases under subsection (e) of this Rule, if, more than 42 days after the case is at issue, any party discloses damages against another party in excess of $100,000 - including actual damages, penalties and punitive damages, but excluding allowable attorney fees, interest and costs - that defending party may move to have the case removed from Simplified Procedure and the motion shall be granted unless the claiming party stipulates to a limitation of damages against the defending party, excluding allowable attorney fees, interest and costs, of $100,000. The stipulation must be signed by the claiming party and, if the claiming party is represented, by the claiming party's attorney.

[1] Rule 16.1, which established Simplified Procedure, took effect in 2004 to enhance the application of Rule 1's admonition that the civil rules be interpreted to provide just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of cases and to increase access to the courts and justice system, particularly for cases seeking damages of less than $100,000. As originally established, the application of Simplified Procedure was completely voluntary and parties could opt out without stating any reason or justification. A substantial majority of cases opted out of Simplified Procedure, minimizing its ability to advance its important justification and goals. However, lawyers and judges who have used Simplified Procedure strongly approve of it. See Gerety, ''Simplified Pretrial Procedure in the Real World Under C.R.C.P. 16.1'', 40 The Colorado Lawyer 23, 25 (April 2011).

[2] As a result, several significant revisions have been made to Rule 16.1. First, with the exception of several unique forms of civil actions, Simplified Procedure applies presumptively to all civil lawsuits.

[3] Excluded from Simplified Procedure are cases seeking damages from any single defending party of at least $100,000 (not including reasonable allowable attorney fees, interest and costs). This exclusion can be met in the mandated Civil Cover Sheet to be filed in all applicable civil cases if the attorney or unrepresented party executes a certification in the Cover Sheet as set forth in Rule 16.1(b)(2). This certification allows a party or the party's attorney to reasonably estimate the value of the case, but always subject to the requirements of Rule 11.

[4] Cases can also be exempted after the case is in progress if one of the parties discovers that the claimant's damages may exceed $100,000 and requests transfer of the case out of Simplified Procedure.

[5] Trial courts may exclude cases from Rule 16.1 even though the claims do not seek money damages reaching the $100,000 threshold after consideration of the factors contained in Rule 16.1(d)(2). Thus, cases with small or even no monetary damages that challenge the constitutionality of laws or procedures, seek declaratory judgments or injunctions, or raise other important and complex legal issues may be excluded from Simplified Procedure.

[6] Another important change in Simplified Procedure is that the previous cap on damage awards of $100,000 in Simplified Procedure cases has been removed.

[7] Simplified Procedure now requires disclosures of persons, documents, damages and insurance under Rule 26 and disclosure of proposed testimony from witnesses and experts. It also allows up to 6 hours of depositions per party and, if needed, additional preservation depositions; up to five requests for production of documents; inspection of property and things; and relevant medical examinations.

[8] Because of the limited discovery, it is particularly important to the just resolution of cases under Simplified Procedure, that parties honor the requirements and spirit of full disclosure. Parties should expect courts to enforce disclosure requirements and impose sanctions for the failure to comply with the mandate to provide full disclosures.

Rule 16.2. Court Facilitated Management of Domestic Relations Cases and General Provisions Governing Duty of Disclosure

(a) Purpose and Scope. Family members stand in a special relationship to one another and to the court system. It is the purpose of Rule 16.2 to provide a uniform procedure for resolution of all issues in domestic relations cases that reduces the negative impact of adversarial litigation wherever possible. To that end, this Rule contemplates management and facilitation of the case by the court, with the disclosure requirements, discovery and hearings tailored to the needs of the case. This Rule shall govern case management in all district court actions under Articles 10, 11 and 13 of Title 14 of the Colorado Revised Statutes, including post decree matters. The Child Support Enforcement Unit (CSEU) shall be exempted under this Rule unless the CSEU enters an appearance in an ongoing case. Upon the motion of any party or the court's own motion, the court may order that this Rule shall govern juvenile, paternity or probate cases involving allocation of parental responsibilities (decision-making and parenting time), child support and related matters. Any notice or service of process referenced in this Rule shall be governed by the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

(b) Active Case Management. The court shall provide active case management from filing to resolution or hearing on all pending issues. The parties, counsel and the court shall evaluate each case at all stages to determine the scheduling of that individual case, as well as the resources, disclosures/discovery, and experts necessary to prepare the case for resolution or hearing. The intent of this Rule is to provide the parties with a just, timely and cost effective process. The court shall consider the needs of each case and may modify its Standard Case Management Order accordingly. Each judicial district may adopt a Standard Case Management Order that is consistent with this Rule and takes into account the specific needs and resources of the judicial district.

(c) Scheduling and Case Management for New Filings.

(1) Initial status conferences/Stipulated Case Management Plans.

(A) Petitioner shall be responsible for scheduling the initial status conference and shall provide notice of the conference to all parties. Each judicial district shall establish a procedure for setting the initial status conference. Scheduling of the initial status conference shall not be delayed in order to accomplish service.

(B) All parties and counsel, if any, shall attend the initial status conference, except as provided in subsection (c)(1)(C) or (c)(1)(D). At that conference, the parties and counsel shall be prepared to discuss the issues requiring resolution and any special circumstances of the case. The court may permit the parties and/or counsel to attend the initial conference and any subsequent conferences by telephone.

(C) If both parties are represented by counsel, counsel may submit a Stipulated Case Management Plan signed by counsel and the parties. Counsel shall also exchange Mandatory Disclosures and file a Certificate of Compliance. The filing of such a plan, the Mandatory Disclosures and Certificate of Compliance shall exempt the parties and counsel from attendance at the initial status conference. The court shall retain discretion to require a status conference after review of the Stipulated Case Management Plan.

(D) Parties who file an affidavit for entry of decree without appearance with all required documents before the initial status conference shall be excused from that conference.

(E) The initial status conference shall take place, or the Stipulated Case Management Plan shall be filed with the court, as soon as practicable but no later than 42 days from the filing of the petition.

(F) At the initial status conference, the court shall set the date for the next court appearance. The court may direct one of the parties to send written notice for the next court appearance or may dispense with written notice.

(2) Status conference procedures.

(A) At each conference the parties shall be prepared to discuss what needs to be done and determine a timeline for completion. The parties shall confer in advance on any unresolved issues.

(B) The conferences shall be informal.

(C) Family Court Facilitators may conduct conferences. Family Court Facilitators shall not enter orders but may confirm the agreements of the parties in writing. Agreements which the parties wish to have entered as orders shall be submitted to the judge or magistrate for approval.

(D) The judge or magistrate may enter interim orders at any status conference either upon the stipulation of the parties or to address emergency circumstances.

(E) A record of any part of the proceedings set forth in this section shall be made if requested by a party or by order of the court.

(F) The court shall either enter minute orders, direct counsel to prepare a written order, or place any agreements or orders on the record.

(3) Emergency matters/evidentiary hearings/temporary orders.

(A) Emergency matters may be brought to the attention of the clerk or the Family Court Facilitator for presentation to the court. Issues related to children shall be given priority on the court's calendar.

(B) At the request of either party or on its own motion, the court shall conduct an evidentiary hearing, subject to the Colorado Rules of Evidence, to resolve disputed questions of fact or law. The parties shall be given notice of any evidentiary hearing. Only a judge or magistrate may determine disputed questions of fact or law or enter orders.

(C) Hearings on temporary orders shall be held as soon as possible. The parties shall certify on the record at the time of the temporary orders hearing that they have conferred and attempted in good faith to resolve temporary orders issues. If the parties do not comply with this requirement, the court may vacate the hearing unless an emergency exists that requires immediate court attention.

(4) Motions.

(A) Motions related to the jurisdiction of the court, change of venue, service and consolidation, protection orders, contempt, motions to amend the petition or response, withdrawal or substitution of counsel, motions to seal the court file or limit access to the court file, motions in limine related to evidentiary hearings, motions for review of an order by a magistrate, and post decree motions may be filed with the court at any time.

(B) All other motions shall only be filed and scheduled as determined at a status conference or in an emergency upon order of court.

(d) Scheduling and Case Management for post-decree/modification matters. Within 49 days of the date a post decree motion or motion to modify is filed, the court shall review the matter and determine whether the case will be scheduled and resolved under the provisions of (c) or will be handled on the pleadings or otherwise.

(1) Parties to domestic relations cases owe each other and the court a duty of full and honest disclosure of all facts that materially affect their rights and interests and those of the children involved in the case. The court requires that, in the discharge of this duty, a party must affirmatively disclose all information that is material to the resolution of the case without awaiting inquiry from the other party. This disclosure shall be conducted in accord with the duty of candor owing among those whose domestic issues are to be resolved under this Rule 16.2.

(2) A party shall, without a formal discovery request, provide the Mandatory Disclosures, as set forth in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 35.1, C.R.C.P., and shall provide a completed Sworn Financial Statement and (if applicable) Supporting Schedules as set forth in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 35.2 and Form 35.3, C.R.C.P, to the other party within 42 days after service of a petition or a post decree motion involving financial issues. The parties shall exchange the required Mandatory Disclosures, the Sworn Financial Statement and (if applicable) Supporting Schedules by the time of the initial status conference to the extent reasonably possible.

(3) A party shall, without a formal discovery request, also provide a list of expert and lay witnesses whom the party intends to call at a contested hearing or final orders. This disclosure shall include the address, phone number and a brief description of the testimony of each witness. This disclosure shall be made no later than 63 days (9 weeks) prior to the date of the contested hearing or final orders, unless the time for such disclosure is modified by the court.

Unless otherwise stipulated or ordered by the court and subject to the provisions of subsection (g) of this Rule, the disclosure of expert testimony shall be governed by the provisions of C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B). The time for the disclosure of expert or lay witnesses whom a party intends to call at a temporary orders hearing or other emergency hearing shall be determined by the court.

(4) A party is under a continuing duty to supplement or amend any disclosure in a timely manner. This duty shall be governed by the provisions of C.R.C.P. 26(e).

(5) If a party does not timely provide the Mandatory Disclosure, the court may impose sanctions pursuant to subsection (j) of this Rule.

(6) The Sworn Financial Statement, Supporting Schedules (if applicable) and child support worksheets shall be filed with the court. Other mandatory disclosure documents shall not be filed with the court.

(7) A Certificate of Compliance shall accompany the Mandatory Disclosures and shall be filed with the court. A party's signature on the Certificate constitutes certification that to the best of the signer's knowledge, information, and belief, formed after a reasonable inquiry, the Mandatory Disclosure is complete and correct as of the time it is made, except as noted with particularity in the Certificate of Compliance.

(8) Signing of all disclosures, discovery requests, responses and objections shall be governed by C.R.C.P. 26(g).

(9) A Court Authorization For Financial Disclosure shall be issued at the initial status conference if requested, or may be executed by those parties who submit a Stipulated Case Management Plan pursuant to (c)(1)(C), identifying the persons authorized to receive such information.

(10) As set forth in this section, it is the duty of parties to an action for decree of dissolution of marriage, legal separation, or invalidity of marriage, to provide full disclosure of all material assets and liabilities. If the disclosure contains misstatements or omissions, the court shall retain jurisdiction after the entry of a final decree or judgment for a period of 5 years to allocate material assets or liabilities, the omission or non-disclosure of which materially affects the division of assets and liabilities. The provisions of C.R.C.P. 60 shall not bar a motion by either party to allocate such assets or liabilities pursuant to this paragraph. This paragraph shall not limit other remedies that may be available to a party by law.

(f) Discovery. Discovery shall be subject to active case management by the court consistent with this Rule.

(1) Depositions of parties are permitted.

(2) Depositions of non-parties upon oral or written examination for the purpose of obtaining or authenticating documents not accessible to a party are permitted.

(3) After an initial status conference or as agreed to in a Stipulated Case Management Plan filed pursuant to (c)(1)(E), a party may serve on each adverse party any of the pattern interrogatories and requests for production of documents contained in the Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A Form 35.4 and Form 35.5, C.R.C.P. A party may also serve on each adverse party 10 additional written interrogatories and 10 additional requests for production of documents, each of which shall consist of a single question or request.

(4) The parties shall not undertake additional formal discovery except as authorized by the court or as agreed in a Stipulated Case Management Plan filed pursuant to (c)(1)(C). The court shall grant all reasonable requests for additional discovery for good cause as defined in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2)(F). Unless otherwise governed by the provisions of this Rule additional discovery shall be governed by C.R.C.P. Rules 26 through 37 and C.R.C.P. 121 section 1-12. Methods to discover additional matters shall be governed by C.R.C.P. 26(a)(5). Additional discovery for trial preparation relating to documents and tangible things shall be governed by C.R.C.P. 26(b)(3).

(5) All discovery shall be initiated so as to be completed not later than 28 days before hearing, except that the court shall extend the time upon good cause shown or to prevent manifest injustice.

(6) Claims of privilege or protection of trial preparation materials shall be governed by C.R.C.P. 26(b)(5).

(7) Protective orders sought by a party relating to discovery shall be governed by C.R.C.P. 26(c).

(g) Use of Experts. If the matter before the court requires the use of an expert or more than one expert, the parties shall attempt to select one expert per issue. If they are unable to agree, the court shall act in accordance with CRE 706, or other applicable rule or statute.

(1) Expert reports shall be filed with the court only if required by the applicable rule or statute.

(2) If the court appoints or the parties jointly select an expert, then the following shall apply:

(A) Compensation for any expert shall be governed by the provisions of CRE 706.

(B) The expert shall communicate with and submit a draft report to each party in a timely manner or within the period of time set by the court. The parties may confer with the expert to comment on and make objections to the draft report before a final report is submitted.

(C) The court shall receive the expert reports into evidence without further foundation, unless a party notes an objection in the Trial Management Certificate. However, this shall not preclude either side from calling an expert for cross-examination, and voir dire on qualifications. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, a reasonable witness fee associated with the expert's court appearance shall be tendered before the hearing by the party disputing the expert's findings.

(3) Nothing in this rule limits the right of a party to retain a qualified expert at that party's expense, subject to judicial allocation if appropriate. The expert shall consider the report and documents or information used by the court appointed or jointly selected expert and any other documents provided by a party, and may testify at a hearing. Any additional documents or information provided to the expert shall be provided to the court appointed or jointly selected expert by the time the expert's report is submitted.

(4) The parties have a duty to cooperate with and supply documents and other information requested by any expert. The parties also have a duty to supplement or correct information in the expert's report or summary.

(5) Unless otherwise ordered by the court, expert reports shall be provided to the parties 56 days (8 weeks) prior to hearing. Rebuttal reports shall be provided 21 days thereafter. If an initial report is served early, the rebuttal report shall not be required sooner than 35 days (5 weeks) before the hearing.

(6) Unless otherwise ordered by the court, parental responsibility evaluations and special advocate reports shall be provided to the parties pursuant to the applicable statute.

(7) The court shall not give presumptive weight to the report of a court appointed or jointly selected expert when such report is disputed by one or both parties.

(8) A party may depose any person who has been identified as an expert whose opinions may be presented at trial. Such trial preparation relating to experts shall be governed by C.R.C.P. 26(b)(4).

(h) Trial Management Certificates.

(1) If both parties are not represented by counsel, then each party shall file with the court a brief statement identifying the disputed issues and that party's witnesses and exhibits including updated Sworn Financial Statements and (if applicable) Supporting Schedules, together with copies thereof, mailed to the opposing party at least 7 days prior to the hearing date or at such other time as ordered by the court.

(2) If at least one party is represented by counsel, the parties shall file a joint Trial Management Certificate 7 days prior to the hearing date or at such other time as ordered by the court. Petitioner's counsel (or respondent's counsel if petitioner is pro se) shall be responsible for scheduling meetings among counsel and parties and preparing and filing the Trial Management Certificate. The joint Trial Management Certificate shall set forth stipulations and undisputed facts, any requests for attorney fees, disputed issues and specific points of law, lists of lay witnesses and expert witnesses the parties intend to call at hearing, and a list of exhibits, including updated Sworn Financial Statement, Supporting Schedules (if applicable) and proposed child support work sheets. The parties shall exchange copies of exhibits at least 7 days prior to hearing.

(i) Alternative Dispute Resolution.

(1) Nothing in this Rule shall preclude, upon request of both parties, a judge or magistrate from conducting the conferences as a form of alternative dispute resolution pursuant to section 13-22-301, C.R.S. (2002), provided that both parties consent in writing to this process. Consent may only be withdrawn jointly.

(2) The provisions of this Rule shall not preclude the parties from jointly consenting to the use of dispute resolution services by third parties, or the court from referring the parties to mediation or other forms of alternative dispute resolution by third parties pursuant to sections 13-22-311 and 313, C.R.S. (2002).

(j) Sanctions. If a party fails to comply with any of the provisions of this rule, the court may impose appropriate sanctions, which shall not prejudice the party who did comply. If a party attempts to call a witness or introduce an exhibit that the party has not disclosed under subsection (h) of this Rule, the court may exclude that witness or exhibit absent good cause for the omission.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

DISCLOSURES
This Rule is premised upon an expectation that regular status conferences will be conducted informally, that the parties will provide all necessary disclosures and that formal discovery, if authorized, will be tailored to the specific issues of the case. Disclosure of expert testimony and the signing of disclosures and discovery responses will be governed by C.R.C.P. 26 as specifically incorporated into section (e) of new Rule 16.2.

RULE 26.2
The current Rule 26.2 will be repealed. Disclosure of expert testimony and the signing of disclosures and discovery responses will be governed by C.R.C.P. 26 as specifically incorporated into section (e) of new Rule 16.2. Relevant provisions of C.R.C.P. 26 that relate to any additional discovery authorized by the court or stipulated to by the parties under sections (f) and (g) of the new Rule have been incorporated into new Rule 16.2. It is the intent of the committee that relevant caselaw under Rule 26.2 or Rule 26 will have precedential value. The pattern interrogatories and pattern requests for production of documents will also be modified to be consistent with new Rule 16.2.

APPENDICES AND FORMS
The Supreme Court approved the mandatory disclosures, sworn financial statement and supporting schedules forms referenced in 16.2(e)(2), and inclusion of these forms in the Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A of the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure. Rule 16.2 requires compliance with the mandatory disclosures, and completion of the sworn financial statement form and supplemental schedule (if applicable) submitted with this Rule to achieve the disclosure intended by the Rule. The court also approved the amended pattern interrogatories (Form 35.4) and pattern requests for production (Form 35.5). The court further approved the form of the Stipulated Case Management Plan, an associated Order referenced in 16.2(c)(1)(C), and the Court Authorization for Financial Disclosure, referenced in 16.2(e)(9), which forms now have JDF numbers.

SETTLEMENT CONFERENCES
Rule 121, Section 1-17 has been amended to permit a judge or magistrate to conduct a settlement conference or utilize other alternative dispute resolution techniques under Rule 16.2(i).

This section imposes the same duty of active case management on courts hearing domestic relations matters that C.R.C.P. 26 imposes on district courts in other civil cases. In re Gromicko, 2017 CO 1, 387 P.3d 58.

District courts must take an active role in managing discovery when a person or entity from whom discovery is sought objects to the scope of that discovery. In such a case, the district court must determine the appropriate scope of discovery in light of the reasonable needs of the case and tailor discovery to those needs. In making such a determination, the court should, at a minimum, consider the cost-benefit and proportionality factors set forth in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2)(F). In re Gromicko, 2017 CO 1, 387 P.3d 58.

Where hearing on removal issue is set in shorter time frame than envisioned by C.R.C.P. 26.2, then the 60-day time limit for the disclosure of expert witness testimony set forth in that rule cannot be met and the more general provisions of that rule must yield to the provisions of this rule, which contain specific provisions for post-decree and modification matters subject to a shortened time schedule. In re Woolley, 25 P.3d 1284 (Colo. App. 2001).

Court properly balanced its obligation to accord mother due process against its need to efficiently manage the case when it denied mother's last minute request to call 40 witnesses without providing prior notice to father. In re Hatton, 160 P.3d 326 (Colo. App. 2007).

Five-year retention provision in section (e)(10) applies only to disclosures made in connection with marital dissolution cases filed after January 1, 2005, the effective date of this rule as repealed and replaced. The five-year retention provision applies only to disclosures made pursuant to the new rule for the purposes of resolving new cases or new post-decree motions filed after the effective date of the rule. Disclosures made before January 1, 2005 were not subject to the heightened disclosure duties of the new rule and are therefore not subject to the retention provision. Even in cases where post-decree motions alleging improper asset disclosure are filed after January 1, 2005, trial court does not have jurisdiction to modify property divisions based on such disclosures filed under the old rule. In re Schelp, 228 P.3d 151 (Colo. 2010).

Five-year jurisdictional limitation in section (e)(10) does not limit a court's jurisdiction to rule on timely motions if the five-year period expires before the ruling. In re Runge, 2018 COA 23M, 415 P.3d 884.

Application of this rule to wife's post-decree motion does not constitute retrospective legislation in accordance with art. II, § 11, of the state constitution. In re Roberts, 194 P.3d 443 (Colo. App. 2008), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. In re Schelp, 228 P.3d 151 (Colo. 2010).

Husband's omission of the value of his marital portion of his pension materially affected the division of assets. Trial court correctly reopened permanent orders and awarded wife entire marital portion of husband's pension. In re Schelp, 194 P.3d 450 (Colo. App. 2008), rev'd on other grounds, 228 P.3d 151 (Colo. 2010).

Husband's failure to disclose mandatory financial information regarding his company violates section (e), even though wife subsequently entered into a memorandum of understanding. Duty is on husband to report all required financial information without the other spouse having to request it. In re Hunt, 2015 COA 58, 353 P.3d 911.

Wife's motion to reopen property division after entering a memorandum of understanding should be granted because husband's violation of disclosure requirements affected the division of assets. In re Hunt, 2015 COA 58, 353 P.3d 911.

Child support is not a "liability", the omission or nondisclosure of which materially affects the division of assets or liabilities under section (e)(10). In re Roddy, 2014 COA 96, 338 P.3d 1070.

Five-year reach-back provision in section (e)(10) applies only to assets and liabilities, not maintenance or income for the purpose of determining maintenance. The rule does not allow a redetermination of maintenance. In re Dadiotis, 2014 COA 28, 343 P.3d 1017.

Five-year jurisdictional limitation in section (e)(10) applies where husband's motion to modify the final decree was filed about six-and-one-half years later. Fritsche v. Thoreson, 2015 COA 163, 410 P.3d 630.

A movant may make allegations based on information and belief. In re Durie, 2018 COA 143, __ P.3d __.

And has the right to conduct discovery to support the motion. In re Durie, 2018 COA 143, __ P.3d __.

Wife initially entitled to limited discovery to pierce corporate veil. In deciding proper scope of discovery for wife's claim that corporation is husband's alter ego, trial court should have considered factors set forth in Leonard v. McMorris, 63 P.3d 323 (Colo 2003), relating to making alter ego determinations. Trial court required to engage in active case management and erred in denying corporation's motion to quash subpoena without tailoring discovery to that reasonable and necessary to establish alter ego relationship. If relationship established, wife may be entitled to further discovery. In re Gromicko, 2017 CO 1, 387 P.3d 58.

Wife not required to plead in dissolution petition claim seeking to pierce corporate veil. In re Gromicko, 2017 CO 1, 387 P.3d 58.

Plausibility standard governing motions to dismiss under C.R.C.P. 12(b)(5) does not apply to wife's motion pursuant to this rule. The plausibility standard set forth in Warne v. Hall, 2016 CO 50, 373 P.3d 588, does not apply to wife's motion to reopen the property division provisions of the parties' separation agreement because wife's motion is not a pleading. In re Runge, 2018 COA 23M, 415 P.3d 884; In re Durie, 2018 COA 143, 415 P.3d 884.

Particularity requirement of C.R.C.P. 9(b) does not apply to motions under section (e)(10) of this rule. In re Durie, 2018 COA 143, __ P.3d __.

A district court must determine under the preponderance of evidence standard whether a movant is entitled to relief. In re Durie, 2018 COA 143, __ P.3d __.

Wife did not allege a sufficient basis for the trial court to allocate misstated or omitted assets under section (e)(10). In re Runge, 2018 COA 23M, 415 P.3d 884.

PARTIES

Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

(a) Real Party in Interest. Every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest; but an executor, administrator, guardian, conservator, trustee of an express trust, a party with whom or in whose name a contract has been made for the benefit of another, or a party authorized by statute may sue in his own name without joining with him the party for whose benefit the action is brought; and when a statute so provides, an action for the use or benefit of another shall be brought in the name of the people of the state of Colorado.

(b) Capacity to Sue or Be Sued. A partnership or other unincorporated association may sue or be sued in its common name for the purpose of enforcing for or against it a substantive right. A father and mother or the sole surviving parent may maintain an action for the injury or death of a child; where both maintain the action, each shall have an equal interest in the judgment; where one has deserted or refuses to sue, the other may maintain the action. A guardian may maintain an action for the injury or death of his ward.

(c) Infants or Incompetent Persons. Whenever an infant or incompetent person has a representative, such as a general guardian, conservator, or other like fiduciary, the representative may sue or defend on behalf of the infant or incompetent person. If an infant or incompetent person does not have a duly appointed representative, or such representative fails to act, he may sue by his next friend or by a guardian ad litem. The court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant or incompetent person not otherwise represented in an action or shall make such other order as it deems proper for the protection of the infant or incompetent person, provided, that in an action in rem it shall not be necessary to appoint a guardian ad litem for any unknown person who might be an infant or incompetent person.

This rule is procedural, providing how a legally constituted entity may bring its action.

Hidden Lake Dev. Co. v. District Court, 183 Colo. 168, 515 P.2d 632 (1973).

II. REAL PARTY IN INTEREST.

A. In General.

Annotator's note. Since section (a) of this rule is similar to §§ 3 and 5 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This rule is identical to F.R.C.P. 17(a). Hoeppner Constr. Co. v. United States, 287 F.2d 108 (10th Cir. 1960).

This rule provides that every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Nat'l Advertising Co. v. Sayers, 144 Colo. 356, 356 P.2d 483 (1960); Elk-Rifle Water Co. v. Templeton, 173 Colo. 438, 484 P.2d 1211 (1971).

The function of the real-party-in-interest rule is to ensure a proper res judicata effect by protecting the defendant against a subsequent suit by the person who is actually entitled to recover. Ajay Sports, Inc. v. Casazza, 1 P.3d 267 (Colo. App. 2000).

Standing is a jurisdictional prerequisite that requires a named plaintiff to bring suit only to protect a cognizable interest, and a plaintiff has standing if he or she has an injury in fact and that injury is to a legally protected interest. Durdin v. Cheyenne Mountain Bank, 98 P.3d 899 (Colo. App. 2004).

Argument may be waived, as where defendant asserts it in the answer but omits it from a pretrial motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted. Ajay Sports, Inc. v. Casazza, 1 P.3d 267 (Colo. App. 2000).

Constitutional questions may only be raised by a party whose interests are in fact affected by a challenged legislative act. Garcia v. City of Pueblo, 176 Colo. 96, 489 P.2d 200 (1971).

Where a decision of a court as to validity of the ordinance cannot result in further proceedings against a petitioner, he has no standing to prosecute appellate proceedings beyond the court where his acquittal occurred. Garcia v. City of Pueblo, 176 Colo. 96, 489 P.2d 200 (1971).

Substitution of real party in interest not filing of new cause. The substitution of an insurer for an insured, as party plaintiff, does not constitute the filing of a new cause of action, and the substituted party benefits from the filing date of the original complaint and is not barred by the statute of limitations if the original complaint was timely filed. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Gasper, 630 P.2d 97 (Colo. App. 1981).

People of state should not be named as party when individual is party in interest. People ex rel. Garrison v. Lamm, 622 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1980).

The "real parties in interest" must follow the proceedings throughout, and, if not satisfied, must present the judgment of which complaint is made for review. Gates v. Hepp, 95 Colo. 285, 35 P.2d 857 (1934).

Assignee of original real party in interest must prove its status as an assignee. Alpine Assocs., Inc. v. KP & R, Inc., 802 P.2d 1119 (Colo. App. 1990).

Applied in Williams v. Genesee Dev. Co. No. 2, 759 P.2d 823 (Colo. App. 1988).

B. Who Is Real Party in Interest.

Effect of this rule is to put end to action of ejectment. The fiction by which ''John Doe'' and ''Richard Roe'' were made to represent the plaintiff and defendant, respectively, in an action of ejectment of common law permitted any number of actions of this character to be maintained between the same parties in interest after verdict and judgment. The litigation terminated only when the unsuccessful party tired of his futile efforts, or when a court of equity, after repeated trials at law resulting in like verdicts and judgments, enjoined the unsuccessful party from harrassing, by future actions in ejectment, him who had recovered these judgments. The effect of this rule, which requires actions to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, is to put an end to this practice. Under the section, standing alone, the first verdict and judgment in ejectment, as in other cases, unless it was set aside or vacated for cause, would be conclusive of the rights of the parties, that were, or might have been, there litigated. Iron Silver Mining Co. v. Campbell, 61 F. 932 (8th Cir. 1894).

Suits should be prosecuted under name of mortgagee under loss-payable clause. Where actions are required to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, suits should be prosecuted in the name of the mortgagee as the person appointed to receive the amount of the loss under a policy containing a loss-payable clause, regardless of contract relations between the mortgagee and the insurer, where the amount of the mortgage equals or exceeds the loss. Reed Auto Sales v. Empire Delivery Serv., 127 Colo. 205, 254 P.2d 1018 (1953).

One who holds legal title is the real party in interest. Bassett v. Inman, 7 Colo. 270, 3 P. 383 (1883); Gomer v. Stockdale, 5 Colo. App. 489, 39 P. 355 (1895); Koch v. Story, 47 Colo. 335, 107 P. 1093 (1910); Am. Sur. Co. v. Scott, 63 F.2d 961 (10th Cir. 1933).

Real party in interest is the person or entity who holds legal title in the note sought to be enforced. Platte Valley Sav. v. Crall, 821 P.2d 305 (Colo. App. 1991); Platte Valley Mortg.

Corp. v. Bickett, 916 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1996).

Real party in interest is the party who, by virtue of the substantive law, has the right to invoke the aid of the court to vindicate the legal interest in question. Ogunwo v. Am. Nat'l Ins. Co., 936 P.2d 606 (Colo. App. 1997); Summers v. Perkins, 81 P.3d 1141 (Colo. App. 2003).

Parties are not real parties in interest because they are not aggrieved in a legal sense. Acad. of Charter Schs. v. Adams Cty. Sch. Dist. No. 12, 994 P.2d 442 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 32 P.3d 456 (Colo. 2001).

Association lacked standing where the association was not a party to the charter contract. Acad. of Charter Schs. v. Adams Cty. Sch. Dist. No. 12, 32 P.3d 456 (Colo. 2001).

Partial assignor is a real party in interest. A party who has made a partial assignment of a note for security purpose is a partial assignor, retains part of his substantive right and is a real party in interest under section (a) of this rule. Jouflas v. Wyatt, 646 P.2d 946 (Colo. App. 1982).

Purchaser of land may sue for accrued rents and profits. While it may be proper for a vendor of land to bring suit against the disseizor, in order that he may be able to deliver possession to the purchaser, yet, after the recovery in such action, it is entirely proper for the purchaser to sue in his own name for the rents and profits which accrued pending the former action, since he is the real party in interest. Limberg v. Higenbotham, 11 Colo. 156, 17 P. 481 (1887).

An assignee of claim may bring action in his own name. That an entire claim for damages to property may be assigned so as to vest in the assignee the right of action in his own name, is well established for the general rule is that assignability and descendibility go hand in hand. Home Ins. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R., 19 Colo. 46, 34 P. 281 (1893); Hoeppner Constr. Co. v. United States, 287 F.2d 108 (10th Cir. 1960); Thistle, Inc. v. Tenneco, Inc., 872 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1993).

Whether it be an open account or otherwise, see Bassett v. Inman, 7 Colo. 270, 3 P. 383 (1883); Gomer v. Stockdale, 5 Colo. App. 489, 39 P. 355 (1895).

There may be annexed to the transfer a condition that when the sum is collected the whole or some part of it must be paid over to the assignor. Bassett v. Inman, 7 Colo. 270, 3 P. 383 (1883); Gomer v. Stockdale, 5 Colo. App. 489, 39 P. 355 (1895).

Almost any surviving right of action may be assigned so as to enable the assignee to maintain a suit in his own name. Reddicker v. Lavinsky, 3 Colo. App. 159, 32 P. 349 (1893).

Assignment of a claim after suit is filed but before trial is sufficient to make plaintiff a real party in interest. Thistle, Inc. v. Tenneco, Inc., 872 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1993); Platte Valley Mortg. Corp. v. Bickett, 916 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1996).

A plaintiff not having standing at the outset of litigation may acquire standing after an objection is raised and the standing later acquired relates back to the commencement of the proceedings. Miller v. Accelerated Bureau of Collections, Inc., 932 P.2d 824 (Colo. App. 1996).

Generally, if a claim has been assigned in full, the assignee is the real party in interest with a right to pursue an action thereon; however, a partial assignor retains part of his or her substantive right and is a real party in interest under section (a). In re Cespedes, 895 P.2d 1172 (Colo. App. 1995).

Intangible property assignment. Assignment of all of an owner's right, title, and interest to intangible personal property includes an assignment of any agreements regarding the property to the extent the agreement benefits the transferee, and the transferee is the real party in interest to pursue its contract violation claims and related tort claims. Thistle, Inc. v. Tenneco, Inc., 872 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1993).

Notice to, knowledge of, or acquiescence by the real party in interest in an action does not confer standing on the plaintiff. The stipulation entered into between the plaintiffs and the bankruptcy trustee deals only with the relationship between the plaintiffs and the trustee and does not confer standing on the plaintiffs. Miller v. Accelerated Bureau of Collections, Inc., 932 P.2d 824 (Colo. App. 1996).

A claim asserted by a grantee of lands against the grantor for moneys paid to relieve them of taxes for which the grantor was liable may be effectually assigned so as to give the assignee an action in his own name. Rambo v. Armstrong, 45 Colo. 124, 100 P. 586 (1909).

As legal title to a note is in one by reason of assignment, an action will lie in his name. Walsh v. Allen, 6 Colo. App. 303, 40 P. 473 (1895); Best v. Rocky Mt. Nat'l Bank, 37 Colo. 149, 85 P. 1124 (1906).

Where, after the execution and delivery of a promissory note, a person other than the payee and not otherwise connected with the note, for a new and sufficient consideration receives by himself from the payee promises to pay the note and thereupon indorses the same, he thereby makes the debt his own, and such debt is assignable so as to vest in the assignee a right of action in his own name. Fisk v. Reser, 19 Colo. 88, 34 P. 572 (1893); Gates v. Hepp, 95 Colo. 285, 35 P.2d 857 (1934).

An assignee of a valid mechanic's lien has a right to recover, and in an action to foreclose is the real party in interest. Howard v. Fisher, 86 Colo. 493, 283 P. 1042 (1929).

"Surviving" partner of dissolved partnership may sue on account due. Where a partnership has, in fact, been dissolved when suit is brought and plaintiff, through a settlement between himself and his copartner, including his purchase of the partnership property, has become the exclusive owner of an account sued on, he is therefore the only party really interested in collecting the balance due; hence, under this rule the action is properly brought in his name alone. Bassett v. Inman, 7 Colo. 270, 3 P. 383 (1883).

Partner in a general partnership is a real party in interest. Erickson v. Oberlohr, 749 P.2d 996 (Colo. App. 1987).

Even though a contract involved is entered into for the ultimate benefit of plaintiff's parent corporation, plaintiff is real party in interest entitled to bring the action without joining its parent corporation. P & M Vending Co. v. Half Shell of Boston, Inc., 41 Colo. App. 78, 579 P.2d 93 (1978).

Contrary common-law rule no longer applies. The common-law principle that an action for a partnership debt, whether instituted before or after dissolution of the firm, must be prosecuted in the name of all the partners, does not, under the present practice apply. Walker v. Steel, 9 Colo. 388, 12 P. 423 (1886).

Partner in whose name contract was made may sue in own name. In action for breach of contract where plaintiff has partners and the profits will be split, but he has the sole handling of the matter everything is in his name and defendant makes no attempt to have other parties joined, plaintiff has the capacity to sue in his own name. Monks v. Hemphill, 121 Colo. 1, 212 P.2d 1004 (1949).

Action on bond of county treasurer should be in his name. Since a bond taken by a county treasurer as security for county money deposited by him in a bank, running to him as treasurer, is a bond for his own safety and not for the benefit of the county, he is the real party in interest therein and the one in whose name an action thereon should be brought. Moulton v. McLean, 5 Colo. App. 454, 39 P. 78 (1895).

Action on injunction bond personal right of treasurer. Where an injunction against a county treasurer was dissolved, a right of action upon the injunction bond is a personal right of the treasurer, and he might maintain a personal action upon the bond after his term of office has expired. He is the proper party to maintain such action, and the fact that the county may have paid the expenses of resisting the injunction and would be entitled to receive the amount of damages recovered when collected, is immaterial to the obligors in the bond. Breeze v. Haley, 13 Colo. App. 438, 59 P. 333 (1899).

It is not necessary to appoint administrator to prosecute action upon appeal bond, but that action could be prosecuted by devisee in own name. Austin v. Snider, 17 Colo. App. 182, 68 P. 125 (1902).

Party was properly dismissed based upon holding that an employer or business may not recover against a third party for economic losses it suffered as a result of the third party's tortious injury to its employee. Gonzalez v. Yancey, 939 P.2d 525 (Colo. App. 1997).

For the right of a bank commissioner to bring action against bank stockholders, see Broadbent v. McFerson, 80 Colo. 264, 250 P. 852 (1926).

Applied in Baumgarten v. Burt, 148 Colo. 64, 365 P.2d 681 (1961); Valley Realty & Inv. Co. v. McMillan, 160 Colo. 109, 414 P.2d 486 (1966); Hollingsworth v. Satterwhite, 723 P.2d 169 (Colo. App. 1986).

C. Action by Executor or Trustee or in Contract.

A non-attorney trustee may not proceed pro se on behalf of a trust in a litigation matter. Application for Water Rights of Town of Minturn, 2015 CO 61, 359 P.3d 29.

A trustee may at his option sue in his own name or may join his "cestuis que" trust. Hecker v. Cook, 20 Colo. App. 282, 78 P. 311 (1904); Faust v. Goodnow, 4 Colo. App. 352, 36 P. 71 (1906).

Under this rule, a trustee of an express trust, a party with whom or in whose name a contract has been made for the benefit of another, or a party authorized by statute may sue in his own name without joining with him the party for whose benefit the action is brought. Elk-Rifle Water Co. v. Templeton, 173 Colo. 438, 484 P.2d 1211 (1971).

The judgment in an action by either will bar a subsequent action by the other. Hecker v. Cook, 20 Colo. App. 282, 78 P. 311 (1904).

It is not necessary that a trustee set forth the trust. The trustee of an express trust in real property may maintain an action to restrain irreparable injury thereto, without setting forth the nature of the trust, the name of the beneficiary, or his character as trustee. An averment of his trust capacity may be treated as surplusage. Koch v. Story, 47 Colo. 335, 107 P. 1093 (1911); Elk-Rifle Water Co. v. Templeton, 173 Colo. 438, 484 P.2d 1211 (1971).

Where the official bond of an officer in a fraternal society runs to the trustees of the society under the name the society bore prior to incorporation, such trustees can maintain an action in their own names on the bond for a default therein without making the society a party thereto, although at the time of the execution of the bond and the bringing of the action the society was incorporated under a slightly different name from that it bore prior to incorporation. Hecker v. Cook, 20 Colo. App. 282, 78 P. 311 (1904).

An averment of trust capacity may be treated as surplusage. Koch v. Story, 47 Colo. 335, 107 P. 1093 (1911).

The trustee of an express trust is authorized to maintain an action. Hardy v. Swigart, 25 Colo. 136, 53 P. 380 (1898); Houck v. Williams, 34 Colo. 138, 81 P. 800 (1905).

Cashier of bank who contracts may become the trustee of an express trust. The cashier of an unincorporated bank, who is also a partner, who is alone authorized to transact all the business, and in whose name contracts are habitually made for the bank may become by virtue of such a contract the trustee of an express trust and may sue thereon in his own name. Merchants' Bank v. McClelland, 9 Colo. 608, 13 P. 723 (1886).

A suit on contract is properly brought in the name of the contractor. City & County of Denver v. Morrison, 88 Colo. 67, 291 P. 1023 (1930).

A person with whom or in whose name a contract has been made for the benefit of another may maintain an action thereon in his own name. Rockwell v. Holcomb, 3 Colo. App. 1, 31 P. 944 (1892).

Although others are interested in the contract, it is not necessary that they should be made parties. City & County of Denver v. Morrison, 88 Colo. 67, 291 P. 1023 (1930).

In an action by a bank to collect certain money which it had been expressly authorized to collect by one to whom the money was owing, the suit need not be brought in the name of the beneficial owner, for the suit could be maintained in the name of the trustee. First Nat'l Bank v. Hummel, 14 Colo. 259, 23 P. 986 (1890).

Where a contract is made for the benefit of a third person, the latter may bring an action thereon. Haldane v. Potter, 94 Colo. 558, 31 P.2d 709 (1934).

There is nothing to prevent real party from becoming litigant. While one who has made a contract for the benefit of another can prosecute an action in his own name, there is nothing to prevent the real party in interest from becoming the actual litigant. Gates v. Hepp, 95 Colo. 285, 35 P.2d 857 (1934).

When, as a matter of fact, the beneficiary becomes an actual party to the action, the latter, in respect to the primary right, supersedes the former, whereupon the judgment entered must be in favor of the beneficiary if he succeeds or against him if he fails. Gates v. Hepp, 95 Colo. 285, 35 P.2d 857 (1934).

An action may be brought by a bank on a promissory note given in renewal of a similar note made payable to it, although the renewal note mistakenly is made payable to the president of the bank, who turns it over to the bank as its property, the latter retaining it in possession at all times, notwithstanding section (a) of this rule which provides that one in whose name a contract is made for the benefit of another may sue without joining the person beneficially interested. Best v. Rocky Mt. Nat'l Bank, 37 Colo. 149, 85 P. 1124 (1906).

If a person has the right to sue, no error can be based on a proceeding under this rule. Rockwell v. Holcomb, 3 Colo. App. 1, 31 P. 944 (1892).

If defendants imagined it to be necessary for their protection that the beneficiary should be brought into the suit, doubtless they might procure an order for the purpose, but, having taken no action in the trial court, they cannot be held on appeal to assign error concerning it. Faust v. Goodnow, 4 Colo. App. 352, 36 P. 71 (1894).

Estate beneficiaries are not indispensable parties to a partition action commenced by the personal representative, where the personal representative is acting on behalf of all the estate beneficiaries to segregate their collective interests in the real property to be partitioned, so that he can perform his statutory duty to settle and distribute the estate expeditiously and efficiently. Fry & Co. v. District Court, 653 P.2d 1135 (Colo. 1982).

III. CAPACITY TO SUE OR BE SUED.

A. In General.

Annotator's note. Since section (b) of this rule is similar to §§ 6 and 9 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing §§ 6 and 9 have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Actions may be brought only by legal entities and against legal entities. Ivanhoe Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M. v. Most Worshipful Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M., 126 Colo. 515, 251 P.2d 1085 (1952).

There must be some ascertainable persons, natural or artificial, to whom judgments are awarded and against whom they may be enforced. Ivanhoe Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M. v. Most Worshipful Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M., 126 Colo. 515, 251 P.2d 1085 (1952).

A voluntary condominium association has standing and may maintain an action on behalf of its members if: (1) Its members would otherwise have standing to sue in their own right; (2) the interests sought to be protected are germane to the association's purpose; and (3) neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the litigation. Villa Sierra Condominium v. Field Corp., 787 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1990).

This rule does not grant the right to sue to a loosely formed group. Hidden Lake Dev. Co. v. District Court, 183 Colo. 168, 515 P.2d 632 (1973).

B. Married Women.

That section (b) relates to procedure and does not confer a substantive right is an objection that cannot be urged successfully against § 6 of art. II, Colo. Const. Rains v. Rains, 97 Colo. 19, 46 P.2d 740 (1935).

If the common-law fiction of unity ever existed in this state, it does not exist now. Whyman v. Johnston, 62 Colo. 461, 163 P. 76 (1917); Hedlund v. Hedlund, 87 Colo. 607, 290 P. 285 (1930); Rains v. Rains, 97 Colo. 19, 46 P.2d 740 (1935).

A married woman may sue and be sued in all matters, including contract. A married woman may in this state enter into any contract, express or implied, the same as if she were sole; she may, in like manner, be held liable thereon; and in civil actions, she may sue and be sued in all matters the same as if she were sole. Rose v. Otis, 18 Colo. 59, 31 P. 493 (1892); Thompson v. Thompson, 30 Colo. App. 57, 489 P.2d 1062 (1971).

A married woman may sue husband for personal injuries caused by his negligence. In view of the broad, liberal provisions of the constitution and statutes of this state and the liberal construction thereof adopted by the courts of this state, a wife may sue her husband for personal injuries caused by the negligence of her husband. Rains v. Rains, 97 Colo. 19, 46 P.2d 740 (1935).

C. Partnerships or Unincorporated Associations.

At common law, an unincorporated association of persons had no capacity to sue or be sued in any character other than as partners in whatever was done, and it was necessary for such an association to sue or defend in the names of its members, and liability had to be enforced against each member. Thomas v. Dunne, 131 Colo. 20, 279 P.2d 427 (1955).

Necessities dictated otherwise. The growth of large unincorporated associations of many different kinds, and the necessities arising therefrom, at an early date called for legal recognition of such associations as entities possessed of capacity to sue, and be sued, in their common name. Thomas v. Dunne, 131 Colo. 20, 279 P.2d 427 (1955).

This rule purports to create a new right not theretofore recognized in the law and authorizes the bringing of an action in the common name of an unincorporated association. Thomas v. Dunne, 131 Colo. 20, 279 P.2d 427 (1955).

Section (b) is permissive and not mandatory. A partnership or a limited partnership may sue or be sued either in its common name or by naming its partners. Frazier v. Carlin, 42 Colo. App. 226, 591 P.2d 1348 (1979).

Section (b) must be viewed as either creating an entity or permitting existing ones to sue. Section (b) of this rule must be held either to create an artificial entity of a partnership or unincorporated association or to permit existing entities to bring suit in an artificial name. Ivanhoe Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M. v. Most Worshipful Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M., 126 Colo. 515, 251 P.2d 1085 (1952).

If this rule is held to be one creating a legal entity capable of suing or being sued, it is performing a legislative, rather than a judicial function, and the rule would therefore, be beyond the power of the court. Ivanhoe Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M. v. Most Worshipful Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M., 126 Colo. 515, 251 P.2d 1085 (1952).

If an existing entity is permitted to sue under a common or artificial name, then, upon challenge by defendant, the plaintiff must disclose the identity of the parties so doing; and if defendant seeks affirmative relief in excess of the property or rights owned, held, possessed, or exercised by the partnership or unincorporated association itself, then the ascertained legal entities must be properly served with process and be made parties to the action. Ivanhoe Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M. v. Most Worshipful Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M., 126 Colo. 515, 251 P.2d 1085 (1952).

Status of an unincorporated association to sue must be founded on more than a bold allegation, and to sue as an unincorporated association in name only is insufficient. Hidden Lake Dev. Co. v. District Court, 183 Colo. 168, 515 P.2d 632 (1973).

D. Injury or Death of Child.

While a father and mother may join in a damage suit, it is not essential that they should so join. Pierce v. Conners, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721 (1894).

The joining of the father and mother is permissive. The joining of the father and mother appears to be permissive, not imperative. Pierce v. Conners, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721 (1894).

Joinder or nonjoinder material only to parents themselves. The joinder or nonjoinder of a parent in an action for damages is material only to the parents themselves. Pierce v. Conners, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721 (1894).

Since either or both may sue, the defendant cannot be affected or prejudiced whichever course they may take; the grounds and measure of recovery are the same in either case, and the defendant can only be subjected to a single suit. Pierce v. Conners, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721 (1894).

IV. INFANTS OR INCOMPETENT PERSONS.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, ''Legal Capacity of Adjudged Incompetents'', see 29 Dicta 292 (1952).

Annotator's note. Since section (c) of this rule is similar to § 7 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Quasi-judicial immunity. A court appointed guardian ad litem in service of the public interest in the welfare of children is entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity. Short by Ossterhous v. Short, 730 F. Supp. 1307 (D. Colo. 1990).

Applied in Welsh v. Independent Lumber Co., 110 Colo. 280, 133 P.2d 535 (1943).

B. Sue or Defend.

Where an infant is a party to a suit, he must appear by next friend or guardian to be appointed by the court or judge. Seaton v. Tohill, 11 Colo. App. 211, 53 P. 170 (1898).

He is in reality, however, but the agent of the court through whom it acts to protect the interest of the minor. Seaton v. Tohill, 11 Colo. App. 211, 53 P. 170 (1898).

The court is itself the guardian. Seaton v. Tohill, 11 Colo. App. 211, 53 P. 170 (1898).

The court will suffer no advantage to be taken of those acting in the infant's behalf to the detriment of the infant. Seaton v. Tohill, 11 Colo. App. 211, 53 P. 170 (1898).

If a next friend does not perform properly, the court could and should remove her, and, if appropriate, could appoint a successor. The court should not allow the next friend's conduct to deprive the infant of his rights. Black ex rel. Bayless v. Cullar, 665 P.2d 1029 (Colo. App. 1983).

Next friend may assist child in suit to enforce support obligation of parent. When a noncustodial parent's child support obligation is incorporated into a dissolution decree, and the custodial parent dies and the child is not in the physical custody of the noncustodial parent, the child support obligation of the noncustodial parent continues beyond the death of the custodial parent in accordance with the terms of the dissolution decree, and such obligation of the parent can be enforced through a suit on behalf of the child by a next friend. Abrams v. Connolly, 781 P.2d 651 (Colo. 1989).

Son may bring action on behalf of his incompetent father by proceeding as his next friend although son had not been appointed guardian. Delsas ex rel. Delsas v. Centex Home Equity, 186 P.3d 141 (Colo. App. 2008).

An infant cannot be bound by the admissions of his guardian unless they are for his benefit. Seaton v. Tohill, 11 Colo. App. 211, 53 P. 170 (1898).

An infant cannot be bound by guardian's errors or omissions in his answers or pleadings. Seaton v. Tohill, 11 Colo. App. 211, 53 P. 170 (1898).

It is the policy of the law to fully protect the rights of minors, and this may be done, even if the guardian or ''prochein ami'' does not properly claim such rights or has even failed to claim them at all. Hutchison v. McLaughlin, 15 Colo. 492, 25 P. 317 (1890); Seaton v. Tohill, 11 Colo. App. 211, 53 P. 170 (1898).

Presence of both parents at an administrative hearing concerning a minor is not required, thus administrative law judge's order of sequestration that included minor's father, since he was a witness, was not error. M.G. v. Colo. Dept. of Human Servs., 12 P.3d 815 (Colo. App. 2000).

C. Appointment of Guardian.

This rule does not make the appointment of a guardian "ad litem" mandatory. Johnson v. Lambotte, 147 Colo. 203, 363 P.2d 165 (1961).

Where a mental incompetent is "otherwise represented" by well qualified lawyers of long experience at the bar, the appointment of a guardian ''ad litem'' is not necessary. Johnson v. Lambotte, 147 Colo. 203, 363 P.2d 165 (1961).

The appointment of a guardian ad litem is a matter left to the discretion of the court if the adult incompetent is already represented by an attorney. People in Interest of M.M., 726 P.2d 1108 (Colo. 1986).

"Incompetent person" includes those who are mentally impaired to the degree of being incapable of effectively participating in a proceeding and thus need the assistance of a fiduciary representative. People in Interest of M.M., 726 P.2d 1108 (Colo. 1986).

When a substantial question exists regarding the mental competence of a spouse in a domestic relations proceeding, the preferred procedure is for the trial court to conduct a hearing to determine whether or not the spouse is competent, so that a guardian ad litem may be appointed if needed. In re Sorensen, 166 P.3d 254 (Colo. App. 2007).

It would be an abuse of discretion not to appoint a guardian ad litem in those situations in which the spouse (1) is mentally impaired so as to be incapable of understanding the nature and significance of the proceeding; (2) is incapable of making critical decisions; (3) lacks the intellectual capacity to communicate with counsel; or (4) is mentally or emotionally incapable of weighing the advice of counsel on the particular course to pursue in his or her own interest. In re Sorensen, 166 P.3d 254 (Colo. App. 2007).

No error in trial court's determination that it had not automatically lost jurisdiction to enter an award for payment of guardian ad litem fees by husband upon wife's death; in contrast to an order pertaining to custody, parenting time, property division, or attorney fees under the Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act, trial court's authority to appoint a guardian ad litem and to order payment of the guardian's fees was not dependent upon the fact that the case at hand was a dissolution of marriage proceeding. In re Heil, 33 P.3d 1270 (Colo. App. 2001).

Rule 18. Joinder of Claims and Remedies

(a) Joinder of Claims. A party asserting a claim to relief as an original claim, counterclaim, cross claim, or third-party claim, may join, either as independent or as alternate claims, as many claims, legal or equitable, as he has against an opposing party.

(b) Joinder of Remedies; Fraudulent Conveyances. Whenever a claim is one heretofore cognizable only after another claim has been prosecuted to a conclusion, the two claims may be joined in a single action; but the court shall grant relief in that action only in accordance with the relative substantive rights of the parties. In particular, a plaintiff may state a claim for money and a claim to have set aside a conveyance fraudulent as to him, without first having obtained a judgment establishing the claim for money.

Hardman Bros. appearing below, see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 366 (1951). For article, ''Joinder of Claims and Counterclaims in Cases Under the Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act'', see 15 Colo. Law. 1818 (1986).

At common law, legal and equitable causes of action could not be joined. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n v. Uncompahgre Broadcasting Co., 134 Colo. 131, 300 P.2d 968 (1956).

Under this rule, however, either a plaintiff or defendant may join, either as independent or as alternate claims, as many claims either legal or equitable or both as he may have against an opposing party. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n v. Uncompahgre Broadcasting Co., 134 Colo. 131, 300 P.2d 968 (1956).

Joinder of claims allowed if the requirements of C.R.C.P. 20 are met. Section (a) of this rule allows the joinder of as many claims as a plaintiff has when there are multiple parties, if the requirements of C.R.C.P. 20 are met. Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Bond, 156 Colo. 433, 399 P.2d 793 (1965).

Where claims involve the same series of transactions and common questions of fact and law, the claims met the test for joinder as laid down in section (a) of this rule and C.R.C.P. 20. Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Bond, 156 Colo. 433, 399 P.2d 793 (1965).

A claim for personal injuries and one for damages to automobile may properly be joined under this rule. Gray v. Blight, 112 F.2d 696 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 311 U.S. 704, 61 S. Ct. 170, 85 L. Ed. 457 (1940).

A difference in the evidence required to prove two different causes of action is ground for holding them misjoined. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n v. Uncompahgre Broadcasting Co., 134 Colo. 131, 300 P.2d 968 (1956).

In order to state a claim to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, a plaintiff need not first have a judgment against the debtor. Emarine v. Haley, 892 P.2d 343 (Colo. App. 1994).

Under these rules it is no longer necessary that each one of several parties have a like interest in all the claims of the other parties before all of them can join in a common suit. Schwab v. Martin, 165 Colo. 547, 441 P.2d 17 (1968).

Diverse parties in a foreclosure action can join in requesting a common receiver, if they feel their own interests can best be served thereby. Schwab v. Martin, 165 Colo. 547, 441 P.2d 17 (1968).

This rule specifically authorized the inclusion of counterclaims in replies to counter-claims, the analogous federal rules having been so interpreted by federal courts. T. L. Smith Co. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 444, 431 P.2d 454 (1967).

This rule does not relieve a pleader from the requirement that claims must be separately stated in his pleadings, and ''a fortiori'', expressly requested as relief in his complaint. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n v. Uncompahgre Broadcasting Co., 134 Colo. 131, 300 P.2d 968 (1956).

Officers of a municipal corporation cannot, in the same action, be charged officially and personally, since nothing in this rule compels a departure from this long established and fundamental principle. Colo. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. District Court, 126 Colo. 340, 249 P.2d 146 (1952).

Where a liability policy contains a "no action" clause providing that no action will lie against the insurer until judgment has been obtained against the insured, one may not sue the insured and the insurance carrier jointly or the insurance carrier separately, but must first obtain a judgment against the insured, and then and then only, if the provisions of the policy are such as to create a contractual relationship between the insured and the insurer, the injured party's rights against the insurer first ripens into existence. Such a provision establishes a substantive right in the insurer and does not violate the rules of civil procedure. Crowley v. Hardman Bros., 122 Colo. 489, 223 P.2d 1045 (1950).

An election requirement between rescission or damages on a contract ordered by a court is not prejudicial where at the time the motion for election was filed plaintiff has already accepted damages and the only issue left to be tried is whether the remedy of rescission is available. Gladden v. Guyer, 162 Colo. 451, 426 P.2d 953 (1967).

Level of prejudice contemplated by doctrine of laches not reached by permissive parties. While failure to litigate the issue of personal liability in either of two earlier actions against a corporate entity may have been poor judicial economy, the expense and inconvenience of further litigation, without more did not rise to the level of prejudice contemplated by the doctrine of laches where the defendants, individual owners of a corporation were not indispensable parties to the first action under C.R.C.P. 19 but rather permissive parties under this rule. Lin Ron, Inc. v. Mann's World of Arts & Crafts, Inc., 624 P.2d 1343 (Colo. App. 1981).

Refusal to allow joinder of employer as a third party defendant was proper because Colorado law does not recognize a right to contribution between employers and third parties. Gruntmeir v. Mayrath Industries, Inc., 841 F.2d 1037 (10th Cir. 1988).

III. JOINDER OF REMEDIES.

Law reviews. For article, ''Direct Action Against the Liability Insurer Under the Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 22 Dicta 314 (1945). For article, ''Reaching Fraudulent Conveyances and Equitable Interests of Debtors'', see 27 Dicta 137 (1950).

Applied in Greco v. Pullara, 166 Colo. 465, 444 P.2d 383 (1968).

Rule 19. Joinder of Persons Needed for Just Adjudication

(a) Persons to be Joined if Feasible. A person who is properly subject to service of process in the action shall be joined as a party in the action if: (1) In his absence complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties, or (2) he claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that the disposition of the action in his absence may: (A) As a practical matter impair or impede his ability to protect that interest or (B) leave any of the persons already parties subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations by reason of his claimed interest. If he has not been so joined, the court shall order that he be made a party. If he should join as a plaintiff but refuses to do so, he may be made a defendant, or, in a proper case, an involuntary plaintiff. If the joined party objects to venue and his joinder would render the venue of the action improper, he shall be dismissed from the action.

(b) Determination by Court Whenever Joinder Not Feasible. If a person as described in subsections (a) (1) and (a) (2) of this Rule cannot be made a party, the court shall determine whether in the interest of justice the action should proceed among the parties before it, or should be dismissed, the absent person being thus regarded as indispensable. The factors to be considered by the court include: First, to what extent a judgment rendered in the person's absence might be prejudicial to him or those already parties; second, the extent to which, by protective provisions in the judgment, by the shaping of relief, or other measures, the prejudice can be lessened or avoided; third, whether a judgment rendered in the person's absence will be adequate; fourth, whether the plaintiff will have an adequate remedy if the action is dismissed for nonjoinder.

(c) Pleading Reasons for Nonjoinder. A pleading asserting a claim for relief shall state the names, if known to the pleader, of any persons as described in subsections (a) (1) and (a) (2) of this Rule who are not joined, and the reasons why they are not joined.

(d) Exception of Class Actions. This rule is subject to the provisions of Rule 23.

Due process of law requires that those parties whose interests are at stake be before the court. Hidden Lake Dev. Co. v. District Court, 183 Colo. 168, 515 P.2d 632 (1973).

This rule pertains not to permissive or discretionary joinder of the parties, as under C.R.C.P. 20, but to the question of who must be made parties because of necessity or indispensability to a complete adjudication of rights as between the litigants. Bender v. District Court, 133 Colo. 12, 291 P.2d 684 (1955).

This rule recognizes difference between "necessary" and "indispensable" parties. This rule clearly shows its section (a) modified by its section (b), thus recognizing a difference between a necessary party and an indispensable party. Centennial Cas. Co. v. Lacey, 133 Colo. 357, 295 P.2d 690 (1956).

Rule inapplicable to State Administrative Procedure Act proceedings. Because the general assembly specifically has addressed the question of joinder in § 24-4-106, this rule is not applicable in proceedings brought under the state Administrative Procedure Act. Town of Frederick v. Colo. Water Quality Control Comm'n, 628 P.2d 129 (Colo. App. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 641 P.2d 958 (Colo. 1982).

Complaint should not be dismissed for misjoinder of parties where the co-obligee on a construction performance bond was present in the case. Weyerhaeuser Mortgage Co. v. Equitable General Insurance Co., 686 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1983).

Pleading a defense of failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is sufficient to raise the issue of failure of plaintiff to join an indispensable party. Cold Springs Ranch v. Dept. of Nat. Res., 765 P.2d 1035 (Colo. App. 1988).

Partnership not required to be joined as indispensable party. Erickson v. Oberlohr, 749 P.2d 996 (Colo. App. 1987).

In litigation concerning a transfer of a conservation easement tax credit, joinder of a transferee who is represented by its tax matters representative is not required. Kowalchik v. Brohl, 2012 COA 49, 411 P.3d 681.

Environmental protection agency was an indispensable party where plaintiffs' claims for relief essentially challenged the reasonableness of the agency's removal action under CERCLA. Aztec Minerals Corp. v. Romer, 940 P.2d 1025 (Colo. App. 1996).

The director of a state agency is not necessarily an indispensable party in a suit challenging the constitutionality of a statute governing the state agency. The director is an indispensable party when the appeal involves a statutory duty of the director that concerns a mandatory exercise of discretion. Cruz-Cesario v. Don Carlos Mexican Foods, 122 P.3d 1078 (Colo. App. 2005).

Applied in Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n v. Uncompahgre Broadcasting Co., 134 Colo. 131, 300 P.2d 968 (1956); Howard v. First Nat'l Bank of Denver, Inc., 354 F.2d 217 (10th Cir. 1966); Union P. R. II. JOINED IF FEASIBLE.

A. In General.

Section (a) is mandatory and requires the trial court to join persons falling within its provisions, if feasible. Potts v. Gordon, 34 Colo. App. 128, 525 P.2d 500 (1974).

Persons having an interest "proper parties". Persons having an interest in the subject matter of litigation which may conveniently be settled therein are ''proper parties''. Woodco v. Lindahl, 152 Colo. 49, 380 P.2d 234 (1963).

Presence is not indispensable. If interests of parties before the court may be finally adjudicated without affecting interests of absent parties, the presence of ''proper parties'' is not indispensable. Woodco v. Lindahl, 152 Colo. 49, 380 P.2d 234 (1963); Brody v. Bock, 897 P.2d 769 (Colo. 1995).

Only if an absent person's interest in the subject matter of the litigation is such that no decree can be entered in the case that will do justice between the parties actually before the court without injuriously affecting the right of such absent person is the absent person considered indispensable. Brody v. Bock, 897 P.2d 769 (Colo. 1995).

Persons whose presence is essential to a determination of entire controversy are "necessary parties". Woodco v. Lindahl, 152 Colo. 49, 380 P.2d 234 (1963).

Persons having a joint interest in the subject of an action should be made parties. Woodco v. Lindahl, 152 Colo. 49, 380 P.2d 234 (1963).

Joinder is "feasible". Joinder is ''feasible'' under this rule as long as the absentee is subject to service of process, his joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction, and he has no valid objection to venue of the court. Potts v. Gordon, 34 Colo. App. 128, 525 P.2d 500 (1974).

In order to be a person whose joinder is required, it is not necessary that the legal relief contemplated purport to be binding on the absent person, for the prejudicial effect of nonjoinder may be practical rather than legal in character. Potts v. Gordon, 34 Colo. App. 128, 525 P.2d 500 (1974).

Joinder will be insisted upon if the action might detrimentally affect the absentee's ability to protect his property or to prosecute or defend any subsequent litigation in which he might become involved. Potts v. Gordon, 34 Colo. App. 128, 525 P.2d 500 (1974).

For recovery of damages for joint interest in an item, it is mandatory, under section (a) of this rule that the person having a joint interest be joined on the same side as the other party having the joint interest. Weng v. Schleiger, 130 Colo. 90, 273 P.2d 356 (1954), aff'd, 133 Colo. 441, 296 P.2d 748 (1956); Clubhouse at Fairway Pines v. Fairway Pines Estates, 214 P.3d 451 (Colo. App. 2008).

Joinder is not required if the award will not affect property values of the absent owners. Seago v. Fellet, 676 P.2d 1224 (Colo. App. 1983); Clubhouse at Fairway Pines v. Fairway Pines Estates, 214 P.3d 451 (Colo. App. 2008).

When a person who should join as a plaintiff refuses to do so, or his consent cannot be obtained, he may be made a defendant or, in proper cases, an involuntary plaintiff. Reed Auto Sales, Inc. v. Empire Delivery Serv., 127 Colo. 205, 254 P.2d 1018 (1953).

Persons summoned if subject to jurisdiction. Persons who are not indispensable to an action, but who ought to be parties if complete relief is to be accorded between those already parties, shall be summoned to appear in the action if subject to the jurisdiction of the court. Woodco v. Lindahl, 152 Colo. 49, 380 P.2d 234 (1963).

Even if it is impossible to join all absentees in a case, the trial court is not necessarily precluded from continuing with the case. Potts v. Gordon, 34 Colo. App. 128, 525 P.2d 500 (1974).

Failure to join a necessary party is not a ground for dismissal of an action. McIntosh v. Romero, 32 Colo. App. 435, 513 P.2d 239 (1973).

Court should join party or allow amendment to complaint. Instead of dismissing a complaint where a necessary party has not been joined, the court should proceed in accordance with this rule, joining the party, or allowing the opportunity to amend the complaint. McIntosh v. Romero, 32 Colo. App. 435, 513 P.2d 239 (1973).

Judgment void. A judgment which adversely affects an indispensable party who is not joined is void. Hidden Lake Dev. Co. v. District Court, 183 Colo. 168, 515 P.2d 632 (1973).

Joinder first raised on appeal. Joinder has been required under this rule after trial where the issue was first raised on appeal. Potts v. Gordon, 34 Colo. App. 128, 525 P.2d 500 (1974).

B. Illustrative Cases.

In action for breach of contract against a subdivision developer in which certain plaintiffs held property in subdivision as joint tenants with their spouses, spouses were indispensable parties. Seago v. Fellett, 676 P.2d 1224 (Colo. App. 1983).

And any error resulting from a failure to insist upon joinder of a spouse who is a co-owner, when the record shows that a party had and rejected a clear opportunity to insist upon joinder at trial, is invited error. Karakehian v. Boyer, 900 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1994).

All individual landowners within a subarea of a subdivision were indispensable parties, notwithstanding that the homeowner's association was a party, where the complaint implicated the interests of all of the individual landowners and the individual landowners had potentially conflicting interests with each other and with the association itself. Dunne v. Shenandoah Homeowners Ass'n, Inc., 12 P.3d 340 (Colo. App. 2000).

One joint owner cannot recover damages to the jointly owned property without joining the other joint owner in the action. Downing v. Don Ward & Co., 28 Colo. App. 75, 470 P.2d 868 (1970).

Individual landowners neither indispensable nor necessary parties in initiative or referendum proceedings dealing with zoning. Individual landowners are neither indispensable nor necessary parties to an action involving initiative and referendum petitions dealing with the zoning of their property as the relief sought can be granted in their absence, and the relief neither impairs nor impedes the landowners' ability to protect their interests and does not involve the risk of multiple inconsistent obligations. Margolis v. District Court, 638 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1981).

Landowners not affected by special use permit not indispensable. Where the grant of special use permits to one landowner does not create a particularized benefit in other owners of land contained within the boundaries of the permit areas, such landowners are not indispensable parties in a proceeding under C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4). Thorne v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 638 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981).

Additional landowners not indispensable parties in action to enforce easement across defendant's property. Although the additional landowners may have been joined permissibly, their presence was not necessary to accord the parties already joined complete relief; the nonjoined parties would not lose their ability to assert their rights; and the defendant would not be exposed to the risk of inconsistent decisions, multiple suits, and related obligations or injuries. Williamson v. Downs, 829 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1992).

Defendant-lawyer is not proper party to action by seller against buyer and guarantor. Where sellers of personal property had two distinct claims: an action on a note and other matters against the buyer and the guarantor and a malpractice action against the lawyer, the lawyer would not have been either a proper or necessary party to the other lawsuit. Deaton v. Mason, 616 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1980).

Where both mortgagor and mortgagee are parties in interest, both should join in the suit. Reed Auto Sales, Inc. v. Empire Delivery Serv., 127 Colo. 205, 254 P.2d 1018 (1953); Centennial Cas. Co. v. Lacey, 133 Colo. 357, 295 P.2d 690 (1956).

No requirement to join persons who have separate notes or contract arrangements with a guarantor. Andrikopoulos v. Minnelusa Co., 911 P.2d 663 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd on other grounds, 929 P.2d 1321 (Colo. 1996).

Plaintiff shall have opportunity to join third party agreements if plaintiff has alleged a meritorious claim that third party agreements have affected its rights and obligations as a judgment debtor and because the equitable issue may again rise if the third party fails to pay promissory note. Lakeside Ventures, LLC v. Lakeside Dev. Co., 68 P.3d 516 (Colo. App. 2002).

The bailor is not a necessary party to an action by the bailee against a third person for injury to the subject matter of the bailment, such person not being exposed to a multiplicity of lawsuits because payment of the damages to the bailee will bar any subsequent suit by the bailor for the same cause of action. Downing v. Don Ward & Co., 28 Colo. App. 75, 470 P.2d 868 (1970).

Other water users need not be joined. In controversies involving the respective rights of users from flowing streams or impounded waters, then, since only the disputed rights between litigants are involved in such proceedings, other users of water from the same source need not be joined. Bender v. District Court, 133 Colo. 12, 291 P.2d 684 (1955).

Water rate petitioners without special interest in appeal not indispensable parties. Petitioners who request that their county commissioners fix a maximum water rate, which would then apply to all water users in the county, and who have no interest in the outcome of the litigation beyond that of all persons subject to the rate are not indispensable parties in an appeal of the ratemaking order. Talbott Farms, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 43 Colo. App. 131, 602 P.2d 886 (1979).

Shareholders in mutual ditch company should be joined in condemnation action. Pursuant to this rule and the court's power under C.A.R. 21, the district court should join as parties to a condemnation action those shareholders in a mutual ditch corporation whose water rights would be affected by the condemnation action of the defendant as of the date of the initiation of the condemnation action and all parties in interest. Jacobucci v. District Court, 189 Colo. 380, 541 P.2d 667 (1975).

In a situation in which a court has been asked to determine the disposition of escrowed money, as a pragmatic matter, the money is there and there is a duty on the part of the judiciary, once asked, to reach a decision on the merits; and to do so means that the trial court must sua sponte join the parties necessary to a determination as to who gets the money. City & County of Denver v. City of Arvada, 192 Colo. 88, 556 P.2d 76 (1976).

The trial court had and currently has an obligation to bring in water users, or their successors in interest, who have paid tap fees requested by Denver as the furnisher of the water for a determination of escrowed tap fees, irrespective of the fact that neither of the original parties moved for joinder. City & County of Denver v. City of Arvada, 192 Colo. 88, 556 P.2d 76 (1976).

County treasurer not indispensable party in proceeding challenging lien priority. In a tax sale the county treasurer who issued the certificate of sale to purchaser of tax sale was not an indispensable party under section (a) of this rule to a proceeding challenging priority of lien of a secured party in the property sold at the tax sale since complete relief could be and was afforded without the treasurer's presence as a party. John Deere Indus. Equip. Co. v. Moorehead, 38 Colo. App. 220, 556 P.2d 91 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 194 Colo. 398, 572 P.2d 1207 (1977).

City council is indispensable party to suit brought seeking review of denial of rezoning petition and failure to join it is a jurisdictional defect requiring dismissal. Dahman v. City of Lakewood, 44 Colo. App. 261, 610 P.2d 1357 (1980).

County was an indispensable party where issue was whether roads that crossed private property were public or private roads. Bittle v. CAM-Colo., LLC, 2012 COA 93, 318 P.3d 65.

An applicant for a zoning variance is an indispensable party to an action challenging the approval of the variance. Norby v. City of Boulder, 195 Colo. 231, 577 P.2d 277 (1978).

Applicant whose request for rezoning is challenged is indispensable party. An applicant whose request for rezoning is challenged in court is an indispensable party to the judicial proceeding. Norby v. City of Boulder, 195 Colo. 231, 577 P.2d 277 (1978).

Applicant for special review use is indispensable party. Applicant for a special review use is an indispensable party to an action challenging approval of special review use. Norby v. City of Boulder, 195 Colo. 231, 577 P.2d 277 (1978).

Fire protection district not necessary party to tax refund action involving allocation for protection. Where a community seeks a refund of taxes mistakenly paid for fire protection from the board of county commissioners, the fire protection district is not a necessary party to the action, and failure by the community to join the district is not a ground for dismissal. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 199 Colo. 338, 607 P.2d 999 (1980).

Claimant who has not intervened in civil rights commission proceeding is not party and service of a petition for judicial review is not required upon that individual under § 24-34-308 (3). Red Seal Potato Chip Co. v. Colo. Civil Rights Comm'n, 44 Colo. App. 381, 618 P.2d 697 (1980).

Child, through guardian ad litem, is indispensable party in dependency and neglect hearing. People in Interest of M.M.T., 676 P.2d 1238 (Colo. App. 1983).

As is applicant for use permit. An applicant for use permit is an indispensable party to a proceeding challenging the grant of the application. Neighbors For A Better Approach v. Nepa, 770 P.2d 1390 (Colo. App. 1989).

III. DETERMINATION BY COURT.

One is not an indispensable party to a suit merely because he has a substantial interest in the subject matter of the litigation. Woodco v. Lindahl, 152 Colo. 49, 380 P.2d 234 (1963).

A mere interest in the subject matter of litigation, even though substantial, is not sufficient in itself to warrant a determination of indispensability. Thorne v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 638 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981).

One is not an indispensable party even though one's interest in the subject matter of the litigation is such that his presence as a party to the suit is required for a complete adjudication in that suit of all questions related to the litigation. Woodco v. Lindahl, 152 Colo. 49, 380 P.2d 234 (1963).

The test for an indispensable party may be stated thus: Is the absent person's interest in the subject matter of the litigation such that no decree can be entered in the case which will do justice between the parties actually before the court without injuriously affecting the right of such absent person? Woodco v. Lindahl, 152 Colo. 49, 380 P.2d 234 (1963); Civil Serv. Comm'n v. District Court, 185 Colo. 179, 522 P.2d 1231 (1974); Civil Serv. Comm'n v. District Court, 186 Colo. 308, 527 P.2d 531 (1974); Intermountain Rubber Industries v. Valdez, 688 P.2d 1133 (Colo. App. 1984); Prutch Bros. TV v. Crow Watson No. 8, 732 P.2d 241 (Colo. App. 1986).

The definition of "indispensable parties" by the U.S. supreme court is: Persons who not only have an interest in the controversy, but an interest of such a nature that a final decree cannot be made without either affecting that interest or leaving the controversy in such a condition that its final termination may be wholly inconsistent with equity and good conscience. Davis v. Maddox, 169 Colo. 433, 457 P.2d 394 (1969).

Whether or not a party is indispensable turns on the facts of each case. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. District Court, 185 Colo. 179, 522 P.2d 1231 (1974); I.M.A., Inc. v. Rocky Mountain Airways, Inc., 713 P.2d 882 (Colo. 1986).

Though injury to the absent party is the most important factor in determining indispensability, other factors are recognized such as the danger of inconsistent decisions, avoidance of a multiplicity of suits, and the reluctance of a court to render a decision which will not finally settle the controversy before it. Davis v. Maddox, 169 Colo. 433, 457 P.2d 394 (1969).

A party permitted to intervene pursuant to C.R.C.P. 24 is not necessarily indispensable pursuant to this rule. C.R.C.P. 24(a)(2) provides for intervention when the applicant claims an interest relating to the property or transaction that is the subject of the action and he or she is so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede his or her ability to protect that interest. Although language of this rule and C.R.C.P. 24 are similar, this rule involves a two-step analysis: (1) Whether the party is necessary within the meaning of section (a) of this rule; and (2) whether the party is indispensable based on the factors of section (b) of this rule. Hicks v. Joondeph, 232 P.3d 248 (Colo. App. 2009).

The issue of indispensability was not waived by the common interest community association where the association raised indispensability to protect the interests of absent parties rather than to protect itself against possible future claims by such parties, and, as the defendant, the association did not choose the parties to the action. Clubhouse at Fairway Pines v. Fairway Pines Estates, 214 P.3d 451 (Colo. App. 2008).

If present trust property is involved and a money judgment is recovered in an action, it will be property of the trust, and so the holder of the legal title should be a party. Davis v. Maddox, 169 Colo. 433, 457 P.2d 394 (1969).

Beneficiaries of a trust are not indispensable parties where the trust is a party to the action and is represented by the trustee. In such a case the beneficiaries' absence does not ''impair or impede'' a complete adjudication of the parties' rights. Francis v. Aspen Mtn. Condo. Ass'n, 2017 COA 19, 401 P.3d 125.

Nonresident shareholders need not be joined if the action is merely one to review the propriety of an election and does not seek any action directly or indirectly against the particular shareholder whose vote is being challenged. State ex rel. Gentles v. Barnholt, 145 Colo. 259, 358 P.2d 466 (1961).

Grantors of a warranty deed which is the subject of an action to determine an adverse possession encumbrance are not indispensable parties to a determination of the dispute. Rivera v. Queree, 145 Colo. 146, 358 P.2d 40 (1960).

Partial assignees of an agreement of a plaintiff, though necessary parties, are not indispensable, and failure to join is not fatal. Centennial Cas. Co. v. Lacey, 133 Colo. 357, 295 P.2d 690 (1956).

Where a judgment creditor and an insured party make an agreement whereby the insured will sue his insurance company to pay off the judgment against him, the judgment creditor is not an indispensable and necessary party, because a third party judgment creditor of an insured cannot sue the insurer. Northland Ins. Co. v. Bashor, 177 Colo. 463, 494 P.2d 1292 (1972).

Even if indispensable parties are omitted, the question of jurisdiction shall not be raised. Centennial Cas. Co. v. Lacey, 133 Colo. 357, 295 P.2d 690 (1956).

Court had jurisdiction to determine that party was indispensable. Although federal court had dismissed actions twice for lack of jurisdiction based on finding that a party was indispensable and therefore diversity did not exist, issue was not res judicata and state court did have jurisdiction since determination of whether a party is indispensable was not substantive question. Sharp Bros. Constr. v. Westvaco Corp., 878 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1994).

If a court can do justice to the parties before it without injuring absent persons, it will do so and shape its relief in such a manner as to preserve the rights of the persons not before the court. Woodco v. Lindahl, 152 Colo. 49, 380 P.2d 234 (1963).

Purchaser pendente lite in mechanic's lien action is not an indispensable party. Abrams v. Colo. Seal and Stripe, Inc., 702 P.2d 765 (Colo. App. 1985).

Party held not to be indispensable. Draper v. Sch. Dist. No. 1, 175 Colo. 216, 486 P.2d 1048 (1971).

The court may dismiss a claim without prejudice at the close of plaintiff's evidence if it concluded that indispensable parties have not been included. Bock v. Brody, 870 P.2d 530 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying county's motion to dismiss under C.R.C.P. 12(b)(5) and 12(b)(6) and section (a) of this rule for failure to join landowners as indispensable parties. A finding that county land use department abused its discretion by refusing to perform ministerial task of accepting application of fire protection district in no way implicated landowner's interests as to make them indispensable parties. Nor did fire protection district's request for a declaration that project could proceed absent an amendment to the planned unit development (PUD). At root, question presented involved which process the district was required to employ in order to build its fire station. This determination did not impair the landowners' ability to protect their interests because, whether the court required a location and extent review, as the district sought, or an amendment to the PUD, which the county believed to be required, the landowners would have had the opportunity to be heard and protect their interests through the applicable statutory processes. Hygiene Fire Prot. Dist. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 205 P.3d 487 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd on other grounds, 221 P.3d 1063 (Colo. 2009).

Court erred in dismissing case for failure to join a party under this rule, the defendant's husband's estate did not need to be joined because complete relief could be accorded between plaintiff and defendant. The defendant was in possession of the life insurance proceeds at issue and the estate had no interest in those proceeds since they were not part of the estate assets. Scott v. Scott, 2018 COA 25, 428 P.3d 626.

Rule 20. Permissive Joinder of Parties

(a) Permissive Joinder. All persons may join in one action as plaintiffs if they assert any right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences and if any question of law or fact common to all these persons will arise in the action. All persons may be joined in one action as defendants if there is asserted against them jointly, severally, or in the alternative, any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences and if any question of law or fact common to all defendants will arise in the action. A plaintiff or defendant need not be interested in obtaining or defending against all the relief demanded. Judgment may be given for one or more of the plaintiffs according to their respective right to relief, and against one or more defendants according to their respective liabilities.

(b) Separate Trials. The court may make such orders as will prevent a party from being embarrassed, delayed, or put to expense by the inclusion of a party against whom he asserts no claim and who asserts no claim against him, and may order separate trials or make other orders to prevent delay or prejudice.

(c) Parties Jointly or Severally Liable. Persons jointly or severally liable upon the same obligation or instrument, including the parties to negotiable instruments and sureties on the same or separate instruments, may all or any of them be sued in the same action, at the option of the plaintiff.

It is within sound discretion of trial court to drop or strike parties, and decision will not be reversed on appeal unless abuse is shown. Corbin by Corbin v. City and County of Denver, 735 P.2d 214 (Colo. App. 1987).

II. PERMISSIVE JOINDER.

Law reviews. For article, "Direct Action Against the Liability Insurer Under the Rules of Civil Procedure", see 22 Dicta 314 (1945).

This rule relates to joinder of parties and has no application to misjoinder of claims. Colo. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. District Court, 126 Colo. 340, 249 P.2d 146 (1952).

This rule relates to multiple plaintiffs and defendants in actions involving common questions of law or fact. Jernigan v. Lakeside Park Co., 136 Colo. 141, 314 P.2d 693 (1957).

There must be such a common question among defendants. Section (a) of this rule requires, in order that a joinder of multiple parties and claims may be sustained, that there shall be a common question of law or fact among the defendants as well as among the plaintiffs. Western Homes, Inc. v. District Court, 133 Colo. 304, 296 P.2d 460 (1956).

It is no longer necessary that each plaintiff have an interest in claims of the other plaintiffs before joining in a common suit with them. Western Homes, Inc. v. District Court, 133 Colo. 304, 296 P.2d 460 (1956); Schwab v. Martin, 165 Colo. 547, 441 P.2d 17 (1968).

Individual claims do not result in a fatal misjoinder. The fact that the claim of each plaintiff is individually his own and free from any right of other plaintiffs to share therein does not result in a fatal misjoinder either of parties or claims. Western Homes, Inc. v. District Court, 133 Colo. 304, 296 P.2d 460 (1956).

Such joinder is discretionary. When the grounds upon which liability is based are mutually exclusive, a request for a joinder pursuant to section (a) of this rule, which deals with permissive parties, is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Draper v. Sch. Dist. No. 1, 175 Colo. 216, 486 P.2d 1048 (1971).

Broadest possible reading, to rule's permissive language is desirable. In view of the full protection allowed by C.R.C.P. 42(b) and section (b) of this rule, it is desirable to give the broadest possible reading to the permissive language of section (a) of this rule. Sutterfield v. District Court, 165 Colo. 225, 438 P.2d 236 (1968).

In action for death caused by negligent operation of motor vehicle, the owner was properly joined with the driver as a party defendant under this rule. Drake v. Hodges, 114 Colo. 10, 161 P.2d 338 (1945).

The administrative law judge's (ALJ) reliance on this rule was misplaced. This rule was not the proper vehicle by which to accomplish joinder because the plaintiff did not, in the first instance, assert any right to relief against the parties whom the ALJ ordered to be joined. However, the ALJ did not abuse his discretion by joining those parties because the question of their liability had been raised and the joinder posed no risk of prejudice. Renaissance Salon v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 994 P.2d 447 (Colo. App. 1999).

Applied in Arms Roofing Co. v. Petrie, 136 Colo. 154, 314 P.2d 903 (1957); Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Bond, 156 Colo. 433, 399 P.2d 793 (1965); O'Neal v. Reliance Mortg. Corp., 721 P.2d 1230 (Colo. App. 1986).

III. SEPARATE TRIALS.

A trial judge is permitted wide discretion when he finds that the necessary prerequisites to separate trials laid down by this rule exist. Sutterfield v. District Court, 165 Colo. 225, 438 P.2d 236 (1968).

Severance cannot be sustained without proper findings. Where a trial court makes no finding that any of the conditions permitting separate trials of properly joined claims are present, a severance cannot be sustained until proper findings are made. Sutterfield v. District Court, 165 Colo. 225, 438 P.2d 236 (1968).

IV. PARTIES JOINTLY OR SEVERALLY LIABLE.

A. In General.

Annotator's note. Since section (c) of this rule is similar to § 13 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The effect of this rule is to abrogate the common-law rule respecting parties to actions on joint contracts of the descriptions specified. Mattison v. Childs, 5 Colo. 78 (1879).

Common-law rule not changed where a joint maker dies. A joint maker having died, a separate action is maintainable against either the survivor or the executors of the deceased, but they cannot, however, be joined in the same action; as against one the judgment would be ''de bonis propriis'', and against the other ''de bonis testatoris''. In this respect, this rule is not believed to have changed the common-law rule. Mattison v. Childs, 5 Colo. 78 (1879).

This rule does not purport in any way to alter the obligations which parties have assumed in their contracts. Bennett v. Morse, 6 Colo. App. 122, 39 P. 582 (1895).

The rule does not make a contract valid which would otherwise be invalid. Bennett v. Morse, 6 Colo. App. 122, 39 P. 582 (1895).

The rule operates merely as an enlargement of the remedy upon a contract, permitting suit to be brought against any of the parties liable or against all, at the plaintiff's pleasure. Bennett v. Morse, 6 Colo. App. 122, 39 P. 582 (1895).

Where parties contract jointly, there must be a joint liability in order that there may be a several liability, for, if a joint agreement is invalid or incapable of enforcement against all of its makers, it is invalid and incapable of enforcement against any one or more of them. Bennett v. Morse, 6 Colo. App. 122, 39 P. 582 (1895).

A stranger to a contract cannot become a party to it without consent of both parties. Kruschke v. Quatsoe, 49 Colo. 312, 112 P. 769 (1910).

A stranger cannot become a surety without such consent within the meaning of this rule, which, in this respect, applies only to persons jointly or severally liable upon the same instrument, including parties to bills of exchange and promissory notes as well as sureties on the same or separate instruments, and not to the independent volunteer guarantor of the payment of the instrument executed by other parties. Kruschke v. Quatsoe, 49 Colo. 312, 112 P. 769 (1910).

Where an action is dismissed as to the principal and continued as to the surety, it is the same as though the action in the first instance had been brought by the obligee against the surety only, and this is permitted by this rule. McAllister v. People, 28 Colo. 156, 63 P. 308 (1900).

If a judgment creditor seeks by "scire facias" to keep a judgment in force, then he must proceed against all defendants. Allen v. Patterson, 69 Colo. 302, 194 P. 934 (1920).

If the judgment creditor selects a new action on the judgment, he need join only such as he elects to join; this conclusion is not only supported by the weight of authority, but is in accord with principles of harmonious and consistent procedure and also with equity and good conscience. Allen v. Patterson, 69 Colo. 302, 194 P. 934 (1920).

This rule is intended to include proceedings in other tribunals besides courts of record. Hughes v. Fisher, 10 Colo. 383, 15 P. 702 (1887).

This rule applies to actions on appeal bonds. Wilson v. Welch, 8 Colo. App. 210, 46 P. 106 (1896), aff'd, 12 Colo. App. 185, 55 P. 201 (1898).

B. Joint and Several Obligations.

Whenever the word "obligation" is used as the name of a contract as it is in this rule, an agreement in writing, sealed or unsealed, is referred to, but, where, in a legislative provision, it is used with reference to legal duty or liability, such duty or liability may arise from an oral or written contract, or, in some instances, from actionable tortious conduct. The word is used in statutes, as well as in textbooks and decisions, with these different meanings, and the significance to be given it in each statute must be gathered from the purpose and context of the enactment. Exchange Bank v. Ford, 7 Colo. 314, 3 P. 449 (1884); Sawyer v. Armstrong, 23 Colo. 287, 47 P. 391 (1896).

"Obligation", as employed in this rule, does not embrace or apply to oral contracts. Exchange Bank v. Ford, 7 Colo. 314, 3 P. 449 (1884); Townsend v. Heath, 106 Colo. 273, 103 P.2d 691 (1940).

It is argued that giving this restricted meaning to the word "obligation" in this rule renders the word "instrument" entirely superfluous; that "instrument" includes all written contracts, sealed as well as simple; and that, unless a court assents to the proposition that "obligation" includes oral contracts, it violates the rule requiring effect to be given, if possible, to all the language. The use of the word "obligation" under the common law was originally confined to sealed instruments of a certain kind, and courts have not always given it the significance adopted under this rule. Exchange Bank v. Ford, 7 Colo. 314, 3 P. 449 (1884).

A joint obligation will not support a judgment in an action brought against but one of the joint obligors. Erskine v. Russell, 43 Colo. 449, 96 P. 249 (1908).

A firm's debts are joint obligations, not joint and several, and action therefore must be brought against the firm, not against an individual member. Erskine v. Russell, 43 Colo. 449, 96 P. 249 (1908).

In an action against an individual for rent under a lease signed by him where it appears that the lease was made to defendant's firm and that defendant was not acting in his individual capacity, the partner should be made a party to the suit. Erskine v. Russell, 43 Colo. 449, 96 P. 249 (1908).

This rule does not apply to partnership obligations. Thompson v. White, 25 Colo. 226, 54 P. 718 (1898).

An action cannot be maintained against the executor or administrator of a deceased partner upon a partnership contract, whether such contract be written or oral, unless it be shown that the partnership has been finally settled and that the partnership assets are insufficient to pay the firm debts. Thompson v. White, 25 Colo. 226, 54 P. 718 (1898).

A contention made by defendant that his "partner" is an indispensable party to an action on a promissory note is without merit where there previously has been an action for a partnership accounting and termination brought by the "partner" which was settled by a stipulation in which defendant agreed to pay certain obligations, including the unpaid balance on the note in question. Sakal v. Donnelly, 30 Colo. App. 384, 494 P.2d 1316 (1972).

Where an obligation is joint and several, an action is proper against either of the joint makers. Milner Bank & Trust Co. v. Estate of Whipple, 61 Colo. 252, 156 P. 1098 (1916).

Where a surety agreement provides that the principal and surety will be jointly and severally liable, a creditor may, at his option, bring an action against both the principal and the surety or either one alone. Fountain Sand & Gravel Co. v. Chilton Constr., 40 Colo. App. 363, 578 P.2d 664 (1978).

One who has indorsed a promissory note previous to its delivery is a maker, and the obligation is joint and several. Tabor v. Miles, 5 Colo. App. 127, 38 P. 64 (1894).

Holder may sue indorser after obtaining judgment against maker. Under this rule the holder of a note who sues the maker and indorser as joint makers, dismisses as to the indorser without prejudice, and obtains judgment against the maker may afterwards sue the indorser. Hamill v. Ward, 14 Colo. 277, 23 P. 330 (1890).

Obligee on appeal bond may sue surety with or without principal. The obligee in a bond given on appeal may, if he so elects, sue the surety thereon without joining the principals, or having joined them and not having procured service of summons upon them, may proceed against the defendant served as if he were the only defendant. Lux v. McLeod, 19 Colo. 465, 36 P. 246 (1894).

Where the liability is several, the parties may be joined. Upon a contract expressing a several liability of the defendants, they may, under this rule, be joined in an action thereon; this construction is in accord with the reform spirit and express purpose of code practice. Irwine v. Wood, 7 Colo. 477, 4 P. 783 (1884).

It is perfectly proper to unite in one suit both the maker and the acceptor of an instrument. Hughes v. Fisher, 10 Colo. 383, 15 P. 702 (1887).

Where an agreement is regarded as one of suretyship and not of guarantee, the subscribers are liable severally as well as jointly. News-Times Publishing Co. v. Doolittle, 51 Colo. 386, 118 P. 974 (1911).

A receiver and purchaser of a railroad may both be proper parties in an action for damages. Where a passenger on a railroad is killed after a foreclosure sale of the road, but before the sale has been consummated and while the road is still being operated by a receiver, and the decree of foreclosure provides that the purchasers should take the property upon condition that they should pay all indebtedness, obligations, or liabilities legally contracted or incurred by the receiver before the delivery of possession, to the extent that the assets or proceeds in the hands of the receiver are insufficient for that purpose, and the property is conveyed to the purchaser and the receiver is discharged under an order which provides that the discharge should not operate to prevent the prosecution in the name of the receiver of any suit then pending, or from defending any suit then pending or which might thereafter be brought against him as such receiver, the receiver and purchaser are both proper parties defendant to an action for damages for the death of such passenger brought after the discharge of such receiver. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Gunning, 33 Colo. 280, 80 P. 727 (1904).

This rule does not apply to an action against two persons who, acting separately, deprive one of what belongs to him, as they are in no sense liable jointly or severally as contemplated. Millard v. Miller, 39 Colo. 103, 88 P. 845 (1907).

Where two parties, acting separately, appropriated to their respective use certain lands belonging to plaintiff, the liability, if any, against them is several and must be availed of, if at all, in separate actions. Millard v. Miller, 39 Colo. 103, 88 P. 845 (1907).

Defendant-lawyer is not proper party to action by seller against buyer and guarantor. Where sellers of personal property had two distinct claims: an action on a note and other matters against the buyer and the guarantor and a malpractice action against the lawyer, the lawyer would not have been either a proper or necessary party to the other lawsuit. Deaton v. Mason, 616 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1980).

Rule 21. Misjoinder and Nonjoinder of Parties

Misjoinder of parties is not ground for dismissal of an action. Parties may be dropped or added by order of the court on motion of any party or of its own initiative at any stage of the action and on such terms as are just. Any claim against a party may be severed and proceeded with separately.

Common-law rule altered. This rule alters the common-law rule requiring dismissal of an entire action in which parties have been improperly joined. King v. W.R. Hall Transp. & Storage Co., 641 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1982).

The proper remedy for misjoinder is to require the party against whom the objection lies to bring in such additional parties as are required or permitted by the rules. Krueger v. Merriman Elec., 29 Colo. App. 492, 488 P.2d 228 (1971).

This requirement can be met either by actually joining the omitted party or by establishing that the rights of the omitted party are properly under the jurisdiction of the court for determination. Krueger v. Merriman Elec., 29 Colo. App. 492, 488 P.2d 228 (1971).

The latter result can be accomplished by an assignment of the right of action to the person who actually prosecutes it, inasmuch as assignments for collection have long been recognized as valid in Colorado, and the assignee thereof is the real party in interest and entitled to prosecute the claim. Krueger v. Merriman Elec., 29 Colo. App. 492, 488 P.2d 228 (1971).

Under this rule parties may be added by order of court on motion at any stage of the proceeding. Lerner v. Stone, 126 Colo. 589, 252 P.2d 533 (1952).

This rule gives a trial court authority, even if one has been made a party, to later sever the claims and to proceed with them separately. Centennial Cas. Co. v. Lacey, 133 Colo. 357, 295 P.2d 690 (1956).

Dropping of party under this rule is equivalent to dismissal without prejudice of the claim against that party. King v. W.R. Hall Transp. & Storage Co., 641 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1982).

Decision to drop parties is within sound discretion of the court and will not be disturbed on appeal unless abuse is shown. King v. W.R. Hall Transp. & Storage Co., 641 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1982).

Applied in Reed Auto Sales, Inc. v. Empire Delivery Serv., Inc., 127 Colo. 205, 254 P.2d 1018 (1953); Linke v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 129 Colo. 165, 268 P.2d 416 (1954); W.R. Hall Transp. & Storage Co. v. King, 43 Colo. App. 202, 606 P.2d 75 (1979); B.C. Inv. Co. v. Throm, 650 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1982); Weyerhaeuser Mortgage Co. v. Equitable General Insurance Co., 686 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1983).

Rule 22. Interpleader

(1) Persons having claims against the plaintiff may be joined as defendants and required to interplead when their claims are such that the plaintiff is or may be exposed to double or multiple liability. It is not ground for objection to the joinder that the claims of the several claimants or the titles on which their claims depend do not have a common origin or are not identical but are adverse to and independent of one another, or that the plaintiff avers that he is not liable in whole or in part to any or all of the claimants. A defendant exposed to similar liability may obtain such interpleader by way of cross claim or counterclaim. The provisions of this Rule supplement and do not in any way limit the joinder of parties permitted in Rule 20.

(2) In any civil action of interpleader, a district court may enter its order restraining all claimants from instituting or prosecuting any proceeding in any court of this state affecting the property, instrument, or obligation involved in the interpleader action until further order of the court.

Such district court shall hear and determine the case, and may discharge the plaintiff from further liability, make the injunction permanent, and make all appropriate orders to enforce its judgment.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''Pleadings, Rules 7 to 25'', see 28 Dicta 368 (1951).

Rule must be given liberal construction. In determining the right of one to intervene in an action, the liberal construction of the rules of civil procedure called for in C.R.C.P. 1 must be followed. Senne v. Conley, 110 Colo. 270, 133 P.2d 381 (1943).

Trial court's order not subject to collateral attack in interpleader action. McLeod v. Provident Mut. Life Ins. Co., 186 Colo. 234, 526 P.2d 1318 (1974).

Amended pleading asserting an interpleader claim is not futile if it alleges facts sufficient to support a reasonable belief that exposure to double or multiple liability may exist. Certainty of exposure to double or multiple liability is not the test; rather, the allegations must meet a minimum threshold of substantiality. Benton v. Adams, 56 P.3d 81 (Colo. 2002).

For earlier cases affording a limited sort of interpleader, see Fischer v. Hanna, 8 Colo. App. 471, 47 P. 303 (1896); Price v. Lucky Four Gold Mining Co., 56 Colo. 163, 136 P. 1021 (1913); Engineer's Constr. Corp. v. Tolbert, 74 Colo. 542, 223 P. 56 (1924) (decided under § 18 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

Rule 23. Class Actions

(a) Prerequisites to Class Action. One or more members of a class may sue or be sued as representative parties on behalf of all only if: (1) The class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable; (2) there are questions of law or fact common to the class; (3) the claims or defenses of the representative parties are typical of the claims or defenses of the class; and (4) the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class.

(b) Class Actions Maintainable. Any action may be maintained as a class action if the prerequisites of section (a) are satisfied, and in addition:

(1) The prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of the class would create a risk of:

(A) Inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the class which would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class; or

(B) Adjudications with respect to individual members of the class which would as a practical matter be dispositive of the interests of the other members not parties to the adjudications or substantially impair or impede their ability to protect their interest; or

(2) The party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief with respect to the class as a whole; or

(3) The court finds that the questions of law or fact common to the members of the class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, and that a class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy. The matters pertinent to the findings include:

(A) The interest of members of the class in individually controlling the prosecution or defense of separate actions;

(B) The extent and nature of any litigation concerning the controversy already commenced by or against members of the class;

(C) The desirability or undesirability of concentrating the litigation of the claims in the particular forum;

(D) The difficulties likely to be encountered in the management of class action.

(c) Determination by Order Whether Class Action to be Maintained; Notice; Judgment; Actions Conducted Partially as Class Actions.

(1) As soon as practicable after the commencement of an action brought as a class action, the court shall determine by order whether it is to be so maintained. An order under this section (c) may be conditional, and may be altered or amended before the decision on the merits.

(2) In any class action maintained under subsection (b)(3), the court shall direct to the members of the class the best notice practicable under the circumstances, including individual notice to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort. The notice shall advise each member that: (A) The court will exclude him from the class if he so requests by a specified date; (B) the judgment, whether favorable or not, will include all members who do not request exclusion; and (C) any member who does not request exclusion may, if he desires, enter an appearance through his counsel.

(3) The judgment in an action maintained as a class action under subsections (b)(1) or (b)(2), whether or not favorable to the class, shall include and describe those whom the court finds to be members of the class. The judgment in an action maintained as a class action under subsection (b)(3), whether or not favorable to the class, shall include and specify or describe those to whom the notice provided in subsection (c)(2) was directed, and who have not requested exclusion, and whom the court finds to be members of the class.

(4) When appropriate: (A) An action may be brought or maintained as a class action with respect to particular issues, or (B) a class may be divided into subclasses and each subclass treated as a class, and the provisions of this Rule shall then be construed and applied accordingly.

(d) Orders in Conduct of Actions. In the conduct of actions to which this Rule applies, the court may make appropriate orders:

(1) Determining the course of proceedings or prescribing measures to prevent undue repetition or complication in the presentation of evidence or argument;

(2) Requiring, for the protection of the members of the class or otherwise for the fair conduct of the action, the notice be given in such manner as the court may direct to some or all of the members of any step in the action, or of the proposed extent of the judgment, or of the opportunity of members to signify whether they consider the representation fair and adequate, to intervene and present claims or defenses, or otherwise to come into the action;

(3) Imposing conditions on the representative parties or on intervenors;

(4) Requiring that the pleadings be amended to eliminate therefrom allegations as to representation of absent persons, and that the action proceed accordingly;

(5) Dealing with similar procedural matters. The orders may be combined with an order under Rule 16, and may be altered or amended as may be desirable from time to time.

(e) Dismissal or Compromise. A class action shall not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of the court, and notice of the proposed dismissal or compromise shall be given to all members of the class in such manner as the court directs.

(f) Appeals. An appeal from an order granting or denying class certification under this rule may be allowed pursuant to the procedures set forth in C.R.S. § 13-20-901 (2003).

(g) Disposition of Residual Funds.

(1) ''Residual Funds'' are funds that remain after the payment of all approved class member claims, expenses, litigation costs, attorneys' fees, and other court-approved disbursements to implement the relief granted. Nothing in this rule is intended to limit the parties to a class action from suggesting, or the trial court from approving, a settlement that does not create residual funds.

(2) Any order, judgment, or approved settlement in a class action certified under this rule that establishes a process for identifying and compensating members of the class shall provide for the disbursement of residual funds, if any. In matters where the claims process has been exhausted and residual funds remain, not less than fifty percent (50%) of the residual funds shall be disbursed to the Colorado Lawyer Trust Account Foundation (COLTAF) to support activities and programs that promote access to the civil justice system for low income residents of Colorado. The court may disburse the balance of any residual funds beyond the minimum percentage to COLTAF or to any other entity for purposes that have a direct or indirect relationship to the objectives of the underlying litigation or otherwise promote the substantive or procedural interests of members of the certified class.

Courts must liberally construe this rule because its policy favors maintaining class actions. When evaluating whether this rule's requirements are met, courts must generally accept as true the allegations supporting certification and must not base determination on whether the class will ultimately succeed in establishing each element necessary to prove its claim. Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Benzing, 206 P.3d 812 (Colo. 2009).

A designation of an action as a class action does not make it so when the facts show otherwise. Associated Master Barbers, Local 115 v. Journeyman Barbers, Local 205, 132 Colo. 52, 285 P.2d 599 (1955).

Failure to meet the mandatory requirements of section (a) is grounds for denial. Borwick v. Bober, 34 Colo. App. 423, 529 P.2d 1351 (1974).

Failure to qualify under one of the subsections of section (b) is grounds for denial. Medina v. Conseco Annuity Assurance Co., 121 P.3d 345 (Colo. App. 2005); Town of Breckenridge v. Egencia, LLC, 2018 COA 8, __ P.3d __.

Determination of whether requirements met within discretion of trial court. The determination of whether an action does or does not meet the requirements of a class action is within the discretion of the trial court. Borwick v. Bober, 34 Colo. App. 423, 529 P.2d 1351 (1974); State v. Buckley Powder Co., 945 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1997); Medina v. Conseco Annuity Assurance Co., 121 P.3d 345 (Colo. App. 2005); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Reyher, 266 P.3d 383 (Colo. 2011).

Need for class certification under section (b)(3) is permissible, but not dispositive, when common questions of law or fact predominate. State v. Buckley Powder Co., 945 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1997).

The decision of whether to certify a class action lies within the discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed unless the decision is clearly erroneous and an abuse of discretion. Friends of Cham. Music v. City & County of Denver, 696 P.2d 309 (Colo. 1985); Villa Sierra Condo. v. Field Corp., 787 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1990); Rosenthal v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 883 P.2d 522 (Colo. App. 1994); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Reyher, 266 P.3d 383 (Colo. 2011).

Where trial court conducts rigorous analysis of the evidence in making its class certification decision, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in making its decision. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Reyher, 266 P.3d 383 (Colo. 2011).

A trial court's determination whether the action should be accorded class treatment may not be set aside, unless that determination constitutes ''clear error''. Berco Res., Inc. v. Louisiana Land & Exploration Co., 805 P.2d 1132 (Colo. App. 1990); Robinson v. Lynmar Racquet Club, Inc., 851 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993).

Because a trial court's decision to decertify a class is equivalent to a decision to deny class certification in the first instance, whether to decertify the class also lies within the trial court's discretion. Benzing v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 179 P.3d 103 (Colo. App. 2007), rev'd on other grounds, 206 P.3d 812 (Colo. 2009).

Prior partial certifications are not determinative. The court is not required to certify a class for claims that had been previously certified in a partial settlement context against other settling defendants. Toothman v. Freeborn & Peters, 80 P.3d 804 (Colo. App. 2002).

Trial court may act sua sponte to create subclasses. Toothman v. Freeborn & Peters, 80 P.3d 804 (Colo. App. 2002).

Trial court is given broad discretion regarding whether to certify a class action under this rule and that decision will not be disturbed unless clearly erroneous and an abuse of discretion. Trial court determination that plaintiffs failed to demonstrate typicality is clearly not erroneous. Ammons v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 897 P.2d 860 (Colo. App. 1995); Buckley Powder Co. v. State, 924 P.2d 1133 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 945 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1997).

However, no review of the validity of the certification of a class is necessary where all reasonable steps to provide the ''best notice practicable'' to members of the class as required by section (c)(2) have not been taken, resulting in the decertification of the class. Friends of Cham. Music v. City & County of Denver, 696 P.2d 309 (Colo. 1985).

Trial court abused discretion in certifying plaintiff's class as appropriate where no detailed findings were made which would have delineated the class or subclass with respect to each issue, especially in light of the large class and wide range of issues presented. Goebel v. Colo. Dept. of Insts., 764 P.2d 785 (Colo. 1988).

Trial court abused discretion in certifying two classes because it failed to rigorously analyze or even take into account defendant's evidence, offered to rebut class-wide inferences of causation, that the causation and amount of any damages to plaintiffs could only be determined by independent examination of each plaintiff's purchase transaction. Garcia v. Medved Chevrolet, Inc., 263 P.3d 92 (Colo. 2011).

Where the trial court failed to recognize its obligation to provide damages due to its misreading of the McKesson Corp. v. Division of Alcoholic Beverages and Tobacco, Dept. of Business Regulation of Florida, 496 U.S. 18 (1990), decision, the trial court must reconsider its reliance on that decision as a justification for denying class certification. State v. Buckley Powder Co., 945 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1997).

Source of determination of maintainability of class action. Where the complaint lacks sufficient factual material upon which to make a decision as to whether a class action is to be maintained, the trial court may consider affidavits and exhibits, but, absent a timely request to provide the court with further information in the form of affidavits, discovery, or evidence, the trial court may determine this issue based upon allegations of the complaint alone. Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 40 Colo. App. 285, 579 P.2d 642 (1977), aff'd, 197 Colo. 293, 592 P.2d 410 (1979).

The determination of an action's class status may require more than a review of the pleadings; its resolution may well demand consideration of the nature of the evidence that will be presented. Thus, it is generally better practice for a trial court to hold an evidentiary hearing upon the question of class certification. Villa Sierra Condo. v. Field Corp., 787 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1990); Medina v. Conseco Annuity Assurance Co., 121 P.3d 345 (Colo. App. 2005).

A trial court must rigorously analyze the evidence presented and determine that each requirement of this rule is met in order to certify a class. A trial court may consider factual or legal disputes, including expert disputes, to the extent necessary to determine whether the requirements have been met, but may not resolve factual or legal disputes to screen out or prejudge the merits of the case. Jackson v. Unocal Corp., 262 P.3d 874 (Colo. 2011); Maxwell v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 2014 COA 2, 342 P.3d 474.

There is often an overlap between the class certification decision and the merits of the case, particularly in the context of the predominance inquiry under section (b)(3). Jackson v. Unocal Corp., 262 P.3d 874 (Colo. 2011); Maxwell v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 2014 COA 2, 342 P.3d 474.

The trial court is precluded only from resolving a factual or legal dispute that goes solely to the merits of the case, while considering the issues to the extent necessary to satisfy itself that the requirements of this rule have been met. Maxwell v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 2014 COA 2, 342 P.3d 474.

Focus is whether the proof presented at trial will be predominantly common to the class or primarily individualized. Medina v. Conseco Annuity Assurance Co., 121 P.3d 345 (Colo. App. 2005).

Class representatives need only establish a nexus between their claims or defenses and the common questions of fact or law that unite the case. Members of class may have varying damages amounts and still establish the typicality requirement. Devora v. Strodtman, 2012 COA 87, 282 P.3d 528.

Existence of a common nucleus of operative fact is the standard used by many courts. Medina v. Conseco Annuity Assurance Co., 121 P.3d 345 (Colo. App. 2005).

Where plaintiff alleged misconduct by insurer in charging higher premiums than stated in policy, the fact that the insurer used at least seven different types of policies, with varying statements of the amounts and payment schedules for premiums, precluded class certification. Medina v. Conseco Annuity Assurance Co., 121 P.3d 345 (Colo. App. 2005).

Early determination of feasibility of class action is preferred so that ample notice may be given to members of the class to appear in the action, seek exclusion from the class, or object to the representation by the plaintiffs, and, so that, if certification is properly denied, applicable statutes of limitations will not have run. Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 40 Colo. App. 285, 579 P.2d 642 (1977), aff'd, 197 Colo. 293, 592 P.2d 410 (1979).

Actual size of defined class is significant factor in the determination that the class is sufficiently large to render joinder impracticable and mere speculation as to size is insufficient. Kniffin v. Colo. W. Dev. Co., 622 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1980).

Sections (c) and (d) grant to a trial court substantial discretion to create subclasses with respect to separate issues or to enter other orders designed to manage the litigation. Thus, to the extent that a fraud claim alleged by plaintiffs could be asserted only by those condominium unit owners to whom a specific representation was made, the court, after receipt of evidence upon the matter, could either refuse class action treatment with respect to that claim or create a separate class for its assertion, depending upon the nature of any alleged representation and the number of present unit owners to whom it was allegedly made. Villa Sierra Condo. v. Field Corp., 787 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1990).

Creation of smaller class or of subclasses is an option if the original definition of a class is too broad; however, the burden is on the plaintiff not the court to suggest these alternatives. Medina v. Conseco Annuity Assurance Co., 121 P.3d 345 (Colo. App. 2005).

In a class action under this rule where the interests sought to be represented are not in full harmony with the plaintiff, he cannot maintain a class action in their behalf. Associated Master Barbers, Local 115 v. Journeyman Barbers, Local 205, 132 Colo. 52, 285 P.2d 599 (1955); Darnall v. City of Englewood, 740 P.2d 536 (Colo. App. 1987); Robinson v. Lynmar Racquet Club, Inc., 851 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993).

Very nature of "habeas corpus" forfends class actions. Although ''habeas corpus'' is a civil proceeding, this rule of civil procedure, providing for class actions, does not apply; the very nature of ''habeas corpus'' proceedings forfends class actions. Riley v. City & County of Denver, 137 Colo. 312, 324 P.2d 790 (1958).

Under this rule, in order to qualify persons as members of a class, there must be some status or relationship in common between them which arises out of circumstances other than that of conducting business under a common name as an unincorporated association. Thomas v. Dunne, 131 Colo. 20, 279 P.2d 427 (1955).

Members who make up an unincorporated association do not, by the bare fact of common membership, constitute a "class" within the meaning of this rule. Thomas v. Dunne, 131 Colo. 20, 279 P.2d 427 (1955).

A voluntary condominium association has standing and may maintain an action on behalf of its members if: (1) Its members would otherwise have standing to sue in their own right; (2) the interests sought to be protected are germane to the association's purpose; and (3) neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the litigation. Villa Sierra Condo. v. Field Corp., 787 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1990).

As to the third part of the test, while an association may generally obtain declaratory or injunctive relief without joining its members, any litigation designed to obtain damages on their behalf would normally require the member's presence. Villa Sierra Condo. v. Field Corp., 787 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1990).

Class action may be maintained by an association of public employees seeking declaratory judgment pertaining to longevity pay increases. Colo. Ass'n of Pub. Employees v. Colo. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 31 Colo. App. 369, 505 P.2d 54 (1972).

Burden of establishing that action should proceed as class action on party seeking. In any application to proceed as a class action, the burden of establishing that an action should proceed as a class action is on the party seeking to utilize the class action. Borwick v. Bober, 34 Colo. App. 423, 529 P.2d 1351 (1974); Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 40 Colo. App. 285, 579 P.2d 642 (1977), aff'd, 197 Colo. 293, 592 P.2d 410 (1979); Villa Sierra Condo. v. Field Corp., 787 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1990); Robinson v. Lynmar Racquet Club, Inc., 851 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993); Medina v. Conseco Annuity Assurance Co., 121 P.3d 345 (Colo. App. 2005).

In class actions the courts have broad discretion to shape and administer judicial relief. Gorin v. Arizona Columbine Ranch, Inc., 34 Colo. App. 405, 527 P.2d 899 (1974).

A party requesting class action certification has the burden of proving that all the requisites of this rule have been satisfied. Kniffin v. Colo. W. Dev. Co., 622 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1980).

A class action advocate bears the burden of demonstrating that the claims being asserted may properly be accorded class action treatment. Before a plaintiff may have one or more of its claims treated as class claims it must initially demonstrate that the numerosity, commonality, typicality, and adequacy of representation requirements of section (a) are met. Berco Res., Inc. v. Louisiana Land & Exploration Co., 805 P.2d 1132 (Colo. App. 1990).

Plaintiffs had the burden of demonstrating the propriety of a class action. However, if the plaintiffs make an initial demonstration that a class action is appropriate under section (b)(3), then defendants cannot rely only upon the general allegations of a pleading to argue that common issues do not predominate over individual ones. They must, at the least, describe in some detail the nature of the evidence that they intend to produce upon the issue, so that the court may render an informed judgment upon the predominance of common legal or factual issues over individual ones. Villa Sierra Condo. v. Field Corp., 787 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1990).

A "predominant" issue need not be one that is determinative of a defendant's liability. Rather, when one or more of the central issues in the action are common to the class and can be said to predominate, the action is proper under section (b)(3), even though other matters will have to be tried separately. Thus, resolution of common issues need not guarantee a conclusive finding on liability. Villa Sierra Condo. v. Field Corp., 787 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1990).

Individual issues regarding applicable statute of limitations do not necessarily defeat class certification. Named plaintiffs in a class action may demonstrate ignorance or reliance on a class-wide basis necessary to toll the statute of limitations using circumstantial evidence that is common to the class. Patterson v. BP Am. Prod. Co., 240 P.3d 456 (Colo. App. 2010), aff'd, 263 P.3d 103 (Colo. 2011).

Ignorance and reliance elements of fraudulent concealment may be inferred from circumstantial evidence, enabling plaintiffs to establish a theory of fraudulent concealment on a class-wide basis with evidence common to the class. BP Am. Prod. Co. v. Patterson, 263 P.3d 103 (Colo. 2011); Maxwell v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 2014 COA 2, 342 P.3d 474.

Trial court failed to consider, in class certification issue, whether claims for damages were appropriate for class and if so whether notice to individual class members was required. Goebel v. Colo. Dept. of Insts., 764 P.2d 785 (Colo. 1988).

Litigants should be afforded opportunity to present evidence as to whether class action is maintainable, which implies sufficient discovery; however, a plaintiff may not rely on the theory that discovery and an evidentiary hearing are a matter of right, without making a minimal showing as to the requirements of this rule. Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 197 Colo. 293, 592 P.2d 410 (1979).

Once excluded from a class action, such excluded members are not to be included within any judgment of the court, whether adverse or favorable. Gorin v. Arizona Columbine Ranch, Inc., 34 Colo. App. 405, 527 P.2d 899 (1974).

Generally, only a named class member may challenge settlement agreement. Absent intervention, an unnamed class member does not have standing to appeal the approval of a settlement agreement and plan of allocation. However, an unnamed class member who has not been permitted to intervene may also have standing to bring a direct appeal if a motion to intervene, which is then appealed, should have been granted. Higley v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 920 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1996).

Where certain plaintiffs in a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 class action are dismissed because they have no claims under § 1983, and such plaintiffs are not representatives of a class of persons who may have claims under § 1983 and remain in the action, they cannot represent the class on appeal. Casados v. City & County of Denver, 924 P.2d 1192 (Colo. App. 1996).

Disallowance of discovery after dismissal. The trial court, after dismissing a class action, does not abuse its discretion in declining to allow discovery when that request is made for the first time in a motion for rehearing. Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 40 Colo. App. 285, 579 P.2d 642 (1977), aff'd, 197 Colo. 293, 592 P.2d 410 (1979).

Where plaintiffs fail to request right to amend complaint for the purpose of demonstrating that their class action should be maintained, either prior to a trial court ruling on a motion to dismiss or in a motion for rehearing filed thereafter, they are precluded from raising that issue on appeal. Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 40 Colo. App. 285, 579 P.2d 642 (1977), aff'd, 197 Colo. 293, 592 P.2d 410 (1979).

Trial court's approval of settlement for fundamental fairness must balance at least: The strength of the plaintiffs' case; the risk, expense, complexity, and likely duration of further litigation; the risk of maintaining class action status throughout the trial; the amount offered in settlement; the extent of discovery completed, and the stage of the proceedings; the experience and views of counsel; the presence of a governmental participant; and the reaction of the class members to the proposed settlement. Helen G. Bonfils Found. v. Denver Post Employees Stock Trust, 674 P.2d 997 (Colo. App. 1983).

Extent of court's discretion in approving settlements summarized in Higley v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 920 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1996).

Same legal principles apply in appellate review of total settlement, as between defendants and the class as a whole, and of an agreement for allocation of the settlement proceeds among class members. Higley v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 920 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1996).

Settlement needs not benefit all class members equally. However, a court may refuse to approve a settlement when a disparity of benefits to be received among the class members evidences either substantive unfairness or inadequate representation. Higley v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 920 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1996).

Evaluation of a proposed settlement or allocation plan is a fact-specific inquiry. Higley v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 920 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1996).

No error in approval of settlement plan. Where the trial court considered all factors when weighing the fairness of a proposed settlement and, based upon all considerations, approved the settlement plan, there was no error. Helen G. Bonfils Found. v. Denver Post Employees Stock Trust, 674 P.2d 997 (Colo. App. 1983).

Defendant required to assist plaintiff in sending notice of the class action to the members of the class. Although the costs of sending notices of a class action lawsuit to the members of the class usually are borne by the plaintiff, there are situations where the defendant is better able to perform the mailing and incur the associated costs. The district court did not abuse its discretion when it required the defendant to send the notices since the defendant makes periodic mailings to class members and such notices could be included at insubstantial expense to the defendant. Mountain States v. District Court, 778 P.2d 667 (Colo. 1989), cert. denied, 493 U. S. 893, 110 S. Ct. 519, 107 L. Ed. 2d 520 (1989).

Four elements must be addressed prior to issuing a restraint on future communications during the pre-certification period. Several factors guide the trial court in considering the formulation of restrictions on future communication by a defendant to putative class members, including the: (1) Severity and likelihood of perceived harm; (2) precision with which the order is drawn; (3) availability of a less onerous alternative; and (4) duration of the order. Air Commc'n & Satellite Inc. v. EchoStar Satellite Corp., 38 P.3d 1246 (Colo. 2002).

Applicability of statutes of limitation and repose under federal tolling doctrines. As long as a party seeking to act as a class representative does not commence a new, separate suit as class representative, but merely seeks to mintain the currently pending and timely filed action as a class action and act as class representative, a statute of repose that would otherwise constitute a defense as to that party, disqualifying the party as a class representative, does not apply. Rosenthal v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 883 P.2d 522 (Colo. App. 1994).

The commencement of a class action suspends the applicable statute of limitations as to all asserted members of the class who would have been parties had the suit been permitted to continue as a class action. Once the statute of limitations has been tolled, it remains tolled for all members of the putative class until class certification is denied. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Boellstorff, 540 F.3d 1223 (10th Cir. 2008) (citing Am. Pipe & Constr. Co. v. Utah, 414 U.S. 538, 94 S. Ct. 756, 38 L. Ed. 2d 713 (1974), and Crown, Cork & Seal Co. v. Parker, 462 U.S. 345, 103 S. Ct. 2392, 76 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1983)).

Class actions for injunctive relief certified under section (b)(2) do not preclude individual actions for damages. Jahn ex rel. Jahn v. ORCR, Inc., 92 P.3d 984 (Colo. 2004).

Section (b)(2) is applicable where the relief sought is predominantly injunctive or declaratory, and does not apply where the primary claim is for damages. If the primary claim is for injunctive or declaratory relief and damages are also requested, the case can proceed as a section (b)(2) action without notice to class members if the damages claim can be characterized as incidental in nature. Goebel v. Colo. Dept. of Insts., 764 P.2d 785 (Colo. 1988).

Due process, as well as the requirements of the claim preclusion doctrine, must be satisfied before a class action can bind class members for a class judgment. While courts have held that due process is satisfied in class actions for injunctive relief when class members are adequately represented, minimal due process requires both notice and adequate representation in class claims for monetary damages since there is a property right at stake. Jahn ex rel. Jahn v. ORCR, Inc., 92 P.3d 984 (Colo. 2004).

Because section (b)(3) includes due process safeguards necessary to preclude class members from bringing individual suits for damages and section (b)(2) lacks such safeguards, section (b)(2) was not intended to certify actions that preclude individual suits for damages. Section (b)(2), which authorizes class actions for injunctive relief and lacks notice and other procedural requirements, reflects that due process may only require adequate representation to bind class members to judgments for injunctive relief. In contrast, section (b)(3), which governs class actions for damages and imposes specific notice requirements, embodies due process requirements necessary to bind class members to judgments for monetary relief. Jahn ex rel. Jahn v. ORCR, Inc., 92 P.3d 984 (Colo. 2004).

Federal cases under Fed.R.Civ.P. 23 are persuasive because C.R.C.P. 23 is virtually identical to the federal rule. Goebel v. Dept. of Insts., 764 P.2d 785 (Colo. 1988); Rosenthal v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 883 P.2d 522 (Colo. App. 1994); Higley v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 920 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1996); Medina v. Conseco Annuity Assurance Co., 121 P.3d 345 (Colo. App. 2005).

Failure strictly to comply with section (c)(3) does not preclude appellate review of the judgment. A failure of such compliance is merely a clerical defect correctable under C.R.C.P. 60(a). Any such defect does not toll the time for filing a notice of appeal. Goodwin v. Homeland Cent. Ins. Co., 172 P.3d 938 (Colo. App. 2007).

Class certification for fifty-five home rule cities seeking to impose taxes, interest, and penalties on online travel companies inappropriate under section (b)(2) because cities were primarily seeking monetary damages. Town of Breckenridge v. Egencia, LLC, 2018 COA 8, __ P.3d __.

Common questions do not predominate over fifty-five home rule cities with material differences in municipal accommodation tax ordinances that wish to be granted class action status to impose taxes, interest, and penalties on online travel companies. Class action is not the superior available method for the fair and efficient resolution of this issue under section (b)(3). Town of Breckenridge v. Egencia, LLC, 2018 COA 8, __ P.3d __.

Rule 23.1. Derivative Actions by Shareholders

In a derivative action brought by one or more shareholders or members to enforce a right of a corporation or of an unincorporated association, the corporation or association having failed to enforce a right which may properly be asserted by it, the complaint shall be verified and shall allege that the plaintiff was a shareholder or member at the time of the transaction of which he complains or that his share or membership thereafter devolved on him by operation of law. The complaint shall also allege with particularity the efforts, if any, made by the plaintiff to obtain the action he desires from the directors or comparable authority and, if necessary, from the shareholders or members, and the reasons for his failure to obtain the action or for not making the effort. The derivative action may not be maintained if it appears that the plaintiff does not fairly and adequately represent the interests of the shareholders or members similarly situated in enforcing the right of the corporation or association. The action shall not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of the court, and notice of the proposed dismissal or compromise shall be given to shareholders or members in such manner as the court directs.

ANNOTATION

The purpose underlying the requirements of this rule is to avoid the possibility of a multiplicity of lawsuits against corporations by individual stockholders or small groups of stockholders. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971).

This rule avoids multiple suits by condominium unit owners against the condominium association or against the wrongdoers. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 205, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

Courts have generally been careful to regard the derivative suit as an extraordinary remedy, which is available to the shareholder, as the corporation's representative, only when there is no other road to redress. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971).

The purpose of a derivative action is to recover sums owed the corporation. O'Malley v. Casey, 42 Colo. App. 85, 589 P.2d 1388 (1979).

The fact that a shareholder is a judgment creditor of the corporation does not automatically render such shareholder ineligible to maintain a derivative action. New Crawford Valley, Ltd. v. Benedict, 847 P.2d 642 (Colo. App. 1993).

The requirements of this rule are mandatory. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

This rule encourages corporation rather than shareholders to sue. The purpose of this rule is to encourage the corporation itself, rather than the shareholders in its behalf, to sue for redress of corporate claims. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 205, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

Stockholder may maintain a personal action only if actions of third party that injure corporation result from a violation of a duty owed to him as a stockholder and cause injury unique to himself and not suffered by other stockholders. Security Nat'l Bank v. Peters, Writer, & Christensen, Inc., 39 Colo. App. 344, 569 P.2d 875 (1977); Nicholson v. Ash, 800 P.2d 1352 (Colo. App. 1990); Kim v. Grover C. Coors Trust, 179 P.3d 86 (Colo. App. 2007).

This rule does not preclude derivative suit by corporation with only one minority stockholder. Clemons v. Wallace, 42 Colo. App. 17, 592 P.2d 14 (1978).

Compliance must be shown on face of complaint. In order to pursue a shareholder's derivative action, compliance must be shown on the face of the complaint. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

Where it is obvious from the face of the complaint that the requisite demand upon shareholders was not made and no explanation for the lack of demand is offered, an action by the stockholder will not lie. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

Redress must first be sought from the directors. Courts will not interfere with the internal affairs and management of a corporation on the complaint of an individual stockholder or a small group of stockholders, unless it appears from the allegations of the complaint that all efforts to obtain redress from the directors have been exhausted or would have been futile. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971).

Redress must then be sought from stockholders. When a stockholder or group of stockholders has exhausted all efforts to obtain redress from the directors, or where such efforts would have been futile, the stockholder must then make demand upon and seek relief from the stockholders of the corporation. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971).

Record was insufficient to allow the trial court to conclude as a matter of law that plaintiffs were required to make a demand upon over 8,000 shareholders before they filed their complaint. New Crawford Valley, Ltd. v. Benedict, 847 P.2d 642 (Colo. App. 1993).

Demands for desired action need not be made by shareholder plaintiffs upon directors allegedly involved as wrongdoers. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971); Hirsch v. Jones Intercable, Inc., 984 P.2d 629 (Colo. 1999).

A demand need be made only upon the directors who are in office at the time suit is commenced. A substantial change in membership of the board after suit is filed does not give rise to a requirement that a new demand for action be made. A contrary result would be overly burdensome to plaintiffs. New Crawford Valley, Ltd. v. Benedict, 847 P.2d 642 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where it is demonstrated that making demand on shareholders in connection with nonratifiable wrongs of directors would involve unreasonable expense and effort, there is considerable authority that this would outweigh the merits of making the demand and that the demand therefore should be excused under such circumstances. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971).

Demand upon shareholders is excused when the allegations in plaintiff's complaint are of such a nature and are stated with sufficient particularity as to indicate that such demand would be futile. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

Where directors and controlling shareholders are antagonistic, a demand upon them is presumptively futile and no demand need be made. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

Where the number of shareholders is not pled as an excuse, nor is it accompanied by any allegation regarding unreasonable costs of making the demand, a court will not determine whether thousands of shareholders do, or do not, formulate a valid basis for an excuse in making demand on them. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971).

That the shareholders could not ratify the alleged wrongs because of the illegal nature of the wrongs is not an acceptable reason or a valid excuse for not making a demand on the shareholders. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971).

The purpose of making demand on the shareholders is to inform them of the alleged nonratifiable wrongs, to seek their participation in available courses of action such as the removal of the involved directors and the election of new directors who will seek the redress required in the circumstances, or to secure shareholder approval of an action for damages to the corporation caused by the alleged wrongdoing directors. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971).

Where plaintiffs allege that the defendant directors frustrated their attempt to secure a shareholders list by unreasonable restrictions, this is not a valid excuse for not making demand on the stockholders. Bell v. Arnold, 175 Colo. 277, 487 P.2d 545 (1971).

A shareholder or member must make demand on all claims or suit barred. A corporate shareholder or member cannot, consistent with the requirements of this rule, make a demand upon the corporation as to certain claims, and then attempt to sue derivatively on other claims. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 205, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

Summary judgment for failure of complaint to allege demand is error. Where the fact of the futility of a shareholder demand is placed in issue by the depositions and exhibits in the court file, it is error to grant summary judgment on the ground that plaintiff's complaint fails to allege the demand for shareholder relief required by this rule. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

A complaint that specifically alleges that a demand was made by one plaintiff on the board of directors to require the president of the corporation to pay sums which he received as a premium for stock sold and that such demand was refused is sufficient not only to plead the demand, but also to set forth the reasons why another plaintiff was excused from making a second demand for the same action. Allegations that the board of directors breached a duty of care owed to the corporation and its shareholders was sufficient to establish reason for plaintiff's failure to make further demands. Greenfield v. Hamilton Oil Corp., 760 P.2d 664 (Colo. App. 1988).

Dismissal of complaint for lack of verification was error. While the original complaint, as filed, had not been verified, where a notarized verification of the complaint, which had been signed and verified by plaintiff on November 21, 1972, was filed with the court on May 16, 1975, and defendant had failed to raise the issue until some two and one-half years after the complaint was filed, defendant waived the defect. Hence, the trial court erred in dismissing plaintiff's complaint on the ground that the verification required by this rule was lacking. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

Summary dismissal of complaint based on special litigation committee recommendations was error. There is no basis to dismiss a claim asserted by plaintiffs in a derivative action where the ultimate decision to seek dismissal of such action was not made by the special litigation committee, but was a decision adopted by those persons who, as defendants in the litigation, had a vital personal interest in that decision. Greenfield v. Hamilton Oil Corp., 760 P.2d 664 (Colo. App. 1988).

Private settlements prevented. The provision that ''[t]he action shall not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of the court, and notice of the proposed dismissal or compromise shall be given to shareholders or members in such manner as the court directs'' was intended to prevent private settlements between a plaintiff shareholder and the defendants. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 205, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

An out-of-court settlement by a corporation involved in a derivative suit is not prevented. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 205, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

The standard for the evaluation by trial courts of settlements in derivative suits under this rule is whether the agreement is fair, adequate, and reasonable. The standard is the same as the standard for settlements of class action suits under C.R.C.P. 23 because the court is charged with guarding the interests of those who are not parties to the agreement. Thomas v. Rahmani-Azar, 217 P.3d 945 (Colo. App. 2009).

And the standard of review of a trial court's decision to approve a settlement is for an abuse of discretion, as it is with appellate review of class action settlements. Thomas v. Rahmani-Azar, 217 P.3d 945 (Colo. App. 2009).

Particularity required by rule lacking. The general allegation that the plaintiffs ''have diligently endeavored, over several years past, to have the Board of Managers of the defendant Association and the Association membership as a whole prosecute and resolve the claims involved in this action, but said efforts have been unavailing'', completely lacks the particularity required by this rule. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 205, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

The mere fact that plaintiffs were represented by the same counsel as other plaintiffs was not sufficient to establish that they were "fronts" for a conflicting interest. New Crawford Valley, Ltd. v. Benedict, 847 P.2d 642 (Colo. App. 1993).

For factors to be considered in a derivative action brought by a limited partner, see Moore v. 1600 Downing St., Ltd., 668 P.2d 16 (Colo. App. 1983).

Applied in Neusteter v. District Court, 675 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1984); Collie v. Becknell, 762 P.2d 727 (Colo. App. 1988).

Rule 23.2. Actions Relating to Unincorporated Associations

An action brought by or against the members of an unincorporated association as a class by naming certain members as representative parties may be maintained only if it appears that the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the association and its members. In the conduct of the action the court may make appropriate orders corresponding with those described in Rule 23(d), and the procedure for dismissal or compromise of the action shall correspond with that provided in Rule 23(e).

Rule 24. Intervention

(a) Intervention of Right. Upon timely application anyone shall be permitted to intervene in an action: (1) When a statute confers an unconditional right to intervene; or (2) when the applicant claims an interest relating to the property or transaction which is the subject of the action and he is so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede his ability to protect that interest, unless the applicant's interest is adequately represented by existing parties.

(b) Permissive Intervention. Upon timely application anyone may be permitted to intervene in an action: (1) When a statute confers a conditional right to intervene; or (2) when an applicant's claim or defense and the main action have a question of law or fact in common. When a party to an action relies for ground of claim or defense upon any statute or executive order administered by a federal or state governmental officer or agency or upon any regulation, order, requirement, or agreement issued or made pursuant to the statute or executive order, the officer or agency upon timely application may be permitted to intervene in the action. In exercising its discretion the court shall consider whether the intervention will unduly delay or prejudice the adjudication of the rights of the original parties.

(c) Procedure. A person desiring to intervene shall serve a motion to intervene upon the parties as provided in Rule 5. The motion shall state the grounds therefor and shall be accompanied by a pleading setting forth the claim or defense for which intervention is sought.

This rule is a duplicate of the same numbered federal rule. Roosevelt v. Beau Monde Co., 152 Colo. 567, 384 P.2d 96 (1963).

It must be liberally construed to avoid a multiplicity of suits, so that all related controversies should as far as possible be settled in one action. Senne v. Conley, 110 Colo. 270, 133 P.2d 381 (1943); Tekai Corp. v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co., 39 Colo. App. 528, 571 P.2d 321 (1977).

The rules of intervention are to be liberally construed so that all related controversies may be settled in one action. City of Delta v. Thompson, 37 Colo. App. 205, 548 P.2d 1292 (1975); Great Neck Plaza, L.P. v. Le Peep Restaurants, LLC, 37 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2001).

The legal concept of intervention is based upon the natural right of a litigant to protect himself from the consequences of an action against one in whose cause he has an interest, or by the result of which he may be bound. Grijalva v. Elkins, 132 Colo. 315, 287 P.2d 970 (1955); Mauro ex rel. Mauro v. State Farm Mut., 2013 COA 117, 410 P.3d 495.

An existing or pending suit is prerequisite to intervention. Saunders v. Bankston, 31 Colo. App. 551, 506 P.2d 1253 (1972).

Where a party is permitted intervention, it is immaterial whether the intervention is allowed under section (a) or (b) of this rule. Groendyke Transp., Inc. v. District Court, 140 Colo. 190, 343 P.2d 535 (1959).

This distinction is important only where a motion to intervene is denied, in which case it becomes important to determine whether a party seeking intervention is in fact a necessary party. Groendyke Transp., Inc. v. District Court, 140 Colo. 190, 343 P.2d 535 (1959).

If he is not a necessary party, his only recourse upon suing out his appeal is to assert that the trial court abused its discretion in denying permissive intervention. Groendyke Transp., Inc. v. District Court, 140 Colo. 190, 343 P.2d 535 (1959).

An order for intervention does no more than add a new party plaintiff. Groendyke Transp., Inc. v. District Court, 140 Colo. 190, 343 P.2d 535 (1959).

An order for intervention is not final, and no appeal from it lies. Groendyke Transp., Inc. v. District Court, 140 Colo. 190, 343 P.2d 535 (1959).

Intervenor, however, cannot be substituted for defendant. While an intervenor may join either plaintiff or defendant in the principal action, or may oppose both, he cannot, without the consent of plaintiff, be substituted in the place or stead of defendant. North Poudre Irrigation Co. v. Hinderlider, 112 Colo. 467, 150 P.2d 304 (1944).

Intervenor is bound by forfeiture judgment where indemnity agreement. Under a contract by which intervenors agreed to indemnify a surety company against loss, they unquestionably would be bound by a judgment of forfeiture. Allison v. People, 132 Colo. 156, 286 P.2d 1102 (1955).

Where intervention is permitted by the trial court, its ruling will not be disturbed absent an abuse of discretion. Tekai Corp. v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co., 39 Colo. App. 528, 571 P.2d 321 (1977).

No abuse of discretion when motion for intervention denied because it was filed four days before trial. Supporting factual affidavit was not submitted and plaintiff had little opportunity to investigate the allegations. Andrikopoulos v. Minnelusa Co., 911 P.2d 663 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd on other grounds, 929 P.2d 1321 (Colo. 1996).

The determination of the timeliness of a motion to intervene is a matter that rests within the sound discretion of the trial court, which must weigh the lapse of time in light of all the circumstances of the case, including whether the applicant was in a position to seek intervention at an earlier stage in the case. Law Offices of Quiat v. Ellithorpe, 917 P.2d 300 (Colo. App. 1995).

Generally, intervention by a new party is not permitted at the appellate stage of litigation. Cerveny v. City of Wheat Ridge, 888 P.2d 339 (Colo. App. 1994).

The adequacy of an applicant's representation may bar the right to intervene. Benham v. Manufacturers & Wholesalers Indem. Exch., 685 P.2d 249 (Colo. App. 1984).

The intervention standards of this rule have no application to a criminal case, and, therefore, department of corrections may not intervene in such a case. People v. Ham, 734 P.2d 623 (Colo. 1987).

This rule had no application in a proceeding under the children's code, as the code itself expressly contemplates the active participation of interested parties. People in Interest of M.D.C.M., 34 Colo. App. 91, 522 P.2d 1234 (1974).

Rule as basis for jurisdiction. See Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Anderson, 34 Colo. App. 37, 525 P.2d 478 (1974), aff'd, 188 Colo. 337, 534 P.2d 1201 (1975); In re Crabtree, 37 Colo. App. 149, 546 P.2d 505 (1975).

Applied in Smith v. County of El Paso, 42 Colo. App. 316, 593 P.2d 979 (1979); O'Hara Group Denver, Ltd. v. Marcor Hous. Sys., 197 Colo. 530, 595 P.2d 679 (1979); Sec. State Bank v. Weingardt, 42 Colo. App. 219, 597 P.2d 1045 (1979); Ramos v. Lamm, 639 F.2d 559 (10th Cir. 1980); In re East Nat'l Bank, 517 F. Supp. 1061 (D. Colo. 1981); Thorne v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 638 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981); Margolis v. District Court, 638 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1981); People of Dept. of Soc. Serv. In Interest of A.E.V., 782 P.2d 858 (Colo. App. 1989).

II. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT.

Law reviews. For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 66 (1963). For article, ''Civil Procedure'', which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with intervention of right, see 65 Den. U. L. Rev. 434 (1988).

An order denying intervention is appealable if intervention is a matter of right. Grijalva v. Elkins, 132 Colo. 315, 287 P.2d 970 (1955).

Standard of review. A de novo standard of review should apply when reviewing a trial court's denial of a motion to intervene as a matter of right under the substantive requirements of section (a)(2) because such requirements concern questions of law. Feigin v. Alexa Group, Ltd., 19 P.3d 23 (Colo. 2001).

Standard of review is de novo when considering whether the applicant has an interest related to the subject of the litigation, whether that interest may be impaired or impeded if intervention is not allowed, and whether the present parties adequately represent that interest. Feigin v. Sec. Am., Inc., 992 P.2d 675 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 19 P.3d 23 (Colo. 2001); Mauro ex rel. Mauro v. State Farm Mut., 2013 COA 117, 410 P.3d 495.

It is the duty of courts to respect the integrity of the issues raised by the pleadings between the original parties and to prevent the injection of new issues by intervention. Crawford v. McLaughlin, 172 Colo. 366, 473 P.2d 725 (1970).

Intervention under section (a)(2) of this rule must be predicated upon both of the factors referred to therein, i.e., that the intervenor's interest is or may be inadequately represented and that he would or might be bound by a judgment in the action. Denver Chapter of Colo. Motel Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 150 Colo. 524, 374 P.2d 494 (1962).

An applicant for intervention of right under section (a)(2) must show both that the representation of his interest by existing parties is or might be inadequate and that the applicant is or might be bound by the judgment in action. Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974); Int'l Broth. of Elec. v. Denver Metro., 880 P.2d 160 (Colo. App. 1994).

All three elements of the rule — a property interest, an impairment of the ability to protect it, and inadequate representation — must be present before a right to intervene arises. In re Estate of Scott, 40 Colo. App. 343, 577 P.2d 311 (1978); Diamond Lumber, Inc. v. H.C.M.C., Ltd., 746 P.2d 76 (Colo. App. 1987); United Airlines, Inc. v. Schwesinger, 805 P.2d 1209 (Colo. App. 1991); Higley v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 920 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1996); Feigin v. Sec. Am., Inc., 992 P.2d 675 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 19 P.3d 23 (Colo. 2001).

Neither element, standing alone, is sufficient. Denver Chapter of Colo. Motel Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 150 Colo. 524, 374 P.2d 494 (1962); Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974).

If either factor is missing, there is no absolute right of intervention. Denver Chapter of Colo. Motel Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 150 Colo. 524, 374 P.2d 494 (1962); Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974).

A party permitted to intervene pursuant to section (a)(2) of this rule is not necessarily indispensable pursuant to C.R.C.P. 19. Section (a)(2) provides for intervention when the applicant claims an interest relating to the property or transaction that is the subject of the action and he or she is so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede his or her ability to protect that interest. Although language of this rule and C.R.C.P. 19 are similar, rule 19 involves a two-step analysis: (1) Whether the party is necessary within the meaning of C.R.C.P. 19(a); and (2) whether the party is indispensable based on the factors of C.R.C.P. 19(b). Hicks v. Joondeph, 232 P.3d 248 (Colo. App. 2009).

Because a grandparent may institute a new proceeding for visitation under § 19-1-117, regardless of prior child custody orders, disposition of a paternity action does not necessarily impair or impede his or her ability to protect the interest in visitation. Thus, both factors of section (a)(2) of this rule are not met and the court was justified in denying intervention. In re K.L.O-V., 151 P.3d 637 (Colo. App. 2006).

The interest in the litigation that an intervenor must show is an interest in the subject matter of the litigation. Hulst v. Dower, 121 Colo. 150, 213 P.2d 834 (1949).

It is not sufficient for him to show that he has an independent right of action against the defendant based on grounds like those asserted by the plaintiff. Hulst v. Dower, 121 Colo. 150, 213 P.2d 834 (1949).

Flexible standard applies when determining a party's interest. A formalistic approach should not be used. The interest factor, unlike the practical harm and inadequate representation factors, should be viewed as a prerequisite rather than as a determinative criterion for intervention. Feigin v. Alexa Group, Ltd., 19 P.3d 23 (Colo. 2001).

"Interest" element looks merely to what interest is claimed by the intervenor, not whether he or she will ultimately be successful. Higley v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 920 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1996).

Where intervenor differed with class representatives on definition of ''loss'' that would qualify intervenor to share in proposed settlement, all three elements of this rule were present and intervention should have been granted. Higley v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 920 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1996).

The timeliness of the intervention is a threshold question that must be answered before the adequacy of the elements is addressed. Diamond Lumber, Inc. v. H.C.M.C., Ltd., 746 P.2d 76 (Colo. App. 1987); Law Offices of Quiat v. Ellithorpe, 917 P.2d 300 (Colo. App. 1995).

Timeliness of an attempted intervention is to be gathered from all the circumstances in the case. The point of progress in the lawsuit is only one factor to be considered and is not, in itself, determinative. Diamond Lumber, Inc. v. H.C.M.C., Ltd., 746 P.2d 76 (Colo. App. 1987).

Abuse of discretion occurred when trial court denied city's motion to intervene pursuant to section (a)(1) where the totality of the circumstances indicated that city was not notified of the court's ruling because it was no longer a party to the underlying suit nor included on the certificates of service, there was no basis on which to request intervention until the court issued its ruling, and the city's request was ancillary to the underlying case. Lattany v. Garcia, 140 P.3d 348 (Colo. App. 2006).

Lack of an attached pleading is not fatal where the person seeking intervention does not assert a ''claim or defense'' in the usual sense, and the basis of the person's contentions appears in the motion itself. Feigin v. Sec. Am., Inc., 992 P.2d 675 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 19 P.3d 23 (Colo. 2001).

Cost of pursuing a separate action is not "impairment" of a party's interest within meaning of this rule. Feigin v. Alexa Group, Ltd., 19 P.3d 23 (Colo. 2001).

Where investors possessed a private right of action that was not affected by res judicata, collateral estoppel, or stare decisis, their interests would be neither impaired nor impeded for purposes of section (a)(2) of this rule if they were denied intervention in an enforcement action by the securities commissioner. Feigin v. Alexa Group, Ltd., 19 P.3d 23 (Colo. 2001).

Where the party seeking intervention could not opt out of a judgment prohibiting the named applicant "or any other person" from claiming wastewater returns as replacement credit, and could not bring an independent challenge to the water court's interpretation of a stipulation, the party should have been granted the right to intervene. Cherokee Metro. Dist. v. Meridian Serv. Metro. Dist., 266 P.3d 401 (2011).

Even though the applicant might be bound by the judgment, he cannot intervene as of right if he is in fact adequately represented by the existing parties to the action. Denver Chapter of Colo. Motel Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 150 Colo. 524, 374 P.2d 494 (1962); Roosevelt v. Beau Monde Co., 152 Colo. 567, 384 P.2d 96 (1963); In re Application for Underground Water Rights, 2013 CO 53, 304 P.3d 1167.

The most important inquiry in determining the adequacy of representation does not involve an analysis of the courtroom strategy of the representative but rather is concerned with how the interest of the absentee compares with the interest of the representative. In re Estate of Scott, 40 Colo. App. 343, 577 P.2d 311 (1978).

The presumption that representation is adequate because of an identity of interests can be overcome by evidence of bad faith, collusion, or negligence on the part of the representative. In re Estate of Scott, 40 Colo. App. 343, 577 P.2d 311 (1978).

A showing that the representative stands alone in his opinions about how the litigation should be conducted may be evidence of a divergence of interests between the representative and those he represents and may therefore be evidence of inadequacy. In re Estate of Scott, 40 Colo. App. 343, 577 P.2d 311 (1978).

Failure of the personal representative to appeal a ruling sustaining a claim against the estate did not constitute inadequate representation. In re Estate of Scott, 40 Colo. App. 343, 577 P.2d 311 (1978).

Inadequacy of representation is shown if there is proof of collusion between the representative and an opposing party, if the representative has or represents some interest adverse to that of the petitioner, or if he fails because of nonfeasance in his duty of representation. Denver Chapter of Colo. Motel Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 150 Colo. 524, 374 P.2d 494 (1962).

Taxpayers are not qualified to intervene in matters of public interest that are prosecuted or defended for a governmental subdivision by its proper officials. Denver Chapter of Colo. Motel Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 150 Colo. 524, 374 P.2d 494 (1962).

Although a taxpayer may bring an action in the first instance against a municipality and its officers in some situations, such as where the corporate officers fail or refuse to prosecute or defend an action, this is different, however, from a situation where litigation is already in progress, being prosecuted or defended, or both, by the proper corporate officers. Denver Chapter of Colo. Motel Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 150 Colo. 524, 374 P.2d 494 (1962).

In the absence of such factors as fraud, collusion, bad faith, and the like, a taxpayer cannot intervene as a matter of absolute right. Denver Chapter of Colo. Motel Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 150 Colo. 524, 374 P.2d 494 (1962).

Taxpayers and ratepayers do not have an absolute right to intervene. Taxpayers and ratepayers have not fared very well in their efforts to secure an absolute right of intervention, inasmuch as representation by the governmental authorities is considered adequate in the absence of gross negligence or bad faith on their part. Denver Chapter of Colo. Motel Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 150 Colo. 524, 374 P.2d 494 (1962).

Defrauded investors' interests were adequately represented by securities commissioner, who is the official designated to enforce laws to protect investors from fraud. Feigin v. Alexa Group, Ltd., 19 P.3d 23 (Colo. 2001).

Taxpayer has standing to raise legitimacy of governmental access to bank records. Once the court allows intervention in a § 39-21-112 proceeding, it follows that a taxpayer with an expectation of privacy in his bank records has standing to raise the legitimacy of governmental access to the records in a motion to quash the subpoena for the records. Charnes v. DiGiacomo, 200 Colo. 94, 612 P.2d 1117 (1980).

Where it does not appear that intervenors are parties to an alleged contract between plaintiff and defendants upon which right of recovery in the action proper is premised, nor does it appear the defendants are apprised of the existence of an alleged contract between plaintiff and intervenors, which is the basis of intervenors' claim against plaintiff, an application for leave to intervene is properly denied. Hulst v. Dower, 121 Colo. 150, 213 P.2d 834 (1949).

Where a stockholder of a corporation, acting promptly after the entry of a default judgment against the latter, moves to intervene individually and on behalf of other stockholders similarly situated, presents to the trial court a petition to have the judgment set aside, asks for leave to file an answer, and requests that the case be decided on the merits — it appearing from the petition that he was not a party to the original proceeding, would be prejudiced by the judgment if it were permitted to stand, and that he had good defense to the action — the petition should be granted, since a denial thereof constitutes prejudicial, reversible error. Brown v. Deerksen, 163 Colo. 194, 429 P.2d 302 (1967).

Rezoning dispute permits intervention. Intervention as a matter of right is permitted in a rezoning dispute. Dillon Cos. v. City of Boulder, 183 Colo. 117, 515 P.2d 627 (1973).

Insurer has a right to intervene in action between its insured and an uninsured motorist if insurer can show that its interests are or might be inadequately represented. Briggs v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 833 P.2d 859 (Colo. App. 1992).

When an insurer can show that representation of its interest is or might be inadequate in an action between the insured and an uninsured motorist, it has the right to intervene in an action between the two and to have full adjudication of all issues at a single trial. Briggs v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 833 P.2d 859 (Colo. App. 1992).

Intervention was properly granted to subcontractor whose presence was necessary in action for disclosure of documents to present evidence establishing that disclosure of redacted material would be injurious to its competitive position in the industry. International Broth. of Elec. v. Denver Metro., 880 P.2d 160 (Colo. App. 1994).

Intervention should have been granted where insurance company sought to challenge the terms of a protective order regarding discovery that would have affected its recordkeeping, business practices, and compliance with state and federal insurance regulations. The fact that the insurer's attorney represented individual defendants on the underlying liability issues did not mean that the insurer's interests with regard to the protective order would be adequately represented. Mauro ex rel. Mauro v. State Farm Mut., 2013 COA 117, 410 P.3d 495.

Section 19-1-117 does not confer an unconditional right to intervene in a paternity action under section (a)(1) or as of right under section (a)(2). Because the statute requires a grandparent to rebut the presumption that the parent's decision regarding visitation is in the child's best interest, it does not give rise to an absolute right to visitation. Because the statute does not vest a grandparent with an absolute right to visitation and issues concerning grandparent visitation are not inherent in a paternity action, there is no absolute or unconditional right for a grandparent to intervene in a paternity action. In re K.L.O-V., 151 P.3d 637 (Colo. App. 2006).

Grandparents may intervene as a matter of right under section (a) in a dependency and neglect proceeding at any time after adjudication. Denial of grandparents' motion was a final appealable order. People ex rel. O.C., 2012 COA 161, 312 P.3d 226, aff'd, 2013 CO 56, 308 P.3d 1218.

Applied in Susman v. Exchange Nat'l Bank, 117 Colo. 12, 183 P.2d 571 (1947); Shotkin v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R., 124 Colo. 141, 235 P.2d 990 (1951), cert. denied, 343 U.S. 906, 72 S. Ct. 638, 96 L. Ed. 1325 (1952).

III. PERMISSIVE INTERVENTION.

Where intervention is permissive only, the application is addressed to the discretion of the court. Grijalva v. Elkins, 132 Colo. 315, 287 P.2d 970 (1955); Feigin v. Alexa Group, Ltd., 19 P.3d 23 (Colo. 2001).

Permissive intervention is a matter of right within discretion of court. It is a matter which rests within the discretion of the trial court as to whether a petition for intervention should be granted where there is no showing upon which the intervention of petitioners should be granted as a matter of right. Denver Chapter of Colo. Motel Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 150 Colo. 524, 374 P.2d 494 (1962).

Order denying intervention is not of that final character which furnishes a basis for appeal. Grijalva v. Elkins, 132 Colo. 315, 287 P.2d 970 (1955).

Order not final unless applicant has no other means of protecting his rights. An order refusing intervention is not a final and appealable order unless the applicant has no other adequate means of protecting his rights. Grijalva v. Elkins, 132 Colo. 315, 287 P.2d 970 (1955).

Denial of intervention appealable if court abuses its discretion. If intervention is permissive only, denial thereof is not appealable unless a trial court abuses its discretion. Grijalva v. Elkins, 132 Colo. 315, 287 P.2d 970 (1955).

It can seldom, if ever, be shown that a trial court has abused its discretion in denying a permissive right to intervene. Grijalva v. Elkins, 132 Colo. 315, 287 P.2d 970 (1955).

Where permission to intervene is granted by a trial court, such a ruling may be reviewed only after entry of final judgment in the action and then only for possible abuse of judicial discretion. Groendyke Transp., Inc. v. District Court, 140 Colo. 190, 343 P.2d 535 (1959).

Intervention is frequently denied even though common questions of law or fact are presented, if in addition collateral or extrinsic issues would be brought in by an intervenor. Grijalva v. Elkins, 132 Colo. 315, 287 P.2d 970 (1955).

Allowance of intervention is not error although the rights of the parties might have been worked out without the presence of the intervenor, where such participation did no harm and made a more comprehensive decree possible. North Poudre Irrigation Co. v. Hinderlider, 112 Colo. 467, 150 P.2d 304 (1944).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing child's stepfather to intervene in an action for child support payment, because there were common questions involved in the dispute and the stepfather had been assigned the right to collect past-due child support. In re Paul, 978 P.2d 136 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion when it granted intervention. The intervening party to the case was the only party that had an interest in seeking the release of documents at issue in the case and the other party clearly indicated on the record that its interest was not aligned with the intervening party's interest. CF&I Steel, L.P. v. Air Pollution Control Div., 77 P.3d 933 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court did not abuse its discretion when it denied permissive intervention by grandparent for visitation. If, however, intervention would be in the child's best interest or would further judicial economy, intervention into a paternity action by a grandparent may be allowed at the court's discretion. In re K.L.O-V., 151 P.3d 637 (Colo. App. 2006).

This rule plainly dispenses with any requirement that an intervenor shall have a direct personal or pecuniary interest in the subject of the litigation. North Poudre Irrigation Co. v. Hinderlider, 112 Colo. 467, 150 P.2d 304 (1944).

Adjoining property owners in a suit to vacate a zoning order have such a vital interest in the result of that suit that they should be granted permission to intervene as a matter of course unless compelling reasons against such intervention are shown. Roosevelt v. Beau Monde Co., 152 Colo. 567, 384 P.2d 96 (1963).

Intervention under this rule proper for suspended attorney's former wife who was assignee of right to fees under divorce decree and sought to intervene as ''real party in interest'' in dispute over three-way division of contingent fee. Rutenbeck v. Grossenbach, 867 P.2d 36 (Colo. App. 1993).

Intervention by attorney general. The attorney general's argument on the appropriateness of his permissive intervention under section (b)(2) of this rule failed to recognize the statutory language directing his appearance for the state of Colorado only ''when required to do so by the governor or the general assembly''. Gillies v. Schmidt, 38 Colo. App. 233, 556 P.2d 82 (1976).

Intervention by department of social services in paternity action. Where the interest of the department of social services in a support obligation owed to a dependent child is contingent on the outcome of a paternity action under § 19-6-110 (now § 19-4-110), it was improper to allow it to intervene as a party to the action. However, such action was harmless since the department could have enforced its interest derived from the paternity proceeding in a separate proceeding following entry of the order determining paternity. J.E.S. v. F.F., 762 P.2d 703 (Colo. App. 1988).

This rule does not permit intervention in a criminal case for civil relief absent exceptional circumstances. No exceptional circumstances existed to allow a sheriff to intervene in a first degree murder case to seek financial relief for housing the defendant. People v. Hood, 867 P.2d 203 (Colo. App. 1993).

Applied in Susman v. Exchange Nat'l Bank, 117 Colo. 12, 183 P.2d 571 (1947); Clung v. Griffith, 127 Colo. 315, 255 P.2d 973 (1953).

IV. PROCEDURE.

This rule requires that a motion to intervene shall be filed and that it shall be accompanied by a pleading. Capitol Indus. Bank v. Strain, 166 Colo. 55, 442 P.2d 187 (1968).

Intervening party's failure to file a pleading with his motion does not compel reversal in light of the fact that defendant did not make a timely objection. In re Paul, 978 P.2d 136 (Colo. App. 1998).

One who does not file petition is a mere interloper. A party, complete stranger to an action, who without leave of court files a motion to restrain an action and who does not file a petition to intervene in the action pursuant to this rule is a mere interloper who acquires no rights by such unauthorized action, unless objections thereto are waived. Hercules Equip. Co. v. Smith, 138 Colo. 458, 335 P.2d 255 (1959).

This rule specifies that the motion shall set forth the grounds for intervention while the pleading shall state the claim of the intervenor, each being distinct from the other. A motion is not a pleading, although the two have similar formal parts and even though certain defenses may be raised by motion. Capitol Indus. Bank v. Strain, 166 Colo. 55, 442 P.2d 187 (1968).

Motions for intervention filed after judgment or after a decision is rendered on appeal are viewed with disfavor, and the moving party has a heavy burden to show facts or circumstances which justify intervention at that late date. Spickard v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 33 Colo. App. 426, 523 P.2d 149 (1974).

Courts view motions for intervention after judgment or after a decision is rendered on appeal with a jaundiced eye because it is assumed that intervention at this point will either prejudice the rights of the existing parties to the litigation, or substantially interfere with the orderly processes of the court. Spickard v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 33 Colo. App. 426, 523 P.2d 149 (1974).

Abuse of discretion is the appropriate standard for review of a trial court's conclusion as to whether a would-be intervenor has satisfied the procedural requirements of section (c). Weston v. T&T, LLC, 271 P.3d 552 (Colo. App. 2011).

A trial court does not err in permitting intervention after judgment has been entered where the intervenors file their motion to intervene before judgment is entered. Am. Nat'l Bank v. First Nat'l Bank, 28 Colo. App. 486, 476 P.2d 304 (1970).

The fact that a default judgment is entered before the court's determination of the intervenors' motion does not cause the court to lose jurisdiction in the case. Am. Nat'l Bank v. First Nat'l Bank, 28 Colo. App. 486, 476 P.2d 304 (1970).

Although creditor did not strictly comply with this rule, creditor's complaint stated the grounds and facts upon which creditor sought intervention, together with creditor's claims. Weston v. T&T, LLC, 271 P.3d 552 (Colo. App. 2011).

Because defendant was given a full opportunity to respond to the allegations of creditor's complaint in intervention, any failure by creditor to comply precisely with this rule was not to the detriment of defendant's substantial rights. Weston v. T&T, LLC, 271 P.3d 552 (Colo. App. 2011).

Creditor's complaint in intervention sufficient even though complaint did not cite to the Colorado Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (CUFTA) or expressly allege a CUFTA claim. Because defendant's opening statement at trial demonstrated that defendant was aware of the substance of creditor's claim, defendant suffered no prejudice as a result of creditor's pleading. Weston v. T&T, LLC, 271 P.3d 552 (Colo. App. 2011).

Rule 25. Substitution of Parties

(a) Death.

(1) If a party dies and the claim is not thereby extinguished, the court may order substitution of the proper parties. The motion for substitution may be made by any party or by the successors or representatives of the deceased party and, together with the notice of hearing, shall be served on the parties as provided in Rule 5 and upon persons not parties in the manner provided in Rule 4 for the service of process, and may be served in any county. Suggestion of death upon the record is made by service of a statement of the fact of death as provided herein for the service of the motion and by filing of proof thereof. If the motion for substitution is not made within 91 days (13 weeks) after such service, the action shall be dismissed as to the deceased party.

(2) In the event of the death of one or more of the plaintiffs or of one or more of the defendants in an action in which the right sought to be enforced survives only to the surviving plaintiffs or only against the surviving defendants, the action does not abate. The death shall be suggested upon the record and the action shall proceed in favor of or against the surviving parties.

(b) Incompetency. If a party becomes incompetent, the court upon motion served as provided in section (a) of this Rule may allow the action to be continued by or against his representative.

(c) Transfer of Interest. In case of any transfer of interest, the action may be continued by or against the original party, unless the court upon motion directs the person to whom the interest is transferred to be substituted in the action or joined with the original party. Service of the motion shall be made as provided in subsection (a)(1) of this Rule.

(d) Public Officers; Death or Separation from Office.

(1) When a public officer is a party to an action and during its pendency dies, resigns, or otherwise ceases to hold office, the action does not abate and his successor is automatically substituted as a party. Proceedings following the substitution shall be in the name of the substituted party, but any misnomer not affecting the substantial right of the parties shall be disregarded. An order of substitution may be entered at any time, but the omission to enter such an order shall not affect the substitution.

(2) When a public officer sues or is sued in his official capacity, he may be described as a party by his official title rather than by name; but the court may require his name to be added.

Source: (a)(1) amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b).

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Notes on Proposed Amendments to Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 27 Dicta 165 (1950). For article, ''Pleadings, Rules 7 to 25'', see 28 Dicta 368 (1951). For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure'', see 35 Dicta 3 (1958).

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to §§ 15 and 290 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Applied in In re Van Camp, 632 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1981); B.C. Inv. Co. v. Throm, 650 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1982); Garcia v. Title Ins. Co. of Minnesota, 712 P.2d 1114 (Colo. App. 1985).

II. DEATH.

This rule does not define the causes that survive. Clapp v. Williams, 90 Colo. 13, 5 P.2d 872 (1931).

This rule merely provides that, if the cause survives, the action shall not abate. Clapp v. Williams, 90 Colo. 13, 5 P.2d 872 (1931).

Trial court had personal jurisdiction over estate after plaintiffs amended complaint to name estate and estate's special administrator as defendants instead of deceased, non-existent defendant before any answer had been filed in the case. This cured the defect in personal jurisdiction contained in the original complaint. Currier v. Sutherland, 218 P.3d 709 (Colo. 2009).

An action involving the death of a party shall remain in abeyance a reasonable time until a representative can be appointed and qualified, who may be substituted and the suit proceed to judgment. Williams v. Carr, 4 Colo. App. 363, 36 P. 644 (1894).

An action does not abate by the death of a party, if the cause survives or continues. Williams v. Carr, 4 Colo. App. 363, 36 P. 644 (1894).

This rule authorizes substitution of a proper party where a defendant dies and the claim against him is not extinguished by his death. Willis v. Neilson, 32 Colo. App. 129, 507 P.2d 1106 (1973).

Section (a)(1) of this rule mandates personal service of suggestion of death on nonparty successors or personal representatives in accordance with C.R.C.P. 4. Where suggestion of death was not personally served upon daughters of decedent involved in negligence lawsuit, 90-day time limit for substitution was not triggered. Therefore, trial court improperly dismissed lawsuit for failure to substitute parties. Sawyer ex rel. Sawyer v. Kindred Nursing Ctrs. W., LLC, 225 P.3d 1161 (Colo. App. 2009).

The provisions of section (a)(1) of this rule for substitution of parties are procedural. Duke v. Pickett, 30 Colo. App. 438, 494 P.2d 120 (1972).

Survival of actions and substitution of parties are function of the substantive law. This rule does not attempt to state what actions survive the death of a party nor does it attempt to designate the ''proper parties'' who may be substituted, as this is a function of the substantive law. Duke v. Pickett, 30 Colo. App. 438, 494 P.2d 120 (1972).

In case of the death of a party, the court may, on motion, allow the action to be continued by his representative or successor in interest. Williams v. Carr, 4 Colo. App. 363, 36 P. 644 (1894).

The rule that an administrator cannot be joined in his capacity as administrator with codefendants in their individual capacity does not apply where an administrator is substituted in place of a deceased defendant, who died during the pendency of the action. Morgan v. King, 27 Colo. App. 539, 63 P. 416 (1900).

The "proper party" is the administrator of decedent's estate. Mills v. Saunders, 30 Colo. App. 462, 494 P.2d 1309 (1972).

This rule plainly recognizes the duty resting on litigants to make substitution of an administrator or executor for a party litigant who dies while a case is pending. Koon v. Barmettler, 134 Colo. 221, 301 P.2d 713 (1956).

Action against deceased cannot be further prosecuted until administrator is substituted. Where a suit does not abate by reason of death, it cannot be further prosecuted against the estate of deceased or any liability on that account established against it until his legal representative, the administrator of the estate, is substituted as a party defendant. First Nat'l Bank v. Hotchkiss, 49 Colo. 593, 114 P. 310 (1911); Colo. Nat'l Bank v. Irvine, 105 Colo. 588, 101 P.2d 30 (1939).

It is the duty of administrator to defend. Where an action commenced against deceased does not abate by reason of his death, it becomes the duty of the administrator to defend under this rule where he is properly made a party defendant. Morgan v. King, 27 Colo. 539, 63 P. 416 (1900).

Until the administrator is made a party defendant, the action commenced against deceased remains in abeyance. First Nat'l Bank v. Hotchkiss, 49 Colo. 593, 114 P. 310 (1911); Colo. Nat'l Bank v. Irvine, 105 Colo. 588, 101 P.2d 30 (1940).

An administrator is not required to take notice of pendency or defend until made a party thereto. First Nat'l Bank v. Hotchkiss, 49 Colo. 593, 114 P. 310 (1911); Colo. Nat'l Bank v. Irvine, 105 Colo. 588, 101 P.2d 30 (1940).

An attorney for a deceased defendant has a duty to notify the court and the other parties in the action that his client has died. Farmers Ins. Group v. District Court, 181 Colo. 85, 507 P.2d 865, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878, 94 S. Ct. 156, 38 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1973).

This rule does not require notification of identity of representative. There is nothing in this rule which could reasonably be a basis for requiring that notification of the death of a defendant should include the identity of the deceased defendant's executor, administrator, or representative. Farmers Ins. Group v. District Court, 181 Colo. 85, 507 P.2d 865, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878, 94 S. Ct. 156, 38 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1973).

The plaintiff's attorney who receives notification of the defendant's death has the responsibility to promptly initiate the necessary inquiries to determine the identity of a person to be substituted for the deceased defendant and to file a motion for substitution. Farmers Ins. Group v. District Court, 181 Colo. 85, 507 P.2d 865, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878, 94 S. Ct. 156, 38 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1973).

Burden is on plaintiffs to show excusable neglect to file motion for substitution. Where the issue is whether the failure to file a motion for substitution within the required 90 days under the facts is the result of excusable neglect, the burden is clearly on the plaintiffs to show that the failure to comply was due to excusable neglect. Farmers Ins. Group v. District Court, 181 Colo. 85, 507 P.2d 865, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878, 94 S. Ct. 156, 38 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1973).

An intervenor is not required to move for revivor after such substitution. When substitution of parties is made and the legal representatives appear in the action, there can be perceived no valid reason why an intervenor therein, who supports the side of the party bringing about the revival and who originally intervened at the behest of the adverse party, should be required separately to additionally move for a revivor as a condition precedent to the final adjudication of the mutual controversy with the common adversary. Colo. Nat'l Bank v. Irvine, 105 Colo. 588, 101 P.2d 30 (1940).

Lien may be enforced by substituting executor. If a valid lien existed during the lifetime of deceased, it might be enforced, under this rule, by the substitution of his executor as a party defendant, and the subsequent rendition of a judgment against him in his representative capacity in favor of the plaintiff. Thompson v. White, 25 Colo. 226, 54 P. 718 (1898).

This rule does not apply to lien which became vested upon entry of divorce decree. This rule has no application where plaintiff is seeking to enforce against specific real property deeded by the deceased to defendant a lien which became vested upon entry of a divorce decree. Willis v. Neilson, 32 Colo. App. 129, 507 P.2d 1106 (1973).

Merely because the person designated for appointment as personal representative in the motion for substitution is not appointed by the court does not serve to make the motion a nullity. Smith v. Bridges, 40 Colo. App. 171, 574 P.2d 511 (1977).

When there is no prejudice caused by delay nor a lengthy period of inaction by a movant for substitution, rather than allowing substantial rights to be lost by dismissing the action, the court should either allow a reasonable additional time for the movant to submit an amended motion or, failing that, appoint a proper personal representative such as the public administrator. Smith v. Bridges, 40 Colo. App. 171, 574 P.2d 511 (1977).

Dismissal of action based on C.R.C.P. 41 not to be considered under this rule. Where the record revealed that the action against the estate was dismissed voluntarily, without prejudice, under C.R.C.P. 41, and not based on failure to make a timely substitution under this rule, dismissal under this rule could not be considered in the appeal of the second action. Vigil v. Lewis Maintenance Serv., Inc., 38 Colo. App. 209, 554 P.2d 703 (1976).

Dismissal for failure to make a timely substitution when a party dies falls within the purview of C.R.C.P. 41 (b)(1), but not as to the claims against remaining defendants. Cheney v. Hailey, 686 P.2d 808 (Colo. App. 1984).

If there is a substitution of parties, any error therein is waived by failure to object. Thomason v. McAlister, 748 P.2d 798 (Colo. App. 1987).

Applied in Ray v. Schooley, 156 Colo. 33, 396 P.2d 730 (1964); Wildenstein v. Stills, 156 Colo. 96, 396 P.2d 969 (1964).

III. TRANSFER OF INTEREST.

For cases construing the former code provision, see Perkins v. Marrs, 15 Colo. 262, 25 P. 168 (1890); Portland Gold Mining Co. v. Stratton's Independence, 196 F. 714 (D. Colo. 1912); Winchester v. Walker, 59 Colo. 17, 147 P. 343 (1915); Metro. State Bank v. Bisher, 82 Colo. 421, 260 P. 688 (1927).

When plaintiff, on appeal, seeks to use section (c) of this rule to substitute a defendant post-judgment, and the trial court did not explain its decision to deny the original motion for substitution, the case shall be remanded for further proceedings conducted by the trial court, such that the trial court conduct an evidentiary hearing to determine transfer of interest. Liberty Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Human Res. Cos., Inc., 94 P.3d 1257 (Colo. App. 2004).

Applied in Recreational Dev. Co. v. Am. Const., 749 P.2d 1002 (Colo. App. 1987).

IV. PUBLIC OFFICERS.

Action against officer does not abate because his term of office expires. Where the obligation which is sought to be enforced is a duty devolving upon no particular officer, but is perpetual upon the then incumbent of the office and his successors, unless legally excused, the action will not abate by reason of the expiration of the term of office of the official against whom the action was originally commenced. Nance v. People, 25 Colo. 252, 54 P. 631 (1898).

Successor in office must be substituted as a party within six months. Bach v. Schooley, 155 Colo. 30, 392 P.2d 649 (1964); Union P. R. R. v. State, 166 Colo. 307, 443 P.2d 375 (1968).

Jurisdiction held not lost where facts establish predecessor's actions are continued. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Hively, 140 Colo. 265, 344 P.2d 443 (1959).

Substitution had to be effected previously. Ray v. Schooley, 156 Colo. 33, 396 P.2d 730 (1964); Gilliland v. McClearn, 168 Colo. 358, 451 P.2d 756 (1969).

CHAPTER 4

Disclosure and Discovery

CHAPTER 4

DISCLOSURE AND DISCOVERY

Law reviews: For article, ''A Modest Proposal: The Rule 3(a) Waiver Agreement'', see 46 Colo. Law. 23 (Mar. 2017).

Rule 26. General Provisions Governing Discovery; Duty of Disclosure

(a) Required Disclosures. Unless otherwise ordered by the court or stipulated by the parties, provisions of this Rule shall not apply to domestic relations, juvenile, mental health, probate, water law, forcible entry and detainer, C.R.C.P. 120, or other expedited proceedings.

(1) Disclosures. Except to the extent otherwise directed by the court, a party shall, without awaiting a discovery request, provide to other parties the following information, whether or not supportive of the disclosing party's claims or defenses:

(A) the name and, if known, the address and telephone number of each individual likely to have discoverable information relevant to the claims and defenses of any party and a brief description of the specific information that each such individual is known or believed to possess;

(B) a listing, together with a copy of, or a description by category, of the subject matter and location of all documents, data compilations, and tangible things in the possession, custody or control of the party that are relevant to the claims and defenses of any party, making available for inspection and copying such documents and other evidentiary material, not privileged or protected from disclosure, as though a request for production of those documents had been served pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34;

(C) a description of the categories of damages sought and a computation of any category of economic damages claimed by the disclosing party, making available for inspection and copying pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34 the documents or other evidentiary material relevant to the damages sought, not privileged or protected from disclosure, as though a request for production of those documents had been served pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34; and

(D) any insurance agreement under which any person carrying on an insurance business may be liable to satisfy part or all of a judgment which may be entered in the action or to indemnify or reimburse for payments made to satisfy the judgment, making such agreement available for inspection and copying pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34.

Disclosures shall be served within 28 days after the case is at issue as defined in C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1). A party shall make the required disclosures based on the information then known and reasonably available to the party and is not excused from making such disclosures because the party has not completed investigation of the case or because the party challenges the sufficiency of another party's disclosure or because another party has not made the required disclosures. Parties shall make these disclosures in good faith and may not object to the adequacy of the disclosures until the case management conference pursuant to C.R.C.P. 16(d).

(2) Disclosure of Expert Testimony.

(A) In addition to the disclosures required by subsection (a)(1) of this Rule, a party shall disclose to other parties the identity of any person who may present evidence at trial, pursuant to Rules 702, 703, or 705 of the Colorado Rules of Evidence together with an identification of the person's fields of expertise.

(B) Except as otherwise stipulated or directed by the court:

(I) Retained Experts. With respect to a witness who is retained or specially employed to provide expert testimony, or whose duties as an employee of the party regularly involve giving expert testimony, the disclosure shall be made by a written report signed by the witness. The report shall include:

(a) a complete statement of all opinions to be expressed and the basis and reasons therefor;

(b) a list of the data or other information considered by the witness in forming the opinions;

(c) references to literature that may be used during the witness's testimony;

(d) copies of any exhibits to be used as a summary of or support for the opinions;

(e) the qualifications of the witness, including a list of all publications authored by the witness within the preceding ten years;

(f) the fee agreement or schedule for the study, preparation and testimony;

(g) an itemization of the fees incurred and the time spent on the case, which shall be supplemented 14 days prior to the first day of trial; and

(h) a listing of any other cases in which the witness has testified as an expert at trial or by deposition within the preceding four years.

The witness's direct testimony shall be limited to matters disclosed in detail in the report.

(II) Other Experts. With respect to a party or witness who may be called to provide expert testimony but is not retained or specially employed within the description contained in subsection (a)(2)(B)(I) above, the disclosure shall be made by a written report or statement that shall include:

(a) a complete description of all opinions to be expressed and the basis and reasons therefor;

(b) a list of the qualifications of the witness; and

(c) copies of any exhibits to be used as a summary of or support for the opinions. If the report has been prepared by the witness, it shall be signed by the witness.

If the witness does not prepare a written report, the party's lawyer or the party, if self-represented, may prepare a statement and shall sign it. The witness's direct testimony expressing an expert opinion shall be limited to matters disclosed in detail in the report or statement.

(C) Unless otherwise provided in the Case Management Order, the timing of the disclosures shall be as follows:

(I) The disclosure by a claiming party under a complaint, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim shall be made at least 126 days (18 weeks) before the trial date.

(II) The disclosure by a defending party shall be made within 28 days after service of the claiming party's disclosure, provided, however, that if the claiming party serves its disclosure earlier than required under subparagraph 26(a)(2)(C)(I), the defending party is not required to serve its disclosures until 98 days (14 weeks) before the trial date.

(III) If the evidence is intended to contradict or rebut evidence on the same subject matter identified by another party under subparagraph (a)(2)(C)(II) of this Rule, such disclosure shall be made no later than 77 days (11 weeks) before the trial date.

(3) [There is no Colorado Rule—see instead C.R.C.P. 16(c).]

(4) Form of Disclosures; Filing. All disclosures pursuant to subparagraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) of this Rule shall be made in writing, in a form pursuant to C.R.C.P. 10, signed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(g)(1), and served upon all other parties. Disclosures shall not be filed with the court unless requested by the court or necessary for consideration of a particular issue.

(5) Methods to Discover Additional Matters. Parties may obtain discovery by one or more of the following methods: depositions upon oral examination or written questions; written interrogatories; production of documents or things or permission to enter upon land or other property, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34; physical and mental examinations; and requests for admission. Discovery at a place within a country having a treaty with the United States applicable to the discovery must be conducted by methods authorized by the treaty except that, if the court determines that those methods are inadequate or inequitable, it may authorize other discovery methods not prohibited by the treaty.

(b) Discovery Scope and Limits. Unless otherwise modified by order of the court in accordance with these rules, the scope of discovery is as follows:

(1) In General. Subject to the limitations and considerations contained in subsection (b)(2) of this Rule, parties may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the claim or defense of any party and proportional to the needs of the case, considering the importance of the issues at stake in the action, the amount in controversy, the parties' relative access to relevant information, the parties' resources, the importance of the discovery in resolving the issues, and whether the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit. Information within the scope of discovery need not be admissible in evidence to be discoverable.

(2) Limitations. Except upon order for good cause shown and subject to the proportionality factors in subsection (b)(1) of this Rule, discovery shall be limited as follows:

(A) A party may take one deposition of each adverse party and of two other persons, exclusive of persons expected to give expert testimony disclosed pursuant to subsection 26(a)(2). The scope and manner of proceeding by way of deposition and the use thereof shall otherwise be governed by C.R.C.P. 26, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and 45.

(B) A party may serve on each adverse party 30 written interrogatories, each of which shall consist of a single question. The scope and manner of proceeding by means of written interrogatories and the use thereof shall otherwise be governed by C.R.C.P. 26 and 33.

(C) A party may obtain a physical or mental examination (including blood group) of a party or of a person in the custody or under the legal control of a party pursuant to C.R.C.P. 35.

(D) A party may serve each adverse party requests for production of documents or tangible things or for entry, inspection or testing of land or property pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34, except such requests for production shall be limited to 20 in number, each of which shall consist of a single request.

(E) A party may serve on each adverse party 20 requests for admission, each of which shall consist of a single request. A party may also serve requests for admission of the genuineness of up to 50 separate documents that the party intends to offer into evidence at trial. The scope and manner of proceeding by means of requests for admission and the use thereof shall otherwise be governed by C.R.C.P. 36.

(F) In determining good cause to modify the limitations of this subsection (b)(2), the court shall consider the following:

(I) whether the discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative, or is obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive;

(II) whether the party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by disclosure or discovery in the action to obtain the information sought;

(III) whether the proposed discovery is outside the scope permitted by C.R.C.P. 26(b)(1); and

(IV) whether because of the number of parties and their alignment with respect to the underlying claims and defenses, the proposed discovery is reasonable.

(3) Trial Preparation: Materials. Subject to the provisions of subsection (b)(4) of this Rule, a party may obtain discovery of documents and tangible things otherwise discoverable under subsection (b)(1) of this Rule and prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial by or for another party or by or for that other party's representative (including the party's attorney, consultant, surety, indemnitor, insurer, or agent) only upon a showing that the party seeking discovery has substantial need of the materials in the preparation of the case and is unable without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the materials by other means. In ordering discovery of such materials when the required showing has been made, the court shall protect against disclosure of the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation.

A party may obtain without the required showing a statement concerning the action or its subject matter previously made by that party. Upon request, a person not a party may obtain without the required showing a statement concerning the action or its subject matter previously made by that person. If the request is refused, the person may move for a court order. The provisions of C.R.C.P. 37(a)(4) apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion. For purposes of this paragraph, a statement previously made is:

(A) a written statement signed or otherwise adopted or approved by the person making it, or

(B) a stenographic, mechanical, electrical, or other recording, or a transcription thereof, which is a substantially verbatim recital of an oral statement by the person making it and contemporaneously recorded.

(4) Trial Preparation: Experts.

(A) A party may depose any person who has been identified as an expert disclosed pursuant to subsection 26(a)(2)(B)(I) of this Rule whose opinions may be presented at trial. Each deposition shall not exceed 6 hours. On the application of any party, the court may decrease or increase the time permitted after considering the proportionality criteria in subsection (b)(1) of this Rule. Except to the extent otherwise stipulated by the parties or ordered by the court, no discovery, including depositions, concerning either the identity or the opinion of experts shall be conducted until after the disclosures required by subsection (a)(2) of this Rule.

(B) A party may, through interrogatories or by deposition, discover facts known or opinions held by an expert who has been retained or specially employed by another party in anticipation of litigation or preparation for trial, and who is not expected to be called as a witness at trial only as provided by C.R.C.P. 35(b) or upon a showing of exceptional circumstances under which it is impracticable for the party seeking discovery to obtain facts or opinions on the same subject by other means.

(C) Unless manifest injustice would result, (i) the court shall require that the party seeking discovery pay the expert a reasonable fee for time spent in responding to discovery under this subsection (b)(4); and (ii) with respect to discovery obtained pursuant to subsection (b)(4)(B) of this Rule, the court shall require the party seeking discovery to pay the other party a fair portion of the fees and expenses reasonably incurred by the latter party in obtaining facts and opinions from the expert.

(D) Rule 26(b)(3) protects from disclosure and discovery drafts of any report or disclosure required under Rule 26(a)(2), regardless of the form in which the draft is recorded, and protects communications between the party's attorney and any witness disclosed under Rule 26(a)(2)(B), regardless of the form of the communications, except to the extent that the communications:

(I) relate to the compensation for the expert's study, preparation, or testimony;

(II) identify facts or data that the party's attorney provided and which the expert considered in forming the opinions to be expressed; or

(III) identify the assumptions that the party's attorney provided and that the expert relied on in forming opinions to be expressed.

(5)(A) Claims of Privilege or Protection of Trial Preparation Materials. When a party withholds information required to be disclosed or provided in discovery by claiming that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation material, the party shall make the claim expressly and shall describe the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced or disclosed in a manner that, without revealing information itself privileged or protected, will enable other parties to assess the applicability of the privilege or protection.

(B) If information produced in disclosures or discovery is subject to a claim of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material the party making the claim may notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for it. After being notified, a party must not review, use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved; must take reasonable steps to retrieve the information if the party disclosed it before being notified; and shall give notice to the party making the claim within 14 days if it contests the claim. If the claim is not contested within the 14-day period, or is timely contested but resolved in favor of the party claiming privilege or protection of trial-preparation material, then the receiving party must also promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and any copies that the receiving party has. If the claim is contested, the party making the claim shall present the information to the court under seal for a determination of the claim within 14 days after receiving such notice, or the claim is waived. The producing party must preserve the information until the claim is resolved, and bears the burden of proving the basis of the claim and that the claim was not waived. All notices under this Rule shall be in writing.

(c) Protective Orders. Upon motion by a party or by the person from whom disclosure is due or discovery is sought, accompanied by a certificate that the movant has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with other affected parties in an effort to resolve the dispute without court action, and for good cause shown, the court may make any order which justice requires to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense, including one or more of the following:

(1) that the disclosure or discovery not be had;

(2) that the disclosure or discovery may be had only on specified terms and conditions, including a designation of the time or place or the allocation of expenses;

(3) that the discovery may be had only by a method of discovery other than that selected by the party seeking discovery;

(4) that certain matters not be inquired into, or that the scope of the disclosure or discovery be limited to certain matters;

(5) that discovery be conducted with no one present except persons designated by the court;

(6) that a deposition, after being sealed, be opened only by order of the court;

(7) that a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information not be revealed or be revealed only in a designated way; and

(8) that the parties simultaneously file specified documents or information enclosed in sealed envelopes to be opened as directed by the court.

(d) Timing and Sequence of Discovery. Except when authorized by these Rules, by order, or by agreement of the parties, a party may not seek discovery from any source before service of the Case Management Order pursuant to C.R.C.P. 16(b)(18). Any discovery conducted prior to issuance of the Case Management Order shall not exceed the limitations established by C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2). Unless the parties stipulate or the court upon motion, for the convenience of parties and witnesses and in the interests of justice, orders otherwise, methods of discovery may be used in any sequence, and the fact that a party is conducting discovery, whether by deposition or otherwise, shall not operate to delay any other party's discovery.

(e) Supplementation of Disclosures, Responses, and Expert Reports and Statements. A party is under a duty to supplement its disclosures under section (a) of this Rule when the party learns that the information disclosed is incomplete or incorrect in some material respect and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known to the other parties during the disclosure or discovery process, including information relating to anticipated rebuttal but not including information to be used solely for impeachment of a witness. A party is under a duty to amend a prior response to an interrogatory, request for production or request for admission when the party learns that the prior response is incomplete or incorrect in some material respect and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known to the other parties during the discovery process. With respect to experts, the duty to supplement or correct extends both to information contained in the expert's report or statement disclosed pursuant to section (a)(2)(B) of this Rule and to information provided through any deposition of the expert. If a party intends to offer expert testimony on direct examination that has not been disclosed pursuant to section (a)(2)(B) of this Rule on the basis that the expert provided the information through a deposition, the report or statement previously provided shall be supplemented to include a specific description of the deposition testimony relied on. Nothing in this section requires the court to permit an expert to testify as to opinions other than those disclosed in detail in the initial expert report or statement except that if the opinions and bases and reasons therefor are disclosed during the deposition of the expert by the adverse party, the court must permit the testimony at trial unless the court finds that the opposing party has been unfairly prejudiced by the failure to make disclosure in the initial expert report. Supplementation shall be performed in a timely manner.

(f) [No Colorado Rule — See C.R.C.P. 16.]

(g) Signing of Disclosures, Discovery Requests, Responses, and Objections.

(1) Every disclosure made pursuant to subsections (a)(1) or (a)(2) of this Rule shall be signed by at least one attorney of record in the attorney's individual name. An unrepresented party shall sign the disclosure and state the party's address. The signature of the attorney or party constitutes a certification that to the best of the signer's knowledge, information, and belief, formed after a reasonable inquiry, the disclosure is complete and correct as of the time it is made.

(2) Every discovery request, or response, or objection made by a party represented by an attorney shall be signed by at least one attorney of record in the attorney's individual name. An unrepresented party shall sign the request, response, or objection and state the party's address. The signature of the attorney or party constitutes a certification that to the best of the signer's knowledge, information and belief, formed after a reasonable inquiry, the request, response or objection is:

(A) Consistent with these rules and warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law;

(B) Not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation; and

(C) Not unreasonable or unduly burdensome or expensive, given the needs of the case, the discovery already had in the case, the amount in controversy, and the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation.

If a request, response or objection is not signed, it shall be stricken unless it is signed promptly after the omission is called to the attention of the party making the request, response or objection, and a party shall not be obligated to take any action with respect to it until it is signed.

(3) If without substantial justification a certification is made in violation of this rule, the court, upon motion or upon its own initiative, may impose upon the person who made the certification, the party on whose behalf the disclosure, request, response or objection is made, or both, an appropriate sanction, which may include an order to pay the amount of the reasonable expenses incurred because of the violation, including reasonable attorney fees.

SCOPE

[1] Because of its timing and interrelationship with C.R.C.P. 16, C.R.C.P. 26 does not apply to domestic relations, mental health, water law, forcible entry and detainer, C.R.C.P. 120, or other expedited proceedings. However, the Court in those proceedings may use C.R.C.P. 26 and C.R.C.P. 16 to the extent helpful to the case. In most instances, only the timing will need to be modified.

2002

COLORADO DIFFERENCES

[2] Revised C.R.C.P. 26 is patterned largely after Fed.R.Civ.P. 26 as amended in 1993 and 2000 and uses substantially the same numbering. There are differences, however. The differences are to fit disclosure/discovery requirements of Colorado's case/trial management system set forth in C.R.C.P. 16, which is very different from its Federal Rule counterpart. The interrelationship between C.R.C.P. 26 and C.R.C.P. 16 is described in the Committee Comment to C.R.C.P. 16.

[3] The Colorado differences from the Fed.R.Civ.P. are: (1) timing and scope of mandatory automatic disclosures is different (C.R.C.P. 16(b)); (2) the two types of experts in the Federal Rule are clarified by the State Rule (C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)), and disclosure of expert opinions is made at a more realistic time in the proceedings (C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(C)); (3) sequenced disclosure of expert opinions is prescribed in C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(C) to avoid proliferation of experts and related expenses; (4) the parties may use a summary of an expert's testimony in lieu of a report prepared by the expert to reduce expenses (C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)); (5) claiming privilege/protection of work product (C.R.C.P. 26(b)(5)) and supplementation/correction provisions (C.R.C.P. 26(e)) are relocated in the State Rules to clarify that they apply to both disclosures and discovery; (6) a Motion for Protective Order stays a deposition under the State Rules (C.R.C.P. 121 § 1-12) but not the Federal Rule (Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(c)); (7) presumptive limitations on discovery as contemplated by C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1)(VI) are built into the rule (see C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2)); (8) counsel must certify that they have informed their clients of the expense of the discovery they schedule (C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1)(IV)); (9) the parties cannot stipulate out of the C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2) presumptive discovery limitations (C.R.C.P. 29); and (10) pretrial endorsements governed by Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(a)(3) are part of Colorado's trial management system established by C.R.C.P. 16(c) and C.R.C.P. 16(d).

[4] As with the Federal Rule, the extent of disclosure is dependent upon the specificity of disputed facts in the opposing party's pleading (facilitated by the requirement in C.R.C.P. 16(b) that lead counsel confer about the nature and basis of the claims and defenses before making the required disclosures). If a party expects full disclosure, that party needs to set forth the nature of the claim or defense with reasonable specificity. Specificity is not inconsistent with the requirement in C.R.C.P. 8 for a ''short, plain statement'' of a party's claims or defenses. Obviously, to the extent there is disclosure, discovery is unnecessary. Discovery is limited under this system.

FEDERAL COMMITTEE NOTES

[5] Federal ''Committee Notes'' to the December 1, 1993 and December 1, 2000 amendments of Fed.R.Civ.P. 26 are incorporated by reference and where applicable should be used for interpretive guidance.

[6] The most dramatic change in C.R.C.P. 26 is the addition of a disclosure system. Parties are required to disclose specified information without awaiting a discovery demand. Such disclosure is, however, tied to the nature and basis of the claims and defenses of the case as set forth in the parties' pleadings facilitated by the requirement that lead counsel confer about such matters before making the required disclosures.

[7] Subparagraphs (a)(1)(A) and (a)(1)(B) of C.R.C.P. 26 require disclosure of persons, documents and things likely to provide discoverable information relative to disputed facts alleged with particularity in the pleadings. Disclosure relates to disputed facts, not admitted facts. The reference to particularity in the pleadings (coupled with the requirement that lead counsel confer) responds to the concern that notice pleading suggests a scope of disclosure out of proportion to any real need or use. To the contrary, the greater the specificity and clarity of the pleadings facilitated by communication through the C.R.C.P. 16(b) conference, the more complete and focused should be the listing of witnesses, documents, and things so that the parties can tailor the scope of disclosure to the actual needs of the case.

[8] It should also be noted that two types of experts are contemplated by Fed.R.Civ.P. and C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2). The experts contemplated in subsection (a)(2)(B)(II) are persons such as treating physicians, police officers, or others who may testify as expert witnesses and whose opinions are formed as a part of their occupational duties (except when the person is an employee of the party calling the witness). This more limited disclosure has been incorporated into the State Rule because it was deemed inappropriate and unduly burdensome to require all of the information required by C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)(I) for C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)(II) type experts.

2001 COLORADO CHANGES

[9] The change to C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(C)(II) effective July 1, 2001, is intended to prevent a plaintiff, who may have had a year or more to prepare his or her case, from filing an expert report early in the case in order to force a defendant to prepare a virtually immediate response. That change clarifies that the defendant's expert report will not be due until 90 days prior to trial.

[10] The change to C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2)(A) effective July 1, 2001 was made to clarify that the number of depositions limitation does not apply to persons expected to give expert testimony disclosed pursuant to subsection 26(a)(2).

[11] The special and limited form of request for admission in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2)(E) effective July 1, 2001, allows a party to seek admissions as to authenticity of documents to be offered at trial without having to wait until preparation of the Trial Management Order to discover whether the opponent challenges the foundation of certain documents. Thus, a party can be prepared to call witnesses to authenticate documents if the other party refuses to admit their authenticity.

[12] The amendment of C.R.C.P. 26(b)(1) effective January 1, 2002 is patterned after the December, 2000 amendment of the corresponding Federal rule. The amendment should not prevent a party from conducting discovery to seek impeachment evidence or evidence concerning prior acts.

[13] Rule 26 sets the basis for discovery of information by: (1) defining the scope of discovery (26(b)(1)); (2) requiring certain initial disclosures prior to discovery (26(a)(1)); (3) placing presumptive limits on the types of permitted discovery (26(b)(2)); and (4) describing expert disclosure and discovery (26(a)(2) and 26(b)(4)).

[14] Scope of discovery. Perhaps the most significant 2015 amendments are in Rule 26(b)(1). This language is taken directly from the proposed Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1). (For a more complete statement of the changes and their rationales, one can read the extensive commentary proposed for the Federal Rule.) First, the slightly reworded concept of proportionality is moved from its former hiding place in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2)(F)(iii) into the very definition of what information is discoverable. Second, discovery is limited to matters relevant to the specific claims or defenses of any party and is no longer permitted simply because it is relevant to the ''subject matter involved in the action.'' Third, it is made clear that while evidence need not be admissible to be discoverable, this does not permit broadening the basic scope of discovery. In short, the concept is to allow discovery of what a party/lawyer needs to prove its case, but not what a party/lawyer wants to know about the subject of a case.

[15] Proportionality analysis. C.R.C.P. 26(b)(1) requires courts to apply the principle of proportionality in determining the extent of discovery that will be permitted. The Rule lists a number of non-exclusive factors that should be considered. Not every factor will apply in every case. The nature of the particular case may make some factors predominant and other factors insignificant. For example, the amount in controversy may not be an important consideration when fundamental or constitutional rights are implicated, or where the public interest demands a resolution of the issue, irrespective of the economic consequences. In certain types of litigation, such as employment or professional liability cases, the parties' relative access to relevant information may be the most important factor. These examples show that the factors cannot be applied as a mathematical formula. Rather, trial judges have and must exercise discretion, on a case-by-case basis, to effectuate the purposes of these rules, and, in particular, abide by the overarching command that the rules ''shall be liberally construed, administered, and employed by the court and the parties to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action.'' C.R.C.P. 1.

[17] Initial disclosures. Amendments to Rule 26(a)(1) concerning initial disclosures are not as significant as those to Rule 26(b)(1). Nonetheless, it is intended that disclosures should be quite complete and that, therefore, further discovery should not be as necessary as it has been historically. In this regard, the amendment to section (a)(1) adds to the requirement of disclosing four categories of information and that the disclosure include information ''whether or not supportive'' of the disclosing party's case. This should not be a significant change from prior practice. In 2000, Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1) was changed to narrow the initial disclosure requirements to information a party might use to support its position. The Colorado Supreme Court has not adopted that limitation, and continues to require identification of persons and documents that are relevant to disputed facts alleged with particularity in the pleadings. Thus, it was intended that disclosures were to include matter that might be harmful as well as supportive. (Limiting disclosure to supportive information likely would only encourage initial interrogatories and document requests that would require disclosure of harmful information.)

Changes to subsections (A) (persons with information) and (B) (documents) of Rule 26(a)(1) require information related to claims for relief and defenses (consistent with the scope of discovery in Rule 26(b)(1)). Also the identification of persons with relevant information calls for a ''brief description of the specific information that each individual is known or believed to possess.'' Under the prior rule, disclosures of persons with discoverable information identifying ''the subjects of information'' tended to identify numerous persons with the identification of ''X is expected to have information about and may testify relating to the facts of this case.'' The change is designed to avoid that practice and obtain some better idea of which witnesses might actually have genuinely significant information.

[18] Expert disclosures. Retained experts must sign written reports much as before except with more disclosure of their fees. The option of submitting a ''summary'' of expert opinions is eliminated. Their testimony is limited to what is disclosed in detail in their report. Rule 26(a)(2)(B)(I).

''Other'' (non-retained) experts must make disclosures that are less detailed. Many times a lawyer has no control over a non-retained expert, such as a treating physician or police officer, and thus the option of a ''statement'' must be preserved with respect to this type of expert, which, if necessary, may be prepared by the lawyers. In either event, the expert testimony is to be limited to what is disclosed in detail in the disclosure. Rule 26(a)(2)(B)(II).

[19] Retained or non-retained experts. Non-retained experts are persons whose opinions are formed or reasonably derived from or based on their occupational duties.

[20] Expert discovery. The prohibition of depositions of experts was perhaps the most controversial aspect of CAPP. Many lawyers, particularly those involved in professional liability cases, argued that a blanket prohibition of depositions of experts would impair lawyers' ability to evaluate cases and thus frustrate settlement of cases. The 2015 amendment permits limited depositions of experts. Retained experts may be deposed for up to 6 hours, unless changed by the court, which must consider proportionality. Rule 26(b)(4)(A).

The 2015 amendment also requires that, if a deposition reveals additional opinions, previous expert disclosures must be supplemented before trial if the witness is to be allowed to express these new opinions at trial. Rule 26(e). This change addresses, and prohibits, the fairly frequent and abusive practice of lawyers simply saying that the expert report is supplemented by the ''deposition.'' However, even with the required supplementation, the trial court is not required to allow the new opinions in evidence. Id.

The 2015 amendments to Rule 26, like the current and proposed version of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26, emphasize the application of the concept of proportionality to disclosure and discovery, with robust disclosure followed by limited discovery.

[21] Sufficiency of disclosure of expert opinions and the bases therefor. This rule requires detailed disclosures of ''all opinions to be expressed [by the expert] and the basis and reasons therefor.'' Such disclosures ensure that the parties know, well in advance of trial, the substance of all expert opinions that may be offered at trial. Detailed disclosures facilitate the trial, avoid delays, and enhance the prospect for settlement. At the same time, courts and parties must ''liberally construe[], administer[] and employ[]'' these rules ''to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action.'' C.R.C.P. 1. Rule 26(a)(2) does not prohibit disclosures that incorporate by specific page reference previously disclosed records of the designated expert (including non-retained experts), provided that the designated pages set forth the opinions to be expressed, along with the reasons and basis therefor. This Rule does not require that disclosures match, verbatim, the testimony at trial. Reasonableness and the overarching goal of a fair resolution of disputes are the touchstones. If an expert's opinions and facts supporting the opinions are disclosed in a manner that gives the opposing party reasonable notice of the specific opinions and supporting facts, the purpose of the rule is accomplished. In the absence of substantial prejudice to the opposing party, this rule does not require exclusion of testimony merely because of technical defects in disclosure.

Annotator's note. Some of the following annotations refer to cases decided under C.R.C.P. 26 as it existed prior to the 1994 repeal and readoption of that rule, effective January 1, 1995.

The purpose of this rule is to eliminate secrets and surprises at trial, simplify the issues, and lead to fair and just settlements without having to go to trial. Crist v. Goody, 31 Colo. App. 496, 507 P.2d 478 (1972).

The purposes of pretrial discovery include the elimination of surprise at trial, the discovery of relevant evidence, the simplification of issues, and the promotion of expeditious settlement of cases. Hawkins v. District Court, 638 P.2d 1372 (Colo. 1982).

This rule must be construed liberally. Crist v. Goody, 31 Colo. App. 496, 507 P.2d 478 (1972); Sherman v. District Court, 637 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1981).

Legislative intent. The general assembly did not intend that the open records laws would supplant discovery practice in civil litigation. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Certain basic principles govern discovery disputes: First, the rules should be construed liberally to effectuate the full extent of their truth-seeking purpose. Second, in close cases, the balance must be struck in favor of allowing discovery. Third, the party opposing discovery bears the burden of showing good cause that he is entitled to a protective order which justice requires to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense. Hawkins v. District Court, 638 P.2d 1372 (Colo. 1982).

"Lone Pine orders", where a trial court orders plaintiffs to present prima facie evidence supporting their claims after initial disclosures, but before other discovery commences, or risk having their case dismissed, are prohibited under state law. While the supreme court revised C.R.C.P. 16 to create a ''differential case management/early disclosure/limited discovery system'', these revisions are not so substantial as to effectively overrule other supreme court holdings. Although portions of this rule and C.R.C.P. 16 may afford trial courts more discretion than they previously had, that discretion is not so broad as to allow courts to issue Lone Pine orders. And, notably, the state's version of C.R.C.P. 16 does not include the language relied upon by federal courts when issuing Lone Pine orders. Existing procedures under the Colorado rules of civil procedure sufficiently protect against meritless claims, and, therefore, a Lone Pine order was not required solely on that basis. Strudley v. Antero Res. Corp., 2013 COA 106, 350 P.3d 874, aff'd, 2015 CO 26, 347 P.3d 149.

Fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination did not apply to evidence of insurance coverage statutorily required to be maintained by a motor vehicle carrier. These documents came within both the ''collective entity'' and ''required records'' doctrines of fifth amendment jurisprudence. People ex rel. Pub. Utils. Comm'n v. Entrup, 143 P.3d 1120 (Colo. App. 2006).

If knowledge or intent of a defendant is an issue, information regarding collisions prior to one at issue, even those not involving the plaintiff, may be relevant for discovery purposes. Sewell v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colorado, 832 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1991).

Party entitled to complete discovery for case preparation. Regardless of the burden of proof, a party is entitled to complete discovery in order to adequately prepare his case. Kerwin v. District Court, 649 P.2d 1086 (Colo. 1982).

Party entitled to reasonable discovery as prerequisite to trial where supreme court had previously ruled that summary judgment in favor of opposing party was erroneously granted by water court, even though summary judgment motion was decided on the day originally set for the due diligence hearing and discovery related to certain issues had not been sought by the party prior to that date. Even if the summary judgment proceeding were characterized as a trial on the merits, the party is still entitled to a new trial governed by proper standards determined in previous supreme court ruling and discovery related to those standards. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Blue River Irr., 782 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1989).

This rule and C.R.C.P. 37 must be construed together along with the requirement that plaintiff establish a prima facie case for punitive damages, as a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to discovery of the defendant's financial information. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

The 2015 amendment to section (a)(2)(B) that expert testimony "shall be limited to matters disclosed in detail in the [expert] report" does not create mandatory exclusion of expert testimony. Instead, the harm and proportionality analysis under C.R.C.P. 37(c) remains the proper framework for determining sanctions for discovery violations. Rule 37(c)(1) works in conjunction with this rule to authorize the trial court to sanction a party for failing to comply with discovery requirements. Catholic Health v. Earl Swensson Assocs., 2017 CO 94, 403 P.3d 185.

Since use of all discovery methods is sanctioned, the frequency of use of these methods should not be limited, unless there is a showing of good cause in the particular circumstances of the case. Sanchez v. District Court, 624 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1981).

Discovery shall be allowed to proceed without interruption. Discovery procedures to secure information relevant to the subject matter of the action must be allowed to proceed without interruption or obstruction. Sherman v. District Court, 637 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1981).

Discovery matters ordinarily are within the discretion of the trial court. In re Mann, 655 P.2d 814 (Colo. 1982); Silva v. Wilcox, 223 P.3d 127 (Colo. App. 2009).

Although evidence sought through a reopening of discovery would have been discoverable in the first instance, the trial court did not err in declining to reopen discovery for that purpose. Silva v. Wilcox, 223 P.3d 127 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial courts have broad discretion to manage the discovery process and protect parties from discovery requests that would cause annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue hardship. It is incumbent upon the party seeking a protective order to show the requisite conditions for issuance of such an order. Bond v. District Court, 682 P.2d 33 (Colo. 1984); Sheid v. Hewlett Packard, 826 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1991).

Matters relating to pretrial discovery are ordinarily reviewable only by appeal and not in an original proceeding. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 186 Colo. 226, 526 P.2d 1335 (1974).

Late disclosure did not cause prejudice. County's untimely disclosure of witnesses and exhibits required under section (a) did not constitute serious misconduct that denied defendant an adequate opportunity to defend against the witnesses and exhibits. Camp Bird Colo., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Ouray, 215 P.3d 1277 (Colo. App. 2009).

Public documents equally available to both parties are not disclosures under section (a)(1) and need not be automatically disclosed. Averyt v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 265 P.3d 456 (Colo. 2011).

Board of assessment appeals should not rule on a discovery request before the opposing party objects to the request. FirstBank Longmont v. Boulder County Bd. of Equaliz., 990 P.2d 1109 (Colo. App. 1999).

Board of assessment appeals erred in denying a board of equalization request for loan appraisals, because, even if such documents were not admissible in evidence at the board of assessment appeals hearing, they were discoverable under the broad standards applicable to district court discovery proceedings. FirstBank Longmont v. Boulder County Bd. of Equaliz., 990 P.2d 1109 (Colo. App. 1999).

Original writ in nature of prohibition may issue in certain cases. Matters relating to pretrial discovery are ordinarily within the trial court's discretion and are reviewable only by appeal rather than in an original proceeding. However, where a gross abuse of discretion is shown and damage to the petitioners could not be cured by appeal, an original writ in the nature of prohibition may issue. Phillips v. District Court, 194 Colo. 455, 573 P.2d 553 (1978).

By binding plaintiff to the damage computations listed in plaintiff's initial disclosure statement merely because plaintiff did not designate the computations as estimates, the trial court effectively imposed a settlement on plaintiff and improperly involved the court in the settlement process. The trial court overemphasized plaintiff's failure to state that the initial disclosure of damages was an estimate, neglected to view the initial disclosures in the context of being information "now known and reasonably available," and was insufficiently attentive to the importance of an early exchange of information and the resulting need to update information under this rule. Absent some indication plaintiff tried to mislead the defendants or the court in plaintiff's initial disclosure or tried to frustrate the settlement process, plaintiff not required to accept an offer limited to plaintiff's initial disclosures. By granting the defendants' joint motion for judgment for a specific amount of damages over the objection of plaintiff, the court abused its discretion. Morgan v. Genesee Co., 86 P.3d 388 (Colo. 2004).

Applied in Weissman v. District Court, 189 Colo. 497, 543 P.2d 519 (1975); Ricci v. Davis, 627 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1981); Franco v. District Court, 641 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1982); Hadley v. Moffat County Sch. Dist. RE-1, 681 P.2d 938 (Colo. 1984); Leland v. Travelers Indem. Co. of Illinois, 712 P.2d 1060 (Colo. App. 1985); Watson v. Reg'l Transp. Dist., 762 P.2d 133 (Colo. 1988); Sunahara v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2012 CO 30M, 280 P.3d 649; Gonzales v. Windlan, 2014 COA 176, 411 P.3d 878.

II. METHODS.

Statutes for the perpetuation of testimony are not discovery statutes. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

Destructive testing is not a matter of right, but lies in the sound discretion of the trial court. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

The appropriate analysis in deciding whether to allow a destructive test as part of discovery where the owner of the object sought the testing was parallel to that involved in a conventional request for inspection under C.R.C.P. 34 and a resulting motion for a protective order under this rule. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Balance shall be established. The dilemma which arises when the proposed test will somehow alter the original state of the object requires that a balance be established based upon the particular facts of the case and the broad policies of the discovery rules. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

A balance must be struck where a test will alter the original state of an object between the ''costs'' of the alteration of the object and the ''benefits'' of ascertaining the true facts of the case. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Certain factors shall be considered in creating balance. Alternative means of ameliorating ''costs'', resulting from alteration of an object in destructive testing such as the use of detailed photographs to preserve the appearance of the object, or use of other samples for the test, are relevant to the creation of the balance. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Alternative, ''nondestructive'' means of obtaining the facts should be considered in evaluating the putative benefits of the tests. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Bad faith or overreaching is a special factor to be considered in all cases of destructive testing. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Destructive testing shall be undertaken last. A request for destructive testing compels that the court ensure that it is not undertaken until after other testing procedures have been completed by the parties. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Applied in Gottesleben v. Luckenbach, 123 Colo. 429, 231 P.2d 958 (1951).

III. SCOPE.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For comment on Lucas v. District Court appearing below, see 31 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 387 (1959).

Scope of discovery is very broad. The information sought need only be relevant to the subject matter. It need not be admissible as long as it is reasonably calculated to lead to admissible evidence. Kerwin v. District Court, 649 P.2d 1086 (Colo. 1982); In re A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 681 P.2d 540 (Colo. App. 1984).

Information sought by written interrogatories is in accordance with this rule where the information sought is not privileged, is relevant to the subject matter involved in a pending action, and is either admissible in evidence or is information that is reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Denver & Rio Grande W. R. R. v. District Court, 141 Colo. 208, 347 P.2d 495 (1959).

Under this rule, the information sought by an examination must be ''relevant to the subject matter of a pending action''. Lucas v. District Court, 140 Colo. 510, 345 P.2d 1064 (1959).

The term ''relevant'' as used in this rule is not limited to matter which is either admissible in evidence at a trial or which will properly lead to admissible evidence, but includes all matters which are relevant to the subject matter of an action. Lucas v. District Court, 140 Colo. 510, 345 P.2d 1064 (1959).

While plaintiff's request was for relevant information and she must be allowed to discover the extent of PSC's knowledge of prior aircraft collisions with transmission lines and of the circumstances surrounding those collisions, trial court may place reasonable restrictions upon these discovery demands, at least with respect to a reasonable time frame, if the absence of such restrictions would result in unnecessary annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense to PSC. Sewell v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 832 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1991).

This rule expressly provides that the scope of examination is not limited to testimony which will be admissible in a trial. Lucas v. District Court, 140 Colo. 510, 345 P.2d 1064 (1959).

It is error for the court to effectively preclude discovery concerning information which, regardless of its admissibility at trial, is reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence, since the purpose of this section is to permit the discovery of material regardless of its admissibility at trial. Seymour v. District Court, 196 Colo. 102, 581 P.2d 302 (1978).

The plain language of section (b)(1) appears to create a two-tiered process of attorney-managed and court-managed discovery. Under the first tier, parties are permitted, as a matter of right, to seek discovery into any nonprivileged matter ''relevant to the claim or defense of any party''. Under the second tier, the court may permit broader discovery into ''any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the action''. However, this rule does not explain the difference between discovery relevant to a ''claim or defense'' and discovery relevant to the ''subject matter''. And, attempts to define the specific contours of this distinction may only encourage additional contention among litigants. DCP Midstream, LP v.

Therefore, when judicial intervention is invoked, the actual scope of discovery should be determined according to the reasonable needs of the action. This commonsense approach will help avoid the pitfalls of providing an analytical framework buttressed by a distinction that, in practice, is likely to have little meaning, while furthering the obligation to construe the rules liberally to give effect to their overriding purpose. DCP Midstream, LP v. Anadarko Petroleum Corp., 2013 CO 36, 303 P.3d 1187.

The purpose of the final sentence of section (b)(1) of this rule, which provides that "it is not ground for objection that testimony will be inadmissible at a trial if the testimony sought appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence" is not to limit the scope of examination, but rather to enlarge it by eliminating the objection that the testimony sought would not be admissible at a trial. It is not intended to limit the preceding clause of this rule which conditions discovery to that which is "relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action", so that it embraces only that testimony calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Lucas v. District Court, 140 Colo. 510, 345 P.2d 1064 (1959).

It is not necessary to establish the admissibility of testimony; it is sufficient that an inquiry be made as to matters generally bearing on an issue and relevant thereto. Lucas v. District Court, 140 Colo. 510, 345 P.2d 1064 (1959).

Information may be "relevant" for purposes of discovery, although not admissible at trial. Sewell v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 832 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1991).

The fact that evidence may not be admissible at trial under C.R.E. 404(b) does not preclude discovery of that information. Williams v. District Court, 866 P.2d 908 (Colo. 1993).

Objections based on admissibility shall be saved until an actual trial. Lucas v. District Court, 140 Colo. 510, 345 P.2d 1064 (1959).

Examination before trial may be had not merely for the purpose of producing evidence to be used at a trial, but also for discovery of evidence, indeed, for leads as to where evidence may be located. Lucas v. District Court, 140 Colo. 510, 345 P.2d 1064 (1959).

A trial court has a wide range of discretionary devices available to it in enforcing proper pretrial procedure and discovery. Advance Loan Co. v. Degi, 30 Colo. App. 551, 496 P.2d 325 (1972).

Section (b) requires courts to take an active role managing discovery when a scope objection is raised. When faced with a scope objection, the trial court must determine the appropriate scope of discovery in light of the reasonable needs of the case and tailor discovery to those needs. DCP Midstream, LP v. Anadarko Petroleum Corp., 2013 CO 36, 303 P.3d 1187; In re Gromicko, 2017 CO 1, 387 P.3d 58.

To resolve a dispute regarding the proper scope of discovery in a particular case, the trial court should, at a minimum, consider the cost-benefit and proportionality factors set forth in section (b)(2)(F). When tailoring discovery, the factors relevant to a trial court's decision will vary depending on the circumstances of the case. DCP Midstream, LP v. Anadarko Petroleum Corp., 2013 CO 36, 303 P.3d 1187; In re Gromicko, 2017 CO 1, 387 P.3d 58.

Section (b)(2)(F) factors require active judicial management to prevent excessive discovery. DCP Midstream, LP v. Anadarko Petroleum Corp., 2013 CO 36, 303 P.3d 1187; In re Gromicko, 2017 CO 1, 387 P.3d 58.

Trial court did not take an active role in managing discovery because it did not determine the appropriate scope of discovery in light of the reasonable needs of the case, nor did it attempt to tailor discovery to those needs. DCP Midstream, LP v. Anadarko Petroleum Corp., 2013 CO 36, 303 P.3d 1187.

This rule contemplates that a deponent shall answer all questions except those to which he objects on the ground of privilege. Lucas v. District Court, 140 Colo. 510, 345 P.2d 1064 (1959).

A refusal to answer interrogatories may be the basis of reversing a favorable judgment. Where the correctness of a ruling of a trial court denying the right to have a party answer interrogatories can be reviewed by writ of error, a party refusing to answer such interrogatories does so at his peril, since such refusal may be the basis for reversal of a favorable judgment. Denver & Rio Grande W. R. R. v. District Court, 141 Colo. 208, 347 P.2d 495 (1959).

Where the information sought is subject to discovery pursuant to section (b) of this rule, the refusal to supply to information requested is in itself a ground for reversal. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

Refusal to supply names of witnesses intended to be called is ground for reversal. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

If one of the issues is the knowledge or intent of a defendant, information respecting prior incidents, even those not involving the plaintiff, may be relevant for discovery purposes. Sewell v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 832 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1991).

Limited discovery on the issue of falsity is appropriate in a defamation suit where the materials may contain information relevant to the issue of falsity and are admissible in evidence or reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Living Will Ctr. v. NBC Subsidiary, 857 P.2d 514 (Colo. App. 1993).

B. Materials.

The attorney-client privilege and the work-product exemption are distinct but related theories, arising out of similar policy interests. A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1040, 97 S. Ct. 737, 50 L. Ed. 2d 751 (1977); Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

Generally, the attorney-client privilege protects communications between the attorney and the client, and the promotion of such confidences is said to exist for the benefit of the client. On the other hand, the work-product exemption generally applies to ''documents and tangible things . . . prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial'', and its goal is to insure the privacy of the attorney from opposing parties and counsel. A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1040, 97 S. Ct. 737, 50 L. Ed. 2d 751 (1977); Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

Attorney-client privilege not absolute. Neither the attorney-client privilege nor the work-product exemption is absolute. The social policies underlying each doctrine may sometimes conflict with other prevailing public policies and, in such circumstances, the attorney-client privilege and the work-product doctrine must give way. Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

Neither the attorney-client privilege nor the work-product doctrine creates an absolute immunity for statements made to attorneys or to their agents. Kay Labs., Inc. v. District Court, 653 P.2d 721 (Colo. 1982).

The work-product privilege is perverted if it is used to further illegal activities, and there are no overpowering considerations that would justify the shielding of evidence that aids continuing or future criminal activity. Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

Attorney-client relationship must exist for privilege to apply. Documents made for an insurance company acting as the agent of an attorney are also covered by the privilege, but the attorney-client relationship between the insurance company and its lawyer must exist at the time the documents are created for the privilege to apply. Kay Labs., Inc. v. District Court, 653 P.2d 721 (Colo. 1982).

The work-product exemption is applicable even when the client is a corporation. A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1040, 97 S. Ct. 737, 50 L. Ed. 2d 751 (1977).

Work-product privilege is subject to the crime or fraud exception. Caldwell v. District Court, 644 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1982).

The ''crime-fraud'' or ''criminal purposes'' exception has developed as a limitation on the applicability of the attorney-client privilege and the work-product exemption. Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

The privilege created for an attorney's work product cannot be allowed to protect the perpetration of wrongful conduct. Caldwell v. District Court, 644 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1982).

The crime-fraud exception provides that communications between a client and his attorney are not privileged if they are made for the purpose of aiding the commission of a future crime or of a present continuing crime. Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

Prima facie showing required. A prima facie showing — one which gives a foundation in fact for the assertion of ongoing or future criminal conduct — is sufficient to invoke the applicability of the crime-fraud exception. Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

There must be a prima facie showing that the ''crime-fraud'' exception applies before the communication is stripped of its privilege. People v. Board, 656 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1982).

Applicability of crime-fraud exception within trial court's discretion. Whether the prosecution has established a proper foundation in fact for the application of the crime-fraud exception is best left for determination by the trial court, whose exercise of discretion will not be overturned unless the record shows an abuse of that discretion. People v. Board, 656 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1982).

Work-product exemption applies in situations before grand jury. The work-product exemption should apply in situations before a grand jury where the work-product was gathered for the purpose of preparing to defend the client against an anticipated or pending criminal charge, which charge was also the subject of the grand jury investigation. A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1040, 97 S. Ct. 737, 50 L. Ed. 2d 751 (1977).

Work-product prepared by counsel in anticipation of specific civil litigation which is sought by a grand jury is not protected by the work-product exemption unless the subject matter of the civil case and the grand jury proceeding are closely related. A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1040, 97 S. Ct. 737, 50 L. Ed. 2d 751 (1977).

Some matters formerly protected as work product now discoverable. Section (b)(3) broadens the scope of discovery to include matters formerly protected by some courts under the work-product doctrine. Hawkins v. District Court, 638 P.2d 1372 (Colo. 1982).

Attorney's participation in preparation of documents has significance. The significance of documents, reports and statements being prepared by or under the direction of an attorney, rather than a nonattorney agent of a party, is that the attorney's participation is some indication that the materials were prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial. Hawkins v. District Court, 638 P.2d 1372 (Colo. 1982).

Statements do not fall within the scope of the attorney-client privilege where attorneys were not involved in the investigation that produced them. Compton v. Safeway, Inc., 169 P.3d 135 (Colo. 2007).

Insurance company's investigative materials are ordinary business records. Because a substantial part of an insurance company's business is to investigate claims made by an insured against the company or by some other party against an insured, it must be presumed that such investigations are part of the normal business activity of the company and that reports and witness' statements compiled by or on behalf of the insurer in the course of such investigations are ordinary business records as distinguished from trial preparation materials. Hawkins v. District Court, 638 P.2d 1372 (Colo. 1982); Lazar v. Riggs, 79 P.3d 105 (Colo. 2003); Compton v. Safeway, Inc., 169 P.3d 135 (Colo. 2007).

Materials are business records notwithstanding that the investigative material was prepared by outside counsel for insurer's general counsel. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. v. District Court, 718 P.2d 1044 (Colo. 1986).

Insurance has burden of demonstrating that its reports and statements are trial preparation materials. In the case of an insurance company defending a claim and asserting that its reports and witness' statements are trial preparation materials under section (b)(3), the insurance company has the burden of demonstrating that the document was prepared or obtained in order to defend the specific claim which already had arisen and, when the documents were prepared or obtained, there was a substantial probability of imminent litigation over the claim or a lawsuit had already been filed. Hawkins v. District Court, 638 P.2d 1372 (Colo. 1982); Lazar v. Riggs, 79 P.3d 105 (Colo. 2003); Compton v. Safeway, Inc., 169 P.3d 135 (Colo. 2007).

Petitioner may obtain discovery. Even if an insurance company demonstrates that the requested documents constitute trial preparation materials, a petitioner nevertheless may obtain discovery upon a showing of substantial need of the materials in the preparation of his case and an inability without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the requested information by other means. Hawkins v. District Court, 638 P.2d 1372 (Colo. 1982).

The "substantial need" requirement for discovery of trial preparation materials in general is subject to differing standards which have been adopted for materials prepared by experts specifically. Phillips v. District Court, 194 Colo. 455, 573 P.2d 553 (1978).

A medical malpractice plaintiff had substantial need for nurse interview notes made by defendant's attorney where the notes were the only contemporaneous record of the hospital's medical care given to plaintiff. The trial court must conduct an in camera review of the notes to redact the attorney's work product, if any. Cardenas v. Jerath, 180 P.3d 415 (Colo. 2008).

Attorney forfeits right to exclusive possession of client's papers relevant to fee dispute and can be required to produce them for inspection. Jenkins v. District Court, 676 P.2d 1201 (Colo. 1984).

Settlement authority is not a matter prepared by the attorney in anticipation of litigation subject to the attorney work product doctrine. S.C. Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 698 P.2d 1369 (Colo. App. 1984).

Discovery of reserve amounts and settlement authority not discoverable information in a matter claimed by a third-party against an insured. Silva v. Basin W. Inc., 47 P.3d 1184 (Colo. 2002).

For background of work-product doctrine, see Hawkins v. District Court, 638 P.2d 1372 (Colo. 1982).

C. Experts.

Certificate of review requirement under § 13-20-602 is independent of the requirement to file initial disclosures under section (a)(2) of this rule. Williams v. Boyle, 72 P.3d 392 (Colo. App. 2003).

Section (b)(4) does not apply where discovery relates to information obtained by an expert as an actor or viewer with respect to transactions or occurrences that are part of the subject matter of the law suit and not obtained by the expert in anticipation of litigation or for trial. Water Rights v. No. Colo. Water Conservancy D., 677 P.2d 320 (Colo. 1984).

The rule allows discovery of attorney work product shared with a testifying expert witness, provided the expert witness considers the work product in forming an opinion. A communication is discoverable even if the expert did not rely on it in forming his or her opinion; the expert need only consider the communication in developing the opinion. An expert considers documents or materials for purposes of the rule where the expert reads or reviews them before or in connection with forming the opinion, even if the expert does not rely upon or ultimately rejects them. Gall v. Jamison, 44 P.3d 233 (Colo. 2002).

Under section (a)(2)(B)(I) of this rule, an expert witness considers information "in forming the opinions" if the expert witness reviews the information with the purpose of forming opinions about the particular case at issue. Garrigan v. Bowen, 243 P.3d 231 (Colo. 2010).

In medical malpractice case where defendant retained co-author of published medical study as an expert witness, trial court erred in excluding expert witness's testimony for failure to disclose raw data underlying the study. Because the raw data was not ''data or other information considered by the expert witness in forming opinions'', defendant was not required to disclose or produce the data. Garrigan v. Bowen, 243 P.3d 231 (Colo. 2010).

The trial court's discretion under section (b)(4)(A)(ii) of this rule is not limited by the ''substantial need'' requirement. Phillips v. District Court, 194 Colo. 455, 573 P.2d 553 (1978).

Exceptional circumstances must be demonstrated to discover facts and opinions held by an expert who will not testify at trial, whether listed in the past as a potential witness or not. Phillips v. District Court, 194 Colo. 455, 573 P.2d 553 (1978).

Plaintiff did not comply with this rule because he did not timely endorse expert witnesses withdrawn by the opposing party. Plaintiff also did not inform the court and opposing party that he would use experts' depositions at trial under C.R.C.P. 16(f)(3)(VI)(D). Sovde v. Scott, 2017 COA 90, 410 P.3d 778.

There is no reversible error in not excluding expert physician's testimony. Where, although a summary of an expert physician's opinion is not furnished until just prior to trial, but the defendant is furnished with medical records and raw medical data prior to trial, a trial data certificate is filed, defense counsel knows the name of the witness, and defense counsel does request a continuance in order to obtain whatever information he needs, there is no reversible error in not excluding the testimony. Kussman v. City & County of Denver, 671 P.2d 1000 (Colo. App. 1983).

Failure to exclude testimony of financial expert regarding insolvency was harmless where witness had been listed as an expert witness on related matters, and other witnesses also testified as to insolvency of corporation in a case involving wrongful distribution of assets. Ajay Sports, Inc. v. Casazza, 1 P.3d 267 (Colo. App. 2000).

For differing standards adopted for materials prepared by experts, see Phillips v. District Court, 194 Colo. 455, 573 P.2d 553 (1978).

For discussion of proper scope of expert rebuttal disclosures under section (a)(2)(C)(III), see Warden v. Exempla, Inc., 2012 CO 74, 291 P.3d 30.

Failure to disclose microscope slides of samples of tissue from decedent that experts based diagnosis and causation of decedent's illness to defendants prior to trial was not a discovery violation because the tissue samples from which they were prepared were available to all parties. Fenton v. Fibreboard Corp., 827 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1991).

The specific disclosure requirements of this rule do not apply to expert testimony regarding requests for attorney fees awarded as costs to a prevailing party. Chartier v. Weinland Homes, Inc., 25 P.3d 1279 (Colo. App. 2001).

Trial court in dissolution of marriage action did not abuse its discretion when it declined to strike the testimony of wife's rebuttal expert where husband failed to show he was prejudiced by the late receipt of the expert's report. In re Antuna, 8 P.3d 589 (Colo. App. 2000).

Trial court was not required to preclude expert witness's entire testimony. Where expert's report was submitted 11 days before trial and defendant knew the substance of the expert's testimony, had received all other disclosures required by this rule, and deposed the expert before trial, trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing expert to testify after redacting portions of the report that previously had not been made known to the defendant. Camp Bird Colo., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Ouray, 215 P.3d 1277 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in precluding doctor's testimony when the doctor failed to include adequate information regarding testimony at prior trials and depositions. A listing of any other cases in which a witness has testified as an expert at trial or by deposition within the preceding four years shall include, at a minimum, the name of the court or administrative agency, where the testimony occurred, the names of the parties, the case numbers, and whether the testimony was by deposition or at trial. Carlson v. Ferris, 58 P.3d 1055 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 85 P.3d 504 (Colo. 2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in precluding the testimony of a standard of care expert witness when the disclosing party failed to identify the prior trials and depositions at which the witness testified. Prior to the deposition of the expert witness, the disclosing party provided only dates and attorneys' names to the discovering party, thus shifting the burden to identify the case names and depositions at which the expert testified from the disclosing party to the discovering party, therefore, the preclusion of the witness was justified.

Svendsen v. Robinson, 94 P.3d 1204 (Colo. App. 2004).

Incompleteness of list of cases in which expert had testified did not require preclusion of testimony where opposing party was allowed to cross-examine the expert on the failure to keep an accurate list of the cases in which he testified, and pretrial disclosure identified 54 of 100 cases in which he had testified. Estate of Ford v. Eicher, 220 P.3d 939 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 250 P.3d 262 (Colo. 2011).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in concluding that father was not prejudiced by inadequate disclosures under section (a) when father did not argue how he was prejudiced by the defects in the department's expert disclosures and all parties stipulated that all experts endorsed by any party were qualified as experts in their listed areas of expertise. People in Interest of S.L., 2017 COA 160, 421 P.3d 1207.

Trial court abused its discretion by refusing plaintiffs' uncontested motions to postpone the deadline for disclosure of expert testimony and to continue the trial. Parties were in agreement to wait for the NTSB's plane crash investigative report instead of hiring expert investigators on short notice. Burchett v. S. Denver Windustrial, 42 P.3d 19 (Colo. 2002).

Trial court erred in striking expert's rebuttal testimony because the testimony specifically refuted defense expert's theory of causation and therefore constituted a proper rebuttal disclosure under section (a)(2)(C)(III). Warden v. Exempla, Inc., 2012 CO 74, 291 P.3d 30.

Failure to produce a timely formal written report that contains the qualifications of the expert witness and a complete statement describing the substance of all opinions to be expressed does not result in prejudice to defendant when defendant was aware of all the information summarized in the report long before the trial. Saturn Sys., Inc. v. Militare, 252 P.3d 516 (Colo. App. 2011).

Plaintiff's counsel abandoned any objection to testimony of expert witness based on a failure to timely produce expert's report and therefore waived the issue for appellate review. Vanderpool v. Loftness, 2012 COA 115M, 300 P.3d 953.

D. Other Illustrative Cases.

Trial courts should apply a comprehensive framework incorporating the principles from the Martinelli and Stone tests to all discovery requests implicating a right to privacy. The party requesting the information must always first prove that the information requested is relevant to the subject of the action. Next, the party opposing the discovery request must show that it has a legitimate expectation that the requested information is confidential and will not be disclosed. If the trial court determines that there is a legitimate expectation of privacy in the information, the requesting party must prove either that disclosure is required to serve a compelling state interest or that there is a compelling need for the information. If the requesting party is successful in proving one of these two elements, it must then also show that the information is not available from other sources. Lastly, if the information is available from other sources, the requesting party must prove that it is using the least intrusive means to obtain the information. In re District Court, 256 P.3d 687 (Colo. 2011).

When a party asserts a privacy right in response to a motion to compel discovery, the court must make findings of fact that balance the moving party's need for the information sought against the privacy right. A court abuses its discretion if it grants a motion to compel discovery without first performing this required balancing test. Gateway Logistics, Inc. v. Smay, 2013 CO 25, 302 P.3d 235.

Official information privilege is significant in context of civil discovery under section (b)(1) since that rule allows a litigant to obtain discovery of any matter, not privileged, which is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Determination of extent to which official information privilege applies to materials sought to be discovered requires an ad hoc balancing of: (a) The discoverant's interests in disclosure of the materials; and (b) the government's interests in their confidentiality. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Certain factors shall be considered where official information privilege claimed for police files. In a litigation arising from allegations of police misconduct, when the official information privilege is claimed for files and reports maintained by a police department, concerning the incident on which the allegations of misconduct are based, or about the officers involved in the incident, the trial court has the advantage of the following formulation of factors to be considered in applying the privilege: (1) The extent to which disclosure will thwart governmental processes by discouraging citizens from giving the government information; (2) the impact upon persons who have given information of having their identities disclosed; (3) the degree to which governmental self-evaluation and consequent program improvement will be chilled by disclosure; (4) whether the information sought is factual data or evaluative summary; (5) whether the party seeking the discovery is an actual or potential defendant in any criminal proceeding either pending or reasonably likely to follow from the incident in question; (6) whether the police investigation has been completed; (7) whether any intradepartmental disciplinary proceedings have arisen or may arise from the investigation; (8) whether the plaintiff's suit is nonfrivolous and brought in good faith; (9) whether the information sought is available through other discovery or from other sources; and (10) the importance of the information sought to the plaintiff's case. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Doctrine of stare decisis has limited effect on application of official information privilege. Because the balancing process proceeds on an ad hoc basis, the effect of the doctrine of stare decisis in cases requiring application of the official information privilege is limited. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Tripartite balancing inquiry undertaken when right to confidentiality is invoked. When the right to confidentiality is invoked to prevent disclosure of personal materials or information, a tripartite balancing inquiry must be undertaken by the court, as follows: (1) Does the party seeking to come within the protection of the right to confidentiality have a legitimate expectation that the materials or information will not be disclosed? (2) is disclosure nonetheless required to serve a compelling state interest? and (3) if so, will the necessary disclosure occur in that manner which is least intrusive with respect to the right to confidentiality? Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980); Corbetta v. Albertson's, Inc., 975 P.2d 718 (Colo. 1999).

Trial court should have applied Martinelli balancing test and conducted an in camera examination before ordering disclosure of food store's personnel records. Corbetta v. Albertson's, Inc., 975 P.2d 718 (Colo. 1999).

Trial court abused its discretion in ordering defendant to produce his personal laptop for inspection without applying the balancing test and establishing parameters. Cantrell v. Cameron, 195 P.3d 659 (Colo. 2008).

To establish legitimate expectation of nondisclosure, claimant must show: First, that he or she has an actual or subjective expectation that the information will not be disclosed; and, second, that the material or information which he or she seeks to protect against disclosure is highly personal and sensitive and that its disclosure would be offensive and objectionable to a reasonable person of ordinary sensibilities. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Compelling state interest can override constitutional right to confidentiality. Even if it is determined that a claimant has a legitimate expectation that the personal materials or information in question will not be disclosed through state action, a compelling state interest can override the constitutional right to confidentiality which arises from that expectation. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Compelling state interest necessary to override claimant's legitimate expectation of privacy must consist in disclosure of the very materials or information which would otherwise be protected. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

When it is determined that compelling state interest mandates disclosure of otherwise protected materials or information, the trial court must further inquire into the manner in which the disclosure will occur and disclosure must only be made in a manner consistent with the state interest to be served, which will intrude least on the claimant's right to confidentiality. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Personnel files and police reports may be protected from discovery. To the extent that they come within the scope of the official information privilege, the personnel files and staff investigation bureau reports of the Denver police department are protected from discovery. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Extent of discovery of defendant's financial condition is not unlimited even after a prima facie case for punitive damages is made. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Because tax returns are confidential in nature, a court may compel discovery of tax returns only if the returns are relevant to the subject matter of the case and there is a compelling need for the returns because specific information contained in the returns is not otherwise readily obtainable. Even if the need for discovery of tax returns is established, the court should limit discovery to those portions of the returns relevant and necessary to the assertion of the legal claims or defenses of the party seeking discovery. Stone v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 185 P.3d 150 (Colo. 2008).

Burden is cast upon party who seeks protective order to show annoyance, embarrassment or oppression. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Specific requests may constitute unnecessary harassment. Specific questions requesting detailed information regarding the defendant's financial status may constitute unnecessary harassment. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Existence of triable issue on punitive damages may be established through discovery, by evidentiary means, or by an offer of proof. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Prima facie proof of triable issue on liability for punitive damages is necessary to discover information relating to the defendant's financial status. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Permissible scope of discovery of defendant's financial worth for punitive damages includes only material evidence. The permissible scope of discovery of defendant's financial worth where a prima facie case for punitive damages has been made should include only material evidence of the defendant's financial worth, and should be framed in such a manner that the questions proposed are not unduly burdensome. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Mere allegation that plaintiff is entitled to punitive damages will not support order for discovery of a defendant's financial condition. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Information related to infection with AIDS virus. Patient entitled to discover information relating to established screening and testing procedures where policy of blood center which supplied patient with blood infected with the AIDS virus required follow-up questions to unsatisfactory responses on initial donor information cards and cards failed to reveal whether guidelines had been followed. Belle Bonfils Mem'l Blood Ctr. v. District Court, 763 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1988).

In determining the discoverability of the identity of an anonymous blood donor who has tested positive for the AIDS virus, the court must apply a balancing test comparing the state's interest against the donor's interest in privacy. Belle Bonfils Mem'l Blood Ctr. v. District Court, 763 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1988).

Blood donor's privacy interest in remaining anonymous to avoid embarrassment and humiliation associated with being identified as a carrier of the AIDS virus does not outweigh the recipient's interest in seeking information necessary to adequately pursue a claim. Nor does societal interest in maintaining abundant supply of volunteer blood outweigh society's interest in assuring that such blood is free from contamination. Belle Bonfils Mem'l Blood Ctr. v. District Court, 763 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1988).

Privileges protect against pretrial discovery. The physician-patient and psychologist-patient privileges, once they attach, prohibit not only testimonial disclosures in court but also pretrial discovery of information within the scope of the privilege. Clark v. District Court, 668 P.2d 3 (Colo. 1983).

Refusal of discovery in marriage dissolution action may constitute abuse of discretion. An abuse of discretion serious enough to invoke the supreme court's mandamus power occurs when the trial judge refuses discovery, in a marriage dissolution action, of evidence concerning the post-dissolution value and use of assets, various reinvestments derived from those assets, and the husband's income and expenditures. Mayer v. District Court, 198 Colo. 199, 597 P.2d 577 (1979).

The discovery of customer lists depends on the particular circumstances of each case. Chicago Cutlery Co. v. District Court, 194 Colo. 10, 568 P.2d 464 (1977).

In light of the unique nature of mutual ditch companies, which are not organized under general corporation statutes but under special statutes designed specifically for ditch and reservoir companies, the identity of shareholders for the determination of their intent is relevant in water court diligence proceedings. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Blue River Irr. Co., 753 P.2d 737 (Colo. 1988); Pub. Serv. Co. v. Blue River Irr., 782 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1989).

Hospital inspection committees' privilege not expanded. Absent legislative action and in light of the general policy favoring liberal discovery, the public interest in the confidentiality of hospital inspection committees is insufficient to warrant judicial expansion of the privilege contained in § 12-43.5-102 (3)(e). Sherman v. District Court, 637 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1981).

Trial judge may properly deny motion for tape recorded depositions where the objecting party shows that there exists a potential for abuse or harassment of a witness or party or where the objecting party otherwise establishes a bona fide claim for protective orders under section (c) of this rule. Sanchez v. District Court, 624 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1981).

Exercise of discretion in ruling on discovery motion for tape recorded depositions should be limited, absent exceptional circumstances, to considerations of accuracy and trustworthiness with respect to the procedures and conditions to be followed in the recording, transcription, and filing of the depositions. Sanchez v. District Court, 624 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1981).

"Surveillance movies" are discoverable. Crist v. Goody, 31 Colo. App. 496, 507 P.2d 478 (1972).

For trial court's refusal to recognize reporter's privilege, see Gagnon v. District Court, 632 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1981).

By binding plaintiff to the damage computations listed in plaintiff's initial disclosure statement merely because plaintiff did not designate the computations as estimates, the trial court effectively imposed a settlement on plaintiff and improperly involved the court in the settlement process. The trial court overemphasized plaintiff's failure to state that the initial disclosure of damages was an estimate, neglected to view the initial disclosures in the context of being information "now known and reasonably available," and was insufficiently attentive to the importance of an early exchange of information and the resulting need to update information under this rule. Absent some indication plaintiff tried to mislead the defendants or the court in plaintiff's initial disclosure or tried to frustrate the settlement process, plaintiff not required to accept an offer limited to plaintiff's initial disclosures. By granting the defendants' joint motion for judgment for a specific amount of damages over the objection of plaintiff, the court abused its discretion. Morgan v. Genesee Co., 86 P.3d 388 (Colo. 2004).

No abuse of discretion by trial court in excluding evidence of settlement between general contractor and homeowners. Trial court struck information contained in new disclosures because it was untimely. It apparently accepted subcontractors' argument that allowing information about newly disclosed settlement would be unfairly prejudicial to them and that the settlement was not binding on them. Trial court acknowledged public policy encouraging settlements but noted that indemnification claim was present from the beginning of litigation and all parties had time to prepare for it. D.R. Horton, Inc.-Denver v. Bischoff & Coffman Constr., LLC, 217 P.3d 1262 (Colo. App. 2009).

Affidavit did not place privileged communications at issue and, therefore, did not result in an implied waiver of the attorney-client privilege. The mere denial of an allegation in an affidavit does not waive the attorney-client privilege. The affidavit did not concern any privileged information. And the affidavit was not in support of any claim or defense that depends on privileged information or attorney advice. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Griggs, 2018 CO 50, 419 P.3d 572.

IV. PROTECTIVE ORDERS.

Law reviews. For article, ''Litigating Disputes Involving the Medical Marijuana Industry'', see 41 Colo. Law. 103 (August 2012).

What constitutes good cause for a protective order under section (c) is a matter to be decided on the basis of the facts of each particular case. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 186 Colo. 226, 526 P.2d 1335 (1974).

Interrogatories which request information and data obtainable from available documents are "oppressive" under section (c) of this rule where the documents are available by use of C.R.C.P. 34 as a party should not be required to do the requesting party's investigative work. Val Vu, Inc. v. Lacey, 31 Colo. 55, 497 P.2d 723 (1972).

Where a strong case involving probable "annoyance, embarrassment, or oppression" is presented concerning out-of-state document, the court should not require production of all the documents in Colorado; rather, the court could provide that the inspection, copying, and photostating of all documents, except those claimed to be confidential or to contain trade secrets, take place where they are located. Bristol Myers Co. v. District Court, 161 Colo. 354, 422 P.2d 373 (1967).

Protective orders may be granted by a trial court to protect a party from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense, and must be decided on the basis of the particular facts before the court. People in Interest of J.L.P., 870 P.2d 1252 (Colo. App. 1994).

The plain language of section (c) does not authorize a protective order that would restrict the use of documents originally obtained outside the discovery process in the pending action. Jessee v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 147 P.3d 56 (Colo. 2006).

In worker's compensation case, administrative law judge may, upon good cause shown, grant a protective order that discovery may not be had in order to protect a party from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense. Powderhorn Coal Co. v. Weaver, 835 P.2d 616 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court properly denied discovery request and granted protective order where the information sought through discovery would have been fundamentally unfair and burdensome to and would have interfered with the sovereignty of Oglala Sioux Indian Tribe. People in Interest of J.L.P., 870 P.2d 1252 (Colo. App. 1994).

The trial court must balance the competing interests that would be served by granting or denying discovery when determining whether good cause exists for the issuance of a protective order. Williams v. District Court, 866 P.2d 908 (Colo. 1993).

There is no absolute right to hide trade secrets. There is no absolute right to hide the nature or existence of trade secrets from an opposing party. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 186 Colo. 226, 526 P.2d 1335 (1974); Direct Sales Tire Co. v. District Court, 686 P.2d 1316 (Colo. 1984).

Section (c)(7) does not bar disclosure of trade secrets, but permits the trial court to grant disclosure ''in a designated way''. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 186 Colo. 226, 526 P.2d 1335 (1974).

Test of whether good cause exists in a particular case under section (c)(7) is largely determined by balancing the need to limit the exposure of a trade secret against the need of the opposing party to have knowledge of the nature of the secret. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 186 Colo. 226, 526 P.2d 1335 (1974); Direct Sales Tire Co. v. District Court, 686 P.2d 1316 (Colo. 1984).

A three-part balancing inquiry must be undertaken by the trial court when the right to confidentiality is invoked. This inquiry entails determining whether the party seeking to prevent disclosure has a legitimate expectation that the information will not be disclosed, whether the state interest in facilitating the truth-seeking process through litigation is sufficiently compelling to overcome the asserted privacy interests, and whether disclosure can occur in a less intrusive manner. Williams v. District Court, 866 P.2d 908 (Colo. 1993).

Documents containing matters confidential or trade secrets should be forwarded to the clerk of the court and handled pursuant to the conditions imposed by the order of the court, as these documents should be physically present in order that full protection of their contents may be more effectively enforced. Bristol Myers Co. v. District Court, 161 Colo. 354, 422 P.2d 373 (1967).

For the purposes of determining who may be excluded from a pretrial deposition, this rule and not C.R.E. 615 controls. Hamon Contractors, Inc. v. District Court, 877 P.2d 884 (Colo. 1994).

Under this rule, a party or the representative of a party that is not a natural person may be excluded from a pretrial deposition only under exceptional circumstances. Hamon Contractors, Inc. v. District Court, 877 P.2d 884 (Colo. 1994).

Financially stressed nonresident need not incur unnecessarily expense of cross-country trip to take his deposition. Where one desires in good faith the deposition of a party living in another state before trial, he should have it, but not at a time or place involving the expense of a cross-country trip when it is shown that the nonresident party is without funds for the expense of such journey and a deposition taken shortly before the trial, which the nonresident party agrees to, will adequately serve the ends of justice. Manning v. Manning, 136 Colo. 380, 317 P.2d 329 (1957).

The allowance of travel and attorney expenses for the taking of depositions is a matter solely within the discretion of the trial court under this rule. Orth v. Bauer, 163 Colo. 136, 429 P.2d 279 (1967).

Party requesting discovery must pay all expenses. All reasonable expenses in connection with the production, inspection, copying, or photostating of the documents are to be paid by the party requesting discovery as the same are incurred. Bristol Myers Co. v. District Court, 161 Colo. 354, 422 P.2d 373 (1967).

Plaintiff cannot shift financial burden of preparing his case. The plaintiff has the burden of proof at the trial and where the expenditure of substantial sums of money is involved in complying with the order for production of documents, the plaintiff cannot shift the financial burden of preparing his case to the defendant by suggesting that these expenses may be ultimately assessed against either party as costs, since a defendant cannot be required to finance the legal action of his adversary. Bristol Myers Co. v. District Court, 161 Colo. 354, 422 P.2d 373 (1967).

Governmental officials of foreign state cannot be compelled to appear in Colorado to take depositions. Where a motion was filed under this rule in behalf of the attorney general and tax commissioner of another state who had been ordered to appear in Colorado for the purpose of taking depositions, the district court could not compel them to so appear, and this fact is true even though the foreign state had brought the action in which defendant sought these depositions, inasmuch as this rule grants jurisdiction to the district courts over all persons for the purpose of taking depositions with the implied limitation that those properly summoned must be within the jurisdiction of the court either as residents, or if as nonresidents, then subject to such jurisdiction due to mutual compact or uniform act. Minnesota ex rel. Minnesota Att'y Gen. v. District Court, 155 Colo. 521, 395 P.2d 601 (1964).

The unrestricted use of discovery is ill-suited to the special problems and character of "habeas corpus" proceedings, especially where the scope of inquiry is limited to a determination of a matter of law as, for example, whether or not a petitioner is substantially charged with a crime in a state requesting extradition and whether or not he is a fugitive. Hithe v. Nelson, 172 Colo. 179, 471 P.2d 596 (1970).

A court when confronted with a petition for writ of habeas corpus which establishes a prima facie case for relief may authorize the use of suitable discovery procedures reasonably fashioned to elicit facts necessary to help the court dispose of the matter as law and justice may require. Hithe v. Nelson, 172 Colo. 179, 471 P.2d 596 (1970).

The court in a "habeas corpus" matter may properly restrict the taking of a deposition where its use relates not to the narrow issues of "habeas corpus", but to broad range issues not relevant in a habeas corpus determination. Hithe v. Nelson, 172 Colo. 179, 471 P.2d 596 (1970).

Hospital records of plaintiff held properly impounded, sealed, and not opened except under court order. CeBuzz, Inc. v. Sniderman, 171 Colo. 246, 466 P.2d 457 (1970).

Petitioners waive physician-patient or psychologist-patient privilege by placing their mental condition at issue. When petitioners place their mental condition into issue by bringing a personal injury action to recover damages for mental suffering and expenses for psychiatric counseling, they waive the physician-patient or psychologist-patient privilege. Bond v. District Court, 682 P.2d 33 (Colo. 1984).

Balancing standard required for protective order relating to physician-patient privilege. Trial court abused its discretion when it failed to balance the petitioners' interests in confidential communications with their therapists with the competing interest of the defendant in obtaining sufficient evidence to contest the damage claims for mental suffering and emotional distress. Bond v. District Court, 682 P.2d 33 (Colo. 1984).

Information subject to discovery that is of a confidential nature may be protected from public disclosure even if the pending litigation is a matter of public interest. Bowlen v. District Court, 733 P.2d 1179 (Colo. 1987).

V. SUPPLEMENTATION.

The continuing duty of a party to supplement his responses and to identify and provide the location of persons who have knowledge of discoverable matters is expressly required by section (e)(1) of this rule. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

A party must continue to inform as to new witnesses. Where written interrogatories are directed to a party pursuant to C.R.C.P. 33 requesting the names of the witnesses to be called by that party, the responding party has a continuing duty to inform the requesting party of newly discovered witnesses. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

Court may determine sanction for failure to disclose and supplement. The trial court has broad discretion to determine the sanctions to be imposed on a party for failure to disclose the substance of testimony intended to be elicited from a witness. This is especially true in view of the continuing duty to disclose and supplement in a reasonable manner the substance of an expert witness' testimony. Great W. Sugar Co. v. Northern Natural Gas Co., 661 P.2d 684 (Colo. App. 1982).

C.R.C.P. 37(c) provides for the exclusion of non-disclosed evidence unless the failure to disclose is either substantially justified or harmless to the opposing party. Todd v. Bear Valley Vill. Apts., 980 P.2d 973 (Colo. 1999); Cook v. Fernandez-Rocha, 168 P.3d 505 (Colo. 2007).

Reading sections (a) and (e) of this rule together with C.R.C.P. 37(c), a party may request sanctions based on the opposing party's providing, without substantial justification, misleading disclosures or its failure, without substantial justification, seasonably to correct misleading disclosures. In legal malpractice case, because the trial court did not consider the defendant's claim that attorneys representing plaintiff provided misleading disclosures or failed seasonably to correct such disclosures, it incorrectly denied the motion under C.R.C.P. 37(c). Brown v. Silvern, 141 P.3d 871 (Colo. App. 2005).

Rule 26.1. Special Provisions Regarding Limited and Simplified Discovery

Repealed April 14, 1994, effective January 1, 1995.

Rule 26.2. General Provisions Governing Discovery; Duty of Disclosure (Domestic Relations)

Rule repealed and replaced by Rule 16.2 on September 30, 2004, effective for Domestic Relations Cases as defined in 16.2(a) filed on or after January 1, 2005, and for post-decree motions filed on or after January 1, 2005.

Rule 26.3. Limited Monetary Claim Actions

Repealed November 6, 2003, effective July 1, 2004.

Rule 27. Depositions Before Action or Pending Appeal

(a) Before Action.

(1) Petition; Order; Notice. A person who desires to perpetuate his own testimony or that of other persons may file in a district court a petition verified by his oath (or, if there be more than one petitioner, then by the oath of at least one of them) stating either: (1) That the petitioner expects to be a party to an action in a court in this state and, in such case, the name of the persons who he expects will be adverse parties; or (2) that the proof of some facts is necessary to perfect the title to property in which petitioner is interested or others similarly situated may be interested or to establish any other matter which it may hereafter become material to establish, including marriage, divorce, birth, death, descent or heirship, though no action may at any time be anticipated, or, if anticipated, the expected adverse parties to such action are unknown to petitioner. The petition shall also state the names of the witnesses to be examined and their places of residence and a brief outline of the facts expected to be proved, and if any person named in the petition as an expected adverse party is known to the petitioner to be an infant or incompetent person the petition shall state such fact. If the expected adverse parties are unknown, it shall be so stated. The court shall make an order allowing the examination and directing notice to be given, which notice, if the expected adverse parties are named in the petition, shall be personally served on them in the manner provided in Rule 4(e) and, if the expected adverse parties are stated to be unknown, and if real property is to be affected by such testimony a copy of such notice shall be served on the county clerk and recorder, or his deputy, of the county where the property to be affected by such testimony or some part of such property is situated but in any event said notice shall be published for not less than two weeks in some newspaper to be designated by the court making the order in such manner as may be designated by such court. If service of said notice cannot with due diligence be made, in the manner provided in Rule 4(e), upon any expected adverse party named in the petition, the court may make such order as is just for service upon him by publication or otherwise and shall appoint, for persons named in the petition as expected adverse parties who are not served in the manner provided in Rule 4(e), an attorney who shall represent them, and, in case they are not otherwise represented, shall cross-examine the witness. Such notice shall state the title of the proceeding, including the court and county in which it is pending, the time and place of the examination and either a brief outline of the facts expected to be proved or a description of the property to be affected by such testimony. Any notice heretofore given which contains the above required matters shall be deemed sufficient. Any personal service required by the provisions hereof shall be made at least 14 days before the testimony is taken. If any person named in the petition as an expected adverse party is stated in any paper filed in such proceeding to be an infant or incompetent person, the provisions of Rule 17(c) apply, but no guardian ad litem need be appointed for any expected adverse party whose name is unknown.

(2) Testimony Taken. Upon proof of the service of the notice the court shall take the testimony of the witnesses named in the petition upon the facts therein set forth; and the taking of same may be continued from time to time, in the discretion of the court, without giving any further notice. The testimony shall be taken on question and answer unless the court otherwise direct, and any party to the proceeding may question witnesses either orally or upon written interrogatories. The testimony, when taken, shall be signed and sworn to in writing by each respective witness and certified by the court. If any witness is absent from the county in which the proceedings are pending, the court shall designate some person authorized to administer oaths, by name or otherwise, to take and certify his testimony and the person so designated shall take his testimony in manner aforesaid and certify and return same to the court with his certificate attached thereto showing that he has complied with the requirements of said order.

(3) Proofs Prima Facie Evidence. The affidavit, return, certificate and other proofs of compliance with the provisions of this section (a), or certified copies thereof, shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated.

(4) How and When Used. If a trial be had in which the petitioner named in the petition or any successor in interest of such petitioner or any person similarly situated shall be a party, or between any parties, in which trial it may be material to establish the facts which such testimony proves or tends to prove, upon proof of the death or insanity of the witness or witnesses, or of his or their inability to attend the trial by reason of age, sickness, infirmity, absence or for any other cause, any testimony, which shall have been taken as herein provided, or certified copies thereof, may be introduced and used by either party to such trial.

(b) After Judgment or After Appeal. If an appeal of a judgment is pending, or, if none is pending, then at any time within 35 days from the entry of such judgment, the court in which the judgment was rendered may allow the taking of the depositions of witnesses to perpetuate their testimony for use in the event of further proceedings in such court. In such case the party who desires to perpetuate the testimony may make a motion in such court for leave to take the depositions, upon the same notice and service thereof as if the action were pending in such court. The motion shall show: (1) The names and addresses of the persons to be examined and the substance of the testimony, so far as known, which he expects to elicit from each; (2) the reasons for perpetuating their testimony. If the court finds that the perpetuation of the testimony is proper to avoid a failure or delay of justice, it may make an order allowing the depositions to be taken, and thereupon the depositions may be taken and used in the same manner and under the same conditions as are prescribed in these rules for depositions taken in actions pending in trial courts.

Under the common law, depositions could not be taken in cases to be filed, pending, or at all. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

At common law, in actions at law, it was deemed the right of the parties to have witnesses produced and examined viva voce and the right to take depositions was unknown; litigants, therefore, were obliged to resort to chancery or to procure the consent of the adverse party, which the court could compel by deferring the trial or by refusing to render judgment. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

Subsequently, statutes were enacted empowering common-law courts to authorize the taking of depositions. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

Such subsequent statutes must be strictly complied with. Statutory provisions for taking of depositions are generally considered in derogation of the common law, and, although they are to be liberally construed, such statutes must be strictly or substantially complied with. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

C.R.C.P. 26 to 37 must be construed together along with the requirement that the plaintiff establish a prima facie case for punitive damages, as a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to discovery of defendant's financial information. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Applied in Peoples Natural Gas Div. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1981); Ricci v. Davis, 627 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1981).

II. BEFORE ACTION.

A. Petition; Order; Notice.

Statutory or rule authority for perpetuating testimony has since territorial days continuously been available in Colorado. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

Present authority for perpetuating testimony supplants the ancient chancery equitable procedures, inherent in the use of which is the element of good faith, seeking justice. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

This rule takes the place of the equitable bill in "memoriam sui perpetuam", the origin of which has been traced to canon law, which, taking hold of men's consciences, extended its right to all cases in which it was important in the interest of justice to register testimony which would otherwise be lost, the object being to preserve evidence, to assist courts, to prevent future litigation, and especially to secure and preserve such testimony as might be in danger of being lost before the matter to which it related could be made the subject of investigation. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

In a proceeding to perpetuate testimony,a court of equity will not entertain the bill if it is possible that the matter in controversy can be made the subject of immediate judicial investigation by the party who seeks to perpetuate the testimony, and it must appear that the testimony may be lost by delay. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

"Absolute rights" are not granted by this rule, which conditions exercise of the right on many expressed factors: Going to court; paying a docket fee; preparing, verifying, and filing a petition containing certain material; notifying others; and the implied condition that one who seeks justice shall proceed in good faith in efforts to attain his goal. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

The right to take depositions in "perpetuam memoriam" as provided by this rule is conditioned on proceeding in good faith to avail oneself of the privileges of the rule. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

A petitioner to perpetuate testimony fails to comply with the provisions of this rule where he does not state in unequivocal language that "he expects to be a party to an action" in that he is not proceeding in good faith to avail himself of the privileges granted by the rule. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

Where the statement that the petitioner seeking to perpetuate testimony "expects to be a party" is followed by the statement that others will be named as adverse parties "in the event a complaint is filed", such is not such a direct and positive statement by petitioner as to constitute strict compliance with the requirements of this rule when considered in light of the party plaintiff provisions of C.R.C.P. 3. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

An application to perpetuate testimony must be made in good faith for the purpose of obtaining, preserving, and using material testimony, and a sham application must be denied. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

The taking of a deposition will not be permitted where it is evidence that applicant is not proceeding in good faith, as where the application is a ''fishing expedition'' to discover in advance of the trial what the witness will testify to. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

Statutes for the perpetuation of testimony are not discovery statutes. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

Where the record was convincing that petitioner was not proceeding in good faith to perpetuate testimony in an expected libel suit, but rather as a guise to embark upon a ''fishing expedition'' on matters wholly unrelated to libel and to conduct an inquisition designed to help resolve a ''political'' matter in a manner acceptable to petitioner, the court could not grant a petition under this rule. Rozek v. Christen, 153 Colo. 597, 387 P.2d 425 (1963).

For cases construing former provisions as to perpetuation of testimony, see Darrow v. People ex rel. Norris, 8 Colo. 417, 8 P. 661 (1885); Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

B. How and When Used.

The deposition of a witness may be used by any party if the court finds that the witness is unavailable at the time of trial for any of the reasons listed in this rule. J. R. Watkins Co. v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 340, 483 P.2d 988 (1971).

In order that a deposition may be admitted into evidence, the party offering the deposition must make a sufficient showing of the unavailability of the deponent at the time of trial. J. R. Watkins Co. v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 340, 483 P.2d 988 (1971).

Where plaintiff failed to make any effort to establish the unavailability of a witness whose testimony comprised a deposition, the deposition should not have been admitted into evidence. J. R. Watkins Co. v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 340, 483 P.2d 988 (1971).

Rule 28. Persons Before Whom Depositions May Be Taken

(a) Outside the State of Colorado. Depositions outside the State of Colorado shall be taken only upon proof that notice to take deposition has been given as provided in these rules. The deposition shall be taken before an officer authorized to administer oaths by the laws of this state, the United States or the place where the examination is to be held, or before a person appointed by the court in which the action is pending. A person so appointed has the power to administer oaths and take testimony.

(b) Disqualification for Interest. No deposition shall be taken before a person who is a relative or employee or attorney or counsel of any of the parties, or is financially interested in the action.

(c) Commission or Letters Rogatory. A commission or letters rogatory shall be issued when necessary, on application and notice, and on terms that are just and appropriate. It is not a requisite to the issuance of a commission or letters rogatory that the taking of the deposition in any other manner is impracticable or inconvenient. Both a commission and letters rogatory may be issued in proper cases. Officers may be designated in the commission either by name or descriptive title. Letters rogatory may be addressed ''to the appropriate authority in (here name the appropriate place).'' The clerk shall issue a commission or letters rogatory in the form prescribed by the jurisdiction where the deposition is to be taken, such form to be prepared by the party seeking the deposition. The commission or letters rogatory shall inform the officer that the original sealed deposition shall be filed according to subsection (d) of this rule. Any error in the form or in the commission or letters rogatory is waived unless an objection is filed and served before the time fixed in the notice.

(d) Filing of the Deposition. The officer transcribing the deposition shall file the original sealed deposition pursuant to C.R.C.P. 30(f)(1).

Cross references: For persons authorized to administer oaths or affirmations, see § 24-12-103, C.R.S.; for objections to admissibility, see C.R.C.P. 32(b).

COMMITTEE COMMENT

Commissions and letters rogatory are unnecessary when: (1) the deposition is being taken before an officer authorized to administer oaths in Colorado, (2) the Court has appointed a person under subsection (a), or (3) when the parties have stipulated to the person pursuant to C.R.C.P. 29.

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure specifically define court-appointed persons or stipulated persons as ''officers'' under rules 30, 31 and 32. The Committee follows this principle but feels that it need not be specifically set forth in the Colorado rule.

Applied in Sanchez v. District Court, 624 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1981); Ricci v. Davis, 627 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1981).

II. OUTSIDE OF COLORADO.

Annotator's note. Since section (a) of this rule is similar to § 384 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

There is no way by which depositions of witnesses living out of the state can be taken except on due observance of the statutory course; any deviation from the statutory provisions on this subject is fatal, and the use of depositions erroneously taken constitutes an error for which a cause has to be reversed. Argentine Falls Silver Mining Co. v. Molson, 12 Colo. 405, 21 P. 190 (1889); Gibbs v. Gibbs, 6 Colo. App. 368, 40 P. 781 (1895).

A Colorado court does not have jurisdiction to compel a witness residing in a foreign state to appear in the foreign jurisdiction and give testimony by deposition and to furnish his personal records at said hearing by virtue of a dedimus issued in Colorado and a subpoena duces tecum issued in the foreign state where the witness is not a party to the suit. Solliday v. District Court, 135 Colo. 489, 313 P.2d 1000 (1957).

This rule which provides for taking deposition outside of Colorado of nonresidents not parties to an action in Colorado or served within Colorado is subject to implied limitations of mutual compact or uniform act. Solliday v. District Court, 135 Colo. 489, 313 P.2d 1000 (1957); Minnesota ex rel. Minnesota Att'y Gen. v. District Court, 155 Colo. 521, 395 P.2d 601 (1964).

No state court or government has authority beyond its own borders, each state being sovereign as to its own territory and those residing therein. Solliday v. District Court, 135 Colo. 489, 313 P.2d 1000 (1957); Minnesota ex rel. Minnesota Att'y Gen. v. District Court, 155 Colo. 521, 395 P.2d 601 (1964).

Such recognition as is given Colorado laws or court orders by other states must be based solely upon full faith and credit, comity, contract due to uniform acts, or compact. Solliday v. District Court, 135 Colo. 489, 313 P.2d 1000 (1957); Minnesota ex rel. Minnesota Att'y Gen. v. District Court, 155 Colo. 521, 395 P.2d 601 (1964).

The matter of lack of jurisdiction cannot be waived, and this defense may be raised at any stage of the proceedings. Solliday v. District Court, 135 Colo. 489, 313 P.2d 1000 (1957).

Provisions for taking depositions outside the state under this rule do not apply to criminal proceedings. Bresnahan v. District Court, 164 Colo. 263, 434 P.2d 419 (1967).

III. DISQUALIFICATION FOR INTEREST.

Law reviews. For article, ''The Federal Rules from the Standpoint of the Colorado Code'', see 17 Dicta 170 (1940).

Rule 29. Stipulations Regarding Discovery Procedure

Unless otherwise directed by the court, the parties may by written stipulation: (1) provide that depositions may be taken before any person, at any time or place, upon any notice, and in any manner and when so taken may be used like other depositions; and (2) modify other procedures governing the timing of discovery, except that stipulations extending the time provided in C.R.C.P. Rules 33, 34, and 36 for responses to discovery may, if they would interfere with any time set for completion of discovery, for hearing of a motion, or for trial, be made only with the approval of the court.

Rule 30. Depositions Upon Oral Examination

(a) When Depositions May Be Taken. (1) Subject to the provisions of C.R.C.P. Rules 26(b)(2)(A) and 26(d), a party may take the testimony of any person, including a party, by deposition upon oral examination without leave of court except as provided in paragraph (2) of this section. The attendance of witnesses may be compelled by subpoena as provided in C.R.C.P. 45.

(2) Leave of court must be obtained pursuant to C.R.C.P. Rules 16(b)(1) and 26(b) if:

(A) A proposed deposition, if taken, would result in more depositions than set forth in the Case Management Order;

(B) The person to be examined already has been deposed in the case;

(C) A party seeks to take a deposition before the time specified in C.R.C.P. 26(d) unless the notice contains a certification, with supporting facts, that the person to be examined is expected to leave the state and be unavailable for examination within the state if the person's deposition is not taken before the expiration of such time period; or

(D) The person to be examined is confined in prison.

(b) Notice of Examination: General Requirements; Method of Recording; Production of Documents and Things; Deposition of Organization; Deposition by Telephone. (1) Consistent with C.R.C.P. 121, sec. 1-12, a party desiring to take the deposition of any person upon oral examination shall give reasonable notice in writing to every other party to the action. The notice shall state the time and place for taking the deposition and the name and address of each person to be examined, if known, and, if the name is not known, a general description sufficient to identify the person or the particular class or group to which the person belongs. If a subpoena duces tecum is to be served on the person to be examined, the designation of the materials to be produced as set forth in the subpoena shall be attached to or included in the notice.

(2) The party taking the deposition shall state in the notice the method by which the testimony shall be recorded, which, unless the court otherwise orders, may be by sound, sound-and-visual, or stenographic means. Unless the court otherwise orders, the party taking the deposition shall bear the cost of the recording.

(3) Any party may provide for a transcription to be made from the recording of a deposition taken by non-stenographic means. With reasonable prior notice to the deponent and other parties, any party may designate another method of recording the testimony of the deponent in addition to the method specified by the person taking the deposition. Unless the court otherwise orders, each party designating an additional method of recording the testimony of a deponent shall bear the cost thereof.

(4) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, a deposition shall be conducted before an officer appointed or designated pursuant to C.R.C.P. 28 and shall begin with a statement on the record by the officer that includes (a) the officer's name and business address; (b) the date, time, and place of the deposition; (c) the name of the deponent; (d) the administration of the oath or affirmation to the deponent; and (e) an identification of all persons present. If the deposition is recorded other than stenographically, items (a) through (c) shall be repeated at the beginning of each unit of recorded tape or other recording medium. The appearance or demeanor of deponents or attorneys shall not be distorted by the use of camera or sound-recording techniques. At the conclusion of the deposition, the officer shall state on the record that the deposition is complete and shall set forth any stipulations made by counsel concerning the custody of the transcript or recording, the exhibits, or other pertinent matters.

(5) The notice to a party deponent may be accompanied by a request made in compliance with Rule 34 for the production of documents and tangible things at the taking of the deposition. The procedure of Rule 34 shall apply to the request.

(6) A party may in his notice name as the deponent a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or governmental agency and designate with reasonable particularity the matters on which examination is requested. The organization so named shall designate one or more officers, directors, or managing agents, or other persons who consent to testify on its behalf, and may set forth, for each person designated, the matters on which he will testify. The persons so designated shall testify as to matters known or reasonably available to the organization. This subsection (b)(6) does not preclude taking a deposition by any other procedure authorized in these rules.

(7) The parties may stipulate in writing or the court may upon motion order that a deposition be taken by telephone or other remote electronic means. For the purposes of this rule and C.R.C.P. Rules 28(a), 37(a)(1), and 37(b)(1), a deposition taken by telephone or other remote electronic means is taken at the place where the deponent is to answer questions propounded to the deponent. The stipulation or order shall include the manner of recording the proceeding.

(c) Examination and Cross-Examination; Record of Examination; Oath; Objections. Examination and cross-examination of witnesses may proceed as permitted at the trial under the provisions of the Colorado Rules of Evidence except CRE 103. The witness shall be put under oath or affirmation and the officer before whom the deposition is to be taken shall personally, or by someone acting under the officer's direction and in the officer's presence, record the testimony of the witness. The testimony shall be taken stenographically or recorded by any other method authorized by subsection (b)(2) of this Rule.

All objections made at the time of the examination to the qualifications of the officer taking the deposition, to the manner of taking it, to the evidence presented, to the conduct of any party, or in any other respect to the proceedings shall be noted by the officer upon the record of the deposition. Evidence objected to shall be taken subject to the objections. In lieu of participating in the oral examination, parties may serve written questions in a sealed envelope on the party taking the deposition and the party taking the deposition shall transmit them to the officer, who shall propound them to the witness and record the answers verbatim.

(d) Schedule and Duration; Motion to Terminate or Limit Examination. (1) Any objection during a deposition shall be stated concisely and in a non-argumentative and non-suggestive manner. An instruction not to answer may be made during a deposition only when necessary to preserve a privilege, to enforce a limitation directed by the court, or to present a motion pursuant to subsection (d)(3) of this Rule.

(2) (A) Unless otherwise authorized by the court or stipulated by the parties, a deposition of a person other than a retained expert disclosed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)(I) whose opinions may be offered at trial is limited to one day of 6 hours. Upon the motion of any party, the court may limit the time permitted for the conduct of a deposition to less than 6 hours, or may allow additional time if needed for a fair examination of the deponent and consistent with C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2), or if the deponent or another person impedes or delays the examination, or if other circumstances warrant. If the court finds such an impediment, delay, or other conduct that frustrates the fair examination of the deponent, it may impose upon the person responsible therefor an appropriate sanction, including the reasonable costs and attorney fees incurred by any parties as a result thereof.

(B) Depositions of a retained expert disclosed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)(I) whose opinions may be offered at trial are governed by C.R.C.P. 26(b)(4).

(3) At any time during the taking of the deposition, on motion of any party or of the deponent and upon a showing that the examination is being conducted in bad faith or in such manner as unreasonably to annoy, embarrass, or oppress the deponent or party, the court in which the action is pending or the court in the district where the deposition is being taken may order the officer conducting the examination to cease forthwith from taking the deposition, or may limit the scope and manner of the taking of the deposition as provided in C.R.C.P. 26(c). If the order made terminates the examination, it may be resumed thereafter only upon the order of the court in which the action is pending. Upon demand of the objecting party or deponent, the taking of the deposition shall be suspended for the time necessary to make a motion for an order. The provisions of C.R.C.P. 37(a)(4) apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(e) Review by Witness; Changes; Signing. If requested by the deponent or a party before completion of the deposition, the deponent shall be notified by the officer that the transcript or recording is available. Within 35 days of receipt of such notification the deponent shall review the transcript or recording and, if the deponent makes changes in the form or substance of the deposition, shall sign a statement reciting such changes and the deponent's reasons for making them and send such statement to the officer. The officer shall indicate in the certificate prescribed by subsection (f)(1) of this rule whether any review was requested and, if so, shall append any changes made by the deponent.

(f) Certification and Filing by Officer; Exhibits; Copies; Notice of Filing. (1) The officer shall certify that the witness was duly sworn and that the deposition is a true record of the testimony given by the witness. This certificate shall be set forth in writing and accompany the record of the deposition. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the officer shall securely seal the deposition in an envelope or package endorsed with the title of the action and marked ''deposition of (here insert name of witness)'' and shall promptly transmit it to the attorney who arranged for the transcript or recording. The receiving attorney shall store the deposition under conditions that will protect it against loss, destruction, tampering, or deterioration.

Documents and things produced for inspection during the examination of the witness shall, upon the request of a party, be marked for identification and annexed to and returned with the deposition and may be inspected and copied by any party, except that: if the person producing the materials desires to retain the originals, the person may

(A) offer copies to be marked for identification and annexed to the deposition and to serve thereafter as originals if the person affords to all parties fair opportunity to verify the copies by comparison with the originals, or

(B) offer the originals to be marked for identification, after giving each party an opportunity to inspect and copy them, in which event the materials may then be used in the same manner as if annexed to the deposition. Any party may move for an order that the original be annexed to and returned with the deposition to the court, pending final disposition of the case.

(2) Unless otherwise ordered by the court or agreed by the parties, the officer shall retain stenographic notes of any deposition taken stenographically or a copy of the recording of any deposition taken by another method. Upon payment of reasonable charges therefor, the officer shall furnish a copy of the transcript or other recording of the deposition to any party or to the deponent.

(g) Failure to Attend or to Serve Subpoena; Expenses. (1) If the party giving the notice of the taking of a deposition fails to attend and proceed therewith and another party attends in person or by attorney pursuant to the notice, the court may order the party giving the notice to pay to such other party the amount of the reasonable expenses incurred by him and his attorney in so attending, including reasonable attorney's fees.

(2) If the party giving the notice of the taking of a deposition of a witness fails to serve a subpoena upon him and the witness because of such failure does not attend, and if another party attends in person or by attorney because he expects the deposition of that witness to be taken, the court may order the party giving the notice to pay to such other party the amount of the reasonable expenses incurred by him and his attorney in so attending, including reasonable attorney's fees.

[1] Revised C.R.C.P. 30 is patterned in part after Fed.R.Civ.P. 30 as amended in 1993 and now interrelates with the differential case management features of C.R.C.P. 16 and C.R.C.P. 26. Because of mandatory disclosure, substantially less discovery is needed.

[2] A discovery schedule for the case is required by C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1)(IV). Under the requirements of that Rule, the parties must set forth in the Case Management Order the timing and number of depositions and the basis for the necessity of such discovery with attention to the presumptive limitation and standards set forth in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2). There is also the requirement that counsel certify they have advised their clients of the estimated expenses and fees involved in the discovery. Discovery is thus tailored to the particular case. The parties in the first instance and ultimately the Court are responsible for setting reasonable limits and preventing abuse.

[3] Language in C.R.C.P. 30(c) and C.R.C.P. 30(f)(1) differs slightly from the language of Fed.R.Civ.P. 30(c) and Fed.R.Civ.P. 30(f)(1) to facilitate the taking of telephone depositions by eliminating the requirement that the officer recording the deposition be the person who administers the oath or affirmation.

[4] Rule 30 is amended to reduce the time for ordinary depositions from 7 to 6 hours, so that they can be more easily accomplished in a normal business day.

C.R.C.P. 26 to 37 must be construed together along with the requirement that plaintiff establish a prima facie case for punitive damages, as a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to discovery of defendant's financial information. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Rules of civil procedure sanction use of all discovery methods and the frequency of use of these methods should not be limited unless there is a showing of good cause based on the particular circumstances of the case. Sanchez v. District Court, 624 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1981).

Civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. Based on §§ 16-8-115 to 16-8-117 and on the special nonadversary nature of a release inquiry, the participants in release proceedings do not have the broad right of discovery as provided in the rules of civil procedure. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Under C.R.C.P. 81(a), the procedure in release hearings under § 16-8-115 is so inconsistent and in conflict with the rules of civil procedure as to make civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

It is in the trial court's discretion whether a video deposition will be ordered absent agreement between the parties. Such a deposition, while it may be desirable under certain circumstances, is a luxury not a necessity. Cherry Creek Sch. Dist. v. Voelker, 859 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993).

When choosing a subsection (b)(6) designee, companies have a duty to make a conscientious, good-faith effort to designate knowledgeable persons and to prepare them to fully and unevasively answer questions about the designated subject matter. The company should, if necessary, prepare deponents by having them review prior fact witness deposition testimony as well as documents and deposition exhibits. D.R. Horton, Inc. v. D&S Landscaping, LLC, 215 P.3d 1163 (Colo. App. 2008).

Allowing a company to designate a witness under subsection (b)(6) who is unprepared or not knowledgeable would simply defeat the purpose of the rule and sandbag the opposition. D.R. Horton, Inc. v. D&S Landscaping, LLC, 215 P.3d 1163 (Colo. App. 2008).

Where a corporation designates a deponent pursuant to subsection (b)(6) who is unable to answer all the questions specified in the notice, a court may issue sanctions for failure to appear under C.R.C.P. 37. D.R. Horton, Inc. v. D&S Landscaping, LLC, 215 P.3d 1163 (Colo. App. 2008).

Nothing in the rule or its interpretation suggests that persons who are designated and testify under subsection (b)(6) will not bind their corporate principal. Nothing in the rule precludes a principal from offering contrary or clarifying evidence where its designee has made an error or has no knowledge of a matter. D.R. Horton, Inc. v. D&S Landscaping, LLC, 215 P.3d 1163 (Colo. App. 2008).

A corporation should be excused from sanctions and granted a protective order where it had no means available to prepare a subsection (b)(6) designee. D.R. Horton, Inc. v. D&S Landscaping, LLC, 215 P.3d 1163 (Colo. App. 2008).

Not being listed under section (b)(6) does not disqualify a person from testifying, but rather being listed under section (b)(6) mandates that the witness's testimony include certain subject matter and knowledge. Where county produced undesignated witnesses who were knowledgeable both as to the facts regarding the county and as to those at issue at trial, and defendant was aware of the witnesses and deposed them, trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing their testimony. Camp Bird Colo., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Ouray, 215 P.3d 1277 (Colo. App. 2009).

II. WHEN MAY BE TAKEN.

While this rule allows the taking of the deposition of "any person", a court in a "habeas corpus" matter may properly restrict the taking of a deposition where its use relates not to the narrow issues of habeas corpus, but to broad range issues not relevant in a habeas corpus determination. Hithe v. Nelson, 172 Colo. 179, 471 P.2d 596 (1970).

III. NOTICE.

Law reviews. For article, "In Defense of H.B. 109 — Re-serving Notice Before a Witness's Deposition May Be Taken", see 22 Dicta 152 (1945).

Section (b)(4) is identical to its federal counterpart F.R.C.P. 30(b)(4). Sanchez v. District Court, 624 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1981).

Purpose of section (b)(4) is to facilitate less expensive procedures as an alternative to the high cost of stenographic recording. Sanchez v. District Court, 624 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1981).

Motion and notice for which provision is made in this rule must be made and served prior to the time specified in the notice for the taking of the deposition. Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. District Court, 126 Colo. 217, 247 P.2d 903 (1952).

There was no "reasonable notice" within the meaning of this rule where the record disclosed that the party was given three days notice that the depositions were to be taken, the notice was served in Colorado, and the depositions were taken in Los Angeles. Nielsen v. Nielsen, 111 Colo. 344, 141 P.2d 415 (1943).

If, for good cause, a deposition should be taken in some place other than that mentioned in the notice, this matter should be called to the attention of the trial court by a motion filed and service thereof seasonably made on opposing counsel; otherwise, such objection is waived, and the place designated in the notice is definitely and finally fixed. Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. District Court, 126 Colo. 217, 247 P.2d 903 (1952).

Service of notice to take deposition on a party's attorney is sufficient notice pursuant to C.R.C.P. 5(b)(1). Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. District Court, 126 Colo. 217, 247 P.2d 903 (1952).

A party is not entitled to a subpoena nor to a per diem allowance or mileage when he is noticed to appear for the taking of his deposition. Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. District Court, 126 Colo. 217, 247 P.2d 903 (1952).

Court has discretion in determining assessment of stenographic expense as cost. There is no provision authorizing the assessment, as costs, of stenographic expense incurred in the taking of a deposition for purposes of discovery, but if the testimony of the person whose deposition is taken is not available at the trial, and the deposition is offered in lieu thereof, then the court would have discretion in determining whether the expense of procuring the deposition should be assessed as costs against the losing party. Morris v. Redak, 124 Colo. 27, 234 P.2d 908 (1951).

Governmental officials of foreign state cannot be compelled to appear in Colorado to take depositions. Where the attorney general and tax commissioner of another state had been ordered to appear in Colorado for the purpose of taking depositions, the court could not compel them to so appear, and this fact is true even though the foreign state had brought the action in which defendant sought these depositions, inasmuch as no state court or government has authority beyond its own borders, each state being sovereign as to its own territory and those residing therein; such recognition as is given Colorado laws or court orders by other states must be based solely upon full faith and credit, comity, contract due to uniform acts, or compact. Minnesota ex rel. Minnesota Att'y Gen. v. District Court, 155 Colo. 521, 395 P.2d 601 (1964).

Showing of indigency unnecessary for application of section (b)(4) to inexpensive mode of deposition discovery. Application of section (b)(4) of this rule to an inexpensive mode of deposition discovery should not be conditioned on a showing of indigency, a showing of financial need, or economic disparity between the parties. Sanchez v. District Court, 624 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1981).

Exercise of discretion in ruling on discovery motion for tape recorded depositions should be limited to considerations of accuracy and trustworthiness with respect to the procedures and conditions to be followed in the recording, transcription, and filing of the depositions. Sanchez v. District Court, 624 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1981).

Trial judge may properly deny motion for tape recorded depositions where the objecting party shows that there exists a potential for abuse or harassment of a witness or party or where the objecting party otherwise establishes a bona fide claim for protective orders under C.R.C.P. 26(c). Sanchez v. District Court, 624 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1981).

IV. MOTION TO TERMINATE OR LIMIT.

The taking of a deposition is not precluded by an application for writ of prohibition where an order to show cause is issued pursuant thereto by the supreme court; rather, only proceedings in the trial court are suspended by such an order, and not those in preparation of trial. And where the case is still pending and undetermined, an application for a writ of prohibition against the taking of a deposition would be denied as premature. Cox v. District Court, 129 Colo. 99, 267 P.2d 656 (1954).

Party desiring to protect trade secrets entitled to protective order. Taken together, section (d) of this rule and C.R.C.P. 26 establish that a party desiring to protect trade secrets is entitled to a protective order upon a showing of good cause. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 186 Colo. 226, 526 P.2d 1335 (1974).

V. SUBMISSION TO WITNESS.

Annotator's note. Since section (e) of this rule is similar to § 378 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing this section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Purpose of section (e), which requires submission of the deposition to the witness for examination, correction, and signature, is to provide verification of the deposition's content in order that the writing may be introduced as evidence of the witness's own words. Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Pueblo Gas & Fuel Co., 33 Colo. App. 92, 519 P.2d 1201 (1973).

Object of reading deposition to witness is to give opportunity to correct. The object of the requirement that the interrogatories and answers submitted to the witness on the taking of his deposition should be first carefully read to him before he signed is that the witness might know what the scrivener had written down, and he might, before his deposition is complete, have an opportunity to correct any errors or inaccuracies of statement which might have occurred. Cheney v. Woodworth, 13 Colo. App. 176, 56 P. 979 (1899).

The requirement that deposition be signed by witness can be waived by stipulation of counsel. Chipley v. Green, 7 Colo. App. 25, 42 P. 493 (1895).

Where parties stipulated with respect to the taking of a deposition that "the caption and all formalities are expressly waived", it was held that an irregularity as to the signature was waived by this stipulation. Chipley v. Green, 7 Colo. App. 25, 42 P. 493 (1895).

Section (e) inapplicable. Where proof of a contradictory statement was elicited from the mouth of the witness and not by introduction of the deposition into evidence, the safeguards for accuracy of the deposition as evidence, which are embodied in section (e), were inapplicable. Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Pueblo Gas & Fuel Co., 33 Colo. App. 92, 519 P.2d 1201 (1973).

VI. CERTIFICATION AND FILING.

This rule sets forth the mechanics applicable to certifying and filing depositions. Appelhans v. Kirkwood, 148 Colo. 92, 365 P.2d 233 (1961).

After correction of the deposition and after it is signed, or following a refusal to sign it, the deposition is to be delivered to the officer who seals it promptly and files it with the court in which the action is pending. Appelhans v. Kirkwood, 148 Colo. 92, 365 P.2d 233 (1961).

Officer's certificate is not required to state that deposition was "carefully" read to witness before signing. The requirement that in taking depositions the interrogatories and answers should be carefully read to the witness before signing does not require the certificate of the officer to state that they were "carefully" read to the witness before signing. A certificate that certified simply that the deposition was read to the witness before signing is sufficient, as it would be presumed that it was read with that care required. Cheney v. Woodworth, 13 Colo. App. 176, 56 P. 979 (1899) (decided under § 378 of the former code of civil procedure, which was replaced by rules of civil procedure in 1941).

Sham affidavit doctrine permits a court under certain circumstances to disregard an affidavit submitted by a party in response to a summary judgment motion where that affidavit contradicts the party's previous sworn deposition testimony. Luttgen v. Fischer, 107 P.3d 1152 (Colo. App. 2005).

Contradictory affidavits should be considered in light of totality of the circumstances test. Affidavit that directly contradicts affiant's own earlier deposition testimony can be rejected as sham affidavit only if it fails to include an explanation for the contradiction that could be found credible by a reasonable jury. This determination cannot be limited to any set of factors, but must be considered in light of the totality of the circumstances, and such determination is a matter of law to be reviewed de novo. Andersen v. Lindenbaum, 160 P.3d 237 (Colo. 2007).

Where deposition was taken but not subscribed, certified, or filed pursuant to this rule, and was for that reason suppressed by the trial court notwithstanding agreement of counsel that it might be admitted for a limited purpose, such ruling, while erroneous, was not prejudicial. Appelhans v. Kirkwood, 148 Colo. 92, 365 P.2d 233 (1961).

Rule 31. Depositions Upon Written Questions

(a) Serving Questions; Notice. (1) A party may take the testimony of any person, including a party, by deposition upon written questions without leave of court except as provided in paragraph (2) of this section. The attendance of witnesses may be compelled by the use of subpoena as provided in C.R.C.P. 45.

(2) A party must obtain leave of court, and the court must grant leave to the extent consistent with C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2) if:

(A) a proposed deposition, if taken, would result in more depositions than set forth in the Case Management Order;

(B) the person to be examined already has been deposed in the case;

(C) a party seeks to take a deposition before the time specified in C.R.C.P. 26(d); or

(D) the person to be examined is confined in prison.

(3) A party desiring to take a deposition upon written questions shall serve them upon every other party with a notice stating:

(A) the name and address of the person who is to answer them, if known, and if the name is not known, a general description sufficient to identify the person or the particular class or group to which the person belongs; and

(B) the name or descriptive title and address of the officer before whom the deposition is to be taken.

A deposition upon written questions may be taken of a public or private corporation, or a partnership, or association, or governmental agency in accordance with the provision of C.R.C.P. 30(b)(6).

(4) Within 21 days after the notice and written questions are served, a party may serve cross questions upon all other parties. Within 14 days after being served with cross questions, a party may serve redirect questions upon all other parties. Within 7 days after being served with redirect questions, a party may serve re-cross questions upon all other parties. The court may for cause shown enlarge or shorten the time.

(b) Officer to Take Responses and Prepare Record. A copy of the notice and copies of all questions served shall be delivered by the party taking the deposition to the officer designated in the notice, who shall proceed promptly, in the manner provided by Rule 30 (c), (e), and (f), to take the testimony of the witness in response to the questions and to prepare, certify, and file or mail the deposition, attaching thereto the copy of the notice and the questions received by him.

(c) Notice of Filing. When the deposition is filed the party taking it shall promptly give notice thereof to all other parties.

Rule 32. Use of Depositions in Court Proceedings

(a) Use of Depositions. At the trial or upon the hearing of a motion or an interlocutory proceeding, any part or all of a deposition, so far as admissible under the rules of evidence, may be used against any party who was present or represented at the taking of the deposition or who had reasonable notice thereof, in accordance with any of the following provisions:

(1) Any deposition may be used by any party for the purpose of contradicting or impeaching the testimony of deponent as a witness;

(2) The deposition of a party or of any one who at the time of taking the deposition was an officer, director, or managing agent of a public or private corporation, partnership, or association, or a governmental agency, which is a party, or a person designated under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf thereof may be used by an adverse party for any purpose.

(3) The deposition of a witness, whether or not a party, may be used by any party for any purpose if the court finds:

(A) That the witness is dead; or

(B) that the witness is at a greater distance than 100 miles from the place of trial or hearing, or is out of the United States, unless it appears that the absence of the witness was procured by the party offering the deposition; or

(C) that the witness is unable to attend or testify because of age, illness, infirmity, or imprisonment; or

(D) [There is No Colorado (D).]

(E) that the party offering the deposition has been unable to procure the attendance of the witness by subpoena; or

(F) upon application and notice, that such exceptional circumstances exist as to make it desirable, in the interest of justice and with due regard to the importance of presenting the testimony of witnesses orally in open court, to allow the deposition to be used.

A deposition taken without leave of court pursuant to C.R.C.P. 30(a)(2)(C) shall not be used against a party who demonstrates that, when served with the notice, the party was unable through the exercise of diligence to obtain counsel to represent the party at the taking of the deposition.

(4) If only part of a deposition is offered in evidence by a party, an adverse party may require him to introduce any other part which ought in fairness to be considered with the part introduced, and any party may introduce any other parts.

Substitution of parties pursuant to Rule 25 does not affect the right to use depositions previously taken; and, when an action in any court of the United States or of any state has been dismissed and another action involving the same subject matter is afterward brought between the same parties or their representatives or successors in interest, all depositions lawfully taken and duly filed in the former action may be used in the latter as if originally taken therefor.

(5) In lieu of reading text from a deposition, parties are encouraged to use stipulated written summaries of deposition testimony at any hearing or trial, and to present the testimony at any hearing or trial in a logical order.

(b) Objections to Admissibility. Subject to the provisions of Rules 28(b) and subsection (d)(3) of this Rule, objection may be made at the trial or hearing to receiving in evidence any deposition or part thereof for any reason which would require the exclusion of the evidence if the witness were then present and testifying.

(c) Effect of Taking or Using Depositions. A party does not make a person his own witness for any purpose by taking his deposition. The introduction in evidence of the deposition or any part thereof for any purpose other than that of contradicting or impeaching the deponent makes the deponent the witness of the party introducing the deposition, but this shall not apply to the use by an adverse party of a deposition under subsection (a)(2) of this Rule. At the trial or hearing any party may rebut any relevant evidence contained in a deposition whether introduced by him or by any other party.

(d) Effect of Errors and Irregularities in Depositions.

(1) As to Notice. All errors and irregularities in the notice for taking a deposition are waived unless written objection is promptly served upon the party giving the notice.

(2) As to Disqualification of Officer. Objection to taking a deposition because of disqualification of the officer before whom it is to be taken is waived unless made before the taking of the deposition begins or as soon thereafter as the disqualification becomes known or could be discovered with reasonable diligence.

(3) As to Taking of Deposition.

(A) Objections to the competency of a witness or to the competency, relevancy, or materiality of testimony are not waived by failure to make them before or during the taking of the deposition, unless the ground of the objection is one which might have been obviated or removed if presented at that time.

(B) Errors and irregularities occurring at the oral examination in the manner of taking the deposition, in the form of the questions or answers, in the oath or affirmation, or in the conduct of parties and errors of any kind which might be obviated, removed, or cured if promptly presented, are waived unless seasonable objection thereto is made at the taking of the deposition.

(C) Objections to the form of written questions submitted under Rule 31 are waived unless served in writing upon the party propounding them within the time allowed for serving the succeeding cross or other questions and within 7 days after service of the last questions authorized.

(4) As to Completion and Return of Deposition. Errors and irregularities in the manner in which the testimony is transcribed or the deposition is prepared, signed, certified, sealed, endorsed, transmitted, filed, or otherwise dealt with by the officer under Rules 30 and 31 are waived unless a motion to suppress the deposition or some part thereof is made with reasonable promptness after such defect is, or with due diligence might have been ascertained.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

Revised C.R.C.P. 32 is patterned after Fed.R.Civ.P. 32 as amended in 1993 with several exceptions: (1) there is no State Rule 32(l)(D) [pertaining to use of depositions of experts whether or not unavailable]; (2) there is a difference in what constitutes ''reasonable notice,'' which is instead contained in C.R.C.P. 121 section 1-12; and (3) there is no State Rule 32(e) [pertaining to offering of non-stenographic depositions].

C.R.C.P. 26 to 37 must be construed together along with the requirement that plaintiff establish a prima facie case for punitive damages, as a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to discovery of defendant's financial information. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Applied in Hamilton v. Hardy, 37 Colo. App. 375, 549 P.2d 1099 (1976); Ricci v. Davis, 627 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1981).

II. USE.

Annotator's note. Since section (a) of this rule is similar to §§ 378 and 379 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, and to C.R.C.P. 26(d) as it existed prior to the revision of Rules of Civil Procedure in 1970, relevant cases construing those sections and former rule 26 (d) have also been included in the annotations to this rule.

Section (a) is identical to F.R.C.P. 32(a). Schafer v. Nat'l Tea Co., 32 Colo. App. 372, 511 P.2d 949 (1973).

This rule is an independent and alternative vehicle to C.R.E. 804(b)(1) for admitting deposition testimony into evidence in civil cases. Margenau v. Bowlin, 12 P.3d 1214 (Colo. App. 2000).

To be introduced into evidence under this rule, the deposition testimony must be of a nature that would itself be admissible if the deponent were present and testifying in court. In addition, the opposing party must have had reasonable notice of the deposition and either been present or represented at the taking of the deposition, and one of the five circumstances set forth in section (a) must be present. Margenau v. Bowlin, 12 P.3d 1214 (Colo. App. 2000).

Unless there are no viable alternatives, "appearance" by deposition is a wholly inadequate manner for the presentation of a party's case. Gonzales v. Harris, 189 Colo. 518, 542 P.2d 842 (1975).

Should a party attempt to offer a portion of a deposition into evidence rather than call the adverse party as a witness, that party may do so, provided no other rules of evidence are violated and provided, prior to its admission, some showing of a legitimate purpose is made. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971); Scruggs v. Otteman, 640 P.2d 259 (Colo. App. 1981).

The burden of proof of unavailability is on the party offering the deposition, and the failure to carry the burden precludes the use of the deposition as evidence. Evans v. Century Cas. Co., 159 Colo. 596, 413 P.2d 457 (1966); J.R. Watkins Co. v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 340, 483 P.2d 988 (1971).

The burden of proof as to the unavailability of the witness is on the party offering the deposition in lieu of the testimony. Rowland v. Ditlow, 653 P.2d 61 (Colo. App. 1982).

In order that a deposition may be admitted into evidence, the party offering the deposition must make a sufficient showing of the unavailability of the deponent at the time of trial. Evans v. Century Cas. Co., 159 Colo. 596, 413 P.2d 457 (1966); J.R. Watkins Co. v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 340, 483 P.2d 988 (1971).

Admission of video depositions of available witnesses violated this rule but was harmless error where plaintiff failed to explain or make an offer of proof as to how live courtroom testimony of the deposed witnesses would have differed from their video depositions. Maloney v. Brassfield, 251 P.3d 1097 (Colo. App. 2010).

Question of sufficient evidence to establish absence is for court. The amount and kind of evidence to establish absence of the witness from the jurisdiction or beyond the 100-mile limit is a question for the determination of the trial court. Campbell v. Graham, 144 Colo. 532, 357 P.2d 366 (1960).

Deposition testimony held sufficient to establish whereabouts of deponent. Court erred in refusing to consider deposition testimony and disallowing deposition on grounds that competent evidence under rules of evidence had to prove whereabouts of deponent. Donley v. State, 817 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1991).

It cannot be said that a showing of unavailability by means of attempted subpoena is indispensable in connection with the 100-mile provision, since it is for the court to decide whether this rule has been complied with. Campbell v. Graham, 144 Colo. 532, 357 P.2d 366 (1960).

This rule also allows a deposition to be offered if the party has been unable to procure attendance by subpoena, but this use, however, is an alternative to the 100-mile provision. Campbell v. Graham, 144 Colo. 532, 357 P.2d 366 (1960).

Deposition cannot be introduced as an admission. Colorado practice, unlike that under the federal rules, does not permit the introduction of a deposition as an admission. Appelhans v. Kirkwood, 148 Colo. 92, 365 P.2d 233 (1961).

Timely notice in a trial data certificate of the intent to call a witness by way of video deposition constitutes appropriate "application and notice" under this rule. Miller v. Solaglas California, Inc., 870 P.2d 559 (Colo. App. 1993).

A party is entitled to refer to a deposition which would serve to bring to the attention of a witness any prior statement which the witness had made looking to ultimate impeachment, notwithstanding the fact that section (d)(4) of this rule as to certifying and filing depositions has not been complied with. The question of the inadmissibility of the deposition is not a valid issue until such time as the party proposes to impeach the witness by introducing the deposition. Appelhans v. Kirkwood, 148 Colo. 92, 365 P.2d 233 (1961).

When a deposition is not offered as substantive evidence, but rather is used to impeach by prior inconsistent statements, this rule does not operate to preclude the deposition from being so used. Schafer v. Nat'l Tea Co., 32 Colo. App. 372, 511 P.2d 949 (1973).

Defendants cannot use deposition in argument for directed verdict or in their defense. Where defendants had taken the deposition of the plaintiff and were permitted to use it in an attempt to impeach him, the court properly refused defendants' request to use the deposition in connection with their argument for a directed verdict and as a part of their defense. Foster v. Howell, 122 Colo. 64, 220 P.2d 717 (1950).

Governmental officials of foreign states cannot be compelled to appear in Colorado to take depositions. Despite the fact that section (a)(2) of this rule states, in relevant part, that: ''The depositions of ... an officer, director, or managing agent of a ... (governmental agency which is a party) ... may be used by an adverse party ...'', it has been held that the attorney general and tax commissioner of another state could not be compelled to appear in Colorado for the purpose of taking depositions, and that this fact was true even though the foreign state had brought the action in which defendant sought their depositions, inasmuch as no state court or government has authority beyond its own borders, each state being sovereign as to its own territory and those residing therein; rather, such recognition as is given Colorado laws or court orders by other states must be based solely upon full faith and credit, comity, contract due to uniform acts, or compact. Minnesota ex rel. Minnesota Att'y Gen. v. District Court, 155 Colo. 521, 395 P.2d 601 (1964).

Deposition may not be used by adverse party for "any purpose". Blind reliance on the portion of this rule in section (a)(2) that the deposition of a party ''may be used by an adverse party for any purpose'' does not establish error when the court refuses to admit portions of a deposition, for the permissive rule of this statute does not override the other rules of evidence and the discretion of the trial court. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971).

Deponent must be an adverse party to the proponent at the time the deposition is offered into evidence in order for the deposition to be admissible. Rojhani v. Meagher, 22 P.3d 554 (Colo. App. 2000).

This rule permits the admission of a deposition where the witness is dead or more than 100 miles from the place of trial or hearing. Campbell v. Graham, 144 Colo. 532, 357 P.2d 366 (1960).

Court's refusal to order additional parts of depositions introduced held not error. Where the trial court informed defendants that they might offer any and all additional parts of the depositions into evidence as part of their case and there was no showing on the part of the defendants that the plaintiff did not offer all relevant portions of the depositions into evidence, then the trial court's refusal to order the plaintiff to introduce additional parts of the depositions was not error under section (a)(4) of this rule. Linker v. Linker, 28 Colo. App. 136, 470 P.2d 882 (1970).

Depositions held admissible to prove plaintiff's claim where plaintiff not personally present. Where at the trial plaintiff did not appear in person, being then a resident of another state, and defendant's counsel moved that the action be dismissed for the reason that defendant would have no opportunity to cross-examine the witness who was the real party in interest and the jury would have no basis upon which to weigh the testimony or to judge the credibility of the witness, it was held that whether plaintiff could produce sufficient evidence to avert a motion for dismissal at the conclusion of her case was beside the question, but clearly she was entitled to introduce whatever evidence was available in support of her claim, and thus the depositions and interrogatories taken in the case were admissible as evidence in support of plaintiff's cause of action, and it was error to dismiss plaintiff's suit because plaintiff was not personally present to assert it. Hiltibrand v. Brown, 124 Colo. 52, 234 P.2d 618 (1951).

Depositions taken in original action held admissible in separate action. Where plaintiff had originally filed one action against defendants seeking to set aside an antenuptial agreement and to have a transfer of notes declared invalid and the cause of action on the notes was subsequently transferred to probate proceedings, the depositions of defendants taken in plaintiff's original action were admissible in the separate action on the validity of the notes, since these depositions were taken in plaintiff's original action and involved the same parties and same subject matter. Linker v. Linker, 28 Colo. App. 136, 470 P.2d 882 (1970).

The supreme court of Colorado is not bound by the findings of the jury as to any matters contained in depositions but is at liberty to place its own interpretation upon the testimony therein given. Morrison v. McCluer, 27 Colo. App. 264, 148 P. 380 (1915); Rinderie v. Morse, 27 Colo. App. 457, 150 P. 245 (1915), aff'd, 64 Colo. 32, 169 P. 648 (1917).

This fact does not abrogate rule of not disturbing trial court findings upon conflicting evidence. Where the evidence given upon issues of the fact is partly by depositions and partly by that submitted in open court, this fact does not abrogate, but only pro tanto affects, the rule that the findings of the trial court upon conflicting evidence should not be disturbed. Morrison v. McCluer, 27 Colo. App. 264, 148 P. 380 (1915).

It is in court's discretion to exclude repetitious matters or require identification of relevant portions. In determining whether a deposition may be used in evidence, the trial court has discretion to exclude repetitious matter and to require counsel to identify the relevant portions of a deposition. Scruggs v. Otteman, 640 P.2d 259 (Colo. App. 1981).

Deposition used for impeachment purposes is always admissible to discredit witness if the deposition is relevant, material, and not collateral, even if opposing party was not present or represented at deposition and did not have notice of its taking. Appel v. Sentry Life Ins. Co., 739 P.2d 1380 (Colo. 1987).

Trial court may refuse to admit deposition to promote fairness where conditions of admissibility were met but plaintiff had been led to believe witness would give live testimony. Stoczynski v. Livermore, 782 P.2d 834 (Colo. App. 1989).

III. OBJECTIONS.

Annotator's note. Prior to revision of the Rules of Civil Procedure which took effect in 1970, section (b) of this rule was C.R.C.P. 26(e) and cases decided under that rule have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Admissibility of deposition is not an issue until deposition is introduced. The question of the inadmissibility of a deposition used for impeachment purposes is not a valid issue until such time as a party proposes to impeach a witness by introducing the deposition. Appelhans v. Kirkwood, 148 Colo. 92, 365 P.2d 233 (1961).

The court cannot determine admissibility or relevancy if not given specific purpose or purposes for reading portions of a deposition when faced with an objection from the opposing party. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971).

Objections to leading questions cannot be made at trial. The objection that a question propounded to a witness examined upon commission was leading cannot be made at the trial. Greenlaw Lumber & Timber Co. v. Chambers, 46 Colo. 587, 105 P. 1091 (1909) (decided under § 388 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

Admission of deposition where party is present at trial can be harmless error. Where the admission of a deposition of a party is objected to on the ground that the party is in court and available to testify, such admission is harmless error when the evidence contained therein is merely cumulative to the evidence already before the court and its admission neither adds to nor detracts from evidence previously admitted. Sentinel Petroleum Corp. v. Bernat, 29 Colo. App. 109, 478 P.2d 688 (1970).

Entry of the deposition of a defendant into evidence does not deny him the full benefit of having his credibility judged by the jury, or impair his right of rehabilitation, for upon presentation of his defense, defendant may protect both these rights by taking the stand in his own behalf. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971).

This rule allows method of preserving objection. Should a deposition eventually be used at trial, the rules allow a party to preserve his objection to the wording of a question for trial by simply objecting to the question at the time the deposition is taken. Seymour v. District Court, 196 Colo. 102, 581 P.2d 302 (1978).

For purposes of section (d)(1), court endorses interpretation of "promptly" that calls for notice within a reasonable time under all the facts and circumstances of the case. This interpretation, allowing for more flexibility, is more in keeping with the scheme of the state's discovery rules. The nonexclusive list of factors identified in Todd v. Bear Valley Village Apartments, 980 P.2d 973 (Colo. 1999), may be considered to determine whether an objection to the inadequacy of a deposition notice is prompt. A party should not be denied the ability to defend himself or herself in court because of an inflexible application of a procedural rule. Keenan ex rel. Hickman v. Gregg, 192 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2008).

IV. EFFECT OF TAKING OR USING.

Annotator's note. Prior to revision of the Rules of Civil Procedure which took effect in 1970, section (c) of this rule was C.R.C.P. 26(f) and, cases decided under that rule have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Under this rule, the taking of a deposition was held not to be a waiver of objection to the competency of a witness where the deposition of the party was avowedly taken for the purpose of discovery under C.R.C.P. 26(a), and neither the deposition nor any part of it was offered in evidence. Gottesleben v. Luckenbach, 123 Colo. 429, 231 P.2d 958 (1951).

As to the rebuttal of evidence this rule is made applicable to interrogatories by the language of C.R.C.P. 33(b), by which it is provided: ''Interrogatories may relate to any matters which can be inquired into under C.R.C.P. 26(b), and the answers may be used to the extent (permitted by the rules of evidence)''. Ridley v. Young, 127 Colo. 46, 253 P.2d 433 (1953).

V. ERRORS AND IRREGULARITIES.

A. Taking.

Objections to leading questions cannot be made at trial. The objection that a question propounded to a witness examined upon commission was leading cannot be made at the trial. Greenlaw Lumber & Timber Co. v. Chambers, 46 Colo. 587, 105 P. 1091 (1909) (decided under § 388 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

B. Completion and Return.

This rule is intended to render technical objections unavailable at the trial. Appelhans v. Kirkwood, 148 Colo. 92, 365 P.2d 233 (1961).

This rule provides that irregularities in the preparation, etc., of a deposition are waived unless a motion to suppress the deposition is made with reasonable promptness after such defect is discovered or with due diligence might have been ascertained. Appelhans v. Kirkwood, 148 Colo. 92, 365 P.2d 233 (1961).

A deposition is not inadmissible on the basis that it is unsigned where an objection to such is not promptly made. Linker v. Linker, 28 Colo. App. 136, 470 P.2d 882 (1970).

Objections must be substantial and must affect the value of the deposition as evidence in order to preclude its use at the trial. Appelhans v. Kirkwood, 148 Colo. 92, 365 P.2d 233 (1961).

It was error for the trial court to order a deposition suppressed upon the basis of the first appearance of irregularities in the deposition of not being properly certified and filed where counsel for defendants was merely seeking to establish an impeaching foundation by asking the plaintiff whether she had made particular statements on the occasion of the giving of the deposition, since under no circumstances would a motion to suppress be proper at this point. Rather, the question of the inadmissibility of the deposition would not be a valid issue until such time as defendant's counsel proposed to impeach plaintiff by introducing the deposition. Appelhans v. Kirkwood, 148 Colo. 92, 365 P.2d 233 (1961).

Rule 33. Interrogatories to Parties

(a) Availability. Any party may serve upon any other party written interrogatories, not exceeding the number, including all discrete subparts, set forth in the Case Management Order, to be answered by the party served or, if the party served is a public or private corporation, or a partnership, or association, or governmental agency, by any officer or agent, who shall furnish such information as is available to the party. Leave of court must be obtained, consistent with the principles stated in C.R.C.P. Rules 16(b)(1) and 26(b) and subsection (e) of this Rule, to serve more interrogatories than the number set forth in the Case Management Order. Without leave of court or written stipulation, interrogatories may not be served before the time specified in C.R.C.P. 26(d).

(b) Answers and Objections. (1) Each interrogatory shall be answered separately and fully, in writing and under oath, unless it is objected to, in which event the objecting party shall state the reasons for objection and shall answer under oath to the extent the interrogatory is not objectionable. An objection must state with specificity the grounds for objection to the interrogatory and must also state whether any responsive information is being withheld on the basis of that objection. A timely objection to an interrogatory stays the obligation to answer those portions of the interrogatory objected to until the court resolves the objection. No separate motion for protective order under C.R.C.P. 26(c) is required.

(2) The answers are to be signed by the person making them, and the objections signed by the attorney making them.

(3) The party upon whom the interrogatories have been served shall serve a copy of the answers, and objections if any, within 35 days after the service of the interrogatories. A shorter or longer time may be directed by the court or, in the absence of such an order, agreed to in writing by the parties pursuant to C.R.C.P. 29.

(4) All grounds for an objection to an interrogatory shall be stated with specificity. Any ground not stated in a timely objection will be deemed to be waived unless the party's failure to object is excused by the court for good cause shown.

(5) The party submitting the interrogatories may move for an order pursuant to C.R.C.P. 37(a) with respect to any objection to or other failure to answer an interrogatory.

(c) Scope; Use at Trial. Interrogatories may relate to any matters which can be inquired into pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(b), and the answers may be used to the extent permitted by the Colorado Rules of Evidence.

An interrogatory otherwise proper is not necessarily objectionable merely because an answer to the interrogatory involves an opinion or contention that relates to fact or the application of law to fact, but the court may order that such an interrogatory need not be answered until after designated discovery has been completed or until a pretrial conference or other later time.

(d) Option to Produce Business Records. Where the answer to an interrogatory may be derived or ascertained from the business records of the party upon whom the interrogatory has been served, or from an examination, audit, or inspection of such business records, or from a compilation, abstract, or summary based thereon, and the burden of deriving or ascertaining the answer is substantially the same for the party serving the interrogatory as for the party served, it is a sufficient answer to such interrogatory to specify the records from which the answer may be derived or ascertained and to afford to the party serving the interrogatory reasonable opportunity to examine, audit, or inspect such records and to make copies, compilations, abstracts, or summaries.

(e) Pattern and Non-Pattern Interrogatories; Limitations. The pattern interrogatories set forth in the Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 20, are approved. Any pattern interrogatory and its subparts shall be counted as one interrogatory. Any discrete subparts in a non-pattern interrogatory shall be considered as a separate interrogatory.

[1] Revised C.R.C.P. 33 now interrelates with the differential case management features of C.R.C.P. 16 and C.R.C.P. 26. Because of mandatory disclosure, substantially less discovery is needed.

[2] A discovery schedule for the case is required by C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1)(IV). Under the requirements of that Rule, the parties must set forth in the Case Management Order the timing and number of interrogatories and the basis for the necessity of such discovery with attention to the presumptive limitation and standards set forth in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2). There is also the requirement that counsel certify they have advised their clients of the estimated expenses and fees involved in the discovery. Discovery is thus tailored to the particular case. The parties in the first instance and ultimately the Court are responsible for setting reasonable limits and preventing abuse.

[1] Pattern interrogatories [Form 20, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 33(e)] have been modified to more appropriately conform to the 2015 amendments to C.R.C.P. 16, 26, and 33. A change to or deletion of a pre-2017 pattern interrogatory should not be construed as making that former interrogatory improper, but instead, only that the particular interrogatory is, as of the effective date of the 2017 rule change, modified as stated or no longer a ''pattern interrogatory.''

[2] The change to C.R.C.P. 33(e) is made to conform to the holding of Leaffer v. Zarlengo, 44 P.3d 1072 (Colo. 2002).

L. Ctr. J. 192 (1963).

C.R.C.P. 26 to 37 must be construed together along with the requirement that plaintiff establish a prima facie case for punitive damages, as a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to discovery of defendant's financial information. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. Based on §§ 16-8-115 to 16-8-117 and on the special nonadversary nature of a release inquiry, the participants in release proceedings do not have the broad right of discovery as provided in the rules of civil procedure. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Under C.R.C.P. 81(a), the procedure in release hearings under § 16-8-115 is so inconsistent and in conflict with the rules of civil procedure as to make civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Applied in Ricci v. Davis, 627 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1981); Hawkins v. District Court, 638 P.2d 1372 (Colo. 1982).

II. AVAILABILITY AND PROCEDURE.

If interrogatories, otherwise objectionable, are made material to the issues involved by virtue of stipulation, then the petitioner is entitled to answers to them. Mote v. Koch, 173 Colo. 82, 476 P.2d 255 (1970).

Refusal to answer valid interrogatories is grounds for reversal. Where the information sought by interrogatories is subject to discovery under C.R.C.P. 26(b) and 33, the refusal to supply the information requested is in itself a ground for reversal. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

Refusal to supply names of witnesses intended to be called is ground for reversal. Where Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

Where the primary cause for defendants' failure to answer interrogatories was the inexcusable neglect of defendants' attorney in whom they had placed their confidence, the trial court abused its discretion in refusing to set aside a default judgment for failure of the defendants to answer interrogatories, particularly since setting aside the default judgment and ordering a trial on the merits would not unwarrantedly prejudice the plaintiff. Coerber v. Rath, 164 Colo. 294, 435 P.2d 228 (1967).

Where interrogatories which are not answered involve matters entirely foreign to the issues involved, any error, therefore, cannot be prejudicial. Mote v. Koch, 173 Colo. 82, 476 P.2d 255 (1970).

Interrogatories may be served on governmental official of another state though they cannot be compelled to appear in Colorado for taking depositions. Minnesota ex rel. Minnesota Att'y Gen. v. District Court, 155 Colo. 521, 395 P.2d 601 (1964).

Existence of triable issue on punitive damages may be established through discovery, by evidentiary means, or by an offer of proof. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Extent of discovery of defendant's financial condition is not unlimited. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Scope of discovery of defendant's financial worth for punitive damages case should include only material evidence and should be framed in simple manner. The permissible scope of discovery of defendant's financial worth where a prima facie case for punitive damages has been made should include only material evidence of the defendant's financial worth, and should be framed in such a manner that the questions proposed are not unduly burdensome. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Plaintiff has burden of establishing prima facie right to punitive damages. When punitive damages are in issue and information is sought by the plaintiff relating to the defendant's financial condition, justice requires no less than the imposition on the plaintiff of the burden of establishing a prima facie right to punitive damages. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Specific requests may constitute unnecessary harassment. Specific questions requesting detailed information regarding the defendant's financial status may constitute unnecessary harassment. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Burden is cast upon party who seeks protective order to show annoyance, embarrassment or oppression. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Applied in Godfrit v. Judd, 116 Colo. 489, 182 P.2d 907 (1947).

III. SCOPE AND USE.

Law reviews. For comment on Ridley v. Young appearing below, see 25 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 392 (1953).

Annotator's note. Where reference is made in the annotations to the Rules of Civil Procedure, citation and language have been changed where needed to comport with the nomenclature and wording of the 1970 revision of the rules in any still-relevant case decided previous thereto.

Only discrete subparts of non-pattern interrogatories, and not those subparts logically or factually subsumed within and necessarily related to the primary question, must be counted toward the interrogatory number limit set forth in the case management order. Leaffer v. Zarlengo, 44 P.3d 1072 (Colo. 2002).

Supreme court adopts test set forth in Kendall v. GES Exposition Servs., Inc., 174 F.R.D. 684 (D. Nev. 1997), to aid courts in distinguishing between discrete subparts of non-pattern interrogatories and those that are logically or factually subsumed within and necessarily related to the primary question. Leaffer v. Zarlengo, 44 P.3d 1072 (Colo. 2002).

Answers made by a party to interrogatories submitted by his adversary are not evidence until introduced as such during the course of trial. Ridley v. Young, 127 Colo. 46, 253 P.2d 433 (1953).

When answers to interrogatories are introduced in evidence, they stand on the same plane as other evidence. Ridley v. Young, 127 Colo. 46, 253 P.2d 433 (1953).

Answers to interrogatories may be treated as admissions against interest. Ridley v. Young, 127 Colo. 46, 253 P.2d 433 (1953).

An answer filed by a party to an interrogatory has the same effect as a judicial admission made in a pleading or in open court, for it relieves the opposing party of the necessity of proving the fact admitted. Ridley v. Young, 127 Colo. 46, 253 P.2d 433 (1953).

An answer to an interrogatory treated as an admission is not conclusive and will not prevail over evidence offered at the trial. Ridley v. Young, 127 Colo. 46, 253 P.2d 433 (1953).

Answers to the interrogatories are not "judicial admissions" which are conclusive. Ridley v. Young, 127 Colo. 46, 253 P.2d 433 (1953).

Furnishing false answers to interrogatories may constitute first-degree perjury. People v. Chaussee, 847 P.2d 156 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 880 P.2d 749 (Colo. 1994).

Court need not reject testimony of witnesses which contradicts answers. Where a defendant answers interrogatories under this rule, making admissions therein against his own interest, and thereafter does not appear upon the trial, with plaintiff offering the answers to the interrogatories in evidence, the trial court need not reject the evidence of witnesses, who are called by counsel appearing for defendant, if the testimony of such witnesses contradicts the statements of defendant as contained in the answers to the interrogatories. Ridley v. Young, 127 Colo. 46, 253 P.2d 433 (1953).

Rebuttal of evidence is applicable to interrogatories. The language of this rule by which it is provided: ''Interrogatories may relate to any matters which can be inquired into under C.R.C.P. 26(b), and the answers may be used to the extent (permitted by the rules of evidence)'', made the rebuttal of evidence under C.R.C.P. 32(c), applicable to interrogatories. Ridley v. Young, 127 Colo. 46, 253 P.2d 433 (1953).

Interrogatory answers for discovery should not be irrevocably binding. Answers to interrogatories propounded primarily for the purpose of discovery and to prevent surprise should not be held to be irrevocably binding upon the person making said answers. Ridley v. Young, 127 Colo. 46, 253 P.2d 433 (1953).

IV. OPTION TO PRODUCE BUSINESS RECORDS.

With regard to interrogatories which request information and data obtainable from available documents, the general rule is that a party should not be permitted to compel his opponent to make compilations or perform research and investigations with respect to statistical information which he might make for himself by obtaining the production of the books and documents pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34(a) or by doing a little footwork, as the case may be. Val Vu, Inc. v. Lacey, 31 Colo. App. 55, 497 P.2d 723 (1972).

Where one furnishes certain business records and furnishes other documents as they become available by use of C.R.C.P. 34(a), there is no prejudice resulting from the trial court's discretionary ruling that interrogatories are of an oppressive nature. Val Vu, Inc. v. Lacey, 31 Colo. App. 55, 497 P.2d 723 (1972).

Rule 34. Production of Documents and Things and Entry Upon Land for Inspection and Other Purposes

(a) Scope. Subject to the limitations contained in the Case Management Order, a party may serve on any other party a request:

(1) To produce and permit the party making the request, or someone acting on the party's behalf, to inspect and copy any designated documents (including writings, drawings, graphs, charts, photographs, phono-records, and other data compilations from which information can be obtained, translated, if necessary, by the respondent through detection devices into reasonably usable form), or to inspect and copy, test, or sample any tangible things which constitute or contain matters within the scope of C.R.C.P. 26(b) and which are in the possession, custody, or control of the party upon whom the request is served; or

(2) To permit entry upon designated land or other property in the possession or control of the party upon whom the request is served for the purpose of inspection and measuring, surveying, photographing, testing, or sampling the property or any designated object or operation thereon, within the scope of C.R.C.P. 26(b).

(b) Procedure. The request shall set forth the items to be inspected either by individual item or by category, and describe each item or category with reasonable particularity. The request shall specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection and performing the related acts.

The party upon whom the request is served shall serve a written response within 35 days after the service of the request. A shorter or longer time may be directed by the court or agreed to in writing by the parties pursuant to C.R.C.P. 29. The response shall state, with respect to each item or category, that inspection and related activities will be permitted as requested, or state with specificity the grounds for objecting to the request. The responding party may state that it will produce copies of information instead of permitting inspection. The production must then be completed no later than the time for inspection stated in the request or another reasonable time stated in the response. An objection must state whether any responsive materials are being withheld on the basis of that objection. If objection is made to part of an item or category, the part shall be specified. A timely objection to a request for production stays the obligation to produce which is the subject of the objection until the court resolves the objection. No separate motion for protective order pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(c) is required. The party submitting the request may move for an order pursuant to C.R.C.P. 37(a) with respect to any objection to or other failure to respond to the request or any part thereof, or any failure to permit inspection as requested.

A party who produces documents for inspection shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the request.

(c) Persons Not Parties. As provided in C.R.C.P. 45, this Rule does not preclude an independent action against a person not a party for production of documents and things and permission to enter upon land.

COMMENTS

[1] Revised C.R.C.P. 34 now interrelates with the differential case management features of C.R.C.P. 16 and C.R.C.P. 26. Because of mandatory disclosure, substantially less discovery is needed.

[2] A discovery schedule for the case is required by C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1)(IV). Under the requirements of that Rule, the parties must set forth in the Case Management Order the timing and number of requests for production and the basis for the necessity of such discovery with attention to the presumptive limitation and standards set forth in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2). There is also the requirement that counsel certify they have advised their clients of the estimated expenses and fees involved in the discovery. Discovery is thus tailored to the particular case. The parties in the first instance and ultimately the Court are responsible for setting reasonable limits and preventing abuse.

[3] Rule 34 is changed to adopt similar revisions as those proposed to Fed. R. Civ. P. 34, which are designed to make responses to requests for documents more meaningful and transparent. The first amendment is to avoid the practice of repeating numerous boilerplate objections to each request which do not identify specifically what is objectionable about each specific request. The second amendment is to allow production of documents in place of permitting inspection but to require that the production be scheduled to occur when the response to the document request is due, or some other specific and reasonable date. The third amendment is to require that when an objection to a document request is made, the response must also state whether, in fact, any responsive materials are being withheld due to that objection. The fourth and final amendment is simply to clarify that a written objection to production under this Rule is adequate to stop production without also filing a motion for a protective order.

District Court, 644 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1982).

II. SCOPE.

Production of statistical data should be made pursuant to this rule instead of using interrogatories. With regard to interrogatories which request information and data obtainable from available documents, the general rule is that a party should not be permitted to compel his opponent to make compilations or perform research and investigations with respect to statistical information which he might make for himself by obtaining the production of the books and documents pursuant to this rule. Val Vu, Inc. v. Lacey, 31 Colo. App. 55, 497 P.2d 723 (1972).

Under this rule, a party does not have an unqualified right to examine a statement signed by him and delivered to the other party during an investigation conducted prior to the time suit is filed. McCoy v. District Court, 126 Colo. 32, 246 P.2d 619 (1952).

If a litigant is entitled to the production of documents, he must bring himself within the provisions of this rule. McCoy v. District Court, 126 Colo. 32, 246 P.2d 619 (1952).

The limitations set forth in this rule are: (1) Relevancy under C.R.C.P. 26(b); and (2) possession, custody, or control. Michael v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 138 Colo. 450, 334 P.2d 1090 (1959).

It is not error to require a party to produce documents which are under his control, though not in his actual possession, and which are obtainable upon his order or direction. Michael v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 138 Colo. 450, 334 P.2d 1090 (1959).

Denial of motion to compel production of documents on grounds that voluminous documentation had been provided and that the attorney-client privilege had not been waived was not an abuse of the trial court's discretion in discovery matters. Hill v. Boatright, 890 P.2d 180 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds sub nom. Boatright v. Derr, 919 P.2d 221 (Colo. 1996).

Limitation in protective order prohibiting defendant from copying petitioner's documentary evidence goes far beyond what discovery requires, and flies in the face of that aspect of this rule which specifically authorizes such copying. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 186 Colo. 226, 526 P.2d 1335 (1974).

Discovery of documents rather than ex parte questioning appropriate. Ex parte questioning of physicians or others concerning documents to be examined cannot be ordered by the court in personal injury action, and, if an inspecting party needs further information concerning documentary material, the formal method of eliciting the same is by further discovery procedure. Fields v. McNamara, 189 Colo. 284, 540 P.2d 327 (1975).

Ordering plaintiff authorization allowing inspection proper. Under this rule, court order permitting the inspection and copying of records, reports, and X ray, and ordering plaintiff to execute and deliver an authorization allowing such inspection and copying, where the plaintiff brought an action for damages for injuries allegedly sustained in an automobile accident, was not error in the provisions of the authorization. Fields v. McNamara, 189 Colo. 284, 540 P.2d 327 (1975).

A party may be required to obtain copies of tax returns filed by him, since he has a potential right to the custody or control of such copies. Michael v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 138 Colo. 450, 334 P.2d 1090 (1959).

"Surveillance movies" are discoverable. Crist v. Goody, 31 Colo. App. 496, 507 P.2d 478 (1972).

A party cannot be compelled to produce X-ray photographs taken and retained by his physician in the absence of a showing that the party has a legal right to demand the photographs. Michael v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 138 Colo. 450, 334 P.2d 1090 (1959).

Order to produce privileged communications improper. Order compelling defendant-insurer to make available to plaintiffs' attorneys all correspondence between its home office and its local counsel and local agents as well as all correspondence between insurer and its attorneys or agents and insured was improper as a violation of the attorney-client privilege. General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp. v. Mitchell, 128 Colo. 11, 259 P.2d 862 (1953).

A privilege may be waived by authorized parties. A trustee in bankruptcy for a corporation stands in the shoes of the board of directors and therefore has the power, in the exercise of his discretion, to waive the privilege under § 13-90-107 that the work product of a certified public accountant is nondiscoverable without the client's consent. Weck v. District Court, 161 Colo. 384, 422 P.2d 46 (1967).

Personnel files and police reports within scope of privilege are protected from discovery. To the extent that they come within the scope of the official information privilege, the personnel files and staff investigation bureau reports of the Denver police department are protected from discovery. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

To establish legitimate expectation of nondisclosure, claimant must show, first, that he or she has an actual or subjective expectation that the information will not be disclosed, and second, the claimant must show that the material or information which he or she seeks to protect against disclosure is highly personal and sensitive and that its disclosure would be offensive and objectionable to a reasonable person of ordinary sensibilities. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Certain factors shall be considered when official information privilege claimed. In a litigation arising from allegations of police misconduct, when the official information privilege is claimed for files and reports maintained by a police department, concerning an incident upon which the allegations of misconduct are based, or about the officers involved in the incident, the trial court has the advantage of the following formulation of factors to be considered in applying the privilege: (1) The extent to which disclosure will thwart governmental processes by discouraging citizens from giving the government information; (2) the impact upon persons who have given information of having their identities disclosed; (3) the degree to which governmental self-evaluation and consequent program improvement will be chilled by disclosure; (4) whether the information sought is factual data or evaluative summary; (5) whether the party seeking the discovery is an actual or potential defendant in any criminal proceeding either pending or reasonably likely to follow from the incident in question; (6) whether the police investigation has been completed; (7) whether any intradepartmental disciplinary proceedings have arisen or may arise from the investigation; (8) whether the plaintiff's suit is nonfrivolous and brought in good faith; (9) whether the information sought is available through other discovery or from other sources; and (10) the importance of the information sought to the plaintiff's case. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Balancing competing interests required where official information privilege claimed. Where the official information privilege is raised in opposition to a request for discovery, the trial court must balance the competing interests through an in camera examination of the materials for which the official information privilege is claimed. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Tripartite balancing inquiry undertaken when right to confidentiality is invoked. When the right to confidentiality is invoked to prevent disclosure of personal materials or information, a tripartite balancing inquiry must be undertaken by the court, as follows: (1) Does the party seeking to come within the protection of the right to confidentiality have a legitimate expectation that the materials or information will not be disclosed? (2) is disclosure nonetheless required to serve a compelling state interest? and (3) if so, will the necessary disclosure occur in that manner which is least intrusive with respect to the right to confidentiality? Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Compelling state interest can override right to confidentiality. Even if it is determined that a claimant has a legitimate expectation that the personal materials or information in question will not be disclosed through state action, a compelling state interest can override the constitutional right to confidentiality which arises from that expectation. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Compelling state interest in disclosure must consist of the very materials or information which would otherwise be protected. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

In certain cases, the court shall inquire into the manner of disclosure. When it is determined that a compelling state interest mandates the disclosure of otherwise protected materials or information, the trial court must further inquire into the manner in which the disclosure will occur and disclosure must only be made in a manner, consistent with the state interest to be served, which will intrude least on the claimant's right to confidentiality. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Effect of doctrine of stare decisis is limited. Because the balancing process proceeds on an ad hoc basis, the effect of the doctrine of stare decisis in cases requiring application of the official information privilege is limited. Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Destructive testing is not a matter of right, but lies in the sound discretion of the trial court. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

The appropriate analysis in deciding whether to allow a destructive test as part of discovery where the owner of the object sought the testing was parallel to that involved in a conventional request for inspection under this rule and a resulting motion for a protective order under C.R.C.P. 26. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Balance must be established. The dilemma which arises when the proposed test will somehow alter the original state of the object requires that a balance be established based upon the particular facts of the case and the broad policies of the discovery rules. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

A balance must be struck where a test will alter the original state of an object between the ''costs'' of the alteration of the object and the ''benefits'' of ascertaining the true facts of the case. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Certain factors shall be considered in creating balance. Alternative means of ameliorating ''costs'', resulting from alteration of an object in destructive testing, such as the use of detailed photographs to preserve the appearance of the object, or use of other samples for the test, are relevant to the creation of the balance. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Alternative, ''nondestructive'' means of obtaining the facts should be considered in evaluating the putative benefits of the tests. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Bad faith or overreaching is a special factor to be considered in all cases of destructive testing. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

Destructive testing shall be undertaken last. A request for destructive testing compels that the court ensure that it is not undertaken until after other testing procedures have been completed by the parties. Cameron v. District Court, 193 Colo. 286, 565 P.2d 925 (1977).

III. PROCEDURE.

Burden placed on party opposing discovery. Requirement that party requesting discovery make out a prima facie case is not imposed by this rule, and any burden that exists should be placed on those opposing discovery. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 186 Colo. 226, 526 P.2d 1335 (1974).

''Lone Pine orders'', where a trial court orders plaintiffs to present prima facie evidence supporting their claims after initial disclosures, but before other discovery commences, or risk having their case dismissed, are prohibited under state law. While the supreme court revised this rule to create a ''differential case management/early disclosure/limited discovery system'', these revisions are not so substantial as to effectively overrule other supreme court holdings. Although portions of C.R.C.P. 16 and C.R.C.P. 26 may afford trial courts more discretion than they previously had, that discretion is not so broad as to allow courts to issue Lone Pine orders. And, notably, the state's version of C.R.C.P. 16 does not include the language relied upon by federal courts when issuing Lone Pine orders. Existing procedures under the Colorado rules of civil procedure sufficiently protect against meritless claims, and, therefore, a Lone Pine order was not required solely on that basis. Strudley v. Antero Res. Corp., 2013 COA 106, 350 P.3d 874, aff'd, 2015 CO 26, 347 P.3d 149.

A party seeking a subpoena duces tecum requiring production of documents by the other party at a deposition hearing must show good cause for the issuance of such a subpoena, and under such circumstances, C.R.C.P. 45(b), which provides for subpoena for the production of documentary evidence, must be read in conjunction with this rule. Lee v. Missouri P. R. R., 152 Colo. 179, 381 P.2d 35 (1963).

File should be produced upon "good cause" shown. Where it was proved by uncontradicted testimony that a claims agent who investigated the accident could not testify or give a ''coherent story about the results of his investigation'' without first refreshing his memory from his file on the investigation, such was sufficient to show good cause why the file should be produced at the time of the taking of the agent's deposition. Lee v. Missouri P. R. R., 152 Colo. 179, 381 P.2d 35 (1963).

Production of documents is still subject to protective orders by court and objections. Where good cause for the production of documents at time of taking depositions is shown, such required presentation is subject to any protective orders the court might make concerning the use to be made of the documents and is subject to any objections to specific questions asked of deponent concerning the documents. Lee v. Missouri P. R. R., 152 Colo. 179, 381 P.2d 35 (1963).

Pretrial order reviewable in certain circumstances. Orders pertaining to pretrial discovery are interlocutory in nature and are not ordinarily reviewable in an original proceeding. Because, however, the exercise of original jurisdiction is discretionary and governed by the particular circumstances of the case, there are exceptions to this general rule when, for example, a pretrial discovery order significantly departs from the controlling standards of discovery, or when a pretrial discovery order will cause a party unwarranted damage that cannot be cured on appeal, such as where treatment records are protected from disclosure by statutory privileges. Clark v. District Court, 668 P.2d 3 (Colo. 1983).

A party produces documents requested pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34 by making them available for inspections and copying. Application of Hines Highlands Partnership, 929 P.2d 718 (Colo. 1996).

Rule 35. Physical and Mental Examination of Persons

(a) Order for Examination. When the mental or physical condition (including the blood group) of a party, or of a person in the custody or under the legal control of a party, is in controversy, the court in which the action is pending may order the party to submit to a physical or mental examination by a suitably licensed or certified examiner or to produce for examination the person in his or her custody or legal control. The order may be made only on motion for good cause shown and upon notice to the person to be examined and to all parties and shall specify the time, place, manner, conditions, and scope of the examination and the person or persons by whom it is to be made.

(b) Report of Examiner.

(1) If requested by the party against whom an order is made under section (a) of this Rule or the person examined, the party causing the examination to be made shall deliver to said other party a copy of a detailed written report of the examiner setting out his or her findings, including results of all tests made, diagnoses, and conclusions, together with like reports of all earlier examinations of the same condition. After delivery the party causing the examination shall be entitled upon request to receive from the party against whom the order is made a like report of any examination, previously or thereafter made, of the same condition, unless, in the case of a report of examination of a person not a party, the party shows that he or she is unable to obtain it. The court on motion may make an order against a party requiring delivery of a report on such terms as are just, and if an examiner fails or refuses to make a report the court may exclude the examiner's testimony if offered at the trial.

(2) By requesting and obtaining a report of the examination so ordered or by taking the deposition of the examiner, the person examined waives any privilege he or she may have in that action or any other involving the same controversy, regarding the testimony of every other person who has examined or may thereafter examine the person in respect of the same mental or physical condition.

(3) This section (b) applies to examinations made by agreement of the parties, unless the agreement expressly provides otherwise. This section (b) does not preclude discovery of a report of an examiner in accordance with the provisions of any other Rule.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Depositions and Discovery, Rules 26 to 37'', see 28 Dicta 375 (1951). For article, ''Depositions and Discovery: Rules 26-37'', see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 562 (1951). C.R.C.P. 26 to 37 must be construed together along with the requirement that the plaintiff establish a prima facie case for punitive damages, as a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to discovery of defendant's financial information. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Determination of motion lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. In a dependency and neglect proceeding, denying intervenor's motion for mental examination of the mother when evaluation had been updated six months before the hearing was not an abuse of discretion. People ex rel. A.W.R., 17 P.3d 192 (Colo. App. 2000).

There is no absolute quasi-judicial immunity for professionals conducting an independent medical or psychiatric examination pursuant to this rule. Dalton v. Miller, 984 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1999).

However, such professional is entitled to witness immunity where such professional examined a person pursuant to this rule. Dalton v. Miller, 984 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1999).

II. ORDER.

Law reviews. For note, ''One Year Review of Colorado Law — 1964'', see 42 Den. L. Ctr. J. 140 (1965). For comment on Timpte v. District Court appearing below, see 39 U. Colo. L. Rev. 592 (1967).

Motion for physical examination is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Hildyard v. Western Fasteners, Inc., 33 Colo. App. 396, 522 P.2d 596 (1974).

It is necessary to demonstrate good cause therefor. Hildyard v. Western Fasteners, Inc., 33 Colo. App. 396, 522 P.2d 596 (1974).

Rule does not by its terms limit a party to one examination. Hildyard v. Western Fasteners, Inc., 33 Colo. App. 396, 522 P.2d 596 (1974).

Circumstances held sufficient to justify a second physical examination are: (a) Separate injuries calling for analysis from distinct medical specialties such as ''whip-lash sprain'' and ''aggravation of preexisting heart condition'', (b) where the examining physician requires the assistance of other consultants before he can make a diagnosis, or (c) where a substantial time lag occurs between the initial examination and trial. Hildyard v. Western Fasteners, Inc., 33 Colo. App. 396, 522 P.2d 596 (1974).

A trial court is authorized to issue an order requiring a party to submit to a physical or mental examination upon a showing of good cause and that such order shall specify the conditions of the examination. Hayes v. District Court, 854 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1993).

Court may compel examination in Colorado where party has been examined in another jurisdiction. Where, on motion to vacate an interlocutory decree of divorce, defendant husband contended that he was insane at the time of the alleged commission of the acts relied upon as grounds for divorce, at the time of service of process, and throughout the pendency of the action, the trial court did not err in ruling that it would not receive in evidence depositions concerning husband's purported insanity by doctors in another state where husband had wilfully absented himself until such time as the husband made himself available for examination within the jurisdiction of Colorado by psychiatrists or physicians who might be selected by the wife. Richardson v. Richardson, 124 Colo. 240, 236 P.2d 121 (1951).

Defendant has same right as plaintiff to have his own doctor testify. So long as a plaintiff may select his own doctor to testify as to his physical condition, fundamental fairness dictates that a defendant shall have the same right, in the absence of an agreement by the parties as to whom the examining physician will be. Timpte v. District Court, 161 Colo. 309, 421 P.2d 728 (1966).

Defendant's right to select a doctor to testify is subject to protective orders by the trial court such as, among others: Those limiting the number of doctors who may examine; those providing who may be present at the examinations, including plaintiffs' attorneys if the court deems it wise; and those setting the time, type, place, scope, and conduct of the examination. Timpte v. District Court, 161 Colo. 309, 421 P.2d 728 (1966); Hayes v. District Court, 854 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1993).

The court may reject a particular physician upon a finding, sustained by a showing of bias and prejudice, and order the defendant to submit the names of other physicians. Timpte v. District Court, 161 Colo. 309, 421 P.2d 728 (1966).

The fact that certain doctors testify only for the defense in matters of personal injury does not in itself suggest bias and prejudice which demands disqualification of such a doctor; rather, it is a matter relevant only as to weight and credibility, and cross-examination upon this subject affords full protection to the plaintiff's rights. Timpte v. District Court, 161 Colo. 309, 421 P.2d 728 (1966).

In no case, however, may the court select a so-called "neutral" physician. The trial judge may not permit the plaintiffs as well as the defendants to submit a list of doctors from which the trial court would select a so-called ''neutral'' physician. Timpte v. District Court, 161 Colo. 309, 421 P.2d 728 (1966).

A trial court has the power to order a psychiatric examination of the parties in a domestic relations case even though not provided for in section (a) of this rule, since where matters such as custody of children are in dispute in a divorce or separation action and the mental stability of either or both of the parents is seriously challenged, a psychiatric examination may well provide a key to a wise determination of custody, a determination, the sole aim of which must be the best interests of the children. Kane v. Kane, 154 Colo. 440, 391 P.2d 361 (1964).

Where the record fails to disclose any evidence necessitating a forced psychiatric examination of one of the spouses as insisted by the other spouse, there is no abuse of discretion in the trial court's refusal to so order. Kane v. Kane, 154 Colo. 440, 391 P.2d 361 (1964).

Questions concerning the conduct of physical examinations conducted pursuant to section (a) of this rule, including the presence of third parties and tape recorders during such examinations, are to be resolved by the trial court in the exercise of its discretion. Hayes v. District Court, 854 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1993).

The party seeking such protective orders bears the burden of establishing the need for such relief. Hayes v. District Court, 854 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1993).

"In controversy" and "good cause" requirements. This rule requires that either the party's physical or mental condition be ''in controversy'' and that the movant show ''good cause'' before the court may order that a party submit to a physical or mental examination. Tyler v. District Court, 193 Colo. 31, 561 P.2d 1260 (1977).

Affirmative showing required. The ''in controversy'' and ''good cause'' requirements of this rule are not met by mere conclusory allegations of the pleadings — nor by mere relevance to the case — but require an affirmative showing by the movant that each condition as to which the examination is sought is really and genuinely in controversy and that good cause exists for ordering each particular examination. Tyler v. District Court, 193 Colo. 31, 561 P.2d 1260 (1977).

A plaintiff's general allegations of mental suffering, mental anguish, emotional distress, and the like, do not place his mental condition in controversy under this rule. Tyler v. District Court, 193 Colo. 31, 561 P.2d 1260 (1977).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for an independent medical examination where, although the plaintiff brought a claim for mental distress, his mental condition was not in controversy. Further, the court did not err in allowing the plaintiff to testify regarding the embarrassment and humiliation he suffered as a result of the defendant's actions in telling others of plaintiff's sexual orientation. Borquez v. Robert C. Ozer, P.C., 923 P.2d 166 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 940 P.2d 371 (Colo. 1997).

A plaintiff in a negligence action who asserts mental or physical injury places that mental or physical injury clearly in controversy and provides the defendant with good cause for an examination to determine the existence and extent of such asserted injury. Braxton v. Luff, 38 Colo. App. 451, 558 P.2d 444 (1976).

Complaint alleging that injuries suffered in the collision resulted in past and future medical expenses, loss of time from work, pain and suffering, and other impairment was sufficient to place plaintiff's physical condition in controversy and give defendant good cause for an order to submit to a physical examination. Braxton v. Luff, 38 Colo. App. 451, 558 P.2d 444 (1976).

The notice provisions of this rule are mandatory and, absent proper notice, the court may refuse to order a physical or a mental examination. Tyler v. District Court, 193 Colo. 31, 561 P.2d 1260 (1977).

Where irregularities in formalities leading to an order did not prejudice plaintiff, the order was properly granted. Braxton v. Luff, 38 Colo. App. 451, 558 P.2d 444 (1976).

Dismissal of case with prejudice held justified. Where plaintiff at no time objected to an examination, sought to cancel or change the appointments, or offered any excuse for his failure to keep at least six scheduled appointments, since the claim was based entirely on the personal injuries he allegedly suffered, and since he repeatedly failed to appear for examination without giving any reason therefor, the trial court was justified in dismissing the case with prejudice. Braxton v. Luff, 38 Colo. App. 451, 558 P.2d 444 (1976).

Proper case for supreme court's original jurisdiction. Petitioner's allegations that respondent court exceeded its jurisdiction and abused its discretion by ordering a psychiatric examination in violation of section (a) of this rule presented a proper case for exercise of the supreme court's original jurisdiction. Post-judgment appeal obviously cannot reverse the possible adverse consequences of a pretrial psychiatric examination of petitioner. Tyler v. District Court, 193 Colo. 31, 561 P.2d 1260 (1977).

The district court abused its discretion in ordering an independent medical examination after the insurance coverage decision at issue had already been made. Schultz v. GEICO Cas. Co., 2018 CO 87, 429 P.3d 844.

III. REPORT.

This rule does not place upon a party the burden of procuring copies of records of hospitals or of office records of physicians. Palmer Park Gardens, Inc. v. Potter, 162 Colo. 178, 425 P.2d 268 (1967).

This rule is limited to medical examinations conducted at the request of a party, and the reports, copies of which are subject to production, are the reports made by the physician as the result of such an examination. Palmer Park Gardens, Inc. v. Potter, 162 Colo. 178, 425 P.2d 268 (1967).

A physician was not required to prepare written reports concerning his treatment of plaintiff where defendant had been furnished, by agreement, the only report prepared by the doctor of a medical examination of plaintiff. Palmer Park Gardens, Inc. v. Potter, 162 Colo. 178, 425 P.2d 268 (1967).

Rule 36. Requests for Admission

(a) Request for Admission. Subject to the limitations contained in the Case Management Order, a party may serve upon any other party a written request for the admission, for purposes of the pending action only, of the truth of any matters within the scope of C.R.C.P. 26(b) set forth in the request that relate to statements or opinions of fact or of the application of law to fact, including the genuineness of any documents described in the request. Copies of documents shall be served with the request unless they have been or are otherwise furnished or made available for inspection and copying. Leave of court must be obtained, consistent with the principles stated in C.R.C.P. Rules 16(b)(1) and 26(b), to serve more requests for admission than the number set forth in the Case Management Order. Without leave of court or written stipulation, requests for admission may not be served before the time specified in C.R.C.P. 26(d).

Each matter of which an admission is requested shall be separately set forth. The matter is admitted unless, within 35 days after service of the request, or within such shorter or longer time as the court may allow or as the parties may agree to in writing pursuant to C.R.C.P. 29, the party to whom the request is directed serves upon the party requesting the admission a written answer or objection addressed to the matter, signed by the party or by the party's attorney. If objection is made, the reasons therefor shall be stated. The answer shall specifically deny the matter or set forth in detail the reasons why the answering party cannot truthfully admit or deny the matter. A denial shall fairly meet the substance of the requested admission, and when good faith requires that a party qualify an answer or deny only a part of the matter of which an admission is requested, the party shall specify so much of it as is true and qualify or deny the remainder. An answering party may not give lack of information or knowledge as a reason for failure to admit or deny unless the party states that the party has made reasonable inquiry and that the information known or readily obtainable by the party is insufficient to enable the party to admit or deny. A party who considers that a matter of which an admission has been requested presents a genuine issue for trial may not, on that ground alone, object to the request; the party may, subject to the provisions of C.R.C.P. 37(c), deny the matter or set forth reasons why the party cannot admit or deny it.

The party who has requested the admissions may move to determine the sufficiency of the answer or objections. Unless the court determines that an objection is justified, it shall order that an answer be served. If the court determines that an answer does not comply with the requirements of this Rule, it may order either that the matter is admitted or that an amended answer be served. The court may, in lieu of these orders, determine that final disposition of the request be made at a pretrial conference or at a designated time prior to trial. The provisions of C.R.C.P. 37(a)(4) apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(b) Effect of Admission. Any matter admitted under this Rule is conclusively established unless the court on motion permits withdrawal or amendment of the admission. Subject to the provisions of Rule 16 governing amendment of a pretrial order, the court may permit withdrawal or amendment when the presentation of the merits of the action will be subserved thereby and the party who obtained the admission fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits. Any admission made by a party under this Rule is for the purpose of the pending action only and is not an admission by him for any other purpose nor may it be used against him in any other proceeding.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

Revised C.R.C.P. 36 now interrelates with the differential case management features of C.R.C.P. 16 and C.R.C.P. 26. Because of mandatory disclosure, substantially less discovery is needed.

A discovery schedule for the case is required by C.R.C.P. 16(b)(1)(IV). Under the requirements of that Rule, the parties must set forth in the Case Management Order the timing and number of requests for admission and the basis for the necessity of such discovery with attention to the presumptive limitation and standards set forth in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2). There is also the requirement that counsel certify they have advised their clients of the estimated expenses and fees involved in the discovery. Discovery is thus tailored to the particular case. The parties in the first instance and ultimately the Court are responsible for setting reasonable limits and preventing abuse.

C.R.C.P. 26 to 37 must be construed together along with the requirement that the plaintiff establish a prima facie case for punitive damages, as a condition precedent to the plain-tiff's right to discovery of defendant's financial information. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

District court's decision to deny a motion to withdraw or amend a response to a request for admission is reviewed for abuse of discretion. Grynberg v. Karlin, 134 P.3d 563 (Colo. App. 2006).

Civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. Based on §§ 16-8-115 to 16-8-117 and on the special nonadversary nature of a release inquiry, the participants in release proceedings do not have the broad right of discovery as provided in the rules of civil procedure. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Under C.R.C.P. 81(a), the procedure in release hearings under § 16-8-115 is so inconsistent and in conflict with the rules of civil procedure as to make civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Applied in Ricci v. Davis, 627 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1981).

II. REQUEST.

When one fails to properly reply to requests for admissions, for the purpose of trial, those statements made in the request will be deemed admitted. McGee v. Heim, 146 Colo. 533, 362 P.2d 193 (1961); Cox v. Pearl Inv. Co., 168 Colo. 67, 450 P.2d 60 (1969); Moses v. Moses, 30 Colo. App. 173, 494 P.2d 133 (1971); Grynberg v. Karlin, 134 P.3d 563 (Colo. App. 2006).

The genuineness of all documents not denied stands admitted under the provisions of this rule where a ''request for admission of facts and genuineness of documents'' is filed. Roemer v. Sinclair Ref. Co., 151 Colo. 401, 380 P.2d 56 (1963).

There is no binding effect on the requesting party of a request for admission pursuant to this rule and the response thereto. The purpose of this rule is to bind the party making the admission, not the party requesting it, and the submission of such a request and the response thereto admits nothing as to the requesting party. Aspen Petroleum Prods., Inc. v. Zedan, 113 P.3d 1290 (Colo. App. 2005).

An admission can constitute an adequate showing for the purpose of a summary judgment motion under C.R.C.P. 56. Roemer v. Sinclair Ref. Co., 151 Colo. 401, 380 P.2d 56 (1963); Cox v. Pearl Inv. Co., 168 Colo. 67, 450 P.2d 60 (1969); Cortez v. Brokaw, 632 P.2d 635 (Colo. App. 1981); Grynberg v. Karlin, 134 P.3d 563 (Colo. App. 2006).

Lack of adherence to formalities in verifying answers which do not result in prejudice should not interfere with the determination of the issues on the merits. Swan v. Zwahlen, 131 Colo. 184, 280 P.2d 439 (1955).

Late filings may be permitted. Where there is a request for admission, a late filing of a denial does not create a nonrebuttable presumption of the truth of the admitted fact, and late filings may be permitted where no prejudice is shown. Moses v. Moses, 180 Colo. 398, 505 P.2d 1302 (1973); Cortez v. Brokaw, 632 P.2d 635 (Colo. App. 1981); Sanchez v. Moosburger, 187 P.3d 1185 (Colo. App. 2008).

Court should not have granted summary judgment based entirely on plaintiff's deemed admission. Though plaintiff failed to timely reply to request for admission, plaintiff moved for an extension of time to reply and submitted a denial of the request, an affidavit, and documentary evidence before the court granted summary judgment. Sanchez v. Moosburger, 187 P.3d 1185 (Colo. App. 2008).

Officials of an administrative agency cannot be compelled to answer requests for admissions concerning the procedure or manner in which they made their findings and rendered a decision in a given case. P.U.C. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 462, 431 P.2d 773 (1967).

The only exception to this rule is where an allegation has been made and there is a clear showing of illegal or unlawful action, misconduct, bias, or bad faith on the part of the administrative officials or a specific violation of an applicable statute. P.U.C. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 462, 431 P.2d 773 (1967).

Rule 37. Failure to Make Disclosure or Cooperate in Discovery: Sanctions

(a) Motion for Order Compelling Disclosure or Discovery. A party, upon reasonable notice to other parties and all persons affected thereby, may apply for an order compelling disclosure or discovery and imposing sanctions as follows:

(1) Appropriate Court. An application for an order to a party or to a person who is not a party shall be made to the court in which the action is pending.

(2) Motion. (A) If a party fails to make a disclosure required by C.R.C.P. 26(a), any other party may move to compel disclosure and for appropriate sanctions. The motion shall be accompanied by a certification that the movant in good faith has conferred or attempted to confer with the party not making the disclosure in an effort to secure the disclosure without court action.

(B) If a deponent fails to answer a question propounded or submitted pursuant to C.R.C.P. Rules 30 or 31, or a corporation or other entity fails to make a designation pursuant to C.R.C.P. Rules 30(b)(6) or 31(a), or a party fails to answer an interrogatory submitted pursuant to C.R.C.P. 33, or if a party, in response to a request for inspection submitted pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34, fails to respond that inspection will be permitted as requested or fails to permit inspection as requested, the discovering party may move for an order compelling an answer, or a designation, or an order compelling inspection in accordance with the request. The motion shall be accompanied by a certification that the moving party in good faith has conferred or attempted to confer with the person or party failing to make the discovery in an effort to secure the information or material without court action. When taking a deposition on oral examination, the proponent of the question may complete or adjourn the examination before applying for an order.

(3) Evasive or Incomplete Disclosure, Answer, or Response. For purposes of this subsection an evasive or incomplete disclosure, answer, or response shall be deemed a failure to disclose, answer, or respond.

(4) Expenses and Sanctions. (A) If a motion is granted or if the disclosure or requested discovery is provided after the motion was filed, the court may, after reasonable notice and an opportunity to be heard, if requested, require the party or deponent whose conduct necessitated the motion or the party or attorney advising such conduct or both of them to pay to the moving party the reasonable expenses incurred in making the motion, including attorney fees, unless the court finds that the motion was filed without the movant's first making a good faith effort to obtain the disclosure or discovery without court action, or that the opposing party's nondisclosure, response, or objection was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses manifestly unjust.

(B) If a motion is denied, the court may make such protective order as it could have made on a motion filed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(c) and may, after affording an opportunity to be heard if requested, require the moving party or the attorney filing the motion or both of them to pay to the party or deponent who opposed the motion the reasonable expenses incurred in opposing the motion, including attorney's fees, unless the court finds that the making of the motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses manifestly unjust.

(C) If the motion is granted in part and denied in part, the court may make such protective order as it could have made on a motion filed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(c) and may, after affording an opportunity to be heard, apportion the reasonable expenses incurred in relation to the motion among the parties and persons in a just manner.

(b) Failure to Comply with Order.

(1) Non-Party Deponents-Sanctions by Court. If a deponent fails to be sworn or to answer a question after being directed to do so by the court in which the action is pending or from which the subpoena is issued, the failure may be considered a contempt of court.

(2) Party Deponents-Sanctions by Court. If a party or an officer, director, or managing agent of a party, or a person designated under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of a party fails to obey an order to provide or permit discovery, including an order made under section (a) of this Rule or Rule 35, the court in which the action is pending may make such orders in regard to the failure as are just, and among others the following:

(A) An order that the matters regarding which the order was made or any other designated facts shall be taken to be established for the purposes of the action in accordance with the claim of the party obtaining the order;

(B) An order refusing to allow the disobedient party to support or oppose designated claims or defenses, or prohibiting that party from introducing designated matters in evidence;

(C) An order striking out pleadings or parts thereof, or staying further proceedings until the order is obeyed, or dismissing the action or proceeding or any part thereof, or rendering a judgment by default against the disobedient party;

(D) In lieu of any of the foregoing orders or in addition thereto, an order treating as a contempt of court the failure to obey any orders except an order to submit to a physical or mental examination;

(E) Where a party has failed to comply with an order under Rule 35(a) requiring the party to produce another for examination, such orders as are listed in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of this subsection (2), unless the party failing to comply shows that he is unable to produce such person for examination.

In lieu of any of the foregoing orders or in addition thereto, the court shall require the party failing to obey the order, or the attorney advising the party, or both, to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(c) Failure to Disclose; False or Misleading Disclosure; Refusal to Admit. (1) A party that without substantial justification fails to disclose information required by C.R.C.P. 26(a) or 26(e) shall not be permitted to present any evidence not so disclosed at trial or on a motion made pursuant to C.R.C.P. 56, unless such failure has not caused and will not cause significant harm, or such preclusion is disproportionate to that harm. The court, after holding a hearing if requested, may impose any other sanction proportionate to the harm, including any of the sanctions authorized in subsections (b)(2)(A), (b)(2)(B) and (b)(2)(C) of this Rule, and the payment of reasonable expenses including attorney fees caused by the failure.

(2) If a party fails to admit the genuineness of any document or the truth of any matter as requested pursuant to C.R.C.P. 36, and if the party requesting the admissions thereafter proves the genuineness of the document or the truth of the matter, the requesting party may apply to the court for an order requiring the other party to pay the reasonable expenses incurred in making that proof, including reasonable attorney fees. The court shall make the order unless it finds that

(A) the request was held objectionable pursuant to C.R.C.P. 36(a), or

(B) the admission sought was of no substantial importance, or

(C) the party failing to admit had reasonable ground to believe that the party might prevail on the matter, or

(D) there was other good reason for the failure to admit.

(d) Failure of Party to Attend at Own Deposition or Serve Answers to Interrogatories or Respond to Request for Inspection. If a party or an officer, director, or managing agent of a party or a person designated pursuant to C.R.C.P. Rules 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of a party fails (1) to appear before the officer who is to take the deposition, after being served with a proper notice; or (2) to serve answers or objections to interrogatories submitted pursuant to C.R.C.P. 33, after proper service of the interrogatories; or (3) to serve a written response to a request for inspection submitted pursuant to C.R.C.P. 34, after proper service of the request, the court in which the action is pending on motion may make such orders in regard to the failure as are just, and among others it may take any action authorized by subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of subsection (b)(2) of this Rule. Any motion specifying a failure under clauses (2) or (3) of this subsection shall be accompanied by a certification that the movant in good faith has conferred or attempted to confer with the party failing to answer or respond in an effort to obtain such answer or response without court action. In lieu of any order or in addition thereto, the court shall require the party failing to act or the attorney advising that party or both to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney fees, caused by the failure unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

The failure to act described in this subsection may not be excused on the ground that the discovery sought is objectionable unless the party failing to act has previously filed a motion for a protective order as provided by C.R.C.P. 26(c).

[1] Subsection (b)(1) was modified to reflect that orders to deponents under subsection (a)(1), when the depositions are taking place within this state, are sought in and issued by the court where the action is pending or from which the subpoena is issued pursuant to Section 13-90-111, C.R.S., and it is that court which will enforce its orders. Deponents appearing outside the state are beyond the jurisdictional limits of the Colorado courts. For out-of-state depositions, any problems should be addressed by the court of the jurisdiction where the deponent has appeared for the deposition under the laws of that jurisdiction.

[2] Revised C.R.C.P. 37 is patterned substantially after Fed.R.Civ.P. 37 as amended in 1993 and has the same numbering. There are slight differences: (1) C.R.C.P. 37(4)(a) and (b) make sanctioning discretionary rather than mandatory; and (2) there is no State Rule 37(e) [pertaining to sanctions for failure to participate in framing of a discovery plan]. As with the other disclosure/discovery rules, revised C.R.C.P. 37 forms a part of a comprehensive case management system. See Committee Comments to C.R.C.P. 16, 26, 30, 31, 33, 34, and 36.

[3] The threat and, when required, application, of sanctions is necessary to convince litigants of the importance of full disclosure. Because the 2015 amendments also require more complete disclosures, Rule 37(a)(4) now authorizes, for motions to compel disclosures or discovery, imposition of sanctions against the losing party unless its actions ''were substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses manifestly unjust.'' This change is intended to make it easier for judges to impose sanctions.

[4] On the other hand, consistent with recent supreme court cases such as Pinkstaff v. Black & Decker (U.S.), Inc., 211 P.3d 698 (Colo. 2009), Rule 37(c) is amended to reduce the likelihood of preclusion of previously undisclosed evidence ''unless such failure has not caused or will not cause significant harm, or such preclusion is disproportionate to that harm.'' When preclusion applied ''unless the failure is harmless,'' it has been too easy for the objecting party to show some ''harm,'' and thereby cause preclusion of otherwise important evidence, which, in some circumstances, conflicts with the court's decisions.

Reasonable discretion must be exercised in applying this rule. Weissman v. District Court, 189 Colo. 497, 543 P.2d 519 (1975).

A party should not be denied a day in court because of an inflexible application of a procedural rule. Todd v. Bear Valley Vill. Apts., 980 P.2d 973 (Colo. 1999); Camp Bird Colo., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Ouray, 215 P.3d 1277 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court should impose the least severe sanction, commensurate with the extent of the violation, contemplated in this section. Pinkstaff v. Black & Decker (U.S.), Inc., 211 P.3d 698 (Colo. 2009).

Specific finding of prejudice not required for award of attorney fees under section (a)(4). Hauer v. McMullin, 2015 COA 90, 421 P.3d 1154, rev'd on other grounds, 2018 CO 57, 420 P.3d 271.

"Opportunity to be heard", as used in section (a)(4)(A), does not mandate that a separate hearing be held before sanctions may be imposed. People ex rel. Pub. Utils. Comm'n v. Entrup, 143 P.3d 1120 (Colo. App. 2006).

C.R.C.P. 26 to 36 and this rule must be construed together along with the requirement that plaintiff establish a prima facie case for punitive damages, as a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to discovery of defendant's financial information. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

The 2015 amendment to C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B) that expert testimony "shall be limited to matters disclosed in detail in the [expert] report" does not create mandatory exclusion of expert testimony. Instead, the harm and proportionality analysis under section (c) of this rule remains the proper framework for determining sanctions for discovery violations. Section (c)(1) works in conjunction with rule 26 to authorize the trial court to sanction a party for failing to comply with discovery requirements. Catholic Health v. Earl Swensson Assocs., 2017 CO 94, 403 P.3d 185.

Civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. Based on §§ 16-8-115 to 16-8-117 and on the special nonadversary nature of a release inquiry, the participants in release proceedings do not have the broad right of discovery as provided in the rules of civil procedure. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Under C.R.C.P. 81(a), the procedure in release hearings under § 16-8-115 is so inconsistent and in conflict with the rules of civil procedure as to make civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Tripartite balancing inquiry undertaken when right to confidentiality invoked. When the right to confidentiality is invoked to prevent disclosure of personal materials or information, a tripartite balancing inquiry must be undertaken by the court, as follows: (1) Does the party seeking to come within the protection of the right to confidentiality have a legitimate expectation that the materials or information will not be disclosed? (2) is disclosure nonetheless required to serve a compelling state interest? and (3) if so, will the necessary disclosure occur in that manner which is least intrusive with respect to the right to confidentiality? Martinelli v. District Court, 199 Colo. 163, 612 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Court may order sanction if order sufficient. Where order required defendant to produce "requested" documents, plaintiff's motion to compel such production clearly listed the types of documents defendant was to produce, and evidence established that the requested documents were either in the defendant's custody or control, the court could properly order a sanction pursuant to section (b)(2)(A). N.S. by L.C.-K. v. S.S., 709 P.2d 6 (Colo. App. 1985).

A court is not required to, sua sponte, convert a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute into a motion for sanctions under this rule. Cornelius v. River Ridge Ranch Landowners Ass'n, 202 P.3d 564 (Colo. 2009).

Sanctions for destruction of evidence may not be awarded under this rule absent an order compelling production. However, under a court's inherent powers, sanctions for the destruction of evidence may be awarded. Lauren Corp. v. Century Geophysical Corp., 953 P.2d 200 (Colo. App. 1998).

Plaintiff's motion for sanctions for destruction of evidence denied because defendant was not provided with clear, prompt notice that a complaint would be filed and evidence was preserved for a year and a half after incident. Defendant's conduct in discarding evidence was not in bad faith. Castillo v. Chief Alternative, LLC, 140 P.3d 234 (Colo. App. 2006).

The appellate standard of review governing sanctions under this rule is whether the tribunal that imposed the sanction abused its discretion. When three separate hearings on the merits were vacated, and proceedings deadlocked for 18 months by claimant's refusal to sign an unconditional release, the sanction of dismissal was not an abuse of discretion. Sheid v. Hewlett Packard, 826 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court may not impose sanctions under section (b)(2) where no violation of a court order has occurred. O'Reilly v. Physicians Mut. Ins. Co., 992 P.2d 644 (Colo. App. 1999).

Sovereign immunity does not bar an award of attorney fees against a public entity because sovereign immunity does not apply unless statutorily created and the Colorado Governmental Immunity Act does not provide immunity for an award of attorney fees against a public entity. C.K. v. People, 2017 CO 111, 407 P.3d 566.

Rule as basis for jurisdiction. See Beebe v. Pierce, 185 Colo. 34, 521 P.2d 1263 (1974).

Applied in City & County of Denver v. District Court, 199 Colo. 223, 607 P.2d 984 (1980); Ricci v. Davis, 627 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1981); Wilson v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 633 P.2d 493 (Colo. App. 1981); Cross v. District Court, 643 P.2d 39 (Colo. 1982); Caldwell v. District Court, 644 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1982); Biella v. State Dept. of Hwys., 652 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982); Black ex rel. Bayless v. Cullar, 665 P.2d 1029 (Colo. App. 1983); Asamera Oil (U.S.) Inc. v. KMOCO Oil Co., 759 P.2d 808 (Colo. App. 1988); Colo. State Bd. of Nursing v. Lang, 842 P.2d 1383 (Colo. App. 1992).

II. MOTION FOR ORDER.

A. In General.

Motion to compel discovery is committed to discretion of trial court and will be upheld on appeal absent a clear abuse of discretion. Gagnon v. District Court, 632 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1981).

Order reviewable in certain circumstances. Orders pertaining to pretrial discovery are interlocutory in nature and are not ordinarily reviewable in an original proceeding. Because, however, the exercise of original jurisdiction is discretionary and governed by the particular circumstances of the case, there are exceptions to this general rule when, for example, a pretrial discovery order significantly departs from the controlling standards of discovery, or when a pretrial discovery order will cause a party unwarranted damage that cannot be cured on appeal, such as where treatment records are protected from disclosure by statutory privileges. Clark v. District Court, 668 P.2d 3 (Colo. 1983).

When supreme court will review denial of motion to compel. While orders pertaining to pretrial discovery are interlocutory in nature and generally not reviewable, the supreme court will exercise original jurisdiction where the trial courts denial of a petitioner's motion to compel discovery will preclude the petitioner from obtaining information vital to his claims for relief. Hawkins v. District Court, 638 P.2d 1372 (Colo. 1982).

Trial court properly declined to award attorney's fees to nonparty deponent who moved the court not for a protective order but for an order striking defense counsel's endorsement of nonparty as an expert witness without any request for attorney's fees. Roberts-Henry v. Richter, 802 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court finding that discovery motion was "not without justification" is insufficient to support denial of award of attorney's fees to person opposing motion which was denied. A remand is necessary because trial court must find that denied motion was "substantially justified" to deny award of attorney's fees to opponent of motion. Roberts-Henry v. Richter, 802 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1990).

B. Failure to Answer.

Sections (a)(1) and (d) are independent. The wording of the two sections (a)(1) and (d) of this rule establishes that these sections are independent significance and operation. Petrini v. Sidwell, 38 Colo. App. 454, 558 P.2d 447 (1976).

The requirement of a motion and order under section (a)(1) should not be read into the provisions of section (d) as a condition precedent to entry of default judgment. Petrini v. Sidwell, 38 Colo. App. 454, 558 P.2d 447 (1976).

When answers to interrogatories are not made, or are defective in some particular, the remedy is to compel proper answers, and one may not expect an answer on file to be disregarded by the court on the basis of technical defects unless he has properly raised the defects for consideration by the court. Moses v. Moses, 180 Colo. 398, 505 P.2d 1302 (1973).

But employees, particularly nonresidents, of corporation cannot be compelled to answer or produce private records. Corporations are "sui generis", and a suit against a principal is not a suit against its agents or employees. So the fact that defendants are sued by a foreign corporation in Colorado does not mean that all of the plaintiff-corporation's officers and employees located and domiciled outside Colorado are subject to the jurisdiction of Colorado courts. Moreover, no employer, corporate or otherwise, can compel its personnel to travel to a foreign state or furnish their private records for the use of its opponents. Solliday v. District Court, 135 Colo. 489, 313 P.2d 1000 (1957).

C. Award of Expenses of Motion.

Entry of an award is mandatory under section (a)(3). Graefe & Graefe v. Beaver Mesa Exploration, 695 P.2d 767 (Colo. App. 1984).

Entry of an award is discretionary under section (a)(4). Where party's objection to disclosure was based on a good-faith belief that the documents sought exceeded the scope of permissible discovery and that failure to apply for a protective order would waive its objection to the admissibility of evidence, the court did not abuse its discretion in denying an award of attorney fees in connection with the motion. DA Mtn. Rentals, LLC v. Lodge at Lionshead Phase III Condo. Ass'n, 2016 COA 141, 409 P.3d 564.

Although wife's motion in dissolution of marriage action included language used in C.R.C.P. 26(c), neither the motion nor the argument made at the hearing indicated that she was requesting discovery and the trial court had no authority to assess attorney fees pursuant to this rule. In re Smith, 757 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1988).

III. FAILURE TO COMPLY.

A. Sanctions by Court in District.

Strict compliance with contempt procedures must be followed before jurisdiction to adjudicate contempt and punishment therefor attaches. Metcalf v. Roberts, 158 Colo. 255, 406 P.2d 103 (1965).

Where the order of the court is one requiring a party to answer ''any questions desired to be asked by counsel'', violation of such a broad order cannot be adjudicated a contempt under this rule. Metcalf v. Roberts, 158 Colo. 255, 406 P.2d 103 (1965).

Sections (a) and (b)(1) of this rule must be read together and contemplate a specific order to answer specific questions, followed by an opportunity to resume the taking of the deposition, and, if there then occurs a refusal by the deponent to answer the specific questions as ordered, citation for contempt may issue. Metcalf v. Roberts, 158 Colo. 255, 406 P.2d 103 (1965).

Party must refuse to be sworn or answer to be in contempt. Where there is no contention that a party refused to be sworn or that he refused to answer any question after being directed to do so by the court, which are the only circumstances from which contempt of court will lie under section (b)(1) of this rule, then it is error for a court to find a party in contempt. Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952), aff'd, 130 Colo. 504, 277 P.2d 232 (1954).

A party who fails to attend the taking of a deposition cannot be adjudged in contempt under section (b)(1) of this rule. Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952), aff'd, 130 Colo. 504, 277 P.2d 232 (1954).

B. Sanctions by Court in Which Action is Pending.

This rule provides that under limited circumstances if corporate officials fail to testify in a suit concerning the corporation, as may be required by the court, then certain pleading penalties may be invoked against the corporation, but not the corporation's agents or employees, and particularly those residing in another state. Solliday v. District Court, 135 Colo. 489, 313 P.2d 1000 (1957).

Pleading penalties may be invoked. If corporate officials fail to testify in a suit concerning the corporation, as may be required by our courts, then certain pleading penalties may be invoked against the corporation. Weissman v. District Court, 189 Colo. 497, 543 P.2d 519 (1975).

Default judgment should be set aside where trial court enters the default in the absence of any showing that the party against whom the default is entered had personal knowledge of the duties imposed upon him by a pretrial order and without a showing that the three-day notice of application for default requirement of C.R.C.P. 55(b)(2), has been observed. Colo. Ranch Estates, Inc. v. Halvorson, 163 Colo. 146, 428 P.2d 917 (1967).

Gross negligence on the part of counsel resulting in a default judgment being entered pursuant to section (b)(2)(C) of this rule is considered excusable neglect on the part of the client entitling him to have the judgment set aside under C.R.C.P. 60(b), for to hold otherwise, would be to punish the innocent client for the gross negligence of his attorney. Temple v. Miller, 30 Colo. App. 49, 488 P.2d 252 (1971).

Finding of willfulness or bad faith not required. Entry of a default judgment under section (b)(2) does not require a finding of willfulness or bad faith on the part of the disobedient party. Callahan v. Wadsworth Ltd., 669 P.2d 141 (Colo. App. 1983).

Judgment dismissing complaint under section (b)(2) does not require a finding of willfulness or bad faith by disobedient party. McRill v. Guar. Fed. Savings & Loan Ass'n, 682 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1984).

Notice requirement of C.R.C.P. 55(b)(2) must be scrupulously adhered to; however, default judgment is permissible even though proper time between service and entry of judgment was not met where the trial court's order was sufficiently clear to provide requisite notice to defendant that failure to provide discovery could result in entry of a default judgment. Muck v. Stubblefield, 682 P.2d 1237 (Colo. App. 1984); Audio-Visual Sys., Inc. v. Hopper, 762 P.2d 696 (Colo. App. 1988).

Appropriateness of sanction not held error. Although sanction establishing personal jurisdiction over defendant was overbroad and improper in relation to the motion on which it was based, it did not constitute reversible error because evidence adduced at the hearing was sufficient to establish personal jurisdiction. N.S. by L.C.-K. v. S.S., 709 P.2d 6 (Colo. App. 1985).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in accepting plaintiffs' interpretation of contract as sanction for defendants' unexcused failure to appear for scheduled depositions. Scrima v. Goodley, 731 P.2d 766 (Colo. App. 1986).

Dismissal is not required where corporation's C.R.C.P. 30(b)(6) deponent failed to have personal knowledge regarding the question specified in the deposition subpoena, despite the fact that the district court's sanction of an award of costs did not cure the prejudice to the party noticing the deposition. Mun. Subdist., Northern Colo. Water Conservancy Dist. v. OXY USA, Inc., 990 P.2d 701 (Colo. 1999).

Court did not abuse its discretion in failing to impose attorney fees as sanction for failure to respond to discovery requests in post-dissolution of marriage modification of child support case. In re Emerson, 77 P.3d 923 (Colo. App. 2003).

IV. EXPENSES ON FAILURE TO ADMIT.

Law reviews. For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 39 Dicta 133 (1962).

The awarding of costs is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. White, 146 Colo. 595, 362 P.2d 196 (1961); Lamont v. Riverside Irrigation Dist., 179 Colo. 134, 498 P.2d 1150 (1972).

The awarding of costs is within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be interfered with on appeal absent an abuse of that discretion. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys Ass'n v. Wilch, Smith & Brock, 42 Colo. App. 30, 589 P.2d 510 (1978).

Trial court erred in not awarding reasonable costs and attorney fees incurred by the defendant in disproving plaintiff's denial of fact which was material in proving truth of statement charged as defamatory in libel action. Gomba v. McLaughlin, 180 Colo. 232, 504 P.2d 337 (1972).

Under section (c) of this rule, there must be something more than simply a refused admission and its subsequent proof. Lamont v. Riverside Irrigation Dist., 179 Colo. 134, 498 P.2d 1150 (1972).

Under this rule, such costs are awarded only upon proper finding of the requirements by the trial court. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. White, 146 Colo. 595, 362 P.2d 196 (1961).

The absence of an express finding of good faith on the part of one party does not entitle the other party to recover. Lamont v. Riverside Irrigation Dist., 179 Colo. 134, 498 P.2d 1150 (1972).

V. FAILURE TO DISCLOSE.

Section (c) provides for the exclusion of non-disclosed evidence unless the failure to disclose is either substantially justified or harmless to the opposing party. Todd v. Bear Valley Vill. Apts., 980 P.2d 973 (Colo. 1999); Cook v. Fernandez-Rocha, 168 P.3d 505 (Colo. 2007); Trattler v. Citron, 182 P.3d 674 (Colo. 2008); Warden v. Exempla, Inc., 2012 CO 74, 291 P.3d 30.

When evaluating whether a failure to disclose is harmless under section (c), the inquiry is whether the failure to disclose will prejudice the opposing party by denying the party an adequate opportunity to defend against that evidence. Todd v. Bear Valley Vill. Apartments, 980 P.2d 973 (Colo. 1999); Farm Credit of S. Colo. v. Mason, 2017 COA 42, __ P.3d __, rev'd on other grounds, 2018 CO 46, 419 P.3d 975.

For a non-exhaustive list of factors identified by federal courts that may be used to guide a trial court in evaluating whether a failure to disclose is either substantially justified or harmless, see Todd v. Bear Valley Vill. Apts., 980 P.2d 973 (Colo. 1999).

Failure to disclose was harmless under the facts of this case. Todd v. Bear Valley Vill. Apts., 980 P.2d 973 (Colo. 1999).

Reading section (c) of this rule together with C.R.C.P. 26(a) and 26(c), a party may request sanctions based on the opposing party's providing, without substantial justification, misleading disclosures or its failure, without substantial justification, seasonably to correct misleading disclosures. In legal malpractice case, because the trial court did not consider the defendant's claim that attorneys representing plaintiff provided misleading disclosures or failed seasonably to correct such disclosures, it incorrectly denied the motion under section (c) of this rule. Brown v. Silvern, 141 P.3d 871 (Colo. App. 2005).

Because section (c) expressly requires the court to afford an opportunity to be heard, on remand, trial court must hold a hearing on defendant's motion seeking sanctions and attorney fees from plaintiff's attorneys. In doing so, the court must determine whether the disclosures were misleading or there was a failure seasonably to supplement misleading disclosures and, if so, whether the failure was either substantially justified or harmless, employing the factors outlined in Todd v. Bear Valley Vill. Apts., 980 P.2d 973 (Colo. 1999); Brown v. Silvern, 141 P.3d 871 (Colo. App. 2005).

Trial court abused its discretion in precluding expert witness testimony. Where plaintiff failed to fully disclose the testimonial history of expert witnesses as required by C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)(I) but otherwise provided all required disclosures, the entire proposed testimony of the expert witnesses could not be considered undisclosed evidence and witness preclusion was a disproportionately harsh sanction. Because sanctions should be directly commensurate with the prejudice caused to the opposing party, in lieu of witness preclusion, the trial court should have considered use of the alternative sanctions referenced in section (c). Trattler v. Citron, 182 P.3d 674 (Colo. 2008); Erskine v. Beim, 197 P.3d 225 (Colo. App. 2008).

Trial court abused its discretion in denying motion for extension of time for C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2) expert witness without conducting an inquiry into the harmlessness of party's non-compliance with C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2). Cook v. Fernandez-Rocha, 168 P.3d 505 (Colo. 2007).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in striking affirmative defenses where defendant failed to respond to motion for limited sanctions and thereby failed to show that its failure to make initial disclosure was harmless. Furthermore, in striking the affirmative defenses the court did not deny defendants the opportunity to be heard because there were still issues of fact that could be challenged. Weize Co., LLC v. Colo. Reg'l Constr., 251 P.3d 489 (Colo. App. 2010).

Trial court abused its discretion in barring an expert medical witness where the facts of the case showed that plaintiff's untimely disclosure of the expert witness was substantially justified because it resulted from the progressive nature of the plaintiff's alleged injuries, the expert's testimony was potentially central to the plaintiff's case, and the delayed disclosure was harmless to the defendant because the trial date had not yet been set. Berry v. Keltner, 208 P.3d 247 (Colo. 2009).

Failure to properly disclose expert rebuttal testimony was harmless because the excluded testimony was important to plaintiff's case, should not have surprised defendant, and did not disrupt the trial and there was no evidence that plaintiffs acted in bad faith. Accordingly, trial court abused its discretion in striking rebuttal testimony. Warden v. Exempla, Inc., 2012 CO 74, 291 P.3d 30.

Late disclosure did not cause prejudice. County's untimely disclosure of witnesses and exhibits required under C.R.C.P. 26(a) did not constitute serious misconduct that denied defendant an adequate opportunity to defend against the witnesses and exhibits. Camp Bird Colo., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Ouray, 215 P.3d 1277 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court was not required to preclude expert witness's entire testimony. Where expert's report was submitted 11 days before trial and defendant knew the substance of the expert's testimony, had received all other disclosures required by C.R.C.P. 26, and deposed the expert before trial, trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing expert to testify after redacting portions of the report that previously had not been made known to the defendant. Camp Bird Colo., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Ouray, 215 P.3d 1277 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by precluding expert witness's testimony. The sanction of preclusion of expert medical witness was not disproportionate because it was based not only on witness's failure to fully disclose testimonial history, but also on witness's failure to produce materials used to formulate opinions pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(a)(2)(B)(I). Clements v. Davies, 217 P.3d 912 (Colo. App. 2009).

No abuse of discretion by trial court in excluding evidence of settlement between general contractor and homeowners. Trial court struck information contained in new disclosures because it was untimely. It apparently accepted subcontractors' argument that allowing information about newly disclosed settlement would be unfairly prejudicial to them and that the settlement was not binding on them. Trial court acknowledged public policy encouraging settlements but noted that indemnification claim was present from the beginning of litigation and all parties had time to prepare for it. D.R. Horton, Inc.-Denver v. Bischoff & Coffman Constr., LLC, 217 P.3d 1262 (Colo. App. 2009).

VI. FAILURE OF PARTY TO ATTEND DEPOSITION.

Sections (a)(1) and (d) are independent. The wording of the two sections (a)(1) and (d) of this rule establishes that these sections are of independent significance and operation. Petrini v. Sidwell, 38 Colo. App. 454, 558 P.2d 447 (1976).

The requirement of a motion and order under section (a)(1) should not be read into the provisions of section (d) as a condition precedent to entry of default judgment. Petrini v. Sidwell, 38 Colo. App. 454, 558 P.2d 447 (1976).

For intent of 1970 amendment, see Petrini v. Sidwell, 38 Colo. App. 454, 558 P.2d 447 (1976).

Under this rule if the failure to appear before the officer who is to take the deposition is willful, the court, on notice and motion, may strike out all or any part of the pleadings, dismiss the action or proceeding, or enter judgment by default against the party so failing. Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. District Court, 126 Colo. 217, 247 P.2d 903 (1952).

There must be a clear showing of "willful failure". The court should not resort to the drastic action of dismissing a complaint for failure to appear for a deposition in the absence of a clear showing that the party ''willfully fails'' to respond. Manning v. Manning, 136 Colo. 380, 317 P.2d 329 (1957).

A trial court may rule confidential information admissible as a discovery sanction when the violating party fails to object timely to the discovery requests which originally sought confidential information. Scott v. Matlack, Inc., 39 P.3d 1160 (Colo. 2002).

Default judgment proper where party fails to appear for deposition. Judgment by default may be entered against a party who willfully fails to appear in response to a proper notice to have his deposition taken under this rule. Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952), aff'd, 130 Colo. 504, 277 P.2d 232 (1954).

Default and judgment properly taken against party where he refuses to answer interrogatories or produce documents. Where interrogatories are properly served on a party and he is also duly served with an order for production of documents pertinent to the issues involved in the cause, and the party fails and refuses either to answer the interrogatories or produce the documents ordered by the court, then a default and judgment is properly taken against that party for such refusal. Johnson v. George, 119 Colo. 594, 206 P.2d 345 (1949).

Before the penalty of default is imposed, there must be given an opportunity to show cause for nonappearance. Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952), aff'd, 130 Colo. 504, 277 P.2d 232 (1954).

This rule requires that, before a default can be entered, it must be on "motion and notice", including the three-day notice requirement of C.R.C.P. 55(b)(2), where the party against whom judgment by default is sought has appeared in the action. Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952), aff'd, 130 Colo. 504, 277 P.2d 232 (1954).

Contempt is not a penalty that goes along with a default judgment under this rule. Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952), aff'd, 130 Colo. 504, 277 P.2d 232 (1954).

Entering a default judgment is discretionary under this rule. This rule provides that where a party fails to appear for his deposition the court "may" enter a default judgment. Freeland v. Fife, 151 Colo. 339, 377 P.2d 942 (1963).

There is an abuse of discretion to enter default where party was financially unable to appear and offered to give deposition prior to trial. There was no willful failure of a nonresident party to appear for the taking of a deposition as would justify the trial court in dismissing that party's action where she was financially unable to pay her expenses to the place where the deposition was to be taken; since there are other procedures available to the opposing party by way of interrogatories and requests for admissions which afford protection against surprise, and counsel for the nonappearing party offered to have the party appear a few days prior to the date of trial, thereby involving the expenditure of but one trip and not denying the opposing party his right to a deposition. Manning v. Manning, 136 Colo. 380, 317 P.2d 329 (1957).

There is no abuse of discretion in not entering default where party offered to appear in another place. Where a party, a resident of another state, notified counsel for the other party that she either could not or would not appear at the place in Colorado indicated in the notice to take her deposition, but would be available at another place in Colorado for such purpose, and did not appear at the place indicated, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a motion to strike the nonappearing party's answer and enter a default judgment under section (d) of this rule. Freeland v. Fife, 151 Colo. 339, 377 P.2d 942 (1963).

The trial court must consider whether a party's failure to comply with discovery was willful or in bad faith in determining which sanctions should be applied under section (d). Petrini v. Sidwell, 38 Colo. App. 454, 558 P.2d 447 (1976).

Imposition of default judgment is a drastic sanction requiring specific finding of willfulness, bad faith, or culpable fault consisting of at least gross negligence in failing to comply with discovery obligations. Kwik Way Stores, Inc., v. Caldwell, 745 P.2d 672 (Colo. 1987).

Finding of willful disobedience justifies imposition of default. Audio-Visual Sys., Inc. v. Hopper, 762 P.2d 696 (Colo. App. 1988); Kennedy by and through Kennedy v. Pelster, 813 P.2d 845 (Colo. App. 1991).

Before entering order of dismissal, court is required to consider and to determine whether plaintiffs had the practical ability to pay the attorney fees awarded. Lewis v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc., 841 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1992).

Sanction of dismissal should be imposed only if the sanctioned party has engaged in culpable conduct consisting of willful disobedience, a flagrant disregard of that party's discovery obligations, or a substantial deviation from reasonable care in complying with those obligations. Lewis v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc., 841 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1992).

Party's pattern of noncompliance and sabotage in connection with court-ordered psychiatric examination warranted dismissal under section (b)(2). Newell v. Engel, 899 P.2d 273 (Colo. App. 1994).

Failure to pay attorneys fees and costs can result in dismissal only if it is established that such failure was willful or in bad faith, and not because of an inability to pay. Lewis v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc., 841 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1992).

If there is a genuine factual issue as to the party's ability to pay, the trial court must undertake to resolve that issue and to adopt sufficient findings and conclusions to disclose the basis for its decision. Lewis v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc., 841 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1992).

The actions of a party acting as "next friend" for a minor plaintiff cannot be the basis for punitive sanctions against the minor where there is no evidence the minor refused to cooperate in discovery and there are lesser sanctions to compel discovery which would not result in dismissal of the minor's claim for events beyond his control. Kennedy by and through Kennedy v. Pelster, 813 P.2d 845 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trials

ANALYSIS BY RULE

CHAPTER 5

TRIALS

Rule 38. Right to Trial by Jury

(a) Exercise of Right. Upon the filing of a demand and the simultaneous payment of the requisite jury fee by any party in actions wherein a trial by jury is provided by constitution or by statute, including actions for the recovery of specific real or personal property, with or without damages, or for money claimed as due on contract, or as damages for breach of contract, or for injuries to person or property, all issues of fact shall be tried by a jury. The jury fee is not refundable; however, a demanding party may waive that party's demand for trial by jury pursuant to section (e) of this rule.

(b) Demand. Any party may demand a trial by jury of any issue triable by a jury by filing and serving upon all other parties, pursuant to Rule 5(d), a demand therefor at any time after the commencement of the action but not later than 14 days after the service of the last pleading directed to such issue, except that in actions subject to mandatory arbitration under Rule 109.1 the demand for trial by jury shall be filed and served not later than 14 days following a demand for trial de novo. A demand for trial by jury may be endorsed upon a pleading. The demanding party shall pay the requisite jury fee upon the filing of the demand.

(c) Jury Fees. When a party to an action has exercised the right to demand a trial by jury, every other party to such action shall also pay the requisite jury fee unless such other party, pursuant to Rule 5(d), files and serves a notice of waiver of the right to trial by jury within 14 days after service of the demand.

(d) Specification of Issues. A demand may specify the issues to be tried to the jury; in the absence of such specification, the party filing the demand shall be deemed to have demanded trial by jury of all issues so triable. If a party demands trial by jury on fewer than all of the issues so triable, any other party, within 14 days after service of the demand, may file and serve a demand for trial by jury of any other issues so triable.

(e) Waiver; Withdrawal. The failure of a party to file and serve a demand for trial by jury and simultaneously pay the requisite jury fee as required by this Rule constitutes a waiver of that party's right to trial by jury. A demand for trial by jury made pursuant to this rule may not subsequently be withdrawn in the absence of the written consent of every party who has demanded a trial by jury and paid the requisite jury fee and of every party who has failed to waive the right to trial by jury and paid the requisite jury fee.

II. WHERE JURY RIGHT EXISTS.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, ''One Year Review of Domestic Relations'', see 39 Dicta 102 (1962).

Annotator's note. Since section (a) of this rule is similar to § 191 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Under the Colorado constitution, trial by a jury in a civil action is not a matter of right. Parker v. Plympton, 85 Colo. 87, 273 P. 1030 (1928); Kahm v. People, 83 Colo. 300, 264 P. 718 (1928); Gibson v. Angros, 30 Colo. App. 95, 491 P.2d 87 (1971); Continental Title Co. v. District Court, 645 P.2d 1310 (Colo. 1982).

There is no constitutional right to a trial by jury in civil actions. Johnson v. Neel, 123 Colo. 377, 229 P.2d 939 (1951); Federal Lumber Co. v. Wheeler, 643 P.2d 31 (Colo. 1981); Kaitz v. District Court, 650 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1982); Snow Basin, Ltd. v. Boettcher & Co., 805 P.2d 1151 (Colo. App. 1990); First Nat. Bank of Meeker v. Theos, 794 P.2d 1055 (Colo. App. 1990).

The right to jury trials in civil cases is regulated by this rule. Gibson v. Angros, 30 Colo. App. 95, 491 P.2d 87 (1971).

Where an action is purely legal in nature, the parties are entitled to a jury trial. Miller v. Carnation Co., 33 Colo. App. 62, 516 P.2d 661 (1973); Zimmerman v. Mozer, 10 Bankr. 1002 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

No other rule of civil procedure enlarges the category of cases in which the right to jury trial shall be had. Miller v. District Court, 154 Colo. 125, 388 P.2d 763 (1964).

This rule itself does not enlarge upon the right to jury trial as those rights were fixed by the former code provisions and the judicial pronouncements thereunder. Miller v. District Court, 154 Colo. 125, 388 P.2d 763 (1964).

Law-equity distinction survives for determination of right to jury. Although law and equity have been merged under the Colorado rules of civil procedure, the law-equity distinction continues to survive for the purpose of determining whether there is a right to a jury trial in a civil action. Kaitz v. District Court, 650 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1982).

Issue of fact must be tried to jury upon demand. Although there is no constitutional right to a jury trial in civil cases in Colorado, an issue of fact must be tried to a jury upon demand in an action for personal injuries. Gleason v. Guzman, 623 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1981).

Generally in purely equitable cases, the trial must be to the court. Sieber v. Frink, 7 Colo. 148, 2 P. 901 (1883); Dohner v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 109 Colo. 35, 121 P.2d 661 (1942).

When the action is an equitable proceeding, the issues joined are to be tried by the court. Federal Lumber Co. v. Wheeler, 643 P.2d 31 (Colo. 1981).

Equity claims are triable by the court and not by jury. Claims sounding in equity are triable by the court and not by a jury. Worchester v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 172 Colo. 352, 473 P.2d 711 (1970); Faucett v. Hamill, 815 P.2d 989 (Colo. App. 1991).

In equity cases, neither party is entitled to a jury trial as a matter of right. Selfridge v. Leonard-Heffner Co., 51 Colo. 314, 117 P. 158 (1911).

There is no right to a jury trial in actions which historically were brought before courts of equity. Kaitz v. District Court, 650 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1982); Difede v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel., 763 P. 2d 298 (Colo. App. 1988), rev'd on other grounds, 780 P.2d 533 (Colo. 1989).

The right to trial by jury is guaranteed only in actions at law specifically named in section (a). Setchell v. Dellacroce, 169 Colo. 212, 454 P.2d 804 (1969); Gibson v. Angros, 30 Colo. App. 95, 491 P.2d 87 (1971).

Whether an issue of fact must be tried to a jury depends upon the character of the action in which the issue is joined. Setchell v. Dellacroce, 169 Colo. 212, 454 P.2d 804 (1969); Gibson v. Angros, 30 Colo. App. 95, 491 P.2d 87 (1971); Miller v. Carnation Co., 33 Colo. App. 62, 516 P.2d 661 (1973); Zimmerman v. Mozer, 10 Bankr. 1002 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

The character of the action determines whether an issue of fact is to be tried to a court or to a jury. Kaitz v. District Court, 650 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1982); Snow Basin Ltd. v. Boettcher & Co., 805 P.2d 1151 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where there were no disputed facts with respect to the plaintiff's forcible entry and detainer claim, and the factual issues to be tried related only to equitable defenses asserted by the defendant, no jury was required. RTV,

It is the nature of the relief sought or defense asserted, not the nature of the factual issues presented, that determines whether the right to a jury exists. RTV, L.L.C. v. Grandote Int'l Ltd., 937 P.2d 768 (Colo. App. 1996).

Nature of issue does not determine trial by jury. The right to have an issue of fact tried by a jury is not determined by the nature of the issue. Danielson v. Gude, 11 Colo. 87, 17 P. 283 (1887); United Coal Co. v. Canon City Coal Co., 24 Colo. 116, 48 P. 1045 (1897); Cree v. Lewis, 49 Colo. 186, 112 P. 326 (1910).

"Basic thrust" doctrine involves a determination of whether a lawsuit, characterized as a whole, will be entitled to a jury under this rule, rather than applying the rule at the outset to each issue within the case. Zimmerman v. Mozer, 10 Bankr. 1002 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

A plaintiff's amended complaint supersedes its original complaint for purposes of the civil jury trial right. If a plaintiff files an amended complaint and a party properly demands a jury trial, the court should look to the claims in the amended complaint to determine whether the case may be tried to a jury. Mason v. Farm Credit of S. Colo., 2018 CO 46, 419 P.3d 975.

The original complaint filed in an action and not the counterclaim fixes the nature of the suit, by what arm of the court it should be tried, and whether either party is entitled to a jury trial. Miller v. District Court, 154 Colo. 125, 388 P.2d 763 (1964).

The complaint fixes the nature of a suit. Miller v. Carnation Co., 33 Colo. App. 62, 516 P.2d 661 (1973); Zimmerman v. Mozer, 10 Bankr. 1002 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

Where the original petition and the third-party complaint states actions sounding in equity, it is proper to deny the third-party respondent's jury demand. In re Malone v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 658 P.2d 284 (Colo. App. 1982).

It is the character of the complaint, rather than that of any counterclaims or defenses subsequently asserted, that fixes the nature of the suit and determines whether it should be tried in equity or at law. First Nat. Bank of Meeker v. Theos, 794 P.2d 1055 (Colo. App. 1990).

A cross-complaint may present issues properly triable to a jury. Miller v. District Court, 154 Colo. 125, 388 P.2d 763 (1964).

There is no material difference between this rule and the provision of the former Code of Civil Procedure on the subject of compulsory counterclaims to justify abandonment of the rule limiting the right to a jury. Miller v. District Court, 154 Colo. 125, 388 P.2d 763 (1964).

Where legal and equitable claims are joined in a complaint, the court must determine whether the basic thrust of the action is equitable or legal in nature. Miller v. Carnation Co., 33 Colo. App. 62, 516 P.2d 661 (1973); Zimmerman v. Mozer, 10 B.R. 1002 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981); Motz v. Jammaron, 676 P.2d 1211 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. dismissed, 680 P.2d 238 (Colo. 1984); First Nat. Bank of Meeker v. Theos, 794 P.2d 1055 (Colo. App. 1990); Zick v. Krob, 872 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1993); Mason v. Farm Credit of S. Colo., 2018 CO 46, 419 P.3d 975.

There are two methods to determine whether an action is legal or equitable. One is to look to the nature of the remedy sought. The second is to look at the historical nature of the right. Mason v. Farm Credit of S. Colo., 2018 CO 46, 419 P.3d 975.

It is generally preferred to look at the nature of the remedy sought to determine whether a claim is legal or equitable. Mason v. Farm Credit of S. Colo., 2018 CO 46, 419 P.3d 975.

Where plaintiff demands damages only in the event that equitable relief is impossible, he is not entitled as a matter of law to demand a jury. Setchell v. Dellacroce, 169 Colo. 212, 454 P.2d 804 (1969).

Until the plaintiff amends his complaint to strip him of his initial demand for equitable relief, he must be held to be pressing for that relief, in which case he is not entitled to demand jury trial. Setchell v. Dellacroce, 169 Colo. 212, 454 P.2d 804 (1969).

If a third-party defendant makes a timely demand for a jury trial, the third-party defendant would be entitled to a jury trial on the issues raised between him and the defendant, although not on those issues between the defendant and the plaintiff. Simpson v. Digiallonardo, 29 Colo. App. 556, 488 P.2d 208 (1971).

Where a third-party defendant properly demands a jury trial on issues raised by the parties concerning a matter clearly within the scope of this rule, it is error not to have its liability under the third-party complaint determined by a jury, and the fact that the other parties do not desire a jury trial is of no moment. Simpson v. Digiallonardo, 29 Colo. App. 556, 488 P.2d 208 (1971).

Either party on appeal from a county court to a district court should be entitled to a jury trial in the district court in actions set forth in this rule. Rupp v. Cool, 147 Colo. 18, 362 P.2d 396 (1961).

B. Application of Right.

Where plaintiffs seek damages and subsequent injunctive relief, there is a right to a jury trial on the legal issues. Miller v. Carnation Co., 33 Colo. App. 62, 516 P.2d 661 (1973).

Where plaintiffs pray primarily for equitable relief, and only in the alternative for a remedy at law, the character of the suit is equitable, and plaintiffs therefore are not entitled to a jury trial. Miller v. Carnation Co., 33 Colo. App. 62, 516 P.2d 661 (1973).

Trial court's characterization of an action as equitable was not contrary to law where the primary remedy sought resembled that afforded in actions for partition and where there were also claims for an accounting and for unjust enrichment, all of which are equitable claims. Zick v. Krob, 872 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1993).

A suit for specific performance is an equitable action, and being such, it is triable to the court without a jury. Plains Iron Works Co. v. Haggott, 72 Colo. 228, 210 P. 696 (1922).

Suit for specific performance is not "for the recovery of specific personal property". While the recovery of specific personal property may result from the successful prosecution of a suit for specific performance of a contract to transfer such personal property, the suit, nevertheless, is not one ''for the recovery of specific personal property'' within the meaning of this section. Plains Iron Works Co. v. Haggott, 72 Colo. 228, 210 P. 696 (1922).

Similarly, the fact that the equitable relief sought would require the conveyance of land does not bring the case within that portion of this rule requiring a jury trial in actions for the recovery of specific real property, inasmuch as that portion deals only with actions at law for the recovery of real property. Setchell v. Dellacroce, 169 Colo. 212, 454 P.2d 804 (1969).

The foreclosure of a mortgage is an equitable proceeding, and the issues joined are to be tried by the court. Neikirk v. Boulder Nat'l Bank, 53 Colo. 350, 127 P. 137 (1912); Miller v. District Court, 154 Colo. 125, 388 P.2d 763 (1964).

Actions seeking judicial foreclosure of liens have traditionally been considered equitable proceedings. Although such actions typically involve determinations of the existence and amount of indebtedness, and although any ensuing foreclosure decree typically includes a personal monetary award against the debtor founded in contract, the basic thrust of foreclosure proceedings has nevertheless been held to be equitable. First Nat. Bank of Meeker v. Theos, 794 P.2d 1055 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where the relief sought is an injunction, the action is therefore equitable in nature, and a defendant has no right to a jury trial. Gibson v. Angros, 30 Colo. App. 95, 491 P.2d 87 (1971).

Attachment and garnishment proceedings submitted to court. The remedies of attachment and garnishment were unknown at common law and exist only by reason of statute or rules of procedure enacted pursuant to statutory authority, and it is not error to submit fact issues in a garnishment proceeding to the court rather than to a jury. Worchester v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 172 Colo. 352, 473 P.2d 711 (1970).

Right to jury in replevin action. A replevin action is an action at law and traditionally carries with it the right to a jury trial. Zimmerman v. Mozer, 10 Bankr. 1002 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

Claims for replevin and conversion are legal in nature and defendant is entitled to a jury trial. Both claims primarily seek money damages, and historically were considered actions at law. Mason v. Farm Credit of S. Colo., 2018 CO 46, 419 P.3d 975.

Defendant entitled to jury trial where plaintiff's claims for relief, including replevin, conversion, theft, and fraud, are all traditionally triable to a jury. Citicorp Acceptance Co., Inc., v. Sittner, 772 P.2d 655 (Colo. App. 1989).

The Colorado supreme court denied certiorari in the case annotated under this catchline in the 1990 replacement volume. See Citicorp Acceptance Co., Inc. v. Sittner, 783 P.2d 838 (Colo. 1989).

The fact that an action is for a declaratory judgment is not, in and of itself, determinative of the type of action brought for purposes of determining whether there is a right to a trial by jury. Zick v. Krob, 872 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1993).

If the issue of fact involves a trust, it is triable to the court. Cree v. Lewis, 49 Colo. 186, 112 P. 326 (1910).

There is no right to jury trial in action to declare trust invalid. The right to jury trial granted by section (a) does not extend to actions to declare a trust invalid. Ayres v. King, 665 P.2d 594 (Colo. 1983).

Actions by beneficiary or ward against trustee or guardian in an existing trust or guardianship are generally, but not always, equitable in nature. Kaitz v. District Court, 650 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1982).

Where fraud in both the execution and the inducement is available as a defense in an action at law, then under this rule, the defendant is entitled to have this issue go to the jury in an action on a note. Atkinson v. Englewood State Bank, 141 Colo. 436, 348 P.2d 702 (1960).

The fact that plaintiff asks for a money judgment is by no means decisive that the action is one at law. Cree v. Lewis, 49 Colo. 186, 112 P. 326 (1910).

This rule does not prescribe a jury trial in an annulment proceeding as a matter of right. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

There is no right to jury trial in action to set aside fraudulent transfer. An action to set aside a fraudulent transfer is traditionally equitable and thus carries with it no right to a jury trial. Zimmerman v. Mozer, 10 Bankr. 1002 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

In litigation involving statutorily required uninsured motorist coverage, a tort claim against the uninsured motorist is distinct from the insured motorist's contract claim against his or her insurer. In the former case, where the uninsured motorist's liability has been determined by default, public policy precludes the insurer from insisting upon a jury trial although in some respects the insurer may be considered a codefendant. In the latter case, however, the amount of damages payable under the contract is an issue on which the insurer may demand a jury trial. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Brekke, 105 P.3d 177 (Colo. 2004).

There is no right to a jury trial in a mechanic's lien case. Federal Lumber Co. v. Wheeler, 643 P.2d 31 (Colo. 1981).

The air pollution control act contains no provision for trial by a jury or for penalty assessment by a jury. Lloyd A. Fry Roofing Co. v. State Dept. of Health Air Pollution Variance Bd., 191 Colo. 463, 553 P.2d 800 (1976).

There is not jury trial provision in action for repossession of collateral by secured party. Although this rule provides that a party is entitled to a jury trial upon demand in an action for the recovery of specific real or personal property, the rule is not intended to extend to actions involving the repossession of collateral by a secured party. Western Nat'l Bank v. ABC Drilling Co., 42 Colo. App. 407, 599 P.2d 942 (1979).

There is no right to a jury trial under the Colorado Consumer Protection Act. People v. Shifrin, 2014 COA 14, 342 P.3d 506.

III. DEMAND.

Upon compliance with this rule a party, to an action may have a jury trial as a matter of right. Jaynes v. Marrow, 144 Colo. 138, 355 P.2d 529 (1960).

Right to jury trial, once proper demand is made and fee is paid, may be lost only for reasons stated in C.R.C.P. 39(a). The trial court, in an action for payment of medical benefits, erred in denying the insured a jury trial on the basis that the insured failed to file jury instructions in accordance with C.R.C.P. 121. Neither C.R.C.P. 39(a) nor C.R.C.P. 121 includes a waiver provision on such basis. Whaley v. Keystone, 811 P.2d 404 (Colo. App. 1989).

This rule does not specifically cover the time within which demand for jury trial should be made in cases appealed from a county court to a district court. Rupp v. Cool, 147 Colo. 18, 362 P.2d 396 (1961).

If the demand for a jury trial in cases appealed from county court is made within a reasonable time prior to trial, and the trial court, under C.R.C.P. 40, is afforded an opportunity to arrange its trial calendar in an expeditious manner, the request for jury trial should be granted. Rupp v. Cool, 147 Colo. 18, 362 P.2d 396 (1961).

IV. WAIVER.

Law reviews. For note, ''Does a Motion for a Directed Verdict by Both Parties Constitute a Waiver of the Jury?'', see 3 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 67 (1930). For article, ''Selection of a Jury in a Civil Case'', see 33 Dicta 179 (1956).

Plaintiff specifically waived her right to a jury trial by not paying the jury fee in a timely manner. The second sentence of section (e) applies when a defendant timely requests a jury trial and, in response, a plaintiff then timely pays the jury fee. In that situation, the plaintiff would still be entitled to a jury trial even if the defendant attempts to withdraw his or her request for a jury trial. Crawford v. Melby, 89 P.3d 451 (Colo. App. 2003).

Deadline for jury fee may not be extended under C.R.C.P. 6(b) because the deadlines are set forth in statute. Defendant who failed to pay jury fee waived his right to a jury trial. Premier Members Fed. Credit Union v. Block, 2013 COA 128, 312 P.3d 276.

Failure to act in accordance with this rule waives right to jury trial regardless of the reasons given in excuse or for neglect. Jaynes v. Marrow, 144 Colo. 138, 355 P.2d 529 (1960).

One requesting a jury trial may not later withdraw that request unless his desire for a nonjury trial is acceded to by the remaining parties to the lawsuit. Forster v. Superior Court, 175 Colo. 444, 488 P.2d 202 (1971).

Rule 39. Trial by Jury or by the Court

(a) By Jury. When trial by jury has been demanded and the requisite jury fee has been paid pursuant to Rule 38, the action shall be designated upon the register of actions as a jury action. The trial shall be by jury of all issues so demanded unless (1) all parties who have demanded a trial by jury and paid the requisite jury fee and all parties who have failed to waive the right to trial by jury and paid the requisite jury fee have, in writing, waived their rights to trial by jury, or (2) the court upon motion or on its own initiative finds that a right to trial by jury of some or all of those issues does not exist, or (3) all parties demanding trial by jury fail to appear at trial.

(b) By the Court. Issues not demanded for trial by jury as provided in Rule 38 shall be tried by the court.

(c) Advisory Jury and Trial by Consent. In all actions not triable by a jury the court upon motion or on its own initiative may try any issue with an advisory jury, or, except in actions against the State of Colorado when a statute provides for trial without a jury, the court, with the consent of both parties, may order a trial with a jury.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Trials: Rules 38-53'', see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 571 (1951). For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 38 Dicta 133 (1961). For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 39 Dicta 133 (1962).

Applied in Kaitz v. District Court, 650 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1982).

II. BY JURY.

Agreement of parties regarding jury trial not binding on court. The trial court is not bound by the agreement of the parties regarding a jury trial if no right to a jury trial exists. Federal Lumber Co. v. Wheeler, 643 P.2d 31 (Colo. 1981).

Although a trial court may empanel an advisory jury over the objections of a party in an equitable action, the jury's findings in such advisory capacity do not constitute final or binding resolutions of disputed issues. Rather, the court remains the ultimate fact finder and is required to make findings and conclusions in support of its judgment. First Nat. Bank of Meeker v. Theos, 794 P.2d 1055 (Colo. App. 1990).

Failure to comply with demand is no grounds for reversal where no objection. Where formal demand for jury trial is made by a party, the cause thereafter proceeds to trial by the court without a jury, and there is no objection to such trial by either party, the unsuccessful party cannot thereafter secure reversal of the judgment entered against him upon the ground that there was no formal disposition of the demand for jury trial in strict compliance with section (a) of this rule. Johnson v. Neel, 123 Colo. 377, 229 P.2d 939 (1951).

Before the issue of proximate cause can be taken from the jury, the evidence must be undisputed and such that reasonable minds could reach but one conclusion. Roth v. Stark Lumber Co., 31 Colo. App. 121, 500 P.2d 145 (1972).

For cases construing § 196 of the former code of civil procedure which was supplanted by this rule, see Leahy v. Dunlap, 6 Colo. 552, (1883); Cerussite Mining Co. v. Anderson, 19 Colo. App. 307, 75 P. 158 (1903); Frank v. Bauer, 19 Colo. App. 445, 75 P. 930 (1904); Parker v. Plympton, 85 Colo. 87, 273 P. 1030 (1928); Hiner v. Cassiday, 92 Colo. 78, 18 P.2d 309 (1932); In re Estate of Eder, 94 Colo. 173, 29 P.2d 631 (1934).

This rule grants broad powers to a district judge to order a jury trial. Once a master is appointed, however, the district judge cannot summarily reject the master's report and order a jury trial in derogation of the requirement of C.R.C.P. 53 (e)(2). Dobler v. District Court, 806 P.2d 944 (Colo. 1991).

Right to jury trial, once proper demand is made and fee is paid, may be lost only for reasons stated in section (a) of this rule. The trial court, in an action for payment of medical benefits, erred in denying the insured a jury trial on the basis that the insured failed to file jury instructions in accordance with C.R.C.P. 121. Neither this rule nor C.R.C.P. 121 includes a waiver provision on such basis. Whaley v. Keystone, 811 P.2d 404 (Colo. App. 1989).

III. BY COURT.

Where a litigant acquiesces in a trial before the court, thereby consenting thereto, he cannot thereafter contend for the first time on appeal that a jury should have been called. Johnson v. Neel, 123 Colo. 377, 229 P.2d 939 (1951).

This rule permits the trial court, in its discretion, to order a jury trial of any and all issues. Jaynes v. Marrow, 144 Colo. 138, 355 P.2d 529 (1960).

If the trial court orders a jury trial, it may exercise its discretion without interference from the supreme court. Jaynes v. Marrow, 144 Colo. 138, 355 P.2d 529 (1960).

Trial courts may order a jury trial with a belated motion or none at all. Trial courts, either with a belated motion before them, with or without reasons stated therein, or without any motion at all, may order a jury trial, because it is within their discretion so to do. Jaynes v. Marrow, 144 Colo. 138, 355 P.2d 529 (1960).

A trial court is within its right and power in ordering a jury trial without a timely formal request therefor. Butters v. Wann, 147 Colo. 352, 363 P.2d 494 (1961).

Section (b) of this rule affords the court no discretion to grant an untimely request for a jury trial. Machol v. Sancetta, 924 P.2d 1197 (Colo. App. 1996).

Unlike federal practice, reasons for belated demand are unnecessary. In applying this rule, Colorado does not follow the interpretation of the federal trial courts that where a belated jury demand is made, counsel must give valid reasons for the request or else the trial court will not choose to exercise its discretion to consider it. Jaynes v. Marrow, 144 Colo. 138, 355 P.2d 529 (1960).

Judge need not give any reasons why he desires jury. The rule that ''judicial discretion must have some rational basis; it is not synonymous with judicial whim or caprice'' does not mean that a trial judge under section (b) of this rule has to give any reasons why he desires a jury in a case. Jaynes v. Marrow, 144 Colo. 138, 355 P.2d 529 (1960).

Since no reason need be given, the fact that the wrong reason is given for granting the motion is immaterial, because the trial court on its own motion can order a jury trial without giving any reason whatsoever. Jaynes v. Marrow, 144 Colo. 138, 355 P.2d 529 (1960).

Where the petitioner fails to tender the jury fee required by local district court rules, he is deemed to have waived his demand for a jury trial and this rule should not be used to overcome the waiver. McConnell v. District Court, 680 P.2d 528 (Colo. 1984).

Although this rule grants discretion to trial court to order a trial by jury without demand, such discretion is bounded by the proviso that the order be made only in an action in which the demand might have been made in the first place. Nowhere is discretion or authority given to trial court to grant a jury trial over a litigant's meritorious motion to strike demand. Motz v. Jammaron, 676 P.2d 1211 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. dismissed, 680 P.2d 238 (Colo. 1984).

Applied in Butters v. Wann, 147 Colo. 352, 363 P.2d 494 (1961).

IV. ADVISORY JURY AND TRIAL BY CONSENT.

Law reviews. For article, ''One Year Review of Domestic Relations'', see 39 Dicta 102 (1962).

This rule refers to two kinds of trials: (1) Cases not triable by a jury may, on motion or on the court's own initiative, be tried with an ''advisory jury''; (2) nonjury cases including nonjury statutory actions (with an exception) may, by consent of court and the parties, be tried with a ''jury''. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

In the first, an "advisory jury" acts; in the second, a "jury" acts. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

This rule takes care of two differing situations: In the first, a party may request that a nonjury case be tried to a jury and the adversary party may resist, and in such case, the court may grant the request but, since it has been resisted, may use the services of the jury in an advisory capacity only; in the second, parties and court consenting, the jury's verdict has the effect of a common-law verdict. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

Handling of issues of fact in equitable cause discretionary with court. It is discretionary with the court in equitable causes of action whether issues of fact shall be tried by the court or sent to a jury. Zimmerman v. Mozer, 10 B.R. 1002 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

In an equity cause, where issues are submitted to a jury, its verdict is merely advisory to the court and may be disregarded. McKelvy v. Cooper, 165 Colo. 102, 437 P.2d 346 (1968); Zimmerman v. Mozer, 10 B.R. 1002 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

Court never has been bound by conclusions of an advisory jury. In the trial of equity cases, the court may, on its own motion, invoke the aid of a jury to determine specific questions of fact. Such findings are, however, no more binding now than they were when the old chancery practice prevailed. Conclusions of the jury are in such cases simply advisory; they may be accepted and form the basis of decree or judgment, or they may be entirely disregarded. When the Code of Civil Procedure was first adopted, the contrary suggestion on this subject in the note on page 376 of ''Adams' Equity'' may have been applicable, but the enactment in 1879 clearly established the practice of trying chancery cases to the court without a jury; and it cannot now be correctly claimed that special findings of a jury in such cases are as binding as verdicts in actions in law. Hall v. Linn, 8 Colo. 264, 5 P. 641 (1885); Selfridge v. Leonard-Heffner Co., 51 Colo. 314, 117 P. 158, 1913B Ann. Cas. 282 (1911) (decided under § 191 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

The mere fact that an action is in equity does not bar the parties from a jury trial by consent wherein the jury's verdict has the same effect as it would at common law. Shuman v.

Tuxhorn, 29 Colo. App. 152, 481 P.2d 741 (1971).

Where one party demands a jury trial of a nonjury case, neither the other party nor court objects, and trial so proceeds, consent to such trial is deemed to have been given. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961); Shuman v. Tuxhorn, 29 Colo. App. 152, 481 P.2d 741 (1971).

Trial of nonjury action to a jury is jury trial in regular sense. Under this rule, the trial of a nonjury action to a jury, with the consent of both parties and the trial judge, is a jury trial in its regular sense as if trial to a jury had been a matter of right. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

In a trial by consent, the jury's verdict should have the same effect as if it were a common-law verdict. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961); Shuman v. Tuxhorn, 29 Colo. App. 152, 481 P.2d 741 (1971).

Consent to binding jury. Where complex procedural history of cases did not make clear that failure to object at each pretrial proceeding would be treated as consent to binding jury and where defendants made pretrial objections to binding jury in motion to bifurcate two cases, defendants did not consent to binding jury. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. v. DiFede, 780 P.2d 533 (Colo. 1989).

Status of jury may not be changed except by agreement. Once court and counsel embark upon a nonjury statutory proceeding in such manner as to treat it as a jury case, the status of the jury may not be changed except by agreement. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961); Shuman v. Tuxhorn, 29 Colo. App. 152, 481 P.2d 741 (1971).

The unilateral act of a trial court in changing the case from one of trial by consent to one in which an advisory verdict would be received is error, as such change could only have been accomplished by agreement of the parties and the court. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961); Shuman v. Tuxhorn, 29 Colo. App. 152, 481 P.2d 741 (1971).

A trial court does not err in refusing to try the issues with an advisory jury pursuant to the discretionary powers conferred upon the trial court by section (c) of this rule. Gibson v. Angros, 30 Colo. App. 95, 491 P.2d 87 (1971).

The air pollution control act contains no provision for trial by a jury or for penalty assessment by a jury. Lloyd A. Fry Roofing Co. v. State Dept. of Health Air Pollution Variance Bd., 191 Colo. 463, 553 P.2d 800 (1976).

Rule 40. Assignment of Cases for Trial

Subject to the directives of the Chief Justice of the Colorado Supreme Court, trial courts shall provide by rule for the placing of actions upon the trial calendar in such manner as they deem expedient. Precedence shall be given to actions entitled thereto.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Trials: Rules 38-53", see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 571 (1951).

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to § 193 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

In the interests of justice, trials must be expedited. Benster v. Bell, 83 Colo. 587, 267 P. 792 (1928); Scofield v. Scofield, 89 Colo. 409, 3 P.2d 794 (1931).

The right to a jury trial may not be utilized to disrupt a trial calendar and to obtain delay. Murray v. District Court, 189 Colo. 217, 539 P.2d 1254 (1975).

If it may be said that the setting of the cause for trial by the court of its own motion without notice is erroneous, a party must show where he was prejudiced by such action. Lux v. McLeod, 19 Colo. 465, 36 P. 246 (1894).

Where counsel is present at the time a cause is set for trial and makes no objection to the setting of the case, all irregularities in the notice of such setting and the service thereof are waived. Cerussite Mining Co. v. Anderson, 19 Colo. App. 307, 75 P. 158 (1903).

The fact that an attorney has other cases set for trial in another court at the same time does not excuse him or his client from being in attendance at the trial of a case regularly reached on the calendar of the court where no motion for a continuance or showing is made why the case should not proceed to trial; under such circumstances there is no abuse of discretion in the refusal of the trial court to set aside a judgment regularly entered. Diebold v. Diebold, 79 Colo. 7, 243 P. 630 (1926).

Applied in Continental Title Co. v. District Court, 645 P.2d 1310 (Colo. 1982).

Rule 41. Dismissal of Actions

(a) Voluntary Dismissal: Effect Thereof.

(1) By Plaintiff; By Stipulation. Subject to the provisions of Rule 23(e), of Rule 66, and of any statute, an action may be dismissed by the plaintiff without order of court upon payment of costs: (A) By filing a notice of dismissal at any time before filing or service by the adverse party of an answer or of a motion for summary judgment, whichever first occurs; or (B) by filing a stipulation of dismissal signed by all parties who have appeared in the action or by their attorneys. Unless otherwise stated in the notice of dismissal or stipulation, the dismissal is without prejudice, except that a notice of dismissal operates as an adjudication upon the merits when filed by a plaintiff who has once previously dismissed in any court an action based on or including the same claim.

(2) By Order of Court. Except as provided in subsection (a)(1) of this subdivision of this Rule, an action shall not be dismissed at the plaintiff's instance save upon order of the court and upon such terms and conditions as the court deems proper. If a counterclaim has been pleaded by a defendant prior to the service upon him of the plaintiff's motion to dismiss, the action shall not be dismissed against the defendant's objection unless the counterclaim can remain pending for independent adjudication by the court. Unless otherwise specified in the order, a dismissal under this subsection (2) is without prejudice.

(b) Involuntary Dismissal: Effect Thereof.

(1) By Defendant. For failure of a plaintiff to prosecute or to comply with these Rules or any order of court, a defendant may move for dismissal of an action or of any claim against him. After the plaintiff, in an action tried by the court without a jury, has completed the presentation of his evidence, the defendant, without waiving his right to offer evidence in the event the motion is not granted, may move for a dismissal on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. The court as trier of the facts may then determine them and render judgment against the plaintiff or may decline to render judgment until the close of all the evidence. If the court renders judgment on the merits against the plaintiff, the court shall make findings as provided in Rule 52. Unless the court in its order for dismissal otherwise specifies, a dismissal under this section (b) and any dismissal not provided for in this Rule, other than a dismissal for failure to prosecute, for lack of jurisdiction, for failure to file a complaint under Rule 3, or for failure to join a party under Rule 19, operates as an adjudication upon the merits.

(2) By the Court. Actions not prosecuted or brought to trial with due diligence may be dismissed by the court with prejudice after reasonable notice by the court and in accordance with Rule 121, section 1-10.

(3) All motions for dismissal for failure to prosecute shall be presented in accordance with Rule 121, section 1-10 and shall specify whether the movant requests dismissal with or without prejudice. All orders dismissing for failure to prosecute shall specify whether the dismissal is with or without prejudice. Motions or orders that do not so specify shall be deemed motions for dismissal without prejudice or orders for dismissal without prejudice as appropriate.

(c) Dismissal of Counterclaim, Cross Claim, or Third-Party Claim. The provisions of this Rule apply to the dismissal of any counterclaim, cross claim, or third-party claim. A voluntary dismissal by the claimant alone pursuant to subsection (a)(1) of this Rule shall be made before a responsive pleading is filed or served or, if there is none, before the introduction of evidence at the trial or hearing.

(d) Costs of Previously Dismissed Action. If a plaintiff who has once dismissed an action in any court commences an action based upon or including the same claim against the same defendant, the court may make such order for the payment of costs of the action previously dismissed as it may deem proper and may stay the proceedings in the action until the plaintiff has complied with the order.

Rev. 220 (1985).

Annotator's note. Since sections (a) and (b) of this rule are similar to § 184 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Under section 184 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by this rule, the plaintiff, where no counterclaim had been set up in the answer, was entitled to dismiss his action. Tabor v. Sullivan, 12 Colo. 136, 20 P. 437 (1888); Long v. McGowan, 16 Colo. App. 540, 66 P. 1076 (1901); Doll v. Slaughter, 39 Colo. 51, 88 P. 848 (1907); Colo. Util. Corp. v. Pizor, 99 Colo. 294, 62 P.2d 570 (1936).

It was within the discretion of the court to dismiss the plaintiff's suit without prejudice, where motion for dismissal was made before trial and no counterclaim had been filed. Denver & Rio Grande Ry. v. Cobley, 9 Colo. 152, 10 P. 669 (1886); Schechter v. Denver, L. & G. R. R., 8 Colo. App. 25, 44 P. 761 (1896); Teller v. Sievers, 20 Colo. App. 109, 77 P. 261 (1904); Miller v. East Denver Mun. Irrigation Dist., 83 Colo. 406, 266 P. 211 (1928).

Court order granting voluntary dismissal under section (a)(2) is reviewed for an abuse of discretion. And the court did not abuse its discretion in granting plaintiff's request to voluntarily abandon its condemnation proceeding because the defendants could assert their counterclaims in a separate pending declaratory judgment action and therefore were not prejudiced by the dismissal. Sinclair Transp. Co. v. Sandberg, 2014 COA 75M, 350 P.3d 915.

A dismissal without prejudice is not a final order for purposes of appellate review. Bock v. Brody, 8870 P.2d 530 (Colo. App. 1993).

The court may dismiss a claim without prejudice at the close of plaintiff's evidence if it concluded that indispensable parties have not been included. Bock v. Brody, 870 P.2d 530 (Colo. App. 1993).

Standard in ruling on motion to dismiss shall be considered. In ruling on a motion to dismiss, the standard is not whether the plaintiff established a prima facie case, but whether judgment in favor of defendant is justified on the evidence presented. Campbell v. Commercial Credit Plan, Inc., 670 P.2d 813 (Colo. App. 1983); Gapter v. Kocjancic, 703 P.2d 660 (Colo. App. 1985); Pub. Serv. Co. v. Bd. of Water Works, 831 P.2d 470 (Colo. 1992).

Water court did not err in requiring applicants for conditional rights of exchange to establish more than a prima facie case at midtrial to avoid judicial fact finding and dismissal pursuant to section (b) when no other rule or statute alters the application of said section in regard to this matter. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Bd. of Water Works, 831 P.2d 470 (Colo. 1992).

"Motion for directed verdict" is motion to dismiss. When the court is the trier of fact, a motion denominated a ''motion for directed verdict'' is actually a motion to dismiss pursuant to section (b) of this rule. Campbell v. Commercial Credit Plan, Inc., 670 P.2d 813 (Colo. App. 1983); Gapter v. Kocjancic, 703 P.2d 660 (Colo. App. 1985).

Rule as basis for jurisdiction. See Lurvey v. Phil Long Ford, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 11, 541 P.2d 114 (1975); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. City & County of Denver, 190 Colo. 347, 547 P.2d 249 (1976).

Applied in Lehman v. Williamson, 35 Colo. App. 372, 533 P.2d 63 (1975); Webermeier v. Pace, 37 Colo. App. 546, 552 P.2d 1021 (1976); People v. In Interest of D.A.K., 198 Colo. 11, 596 P.2d 747 (1979); Romero v. Rossmiller, 43 Colo. App. 215, 603 P.2d 964 (1979); Hanks v. Green, 44 Colo. 80, 607 P.2d 1034 (1980); Trustees of Mtg. 1982); Lucero v. Martin, 660 P.2d 902 (Colo. 1983); Foothills Meadow v. Myers, 832 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1992).

II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL.

A. By Plaintiff.

Law reviews. For article, ''What Divorce Statutes Are Now in Effect in Colorado?'', see 21 Dicta 68 (1944).

By the salutary provisions of this rule, a plaintiff is given the right to dismiss a first suit at an early stage. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

A party that obtains a voluntary dismissal of its claims subject to terms and conditions to which it consistently maintains its objections may challenge those terms and conditions as legally impermissible or as an abuse of discretion on appellate review. Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

An action may be dismissed prior to answer or motion for summary judgment. An action may be dismissed by notice, without court order, at any time before the adverse party files an answer or motion for summary judgment. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969); Powers v. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys, 832 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1992).

Filing of motion under rule 12 (b)(2) alleging lack of subject matter jurisdiction does not bar plaintiff from filing of notice to dismiss under rule 41 (a)(1). Burden v. Greeven, 953 P.2d 205 (Colo. App. 1998).

Determination of the terms and conditions of dismissal under section (a)(2) is discretionary with the trial court and will not be disturbed on review absent an abuse of that discretion. Section (a)(2) expressly gives the court power to grant a motion for dismissal under the rule upon such terms and conditions as the court deems proper. Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

Under this section, payment of costs is a condition to a dismissal by a plaintiff. Scofield v. Scofield, 89 Colo. 409, 3 P.2d 794 (1931).

A requirement for payment of attorney fees and expenses as a term or condition of an order granting voluntary dismissal of a claim may be imposed without evidence and findings satisfying the requirements of § 13-17-102 (5) and C.R.C.P. 11. Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

When a voluntary motion to dismiss is with prejudice, there is no authority to condition the granting of the motion upon the payment of attorney fees. Groundwater Appropriators of the S. Platte River Basin, Inc. v. City of Boulder, 73 P.3d 22 (Colo. 2003).

The party requesting an award of attorney fees bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence its entitlement to such an award. Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

Award of attorney fees and expenses are not precluded by the special nature of water right adjudication proceedings. Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994); Application of Hines Highlands P'ship, 929 P.2d 718 (Colo. 1996).

Plaintiff may do so without prejudice and with no terms or conditions attached thereto. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

Section (a)(2) is intended to give the right to dismiss a claim that may later become viable or may be asserted later in a different forum, provided that the defendant will not be unfairly prejudiced. The purpose of the rule is different from the objectives of § 13-17-102 (5) and C.R.C.P. 11, which are intended to protect a plaintiff from imposition of attorney fees upon dismissal of an unmeritorious claim provided that the plaintiff seeks dismissal promptly after learning that the claim cannot prevail. Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

A plaintiff need do no more than file a notice of dismissal with the clerk; that document itself closes the file, and the court has no role to play; there is not even a perfunctory order of court closing the file. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

The filing of a notice to dismiss, even pending actual transfer to court of proper venue, is effective. Since the transferor court, until the certification and actual transfer of the case to a different venue, has physical control over the files, the clerk of the transferor court may accept the filing of an answer and place it in the file, and the filing of a notice to dismiss, pending the actual transfer of the proceedings to a court of proper venue, is likewise effective. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

The action stands dismissed without an order of court. Where defendant has not interposed any cross-complaint or answer and plaintiff seeks to dismiss the proceeding, then upon the filing of the dismissal, the action stands dismissed without order of court, and the court errs in declining to dismiss the case. Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 108 Colo. 538, 120 P.2d 641 (1941).

By filing a notice to dismiss, the court's jurisdiction does not immediately terminate for all purposes. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

Plaintiff's voluntary dismissal does divest a court of jurisdiction to grant defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's claims. Alpha Spacecom, Inc. v. Hu, 179 P.3d 62 (Colo. App. 2007).

Appropriate orders may be entered. The filing of the notice of dismissal closes the file, but the trial court may enter appropriate orders subsequent to the notice, as practical considerations must prevail. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

When a plaintiff has once dismissed, a second dismissal operates as an adjudication on the merits. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

This rule also protects a defendant by providing that if the plaintiff takes advantage of his right of early dismissal on one occasion, he may not repeat the process with impunity. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

Where the answer filed in a state court is after the first notice of dismissal and before a second notice of dismissal in a federal court, then at the time the answer is filed, defendant cannot have anticipated that a notice of dismissal would subsequently be filed in the federal court, and so, because the right to invoke the ''double dismissal'' rule does not arise until after defendant's answer is filed in the state court and since the answer is not directed to the federal court complaint, the filing thereof does not constitute a waiver of defendant's right to move for dismissal, as it would on the basis of the rule. A defendant cannot invoke the right prior to the filing of the second notice of dismissal, because the right does not exist, nor can he logically waive a right prior to the time it comes into existence. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

Dismissal order held not to contravene this rule. Hilliard v. Klein, 124 Colo. 479, 238 P.2d 882 (1951).

When from the very nature of the transaction the intent to preserve the right to sue other tortfeasors is apparent, the intent of a written agreement to release some of the joint tortfeasors will be given the same effect as if it were a pure covenant not to sue; there is to be a dismissal as to such parties and a preservation of the right to continue the action with respect to the remaining defendants where it is clear that the intent of the plaintiff is to preserve any rights the plaintiff might have to recover against the remaining defendants. Farmers Elevator Co. v. Morgan, 172 Colo. 545, 474 P.2d 617 (1970).

Stipulated judgment of dismissal held final. Where the parties to litigation, dealing at arm's length, stipulate for the entry of a judgment of dismissal under section (a)(1), and they do not claim mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, nor are any of the parties to the action seeking to have the order set aside, that judgment is final. Columbia Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. District Court, 186 Colo. 212, 526 P.2d 661 (1974).

''Meeting of minds'' necessary before stipulation of dismissal. Where parties do not have a ''meeting of the minds'' as to the terms of a proposed compromise and settlement, there is no settlement which would serve as a basis for a stipulation of dismissal under section (a)(1)(B). H.W. Houston Constr. Co. v. District Court, 632 P.2d 563 (Colo. 1981).

Where no comment made as to whether first dismissal was with or without prejudice that dismissal was without prejudice. Where no comment by counsel or the court was made as to whether the dismissal prior to the trial of the first action was with or without prejudice, by the clear language of section (a)(1) of this rule, that dismissal was without prejudice. Vigil v. Lewis Maint. Serv., Inc., 38 Colo. App. 209, 554 P.2d 703 (1976); FSDW, LLC v. First Nat'l Bank, 94 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2004).

Water court did not abuse its discretion by not awarding attorney fees because it was reasonable to continue to assert the claim until the eve of trial. Application of Hines Highlands P'ship, 929 P.2d 718 (Colo. 1996).

B. By Court.

A plaintiff is not entitled to dismiss his action as a matter of right after the trial has begun, but only as a matter of favor. Reagan v. Dyrenforth, 87 Colo. 126, 285 P. 775 (1931); Scofield v. Scofield, 89 Colo. 409, 3 P.2d 794 (1931).

If he wishes to escape the effect of the ''two dismissal rule'', he is required to obtain a dismissal by the court under section (a)(2) of this rule upon such terms and conditions as the court deems proper. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

Dismissal discretionary. Although section (a)(2) gives the court discretion to grant or deny a motion to dismiss, a plaintiff's motion to dismiss voluntarily without prejudice generally should be granted, unless granting the motion will cause some legal prejudice to the defendant. Tillery v. District Court, 692 P.2d 1079 (Colo. 1984); Powers v. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys, 832 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court has discretionary authority to convert a voluntary proceeding to dismiss without prejudice to an involuntary dismissal with prejudice under rule governing voluntary dismissal of actions by order of the court. Powers v. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys, 832 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1992).

Fact that plaintiff may later bring the same suit against defendant in another court in and of itself is not sufficient prejudice to defendant to warrant denying motion to dismiss; however, if a dismissal would unfairly prejudice defendant, then it should be denied. Powers v. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys, 832 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1992).

Before granting a plaintiff's motion for voluntary dismissal without prejudice, the trial court must determine that any harm to the defendant may be avoided by imposing terms and conditions of dismissal. FSDW, LLC v. First Nat'l Bank, 94 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2004).

In determining whether a dismissal without prejudice would cause harm to a defendant, the trial court should consider: Duplicative expense of separate litigation; extent to which current suit has progressed, including effort and expenses incurred by defendant; adequacy of plaintiff's explanation for need to dismiss; plaintiff's diligence in bringing motion to dismiss; and any undue vexatiousness on plaintiff's part. Powers v. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys, 832 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1992).

When a trial court grants a plaintiff's motion for voluntary dismissal without prejudice under section (a)(2) and does so over the defendant's objection, without imposing terms and conditions that the defendant requests, or without making allowances for the defendant's counterclaims, the court's order is sufficiently final to support the defendant's appeal. FSDW, LLC v. First Nat'l Bank, 94 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2004).

Denial of plaintiff's motion to dismiss without prejudice not an abuse of discretion where: Case had languished for a year; plaintiff failed to verify his claim that he was financially unable to proceed; defendant incurred legal expenses of over $30,000; trial on the merits was imminent and would have been relatively simple and inexpensive; and the trial court was likely to rule in favor of defendant on the remaining legal issue. Powers v. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys, 832 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1992).

It is within discretion of district court to dismiss appeal from state administrative agency action if the appellant has not complied with the statutory time limitations for filing briefs. Warren Vill., Inc. v. Bd. of Assmt. Appeals, 619 P.2d 60 (Colo. 1980).

Trial court has implicit authority to order dismissal with prejudice under rule governing voluntary dismissal of actions by order of the court. Powers v. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys, 832 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1992).

Terms and conditions of dismissal may include award of costs and fees. Powers v. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys, 832 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1992).

Award of costs and fees may not include work that will be useful in continuing litigation, as the policy of the rule is to fashion a remedy for the defendant rather than to punish the plaintiff. The court's order must include competent evidence supporting the allocation of fees and costs. Haystack Ranch, LLC v. Fazzio, 997 P.2d 548 (Colo. 2000).

Once an adverse party has answered or filed a motion for summary judgment, section (a) requires that a stipulation of dismissal must be signed by all parties who have appeared in the action or by their attorneys. Because the city of Westminster was not a party to the stipulation of dismissal, the dismissal was not done pursuant to section (a)(1), and, therefore, under section (a)(2), a court order of dismissal was necessary. The running of the 45-day period for filing an appeal does not begin until a court order of dismissal as to all parties is filed. Trinity Broad. of Denver, Inc. v. City of Westminster, 848 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1993).

If court places terms and conditions upon voluntary dismissal by order of the court which are unacceptable to plaintiff, plaintiff is entitled to proceed with litigation. Accordingly, plaintiff was entitled to elect to proceed to trial rather than to accept dismissal with prejudice as a term and condition of dismissal. Powers v. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys, 832 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1992).

A court's decision on a section (b) motion will not be overruled on appeal unless it is shown that the findings and conclusions of the trial court were so manifestly against the weight of the evidence as to compel a contrary result. Smith v. Weindrop, 833 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1992).

III. INVOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY DEFENDANT.

A. Failure to Prosecute.

Law reviews. For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 36 Dicta 5 (1959).

The plaintiff and not the defendant must prosecute the case in due course and without unusual delay under this rule. Johnson v. Westland Theatres, Inc., 117 Colo. 346, 187 P.2d 932 (1947).

The burden rests upon the plaintiff to prosecute a case in due course without unusual delay. Koon v. Barmettler, 134 Colo. 221, 301 P.2d 713 (1956); Cervi v. Town of Greenwood Vill., 147 Colo. 190, 362 P.2d 1050 (1961).

The burden is on the plaintiff to prosecute a case in due course and without unusual delays. BA Leasing Corp. v. Bd. of Assmt. Appeals, 653 P.2d 80 (Colo. App. 1982).

It is not the defendant's duty to make any move whatever, except such as the law requires him to make in response to the steps of the plaintiff. Rathbun v. Sparks, 162 Colo. 110, 425 P.2d 296 (1967).

It is unnecessary for the party moving to dismiss to show inconvenience or injury suffered by reason of the delay because the law presumes injury from unreasonable delay. BA Leasing Corp. v. Bd. of Assmt. Appeals, 653 P.2d 80 (Colo. App. 1982).

A plaintiff who does not move forward with reasonable dispatch demanded by this rule can find no solace in the activity of his opponent unless it has somehow hindered his own ability to proceed. Rathbun v. Sparks, 162 Colo. 110, 425 P.2d 296 (1967).

Defendant is estopped by his waiver. Where the record indicates that any laches on the part of plaintiffs was waived by defendant and his conduct in the matter, defendant is estopped to urge dismissal. Cervi v. Town of Greenwood Vill., 147 Colo. 190, 362 P.2d 1050 (1961).

Where both parties fail in their duty to observe the steps to be taken to bring their claims to a speedy trial or termination, neither should be given an advantage over the other because of this fact, and dismissal of an action for failure to prosecute should be denied upon a proper showing. Rudd v. Rogerson, 152 Colo. 370, 381 P.2d 995 (1963).

This rule which permits a court to dismiss a case for inactivity is not meant to be a rule of forfeiture, but rather a guide for the efficient and orderly administration of the courts. Mizar v. Jones, 157 Colo. 535, 403 P.2d 767 (1965).

If a person starts the law in motion and does not with reasonable promptness pursue all the steps necessary to bring the litigation to an end, he should suffer the penalty of a default and a dismissal of the action. Rathbun v. Sparks, 162 Colo. 110, 425 P.2d 296 (1967).

A trial court has the inherent power to dismiss a claim for failure to prosecute. Cervi v. Town of Greenwood Vill., 147 Colo. 190, 362 P.2d 1050 (1961); Rudd v. Rogerson, 152 Colo. 370, 381 P.2d 995 (1963); Schleining v. Estate of Sunday, 163 Colo. 424, 431 P.2d 464 (1967); Lake Meredith Reservoir Co. v. Amity Mut., 698 P.2d 1340 (Colo. 1985); Cullen v. Phillips, 30 P.3d 828 (Colo. App. 2001).

Power to dismiss for failure to prosecute in sound discretion of trial court. The inherent power to dismiss an action for failure to prosecute rests in the sound discretion of a trial court. Cervi v. Town of Greenwood Vill., 147 Colo. 190, 362 P.2d 1050 (1961); Rudd v. Rogerson, 152 Colo. 370, 381 P.2d 995 (1963); Tell v. McElroy, 39 Colo. App. 431, 566 P.2d 374 (1977).

The decision whether there has been a failure to prosecute which warrants dismissal lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. BA Leasing Corp. v. Bd. of Assmt. Appeals, 653 P.2d 80 (Colo. App. 1982); Lake Meredith Reservoir Co. v. Amity Mut., 698 P.2d 1340 (Colo. 1985); Maxwell v. W.K.A. Inc., 728 P.2d 321 (Colo. App. 1986).

Discretion not without bounds. The discretion to dismiss an action for failure to prosecute is not without bounds and it must be borne in mind that courts ''exist primarily to afford a forum to settle litigable matters between disputing parties''. Farber v. Green Shoe Mfg. Co., 42 Colo. App. 255, 596 P.2d 398 (1979).

Power to dismiss for failure to prosecute is not an unlimited power. Cervi v. Town of Greenwood Vill., 147 Colo. 190, 362 P.2d 1050 (1961); Rudd v. Rogerson, 152 Colo. 370, 381 P.2d 995 (1963); Tell v. McElroy, 39 Colo. App. 431, 566 P.2d 374 (1977).

The power should not be exercised where the record shows that both parties nursed the case along with the court's approval, for in such circumstances, it is an abuse of discretion to order a dismissal. Cervi v. Town of Greenwood Vill., 147 Colo. 190, 362 P.2d 1050 (1961).

An appellate court cannot say that, as a matter of law, a plaintiff either was or was not diligent, since this conclusion was for the trial court to make within the radius of its sound discretion. Rathbun v. Sparks, 162 Colo. 110, 425 P.2d 296 (1967).

A trial court retains the discretion to dismiss an action with or without prejudice. Cornelius v. River Ridge Ranch Landowners Ass'n, 202 P.3d 564 (Colo. 2009).

Dismissal with prejudice held proper. Where there is no explanation whatsoever for plaintiff's delay of over two years in prosecuting tort action, and there was a sufficient showing to satisfy the requirement of willful default, it was a proper case for dismissal with prejudice. Kappers v. Thomas, 32 Colo. App. 200, 511 P.2d 910 (1973).

A water court does not abuse its discretion in dismissing a case with prejudice when an applicant for adjudication of water rights does not comply with the civil disclosure rules and fails to provide any information related to the applications other than that contained in the initial application. Given the large-scale nondisclosure, the water court's conclusion that the applicant's failure to comply with disclosure requirements constitutes a failure to prosecute was not an abuse of discretion. Cornelius v. River Ridge

Ranch Landowners Ass'n, 202 P.3d 564 (Colo. 2009).

Serious wilful default should be shown. Courts have the responsibility to do justice between disputing parties, and one's day in court should not be denied except upon a serious showing of wilful default. Mizar v. Jones, 157 Colo. 535, 403 P.2d 767 (1965); Levine v. Colo. Transp. Co., 163 Colo. 215, 429 P.2d 274 (1967).

Where there are facts that serve as mitigating circumstances for delay, they should be considered by the court, and a motion for dismissal of an action for failure to prosecute denied upon a proper showing. Rudd v. Rogerson, 152 Colo. 370, 381 P.2d 995 (1963); Mizar v. Jones, 157 Colo. 535, 403 P.2d 767 (1965).

Where the plaintiff put forth every effort to have her case prosecuted and finally obtained new counsel in order to speed the proceedings, it cannot be said that she was guilty of failing to prosecute. Johnson v. Westland Theatres, Inc., 117 Colo. 346, 187 P.2d 932 (1947).

A statement on the day set for trial that plaintiff does not wish to proceed with the suit is sufficient to justify dismissal for want of prosecution. Merwin v. Ideal Cement Co., 128 Colo. 503, 263 P.2d 1021 (1953).

Where the supreme court reversed a judgment and remanded the cause for further proceedings and plaintiff failed for eight years to take any steps to have the cause retried, a motion to dismiss for want of prosecution should have been sustained, no reasonable excuse for the delay being shown. Yampa Valley Coal Co. v. Velotta, 83 Colo. 235, 263 P. 717 (1928).

A case disclosed a reasonable excuse for the delay where there were mitigating circumstances involved in the delay of the suit when: First, the parties were engaged in negotiation toward a settlement for three years for passage of time alone does not, under such circumstances, show that the action has not been prosecuted with reasonable diligence; second, plaintiffs were required to obtain new counsel after their former attorney had been elected county judge, for this occasioned permissible delay as counsel was required to familiarize himself with the facts and details of the case; and third, there was substantial evidence in the record indicating that defendant was equally responsible with plaintiffs for delaying trial of the action, since several of the later trial dates were vacated because defendant's counsel either requested postponement or failed to appear. Cervi v. Town of Greenwood Vill., 147 Colo. 190, 362 P.2d 1050 (1961).

Where the first attorney became ill for months and was unable to work and the plaintiffs were unable to retain other attorneys until they acquired the necessary funds, these facts show a reasonable excuse for the delays in prosecuting an action, particularly when, by the time the motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution was heard, the plaintiffs were ready and anxious to proceed and were not trying to delay the cause. Mizar v. Jones, 157 Colo. 535, 403 P.2d 767 (1965).

When dismissal for failure to prosecute unjustified. Where the motion to dismiss is made after the plaintiff has resumed his efforts to prosecute, has set the case for trial, and, indeed, is ready for trial on the very day the motion is heard, the policy underlying the dismissal rule to prevent unreasonable delays is less compelling than the policy favoring resolution of disputes on the merits, and the court errs in dismissing the action. Farber v. Green Shoe Mfg. Co., 42 Colo. App. 255, 596 P.2d 398 (1979).

There is no abuse of discretion in dismissing for lack of prosecution where plaintiff had not prosecuted action for thirty-seven years. Lake Meredith Reservoir Co. v. Amity Mut., 698 P.2d 1340 (Colo. 1985).

Where defendant in prior action sought and obtained dismissal for failure to prosecute but did not specifically request dismissal with prejudice, order of dismissal did not so specify, and no good cause was shown for defendant's failure to request dismissal with prejudice, subsequent "clarification" of order to specify dismissal with prejudice was ineffective. McElvaney v. Batley, 824 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1991).

B. No Right to Relief.

In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to prove a prima facie case, the proper test is whether plaintiff produced some evidence which, when taken most favorably to him, proved a claim upon which relief could be granted. Brown v. Central City Opera House Ass'n, 36 Colo. App. 334, 542 P.2d 86 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 372, 553 P.2d 64 (1976).

Trial court's decision regarding whether to grant a motion for dismissal should not be disturbed on appeal unless findings of trial court are clearly against the weight of the evidence. Smith v. Weindrop, 833 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1992); Zick v. Krob, 872 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1993).

Under this rule a trial court is empowered to determine a case on its merits at the conclusion of plaintiff's evidence and to render a judgment upon findings based thereon. Edwards Post No. 252, Regular Veterans Ass'n v. Gould, 144 Colo. 334, 356 P.2d 908 (1960).

Trial court may sit as the trier of facts. Under section (b)(1) of this rule, a trial court sitting as the trier of the facts may at the conclusion of plaintiff's presentation of evidence determine the facts and render judgment against the plaintiff. Rowe v. Bowers, 160 Colo. 379, 417 P.2d 503 (1966).

The trial court is the finder of fact. When the trial is to the court, the trial court is the finder of fact and may make its findings and render judgment against the plaintiff at the close of the plaintiff's case. Teodonno v. Bachman, 158 Colo. 1, 404 P.2d 284 (1965); Hoeprich v. Cummiskey, 158 Colo. 365, 407 P.2d 28 (1965); Kvols v. Lonsdale, 164 Colo. 125, 433 P.2d 330 (1967); Rubens v. Pember, 170 Colo. 182, 460 P.2d 803 (1969); Franklin Drilling v. Lawrence Constr. Co., 2018 COA 59, __ P.3d __.

Where there is an issue of fact to be resolved, a trial court errs in dismissing plaintiff's complaint under this rule. Reed v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 176 Colo. 568, 491 P.2d 1377 (1971).

A complaint cannot be dismissed unless it appears that plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any state of facts which may be proved in support of the claim. Millard v. Smith, 30 Colo. App. 466, 495 P.2d 234 (1972).

When a trial judge, after considering all of the evidence, is convinced that there is no basis upon which a verdict in favor of the plaintiff could be supported, it is his duty as a matter of law to sustain a motion for dismissal. McSpadden v. Minick, 159 Colo. 556, 413 P.2d 463 (1966).

The correct test for determining the issues raised by a motion to dismiss in a trial without jury is whether a judgment in favor of the defendant is justified on the plaintiff's evidence and not whether plaintiff has presented a "prima facie" case. Am. Nat'l Bank v. First Nat'l Bank, 28 Colo. App. 486, 476 P.2d 304 (1970); Smith v. Weindrop, 833 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where defendant's motion to reopen the divorce decree was not a motion pursuant to section (b) of this rule, no findings of fact and conclusions of law were required to accompany the ruling on this motion. McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977).

The question on review of such action is not whether the plaintiff made a "prima facie" case, but whether a judgment in favor of the defendant was justified on the plaintiff's evidence. Teodonno v. Bachman, 158 Colo. 1, 404 P.2d 284 (1965); Hoeprich v. Cummiskey, 158 Colo. 365, 407 P.2d 28 (1965); Rowe v. Bowers, 160 Colo. 379, 417 P.2d 503 (1966); Kvols v. Lonsdale, 164 Colo. 125, 433 P.2d 330 (1967); Rubens v. Pember, 170 Colo. 182, 460 P.2d 803 (1969); South Carolina Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 698 P.2d 1369 (Colo. App. 1984).

This is not a situation where the evidence is to be viewed in the light most favorable to plaintiffs. Rowe v. Bowers, 160 Colo. 379, 417 P.2d 503 (1966).

When reviewing a dismissal entered in jury trial, the evidence must be viewed in light most favorable to plaintiff. Teodonno v. Bachman, 158 Colo. 1, 404 P.2d 284 (1965); Kvols v. Lonsdale, 164 Colo. 125, 433 P.2d 330 (1967); Rubens v. Pember, 170 Colo. 182, 460 P.2d 803 (1969); First Nat'l Bank v. Groussman, 29 Colo. App. 215, 483 P.2d 398, aff'd, 176 Colo. 566, 491 P.2d 1382 (1971).

Every favorable inference oftentimes is indulged. Comprehended in a ruling on a motion for dismissal is oftentimes the indulgence by the trial court of every favorable inference of fact which can legitimately be drawn from plaintiff's evidence. A. D. Jones & Co. v. Parsons, 136 Colo. 434, 319 P.2d 480 (1957).

When passing upon a motion for a dismissal where the court is also the trier of fact, then, at the conclusion of plaintiffs' evidence, the trial judge may weigh the evidence, determine issues of credibility, and reach all permissible inferences, including those favoring defendants. First Nat'l Bank v. Groussman, 29 Colo. App. 215, 483 P.2d 398, aff'd, 176 Colo. 566, 491 P.2d 1382 (1971).

In granting a motion to dismiss under this rule, the court necessarily finds on the factual questions that the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. Sedalia Land Co. v. Robinson Brick & Tile Co., 28 Colo. App. 550, 475 P.2d 351 (1970).

In reviewing such findings, all conflicting evidence and possible inferences therefrom must be resolved by the appellate court in favor of the trial court's judgment. Sedalia Land Co. v. Robinson Brick & Tile Co., 28 Colo. App. 550, 475 P.2d 351 (1970).

If reasonable men could differ in the inferences and conclusions to be drawn from the evidence as it stood at the close of the plaintiff's case, then an appellate court cannot interfere with the findings and conclusions of the trial court. Teodonno v. Bachman, 158 Colo. 1, 404 P.2d 284 (1965); Hoeprich v. Cummiskey, 158 Colo. 365, 407 P.2d 28 (1965); Kvols v. Lonsdale, 164 Colo. 125, 433 P.2d 330 (1967); Rubens v. Pember, 170 Colo. 182, 460 P.2d 803 (1969); R.A. Reither Const. Co. v. Wheatland Rural Elec. Ass'n, 680 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1984); Colo. Coffee Bean v. Peaberry Coffee, 251 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2010).

Where the question depends on a state of facts from which different minds could honestly draw different conclusions on that issue, then, under the (former) Code of Civil Procedure, the question must have been submitted to the jury for determination. Whitehead v. Valley View Consol. Gold Mining Co., 26 Colo. App. 114, 141 P. 138 (1914); City of Longmont v. Swearingen, 81 Colo. 246, 254 P. 1000 (1927); Arps v. City & County of Denver, 82 Colo. 189, 257 P. 1094 (1927); Robinson v. Belmont-Buckingham Holding Co., 94 Colo. 534, 31

P.2d 918 (1934); Lesser v. Porter, 94 Colo. 348, 30 P.2d 318 (1934).

Previously, such a motion admitted the truth of the evidence produced by plaintiff, in sense most unfavorable to defendant, and every inference legitimately deducible therefrom. Allen v. Florence & C. C. R. R., 15 Colo. App. 213, 61 P. 491 (1900); Whitehead v. Valley View Consol. Gold Mining Co., 26 Colo. App. 114, 141 P. 138 (1914); Mulford v. Nickerson, 76 Colo. 404, 232 P. 674 (1925).

Ordinarily, a denial of a defendant's motion to dismiss entitles him to go forward with proof in support of his denials and the affirmative matter set up in his answer, as it is tantamount to a finding that a plaintiff has made out a ''prima facie'' case. A. D. Jones & Co. v. Parsons, 136 Colo. 434, 319 P.2d 480 (1957).

Dismissal ends defendant's right to introduce evidence. In the absence of anything in the order for dismissal indicating otherwise, defendant's right thereafter to introduce additional evidence is lost. Carlile v. Zink, 130 Colo. 451, 276 P.2d 554 (1954).

A motion for nonsuit is not proper under this rule, since the motion should be for dismissal. Toy v. Rogers, 114 Colo. 432, 165 P.2d 1017 (1946); Shearer v. Snyder, 115 Colo. 232, 171 P.2d 663 (1946); W. T. Grant Co. v. Casady, 117 Colo. 405, 188 P.2d 881 (1948).

On appeal the court will treat a motion for nonsuit as one to dismiss under this rule. Shearer v. Snyder, 115 Colo. 232, 171 P.2d 663 (1946).

C. Adjudication on Merits.

An order of dismissal under this rule is an adjudication on the merits. Graham v. District Court, 137 Colo. 233, 323 P.2d 635 (1958).

Order is adjudication whether the dismissal is directed to counterclaims, cross-claims, or third-party claims. Graham v. District Court, 137 Colo. 233, 323 P.2d 635 (1958).

Jurisdictional or procedural grounds considered before substantive merits examined. Jurisdictional or procedural grounds for dismissal will be considered prior to examination of the substantive merits of a case. Summerhouse Condo. Ass'n v. Majestic Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 660 P.2d 16 (Colo. App. 1982).

A mere dismissal without prejudice is no bar to another action for the same cause. Hallack v. Loft, 19 Colo. 74, 34 P. 568 (1893); Martin v. McCarthy, 3 Colo. App. 37, 32 P. 551 (1893); First Nat'l Bank v. Mulich, 83 Colo. 518, 266 P. 1110 (1928).

A dismissal without prejudice does not operate as "res judicata". Wistrand v. Leach Realty Co., 147 Colo. 573, 364 P.2d 396 (1961).

A dismissal based upon preliminary, subsidiary, technical, or jurisdictional grounds or lack of standing does not operate as "res judicata". Batterman v. Wells Fargo AG Credit Corp., 802 P.2d 1112 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where the order of dismissal expressly specifies that it is without prejudice, the plaintiff has a right to have his claim adjudicated by amending his complaint or standing on the complaint and appealing. Wistrand v. Leach Realty Co., 147 Colo. 573, 364 P.2d 396 (1961).

Amendment at close of evidence is error. At the close of the evidence, it is error to grant plaintiff, over defendant's objection, leave to amend the complaint to allege a new matter; instead of allowing the amendment, the trial court, under section (b)(1) of this rule, could dismiss plaintiff's complaint with a specification that such dismissal would not operate as an adjudication upon the merits. Barnes v. Wright, 123 Colo. 462, 231 P.2d 794 (1951).

A judgment upon the merits is final and conclusive upon the parties, unless suspended or set aside by some proper proceeding. Hallack v. Loft, 19 Colo. 74, 34 P. 568 (1893).

Dismissal "with prejudice" under C.R.C.P. 3(a) is a nullity. Section (b)(1) of this rule makes it clear that dismissals under C.R.C.P. 3(a), are without prejudice and do not operate as an adjudication on the merits; therefore the words ''with prejudice'' in an order of dismissal are a nullity and would in no way bar a subsequent action asserting the same claim for relief as set forth in the complaint. Morehart v. Nat'l Tea Co., 29 Colo. App. 465, 485 P.2d 907 (1971); Market Eng'g v. Monogram Software, 805 P.2d 1185 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where a complaint is dismissed as to certain defendants and judgment of dismissal entered, a court has no power, after the time to file a motion for a new trial has expired as to such defendants, to grant a motion for a new trial as to all defendants, such dismissal constituting a judgment on the merits under this rule. Graham v. District Court, 137 Colo. 233, 323 P.2d 635 (1958).

Dismissal as to decedent under C.R.C.P. 25(a)(1) does not absolve remaining defendants who may be liable on a theory of respondeat superior. Cheney v. Hailey, 686 P.2d 808 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where an action is dismissed because of the absence of proper parties, there is no decision on the merits. Summerhouse Condo. Ass'n v. Majestic Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 660 P.2d 16 (Colo. App. 1982).

If a plaintiff wishes to contest such a dismissal as error, a timely motion for a new trial must be filed. Graham v. District Court, 137 Colo. 233, 323 P.2d 635 (1958).

Where a motion to dismiss is based upon failure of a plaintiff to establish a claim since he has released some joint tortfeasors, there is nothing in the record and the law to justify any conclusion other than that the action should proceed against the remaining joint tortfeasors where it is clear from a written agreement that they are not to be released as defendants. Farmers Elevator Co. v. Morgan, 172 Colo. 545, 474 P.2d 617 (1970).

Failure to pay attorneys fees and costs pursuant to court order can result in dismissal only if it is established that such failure was willful or in bad faith, and not because of an inability to pay. Lewis v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc., 841 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in O'Done v. Shulman, 124 Colo. 445, 238 P.2d 1117 (1951); City & County of Denver v. Stanley Aviation Corp., 143 Colo. 182, 352 P.2d 291 (1960); Marcotte v. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp., 162 Colo. 131, 425 P.2d 37 (1967).

IV. INVOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY COURT.

This rule contemplates that notice precede an order of dismissal. Schleining v. Estate of Sunday, 163 Colo. 424, 431 P.2d 464 (1967); Maxwell v. W.K.A. Inc., 728 P.2d 321 (Colo. App. 1986).

Courts of record have power to make and enforce rules for the transaction of their business, the only restriction upon such power being that the rules shall be reasonable and shall not contravene a statute. Cone v. Jackson, 12 Colo. App. 461, 55 P. 940 (1899); Hoy v. McConaghy, 14 Colo. App. 372, 60 P. 184 (1900).

The rule of a trial court providing for the dismissal of causes for failure of prosecution is valid, and the court has power to enforce it. Carnahan v. Connolly, 17 Colo. App. 98, 68 P. 836 (1902).

The rule can be enforced for failing to timely perform act required by law. A rule of court providing for the dismissal of cases for want of prosecution can only be enforced against a party for a failure to perform, within the prescribed time, some act required of him by law. Hoy v. McConaghy, 14 Colo. App. 372, 60 P. 184 (1900).

Where the facts to which a court applied the rule in dismissing a case are not before an appellate court, it cannot be said that the trial court abused its discretion or violated the law in applying the rule. Carnahan v. Connolly, 17 Colo. App. 98, 68 P. 836 (1902).

A judgment of dismissal entered without notice is void and is subject to direct or collateral attack. Thompson v. McCormick, 138 Colo. 434, 335 P.2d 265 (1959).

Where a trial court's own rules give the court authority to set a case for trial without notice other than that explicit in the rule itself, then, although this rule governing dismissals requires actual notice to show cause why the case should not be dismissed before a court can entertain a show cause order, the trial court should adhere to its own published rules, a departure constituting an abuse of its discretion. Schleining v. Estate of Sunday, 163 Colo. 424, 431 P.2d 464 (1967).

Where a local rule of a trial court provides that at the opening of a term all matters ready for trial will be set therefor, but the evidence discloses that a plaintiff was diligent in his desire to have his action tried and concluded and there appears no explanation why the case, being at issue, was not originally set for trial by the trial court pursuant to its rule, then dismissal of the action for failure to prosecute is an abuse of discretion. Rudd v. Rogerson, 152 Colo. 370, 381 P.2d 995 (1963).

Dismissal of action improper where court allowed an additional time period within which the plaintiffs were to effect service and amend the complaint and plaintiffs met the time deadline imposed by the court. Nelson v. Blacker, 701 P.2d 135 (Colo. App. 1985).

In addition, it was an abuse of discretion for court to impose a sanction for both parties' failure to file trial data certificates which was detrimental only to plaintiff, and benefitted the equally noncomplying defendants. Maxwell v. W.K.A. Inc., 728 P.2d 321 (Colo. App. 1986).

It is error to dismiss where plaintiffs are seeking to proceed. Where no party has sought a dismissal, plaintiffs are seeking to proceed, no hearing is had on the question of justifiable cause for dismissal and no findings of wilful default are made by the court, it is error for a trial court to dismiss the action. Levine v. Colo. Transp. Co., 163 Colo. 215, 429 P.2d 274 (1967); Maxwell v. W.K.A. Inc., 728 P.2d 321 (Colo. App. 1986).

Mere "activity" in a case under a local court rule is not sufficient to protect against motions to dismiss for failure to prosecute, where the rule refers to ''progress'' and not simply ''activity''. ''Progress'' is a particular type of activity, to move forward, and clearly what is envisaged by such a rule is progress in prosecuting to a conclusion some claim for relief. Rathbun v. Sparks, 162 Colo. 110, 425 P.2d 296 (1967).

A district court dismissal with prejudice in one county is "res judicata" to the same proceeding in another county and will support dismissal without prejudice in the second county; to hold otherwise would constitute a collateral attack on the first judgment. Smith v. Bott, 169 Colo. 133, 454 P.2d 82 (1969).

Court's sua sponte order of dismissal for failure to prosecute cannot stand if it is not preceded by the notice required by this section and C.R.C.P. 121 § 1-10. In re Custody of Nugent, 955 P.2d 584 (Colo. App. 1997); Koh v. Kumar, 207 P.3d 900 (Colo. App. 2009).

A delay reduction order does not suffice to provide reasonable notice of dismissal for purposes of section (b)(2). Koh v. Kumar, 207 P.3d 900 (Colo. App. 2009).

Claims asserted barred by doctrine of res judicata. Where plaintiff originally brought claims in federal court and asked federal court to assert its discretionary pendent jurisdiction over claims, failed to request federal court to assert diversity jurisdiction, and failed to respond to federal court's order to show cause why it should assert its pendent jurisdiction and federal court dismissed claims based on default of plaintiff, plaintiff's claims are barred in state court by res judicata because plaintiff failed to show that the federal court would have refused to exercise its pendent jurisdiction. Whalen v. United Air Lines, Inc., 851 P.2d 251 (Colo. App. 1993).

The substance of the doctrine of "res judicata", that any right, fact, or legal matter which is put in issue and directly adjudicated or necessarily determined by a court of competent jurisdiction is conclusively settled by such judgment and cannot afterwards be litigated or raised again by the same parties applies in criminal proceedings with the same conclusive effect as in civil proceedings. Trujillo v. People, 178 Colo. 136, 496 P.2d 1026 (1972).

Applied in Hatcher v. Hatcher, 169 Colo. 174, 454 P.2d 812 (1969); Streu v. City of Colo. Springs ex rel. Colo. Springs Utils., 239 P.3d 1264 (Colo. 2010).

V. DISMISSAL OF COUNTERCLAIM, CROSS CLAIM, OR THIRD-PARTY CLAIM.

This rule is applicable where multiple claims may be involved. Graham v. District Court, 137 Colo. 233, 323 P.2d 635 (1958).

This rule is controlling where a complaint is dismissed as to less than all defendants. There is apparent conflict in the directions contained in sections (b)(1) and (2) and (c) of this rule concerning dismissals and C.R.C.P. 54(a) and (b) relating to judgments on multiple claims. The latter rule requires an express determination that a claim has been adjudicated, while section (b)(1) of this rule provides that in the absence of a specific direction, an order of dismissal operates as an adjudication. However, this rule is controlling where a complaint is dismissed as to less than all of the defendants in a case. Graham v. District Court, 137 Colo. 233, 323 P.2d 635 (1958).

This rule gives plaintiff right to dismiss only plaintiff's own claims and not separate and independent claims brought by another party. Accordingly, plaintiff's voluntary dismissal did not preclude a court from ruling on defendant's motion for a special shareholder meeting when the motion, despite not being pled as a separate complaint or counterclaim, was best characterized as a separate cause of action independent of plaintiff's action. Alpha Spacecom, Inc. v. Hu, 179 P.3d 62 (Colo. App. 2007).

Rule 42. Consolidation; Separate Trials

(a) Consolidation. When actions involving a common question of law or fact are pending before the court, it may order a joint hearing or trial of any or all the matters in issue in the actions; it may order all the actions consolidated; and it may make such orders concerning proceedings therein as may tend to avoid unnecessary costs or delay.

(b) Separate Trials. The court in furtherance of convenience, or to avoid prejudice, or when separate trials will be conducive to expedition or economy may order a separate trial of any separate issue or of any number of claims, cross claims, counterclaims, third-party claims, or issues.

(c) Court Sessions Public; When Closed. All sessions of court shall be public, except that when it appears to the court that the action will be of such character as to injure public morals, or when orderly procedure requires it, it shall be its duty to exclude all persons not officers of the court or connected with such case.

Cross references: For judgement on a counterclaim or cross claim if separate trial is ordered, see C.R.C.P. 13(i); for separate trial of third-party issues, see C.R.C.P. 14(a); for separate judgments, see C.R.C.P. 54(b); for harmless error, see C.R.C.P. 61.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Trials: Rules 38-53'', see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 571 (1951). For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 38 Dicta 133 (1961).

The submission of issues for special verdicts is appropriate, especially when the issues are complicated or likely to confuse the jury. Thus, the submission of special issues of fact to the jury lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. Molnar v. Law, 776 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1989).

Applied in Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972); Gleason v. Guzman, 623 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1981); Judd Constr. Co. v. Evans Joint Venture, 642 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1982).

II. CONSOLIDATION.

This rule for consolidation of causes of actions is a departure from the former Code of Civil Procedure. Willy v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry., 115 Colo. 306, 172 P.2d 958 (1946).

Consolidated suits do not merge into a single cause or make those who are parties in one suit parties in another. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 645 P.2d 1321 (Colo. App. 1981); Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 650 P.2d 571 (Colo. App. 1981), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983).

A discretionary order of consolidation does not merge the consolidated suits into a single cause of action. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Gas. Co. v. Frackelton, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983).

It gives to the trial judge discretionary authority to consolidate actions. Willy v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry., 115 Colo. 306, 172 P.2d 958 (1946).

Consolidation is a matter of the trial court's discretion. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 650 P.2d 571 (Colo. App. 1981), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983).

Consolidation is a matter within the discretion of a trial court, and its exercise of that discretion will not be distributed absent a clear showing of abuse. People ex rel. J.F., 672 P.2d 544 (Colo. App. 1983).

Consolidation is not an abuse of discretion where common questions of law and fact were present. Mortgage Inv. Corp. v. Battle Mountain Corp., 56 P.3d 1104 (Colo. App. 2001), rev'd on other grounds, 70 P.3d 1176 (Colo. 2003).

Consolidation not abuse of court's discretion where husband and wife were alleging that same defendant had been negligent to both parties, the same questions of law relating to proximate cause and damages were raised by both plaintiffs, and both plaintiffs were represented by same attorney. Askew v. Gerace, 851 P.2d 199 (Colo. App. 1992).

Standard of review shall be used by courts of review. It is only when it clearly appears that discretionary authority has been abused that courts of review will hold that the consolidation was prejudicial to a complaining party. Willy v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry., 115 Colo. 306, 172 P.2d 958 (1946).

Consolidating several tort actions growing out of one accident was proper. The trial judge did not abuse his discretion in consolidating actions by a widow for the death of her husband, for medical care of her minor child, and, as next friend of her minor child, for injuries suffered by the child, all of which actions grew out of the same accident. Willy v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry., 115 Colo. 306, 172 P.2d 958 (1946).

Consolidation would have been proper course of action, rather than dismissing one of two cases on the day of trial, if both actions involve common question of law or fact. Weyerhaeuser Mortgage Co. v. Equitable Gen. Ins. Co., 686 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1983).

Consolidation does not change different appeal procedures applicable to individual cases. Denver v. Bd. of Assessment Appeals, 748 P.2d 1306 (Colo. App. 1987).

Applied in Schimmel v. District Court, 155 Colo. 240, 393 P.2d 741 (1964).

III. SEPARATE TRIALS.

Law reviews. For note, ''Res Judicata — Should It Apply to a Judgment Which is Being Appealed?'', see 33 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 95 (1960). For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 66 (1963). For article, ''One Year Review of Torts'', see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 160 (1963).

This rule vests discretion in the trial court as to whether there shall be separate trials of multiple claims. Moseley v. Lamirato, 149 Colo. 440, 370 P.2d 450 (1962); Prudential Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. of Am. v. District Court, 617 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1980); People in Interest of D.M.W., 752 P.2d 587 (Colo. App. 1987).

A trial judge is permitted wide discretion when he finds that the necessary prerequisites to separate trials laid down by the rules exist. Sutterfield v. District Court ex rel. County of Arapahoe, 165 Colo. 225, 438 P.2d 236 (1968).

Upon finding that the jury might improperly use the evidence to show a propensity of negligent driving, the court properly bifurcated separate claims of negligence and negligent hiring and supervision. Martin v. Minnard, 862 P.2d 1014 (Colo. App. 1993).

This rule is permissive, not mandatory. Moseley v. Lamirato, 149 Colo. 440, 370 P.2d 450 (1962).

This rule is permissive and not mandatory, and the trial court has wide discretion in its application. Kielsmier v. Foster, 669 P.2d 630 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section provides a remedy to prevent prejudice to parties resulting from joinder. Sutterfield v. District Court ex rel. County of Arapahoe, 165 Colo. 225, 438 P.2d 236 (1968).

Court order as to joint or separate trial will not be disturbed in the absence of a clear showing that there has been an abuse of discretion. Prudential Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. of Am. v. District Court, 617 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1980); O'Neal v. Reliance Mortg. Corp., 721 P.2d 1230 (Colo. App. 1986); Colo. Coffee Bean v. Peaberry Coffee, 251 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2010).

Standard of review of discretionary power shall be used on appeal. A ruling by the trial court under this rule where it has discretionary power will not be disturbed on review, unless it be clearly shown that there was an abuse of such discretionary power. Moseley v. Lamirato, 149 Colo. 440, 370 P.2d 450 (1962).

Severance without findings improper. Where the trial court made no finding that any of the conditions permitting separate trials of properly joined claims were present, the severance cannot be sustained until proper findings are made. Sutterfield v. District Court ex rel. County of Arapahoe, 165 Colo. 225, 438 P.2d 236 (1968); Gaede v. District Court, 676 P.2d 1186 (Colo. 1984).

Belated request properly denied. A request for a separate trial of the second claim of a complaint made moments before commencement of trial, where the case had been at issue more than seven months, was properly denied. Moseley v. Lamirato, 149 Colo. 440, 370 P.2d 450 (1962).

Abuse of discretion in ordering joint trial occurs where the court's failure to order separate proceedings virtually assures prejudice to a party. Prudential Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. of Am. v. District Court, 617 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1980).

Denial of motion for separate hearings not an abuse of discretion, where juvenile court found that issues concerning both parents were interlocked and that court as trier of fact would not have difficulty separating issues and evidence as to each party, and where no showing of actual prejudice was made. People in Interest of D.M.W., 752 P.2d 587 (Colo. App. 1987).

Bifurcated trial on issue of liability for punitive damages in products liability suit not granted. In products liability claim, defendant did not make an adequate showing of past punitive damages awards arising out of the same course of conduct to warrant granting a bifurcated trial on the issue of punitive damages in order to avoid any prejudice to the defendant on the issue of liability. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984).

IV. COURT SESSIONS PUBLIC.

Protective order would not violate section (c) in trade secrets trial. Proviso in protective order for exclusion of the public would not violate the mandate of section (c) relating to public sessions of court where the trial involves trade secrets. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 186 Colo. 226, 526 P.2d 1335 (1974).

Rule 42.1. Consolidated Multidistrict Litigation

(a) Definitions.

(1) ''Panel'' means the Panel on Consolidated Multidistrict Litigation. The Panel shall consist of not less than three nor more than seven district judges designated from time to time by the Chief Justice, no two of whom shall be from the same judicial district. One of the judges shall be appointed as Chairman by the Chief Justice. The Panel may sit in departments of three or more, as designated by the Chairman of the Panel. The concurrence of a majority of the members sitting in department shall be necessary to any action by the Panel, except that the chair may approve stipulations and recommend consolidation or order dismissal consistent with those stipulations, may rule on motions of a procedural nature, and may deny consolidation when it appears from the face of the motion that the panel does not have jurisdiction to recommend consolidation.

(2) ''Clerk'' means the Clerk of the Panel. The Clerk of the Colorado Supreme Court shall be the Clerk of the Panel.

(b) Transfer. When actions involving a common question of law or fact are pending in different judicial districts, such actions may be transferred to any judge for hearing or trial of any or all of the matters in issue in any action, provided however, (1) any jury trial shall be held in the place prescribed by Rule 98 C.R.C.P.; and (2) such actions shall be consolidated only as permitted by Rule 42 C.R.C.P.

(c) Initiation of Proceedings. Proceedings for the transfer of an action under this rule may be initiated by:

(1) The Panel upon its own initiative or upon the request of any court; or

(2) Upon a motion filed with the Panel by a party in any action in which transfer under this rule may be appropriate, which motion shall not be entertained unless filed more than 91 days (13 weeks) next preceding any trial date set in the affected actions, unless a showing of good cause is made. A copy of such motion shall be filed in the district court in which the moving party's action is pending.

(d) Order to Show Cause; Hearing; Response. When the transfer of multidistrict litigation is being considered, an order shall be entered by the Panel directing the parties in each action to show cause why the action or actions should not be transferred. A hearing shall be set at the time the show cause order is entered. Any party may file a response to the show cause order and an accompanying brief within 14 days after the order is entered, unless otherwise provided in the order. Within 7 days of receipt of a party's response or brief, any party may file a reply brief limited to new matters.

(1) Except by permission of the Panel, briefs shall not exceed five (5) pages, exclusive of appendices. An original and seven (7) copies of each brief shall be filed with the Clerk of the Panel.

(2) Each side shall be allowed fifteen (15) minutes of oral argument at the hearing, unless extended by the Panel.

(e) Pending Motion or Order to Show Cause; No Effect. The pendency of a motion or order to show cause before the Panel concerning the transfer of an action pursuant to this rule shall not affect or suspend proceedings and orders in the district court and does not limit the jurisdiction of that court.

(f) Orders of Panel. The Panel may enter such orders as are appropriate including but not limited to staying proceedings in all actions until a determination is made whether the actions should be transferred under the rule and setting any matter for hearing.

(g) Standards Governing Transfer. Transfer of civil actions sharing a common question of law or fact is appropriate if one judge hearing all of the actions will promote the ends of justice and the just and efficient conduct of such actions. The factors to be considered shall include, but shall not be limited to, the following: (1) whether the common question of fact or law is predominating and significant to the litigation; (2) the convenience of the parties, witnesses and counsel; (3) the relative development of the action and the work product of counsel; (4) the efficient utilization of judicial facilities and manpower; (5) the calendar of the courts; (6) the disadvantages of duplicative and inconsistent rulings, orders or judgments; and (7) the likelihood of settlement of the actions without further litigation should transfer be denied.

(h) Certification to Chief Justice. Upon the determination by the Panel that the actions should be transferred under this rule, the Panel shall certify the actions to the Chief Justice and recommend the assignment of a specific judge to hear the actions.

(i) Appellate Review; Assignment of Judge. No proceedings for review of any certification order or other order entered by the Panel shall be permitted except as permitted by Rule 21 C.A.R. If no original proceedings are commenced in the Supreme Court or a show cause order is not issued by the Supreme Court within 21 days after entry of the certification order by the Panel, the Chief Justice shall assign the actions to a judge.

(j) Other Cases; Transfer by Clerk. Upon learning of the pendency of a civil action apparently sharing common questions of law or fact with actions previously transferred under this rule, an order may be entered by the Clerk transferring the action to the assigned judge. A copy of the order shall be served on each party to the litigation. The order shall not become final until 14 days after entry thereof. Any party opposing the transfer shall file a notice of opposition with the Clerk within 14 days from the date the order is entered. The notice of opposition shall be supported by a brief. Any party shall have 14 days to file an answer brief. The filing of a notice of opposition and brief shall suspend the finality of the Clerk's order pending action by the Panel.

(k) Procedure After Transfer.

(1) Upon receipt of an order from the Chief Justice assigning the actions to a judge, the clerk of the transferor court shall submit to the clerk of the court of the assigned judge copies of all papers contained in the original file and a certified copy of the register of actions.

(2) Original pleadings regarding consolidated matters shall thereafter be filed with the clerk of the transferee court.

(l) Adoption of Rules. Subject to approval by the Colorado Supreme Court in accordance with Rule 121 C.R.C.P., the Panel may adopt rules of procedures on Consolidated Multidistrict Litigation consistent with this Rule.

Nowhere does this rule expressly grant the transferee judge assigned to hear "all of the actions" the authority to transfer any of the actions or individual issues related to separate parties to another judge. Beckord v. District Court, 698 P.2d 1323 (Colo. 1985).

Rule 43. Evidence

(a) Form and Admissibility. In all trials the testimony of witnesses shall be taken orally in open court, unless otherwise provided by these Rules, the Colorado Rules of Evidence, or any statute of this state or of the United States (except the Federal Rules of Evidence).

(b) to (d) Repealed.

(e) Evidence on Motions. When a motion is based on facts not appearing of record, the court may hear the matter on affidavits presented by the respective parties, or the court may direct that the matter be heard wholly or partly on oral testimony or depositions. This shall include applications to grant or dissolve an injunction and for the appointment or discharge of a receiver.

(f) to (h) Repealed.

(i) (1) Request for absentee testimony. A party may request that testimony be presented at a trial or hearing by a person absent from the courtroom by means of telephone or some other suitable and equivalent medium of communication. A request for absentee testimony shall be made by written motion or stipulation filed as soon as practicable after the need for absentee testimony becomes known. The motion shall include:

(A) The reason(s) for allowing such testimony.

(B) A detailed description of all testimony which is proposed to be taken by telephone or other medium of communication.

(C) Copies of all documents or reports which will be used or referred to in such testimony.

(2) Response. If any party objects to absentee testimony, said party shall file a written response within 3 days following service of the motion unless the opening of the proceeding occurs first, in which case the objection shall be made orally in open court at the commencement of the proceeding or as soon as practicable thereafter. If no response is filed or objection is made, the motion may be deemed confessed.

(3) Determination. The court shall determine whether in the interest of justice absentee testimony may be allowed. The facts to be considered by the court in determining whether to permit absentee testimony shall include but not be limited to the following:

(A) Whether there is a statutory right to absentee testimony.

(B) The cost savings to the parties of having absentee testimony versus the cost of the witness appearing in person.

(C) The availability of appropriate equipment at the court to permit the presentation of absentee testimony.

(D) The availability of the witness to appear personally in court.

(E) The relative importance of the issue or issues for which the witness is offered to testify.

(F) If credibility of the witness is an issue.

(G) Whether the case is to be tried to the court or to a jury.

(H) Whether the presentation of absentee testimony would inhibit the ability to cross examine the witness.

(I) The efforts of the requesting parties to obtain the presence of the witness.

If the court orders absentee testimony to be taken, the court may issue such orders as it deems appropriate to protect the integrity of the proceedings.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Trials: Rules 38-53'', see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 571 (1951). For article, ''A Deposition Primer, Part I: Setting Up the Deposition'', see 11 Colo. Law. 938 (1982). For article, ''2006 Amendments to the Civil Rules: Modernization, New Math, and Polishing'', see 35 Colo. Law. 21 (May 2006).

The plaintiff always has the burden of proving his or her case. Lockwood v. Travelers Ins. Co., 179 Colo. 103, 498 P.2d 947 (1972).

Once a "prima facie" case is established, the burden of going forward to rebut the ''prima facie'' case shifts to the defendant. Lockwood v. Travelers Ins. Co., 179 Colo. 103, 498 P.2d 947 (1972).

The burden of going forward is met when the defendant introduces enough evidence to present a jury question where formerly there was a ''prima facie'' case. Lockwood v. Travelers Ins. Co., 179 Colo. 103, 498 P.2d 947 (1972).

Lack of direct testimony as to cause of action is not necessarily fatal to plaintiff's case, as causation may be shown by circumstantial evidence alone and jurors may draw upon ordinary human experience as to the reasonable probabilities. Irish v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 31 Colo. App. 89, 500 P.2d 151 (1972).

To recover loss of profits, the plaintiff not only has to establish the existence of such loss but also has to provide evidence from which such loss could be computed. Irish v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 31 Colo. App. 89, 500 P.2d 151 (1972).

When the "accident-suicide" dichotomy is placed in issue by the pleadings and by rebuttable presumption, the plaintiff has the burden of proving accident to the exclusion of suicide by a preponderance of the evidence. Lockwood v. Travelers Ins. Co., 179 Colo. 103, 498 P.2d 947 (1972).

Applied in Keefe v. Bekins Van & Storage Co., 36 Colo. App. 382, 540 P.2d 1132 (1975); Union Supply Co. v. Pust, 196 Colo. 162, 583 P.2d 276 (1978); Berger v. Coon, 199 Colo. 133, 606 P.2d 68 (1980).

II. FORM AND ADMISSIBILITY.

Colorado favors the admissibility and not the rejection of evidence in civil actions in accordance with the most convenient methods prescribed by statute and the rules of evidence. Dept. of Highways, v. Intermountain Term. Co., 164 Colo. 354, 435 P.2d 391 (1967).

All evidence admissible under federal statutes applies in state court. Powell v. Brady, 30 Colo. App. 406, 496 P.2d 328 (1972), aff'd, 181 Colo. 218, 508 P.2d 1254 (1973).

The applicability of the federal business act (28 U.S.C. § 1732) to hospital records has been firmly established. Powell v. Brady, 30 Colo. App. 406, 496 P.2d 328 (1972), aff'd, 181 Colo. 218, 508 P.2d 1254 (1973).

Hospital records are ordinarily admissible under section (a) of this rule. Good v. A.B. Chance Co., 39 Colo. App. 70, 565 P.2d 217 (1977).

The admission of hospital records requires that they be relevant to the issues. Good v. A.B. Chance Co., 39 Colo. App. 70, 565 P.2d 217 (1977).

The sufficiency, probative effect, and weight of all evidence, including documentary evidence, and the inferences and conclusions to be drawn therefrom are all within the province of the trial court, whose conclusions will not be disturbed unless so clearly erroneous as to find no support in the record. Dominion Ins. Co. v. Hart, 178 Colo. 451, 498 P.2d 1138 (1972); Jones v. Adkins, 34 Colo. App. 196, 526 P.2d 153 (1974).

Evidence will be viewed on appeal in the light most favorable to upholding the judgment. Hayes v. State, 178 Colo. 447, 498 P.2d 1119 (1972).

Where an insurance company attempted to introduce evidence concerning other insurance policies owned by the decedent before his death, the trial court must weigh the prejudicial effect of such evidence against its relevancy to the issue of whether the death was accidental or suicidal, and where, at a hearing before the judge outside the presence of the jury, the insurance company informed the court that the policies were at least three years old at the time of decedent's death, the probative value of such evidence was virtually nonexistent, so that the discretionary decision of the trial court to exclude this evidence as irrelevant and potentially prejudicial was not error. Simonton v. Continental Cas. Co., 32 Colo. App. 138, 507 P.2d 1132 (1973).

Evidence of testamentary capacity held properly received outside presence of jury. In re Estate of Gardner, 31 Colo. App. 361, 505 P.2d 50 (1972).

Considerations of credibility of witnesses and the weight to be accorded their testimony are for the trial court. Hayes v. State, 178 Colo. 447, 498 P.2d 1119 (1972).

Trial court shall determine whether witness has the right to express an opinion. The sufficiency of the evidence to establish the qualifications and knowledge of a witness to entitle him to express an opinion is a question to be determined by the trial court, and its decision will be upheld unless clearly erroneous. Oglesby v. Conger, 31 Colo. App. 504, 507 P.2d 883 (1972).

Determination of the pertinency of omitted facts from a hypothetical question to a witness rests in the discretion of the trial court and will not be reversed unless clearly erroneous. Oglesby v. Conger, 31 Colo. App. 504, 507 P.2d 883 (1972).

Where a witness has no personal knowledge of a fact, he should not be allowed to give testimony concerning that fact because there would then be reliance on the out-of-court declaration of another and the normal safeguards of oath, confrontation, and cross-examination would be precluded. Simonton v. Continental Cas. Co., 32 Colo. App. 138, 507 P.2d 1132 (1973).

It is within the discretion of the trial court to determine the competence of an expert witness to testify. Martin v. Bralliar, 36 Colo. App. 254, 540 P.2d 1118 (1975).

Expert opinion is permissible only where a proper foundation is laid. Simpson v. Anderson, 186 Colo. 163, 526 P.2d 298 (1974).

Trial judge should decide whether witness is a qualified expert on subject appropriate for expert testimony, but basis of his opinion and weight to be given opinion should be left for advocates to challenge and for jury to determine. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

Evidence of opinion of experts is admissible only when subject matter of controversy renders it necessary or proper to resort to opinion evidence. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

In admitting the testimony of a medical witness on the issue of standard of care, there is no abuse of discretion when the evidence shows that the proposed witness is familiar with the standard of care in the same or similar communities at the time in question. Martin v. Bralliar, 36 Colo. App. 254, 540 P.2d 1118 (1975).

Where expert opinion is based on evidence adduced at trial which is hearsay, it is error to include it. Nat'l State Bank v. Brayman, 180 Colo. 304, 505 P.2d 11 (1973).

Where an accident-reconstruction expert offers testimony, such evidence is admissible where based on photographs properly admitted even though expert had failed to personally examine scene of accident and vehicles involved within short time after accident. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

The sufficiency of evidence qualifying a law enforcement officer to express an expert opinion based upon physical facts he has observed is a question to be determined by the trial court, and its decision will be upheld unless clearly erroneous. Nat'l State Bank v. Brayman, 30 Colo. App. 554, 497 P.2d 710 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 180 Colo. 305, 505 P.2d 11 (1973).

Where witness is officer who conducted investigation of scene of accident minutes after accident is an expert as to point of impact and the extent of movement of vehicles is fully testified to by competent witness before officer's opinion is illicited, officer's testimony as to point of impact should be admitted despite absence of skid marks and fact that prior to officer's arrival at scene, automobiles had been moved slightly. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

Facts supporting only conjectural inferences have no probative value and should not be admitted in evidence. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

Where the owner is an occupant of his own vehicle at the time of an accident, it is ''prima facie'' evidence that he was the driver. Brayman v. Nat'l State Bank of Boulder, 180 Colo. 305, 505 P.2d 11 (1973).

Replicas of physical evidence usually admissible. While replicas of physical evidence are usually admissible where the original item has been lost or destroyed, the admissibility of such evidence is a matter within the discretion of the trial judge. Reaves v. Horton, 33 Colo. App. 186, 518 P.2d 1380 (1973), modified, 186 Colo. 149, 526 P.2d 304 (1974).

Where a written document is a complete and accurate expression of the agreement between the parties, evidence is not admissible for the purpose of varying or contradicting the terms of the written document. Aztec Sound Corp. v. Western States Leasing Co., 32 Colo. App. 248, 510 P.2d 897 (1973).

A certified copy of a death certificate is admissible and is ''prima facie'' evidence of the facts recited therein. Lockwood v. Travelers Ins. Co., 179 Colo. 103, 498 P.2d 947 (1972).

Soil sample should not be admitted where vehicle was towed in area after accident. Where evidence in wrongful death action against motorist arising from automobile collision indicates that soil taken from defendant's automobile matches soil samples taken from parking lot, such evidence should not be admitted to prove that defendant's automobile had been in parking lot before accident where, immediately after accident, defendant's automobile had been towed through parking lot in question. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

Where a photograph of the scene of an accident taken after vehicles had been removed is offered to show scene of accident and not the condition of the road surface, then the wetness or dryness of road surface is not significant, and the photograph should be admitted. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

In order to warrant admission of a photograph in evidence, if it is otherwise competent, it is only necessary to show that it is correct likeness of objects it purports to represent, and this may be shown by person who made it or by any competent witness. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

Fact that photographic evidence may be cumulative is not alone ground for its rejection. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

Testimony properly excluded as hearsay. Where the trial court refuses to permit witnesses to testify to conversations with other persons concerning the knowledge of such other persons about the activities of an individual, such testimony is properly excluded as hearsay. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Quad Constr., Inc., 31 Colo. App. 373, 504 P.2d 1113 (1972).

Past recollection recorded exception to hearsay rule. A determination by the trial court that a statement was made too remote in point of time to the date of an accident to be admissible under the past recollection recorded exception to the hearsay rule was a matter resting within the discretion of the trial court and such determination will be disturbed only if the trial court abused its discretion. McCall v. Roper, 32 Colo. App. 352, 511 P.2d 541 (1973).

Hearsay is admissible as evidence against the interest of a deceased. The testimony of an individual, who brings suit against the estate of a deceased for proceeds from the sale of property allegedly held in trust, to the effect that the deceased told the claimant that he was holding some property in trust for one of the claimant's parents is hearsay but admissible as evidence against the interest of the deceased. In re Estate of Granberry, 30 Colo. App. 550, 498 P.2d 960 (1972).

It is not error to admit hearsay to demonstrate intention or state of mind. Where the trial court took adequate precautions in admitting hearsay testimony, including instructing the jury as to the manner and purpose for which the evidence might be considered, the trial court did not err in admitting evidence of a declaration for the limited purpose of demonstrating intention or state of mind. Simonton v. Continental Cas. Co., 32 Colo. App. 138, 507 P.2d 1132 (1973).

A person's intentions may be reflected by the declarations of that person, and these declarations are therefore admissible not for the proof of the facts stated by the declaration but to demonstrate the state of mind of the declarant; when offered for this purpose, the hearsay rule is not applicable to such a declaration. Simonton v. Continental Cas. Co., 32 Colo. App. 138, 507 P.2d 1132 (1973).

In determining whether to admit hearsay evidence to establish state of mind, the court must make a judgment based on a weighing of the materiality and relevance of the testimony for a limited purpose against the possibility that, in spite of an instruction by the court to the contrary, the jury might consider a statement for the truth of the facts it contains. Simonton v. Continental Cas. Co., 32 Colo. App. 138, 507 P.2d 1132 (1973).

Where testimony is hearsay, its admission is harmless when the essential and operative facts upon which a judgment rests are established by competent evidence in the record. San Isabel Elec. Ass'n v. Bramer, 31 Colo. App. 134, 500 P.2d 821 (1972), aff'd, 182 Colo. 15, 510 P.2d 438 (1973).

Defendant could not predicate error on trial court's denial of admission of hearsay evidence; since defendant made no offer of proof, it was not apparent from the context what the substance of the testimony would have been, and defense counsel made no objection to the denial. People v. Hoover, 165 P.3d 784 (Colo. App. 2006).

A deed may be proven by parol evidence to be a mortgage, but the evidence must be clear, certain, and unequivocal as well as be convincing beyond a reasonable doubt. Padia v. Hobbs, 132 Colo. 165, 286 P.2d 613 (1955).

Admitting exhibits out of the usual order is immaterial where the objecting party is the only witness, the order of proof being in the sound discretion of the court. Shearer v. Snyder, 115 Colo. 232, 171 P.2d 663 (1946).

Applied in Hamilton v. Hardy, 37 Colo. App. 375, 549 P.2d 1099 (1976).

III. EVIDENCE ON MOTIONS.

Trial court erred in awarding fees and expenses to receiver over objection of an interested party, without a hearing, without any representation that fees and expenses were reasonable and necessary, and without receiving sworn testimony or verified documents. Cedar Lane Invs. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 883 P.2d 600 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in Sollitt v. District Court, 180 Colo. 114, 502 P.2d 1108 (1972).

Rule 44. Proof of Official Record

(a) Authentication.

(1) Domestic. An official record kept within the United States, or any state, district, or commonwealth, or within a territory subject to the administrative or judicial jurisdiction of the United States, or an entry therein, when admissible for any purpose, may be evidenced by an official publication thereof or by a copy attested by the officer having the legal custody of the record, or by the officer's deputy, and accompanied by a certificate that such officer has the custody. The certificate may be made by a judge of a court of record of the district or political subdivision in which the record is kept, authenticated by the seal of the court, or may be made by any public officer having a seal of office and having official duties in the district or political subdivision in which the record is kept, authenticated by the seal of the officer's office.

(2) Foreign. A foreign official record, or an entry therein, when admissible for any purpose, may be evidenced by an official publication thereof; or a copy thereof, attested by a person authorized to make the attestation, and accompanied by a final certification as to the genuineness of the signature and official position (A) of the attesting person, or (B) of any foreign official whose certificate of genuineness of signature and official position relates to the attestation or is in a chain of certificates of genuiness of signature and official position relating to the attestation. A final certification may be made by a secretary of embassy or legation, consul general, consul, vice consul, or consular agent of the United States, or a diplomatic or consular official of the foreign country assigned or accredited to the United States. If reasonable opportunity has been given to all parties to investigate the authenticity and accuracy of the documents, the court may, for good cause shown, (A) admit an attested copy without final certification or (B) permit the foreign official record to be evidenced by an attested summary with or without a final certification. The final certification is unnecessary if the record and the attestation are certified as provided in a treaty or convention to which the United States and the foreign country in which the official record is located are parties.

(b) Lack of Record. A written statement that after diligent search no record or entry of a specified tenor is found to exist in the records designated by the statement, authenticated as provided in subsection (a)(1) of this Rule in the case of a domestic record, or complying with the requirements of subsection (a)(2) of this Rule for a summary in the case of a foreign record, is admissible as evidence that the records contain no such record or entry.

(c) Other Proof. This Rule does not prevent the proof of official records or of entry or lack of entry therein by any method authorized by law.

(d) Seal Dispensed With. In the event any office or officer, authenticating any documents under the provisions of this Rule, has no official seal, then authentication by seal is dispensed with.

(e) Statutes and Laws of Other States and Countries. A printed copy of a statute, or other written law, of another state, or of a territory, or of a foreign country, or a printed copy of a proclamation, edict, decree, or ordinance by the executive power thereof, contained in a book or publication purporting or proved to have been published by the authority thereof, or proved to be commonly admitted as evidence of the existing law in the judicial tribunals thereof, is presumptive evidence of the statute, law, proclamation, edict, decree, or ordinance. The unwritten or common law of another state, or of a territory, or of a foreign country, may be proved as a fact by oral evidence. The books of reports of cases adjudged in the courts thereof must also be admitted as presumptive evidence of the unwritten or common law thereof. The law of such state or territory or foreign country is to be determined by the court or master and included in the findings of the court or master or instructions to the jury, as the case may be. Such finding or instruction is subject to review. In determining such law, neither the trial court nor the appellate court shall be limited to the evidence produced on the trial by the parties, but may consult any of the written authorities above named in this section (e), with the same force and effect as if the same had been admitted in evidence.

Exclusion by trial judge of document admissible under this rule is not prejudicial error where the defendant was successful in introducing a similar exhibit from which the excluded document had been prepared and which contained exactly the same information as the excluded document. Polster v. Griff's of Am., Inc., 34 Colo. App. 161, 525 P.2d 1179 (1974).

II. AUTHENTICATION.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 66 (1963).

B. Domestic.

Section (a)(1) not exclusive. While section (a)(1) of this rule established a method by which official records may be admitted into evidence as self-authenticating documents, it is not the exclusive method by which such documents can be introduced. People v. Rivera, 37 Colo. App. 4, 542 P.2d 90 (1975).

Where one claims that documents were not properly authenticated under this rule, but he testifies, as of his own knowledge, to every fact sought to have been established by the offered documents, any error is therefore harmless. Nieto v. People, 160 Colo. 179, 415 P.2d 531 (1966).

Applied in Hamilton v. Hardy, 37 Colo. App. 375, 549 P.2d 1099 (1976).

C. Foreign.

Law reviews. For comment on Walker v. Calada Materials Co., appearing below, see 35 U. Colo. L. Rev. 451 (1963).

This rule is plain and in full force and effect. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. Hargrove, 144 Colo. 115, 355 P.2d 312 (1960).

This rule prescribes how an official record may be evidenced. Walker v. Calada Materials Co., 150 Colo. 572, 375 P.2d 679 (1962).

It does not purport to prescribe what must be established in order to prevail in an action based upon a foreign judgment. Walker v. Calada Materials Co., 150 Colo. 572, 375 P.2d 679 (1962).

A foreign judgment is dependent for its effect and validity upon the record which precedes it. Walker v. Calada Materials Co., 150 Colo. 572, 375 P.2d 679 (1962).

The judgment roll should accompany copy of the judgment. In an action on a judgment of a foreign state an exemplified copy of the judgment, to be admissible in evidence, should be accompanied by the judgment roll, i.e., the record proper up to the time of judgment. The complaint, the summons, the return upon the summons, the affidavit for publication where constructive service is made, and papers of that sort constitute a part of the judgment roll. Walker v. Calada Materials Co., 150 Colo. 572, 375 P.2d 679 (1962).

There is a difference between a certified copy of a record and one made according to this rule. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. Hargrove, 144 Colo. 115, 355 P.2d 312 (1960).

The admission of certified copies of documents purporting to prove a foreign judgment is erroneous where such documents failed to comply with the provisions of this rule. Superior Distrib. Corp. v. Hargrove, 144 Colo. 115, 355 P.2d 312 (1960).

Where there is no attempt to comply with the provisions of this rule, a decree entered by a foreign court is not admissible in evidence for any purpose. Potter v. Potter, 131 Colo. 14, 278 P.2d 1020 (1955); In re Seewald, 22 P.3d 580 (Colo. App. 2001).

III. OTHER PROOF.

Copy of official record admissible. Where an individual with legal custody of the records testifies that the evidence offered is a true copy of an official record maintained in the ordinary course of business, it is admissible. People v. Roybal, 43 Colo. App. 483, 609 P.2d 1110 (1979).

Any method authorized. Section (c) of this rule provides expressly that proof of official records may be made by any method authorized by law. People v. Rivera, 37 Colo. App. 4, 542 P.2d 90 (1975).

A court may take judicial notice of any matters in its own records and files. Sakal v. Donnelly, 30 Colo. App. 384, 494 P.2d 1316 (1972).

IV. STATUTES AND LAWS OF OTHER STATES AND COUNTRIES.

Annotator's note. Since section (e) of this rule is similar to § 396 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Courts do not take judicial notice of the statutes of other states. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Betts, 10 Colo. 431, 15 P. 821 (1887).

The statutes of a foreign state are sufficiently proven by testimony of a duly licensed practicing attorney of that state where such testimony is uncontradicted. Mosko v. Matthews, 87 Colo. 55, 284 P. 1021 (1930).

Applied in Spencer v. People in Interest of Spencer, 133 Colo. 196, 292 P.2d 971 (1956).

Rule 44.1. Determination of Foreign Law

A party who intends to raise an issue concerning the law of a foreign country shall give notice in his pleadings or other reasonable written notice. The court, in determining foreign law, may consider any relevant material or source, including testimony, whether or not submitted by a party or admissible under Rule 43. The court's determination shall be treated as a ruling on a question of law.

Rule 45. Subpoena

(a) In General.

(1) Form and Contents.

(A) Requirements — In General. Every subpoena must:

(i) state the court from which it issued;

(ii) state the title of the action, the court in which it is pending and its case number;

(iii) command each person to whom it is directed to do one or both of the following at a specified time and place: attend and testify at a deposition, hearing or trial; or produce designated books, papers and documents, whether in physical or electronic form (''records''), or tangible things, in that person's possession, custody, or control;

(iv) identify the party and the party's attorney, if any, who is serving the subpoena;

(v) identify the names, addresses and phone numbers and email addresses where known, of the attorneys for each of the parties and of each party who has appeared in the action without an attorney;

(vi) state the method for recording the testimony if the subpoena commands attendance at a deposition; and

(vii) if production of records or a tangible thing is sought, set out the text of sections (c) and (d) of this Rule verbatim on or as an attachment to the subpoena.

(B) Combining or Separating a Command to Produce. A command to produce records or tangible things may be included in a subpoena commanding attendance at a deposition, hearing, or trial, or may be contained in a separate subpoena that does not require attendance.

(C) Deposition Subpoena Must Comply With Discovery Rules. A deposition subpoena may require the production of records or tangible things which are within the scope of discovery permitted by C.R.C.P. 26. A subpoena must not be used to avoid the limits on discovery imposed by C.R.C.P. 16.1, 16.2 or 26 or by the Case Management Order applicable to that case.

(D) Subpoenas to Named Parties. A subpoena issued under this Rule may not be utilized to obtain discovery from named parties to the action unless the court orders otherwise for good cause.

(2) Issued by Whom. The clerk of the court in which the case is docketed must issue a subpoena, signed but otherwise in blank, to a party who requests it. That party must complete it before service. An attorney who has entered an appearance in the case also may issue, complete and sign a subpoena as an officer of the court.

(b) Service.

(1) Time for Service. Unless otherwise ordered by the court for good cause:

(A) Subpoena for Trial or Hearing Testimony. Service of a subpoena only for testimony in a trial or hearing shall be made no later than 48 hours before the time for appearance set out in the subpoena.

(B) Subpoena for Deposition Testimony. Service of a subpoena only for testimony in a deposition shall be made not later than 7 days before compliance is required.

(C) Subpoena for Production of Documents. Service of any subpoena commanding a person to produce records or tangible things in that person's possession, custody, or control shall be made not later than 14 days before compliance is required. In the case of an expedited hearing pursuant to these rules or any statute, service shall be made as soon as possible before compliance is required.

(2) By Whom Served; How Served. Any person who is at least 18 years old and not a party may serve a subpoena. Serving a subpoena requires delivering a copy to the named person or service as otherwise ordered by the court consistent with due process. Service is also valid if the person named in the subpoena has signed a written acknowledgement or waiver of service. Service may be made anywhere within the state of Colorado.

(3) Tender of Payment for Mileage. If the subpoena requires a person's attendance, the payment for 1 day's mileage allowed by law must be tendered to the subpoenaed person at the time of service of the subpoena or within a reasonable time after service of the subpoena, but in any event prior to the appearance date. Payment for mileage need not be tendered when the subpoena issues on behalf of the state of Colorado or any of its officers or agencies.

(4) Proof of Service. Proof of service shall be made as provided in C.R.C.P. 4(h). Original subpoenas and returns of service of such subpoenas need not be filed with the court.

(5) Notice to Other Parties.

(A) Service on the Parties. Immediately following service of a subpoena, the party or attorney who issues the subpoena, shall serve a copy of the subpoena on all parties pursuant to C.R.C.P. 5; provided that such service is not required for a subpoena issued pursuant to C.R.C.P. 69.

(B) Notice of Changes. The party or attorney who issues the subpoena must give the other parties reasonable notice of any written modification of the subpoena or any new date and time for the deposition, or production of records and tangible things.

(C) Availability of Produced Records or Tangible Things. The party or attorney who issues the subpoena for production of records or tangible things must make available in a timely fashion for inspection and copying to all other parties the records or tangible things produced by the responding party.

(c) Protecting a Person Subject to a Subpoena.

(1) Avoiding Undue Burden or Expense; Sanctions. A party or attorney responsible for issuing and serving a subpoena must take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to the subpoena. The issuing court must enforce this duty and impose an appropriate sanction, which may include lost earnings and reasonable attorney's fees, on a party or attorney who fails to comply.

(2) Command to Produce Records or Tangible Things.

(A) Attendance Not Required. A person commanded to produce records or tangible things need not attend in person at the place of production unless also commanded to attend for a deposition, hearing, or trial.

(B) For Production of Privileged Records.

(i) If a subpoena commands production of records from a person who provides services subject to one of the privileges established by C.R.S. § 13-90-107, or from the records custodian for that person, which records pertain to services performed by or at the direction of that person (''privileged records''), such a subpoena must be accompanied by an authorization signed by the privilege holder or holders or by a court order authorizing production of such records.

(ii) Prior to the entry of an order for a subpoena to obtain the privileged records, the court shall consider the rights of the privilege holder or holders in such privileged records, including an appropriate means of notice to the privilege holder or holders or whether any objection to production may be resolved by redaction.

(iii) If a subpoena for privileged records does not include a signed authorization or court order permitting the privileged records to be produced by means of subpoena, the subpoenaed person shall not appear to testify and shall not disclose any of the privileged records to the party who issued the subpoena.

(C) Objections. Any party or the person subpoenaed to produce records or tangible things may submit to the party issuing the subpoena a written objection to inspecting, copying, testing or sampling any or all of the materials. The objection must be submitted before the earlier of the time specified for compliance or 14 days after the subpoena is served. If objection is made, the party issuing the subpoena shall promptly serve a copy of the objection on all other parties. If an objection is made, the party issuing the subpoena is not entitled to inspect, copy, test or sample the materials except pursuant to an order of the court from which the subpoena was issued. If an objection is made, at any time on notice to the subpoenaed person and the other parties, the party issuing the subpoena may move the issuing court for an order compelling production.

(3) Quashing or Modifying a Subpoena.

(A) When Required. On motion made promptly and in any event at or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance, the issuing court must quash or modify a subpoena that:

(i) fails to allow a reasonable time to comply;

(ii) requires a person who is neither a party nor a party's officer to attend a deposition in any county other than where the person resides or is employed or transacts his business in person, or at such other convenient place as is fixed by an order of court;

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter, if no exception or waiver applies; or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) When Permitted. To protect a person subject to or affected by a subpoena, the issuing court may, on motion made promptly and in any event at or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance, quash or modify the subpoena if it requires:

(i) disclosing a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information; or

(ii) disclosing an unretained expert's opinion or information that does not describe specific matters in dispute and results from the expert's study that was not requested by a party.

(C) Specifying Conditions as an Alternative. In the circumstances described in Rule 45(c)(3)(B), the court may, instead of quashing or modifying a subpoena, order attendance or production under specified conditions if the issuing party:

(i) shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship; and

(ii) ensures that the subpoenaed person will be reasonably compensated.

(d) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) Producing Records or Tangible Things.

(A) Unless agreed in writing by all parties, the privilege holder or holders and the person subpoenaed, production shall not be made until at least 14 days after service of the subpoena, except that, in the case of an expedited hearing pursuant to these rules or any statute, in the absence of such agreement, production shall be made only at the place, date and time for compliance set forth in the subpoena; and

(B) If not objected to, a person responding to a subpoena to produce records or tangible things must produce them as they are kept in the ordinary course of business or must organize and label them to correspond to the categories in the demand and must permit inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of the materials.

(2) Claiming Privilege or Protection.

(A) Information Withheld. Unless the subpoena is subject to subsection (c)(2)(B) of this Rule relating to production of privileged records, a person withholding subpoenaed information under a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial-preparation material must:

(i) make the claim expressly; and

(ii) describe the nature of the withheld records or tangible things in a manner that, without revealing information itself privileged or protected, will enable the parties to assess the claim.

(B) Information Produced. If information produced in response to a subpoena is subject to a claim of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material, the person making the claim may notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for it. After being notified, a party must promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and any copies it has; must not use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved; must take reasonable steps to retrieve the information if the party disclosed it before being notified; and may promptly present the information to the court under seal for a determination of the claim. The person who produced the information must preserve the information until the claim is resolved.

(e) Subpoena for Deposition; Place of Examination.

(1) Residents of This State. A resident of this state may be required by subpoena to attend an examination upon deposition only in the county wherein the witness resides or is employed or transacts his business in person, or at such other convenient place as is fixed by an order of court.

(2) Nonresidents of This State. A nonresident of this state may be required by subpoena to attend only within forty miles from the place of service of the subpoena in the state of Colorado or in the county wherein the nonresident resides or is employed or transacts business in person or at such other convenient place as is fixed by an order of court.

(f) Contempt. The issuing court may hold in contempt a person who, having been served, fails without adequate excuse to obey the subpoena. A nonparty's failure to obey must be excused if the subpoena purports to require the nonparty to attend or produce at a place outside the limits of Rule 45(e).

COMMITTEE COMMENTS

If a subpoena to attend a deposition is sought pursuant to Rule 45(c)(2)(A) in order to produce and authenticate documents, the issuing party should consider establishing admissibility under C.R.E. 902(11) as a means of reducing undue burden and expense upon the subpoenaed person.

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Applied in Stubblefield v. District Court, 198 Colo. 569, 603 P.2d 559 (1979); Black ex rel. Bayless v. Cullar, 665 P.2d 1029 (Colo. App. 1983).

II. ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES.

Protections not grounds for quashing subpoena. It was error for trial court to quash subpoena of a witness on the basis of the attorney-client privilege and attorney work product doctrine. These protections may be asserted at trial as a bar to specific questions, but are not grounds for quashing a subpoena properly issued. S.C. Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 698 P.2d 1369 (Colo. App. 1984).

A motion to quash subpoenas issued to third persons allegedly contributing to support of children is properly granted where the voluntary donations of such parties have nothing to do with a defendant's duty to support children. Garrow v. Garrow, 152 Colo. 480, 382 P.2d 809 (1963).

III. PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

A party seeking a "subpoena duces tecum" requiring production of documents by the other party must show good cause for the issuance of such a subpoena. Lee v. Mo. P. R. R. 152 Colo. 179, 381 P.2d 35 (1963).

A "tangible thing" described in section (b) does not include real estate or fixtures. Thompson v. Thornton, 198 P.3d 1281 (Colo. App. 2008).

For purposes of section (b), a subpoena duces tecum cannot compel the inspection of premises. Thompson v. Thornton, 198 P.3d 1281 (Colo. App. 2008).

This rule must be read in conjunction with C.R.C.P. 34, governing the production of documents. Lee v. Mo. P. R. R., 152 Colo. 179, 381 P.2d 35 (1963).

Colorado rules of civil procedure are not directly applicable to enforcement proceedings under the securities act. However, a court may consider the policies underlying section (b) of this rule in ruling on a motion for the advancement of costs incurred in complying with an administrative subpoena. Feigin v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 897 P.2d 814 (Colo. 1995).

In the exercise of their equitable authority, district courts may quash an administrative subpoena found to be unreasonable or oppressive.

Feigin v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 897 P.2d 814 (Colo. 1995).

Where it was shown that a claim agent of a railroad could not give coherent story of an accident he investigated without first refreshing his memory from the file of such investigation, such evidence was sufficient to show good cause for the production of the file and it was error to quash a ''subpoena duces tecum''. Lee v. Mo. P. R. R., 152 Colo. 179, 381 P.2d 35 (1963).

Trial court did not have discretion to order disclosure of psychologist's records during discovery, even for in camera review. Absent a clear waiver of psychologist-patient privilege, a trial court may not review documents related to a patient's treatment even in camera. People v. Sisneros, 55 P.3d 797 (Colo. 2002).

Taxpayer has standing to raise legitimacy of access to records in motion to quash subpoena. Once the court allows intervention in a § 39-21-112 proceeding, it follows that a taxpayer with an expectation of privacy in his bank records has standing to raise the legitimacy of governmental access to the records in a motion to quash the subpoena for the records. Charnes v. DiGiacomo, 200 Colo. 94, 612 P.2d 1117 (1980).

As a general rule, recipients of subpoenas in criminal proceedings must assume the cost of compliance as a matter of civic responsibility. However, an individualized determination is called for when it is claimed that the cost of compliance with a subpoena renders the subpoena itself unreasonable and oppressive. The person seeking to quash an administrative subpoena on such grounds has the burden of establishing the precise amount of the cost and that such amount exceeds the amount the recipient would reasonably be expected to incur as a civic responsibility. Feigin v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 897 P.2d 814 (Colo. 1995).

If an attorney desires to receive subpoenaed documents from a subpoenaed witness in advance of the time and place specified in the subpoena, or if the subpoenaed witness offers to produce the documents ahead of time, the attorney must confer with and obtain consent from all other parties to the case as well as the subpoenaed witness. If the other parties or the subpoenaed witness does not consent, then production must wait until the time and place of the event specified in the subpoena. Obtaining consent for the advance production of subpoenaed documents not only satisfies the procedural safeguards of this rule but also affords pragmatic accommodation to the realities of litigation practice. In re Wiggins, 2012 CO 44, 279 P.3d 1.

Manner by which father's attorney obtained mother's former employment file and any other documents from mother's former place of employment in response to a subpoena violated rule. Rule requires that, unless subpoenaed witness and other parties consent to an alternate arrangement or by other court order, subpoenaed documents be produced only at the deposition, hearing, or trial specified in the subpoena. Attorney's unilateral arrangements violated rule because they prevented mother from having an opportunity to object to the subpoena before her entire employment file was disclosed. In re Wiggins, 2012 CO 44, 279 P.3d 1.

IV. SERVICE.

Failure to find "good cause" for serving subpoena fewer than 48 hours in advance of appearance or to grant continuance held abuse of discretion. Montoya v. Career Serv. Bd., 708 P.2d 478 (Colo. App. 1985).

Subpoenas that were served on Friday morning, directing the witnesses to appear on Monday morning, were not served 48 hours before the time the witnesses were to appear and were properly quashed. Wilkerson v. State, 830 P.2d 1121 (Colo. App. 1992).

Service on registered agent. Personal delivery of interrogatories on foreign corporation's registered agent constitutes effective service. Isis Litig., L.L.C., v. Svensk Filmindustri, 170 P.3d 742 (Colo. App. 2007).

V. DEPOSITIONS.

Section (d)(2) of this rule, relating to nonresidents, is limited solely to those persons who are either parties to the action or witnesses therein, both of which classes of nonresidents must first have been properly served in the action in order to subject them to the jurisdiction of the court, unless they have waived or consented to the jurisdiction of a Colorado court. Solliday v. District Court, 135 Colo. 489, 313 P.2d 1000 (1957); Minn. ex rel. Minn. Att'y Gen. v. District Court, 155 Colo. 521, 395 P.2d 601 (1964).

This rule, as applied to nonresidents not parties to an action in Colorado and not served in Colorado, is subject to the implied limitations that nonresidents are subject to jurisdiction due to mutual compact or uniform act. Solliday v. District Court, 135 Colo. 489, 313 P.2d 1000 (1957); Minn. ex rel. Minn. Att'y Gen. v. District Court, 155 Colo. 521, 395 P.2d 601 (1964).

Applied in CeBuzz, Inc. v. Sniderman, 171 Colo. 246, 466 P.2d 457 (1970).

VI. HEARING OR TRIAL.

The refusal to reopen a compensation case for the purpose of taking testimony from a witness is not error where there was no showing that any subpoena was issued under the provisions of section (e) of this rule. Pac. Employers Ins. Co. v. Kirkpatrick, 111 Colo. 470, 143 P.2d 267 (1943).

Rule 46. Exceptions Unnecessary

Formal exceptions to rulings or orders of the court are unnecessary; but for all purposes for which an exception has heretofore been necessary it is sufficient that a party, at the time the ruling or order of the court is made or sought, makes known to the court the action which he desires the court to take or his objection to the action of the court and his grounds therefor; and, if a party has no opportunity to object to a ruling or order at the time it is made, the absence of an objection does not thereafter prejudice him.

Rule 47. Jurors

(a) Orientation and Examination of Jurors. An orientation and examination shall be conducted to inform prospective jurors about their duties and service and to obtain information about prospective jurors to facilitate an intelligent exercise of challenges for cause and peremptory challenges.

(1) The jury commissioner is authorized to examine and, when appropriate, excuse prospective jurors who do not satisfy the statutory qualifications for jury service, or who are entitled to a postponement, or as otherwise authorized by appropriate court order.

(2) When prospective jurors have reported to the courtroom, the judge shall explain to them in plain and clear language:

(I) The grounds for challenge for cause;

(II) Each juror's duty to volunteer information that would constitute a disqualification or give rise to a challenge for cause;

(III) The identities of the parties and their counsel;

(IV) The nature of the case, utilizing the parties' CJI(3d) Instruction 2:1 or, alternatively, a joint statement of factual information intended to provide a relevant context for the prospective jurors to respond to questions asked of them. Alternatively, at the request of counsel and in the discretion of the judge, counsel may present such information through brief non-argumentative statements.

(V) General legal principles applicable to the case, including burdens of proof, definitions of preponderance and other pertinent evidentiary standards and other matters that jurors will be required to consider and apply in deciding the issues.

(3) The judge shall ask prospective jurors questions concerning their qualifications to serve as jurors. The parties or their counsel shall be permitted to ask the prospective jurors additional questions. In the discretion of the judge, juror questionnaires, posterboards and other methods may be used. The judge may limit the time available to the parties or their counsel for juror examination based on the needs of the case. Any party may request additional time for juror examination in the Trial Management Order, at the commencement of the trial, or during juror examination based on developments during such examination. Any such request shall include the reasons for needing additional juror examination time. Denial of a request for additional time shall be based on a specific finding of good cause reflecting the nature of the particular case and other factors that the judge determines are relevant to the particular case and are appropriate to properly effectuate the purposes of juror examination set forth in section (a) of this Rule. The court may limit or terminate repetitious, irrelevant, unreasonably lengthy, abusive, or otherwise improper examination.

(4) Jurors shall not be required to disclose personal locating information, such as address or place of business in open court and such information shall not be maintained in files open to the public. The trial judge shall assure that parties and counsel have access to appropriate and necessary locating information.

(5) Once the jury is impaneled, the judge will again explain in more detail the general principles of law applicable to civil cases, the procedural guidelines regarding conduct by jurors during the trial, case specific legal principles and definitions of technical or special terms expected to be used during the presentation of the case. Jurors shall be told that they may not discuss the case with anyone until the trial is over with one exception: jurors may discuss the evidence among themselves in the jury room when all jurors are present. Jurors shall also be told that they must avoid discussing any potential outcome of the case and must avoid reaching any conclusion until they have heard all the evidence, final instructions by the court and closing arguments by counsel. The trial court shall have the discretion to prohibit or limit pre-deliberation discussions of the evidence in a particular trial based on a specific finding of good cause reflecting the particular circumstances of the case.

(b) Alternate Jurors. The court may direct that one or two jurors in addition to the regular panel be called and impaneled to sit as alternate jurors. Alternate jurors in the order in which they are called shall replace jurors who, prior to the time the jury retires to consider its verdict, become unable or disqualified to perform their duties. An alternate juror who does not replace a principal juror shall not be discharged until the jury renders its verdict or until such time as determined by the court. If the court and the parties agree, alternate jurors may deliberate and participate fully with the principal jurors in considering and returning a verdict. If one or two alternate jurors are called each side is entitled to one peremptory challenge in addition to those otherwise allowed. The additional peremptory challenge may be exercised as to any prospective juror.

(c) Challenge to Array. Any party may challenge the array of jurors by motion setting forth particularly the causes of challenge; and the party opposing the challenge may join issue on the motion, and the issue shall be tried and decided by the court.

(d) Challenge to Individual Jurors. A challenge to an individual juror may be for cause or peremptory.

(e) Challenges for Cause. Challenges for cause may be taken on one or more of the following grounds:

(1) A want of any of the qualifications prescribed by the statute to render a person competent as a juror;

(2) Consanguinity or affinity within the third degree to any party;

(3) Standing in the relation of guardian and ward, master and servant, employer and clerk, or principal and agent to either party, or being a member of the family of any party; or a partner in business with any party or being security on any bond or obligation for any party;

(4) Having served as a juror or been a witness on a previous trial between the same parties for the same cause of action;

(5) Interest on the part of the juror in the event of the action, or in the main question involved in the action, except the interest of the juror as a member, or citizen of a municipal corporation;

(6) Having formed or expressed an unqualified opinion or belief as to the merits of the action;

(7) The existence of a state of mind in the juror evincing enmity against or bias to either party.

(f) Order and Determination of Challenges for Cause. The plaintiff first, and afterwards the defendant, shall complete challenges for cause. Such challenges shall be tried by the court, and the juror challenged, and any other person, may be examined as a witness.

(g) Order of Selecting Jury. The clerk shall draw by lot and call the number of jurors that are to try the cause plus such an additional number as will allow for all peremptory challenges permitted. After each challenge for cause sustained, another juror shall be called to fill the vacancy and may be challenged for cause. When the challenges for cause are completed, the clerk shall make a list of jurors remaining, in the order called, and each side, beginning with plaintiff, shall indicate thereon its peremptory challenge to one juror at a time in regular turn until all peremptory challenges are exhausted or waived. The clerk shall then swear the remaining jurors, or so many of them in the order listed as will make up the number fixed to try the cause, and these shall constitute the jury.

(h) Peremptory Challenges. Each side shall be entitled to four peremptory challenges, and if there is more than one party to a side they must join in such challenges. Additional peremptory challenges in such number as the court may see fit may be allowed to parties appearing in the action either under Rule 14 or Rule 24 if the trial court in its discretion determines that the ends of justice so require.

(i) Oath of Jurors. As soon as the jury is completed, an oath or affirmation shall be administered to the jurors in substance:

That you and each of you will well and truly try the matter at issue between _____, the plaintiff, and _____, the defendant, and a true verdict render, according to the evidence.

(j) When Juror Discharged. If, before verdict, a juror becomes unable or disqualified to perform his duty and there is no alternate juror, the parties may agree to proceed with the other jurors, or that a new juror be sworn and the trial begun anew. If the parties do not so agree the court shall discharge the jury and the case shall be tried anew.

(k) Examination of Premises by Jury. If in the opinion of the court it is proper for the jury to see or examine any property or place, it may order the jury to be conducted thereto in a body by a court officer. A guide may be appointed. The court shall, in the presence of the parties, instruct the officer and guide as to their duties. While the jury is thus absent, no person shall speak to it on any subject connected with the trial excepting only the guide and officer in compliance with such instructions. The parties and their attorneys may be present.

(l) Deliberation of Jury. After hearing the charge the jury may either decide in court or retire for deliberation. If it retires, except as hereinafter provided in this section (l), it shall be kept together in a separate room or other convenient place under the charge of one or more officers until it agrees upon a verdict or is discharged. While the jury is deliberating the officer shall, to the utmost of his ability, keep the jury together, separate from other persons. He shall not suffer any communication to be made to any juror or make any himself unless by order of the court except to ask it if it has agreed upon a verdict; and he shall not, before the verdict is rendered, communicate with any person the state of its deliberations or the verdict agreed upon. The court in its discretion in any individual case may modify the procedure under this Rule by permitting a jury which is deliberating to separate during the luncheon or dinner hour or separate for the night under appropriate cautionary instructions, with directions that they meet again at a time certain to resume deliberations again under the charge of the appropriate officer.

(m) Items Taken to Deliberation. Upon retiring, the jurors shall take the jury instructions, their juror notebooks and notes they personally made, if any, and to the extent feasible, those exhibits that have been admitted as evidence.

(n) Additional Instructions. After the jury has retired for deliberation, if it desires additional instructions, it may request the same from the court; any additional instructions shall be given it in court in the presence of or after notice to the parties.

(o) New Trial if No Verdict. When a jury is discharged or prevented from giving a verdict for any reason, the action shall be tried anew.

(p) When Sealed Verdict. While the jury is absent the court may adjourn from time to time, in respect to other business, but it shall be nevertheless deemed open for every purpose connected with the cause submitted to the jury, until a verdict is rendered or the jury discharged. The court may direct the jury to bring in a sealed verdict at the opening of court, in case of an agreement during a recess or adjournment for the day.

(q) Declaration of Verdict. When the jury has agreed upon its verdict it shall be conducted into court by the officer in charge. The names of the jurors shall be called, and the jurors shall be asked by the court or clerk if they have agreed upon a verdict, and if the answer is in the affirmative, they shall hand the same to the clerk. The clerk shall enter in his records the names of the jurors. Upon a request of any party the jury may be polled.

(r) Correction of Verdict. If the verdict is informal or insufficient in any particular, the jury, under the advice of the court, may correct it or may be again sent out.

(s) Verdict Recorded, Disagreement. The verdict, if agreed upon by all jurors, shall be received and recorded and the jury discharged. If all the jurors do not concur in the verdict, the jury may be again sent out, or may be discharged.

(t) Juror Notebooks. Juror notebooks shall be available during trial and deliberation to aid jurors in the performance of their duties.

(u) Juror Questions. Jurors shall be allowed to submit written questions to the court for the court to ask of witnesses during trial, in compliance with procedure established by the trial court. The court shall, out of the hearing of the jury, review each question with counsel or unrepresented litigants and consider any objections they make. The court shall have discretion to prohibit, modify or limit a question for good cause, even if an objection is not made, before posing it to the witness. The court shall have discretion to allow juror follow up questions in writing. The court shall not allow a juror to clarify a question by an oral statement or pose an oral question directly to a witness. The parties shall be permitted to ask additional questions of the witness within the scope of any juror questions posed by the court.

COMMENT

The amendments to this rule add language to require orientation of the prospective jurors. This case-specific orientation would be in addition to any general orientation the prospective jurors may have received. As set forth in the standardized outline that has been developed for use in the orientation, examination and selection processes, the imparted information and instructions should be clear and as neutral as possible.

The contents of any factual orientation information should be reviewed by the judge with counsel at a pre-trial conference to enable consensus concerning the information to be provided. It is recommended that the judge read a stipulated statement of what the case is about. If counsel cannot agree about the content of such a statement, the Judge may develop a preliminary statement of the case in the judge's own discretion. Alternatively, if both counsel desire to make brief, non-argumentative statements to the prospective jurors on what the case is about, the court should have discretion to permit such statements.

As part of the case-specific orientation, certain preliminary instructions should be used to help prospective jurors to understand the claims and defenses of the parties in the civil case. At a minimum, these instructions should address burden of proof, credibility, objections by counsel, bench conferences and whether jurors will be permitted to take notes and ask questions. In complex or technical cases, definitions of terms and other information that would help orient the jury to the case should be given. The trial judge, rather than counsel, should give these instructions as part of the before-examination orientation.

Provisions of the rules pertaining to examination of prospective jurors have been reorganized and clarified to emphasize certain objections. Specific authority is conferred on the jury commissioner to allow service ''postponements'' as contemplated by C.R.S. § 13-71-116 and to examine and excuse prospective jurors who do not satisfy statutory qualification requirements of C.R.S. § 13-71-105.

The court's role has been better defined. Because of the court's neutral role in the case, the trial judge should conduct the initial juror examination by asking standard questions and also those which relate to the specific case, but may be of a sensitive nature. A uniform outline of orientation, juror examination and juror selection procedures has been developed by the committee for both civil and criminal cases. Use of such outline would assure that all important information is covered, time is saved and that cases are handled uniformly throughout the state.

Counsel and pro se litigants would continue to have a part in the juror examination process by being allowed to question prospective jurors on relevant matters not covered by the trial judge. The judge, however, would continue to have authority to limit such examinations to avoid repetition, irrelevant or improper inquiries and wasting of time.

In addition to the standardized outline of orientation, jury examination and jury selection, posterboards and questionnaires have been developed to enhance the process of acquiring information from prospective jurors. When and how posterboards and questionnaires are used in discretionary with the trial judge. Posterboard questions provide a method to obtain information from prospective jurors in a fast, neutral and flexible way. Such method gives counsel time to observe panelists and make notes, which is not always possible when the attorney is engrossed in asking questions directly. Questionnaires, while not normally used in routine cases, can be valuable in those cases involving high publicity and/or complex issues. Where used, questionnaires not only can obtain autobiographical information, but can also seek case-specific information to identify potential prejudice on sensitive issues.

Juror notebooks should be used in trials as an aid to jurors in the performance of their duties. The court should supply three-ring binders which can be retrieved and repeatedly reused. The court and counsel should provide the materials to be placed in the juror notebooks. The timing and placement of particular materials in the notebooks will be at the court's discretion. Juror notebooks should not be taken from the courtroom or jury room. They should be returned at the end of the trial so that notes can be destroyed and other materials replaced, recycled and/or reused. Sections should be tabbed with particular sections deleted or left empty as appropriate.

Juror notebooks should contain the following:

(1) Orientation materials;

(2) Preliminary jury instructions;

(3) A copy of the final instructions given by the court;

(4) Items ordered by the court; and

(5) Blank paper for juror notes (together with a copy of CJI(3D) 1:7).

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Applied in City of Lakewood v. DeRoos, 631 P.2d 1140 (Colo. App. 1981).

II. ORIENTATION OF JURORS.

Jury instruction was not a proper pattern introductory statement of the case instruction in dependency and neglect case under section (a)(2)(IV) when it incorporated the entire case history from the petition into the statement-of-the-case instruction to prospective jurors. The case history included unsubstantiated allegations and allegations based on inadmissible evidence. The error impaired the basic fairness of the trial, requiring reversal. People in Interest of M.H-K., 2018 COA 178, 433 P.3d 627.

III. EXAMINATION OF JURORS.

Law reviews. For article, ''Colorado Criminal Procedure — Does It Meet Minimum Standards?'', see 28 Dicta 14 (1951).

The purpose of a "voir dire" examination of the jury panel is to enable the court and counsel to select as fair and impartial a jury as possible. Oglesby v. Conger, 31 Colo. App. 504, 507 P.2d 883 (1972).

Collective or individual questioning not improper. It is not improper for plaintiff's counsel on voir dire to ask each prospective juror individually a question that could be properly asked of the panel collectively. Davis v. Fortino & Jackson Chevrolet Co., 32 Colo. App. 222, 510 P.2d 1376 (1973).

Considerable latitude must be allowed in voir dire examination, when made in good faith, to enable counsel properly to exercise not only challenges for cause but also peremptory challenges. Oglesby v. Conger, 31 Colo. App. 504, 507 P.2d 883 (1972).

Permitting questions to jurors upon which to base a peremptory challenge is within the discretion of the trial court. Bonfils v. Hayes, 70 Colo. 336, 201 P. 677 (1921).

Counsel has right to inquire about relationship with insurance company. In voir dire, counsel not only has the right to inquire if any prospective juror has any relationship to a defendant's insurance company, but counsel may also inquire into that relationship, if one exists. Oglesby v. Conger, 31 Colo. App. 504, 507 P.2d 883 (1972); Smith v. District Ct. of State of Colo., 907 P.2d 611 (Colo. 1994).

So long as counsel acts in good faith in a personal injury case, the counsel for plaintiff may interrogate prospective jurors respecting their interest in or connection with indemnity insurance companies apparently interested in the result of the case. Vindicator Consol. Gold Mining Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 P. 313 (1906); Independence Coffee & Spice Co. v. Kalkman, 61 Colo. 98, 156 P. 135 (1916).

Counsel for plaintiff may not interrogate defendant's counsel, either at the bar or as a witness, concerning whether an insurance company is interested in the case for the purpose of obtaining a basis for interrogating the jurors. Vindicator Consol. Gold Mining Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 P. 313 (1906); Independence Coffee & Spice Co. v. Kalkman, 61 Colo. 98, 156 P. 135 (1916).

Order preventing questioning on insurance not reversible error in a certain case. A protective order preventing plaintiff from questioning two prospective jurors regarding any interest in defendants' insurance company is not reversible error where prospective jurors had heard the insurance question asked of other jurors and prospective jurors stated there were no interests or other information which they felt ought to be known by plaintiff. Kaltenbach v. Julesburg Sch. Dist. RE-1, 43 Colo. App. 150, 603 P.2d 955 (1979).

Limitations on voir dire questions are within the discretion of the trial court and will not be overturned on appeal absent an abuse of discretion. People v. Greenwell, 830 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court may place reasonable restrictions on questioning of jurors if the voir dire process facilitates an intelligent exercise of a party's peremptory challenges and challenges for cause. People v. Greenwell, 830 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1992).

A trial court may properly restrict questions as to the content of publicity regarding defendants and their pasts. People v. Greenwell, 830 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1992).

Whether community prejudice against a party exists is a question of fact that may be developed at voir dire. Powell v. City of Ouray, 32 Colo. App. 44, 507 P.2d 1101 (1973).

Section 13-71-105 (2)(b) provides that a prospective juror shall be disqualified based on the inability to read, speak, and understand the English language. People v. Lee, 93 P.3d 544 (Colo. App. 2003).

Whether a prospective juror should be disqualified under § 13-71-105 (2)(b) is a question of fact for resolution by the trial court. People v. Lee, 93 P.3d 544 (Colo. App. 2003).

Alternatives to mistrial in context of prospective juror who has made prejudicial comments during voir dire. Curative instructions and jury canvassing are two alternatives to a mistrial that may remedy the prejudice to a defendant that results from a prospective juror's prejudicial comments during voir dire. People v. Mersman, 148 P.3d 199 (Colo. App. 2006).

The general rule that curative instructions will normally remedy any harm caused by a prejudicial statement is also applicable where a jury panel is exposed to prejudicial comments by a prospective juror. A trial court's instruction to the remaining jurors to disregard the statement and render a verdict based on the evidence presented in court will normally be sufficient to cure any harm to the defendant. To receive a curative instruction in this context, however, a defendant must request it, and a trial court does not commit plain error if it does not give a curative instruction sua sponte. People v. Mersman, 148 P.3d 199 (Colo. App. 2006).

In the alternative, the trial court could canvass the jury to see whether the jury actually heard the prejudicial comment and, if so, whether the comment affected the jurors ability to decide the case fairly. People v. Mersman, 148 P.3d 199 (Colo. App. 2006).

Where a juror is asked if he would be satisfied to have a man, with the same amount of prejudice that he had against defendants, try his case, an objection to such question is properly sustained. Bonfils v. Hayes, 70 Colo. 336, 201 P. 677 (1921).

The absence of a direct reference during voir dire to the name of the police officer defendant inmate had previously been convicted of murdering did not preclude a full and complete elaboration of defendant's defense theory that, because of the murder conviction, corrections personnel disliked him, and because of his testimony against a co-conspirator, other inmates considered home a snitch, someone placed the marihuana cigarette for which he was being prosecuted in his pocket without his knowledge. People v. Greenwell, 830 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1992).

Right to demand a discharge for improper interrogation may be waived. Where during the examination of the jury counsel for defendant announces that he does not wish to demand discharge of the jury on the ground of alleged improper interrogation of its members, the statement constitutes a waiver of the right to have the court declare a mistrial on such ground at that stage of the proceedings, if any such right existed. Rains v. Rains, 97 Colo. 19, 46 P.2d 740 (1935).

IV. ALTERNATE JURORS.

Law reviews. For article, ''Colorado Criminal Procedure — Does It Meet Minimum Standards?'', see 28 Dicta 14 (1951).

The purpose of seating an alternate juror is to have available another juror when, through unforeseen circumstances, a juror is unable to continue to serve. People v. Abbott, 690 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1984); Hardesty v. Pino, 222 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2009).

A trial court is in the best position to evaluate whether a juror is unable to serve, and its decision to excuse a juror will not be disturbed absent a gross abuse of discretion. People v. Abbott, 690 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1984); Hardesty v. Pino, 222 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2009).

A trial court is not required to conduct a more thorough investigation to make a factual determination regarding an absent juror's physical inability to continue. Hardesty v. Pino, 222 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2009).

Where some unforeseen circumstance unrelated to the merits of a case hampers a juror's continued ability to sit, replacing a juror with an alternate is in the nature of an administrative task. People v. Anderson, 183 P.3d 649 (Colo. App. 2007); Hardesty v. Pino, 222 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2009).

Erroneously permitting an alternate juror to deliberate and participate fully with the principal jurors in considering and returning a verdict when a party objects is harmless pursuant to C.R.C.P. 61 because the error did not affect the substantial rights of the objecting party. Johnson v. Schonlaw, 2018 CO 73, 426 P.3d 345.

V. CHALLENGES FOR CAUSE.

Annotator's note. Since section (e) of this rule is similar to § 200 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Trial court entitled to accept statements of jurors made under oath in determining whether bias or enmity exists. Freedman v. Kaiser Fund. Health Plan, 849 P.2d 811 (Colo. App. 1992).

This rule specifies the grounds upon which a challenge for cause may be asserted. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Langdon, 187 Colo. 425, 532 P.2d 337 (1975).

A party is not to be unreasonably denied a challenge for cause to which he shows himself entitled. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Carson, 21 Colo. App. 604, 123 P. 680 (1912).

Trial courts are afforded broad discretion in ruling on a challenge for cause to a potential juror, and a decision to deny a challenge will be set aside only when the record shows a clear abuse of that discretion. People v. Greenwell, 830 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1992).

A party's right to a challenge is a substantial right which it is not within the discretion of the court to take away arbitrarily. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Carson, 21 Colo. App. 604, 123 P. 680 (1912).

While peremptory challenges are an important right of an accused, they are not constitutionally required. People v. Hollis, 670 P.2d 441 (Colo. App. 1983); People in Interest of M.M.O.P., 873 P.2d 24 (Colo. App. 1993).

The opportunity for such challenges must therefore be taken along with those limitations attendant upon the manner of its exercise. People v. Durre, 713 P.2d 1344 (Colo. App. 1985); People in Interest of M.M.O.P., 873 P.2d 24 (Colo. App. 1993).

The allocation of peremptory challenges is not a matter of judicial discretion. Blades v.

DaFoe, 704 P.2d 317 (Colo. App. 1985); People in Interest of M.M.O.P., 873 P.2d 24 (Colo. App. 1993).

Juvenile's right to equal protection was not violated by trial court's refusal to grant juvenile, who was charged as being a violent juvenile offender, five rather than four peremptory challenges where juvenile failed to show that there was unequal treatment within the class of violent juvenile offenders. Although an aggravated juvenile offender is entitled to five peremptory challenges under § 19-2-804 (4)(b)(I), the elements constituting an aggravated juvenile offender differ from those constituting a violent juvenile offender. People in Interest of M.M.O.P., 873 P.2d 24 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court may place reasonable restrictions on the questioning of jurors if the voir dire process facilitates an intelligent exercise of a party's preemptory challenges and challenges for cause. People v. Greenwell, 830 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1992).

Bias is implied under section (e) of this rule to insure that a jury is impartial, not only in fact, but in appearance. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Langdon, 187 Colo. 425, 532 P.2d 337 (1975).

In cases of prospective jurors who fall within the categories listed in section (e)(1) to (5), bias is implied to avoid even the appearance of prejudice. Action Realty v. Brethouwer, 633 P.2d 522 (Colo. App. 1981).

Actual bias need not be shown. When a prospective juror falls within the class of persons designated within section (e) of this rule, subject to a challenge for cause, actual bias need not be shown. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Langdon, 187 Colo. 425, 532 P.2d 337 (1975).

In determining whether a potential juror is biased toward any party, the trial court must consider the juror's voir dire statements as a whole. People v. Greenwell, 830 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1992).

The decision of the trial court on the challenge of a juror for cause is not ground for reversal unless manifestly erroneous and prejudicial to the party complaining of it. Salazar v. Taylor, 18 Colo. 538, 33 P. 369 (1893).

Automatic reversal rule in the civil context not overruled by People v. Novotny, 2014 CO 18, 320 P.3d 1194. The automatic reversal rule was initially announced in Denver City Tramway Co. v. Kennedy, 50 Colo. 418, 117 P. 167 (1911). The automatic reversal rule provides that when a trial court improvidently denies a challenge for cause to a prospective juror and then, after exercising a peremptory challenge to that juror, a litigant exhausts his or her peremptory challenges, reversal is required without a showing of prejudice. Morales-Guevara v. Koren, 2014 COA 89, 405 P.3d 251, overruled in Laura A. Newman, LLC v. Roberts, 2016 CO 9, 365 P.3d 972.

Denver City Tramway Co. remains the controlling and binding authority on the application of the automatic reversal rule in the civil context and was not overruled by the Colorado supreme court in People v. Novotny, in which the automatic reversal rule arose in the criminal context. Morales-Guevara v. Koren, 2014 COA 89, 405 P.3d 251, overruled in Laura A. Newman, LLC v. Roberts, 2016 CO 9, 365 P.3d 972.

The ruling of the trial court should be sustained unless it clearly appears from the record that the requirements have been disregarded in the overruling of a challenge for cause. Denver, S. P. & P. R. R. v. Moynahan, 8 Colo. 56, 5 P. 811 (1884).

The decision of the trial court to deny a challenge for cause will not be disturbed on review in the absence of a manifest abuse of discretion. Blades v. DaFoe, 666 P.2d 1126 (Colo. App. 1983), rev'd on other grounds, 704 P.2d 317 (Colo. 1985); Denver & Rio Grande v. Forster, 773 P.2d 612 (Colo. App. 1989).

If the examination leaves the competency of a juror in doubt, the ruling of the trial court will not be disturbed, for before an appellate court will interfere, it must appear that some positive statute has been violated or that the court has abused its discretion. Rio Grande S. R. R. v. Nichols, 52 Colo. 300, 123 P. 318 (1912).

For an assignment of error for overruling a challenge for cause to be considered, it must affirmatively appear that the challenging party was forced to accept disqualified jurors or exhausted all its peremptory challenges in attempting to get rid of them. Blackman v. Edsall, 17 Colo. App. 429, 68 P. 790 (1902); Rio Grande S. R. R. v. Nichols, 52 Colo. 300, 123 P. 318 (1912).

Where no bias in favor of the plaintiff nor enmity toward the defendants was shown, a challenge for cause is properly overruled. Bonfils v. Hayes, 70 Colo. 336, 201 P. 677 (1921); Stock Yards Nat'l Bank v. Neugebauer, 97 Colo. 246, 48 P.2d 813 (1935).

The trial court properly denied defendant's challenge for cause to a Colorado state senator who had participated in enacting the statute under which defendant was charged where the juror's voir dire responses as a whole neither showed any fixed predisposition against the defendant, nor indicated an inability to render an impartial verdict based on the evidence presented and the court's instructions. People v. Greenwell, 830 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1992).

Decision to deny challenge for cause will not be disturbed on review absent a manifest abuse of discretion. Freedman v. Kaiser Found. Health Plan, 849 P.2d 811 (Colo. App. 1992); Day v. Johnson, 232 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 255 P.3d 1064 (Colo. 2011).

A trial court is correct in denying plaintiff's request to dismiss prospective jurors for cause after establishing only that they were policyholders with the same insurance company as the defendant, because the fact that they were policyholders in and of itself would not necessarily affect their judgment in the case. Oglesby v. Conger, 31 Colo. App. 504, 507 P.2d 883 (1972).

A court does err in refusing to allow further inquiry of these policyholders, because such inquiry is necessary to enable counsel to determine if there is a basis for a challenge for cause and to aid counsel in later making an intelligent exercise of his peremptory challenges. Oglesby v. Conger, 31 Colo. App. 504, 507 P.2d 883 (1972).

Fact that juror and party are stockholders in same company not alone grounds for sustaining challenge. Where a juror is a stockholder in a company and the plaintiff is also a stockholder in the same company, but it does not appear that the juror is otherwise connected with the plaintiff or with the defendant, such a showing as this furnishes no grounds for sustaining the defendant's challenge of this juror for cause. Tabor v. Sullivan, 12 Colo. 136, 20 P. 437 (1889).

The interest of a juror as a member or citizen of a municipality which is a party to the proceeding does not disqualify him. Warner v. Gunnison, 2 Colo. App. 430, 31 P. 238 (1892).

Mere possibility of a potential juror's future contact with a litigant is insufficient to disqualify the juror under section (e)(5) of this rule. Where juror's interest in the event of the action was uncertain and speculative, trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying plaintiffs' challenge of the juror for cause. Day v. Johnson, 232 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 255 P.3d 1064 (Colo. 2011).

This rule does not make the forming or expressing of an opinion a decisive test as to the juror's competency, unless the opinion be unqualified as to the merits of the action. Collins v. Burns, 16 Colo. 7, 26 P. 145 (1891).

The law contemplates that the minds of jurors shall be free from such impressions of the merits as amount to a conviction or prejudgment of the case. The rule is a plain and necessary one, but its application is often exceedingly difficult; this is owing to a variety of circumstances which arise in practice. Denver, S. P. & P. R. R. v. Moynahan, 8 Colo. 56, 5 P. 811 (1884).

This rule relates more to the quality of the opinion than to the evidence upon which it is based, for the real question is whether the juror stands indifferent between the parties. The general rule that he who has heard rumors and reports only is competent, and he who has had a full relation of the facts from witnesses, or parties, is disqualified is intended as a guide to general results and is not without exceptions. Union Gold Mining Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat'l Bank, 2 Colo. 565 (1875), aff'd, 96 U.S. 640, 24 L. Ed. 648 (1877).

An opinion founded upon rumor of uncertain report, which has not taken firm hold of the mind, shall not disqualify. Union Gold Mining Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat'l Bank, 2 Colo. 565 (1875), aff'd, 96 U.S. 640, 24 L. Ed. 648 (1877).

Inability on the part of persons called to serve as jurors, to speak the English language and to understand it when spoken does not necessarily disqualify them from serving as jurors under the statutes of Colorado. Trinidad v. Simpson, 5 Colo. 65 (1879); In re Allison, 13 Colo. 525, 22 P. 820 (1889).

Court has discretion to exclude them. There are many serious objections to the interposition of interpreters in judicial proceedings and while a court holds it within its power to appoint an interpreter where a juror does not understand the English language, it is also within its discretion to exclude such jurors. Trinidad v. Simpson, 5 Colo. 65 (1879).

Whenever it is practicable to secure a full panel of English speaking jurors, a wise discretion would excuse from jury duty persons ignorant of that language. Trinidad v. Simpson, 5 Colo. 65 (1879).

Juror's religious reservation on judging another cannot be ground for challenge under section (e)(1). Action Realty v. Brethouwer, 633 P.2d 522 (Colo. App. 1981).

Failure to sustain challenge was reversible error. The failure of the trial judge to sustain the plaintiff's challenge for cause, after the juror was determined to be within the class of persons designated in section (e)(3) of this rule, was reversible error. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Langdon, 187 Colo. 425, 532 P.2d 337 (1975).

Test for disqualification because of religious conviction pursuant to section (e)(7) is the impartial fact-finder test. Action Realty v. Brethouwer, 633 P.2d 522 (Colo. App. 1981).

Law enforcement agency employee not challengeable for cause. The rules of civil procedure, unlike the rules of criminal procedure, do not explicitly define as grounds for a challenge for cause the juror's employment by a law enforcement agency. People in Interest of R.A.D., 196 Colo. 430, 586 P.2d 46 (1978).

No challenge for cause for being attorney. Trial court committed reversible error by granting a challenge for cause on the grounds that a prospective juror was an attorney, because this was not a ground set forth in the statute governing challenge for cause in civil actions and resulted in giving the defendant what amounted to an extra peremptory challenge. Faucett v. Hamill, 815 P.2d 989 (Colo. App. 1991).

No challenge for cause for juror with specific knowledge of damages caps under Health Care Availability Act notwithstanding requirement in § 13-64-302 (1) that prevents disclosure of such damage limitations to the jury. Trial court did not err in rejecting defendant's challenge for cause for prospective juror with special knowledge of the caps because this is not a ground set forth in section (e) of this rule for dismissal of a potential juror. Dupont v. Preston, 9 P.3d 1193 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd on other grounds, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001).

Juror's debtor-creditor relation with party insufficient for challenge for cause. In a civil case, a juror's standing in a debtor-creditor relation with a party, without more, is insufficient grounds for a challenge for cause. Kaltenbach v. Julesburg Sch. Dist. RE-1, 43 Colo. App. 150, 603 P.2d 955 (1979).

Denial of challenge not abuse of discretion if juror decides case impartially. Denial of challenge for cause of juror who stated that he could, and would, put his feelings to one side and decide the case fairly and impartially based on the evidence presented was not an abuse of discretion. Kaltenbach v. Julesburg Sch. Dist. RE-1, 43 Colo. App. 150, 603 P.2d 955 (1979).

A juror who expresses an ability to set aside any biases need not be disqualified from jury service. Trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying plaintiffs' challenge for cause of juror who, despite expressing sympathy for defendant, stated she could evaluate the case fairly. Day v. Johnson, 232 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 255 P.3d 1064 (Colo. 2011).

Trial court should have excused prospective juror who made no affirmative assurance that she would follow the court's instructions after expressing an unwillingness to do so. Morales-Guevara v. Koren, 2014 COA 89, 405 P.3d 251.

VI. ORDER AND DETERMINATION OF CHALLENGES FOR CAUSE.

Annotator's note. Since section (f) of this rule is similar to § 202 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant case construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The method and order of procedure in ascertaining the qualifications of veniremen and disposing of challenges for cause are commonly in the discretion of the court, but the discretion is not an arbitrary one. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Carson, 21 Colo. App. 604, 123 P. 680 (1912).

The rule which requires the challenge of any particular juror for cause to be made at the very time when the ground for challenge becomes apparent from his examination before passing to the examination of another juror is doubtful, and the argument in favor of such a rule is not convincing. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Carson, 21 Colo. App. 604, 123 P. 680 (1912).

VII. ORDER OF SELECTING A JURY.

Annotator's note. Since section (g) of this rule is similar to § 203 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The forming of a jury to try an issue of fact rests largely in the discretion of the trial court. Rio Grande S. R. R. v. Nichols, 52 Colo. 300, 123 P. 318 (1912).

For an assignment of error to be considered, it must affirmatively appear from the record that the challenging party exhausted all its peremptory challenges. Rio Grande S. R. R. v. Nichols, 52 Colo. 300, 123 P. 318 (1912).

VIII. PEREMPTORY CHALLENGES.

Law reviews. For comment, ''Batson v. Kentucky: Peremptory Challenges Redefined'', see 64 Den. U. L. Rev. 579 (1988).

Annotator's note. Since section (h) of this rule is similar to § 199 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

A peremptory challenge was not granted by the common law, and the right exists, if at all, by virtue of statute. Butler v. Hands, 43 Colo. 541, 95 P. 920 (1908).

Unless this rule regulating the manner of challenges is such that the right cannot be exercised, the court must hold that the right exists. Butler v. Hands, 43 Colo. 541, 95 P. 920 (1908).

Automatic reversal rule in the civil context not overruled by People v. Novotny, 2014 CO 18, 320 P.3d 1194. The automatic reversal rule was initially announced in Denver City Tramway Co. v. Kennedy, 50 Colo. 418, 117 P. 167 (1911). The automatic reversal rule provides that when a trial court improvidently denies a challenge for cause to a prospective juror and then, after exercising a peremptory challenge to that juror, a litigant exhausts his or her peremptory challenges, reversal is required without a showing of prejudice. Morales-Guevara v. Koren, 2014 COA 89, 405 P.3d 251, overruled in Laura A. Newman, LLC v. Roberts, 2016 CO 9, 365 P.3d 972.

Denver City Tramway Co. remains the controlling and binding authority on the application of the automatic reversal rule in the civil context and was not overruled by the Colorado supreme court in People v. Novotny, in which the automatic reversal rule arose in the criminal context. Morales-Guevara v. Koren, 2014 COA 89, 405 P.3d 251, overruled in Laura A. Newman, LLC v. Roberts, 2016 CO 9, 365 P.3d 972.

Automatic reversal not required if a civil litigant is allowed fewer peremptory challenges than authorized, or than available to and exercised by the opposing party. Instead, the reviewing court must determine whether the error substantially influenced the outcome of the case in accordance with the harmless error rule. Laura A. Newman, LLC v. Roberts, 2016 CO 9, 365 P.3d 972 (overruling Denver City Tramway Co. v. Kennedy, 50 Colo. 418, 117 P. 167 (1911); Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Langden, 532 P.2d 337 (Colo. 1975); and Blades v. DaFoe, 704 P.2d 317 (Colo. 1985)).

Guardian ad litem for child who was subject of paternity action should not have been granted preemptory challenges but such preemptory challenges may not be challenged on appeal by putative father who urged the granting of such challenges at trial. Morgan County DSS v. J.A.C., 791 P.2d 1157 (Colo. App. 1989).

A juror possessing statutory qualifications is still subject to such challenge. Trinidad v. Simpson, 5 Colo. 65 (1879).

Trial court may place reasonable restrictions on the questioning of jurors if the voir dire process facilitates an intelligent exercise of a party's preemptory challenges and challenges for cause. People v. Greenwell, 830 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1992).

Multiple litigants are entitled to only one set of peremptory challenges, regardless of whether their interests are essentially common or generally antagonistic. Blades v. DaFoe, 704 P.2d 317 (Colo. 1985); Koustas Realty v. Regency Square P'ship, 724 P.2d 97 (Colo. App. 1986).

It is reversible error if the trial court grants peremptory challenges in excess of the number prescribed by this rule. Blades v. DaFoe, 704 P.2d 317 (Colo. 1985), overruled in Laura A. Newman, LLC v. Roberts, 2016 CO 9, 365 P.3d 972 (overruling the automatic reversal rule); Fieger v. E. Nat. Bank, 710 P.2d 1134 (Colo. App. 1985); Koustas Realty v. Regency Square P'ship, 724 P.2d 97 (Colo. App. 1986).

IX. OATH OF JURORS.

The juror's oath prescribes his duty; by the obligation thus imposed, he is to well and truly try the issues joined and a true verdict render, according to the law and the evidence. Demato v. People, 49 Colo. 147, 111 P. 703 (1910) (decided under § 198 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

Absent any showing of prejudice by the defendant, the administration of the oath to the panel of jurors accepted for cause before the exercise of peremptory challenges does not constitute reversible error. People v. Smith, 848 P.2d 365 (Colo. 1993).

X. WHEN JUROR DISCHARGED.

Annotator's note. Since section (j) of this rule is similar to § 189 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This rule gives the court power to discharge a jury under certain circumstances. Swink v. Bohn, 6 Colo. App. 517, 41 P. 838 (1895).

The existence of this authority as a common-law right is recognized. Swink v. Bohn, 6 Colo. App. 517, 41 P. 838 (1895).

The court does not have arbitrary power to discharge a jury after it has been impaneled and sworn; the parties are entitled to have their case heard by the jury which has been selected, and they cannot be deprived of that right unless some sufficient reason exists for the exercise of the court's power in the premises. Swink v. Bohn, 6 Colo. App. 517, 41 P. 838 (1895).

XI. EXAMINATION OF PREMISES BY JURY.

Annotator's note. Since section (k) of this rule is similar to § 206 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The provisions of section (k) are clear. Kistler v. N. Colo. Water Conservancy Dist., 126 Colo. 11, 246 P.2d 616 (1952).

An inspection of the premises by the jury is a matter entirely within the discretion of the trial court. Saint v. Guerrerio, 17 Colo. 448, 30 P. 335 (1892); Nogote-Northeastern Consol. Ditch Co. v. Gallegos, 70 Colo. 550, 203 P. 668 (1921).

Where the jury is permitted by the court to view the premises involved in the litigation, the jurymen are expected to look at everything upon the viewed premises and are not confined to the matters and things mentioned in the testimony given in the court room. Bijou Irrigation Dist. v. Cateran Land & Live Stock Co., 73 Colo. 93, 213 P. 999 (1923).

Applied in Kistler v. N. Colo. Water Conservancy Dist., 126 Colo. 11, 246 P.2d 616 (1952).

XII. DELIBERATION OF JURY.

Law reviews. For article, ''Limitations of the Power of Courts in Instructing Juries'', see 6 Dicta 23 (March 1929).

Jury shall not separate during deliberation. Upon the close of the cause a jury shall retire for deliberation, and during such deliberation, shall not separate, although it might be in the discretion of the court to permit the jury to separate under certain circumstances. Dozenback v. Raymer, 13 Colo. 451, 22 P. 787 (1889).

The mere separation of a jury will not be "per se" sufficient ground for setting aside the verdict and granting a new trial; something else must appear — that is, that there was a strong probability that the jury had been tampered with or influenced to return the verdict which is sought to be set aside. Dozenback v. Raymer, 13 Colo. 451, 22 P. 787 (1889); Beals v. Cone, 27 Colo. 473, 62 P. 948 (1900).

The practice of calling the jury into the court room after they have deliberated longer than usual without agreeing upon a verdict and impressing upon them the importance of agreeing if possible is approved of; ordinarily a trial judge is within his rightful province when he urges agreement upon a jury at loggerheads with itself, but this process has its limits. Peterson v. Rawalt, 95 Colo. 368, 36 P.2d 465 (1934).

Reading of testimony is discretionary. The overwhelming weight of authority in this country is that the reading of all or part of the testimony of one or more of the witnesses at trial, criminal or civil, at the specific request of the jury during their deliberations is discretionary with the trial court. Settle v. People, 180 Colo. 262, 504 P.2d 680 (1972).

Where trial testimony is read to the jury at their request during their deliberations, it is essential that the court observe caution that evidence is not so selected, nor used in such a manner, that there is a likelihood of it being given undue weight or emphasis by the jury, for this would be prejudicial abuse of discretion and constitute grounds for reversal. Settle v. People, 180 Colo. 262, 504 P.2d 680 (1972).

Where the only portion of the record designated on review is the testimony which the trial court permitted to be read to the jury during deliberation, there is nothing upon which the court can make a determination of abuse of discretion, and it must therefore presume the trial court acted properly and without error. Settle v. People, 180 Colo. 262, 504 P.2d 680 (1972).

A trial court has discretion to grant the equitable relief of specific performance while the jury concurrently deliberates on the award of damages in cases where the damages are in no way contingent upon the trial court's equity decision. Soneff v. Harlan, 712 P.2d 1084 (Colo. App. 1985).

XIII. PAPERS TAKEN BY JURY.

Annotator's note. Since section (m) of this rule is similar to § 211 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Amendment to section (m) that allows all exhibits admitted into evidence to be taken into the jury room undercuts previous rule of law that jury could not have unrestricted and unsupervised access to evidence. Thus, the basis no longer exists for prohibiting juror access during deliberations to videotapes, audiotapes, or written documents. People v. McKinney, 80 P.3d 823 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 99 P.3d 1038 (Colo. 2004).

The pleadings should not be sent out with the jury. Spaulding v. Saltiel, 18 Colo. 86, 31 P. 486 (1892).

It is not a good practice to allow the jury to take the declaration to their room when they retire to consider their verdict. Good v. Martin, 1 Colo. 165 (1869), aff'd, 95 U.S. 90, 24 L. Ed. 341 (1877).

Jury may take pleadings with them unless objected or excepted to. Where it is assigned for error that the court permitted the jury to take the pleadings with them when they retired, but there is no record of an objection or an exception, an appellate court cannot review alleged irregularities that were apparently waived or consented to. King v. Rea, 13 Colo. 69, 21 P. 1084 (1889).

A transcript of the defendant's voluntary confession may be taken into the jury room during deliberations if it passed the tests of admissibility and was admitted into evidence. People v. Miller, 829 P.2d 443 (Colo. App. 1991).

No error in permitting jury unfettered access to properly admitted transcripts. People v. Al-Yousif, 206 P.3d 824 (Colo. App. 2006).

No error in permitting jury to view videotapes introduced at trial in jury room without defendant present. People v. Al-Yousif, 206 P.3d 824 (Colo. App. 2006).

The concern about the unsupervised review of materials indicated by the prohibition in this section of depositions in the jury room also applies to the videotape of the interrogation of a witness. As a result, the review of such a videotape by the jurors in this case should have been allowed only under circumstances which would assure that statements made in the videotape were not given undue weight or emphasis. People v. Montoya, 773 P.2d 623 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 781 P.2d 647 (Colo. 1989).

The amendment to section (m) effective January 1, 1999, undercuts the rationale of People v. Montoya and, under the amended rule, written statements that are trial exhibits may be taken into the jury room. People v. McKinney, 80 P.3d 823 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 99 P.3d 1038 (Colo. 2004).

The amendment to section (m) effective in 1999 made the analysis in People v. Montoya no longer applicable. Trial court, therefore, did not err when it permitted jurors to take victim's written statement into the jury room for deliberations. People v. Pahlavan, 83 P.3d 1138 (Colo. App. 2003).

Submission of deposition transcripts to the jury which are not read or otherwise used by the jurors, does not necessitate a new trial. Montrose Valley Funeral Home, Inc. v. Crippin, 835 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in Billings v. People, 171 Colo. 236, 466 P.2d 474 (1970).

XIV. ADDITIONAL INSTRUCTIONS.

Annotator's note. Since section (n) of this rule is similar to § 212 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

No error will be presumed in denying request for further instructions. Where a jury after retiring for deliberation returns into court and requests further instructions, which request is denied by the court, and the abstract of record contains neither the instructions given nor the request for further instructions, it will be presumed that no error was committed in denying the request. Buzanes v. Frost, 19 Colo. App. 388, 75 P. 594 (1904).

Sections (l) and (n) of this rule are not violated by written reply that matter is already covered. Where a jury in the course of its deliberations sends a note to the judge requesting advice on a question, and the judge replies in writing that ''this matter is covered in your instructions'', sections (l) and (n) of this rule are not violated. Kath v. Brodie, 132 Colo. 338, 287 P.2d 957 (1955); Reimer v. Walker, 170 Colo. 149, 459 P.2d 274 (1969).

Trial courts of necessity possess a large discretion in recalling juries and submitting amended or additional legal propositions by way of instructions. Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465, 30 P. 352 (1892).

Unless it fairly appears that some legal right of the party complaining has under proper objection been invaded and that the invasion may have resulted in injury, a reversal will not take place upon this ground. Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465, 30 P. 352 (1892).

Communication should take place in open court in counsel's presence. There ought to be no communication between the judge and jury after the latter have been charged and have retired to consider their verdict unless the communication takes place in open court, and, if practicable, in the presence of counsel on the respective sides. Colo. Cent. Consol. Mining Co. v. Turck, 50 F. 888 (8th Cir. 1892).

Where the communication complained of evidently took place in open court, but the record does not show the cause of counsel's absence, whether they were absent due to their own fault, or as to whether any efforts were made to secure their presence, every presumption in favor of the regularity and propriety of the court's action must be indulged. Colo. Cent. Consol. Mining Co. v. Turck, 50 F. 888 (8th Cir. 1892).

This rule must be given a reasonable construction. Tilley v. Montelius Piano Co., 15 Colo. App. 204, 61 P. 483 (1900).

This rule is intended simply to apply to such instructions or communications from the court to the jury as might bear upon the issues of the case and influence it in its determination for the one party or the other. Tilley v. Montelius Piano Co., 15 Colo. App. 204, 61 P. 483 (1900).

This rule is not intended to reach, or embrace, such communications as could not be construed to be instruction as to the law in the case and which are manifestly harmless in their character. Tilley v. Montelius Piano Co., 15 Colo. App. 204, 61 P. 483 (1900); People in Interest of E.S., 681 P.2d 528 (Colo. App. 1984).

An inquiry as to admissibility of verdict is not error. Where the jury after retiring send to the court by the bailiff, in the absence of counsel on both sides, a communication wherein they inquire whether a certain verdict would be admissible, to which communication the court returns by the bailiff a verbal answer ''no'', it is not reversible error as in violation of this rule. Tilley v. Montelius Piano Co., 15 Colo. App. 204, 61 P. 483 (1900).

An agreement may be called for. This rule has no application to a communication of the judge to jury, not as to the law of the case, but an exhortation to endeavor to harmonize their differences and come to an agreement. Hutchins v. Haffner, 63 Colo. 365, 167 P. 966 (1917).

Instruction that jury "must" return verdict is error. When the jury indicates that it is in disagreement and an oral instruction precludes any possibility of a hung jury and goes far beyond the usual written third-degree instruction, which should be used with caution, then, where almost immediately after receiving this oral communication the jury returns its verdict, it can be reasonably assumed that any honest debate among the jurors is further precluded by the blunt instruction that they must return one verdict or the other with the implication that they cannot report a disagreement, so as to be prejudicial error. Reimer v. Walker, 170 Colo. 149, 459 P.2d 274 (1969).

A communication not in any way indicating the opinion of the court as to the merits of the controversy and not tending in any degree to coercion upon the jury is entirely proper and praiseworthy, though made in the absence of counsel and without their knowledge. Hutchins v. Haffner, 63 Colo. 365, 167 P. 966 (1917).

XV. NEW TRIAL IF NO VERDICT.

When the trial court learns that the jury verdict was not unanimous and chooses to discharge the jury, the trial court had no choice but to order a new trial. Neil v. Espinoza, 747 P.2d 1257 (Colo. 1987).

XVI. SEALED VERDICT.

Annotator's note. Since section (p) of this rule is similar to § 214 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Jurors may, by order of court, if they arrive at a verdict during recess, reduce it to writing, seal it, and separate. Kohn v. Kennedy, 6 Colo. App. 388, 41 P. 510 (1895).

The verdict must be retained by the jury or by some member thereof and be delivered to the court. Kohn v. Kennedy, 6 Colo. App. 388, 41 P. 510 (1895).

Although a jury may be allowed to separate after having sealed a verdict, they must be called at the opening of court and asked whether they have agreed upon their verdict. Kohn v. Kennedy, 6 Colo. App. 388, 41 P. 510 (1895).

Irregularity in the reception of a verdict is not waived by a failure to object at the time it was so received. Kohn v. Kennedy, 6 Colo. App. 388, 41 P. 510 (1895).

Where one seeks reversal on the ground of irregularity in the failure of the trial judge to be present when the verdict was received, then, if he was not substantially prejudiced by the trial court's procedure, he has no right to complain of the action of the trial court in entering its judgment on the verdict. Sowder v. Inhelder, 119 Colo. 196, 201 P.2d 533 (1948).

XVII. DECLARATION OF VERDICT.

Annotator's note. Since section (q) of this rule is similar to § 215 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Whether there shall be a poll of the jury rests in the sound discretion of the trial judge. Hindrey v. Williams, 9 Colo. 371, 12 P. 436 (1886); Morgan v. Gore, 96 Colo. 508, 44 P.2d 918 (1935).

If there should be any good reason, a request by either party to test the unanimity of the jury by a poll should be allowed. Hindrey v. Williams, 9 Colo. 371, 12 P. 436 (1886).

As a matter of practice, when a demand for a poll is made, it should be granted. Ryan v. People, 50 Colo. 99, 114 P. 306 (1911).

Rule does not require polling of jury unless a party so requests. Kading v. Kading, 683 P.2d 373 (Colo. App. 1984).

XVIII. CORRECTION OF VERDICT.

Annotator's note. Since section (r) of this rule is similar to § 216 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Objections to the form of a verdict must be made in the court and before the jury is discharged. Cowell v. Colo. Springs Co., 3 Colo. 82 (1876), aff'd, 100 U.S. 55, 25 L. Ed. 547 (1879).

An objection to the form of a verdict cannot be raised on appeal for the first time. Cowell v. Colo. Springs Co., 3 Colo. 82 (1876), aff'd, 100 U.S. 55, 25 L. Ed. 547 (1879).

Where verdict is for plaintiff, it is the duty of the plaintiff and not the defendant to see that the verdict is corrected at the proper time. Dorsett v. Crew, 1 Colo. 18 (1864).

When mistakes in the form of the verdict are brought to the notice of the court, it becomes the duty of the court to send the jury back for the purpose of returning a correct verdict. Dorsett v. Crew, 1 Colo. 18 (1864).

If the amount of indemnity awarded by the jury is incorrect and the correct amount has already been determined and is not disputed, the court may amend the verdict in order to award the determined amount. Cole v. Angerman, 31 Colo. App. 279, 501 P.2d 136 (1972).

Trial court may increase amount in verdict. Where the amount in question is undisputed or liquidated and the jury has failed to follow the instructions and returned a verdict for a lesser sum, the trial court has the power to increase the verdict to the higher figure. Cole v. Angerman, 31 Colo. App. 279, 501 P.2d 136 (1972).

Trial court may reduce amount in verdict. The action of the trial court, after receiving the verdict of the jury and remarking to them that they were discharged, in causing them to amend their verdict by reducing it to the amount claimed by the plaintiff, is not reversible error inasmuch as the same action might have been taken without the jury. Patrick Red Sandstone Co. v. Skoman, 1 Colo. App. 323, 29 P. 21 (1892).

Error by clerk is amendable. Any error or defect in a record which occurs through the act or omission of the clerk of the court in entering, or failing to enter of record, its judgment or proceedings is not an error in the express judgments pronounced by the court in the exercise of its judicial discretion, but is a clerical error and amendable. Hittson v. Davenport, 4 Colo. 169 (1878).

Word "defendant" in verdict presumed to include both defendants. Where two persons are sued as defendants and, although answering separately, make the same defense, a verdict for "the defendant" is not void for uncertainty, but must be presumed to include both defendants. Waddingham v. Dickson, 17 Colo. 223, 29 P. 177 (1892).

Nonpertinent matter may be disregarded. Where a verdict is irregular, the court may direct the jury to make necessary corrections, but it is not limited to that procedure, as it may properly disregard nonpertinent matter. Morgan v. Gore, 96 Colo. 508, 44 P.2d 918 (1935).

Any irregularity of form in verdict should be disregarded if it fairly appears that the jury intended a given verdict. Tyler v. District Court, 200 Colo. 254, 613 P.2d 899 (1980).

Court may not look beyond face of record to examine thought processes of jurors, and, if their intent is clear from the record, the verdict shall be given effect. Tyler v. District Court, 200 Colo. 254, 613 P.2d 899 (1980).

An incorrect method of expressing an intended verdict amounts to a mistake in the verdict that may properly be corrected under this rule. Kading v. Kading, 683 P.2d 373 (Colo. App. 1984).

A trial court may amend a verdict in matters of form, but not of substance. A change of substance is a change affecting the jury's underlying decision, but a change in form is one which merely corrects a technical error made by the jury. If amending a verdict to resolve an ambiguity would change the jury's underlying intent, the change is one of substance and cannot be done without a new trial. Dysert Assoc. Architecture v. Hoeltgen, 728 P.2d 756 (Colo. App. 1986).

A trial court may not set aside or amend, by way of remittitur, a jury's award for damages, so long as the verdict is consistent with the court's instruction and supported by evidence and the amount awarded is not so excessive or inadequate as to indicate bias, passion, or prejudice. Belfor USA Group v. Rocky Mtn. Caulking & Waterproofing, 159 P.3d 672 (Colo. App. 2006).

Where inconsistent verdicts indicate that the jury was misled by its instructions concerning the awarding of damages, the trial court may not resolve the inconsistency by amending the verdict, and the appropriate remedy is a new trial on the issue of damages. Hugh v. Wash. Indus. Bank, 757 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1988).

XIX. VERDICT RECORDED.

Annotator's note. Since section (s) of this rule is similar to § 217 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

If the answer is in the affirmative, the sealed verdict may be delivered to the court and, if in form, the jury may be discharged from the case. Kohn v. Kennedy, 6 Colo. App. 388, 41 P. 510 (1895).

When juror was questioned about whether the verdict in favor of defendant as reported by a written special verdict was her verdict and juror responded "no", judge should have declared a mistrial or directed the jurors to deliberate further; by engaging in extended questioning as to why the juror had said the verdict was not hers, the court and counsel improperly delved into the deliberations and mental processes of the jurors and risked unduly influencing the juror to conform to the signed verdict. Simpson v. Stjernholm, 985 P.2d 31 (Colo. App. 1998).

Until the jury is discharged, the jurors are not relieved their duties pertaining to the case. Kohn v. Kennedy, 6 Colo. App. 388, 41 P. 510 (1895).

Rule 48. Number of Jurors

The jury shall consist of six persons, unless the parties agree to a smaller number, not less than three. The parties may stipulate at any time before the verdict is returned that a verdict or a finding of a stated majority of the jurors shall be taken as the verdict or finding of the jury.

Cross references: For number of jurors, see § 13-71-103, C.R.S.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Trials: Rules 38-53", see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 571 (1951).

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to § 197 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Where a party objects to a jury of three, the objection should be sustained and a jury of six impaneled to try the cause. Branch v. Branch, 30 Colo. 499, 71 P. 632 (1903).

Unless the parties consent thereto, a jury of three cannot lawfully try a suit. Branch v. Branch, 30 Colo. 499, 71 P. 632 (1903).

Attorney appointed in default cannot consent. In case of default where an attorney has been appointed by the court to represent the absent defendant, the attorney so appointed cannot consent for the defendant to have the cause tried by a jury of three. Branch v. Branch, 30 Colo. 499, 71 P. 632 (1903).

Applied in People v. Peek, 199 Colo. 3, 604 P.2d 23 (1979); People v. Boos, 199 Colo. 15, 604 P.2d 272 (1979).

Rule 49. Special Verdicts and Interrogatories

(a) Special Verdicts. The court may require a jury to return only a special verdict in the form of a special written finding upon each issue of fact. In that event the court may submit to the jury written questions susceptible of categorical or other brief answer or may submit written forms of the several special findings which might properly be made upon the pleadings and evidence; or it may use such other method of submitting the issues and requiring the written findings thereon as it deems most appropriate. The court shall give to the jury such explanation and instruction concerning the matter thus submitted as may be necessary to enable the jury to make its findings upon each issue. If in so doing the court omits any issue of fact raised by the pleadings or by the evidence, each party waives his right to a trial by jury of the issue so omitted unless before the jury retires he demands its submission to the jury. As to an issue omitted without such demand the court may make a finding; or, if it fails to do so, it shall be deemed to have made a finding in accord with the judgment on the special verdict.

(b) General Verdict Accompanied by Answer to Interrogatories. The court may submit to the jury, together with appropriate forms for a general verdict, written interrogatories upon one or more issues of fact, the decision of which is necessary to a verdict. The court shall give such explanation or instruction as may be necessary to enable the jury both to make answers to the interrogatories and to render a general verdict, and the court shall direct the jury both to make written answers and to render a general verdict. When the general verdict and the answers are harmonious, the appropriate judgment upon the verdict and answers shall be entered pursuant to Rule 58. When the answers are consistent with each other but one or more is inconsistent with the general verdict, judgment may be entered pursuant to Rule 58 in accordance with the answers, notwithstanding the general verdict, or the court may return the jury for further consideration of its answers and verdict or may order a new trial. When the answers are inconsistent with each other or one or more is likewise inconsistent with the general verdict, judgment shall not be entered, but the court shall return the jury for further consideration of its answers and verdict or shall order a new trial.

II. SPECIAL VERDICTS.

Where plaintiffs fail to establish their allegations that defendants are guilty of gross negligence or of willful or wanton misconduct, but there is sufficient evidence of simple negligence, it requires submission of the case to the jury. Hurst v. Crowtero Boating Club, Inc., 31 Colo. App. 9, 496 P.2d 1054 (1972).

It is not error, in a will contest, for the court to submit the case to the jury on special interrogatories. In re Piercen's Estate, 118 Colo. 264, 195 P.2d 725 (1948).

Where no protest is made to the submission to the jury of a question any objections thereto are waived. Westing v. Marlatt, 124 Colo. 355, 238 P.2d 193 (1951).

Trial court's rejection of party's proposed jury instructions is not in error so long as the jury instructions submitted by the trial court sufficiently and properly cover the subjects contained in the proposed instructions. Staley v. Sagel, 841 P.2d 379 (Colo. App. 1992).

Appellate court has duty to attempt to reconcile jury's answers to special verdicts if it is at all possible, and where there is a view of the case that makes the jury's answers consistent, they must be resolved that way. City of Aurora v. Loveless, 639 P.2d 1061 (Colo. 1981); Williamson v. Sch. District No. 2, 695 P.2d 1173 (Colo. App. 1984).

III. GENERAL VERDICT.

The refusal to submit the interrogatories to the jury is not an abuse of discretion by the court. Lambrecht v. Archibald, 119 Colo. 356, 203 P.2d 897 (1949).

Under this rule the submission of interrogatories is discretionary and not mandatory. Lambrecht v. Archibald, 119 Colo. 356, 203 P.2d 897 (1949).

Use of special verdicts and interrogatories is discretionary. The use of special verdicts or interrogatories accompanying general verdicts, unless specifically required, is discretionary with the trial court. Felder v. Union Pac. R.R., 660 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1982).

Jury verdicts will not be reversed for inconsistency if the record discloses any evidentiary basis to support the verdicts. Alzado v. Blinder, Robinson & Co., Inc., 752 P.2d 544 (Colo. 1988).

Rule 50. Motion for Directed Verdict

A party may move for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence offered by an opponent or at the close of all the evidence. A party who moves for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence offered by an opponent may offer evidence in the event that the motion is not granted, without having reserved the right so to do and to the same extent as if the motion had not been made. A motion for a directed verdict which is not granted is not a waiver of trial by jury even though all parties to the action have moved for directed verdicts. A motion for a directed verdict shall state the specific grounds therefor. The order of the court granting a motion for a directed verdict is effective without any assent of the jury.

This rule is substantially the same as F.R.C.P. 50. Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952).

This rule follows the rule and practice in federal courts. Klipp v. Grusing, 119 Colo. 111, 200 P.2d 917 (1948).

This rule governing the direction of a verdict is identical to the former rule controlling a motion for nonsuit in effect prior to the adoption of the rules of civil procedure. Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952).

Motions for directed verdict present a question of law, not of discretion. Gossard v. Watson, 122 Colo. 271, 221 P.2d 353 (1950).

Motion of both sides for a directed verdict no longer amounts to a waiver of jury trial. Am. Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Gregg, 123 Colo. 476, 231 P.2d 467 (1951).

This rule specifically provides that ''a motion for a directed verdict which is not granted is not a waiver of trial by jury even though all parties to the action have moved for directed verdicts''. Klipp v. Grusing, 119 Colo. 111, 200 P.2d 917 (1948).

It becomes the duty of the trial court to direct a verdict in favor of defendant and grant a dismissal of the action when a review of all the evidence establishes that there is not basis upon which a verdict in favor of plaintiff may be supported as a matter of law. Montes v. Hyland Hills Park, 849 P.2d 852 (Colo. 1992).

Granting a directed verdict is a final and legal determination of the controversy. Burenheide v. Wall, 131 Colo. 371, 281 P.2d 1000 (1955).

Direction of verdict by trial court is presumed regular and valid. Where the trial court in directing a verdict exercises sound judicial discretion, its action is entitled to the same presumption of regularity and validity as is accorded to any other type of judgment; that error may have been committed by the trial court is never presumed, but must affirmatively be made to appear. French v. Haarhues, 132 Colo. 261, 287 P.2d 278 (1955).

A jury's subsequent verdict to the contrary cannot stand if a trial court appropriately directs a verdict on an issue. Pinell v. McCrary, 849 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1992).

"Motion for directed verdict" is actually motion to dismiss. When the court is the trier of fact, a motion denominated a ''motion for directed verdict'' is actually a motion to dismiss pursuant to C.R.C.P. 41(b). Campbell v. Commercial Credit Plan, Inc., 670 P.2d 813 (Colo. App. 1983); Frontier Exploration v. Am. Nat., 849 P.2d 887 (Colo. App. 1992).

There are standards for directed verdict versus motion for new trial. The standards for directing a verdict and setting one aside for new trial are widely different and should not be controlled by the same conditions and circumstances. The entry of a judgment notwithstanding the verdict involves a legal standard, while the authority to grant a new trial rests in the discretion of the trial court. Whitlock v. Univ. of Denver, 712 P.2d 1072 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 744 P.2d 54 (Colo. 1987).

The result of setting aside a verdict and the event of directing one are entirely different and are not controlled by the same conditions or circumstances; the matter of a retrial of the issue rests, within limitations, in the discretion of the trial court, while the matter of a directed verdict rests upon legal right. Gossard v. Watson, 122 Colo. 271, 221 P.2d 353 (1950); Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952); Burenheide v. Wall, 131 Colo. 371, 281 P.2d 1000 (1955).

There is a difference between the legal discretion of the court to set aside a verdict as against the weight of evidence and the obligation which the court has to withdraw a case from the jury, or direct a verdict, for insufficiency of evidence; in the latter case it must be so insufficient in fact as to be insufficient in law, while in the former case it is merely insufficient in fact. Gossard v. Watson, 122 Colo. 271, 221 P.2d 353 (1950); Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952).

This rule allows trial courts to issue partial directed verdicts. The rule's silence on the matter does not preclude a partial directed verdict. Instead, this rule should be read in tandem with Colorado's summary judgment rule, C.R.C.P. 56, which allows partial summary judgment. Both rules share a common legal standard (judgment as a matter of law) and a common purpose (to streamline the litigation process). Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Rodgers, 2015 CO 56, 355 P.3d 1253.

The primary difference between this rule and C.R.C.P. 56, the summary judgment rule, is the timing of the motion, with the former being made during trial and the latter before. It would make little sense for judgment as to issues to be permitted prior to trial on summary judgment but not after the presentation of evidence at trial. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Rodgers, 2015 CO 56, 355 P.3d 1253.

Like its federal counterpart, F.R.C.P. 50, this rule implicitly authorizes a trial court to issue a directed verdict regarding claims in whole or in part. The development of the counterpart federal rule is also persuasive evidence that this rule permits a trial court to direct a verdict on a claim in whole or in part. The federal summary judgment and directed verdict rules have developed in parallel fashion to permit partial judgment in both instances. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Rodgers, 2015 CO 56, 355 P.3d 1253.

Applied in Simon v. Williams, 123 Colo. 505, 232 P.2d 181 (1951); Durango Sch. Dist. No. 9-R v. Thorpe, 200 Colo. 268, 614 P.2d 880 (1980); In re Van Camp, 632 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1981); Marks v. District Court, 643 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1982); Conrad v. City & County of Denver, 656 P.2d 662 (Colo. 1982); Mucci v. Falcon Sch. Dist. No. 49, 655 P.2d 422 (Colo. App. 1982); Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Smith, 658 P.2d 255 (Colo. 1983); Yoder v. Hooper, 695 P.2d 1182 (Colo. App. 1984); Daly v. Observatory Corp., 759 P.2d 777 (Colo. App. 1988), rev'd on other grounds, 780 P.2d 462 (Colo. 1989).

II. EVIDENCE.

In passing upon a motion for a directed verdict, the trial court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the party against whom the motion is directed. Gossard v. Watson, 122 Colo. 271, 221 P.2d 353 (1950);

Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952); Bradley Realty Inv. Co. v. Shwartz, 145 Colo. 65, 357 P.2d 638 (1960); Nettrour v. J. C. Penney Co., 146 Colo. 150, 360 P.2d 964 (1961); Gonzales v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 147 Colo. 358, 363 P.2d 667 (1961); Hildyard v. Western Fasteners, Inc., 33 Colo. App. 396, 522 P.2d 596 (1974); Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Langdon, 187 Colo. 425, 532 P.2d 337 (1975); Scognamillo v. Olsen, 795 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1990); Lorenz v. Martin Marietta Corp., Inc., 802 P.2d 1146 (Colo. App. 1990), aff'd Martin Marietta Corp. v. Lorenz, 823 P.2d 100 (Colo. 1992); Herrera v. Gene's Towing, 827 P.2d 619 (Colo. App. 1992).

Every reasonable inference to be drawn from the evidence presented is to be considered in the light most favorable to such party. Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952); Bradley Realty Inv. Co. v. Shwartz, 145 Colo. 65, 357 P.2d 638 (1960); Nettrour v. J. C. Penney Co., 146 Colo. 150, 360 P.2d 964 (1961); Gonzales v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 147 Colo. 358, 363 P.2d 667 (1961).

Reasonable inference may be drawn from circumstantial evidence. Kopeikin v. Merchants Mortg. & Trust Corp., 679 P.2d 599 (Colo. 1984).

A motion for a directed verdict admits the truth of the adversary's evidence and of every favorable inference of fact which may legitimately be drawn from it. Western-Realco Ltd. v. Harrison, 791 P.2d 1139 (Colo. App. 1989). Co., 806 P.2d 388 (Colo. App. 1990).

Every factual dispute supported by credible evidence must be resolved in his favor, and the strongest inferences reasonably deducible from the most favorable evidence must be indulged in his favor. Gossard v. Watson, 122 Colo. 271, 221 P.2d 353 (1950).

In ruling on whether an activity is inherently dangerous as a matter of law, if the state of the evidence is such that when viewed in a light most favorable to the plaintiff, the court is convinced that a jury could not find that all the following elements have been proven by a preponderance of the evidence, then it should direct a verdict against the plaintiff and in favor of the employer: (1) that the activity in question presented a special or peculiar danger to others inherent in the nature of the activity or the particular circumstances under which the activity was to be performed; (2) that the danger was different in kind from the ordinary risks that commonly confront persons in the community; (3) that the employer knew or should have known that the special danger was inherent in the nature of the activity or in the particular circumstances under which the activity was to be performed; and (4) that the injury to the plaintiff was not the result of the collateral negligence of the defendant's independent contractor. Huddleston v. Union Rural Elec. Ass'n, 841 P.2d 282 (Colo. 1992).

Where defendant moves for directed verdict, the court views the evidence in the light most favorable to plaintiff. Jasko v. F. W. Woolworth Co., 177 Colo. 418, 494 P.2d 839 (1972); Klein v. Sowa, 759 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1988).

Motion for directed verdict in a jury trial admits the truth of the adversary's evidence and of every favorable inference of fact which may legitimately be drawn therefrom. Comtrol, Inc. v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 32 Colo. App. 384, 513 P.2d 1082 (1973); Salstrom v. Starke, 670 P.2d 809 (Colo. App. 1983).

In passing upon a motion to direct a verdict, a judge cannot properly undertake to weigh the evidence. Gossard v. Watson, 122 Colo. 271, 221 P.2d 353 (1950); Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952); Roberts v. Bucher, 41 Colo. App. 138, 584 P.2d 97 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 198 Colo. 1, 595 P.2d 239 (1979); Fagerberg v. Webb, 678 P.2d 544 (Colo. App. 1983); Christie v. San Miguel Cty. Sch. Dist., 759 P.2d 779 (Colo. App. 1988).

Party seeking to reopen evidence after party has rested and after motion for directed verdict has been made must make an offer proof as to what specific evidence the party would present and demonstrate that the evidence would cure any deficiencies in party's case. Failure to offer such proof and make such demonstration waives the right of the party to present future evidence. Justi v. RHO Condo. Ass'n, 277 P.3d 847 (Colo. App. 2011).

Court should not judge credibility of witnesses. On a motion for directed verdict at the close of a party's case, it is not for the court to judge as to the weight of the evidence or the credibility of witnesses. Bradley Realty Inv. Co. v. Shwartz, 145 Colo. 65, 357 P.2d 638 (1960).

The judge's duty is to take that view of the evidence most favorable to the party against whom it is moved to direct a verdict and from that evidence, and the inferences reasonably and justifiably to be drawn therefrom, determine whether or not under the law a verdict might be found for the party having the onus. Gossard v. Watson, 122 Colo. 271, 221 P.2d 353 (1950); Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952).

When a plaintiff makes out a prima facie case, even though the facts are in dispute, it is for the jury, and not the judge, to resolve the conflict under this section. Herrera v. Gene's Towing, 827 P.2d 619 (Colo. App. 1992).

A motion for directed verdict should be granted only in the clearest of cases when the evidence is undisputed and it is plain no reasonable person could decide the issue against the moving party. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Whether new trial would be granted is not a proper test. It is not a proper test of whether the court should direct a verdict that the court, on ''weighing'' the evidence, would grant a new trial, upon motion. Gossard v. Watson, 122 Colo. 271, 221 P.2d 353 (1950); Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952).

III. GRANT OF MOTION.

Directed verdict is proper only where there are no factual disputes. Williamson v. Sch. District No. 2, 695 P.2d 1173 (Colo. App. 1984).

A directed verdict may be granted only when, disregarding conflicting evidence and giving to nonmovant's evidence all the value to which it is legally entitled by indulging in every legitimate inference which may be drawn from that evidence, the result is a determination that there is no evidence of sufficient substantiality and materiality to support a verdict in favor of the nonmovant if such a verdict were given. Gossard v. Watson, 122 Colo. 271, 221 P.2d 353 (1950).

It becomes the court's duty as a matter of law to direct a verdict. Where a trial court, from a review of all the evidence adduced, is convinced that there is no basis upon which a verdict in favor of a party may be supported and that even though a jury should return a verdict in his favor it could not be permitted to stand, it becomes the duty of the trial court, as a matter of law, to direct a verdict in favor of the other party. French v. Haarhues, 132 Colo. 261, 287 P.2d 278 (1955).

A motion for directed verdict can only be granted where the evidence, when considered, compels the conclusion that the minds of reasonable men could not be in disagreement and that no evidence, or legitimate inference arising therefrom, has been received or shown upon which a jury's verdict against the moving party could be sustained. Nettrour v. J. C. Penney Co., 146 Colo. 150, 360 P.2d 964 (1961); Gonzales v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 147 Colo. 358, 363 P.2d 667 (1961); Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Langdon, 187 Colo. 425, 532 P.2d 337 (1975); Western-Realco Ltd. v. Harrison, 791 P.2d 1139 (Colo. App. 1989); Pierce v. Capitol Life Ins. Co., 806 P.2d 388 (Colo. App. 1990); Burgess v. Mid-Century Ins. Co., 841 P.2d 325 (Colo. App. 1992).

A motion for a directed verdict should not be granted unless the evidence compels the conclusion that reasonable men could not disagree and that no evidence or inference had been received at trial upon which a verdict against the moving party could be sustained. Comtrol, Inc. v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 32 Colo. App. 384, 513 P.2d 1082 (1973).

A verdict should be directed only when the evidence has such quality and weight as to point strongly and overwhelmingly to the fact that reasonable men could not arrive at a contrary verdict. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Langdon, 187 Colo. 425, 532 P.2d 337 (1975).

A motion for directed verdict should not be granted unless the evidence compels the conclusion that reasonable jurors could not disagree and that no evidence or inference has been received at trial upon which a verdict against the movant could be sustained. Salstrom v. Starke, 670 P.2d 809 (Colo. App. 1983); Mahoney Marketing Corp. v. Sentry Builders, 697 P.2d 1139 (Colo. App. 1985); Smith v. Denver, 726 P.2d 1125 (Colo. 1986); United Bank v. One Center Joint Venture, 773 P.2d 637 (Colo. App. 1989).

Trial court's grant of motion for directed verdict on the theory of strict liability was proper since evidence was offered by plaintiff to prove that the product of defendants was unreasonably dangerous and carried no warning to that effect. Fenton v. Fibreboard Corp., 827 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial judge may only direct verdict in clearest cases. A trial judge may only invade the fact-finding province of the jury to grant a directed verdict in the clearest cases. Romero v. Denver & R. G. W. Ry., 183 Colo. 32, 514 P.2d 262 (1973).

Court is justified in usurping function of jury. Where the evidence is undisputed and where reasonable men could reach but one conclusion from that evidence, the court is justified in usurping the function of the jury and directing a verdict for either party. Pioneer Constr. Co. v. Richardson, 176 Colo. 254, 490 P.2d 71 (1971).

If the evidence is of such a character as to establish willful and wanton conduct as a matter of law, the court should direct a verdict and should not submit the matter to the jury. Rennels v. Marble Prods., Inc., 175 Colo. 229, 486 P.2d 1058 (1971).

Where there is evidence of the occurrence of an accident accompanied by "prima facie" evidence of defendant's negligence, and there is no evidence of facts absolving the defendant of negligence or of facts showing negligence on the part of the plaintiff, a directed verdict in favor of the plaintiff is proper. Moore v. Fischer, 31 Colo. App. 425, 505 P.2d 383 (1972), aff'd, 183 Colo. 392, 517 P.2d 458 (1973).

Where no evidence of damages has been introduced, a trial court properly directs a verdict against plaintiffs on their claim. Greenleaf, Inc. v. Manco Chem. Co., 30 Colo. App. 367, 492 P.2d 889 (1971).

Where the court errs in submitting case to the jury, then, since it should have granted a motion for a directed verdict, it should sustain a motion for judgment under this rule. First Nat'l Bank v. Henning, 112 Colo. 523, 150 P.2d 790 (1944).

IV. WHEN GRANT OF MOTION IMPROPER.

Where there is substantial evidence tending to establish cause of action, it is error to direct a verdict in favor of defendant at the close of plaintiff's case. Bradley Realty Inv. Co. v. Shwartz, 145 Colo. 65, 357 P.2d 638 (1960).

When a plaintiff makes out a "prima facie" case, even though the facts are in dispute, it is for the jury, and not the judge, to resolve the conflict, and a direction of a verdict is error. Romero v. Denver & R. G. W. Ry., 183 Colo. 32, 514 P.2d 626 (1973).

Directed verdict held reversible error where plaintiff established "prima facie" case. Kennedy v. City & County of Denver, 31 Colo. App. 564, 506 P.2d 764 (1972).

If conduct does not, as a matter of law, establish that it was willful and wanton, the matter necessarily has to be submitted to the jury. Rennels v. Marble Prods., Inc., 175 Colo. 229, 486 P.2d 1058 (1971).

Where a factual dispute exists, although both sides have moved for a directed verdict, the trial court has no alternative but to submit the matter to the jury. Rennels v. Marble Prods., Inc., 175 Colo. 229, 486 P.2d 1058 (1971).

Where there is conflicting testimony and reasonable men might draw different conclusions from the testimony, the question of proximate cause is properly one for the jury. Pioneer Constr. Co. v. Richardson, 176 Colo. 254, 490 P.2d 71 (1971).

When the evidence concerning a material fact is such that reasonable minds could differ with reference thereto, it should be submitted to the jury for its determination, and a trial court's refusal to submit the matter to the jury is error calling for reversal. Gonzales v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 147 Colo. 358, 363 P.2d 667 (1961).

Where a doctor in a malpractice suit presents evidence that his failure to inform plaintiff of all the risks attendant to an operation was consistent with community medical standards, the determination of the adequacy of his disclosures then becomes one for the jury, and a directed verdict in favor of plaintiff would not be warranted. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971).

Directed verdict on issue on contributory negligence held error. Where, under conflicting evidence, a factual issue was presented as to whether plaintiff was contributorily negligent by virtue of a sudden and abrupt stopping of his vehicle in an unexpected location, the trial court erred in directing a verdict on the issue of plaintiff's contributory negligence. Hildyard v. Western Fasteners, Inc., 33 Colo. App. 396, 522 P.2d 596 (1974).

Whether assault and battery occurred are jury questions. Issues of whether officer or arrestee initiated force, whether officer's force was unreasonable, and whether arrestee used reasonable force in self-defense in resisting arrest should have been submitted to jury. Valdez v. City and County of Denver, 764 P.2d 393 (Colo. App. 1988).

Where the evidence presented raised disputed issues of fact, the trial court's refusal to grant a directed verdict was correct. Horton v. Mondragon, 705 P.2d 977 (Colo. App. 1984).

V. REVIEW OF MOTION.

In reviewing a motion for directed verdict, the court must consider the evidence in a light most favorable to the party against whom the motion is directed. Sanchez v. Staats, 34 Colo. App. 243, 526 P.2d 672 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 228, 539 P.2d 1233 (1975); Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

The reviewing court does so by considering all evidence in the light most favorable to the party against whom the motion is directed and by indulging every reasonable inference that can be legitimately drawn from the evidence in that party's favor. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991); Gast v. City of Fountain, 870 P.2d 506 (Colo. App. 1993).

If there is no conflicting evidence with respect to the particular issue raised by the motion for directed verdict and the only concern is the legal significance of undisputed facts, then the appellate court may make an independent determination of the issue. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Appellate court will not consider denial of motion for directed verdict when grounds are not stated by movant. Sharoff v. Iacino, 123 Colo. 456, 231 P.2d 959 (1951).

Where the evidence does not warrant the direction of a verdict for either party, but the trial court directs a verdict for one of the parties, the judgment must be reversed and a new trial granted, notwithstanding a motion by both sides for a directed verdict. Klipp v. Grusing, 119 Colo. 111, 200 P.2d 917 (1948).

Rule 51. Instructions to Jury

The parties shall tender jury instructions pursuant to C.R.C.P. 16(g). All instructions shall be submitted to the parties, who shall make all objections thereto before they are given to the jury. Only the grounds so specified shall be considered on motion for a new trial or on appeal or certiorari. Before argument, the court shall read its instructions to the jury but shall not comment upon the evidence. Such instructions shall be taken by the jury when it retires. All instructions offered by the parties, or given by the court, shall be filed with the clerk and, with the endorsement thereon indicating the action of the court, shall be taken as part of the record of the cause.

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to § 205 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The giving of an instruction for special findings by a jury is discretionary with the court. Brown v. Maier, 96 Colo. 1, 38 P.2d 905 (1934).

Where there was no statute or rule to support the presumption created by a jury instruction, the presumption could only be properly given if it was supported by common law rules governing the admissibility and evidentiary effect of defendant electrical utility's compliance with industry standards. Yampa Valley Elec. v. Telecky, 862 P.2d 252 (Colo. 1993).

In the absence of a showing of abuse of discretion, no error can be predicated on the refusal to give such an instruction. Brown v. Maier, 96 Colo. 1, 38 P.2d 905 (1934).

A judgment of the trial court refusing to give requested instruction will not be reversed unless the refusal results in substantial, prejudicial error. Armentrout v. FMC Corp., 842 P.2d 175 (Colo. 1992).

The purpose of jury instructions is to provide the jury with the applicable law so that its attention will be directed to the specific issues that are to be determined. Rio Grande S. R.R. Co. v. Campbell, 44 Colo. 1, 96 P. 986 (1908); Yampa Valley Elec. v. Telecky, 862 P.2d 252 (Colo. 1993).

The trial court may exercise sound discretion as to the form and style in which instructions shall be given. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Kerns, 172 Colo. 59, 470 P.2d 34 (1970).

The duty imposed upon the trial court necessarily involves a large discretion as to the form and style in which instructions to the jury shall be given. Moffat v. Tenney, 17 Colo. 189, 30 P. 348 (1892).

Court should state all issues and both parties' cases. A clear statement of the issues to the jury is eminently proper, but the court should be careful to state all the issues and put the case not only as it is laid by the plaintiff, but also as it is controverted by the defendant; he is entitled to have his defense and case stated. Kindel v. Hall, 8 Colo. App. 63, 44 P. 781 (1896).

A party is entitled to an instruction on his theory of the case when it is supported by competent evidence. Davis v. Cline, 177 Colo. 204, 493 P.2d 362 (1972).

A party is entitled to a jury instruction only when it is supported by the evidence and is consistent with existing law. Sufficient competent evidence, rather a mere scintilla of evidence, is required to support an instruction. Melton by and through Melton v. Larrabee, 832 P.2d 1069 (Colo. App. 1992).

Jury instruction that the highest degree of care was owed by the defendant gas service company in the distribution of propane gas was proper in action for negligence for gas explosion that destroyed home of insurance company's client, as was instruction on the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur; record showed that explosion would not have occurred but for negligence. U.S. Fidelity and Guarantee Co. v. Salida Gas Serv. Co., 793 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1989).

It is error for the court to instruct a jury on questions not presented by the pleadings, or with reference to matters irrelevant to the evidence. Bijou Irrigation Dist. v. Cateran Land & Live Stock Co., 73 Colo. 93, 213 P. 999 (1923); McCaffrey v. Mitchell, 98 Colo. 467, 56 P.2d 926, 57 P.2d 900 (1936).

Trial court's failure to instruct jury on loss of future earning capacity was error. Evidence was presented that the plaintiff had previously worked as a nurse aide at a specified rate of compensation, and testimony was such that a reasonable inference could be made that a return to work would be problematic. Plaintiff was not required to introduce evidence of an intention to return to work in the future. Martinez v. Shapland, 833 P.2d 837 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court has discretion to issue or refuse to issue instruction on loss of future earning capacity, but the court's decision must be based on the evidence and be premised on the presence or absence of evidence regarding earnings. When there is evidence in the record the court has an obligation to present proper instruction to the jury in support of a party's theory of recovery. Martinez v. Shapland, 833 P.2d 837 (Colo. App. 1992).

A trial court cannot in its instructions to the jury withdraw from its consideration a proper defense and, by an erroneous construction of the law, reenact a statute, disregarding its plain provisions, so as to fit the case under consideration. Potts v. Bird, 93 Colo. 547, 27 P.2d 745 (1933).

The charge of the court is to be taken as a whole. Coors v. Brock, 22 Colo. App. 470, 125 P. 599 (1912).

Instructions are to be read together and considered as a unified whole. Kendall v. Lively, 94 Colo. 483, 31 P.2d 343 (1934).

In construing a charge, each instruction is to be considered in connection with the entire charge. Dozenback v. Raymer, 13 Colo. 451, 22 P. 787 (1889).

Court's instruction to the jury at the close of evidence outweighs any previous instruction. In determining an award for damages, the jury was justified in considering evidence previously barred by an order in limine because the court's final instructions effectively negated that order. Belfor USA Group v. Rocky Mtn. Caulking & Waterproofing, 159 P.3d 672 (Colo. App. 2006).

Tendered instruction on "inherently dangerous activity" was properly refused, where record did not indicate that installation of heat tape was an activity analogous to other inherently dangerous activities. Melton by and through Melton v. Larrabee, 832 P.2d 1069 (Colo. App. 1992).

All instructions should be considered in determining whether the necessary law has been correctly stated. All of the trial court's instructions to the jury are to be read and considered as a whole in determining whether all the necessary law has been correctly stated to the jury. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Kerns, 172 Colo. 59, 470 P.2d 34 (1970).

Instructions to the jury are to be read and considered together in determining whether it has been adequately and correctly advised of the law. Martin v. Bralliar, 36 Colo. App. 254, 540 P.2d 1118 (1975).

If, when so read and considered, they constitute a fair, full, and reasonably accurate statement of the law, the fact that some isolated portions may seem to be incomplete or incorrect is immaterial. Kendall v. Lively, 94 Colo. 483, 31 P.2d 343 (1934).

Regardless of the fact that some instructions were not in the form suggested by the Colorado Jury Instructions, and that there was some overlapping, when read as a whole, they adequately and correctly informed the jury as to the law applicable to the case, which is the test as to whether the instructions constituted reversible error. Hotchkiss v. Preble, 33 Colo. App. 431, 521 P.2d 1278 (1974).

If, in considering the charge as a whole, an appellate court is satisfied that the jury was not improperly advised as to any material point in the case, the judgment will not be reversed on account of an erroneous instruction. Dozenback v. Raymer, 13 Colo. 451, 22 P. 787 (1889).

An instruction, which by itself might be erroneous, may be qualified by what appears in another part of the charge. Coors v. Brock, 22 Colo. App. 470, 125 P. 599 (1912).

Jury instructions were so erroneous or so confusing or misleading as probably to lead the jury into error of such proportion as to require a new trial, where the jury was not instructed to consider separately any of the elements of the inherently dangerous activity exception and the jury was given no instruction at all on the issue of whether the accident was caused by the collateral negligence of the defendant. Huddleston v. Union Rural Elec. Ass'n, 841 P.2d 282 (Colo. 1992).

An instruction may be cured. An instruction which is merely defective, incomplete, or ambiguous or which leaves room for improper inferences may be cured by another point in the charge. Nelson v. Nelson, 27 Colo. App. 104, 146 P. 1079 (1915); Block v. Balajty, 31 Colo. App. 237, 502 P.2d 1117 (1972).

The refusal to give requested instructions does not constitute error where the instructions given by the court are sufficiently comprehensive to advise the jury fully upon the questions presented for its determination. Weicker Transf. & Storage Co. v. Bedwell, 95 Colo. 280, 35 P.2d 1022 (1934).

Where a legal principle is adequately covered in other instructions given, it is not error for the court to refuse a requested specific instruction. Mohler v. Park County Sch. Dist. Re-2, 32 Colo. App. 388, 515 P.2d 112 (1973).

Where correct instructions are given covering all the points of a case, the refusal of others, though correct in themselves, is not ground of error. Dozenback v. Raymer, 13 Colo. 451, 22 P. 787 (1889).

When a tendered instruction is no more than a restatement of the court's instruction, it is not error to refuse the tendered instruction. Lockwood v. Travelers Ins. Co., 179 Colo. 103, 498 P.2d 947 (1972).

Jury instruction which was merely a statement of the parties' pleadings and contained the trial court's admonition that the contentions of the parties in the pleadings were not to be considered by the jury as evidence was not improper or prejudicial. Schafer v. Nat'l Teal Co., 32 Colo. App. 372, 511 P.2d 949 (1973).

A requested instruction which contains unwarranted assumptions is properly refused. Alamosa v. Johnson, 99 Colo. 134, 60 P.2d 1087 (1936).

An instruction should not be given which creates issue of fact not supported by evidence or which tends to mislead or divert minds of jury from real factual issues. Dolan v. Mitchell, 179 Colo. 359, 502 P.2d 72 (1972).

An instruction which states that the defendant has to prove a matter by a preponderance of the evidence is incorrect, because such an instruction shifts the entire burden of proof rather than shifting only the burden of going forward with the evidence to rebut the presumption and plaintiff's ''prima facie'' case. Lockwood v. Travelers Ins. Co., 179 Colo. 103, 498 P.2d 947 (1972).

Where it is necessary that the jury be properly and fully instructed on a measure and counsel fails to tender suitable instructions thereon, it is the duty of the court to so instruct on its own motion. Kendall v. Hargrave, 142 Colo. 120, 349 P.2d 993 (1960).

In instructing on its own motion, an appellate court may execute its discretion in noticing error appearing on the face of the record even though not raised by the parties. Kendall v. Hargrave, 142 Colo. 120, 349 P.2d 993 (1960).

Tendered instruction on negligence properly refused. It was not error for the trial court to refuse defendants tendered instruction where the instruction would have been proper as to only two of plaintiff's three theories of negligence and the defendants did not attempt to limit the instructions' applicability to those two theories. Kerby v. Flamingo Club, Inc., 35 Colo. App. 127, 532 P.2d 975 (1974).

Rule restricts parties not court. This rule serves only as a restriction on parties to an action both by requiring assistance in the orderly administration of justice and by preventing a miscarriage of justice: it is not a bar to the court where the trial judge is attempting to secure substantial justice. First Nat'l Bank v. Campbell, 198 Colo. 344, 599 P.2d 915 (1979).

The court's action in giving an example of the application of a comparative negligence instruction is not reversible error where the evidence supports the amount of the verdict, the court gave the summary closing instruction, and the defendant did not make any contemporaneous objection to the remarks. Bravo v. Wareham, 43 Colo. App. 1, 605 P.2d 58 (1979).

Where the trial court refused to make plaintiff's tendered instruction part of the record but defendant admits that the instruction was tendered and refused, this rule will not act as a technical or procedural bar on the right of the plaintiff to protest the failure to instruct on the issue raised in the tendered instruction. Martinez v. Atlas Bolt & Screw Co., 636 P.2d 1287 (Colo. App. 1981).

Trial court's improper refusal to grant defendant's tendered instruction was harmless where the instruction given by the court contained the essence of his claimed defense. People v. Berry, 703 P.2d 613 (Colo. App. 1985).

Electrical utility was not entitled to a jury instruction creating a rebuttable presumption that adherence to industry standards presumes compliance with ''accepted good engineering practice in the electric industry'', since whether the utility complied with accepted good engineering practices, or whether it exercised due care is best determined by the jury after it has examined the relevant evidence and been properly instructed concerning the effect of the utility's compliance with the industry's minimum standards. Yampa Valley Elec. v. Telecky, 862 P.2d 252 (Colo. 1993).

Trial court committed reversible error in giving jury instruction, because there was no statutory or common law justification to support the rebuttable presumption contained in the instruction. Yampa Valley Elec. v. Telecky, 862 P.2d 252 (Colo. 1993).

Failure to instruct jury on standard of care required of a practitioner with a sub-specialty or special training constituted prejudicial error. Short v. Kinkade, 685 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1983).

Trial court erred in refusing to instruct jury on the doctrine of res ipsa locquitur. The trial court should consider all legitimate inferences from the evidence in light most favorable to plaintiffs and submit the issue of res ipsa locquitur if the evidence reasonably permits the conclusion that negligence is the more probable explanation. Gambrell by and through Eddy v. Ravin, 764 P.2d 362 (Colo. App. 1988).

Evidence raising issue whether physician held himself out as specialist required jury instructions. Physician in medical malpractice case who advertised in the ''Yellow Pages'' under ''Family Practice, Obstetrics and Pediatrics'' and who held himself out as a family practitioner who delivered babies required jury instructions on the standard of care applicable to specialists and the standard of care applicable to general practitioners and on the jury's duty to apply the appropriate standard of care based upon its determination on the issue of whether the physician was a specialist. Gambrell by and through Eddy v. Ravin, 764 P.2d 362 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd, 788 P.2d 817 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where a requested jury instruction was legally correct and clearly applicable to a material question of fact in controversy, failure to give such instruction constituted reversible error. Horton v. Mondragon, 705 P.2d 977 (Colo. App. 1984).

Tendered instruction on affirmative defense neither pled nor raised at trial by defendant properly refused. Where assumption of risk is neither pled nor raised at trial by defendant, cautionary instruction that it was not a defense to plaintiff's claim was properly excluded. Cruz v. Union Pacific R. Co., 707 P.2d 360 (Colo. App. 1985).

Failure to request instructions conforming to evidence of legal theory, or to take other steps at trial to permit the jury to consider the theory, precludes plaintiff from introducing such theory on appeal. Alzado v. Blinder, Robinson & Co., 752 P.2d 544 (Colo. 1988).

Public policy supports disclosing to juries the effect that their deliberative decisions will have; thus, there was no error in instructing a jury that the effect of its findings regarding a statute of limitations could bar plaintiff's claim where the jury was also instructed that it should not be influenced by sympathy and the defendant failed to provide any evidence that the jury ignored this instruction. Salazar v. Am. Sterlizer Co., 5 P.3d 357 (Colo. App. 2000).

Applied in Roblek v. Horst, 147 Colo. 55, 362 P.2d 869 (1961); Jones v. Jefferson County Sch. Dist. No. R-1, 154 Colo. 590, 392 P.2d 165 (1964); Nunn v. Car-Skaden, 163 Colo. 328, 430 P.2d 615 (1967); Wales v. Howard, 164 Colo. 167, 433 P.2d 493 (1967); Norden v. Henry, 167 Colo. 274, 447 P.2d 212 (1968); Downing v. Don Ward & Co., 28 Colo. App. 75, 470 P.2d 868 (1970); First Nat'l Bank v. Campbell, 41 Colo. App. 406, 589 P.2d 501 (1978); Mobell v. City & County of Denver, 671 P.2d 433 (Colo. App. 1983).

II. NUMBERED.

Good practice requires that instructions be numbered. Kansas Pac. Ry. v. Ward, 4 Colo. 30 (1877).

Formerly, it was held that the omission to number instructions was not a fatal defect. Gibbs v. Wall, 10 Colo. 153, 14 P. 216 (1887).

A party cannot complain because instructions are irregularly numbered where no possible prejudice results to him, nor can such alleged error be reviewed when raised for the first time on appeal. Austin v. Austin, 42 Colo. 130, 94 P. 309 (1908).

III. IN WRITING.

Instructions to the jury should be written. Dorsett v. Crew, 1 Colo. 18 (1864).

The court should not orally qualify or modify jury instructions. Dorsett v. Crew, 1 Colo. 18 (1864); Gile v. People, 1 Colo. 60 (1867); Montelius v. Atherton, 6 Colo. 224 (1882); Lee v. Stahl, 9 Colo. 208, 11 P. 77 (1886).

By express consent of counsel, charge to jury may be given orally. Keith v. Wells, 14 Colo. 321, 23 P. 991 (1890).

An error is not cured by the extension of the instructions by the stenographer and the signature of the judge. Brown v. Crawford, 2 Colo. App. 235, 29 P. 1137 (1873), aff'd, 21 Colo. 272, 40 P. 692 (1895).

Where the trial court orally answers the question of a juror concerning the interpretation of a given instruction, it does not commit error where the answer is correct. Schlesinger v. Miller, 97 Colo. 583, 52 P.2d 402 (1935).

An admonition orally addressed by the presiding judge to the jury to the effect that they must be controlled by the evidence, not substituting their own judgment or impressions, is not error. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Armstrong, 21 Colo. App. 640, 123 P. 136 (1912).

IV. OBJECTIONS.

Law reviews. For article, "Necessity for Exceptions to Instructions in Colorado", see 1 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 102 (1929).

This rule provides that parties must make objections to any proposed instructions before they are submitted to the jury and that only the grounds so specified shall be considered on appeal. Ross v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 170 Colo. 436, 463 P.2d 882 (1969); Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bowser, 779 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1989).

Parties cannot prevail upon the ground of error in an instruction to which they made no objection upon the trial. Phillips v. Komornic, 159 Colo. 335, 411 P.2d 238 (1966).

Plaintiff's failure to object to jury instructions constituted a waiver of any claim of error to the instruction. Martin v. Minnard, 862 P.2d 1014 (Colo. App. 1993); Gorsich v. Double B Trading Co., Inc., 893 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1994); Voller v. Gertz, 107 P.3d 1129 (Colo. App. 2004).

An appellate court will not ordinarily consider objections to instructions when those objections were not made during the course of the trial. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Kerns, 172 Colo. 59, 470 P.2d 34 (1970).

Court may, in its discretion, notice error of record. This rule, providing that only grounds specified in objections to instructions will be considered on appeal, is modified by C.A.R. 1(d), permitting an appellate court at its discretion to notice any error of record whether raised by counsel or not. Warner v. Barnard, 134 Colo. 337, 304 P.2d 898 (1956).

Discretion will be exercised by the court when necessary to do justice. Warner v. Barnard, 134 Colo. 337, 304 P.2d 898 (1956); Blueflame Gas, Inc. v. Van Hoose, 679 P.2d 579 (Colo. 1984).

The supreme court does not hold that it would not make an exception to the rule concerning objections to instructions where its enforcement would result in a miscarriage of justice. Mansfield v. Harris, 79 Colo. 164, 244 P. 474 (1926).

The contemporaneous objection rule has a salutary purpose in the orderly administration of justice; its principle is to enable trial judges to clarify or correct misleading or erroneous instructions before they are given to a jury, and thereby prevent costly retrials necessitated by obvious and prejudicial error. Scheer v. Cromwell, 158 Colo. 427, 407 P.2d 344 (1965); Ross v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 170 Colo. 436, 463 P.2d 882 (1969); First Nat'l Bank v. Campbell, 198 Colo. 344, 599 P.2d 915 (1979); Baum v. S.S. Kresge Co., 646 P.2d 400 (Colo. App. 1982).

Objections should be timely. Objections to instructions should be made in such time and manner as to give the trial court an opportunity to correct the same, if found erroneous. Jacobs v. Mitchell, 2 Colo. App. 456, 31 P. 235 (1892); Colo. Utils. Corp. v. Casady, 89 Colo. 168, 300 P. 606 (1931).

When instructions are about to be given to the jury, counsel may not sit idly by and allow improper instructions to be given without proper and specific objections thereto in time for the court to correct the instructions before giving them to the jury since it is not in furtherance of justice to permit them to lie in wait and catch the court in error for the purpose of obtaining a reversal. Blanchard v. People, 74 Colo. 431, 222 P. 649 (1924).

Agreement for making objections in new trial motion is ineffectual. An agreement between the parties' attorneys approved by the court, that objections made to plaintiff's instructions for the first time in defendant's motion for a new trial should be considered as having been made before the instructions were given to the jury, is ineffectual. Thompson v. Davis, 117 Colo. 82, 184 P.2d 133 (1947).

Objections to instructions on a former trial do not eliminate the necessity of a renewal of the objections in a new trial if the party wishes to avail himself of such objections, for except by stipulation or proper order to the contrary, every judgment depends upon its own record only. Everett v. Cole, 86 Colo. 414, 282 P. 253 (1929).

Error based on instructions will not be considered where the abstract of record contains no exceptions to the giving of such instructions. Mullen v. Griffin, 60 Colo. 464, 154 P. 90 (1916); Wertz v. Lawrence, 69 Colo. 540, 195 P. 647 (1921).

To entitle a party to a consideration of an assignment of error based upon the refusal of the trial court to give requested instructions, the abstract must set out the instructions given by the court. Rollman v. Stenger, 84 Colo. 507, 271 P. 625 (1928).

Where neither the requested instructions nor those given are set out in the abstract, plaintiff in error is not entitled to a ruling on assignments of error based thereon. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Lorton, 97 Colo. 545, 51 P.2d 693 (1935).

Failure to object waives error. It is the duty of counsel to examine or listen to the reading of instructions when given, and, if objections or errors are not called to the attention of the court at the time, they must ordinarily be deemed waived. Gilligan v. Blakesley, 93 Colo. 370, 26 P.2d 808 (1933); Scheer v. Cromwell, 158 Colo. 427, 407 P.2d 344 (1965); Ross v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 170 Colo. 436, 463 P.2d 882 (1969); Bear Valley Church of Christ v. DeBose, 928 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1996).

A party is required to make specific objections to an instruction in the trial court, to entitle him to assign error thereon on review. Schwalbe v. Postle, 80 Colo. 1, 249 P. 495 (1926); Sandner v. Temmer, 81 Colo. 57, 253 P. 400 (1927); Koontz v. People, 82 Colo. 589, 263 P. 19 (1927); Colo. Nat'l Bank v. Ashcraft, 83 Colo. 136, 263 P. 23 (1927); Small v. Clark, 83 Colo. 211, 263 P. 933 (1928); Rains v. Rains, 97 Colo. 19, 46 P.2d 740 (1935).

If objections not made in lower court, they will not be considered on review. Objections to instructions not specifically made in the lower court before they are given will not be considered on review. Baldwin v. Scott, 65 Colo. 53, 173 P. 716 (1918); Krohn v. Colo. Springs Interurban Ry., 70 Colo. 243, 199 P. 88 (1921); Bijou Irrigation Dist. v. Cateran Land & Live Stock Co., 73 Colo. 93, 213 P. 999 (1923); Blanchard v. People, 74 Colo. 431, 222 P. 649 (1925); Galligan v. Bua, 77 Colo. 386, 236 P. 1016 (1925); Clark v. Giacomini, 85 Colo. 530, 277 P. 306 (1929); Colo. Utils. Corp. v. Casady, 89 Colo. 156, 300 P. 601 (1931); Boynton v. Fox Denver Theaters, Inc., 121 Colo. 227, 214 P.2d 793, 24 A.L.R.2d 235 (1950); Sharoff v. Iacino, 123 Colo. 456, 231 P.2d 959 (1951); Kennedy-Fudge v. Fink, 644 P.2d 91 (Colo. App. 1982).

A general objection to the whole of an instruction will not prevail where such instruction contains distinct propositions, one of which is sound in law. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. v. Gumaer, 22 Colo. App. 495, 125 P. 589 (1912).

General exceptions to instructions "in each and every part thereof" are insufficient. Jacobs v. Mitchell, 2 Colo. App. 456, 31 P. 235 (1892).

Single objection to error appearing in other instructions is sufficient. Where the attention of the trial court was sufficiently directed to objectionable words in an instruction, then the point is saved for consideration on appeal, although specific objections are not made to other instructions in which the error is repeated. Lewis v. La Nier, 84 Colo. 376, 270 P. 656 (1928).

Where one argues that instructions could have been differently arranged, he must complain of the arrangement at the time that the instructions are submitted by the parties and before they are given to the jury. Mallett v. Pirkey, 171 Colo. 271, 466 P.2d 466 (1970).

Contemporaneous objection requirement inapplicable to sua sponte grant of new trial. This rule does not apply to the trial court when it sua sponte grants a new trial; the purposes of the contemporaneous objection requirement of this rule are not violated when the trial court acts on its own initiative to order a new trial under C.R.C.P. 59(d) (now 59(c)(1)). First Nat'l Bank v. Campbell, 198 Colo. 344, 599 P.2d 915 (1979).

Where an objection sufficiently directs the court's attention to the asserted error, the purpose of this rule, to enable the trial judge to correct instructions before they are given to the jury, is satisfied. Blueflame Gas, Inc. v. Van Hoose, 679 P.2d 579 (Colo. 1984).

"Plain error" rule should be applied sparingly where there is a full and uninhibited opportunity to object to a charge. In re Massey v. Riebold, 3 B.R. 110 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1980).

V. READ TO JURY.

This rule provides that the instructions shall be read to the jury before argument. Ress v. Rediess, 130 Colo. 572, 278 P.2d 183 (1954).

It is error to instruct a jury orally. Home Pub. Mkt. v. Newrock, 111 Colo. 428, 142 P.2d 272 (1943).

This rule clearly prohibits comment on the evidence by the trial court. Angelopoulos v. Wise, 133 Colo. 133, 293 P.2d 294 (1956).

Instructions should be on law applicable to facts. It is the duty of the court, before the argument is begun, to give the jury such instructions upon the law applicable to the facts as may be necessary for their guidance. Pickett v. Handy, 5 Colo. App. 295, 38 P. 606 (1884); Dozenback v. Raymer, 13 Colo. 451, 22 P. 787 (1889).

The existence of facts proper for the consideration of the jury must not be assumed in the instructions of the court. Kinney v. Williams, 1 Colo. 191 (1870).

Instructions to the jury should be confined to the law of the case, leaving the facts to be determined by the jury. Sopris v. Truax, 1 Colo. 89 (1868).

Faulty instruction involves fatal error. An instruction which announces as the law what is not the law, or which assumes as proven what is not supported by the evidence, or which withdraws from the jury an issue of fact exclusively within its province involves fatal error. King Solomon Tunnel & Dev. Co. v. Mary Verna Mining Co., 22 Colo. App. 528, 127 P. 129 (1912).

It is clearly error for a court to assume in an instruction that any disputed fact in a suit is true or has been established. Foster v. Feder, 135 Colo. 585, 316 P.2d 576 (1957).

It is not required that every instruction should by express words require the jury to find "from the evidence". Sholine v. Harris, 22 Colo. App. 63, 123 P. 330 (1912).

Rule 51.1. Colorado Jury Instructions

(1) In instructing the jury in a civil case, the court shall use such instructions as are contained in Colorado Jury Instruction (CJI) as are applicable to the evidence and the prevailing law.

(2) In cases in which there are no CJI instructions on the subject, or in which the factual situation or changes in the law warrant a departure from the CJI instructions, the court shall instruct the jury as to the prevailing law applicable to the evidence in a manner which is clear, unambiguous, impartial and free from argument, using CJI instructions as models as to the form so far as possible.

Editor's note: The Colorado Jury Instructions are contained in a book prepared by the Colorado Supreme Court Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

ANNOTATION

Intent of the Colorado supreme court in promulgating these instructions was to provide clear and impartial forms for use by the trial court in preparing instructions for juries. These forms are to be used with discrimination, keeping in mind that they are not law in themselves and, in order to continually provide accurate assistance to juries, must be refined and modified in accord with changes in statutes and the body of appellate decisions. Gallegos v. Graff, 32 Colo. App. 213, 508 P.2d 798 (1973).

In promulgating the Colorado jury instructions, it was not the purpose of the Colorado supreme court to compile a restatement or an encyclopedia of prevailing law. Gallegos v. Graff, 32 Colo. App. 213, 508 P.2d 798 (1973).

Trial court did not err in refusing to give instruction in personal injury action which provided that, if the jury should find in favor of the plaintiff, it ''should not add any sum for income taxes as such an award is not taxable under federal and state tax laws'', because the subject matter of this instruction is not covered in the Colorado jury instructions as one to be given. Davis v. Fortino & Jackson Chevrolet Co., 32 Colo. App. 222, 510 P.2d 1376 (1973).

Trial court committed harmless error by instructing jury in personal injury action not to adjust amount of damages awarded in order to compensate for income taxes since damages are not taxable. Rego Co. v. McKown-Katy, 801 P.2d 536 (Colo. 1990).

Court did not abuse its discretion in providing respondeat superior doctrine to jury in its jury instructions. Where medical negligence cases involve acts or omissions during surgery, the jury should be instructed that a surgeon is vicariously liable for the negligence of subordinate hospital employees. Ochoa v. Vered, 212 P.3d 963 (Colo. App. 2009).

Jury instruction stating that "[a]n exercise of judgment that results in an unsuccessful outcome does not, by itself, mean that a physician was negligent" accurately reflects the law. The instruction does not impose a subjective standard of care on a physician whose exercise of judgment results in an unsuccessful outcome. Rather, it informs juries that a bad outcome that results from a physician's exercise of judgment does not by itself constitute negligence. Day v. Johnson, 232 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd, 255 P.3d 1064 (Colo. 2011).

Jury award of zero damages indicated that the jury failed to follow court instructions as the evidence was undisputed with respect to the existence and nature of the injuries sustained. Martinez v. Shapland, 833 P.2d 837 (Colo. App. 1992).

The instructions found in the Colorado jury instructions are not to be used if they do not reflect the prevailing law. Federal Ins. Co. v. Pub. Serv. Co., 194 Colo. 107, 570 P.2d 239 (1977).

The trial court has the duty to examine the prevailing law to determine whether a Colorado jury instruction is applicable to the facts of the particular case and states the prevailing law. Federal Ins. Co. v. Pub. Serv. Co., 194 Colo. 107, 570 P.2d 239 (1977).

Where there was no statute or rule to support the presumption created by a jury instruction, the presumption could only be properly given if it was supported by common law rules governing the admissibility and evidentiary effect of defendant electrical utility's compliance with industry standards. Yampa Valley Elec. v. Telecky, 862 P.2d 252 (Colo. 1993).

Doctrine of sudden emergency abolished. The state's negligence law no longer requires sudden emergency jury instruction. Jury instruction's potential to mislead jury outweighs minimal utility of instruction. Bedor v. Johnson, 2013 CO 4, 292 P.3d 924.

Applied in Sherwood v. Graco, Inc., 427 F. Supp. 155 (D. Colo. 1977); Price v. Sommermeyer, 41 Colo. App. 147, 584 P.2d 1220 (1978); Mailloux v. Bradley, 643 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1982); Peterson v. Tadolini, 97 P.3d 359 (Colo. App. 2004).

Rule 52. Findings by the Court

In all actions tried upon the facts without a jury or with an advisory jury, the court shall find the facts specially and state separately its conclusions of law thereon and judgment shall be entered pursuant to Rule 58; and in granting or refusing interlocutory injunctions the court shall similarly set forth the findings of fact and conclusions of law which constitute the grounds of its action. Neither requests for findings nor objections to findings rendered are necessary for purposes of review. Findings of fact shall not be set aside unless clearly erroneous, and due regard shall be given to the opportunity of the trial court to judge the credibility of the witnesses. The findings of a master, to the extent that the court adopts them, shall be considered as the findings of the court. If an opinion or memorandum of decision is filed, it will be sufficient if the findings of fact and conclusions of law appear therein. Findings of fact and conclusions of law are unnecessary on decisions on motions under Rule 12 or 56 or any other motion except as provided in these rules or other law.

The final sentence of the former version of the rule, ''Findings of fact and conclusions of law are unnecessary on decisions of motions under Rule 12 or 56 or any other motion except as provided in Rule 41(b),'' was replaced because of requirements for findings and conclusions in rules other than Rule 41(b) and in some statutes. Regardless, judges are encouraged to include in decisions on motions sufficient explanation that would be helpful to the parties and a reviewing court. Thus, even where findings and conclusions are not required, the better practice is to explain in a decision on any contested, written motion the court's reasons for granting or denying the motion.

II. EFFECT.

The purpose of this rule is to enable an appellate court to determine the basis of a trial court's decision. Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Bond, 156 Colo. 433, 399 P.2d 793 (1965); Am. Nat'l Bank v. Quad Constr., Inc., 31 Colo. App. 373, 504 P.2d 1113 (1972); Gitlitz v. Bellock, 171 P.3d 1274 (Colo. App. 2007).

The purpose of this rule is to apprise prospective appellate courts of the basis of the trial court's decision. Westland Nursing Home, Inc. v. Benson, 33 Colo. App. 245, 517 P.2d 862 (1974).

In order for the appellate court to determine the ground on which it reached its decision, the lower court must state on the record its reasons for a ruling. People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

The purpose of the requirement of specific findings of fact and conclusions of law is to give the appellate court a clear understanding of the grounds for the trial court's decision. Financial Management Task Force, Inc. v. Altberger, 807 P.2d 1230 (Colo. App. 1990); City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054, (Colo. App. 1992).

This rule uses mandatory words that the court ''shall'' find the facts. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959).

It is the duty of a trial court to see that a final judgment supported by findings of fact and conclusions of law is entered in each case heard and decided by it, so that on appeal, an appellate court can be fully advised as to the complete results of the trial. Ray v. City of Brush, 152 Colo. 428, 383 P.2d 478 (1963).

Parties need not request findings. The provisions of this rule, that requests for findings are not necessary for purposes of review, relieve the parties of the need to request findings but do not relieve a judge of the duty to make them. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959).

Factual findings on the record required. Before a trial court can make legal findings or conclusions, and to make such conclusions reviewable by an appellate court, the trial court must make factual findings on the record. Pasbrig v. Walton, 651 P.2d 459 (Colo. App. 1982).

Court has duty to make separate findings of fact and conclusions of law. When a matter is tried to the court without a jury, the court is under a duty to make findings of fact and to state conclusions of law separately, and even though a court has made findings, they must be sufficiently clear to indicate on appeal the basis of the court's decision. In re Estate of Lewin v. First Nat'l Bank, 42 Colo. App. 129, 595 P.2d 1055 (1979).

Trial court's order must contain findings of fact and conclusions of law sufficiently explicit to give an appellate court a clear understanding of the basis of its order and to enable the appellate court to determine the grounds upon which the trial court reached its decision. In re Van Inwegen, 757 P.2d 1118 (Colo. App. 1988).

Decisionmaker must state reasons for determination. Although written findings are not required, where significant rights are at issue, the decisionmaker must state the reasons for his determination. Mau v. E.P.H. Corp., 638 P.2d 777 (Colo. 1981).

Failure to comply literally with this rule is not necessarily fatally defective. Thiele v. City & County of Denver, 135 Colo. 442, 312 P.2d 786 (1957).

Brief findings and conclusions sufficient compliance with rule. Even though the findings of fact and conclusions of law are brief and sparse in detail, there is sufficient compliance with the rule if the ultimate facts have been determined and conclusions of law are entered thereon. Manor Vail Condominium Ass'n v. Town of Vail, 199 Colo. 62, 604 P.2d 1168 (1980); M Life Ins. Co. v. Sapers & Wallack Ins. Agency, Inc., 40 P.3d 6 (Colo. App. 2001).

The court expressly resolved the ultimate questions of fact before it, and therefore there was sufficient compliance with the rule. Johnson v. Benson, 725 P.2d 21 (Colo. App. 1986).

This rule provides that findings of fact and conclusions of law are unnecessary on decisions of motions. Garrow v. Garrow, 152 Colo. 480, 382 P.2d 809 (1963); Leidy's Inc. v. H2O Eng'g, Inc., 811 P.2d 38 (Colo. 1991).

Where order is a decision based on post-decree motions, the trial court is under no obligation to attach findings of fact or conclusions of law. City of Boulder v. Sherrelwood, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 522, 604 P.2d 686 (1979).

Where an action is on a motion for modification of support and visitation orders, a trial court is under no duty to make written findings of fact and conclusions of law. Garrow v. Garrow, 152 Colo. 480, 382 P.2d 809 (1963).

A trial judge is not required to assert in detail the negative of every rejected proposition as well as the affirmative of those which he finds to be correct. Uptime Corp. v. Colo. Research Corp., 161 Colo. 87, 420 P.2d 232 (1966); Westland Nursing Home, Inc. v. Benson, 33 Colo. App. 245, 517 P.2d 862 (1974).

Court's findings made in detail upon all major issues are in full compliance with section (a) of this rule. Johnson v. Neel, 123 Colo. 377, 229 P.2d 939 (1951).

It is sufficient compliance with this rule if a court makes findings on the material and ultimate facts. Lininger v. Lininger, 138 Colo. 338, 333 P.2d 625 (1958); Rubens v. Pember, 170 Colo. 182, 460 P.2d 803 (1969).

This rule is complied with if the trial court makes findings on the material and ultimate facts. Epcon Co. v. Bar B Que Baron Int'l, Inc., 32 Colo. App. 393, 512 P.2d 646 (1973).

Though it is necessary for trial courts to expressly label their findings of fact in cases involving disputed evidence, it is better practice to do it in all instances. Thiele v. City & County of Denver, 135 Colo. 442, 312 P.2d 786 (1957).

Oral findings may be sufficient to support judgment. Where a trial court makes no written detailed findings of fact or conclusions of law, but makes oral findings then when there are no disputed facts in the case, the oral findings of the court are sufficient to support the judgment. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Central Fin. Corp., 124 Colo. 379, 237 P.2d 1079 (1951).

Written findings of fact and conclusions of law are not imposed by section (a) of this rule and C.A.R. 10(a). Dunbar v. County Court, 131 Colo. 483, 283 P.2d 182 (1955).

If a court makes oral findings and written ones are desired by either party, then they should make such a request in writing. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959).

The findings of the trial court may be either oral or written at the discretion of the trial court. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959); Murray v. Rock, 147 Colo.

561, 364 P.2d 393 (1961); Hipps v. Hennig, 167 Colo. 358, 447 P.2d 700 (1968).

The court has a duty to make either oral or written findings. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959); Murray v. Rock, 147 Colo. 561, 364 P.2d 393 (1961); Hipps v. Hennig, 167 Colo. 358, 447 P.2d 700 (1968).

If made orally, the statements must be transcribed in full. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959); Murray v. Rock, 147 Colo. 561, 364 P.2d 393 (1961); Hipps v. Hennig, 167 Colo. 358, 447 P.2d 700 (1968).

Where all of the findings of fact and conclusions of law entered orally have been reported in the transcript, then, if they are sufficiently comprehensive to provide a basis for a review, the requirements of this rule have been satisfied. Hipps v. Hennig, 167 Colo. 358, 447 P.2d 700 (1968).

The court's findings must be so explicit as to give an appellate court a clear understanding of the basis of the trial court's decision and to enable it to determine the ground on which it reached its decision. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959); Murray v. Rock, 147 Colo. 561, 364 P.2d 393 (1961); Hipps v. Hennig, 167 Colo. 358, 447 P.2d 700 (1968); People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

Findings of fact by a trial court sitting without a jury must be made so explicit as to give a reviewing court an opportunity to determine on what ground the trial court reached its decision, and whether that decision was supported by competent evidence. Westland Nursing Home, Inc. v. Benson, 33 Colo. App. 245, 517 P.2d 862 (1974).

Court's ruling that the issue of paternity could not be raised in the child support proceeding because it had been previously litigated was based on undisputed facts, and was tantamount to a partial judgment on the pleadings or a partial summary judgment. As such, no findings of fact and conclusions of law were required. McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977).

Defendant's motion to reopen the divorce decree was not a motion pursuant to C.R.C.P. 41(b), and therefore no findings of fact and conclusions of law were required to accompany the ruling on this motion. McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977).

The ultimate test as to the propriety of findings is whether they are sufficiently comprehensive to provide a basis for decision and are supported by the evidence. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959); Johnson v. Benson, 725 P.2d 21 (Colo. App. 1986).

Where record would not support that trial court made findings about probable cause or the absence thereof, or that the trial court made factual findings of exigent circumstances or the absence thereof, the trial court's findings presented an inadequate basis upon which to resolve these issues, requiring the trial court's order to be vacated and the case to be remanded for further findings as to these issues. People v. Mendoza-Balderama, 981 P.2d 168 (Colo. 1999).

Standard for determining harmless error. The standard for determining harmless error is whether the error, defect, irregularity, or variance affected substantial rights of the defendant. People v. Vialpando, 804 P.2d 219 (Colo. App. 1990).

It is only when the findings themselves are inadequate and do not indicate the basis for the trial court's decision that the judgment will be reversed. Uptime Corp. v. Colo. Research Corp., 161 Colo. 87, 420 P.2d 232 (1966).

It is not error for a trial court to adopt advisory verdicts in its findings of fact, and the adoption of such a verdict by the court is equivalent to its findings on the questions thereby determined. McKelvy v. Cooper, 165 Colo. 102, 437 P.2d 346 (1968).

When a trial judge signs the findings, the responsibility for their correctness becomes his, and the findings, if otherwise sufficient, are not weakened or discredited because given in the form submitted by counsel. Uptime Corp. v. Colo. Research Corp., 161 Colo. 87, 420 P.2d 232 (1966).

The supreme court does not approve the practice of uncritical adoption of findings prepared by litigants; but if, after careful study, a trial judge concludes that the findings prepared by a party correctly state both the law and the facts, then there is no good reason why he may not adopt them as his own. Uptime Corp. v. Colo. Research Corp., 161 Colo. 87, 420 P.2d 232 (1966).

Where the findings of a trial court are verbatim those submitted by the successful litigant, an appellate court will scrutinize them more critically and give them less weight than if they were the work product of the judge himself, or, at least bear evidence that he has given them careful study and revision. Uptime Corp. v. Colo. Research Corp., 161 Colo. 87, 420 P.2d 232 (1966).

Any court finding that complaint is "true" is sufficient. Any finding by a court that the evidence supports the allegations of the complaint, that the allegations of the complaint are true, or which recites verbatim the pleading of an ultimate fact in the complaint is sufficient to comply with this rule. Lininger v. Lininger, 138 Colo. 338, 333 P.2d 625 (1958); Bulow v. Ward Terry & Co., 155 Colo. 560, 396 P.2d 232 (1964).

Where a court sets forth the allegations of a complaint and then finds that plaintiff failed to prove them, a finding of no evidence to support a specific allegation complies with this rule. McCray v. City of Boulder, 165 Colo. 383, 439 P.2d 350 (1968).

Comments of trial court at close of trial, although not formally labeled "findings of fact", are sufficient to constitute such where the facts recited and conclusions announced are amply supported by the evidence. Nemer v. Anderson, 151 Colo. 411, 378 P.2d 841 (1963).

Where the record shows no compliance with this rule, remarks and rulings of the court do not constitute a judgment under the rule. Ray v. City of Brush, 152 Colo. 428, 383 P.2d 478 (1963).

Entering a judgment is not sufficient setting forth of conclusion of law to properly inform an appellate court of a trial court's reasons. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959).

It is no finding of fact at all to merely state that the facts are in the record. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959).

Where the necessary findings of fact are lacking when a party seeks relief in an appellate court, the correct procedure is not to dismiss a writ but rather to vacate the judgment and remand the case to a trial court for appropriate findings of fact; if this cannot be done, then the judgment is reversed and remanded for a new trial. Mowry v. Jackson, 140 Colo. 197, 343 P.2d 833 (1959); Murray v. Rock, 147 Colo. 561, 364 P.2d 393 (1961); Commercial Claims, Ltd. v. Clement Bros., 709 P.2d 88 (Colo. App. 1985).

Trial court's failure to make specific factual findings, so that appellate court is unable to determine the grounds on which decision was based, is error and cause may be remanded. Estate of Hickle v. Carney, 748 P.2d 360 (Colo. App. 1987).

Where custodial orders of a trial court are silent on the question of character and fitness of either parent to have custody of the children, the trial court should have made findings of fact thereon, and lacking such findings the supreme court is without compass to ascertain whether the trial court acted properly, so that the judgment will be reversed with directions that findings of fact be made. Songster v. Songster, 150 Colo. 466, 374 P.2d 197 (1962).

Findings of fact shall not be set aside upon review unless clearly erroneous. Broncucia v. McGee, 173 Colo. 22, 475 P.2d 336 (1970); Trinidad Sch. Dist. No. 1 v. Lopez, 963 P.2d 1095 (Colo. 1998); In re Estate of Elliott, 993 P.2d 474 (Colo. 2000).

The credibility of the witnesses, the sufficiency, probative effect, and weight of all the evidence, and the inferences and conclusions to be drawn therefrom are all within the province of the trial court whose conclusions will not be disturbed on review unless so clearly erroneous as to find no support in the record. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Quad Constr., Inc., 31 Colo. App. 373, 504 P.2d 1113 (1972).

It is the responsibility of the trier of fact to determine the credibility of the witnesses and the weight, probative effect and sufficiency of the evidence. Hence, the factual findings of the trial court will be accepted on review unless they are clearly erroneous and not supported by the record. Wright Farms, Inc. v. Weninger, 669 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1983); Wulf v. Tibaldo, 680 P.2d 1348 (Colo. App. 1984).

Failure to give a jury instruction on the credibility of a child's testimony at the time child's hearsay statement is admitted is not plain error in a prosecution for aggravated incest and sexual assault on a child, so long as such instruction was given as a jury instruction at the conclusion of the evidence. People v. Flysaway, 807 P.2d 1179 (Colo. App. 1990).

An appellate court's conclusion from the evidence might differ from that of the trial court. In a trial to the court, the sufficiency, probative effect, and weight of all the evidence and the inferences and conclusions to be drawn therefrom are conclusions for the trial court; although an appellate court's conclusions from the evidence might differ, the trial court's determination will not be disturbed on review unless so clearly erroneous as to find no support in the record. Warren v. Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co., 31 Colo. App. 292, 501 P.2d 135 (1972).

An appellate court is not allowed to substitute its conclusions. There being sufficient evidence to support the fact findings of the trial court and the evidence being conflicting, an appellate court is not allowed to substitute its conclusions on the facts for those of the lower court. Retail Hdwe. Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Securities Corp., 97 Colo. 487, 51 P.2d 598 (1935).

Where the evidence in the record is conflicting, but there is sufficient evidence to support the trial court's finding, in that case, an appellate court will not substitute its opinion for that of the trial court. Famularo v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 180 Colo. 333, 505 P.2d 958 (1973).

An appellate court may not impress its contrary finding upon a trial court where the record contains evidence to support the trial court's finding which is also in accord with law. Leo Payne Pontiac, Inc. v. Ratliff, 178 Colo. 361, 497 P.2d 997 (1972).

Where the evidence is conflicting, it is the sole responsibility of the trier of the fact to resolve the factual issues. Broncucia v. McGee, 173 Colo. 22, 475 P.2d 336 (1970).

Findings of fact by a court should respond to and be within the issues, and a finding outside the issues cannot be supported and cannot be used to formulate a judgment. Credit Inv.

& Loan Co. v. Guaranty Bank & Trust Co., 166 Colo. 471, 444 P.2d 633 (1968).

Neither this section nor § 13-21-102.5 (3)(a) require the trial court to make specific findings of clear and convincing evidence for not reducing the award of noneconomic damages. Herrera v. Gene's Towing, 827 P.2d 619 (Colo. App. 1992).

Defendant's motion for costs and damages was not a motion pursuant to C.R.C.P. 41(b), and therefore, no findings of law were required. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

Facts are to be determined by the court from the evidence, and not settled by conclusions of witnesses. Royal Tiger Mines Co. v. Ahearn, 97 Colo. 116, 47 P.2d 692 (1935).

Finding based on choice of plausible views is not erroneous. A court's finding based upon a choice between two plausible views of the weight of the evidence, or upon a choice between conflicting inferences from the evidence, is not clearly erroneous. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Quad Constr., Inc., 31 Colo. App. 373, 504 P.2d 1113 (1972).

Court findings which are inadequate as a matter of law cannot be upheld on review. Redman & Scripp, Inc. v. Douglas, 170 Colo. 208, 460 P.2d 231 (1969).

C.R.C.P. 53(e)(2), binds a court to accept the findings of a master just as effectively as section (a) of this rule binds an appellate court to accept findings of a trial court. Hutchinson v. Elder, 140 Colo. 379, 344 P.2d 1090 (1959).

Trial court's findings held supported by the evidence. Howard v. White, 144 Colo. 391, 356 P.2d 484 (1960); Rowe v. Bowers, 160 Colo. 379, 417 P.2d 503 (1966); Pastor v. San Juan Sch. Dist. No. 1, 699 P.2d 418 (Colo. App. 1985); Martinez v. Continental Enterprises, 730 P.2d 308 (Colo. 1986).

Findings and conclusions held insufficient under section (a). H.M.O. Sys. v. Choicecare Health Servs., Inc., 665 P.2d 635 (Colo. App. 1983).

Applied in Light v. Rogers, 125 Colo. 209, 242 P.2d 234 (1952); Shoenberg Farms, Inc. v. People ex rel. Swisher, 166 Colo. 199, 444 P.2d 277 (1968); Estate of Barnhart v. Burkhardt, 38 Colo. App. 544, 563 P.2d 972 (1977); Matter of Estate of Van Winkle, 757 P.2d 1134 (Colo. App. 1988); Trinidad Sch. Dist. No. 1 v. Lopez, 963 P.2d 1095 (Colo. 1998); In re Estate of Elliott, 993 P.2d 474 (Colo. 2000); Vento v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 985 P.2d 48 (Colo. App. 1999).

III. AMENDMENT.

Either party may make motion. Section (b) of this rule, providing for amendment of findings or additional findings upon motion, allows either party to make such a motion. Noice v. Jorgensen, 151 Colo. 459, 378 P.2d 834 (1963).

The trial judge may decline to adopt any of the proposed changes by simply denying the motion. Eitel v. Alford, 127 Colo. 341, 257 P.2d 955 (1953).

If he believes that his findings and conclusions, already announced, are proper and sufficient, his denial of the motion without explanation is not error. Eitel v. Alford, 127 Colo. 341, 257 P.2d 955 (1953).

This rule does not require the trial court to act singly upon each of the proposed changes, additions, or modifications, nor to state any reason for its ruling thereon. Eitel v. Alford, 127 Colo. 341, 257 P.2d 955 (1953).

The purpose of section (b) of this rule is to clarify matters for the appellate court's better understanding of the basis of the decision of the trial court. Noice v. Jorgensen, 151 Colo. 459, 378 P.2d 834 (1963).

This rule merely provides a method for amplifying and expanding the findings of fact. Noice v. Jorgensen, 151 Colo. 459, 378 P.2d 834 (1963).

This rule does not provide a method for reversal of the judgment or a finding of contrary facts. Noice v. Jorgensen, 151 Colo. 459, 378 P.2d 834 (1963).

This rule is not intended as a vehicle for securing a rehearing on the merits. Noice v. Jorgensen, 151 Colo. 459, 378 P.2d 834 (1963).

There is nothing in section (b) of this rule that obviates filing motion for new trial. There is nothing in section (b) of this rule to indicate that even a motion to amend findings, let alone mere objections thereto, obviates the necessity for filing a motion for new trial under C.R.C.P. 59. Denver Feed Co. v. Winters, 152 Colo. 103, 380 P.2d 678 (1963); Noice v. Jorgensen, 151 Colo. 459, 378 P.2d 834 (1963); Austin v. Coll./Univ. Ins. Co. of Am., 30 Colo. App. 502, 495 P.2d 1162 (1972).

This rule should be regarded similarly to motion for new trial. Section (b) of this rule, authorizing the filing of a motion to amend or make additional findings, should be regarded similarly to a motion for a new trial. Eitel v. Alford, 127 Colo. 341, 257 P.2d 955 (1953).

This rule and C.R.C.P. 59 are not two separate rules on the same subject matter; rather each serves a distinctly different procedural purpose. Noice v. Jorgensen, 151 Colo. 459, 378 P.2d 834 (1963).

A motion under this rule may be joined with a motion for a new trial under C.R.C.P. 59. Noice v. Jorgensen, 151 Colo. 459, 378 P.2d 834 (1963).

Successful party may question finding on review without having objected. Where the judgment in the trial court is for a party, that party is not bound by the court's finding but may question it on review even though the record disclosed neither objection nor exception thereto in the lower court. C. I. T. Corp. v. K. & S. Fin. Co., 111 Colo. 378, 142 P.2d 1005 (1943).

This rule states that in a trial to the court without a jury objections to the court's findings are not necessary in order to preserve for appellate review the question of sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings. Noice v. Jorgensen, 151 Colo. 459, 378 P.2d 834 (1963); Denver Feed Co. v. Winters, 152 Colo. 103, 380 P.2d 678 (1963).

It is not essential to an appeal that there be any motion to amend. Denver Feed Co. v. Winters, 152 Colo. 103, 380 P.2d 678 (1963).

There was error in denying motion for additional findings. Calvin v. Fitzsimmons, 129 Colo. 420, 270 P.2d 748 (1954).

Applied in Green v. Hoffman, 126 Colo. 104, 251 P.2d 933 (1952); Greathouse v. Jones, 158 Colo. 516, 408 P.2d 439 (1965).

Rule 53. Masters

(a) Appointment.

(1) Scope. A reference to a master shall be the exception and not the rule. Unless a statute provides otherwise, a court may appoint a master only to:

(A) perform duties consented to by the parties;

(B) hold trial proceedings and make or recommend findings of fact on issues to be decided without a jury if appointment is warranted by:

(i) some exceptional condition; or

(ii) the need to perform an accounting or resolve a difficult computation of damages; or

(C) address pretrial and posttrial matters that cannot be effectively and timely addressed by the appointed district judge.

(2) Disqualification. A master must not have a relationship to the parties, attorneys, action, or court that would require disqualification of a judge under the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct, Rule 2.11, unless the parties, with the court's approval, consent to the appointment after the master discloses any potential grounds for disqualification.

(3) Possible Expense or Delay. In appointing a master, the court must consider the proportionality of the appointment to the issues and needs of the case, consider the fairness of imposing the likely expenses on the parties, and protect against unreasonable expense or delay.

(b) Order Appointing a Master.

(1) Notice. Before appointing a master, the court must give the parties notice and an opportunity to be heard. If requested by the Court, any party may suggest candidates for appointment.

(2) Contents. The appointing order must direct the master to proceed with all reasonable diligence and must state:

(A) the master's duties, including any investigation or enforcement duties, and any limits on the master's authority under Rule 53(c);

(B) the circumstances, if any, in which the master may communicate ex parte with the court or a party;

(C) the nature of the materials to be preserved and filed as the record of the master's activities;

(D) the time limits, method of filing the record, other procedures, and standards for reviewing the master's orders, findings, and recommendations; and

(E) the basis, terms, and procedure for fixing the master's compensation under Rule 53(g).

(3) Issuing. The court may issue the order only after:

(A) the master files an affidavit disclosing whether there is any ground for disqualification under the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct, Rule 2.11; and

(B) if a ground is disclosed, the parties, with the court's approval, waive the disqualification.

(4) Amending. The order may be amended at any time after notice to the parties and an opportunity to be heard.

(5) Meetings. When a reference is made, the clerk shall forthwith furnish the master with a copy of the order of reference. Upon receipt thereof unless the order of reference otherwise provides, the master shall forthwith set a time and place for the first meeting of the parties or their attorneys to be held within 14 days after the date of the order of reference and shall notify the parties or their attorneys.

(c) Master's Authority.

(1) In General. Unless the appointing order directs otherwise, a master may:

(A) regulate all proceedings;

(B) take all appropriate measures to perform the assigned duties fairly and efficiently; and

(C) if conducting an evidentiary hearing, exercise the appointing court's power to compel, take, and record evidence.

(2) Sanctions. The master may by order impose on a party any noncontempt sanction provided by Rule 37 or 45, and may recommend a contempt sanction against a party and sanctions against a nonparty.

(d) Master's Orders. A master who issues a written order must file it and promptly serve a copy on each party. The clerk must enter the written order on the docket. A master's order shall be effective upon issuance subject to the provisions of section (f) of this Rule.

(e) Master's Reports. A master must report to the court as required by the appointing order. The master must file the report and promptly serve a copy on each party, unless the court orders otherwise. A report is final upon issuance. A master's report shall be effective upon issuance subject to the provisions of section (f) of this Rule.

(f) Action on the Master's Order, Report, or Recommendations.

(1) Opportunity for a Hearing; Action in General. In acting on a master's order, report, or recommendations, the court must give the parties notice and an opportunity to be heard; may receive evidence; and may adopt or affirm, modify, wholly or partly reject or reverse, or resubmit to the master with instructions.

(2) Time to Object or Move to Modify. A party may file objections to or a motion to modify the master's proposed rulings, order, report or recommendations no later than 7 days after service of any of those matters, except when the master held a hearing and took sworn evidence, in which case objections or a motion to modify shall be filed no later than 14 days after service of any of those matters.

(3) Reviewing Factual Findings. The court must decide de novo all objections to findings of fact made or recommended by a master, unless the parties, with the court's approval, stipulate that:

(A) the findings will be reviewed for clear error; or

(B) the findings of a master appointed under Rule 53(a)(1)(A) or (C) will be final.

(4) Reviewing Legal Conclusions. The court must decide de novo all objections to conclusions of law made or recommended by a master.

(5) Reviewing Procedural Matters. Unless the appointing order establishes a different standard of review, the court may set aside a master's ruling on a procedural matter only for an abuse of discretion.

(g) Compensation.

(1) Fixing Compensation. Before or after judgment, the court must fix the master's compensation on the basis and terms stated in the appointing order, but the court may set a new basis and terms after giving notice and an opportunity to be heard.

(2) Payment. The compensation must be paid either:

(A) by a party or parties; or

(B) from a fund or subject matter of the action within the court's control.

(3) Allocating Payment. The court must allocate payment among the parties after considering the nature and amount of the controversy, the parties' means, and the extent to which any party is more responsible than other parties for the reference to a master. An interim allocation may be amended to reflect a decision on the merits.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Trials: Rules 38-53'', see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 571 (1951). For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 37 Dicta 21 (1960). For article, ''The Use of Court Appointed Experts and Masters in Civil Cases'', see 46 Colo. Law. 25 (Jan. 2017). For article, ''The New and Improved CRCP 53: Special Master Appointments'', see 47 Colo. Law. 10 (Nov. 2018).

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to this rule as it existed prior to its 2017 amendment and to rules antecedent to that rule, relevant cases construing those rules have been included in these annotations.

This rule and the sections of the former Code of Civil Procedure it supersedes are substantially the same. Julius Hyman & Co. v. Velsicol Corp., 123 Colo. 563, 233 P.2d 977, cert. denied, 342 U.S. 870, 72 S. Ct. 113, 96 L. Ed. 654, reh'g denied, 342 U.S. 895, 72 S. Ct. 199, 96 L. Ed. 671 (1951).

The relationship between a master and the trial court is the same relationship as exists between a trier of fact and an appellate reviewing body. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

Applied in United States v. City & County of Denver, 656 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1982); In re Westlake, 674 P.2d 1386 (Colo. App. 1983); In re Brantley, 674 P.2d 1388 (Colo. App. 1983).

II. APPOINTMENT AND COMPENSATION.

The appointment of a master is a discretionary matter, not a matter of right. Gypsum Aggregates Corp. v. Lionelle, 170 Colo. 282, 460 P.2d 780 (1969).

Master's fee of $2,500 held unjustified in circumstances of case. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

III. REFERENCE.

This rule and federal rule identical. Because this rule, and F.R.C.P. 53(b) are identical, federal decisions are persuasive authority on procedural matters. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 182 Colo. 73, 511 P.2d 463 (1973).

Referral of a case to a master is declared to be the exception and not the rule. Gypsum Aggregates Corp. v. Lionelle, 170 Colo. 282, 460 P.2d 780 (1969).

Masters should not be appointed as a routine matter in cases where the issues are not complex and the facts are not complicated. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

Circumstances in divorce action insufficient to warrant reference to master. Gelfond v. District Court, 180 Colo. 95, 504 P.2d 673 (1972).

The showing of an exceptional condition requiring the reference of a case to a master is not necessary under section (b) of this rule where, subsequent to the appointment of a master, the parties make a voluntary stipulation that the master should act as arbitrator, and he continues in the case as arbitrator rather than as master. Zelinger v. Mellwin Constr. Co., 123 Colo. 149, 225 P.2d 844 (1950).

A reference may be ordered when the trial of an issue of fact requires the examination of any long account on either side. Wilson v. Union Distilling Co., 16 Colo. App. 429, 66 P. 170 (1901).

Possibly, conditions might exist which would render a refusal to order a reference an abuse of judicial discretion and therefore erroneous. Wilson v. Union Distilling Co., 16 Colo. App. 429, 66 P. 170 (1901).

Denial of belated request for referral held not error. Gypsum Aggregates Corp. v. Lionelle, 170 Colo. 282, 460 P.2d 780 (1969).

Order for reference properly entered in action for accounting. In an action for accounting where defendant objected to the appointment of a referee unless and until the plaintiff had rendered an account to it, the court properly exercised its right in overruling the objection and entering an order for reference on the pleadings; no substantial prejudice resulting therefrom, error based upon the claim of premature reference could not be successfully urged on review. Lallier Const. & Eng'r Co. v. Morrison, 93 Colo. 305, 25 P.2d 729 (1933).

The mere fact that an accounting may be necessary is not sufficient in itself to justify a reference to a master if it appears that the matter is simple and would not consume an undue amount of the court's time. Gelfond v. District Court, 180 Colo. 95, 504 P.2d 673 (1972).

Even where an accounting possesses the requisite complexity and difficulty, there is no license in this rule to refer all the issues presented in a case to a master. Gelfond v. District Court, 180 Colo. 95, 504 P.2d 673 (1972).

The issuance of a writ to mandate the vacation of a reference order to a master is necessary where the court is proceeding in excess of its power, for to await the final judgment based on the master's report would be too late and any appeal at that point a futile act, as the expenditure of both time and money would already have occurred, and there would then be no way to undo what had already been erroneously done. Gelfond v. District Court, 180 Colo. 95, 504 P.2d 673 (1972).

In a civil action which involved disclosure of trade secrets and confidential information concerning plaintiff's record keeping and information systems, the plaintiff is entitled to have the judge hear the evidence initially and not through a report from a referee. Curtis, Inc. v. District Court, 182 Colo. 73, 511 P.2d 463 (1973).

IV. POWERS.

Where the order of reference is general and the master is given authority to determine issues of law and of fact, his powers are coextensive with those of the court. Belmont Mining & Milling Co. v. Costigan, 21 Colo. 471, 42 P. 647 (1895).

Delegation of decision making is abdication of constitutional responsibilities. Where the trial court's order appointing the master in effect delegates the decision making as well as the fact finding function to the master, the judge abdicates his constitutional responsibilities and duties. Gelfond v. District Court, 180 Colo. 95, 504 P.2d 673 (1972).

Reference of all the issues presented may be sanctioned only under the most compelling circumstance. Gelfond v. District Court, 180 Colo. 95, 504 P.2d 673 (1972).

Where the order of reference is limited, the cause being referred with authority to take the testimony and report the same with findings of fact thereon at the next term of court, the order further fixing the time during which the parties should present their evidence, then the master has no power to grant a continuance nor has he authority to pass upon a question as to the sufficiency of the complaint. Belmont Mining & Milling Co. v. Costigan, 21 Colo. 471, 42 P. 647 (1895).

Where a court orders a certified public accountant to audit and file a report, but the record lacks any order of reference as contemplated by this rule which would set forth the scope of the auditor's authority, it is assumed that the auditor or master is to perform the limited function of auditing the ''reserve account'', as provided in section (b) pertaining to matters of account in actions tried without a jury. Credit Inv. & Loan Co. v. Guaranty Bank & Trust Co., 166 Colo. 471, 444 P.2d 633 (1968).

Trial court was correct in dismissing a report of the master which was not requested by the trial court because production of such report was outside the master's powers as set forth in the order of appointment. CNA Ins. Co. v. Berndt, 839 P.2d 492 (Colo. App. 1992).

This rule provides that a master may rule upon the admissibility of evidence unless otherwise directed by the order of reference. Oswald v. Dawn, 143 Colo. 487, 354 P.2d 505 (1960).

V. PROCEEDINGS.

This rule contemplates that a hearing rather than an "ex parte" investigation shall be held. Oswald v. Dawn, 143 Colo. 487, 354 P.2d 505 (1960).

Witnesses may be examined at evidentiary bearings. When a master is appointed, this rule contemplates that the master will conduct evidentiary hearings at which witnesses may be examined and cross-examined. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

The word "hearing" contemplates not only the privilege to be present when the matter is being considered, but also the right to present one's contention and support the same by proof and argument. Brown v. Brown, 161 Colo. 409, 422 P.2d 634 (1967).

The master occupies the position of finder of fact. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

In case of death of the master before findings are made, it is necessary that his successor begin the proceedings anew or that the trial court hold hearings on its own before making findings. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

A successor master who fails to conduct a hearing "de novo" lacks jurisdiction to enter any findings or conclusions. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

Mutual consent cannot confer jurisdiction where it is absent. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

It is error for the court to appoint one to succeed another as master with the admonition to make findings and recommendations based upon the transcript of the hearings held before the first master, inasmuch as the newly appointed master has to conduct his own hearings and in general conduct a hearing "do novo" on the matters in controversy before he can properly make findings and recommendations to the court. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

VI. REPORT.

A. Contents and Filing.

Master's duty to report findings. It is a master's duty to conduct hearings, receive evidence, listen to the testimony on the issues involved, and then report his findings of fact and conclusions to the trial court. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

Bald conclusions are not sufficient. Where the master's report does not contain findings of fact relating to many of the issues that would be significant and is replete with conclusions, the bald conclusions are not sufficient to support a recommendation or a court order based upon the recommendations. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

Referee's report is recommendation, not order. The report of the referee is not an order; it is a recommendation. The referee has no power to enter orders or decrees. In re Debreceni, 663 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1983); In re Petroff, 666 P.2d 1131 (Colo. App. 1983).

Until the report is acted on by the court, no legal consequence may be attached to it. In re Debreceni, 663 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1983).

Without further court action, the referee's decision is not a judgment, much less a final judgment. In re Petroff, 666 P.2d 1131 (Colo. App. 1983).

Court may receive further evidence. Following the filing of a master's report, the court may receive further evidence, and it may also recommit the report to the master with instructions. When an item has been omitted from the master's accounting, evidence concerning that item may be properly admitted. Rasheed v. Mubarak, 695 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1984).

Notice must be given of filing of orders. Handwritten orders which served to notify party of what permanent orders included did not fulfill notice requirement since they did not serve to notify party that referee's report was final and had been turned over to court for final consideration. Barron v. District Court, 683 P.2d 353 (Colo. 1984).

This rule requires the trial court to hold a hearing on all motions or objections to a master's report before taking any action on such report. But, where the trial court had heard defendant's objections to the report and had consistently held the master to his original grant of authority, the trial court did not err in refusing to hold a hearing on defendant's objections to the report. CNA Ins. Co. v. Berndt, 839 P.2d 492 (Colo. App. 1992).

B. Nonjury Actions.

Section (e)(2) of this rule binds a trial court to accept the findings of a master just as effectively as C.R.C.P. 52(a), binds an appellate court to accept findings of a trial court. Hutchinson v. Elder, 140 Colo. 379, 344 P.2d 1090 (1959); Brown v. Brown, 161 Colo. 409, 422 P.2d 634 (1967); In re Smith, 641 P.2d 301 (Colo. App. 1981).

Section (e)(2) of this rule prohibits the trial court from rejecting the master's report without a hearing to determine whether the master's findings were clearly erroneous, and then ordering a jury trial over the objection of the parties. Dobler v. District Court, 806 P.2d 944 (Colo. 1991).

Master's findings accepted unless clearly erroneous. Once a court has referred the determination of permanent orders to a master, the court is bound to accept the master's findings of fact unless clearly erroneous. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972); Dobler v. District Court, 806 P.2d 944 (Colo. 1991); In re Schelp, 194 P.3d 450 (Colo. App. 2008), rev'd on other grounds, 228 P.3d 151 (Colo. 2010).

Appellate courts should accept master's findings. Under customary practice and this rule of procedure an appellate court should accept a master's findings unless clearly erroneous. People ex rel. Kent v. Denious, 118 Colo. 342, 196 P.2d 257 (1948).

References of all the issues presented reduce the function of the judge to that of a reviewing court. Gelfond v. District Court, 180 Colo. 95, 504 P.2d 673 (1972).

Where the order appointing a master gives him no specific power to make findings of fact, but in his report he reports the evidence taken by him together with his findings of fact, his findings are not conclusive either upon the trial court or an appellate court. Michael v. Tracy, 15 Colo. App. 312, 62 P. 1048 (1900).

Only if clearly erroneous, that is, only if clearly unsupported by the evidence in the record, may such findings be disturbed by the trial court. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971); Dobler v. District Court, 806 P.2d 944 (Colo. 1991).

Even if the trial court disagrees with the conclusions reached, it is not free to tamper with the findings of a master if, based upon the evidence, a reasonable man might have reached the same conclusions as did the master. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

Where a master has been appointed, his findings should not be disturbed merely because the trial court is of a different opinion or is dissatisfied with the master's findings. Brown v. Brown, 161 Colo. 409, 422 P.2d 634 (1967); Dobler v. District Court, 806 P.2d 944, (Colo. 1991).

When there is any testimony consistent with the findings, it must be treated as unassailable except when ''clearly erroneous''. Brown v. Brown, 161 Colo. 409, 422 P.2d 634 (1967); In re Smith, 641 P.2d 301 (Colo. App. 1981).

The basis for the rule that the court must accept the master's report and conclusions unless the same are clearly not supported by the evidence is that the master is presumed to be the best judge of the credibility of witnesses and the weight to be given to their testimony. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

A trial court's substitution of its conclusion for a master's is erroneous because on a question of fact, insofar as it depends upon conflicting testimony, credibility of witnesses, and demeanor of witnesses, the master is the only one who can reach a conclusion in this area. Brown v. Brown, 161 Colo. 409, 422 P.2d 634 (1967); In re Smith, 641 P.2d 301 (Colo. App. 1981).

When proper exceptions are filed, the findings of a master do not become the findings of a court unless approved by the court. Maniatis v. Stiny, 130 Colo. 261, 274 P.2d 975 (1954).

If the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the findings of a master is challenged, a court cannot determine this question without an examination of the testimony taken and reported by the master. Maniatis v. Stiny, 130 Colo. 261, 274 P.2d 975 (1954).

The object of permitting exceptions to be filed is to give the party filing them an opportunity to point out to the court wherein the report of a master is erroneous. Maniatis v. Stiny, 130 Colo. 261, 274 P.2d 975 (1954).

The authority of a court thus invoked cannot be exercised capriciously. Maniatis v. Stiny, 130 Colo. 261, 274 P.2d 975 (1954).

The court cannot act intelligently without an examination of the questions raised by the exceptions. Maniatis v. Stiny, 130 Colo. 261, 274 P.2d 975 (1954).

When they challenge the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the findings of a master, it is both the province and duty of a court to examine the testimony and review the conclusions. Maniatis v. Stiny, 130 Colo. 261, 274 P.2d 975 (1954).

Failing to examine the testimony and review the conclusions, over proper exceptions, the court has no authority to approve the report. Maniatis v. Stiny, 130 Colo. 261, 274 P.2d 975 (1954).

Amendment to timely filed objection permitted. There is no prohibition against filing an amendment to a timely filed objection to a master's report before a hearing on that objection has occurred. Rocky Mt. Power Co. v. Colo. River Water Conservation Dist., 646 P.2d 383 (Colo. 1982).

The court may reject report after hearing. Under section (e)(2) of this rule, the trial court is granted, among other alternatives, the authority to reject the master's report after hearing. Brown v. Brown, 161 Colo. 409, 422 P.2d 634 (1967); In re Smith, 641 P.2d 301 (Colo. App. 1981).

The court can make new findings after a new hearing. Under section (e)(2) of this rule, when the trial court rejects the master's report, it can only make new findings after it has conducted a hearing of its own. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

This is a mandatory procedure in cases where the court rejects or modifies the master's report. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

Approved findings bind appellate court just as jury verdict. Findings approved by a trial court are entitled to the same weight and are just as binding on an appellate court as the verdict of a jury. Julius Hyman & Co. v. Velsicol Corp., 123 Colo. 563, 233 P.2d 977, cert. denied, 342 U.S. 870, 72 S. Ct. 113, 96 L. Ed. 654, reh'g denied, 342 U.S. 895, 72 S. Ct. 199, 96 L. Ed. 671 (1951).

The findings of a master, as to their conclusive effect in an appellate court, stand as a verdict of a jury or the findings of a court. Crater v. McCormick, 4 Colo. 196 (1878); Kimball v. Lyon, 19 Colo. 266, 35 P. 44 (1893);

Groth v. Kersting, 4 Colo. App. 395, 36 P. 156 (1894).

Where a master hears evidence and makes findings of fact thereon and his findings are approved by the trial court, the findings are entitled to the same weight and are just as binding on an appellate court as the verdict of a jury or findings of the trial court made upon oral testimony. Noble v. Faull, 26 Colo. 467, 58 P. 681 (1899).

There being sufficient evidence to support the findings and judgment, an appellate court is bound by the findings and judgment in the court below. Peck v. Alexander, 40 Colo. 392, 91 P. 38 (1907).

Where findings are supported by the evidence and are not manifestly against the weight of the evidence, they will not be disturbed by an appellate court. Perdew v. Creditors of Coffin's Estate, 11 Colo. App. 157, 52 P. 747 (1898).

Findings accepted unless master or court was governed by bias or prejudice. Findings of a master, when based upon conflicting evidence, will not be interfered with upon appeal if there is legal evidence to sustain them, unless it appears that the master or the trial court was governed by bias or prejudice or influenced by passion. Noble v. Faull, 26 Colo. 467, 58 P. 681 (1899).

Section (e)(2) of this rule inapplicable in dependency proceeding. Section (e)(2) of this rule, which provides that in an action tried without a jury the court shall accept a master's or referee's findings of fact unless clearly erroneous, is inapplicable in a dependency proceeding because that is a statutory proceeding in which the statute supersedes the conflicting rule. People in Interest of S.S.T., 38 Colo. App. 110, 553 P.2d 82 (1976).

Applied in Thompson v. McCormick, 169 Colo. 151, 454 P.2d 934 (1969); P.F.P. Family Holdings v. Stan Lee Media, 252 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2010).

C. Stipulation.

Stipulation that master should act as arbitrator instead held all right. Zelinger v. Mellwin Constr. Co., 123 Colo. 149, 225 P.2d 844 (1950).

Even though use of a "master" pursuant to this rule conflicts with § 38-44-108 for resolving a disputed boundary, because the parties stipulated for the entry of judgment upon final approval of the surveyor's report by the trial court, the parties waived their rights to object to the trial court's determination of the disputed boundary. Durbin v. Bonanza Corp., 716 P.2d 1124 (Colo. App. 1986).

CHAPTER 6

Judgment

ANALYSIS BY RULE

JUDGMENT

Rule 54. Judgments; Costs

(a) Definition; Form. "Judgment" as used in these rules includes a decree and order to or from which an appeal lies. A judgment shall not contain a recital of pleadings, the report of a master, or the record of prior proceedings.

(b) Judgment Upon Multiple Claims or Involving Multiple Parties. When more than one claim for relief is presented in an action, whether as a claim, counterclaim, cross-claim or third-party claim, or when multiple parties are involved, the court may direct the entry of a final judgment as to one or more but fewer than all of the claims or parties only upon an express determination that there is no just reason for delay and upon an express direction for the entry of judgment. In the absence of such determination and direction, any order or other form of decision, however designated, which adjudicates fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties shall not terminate the action as to any of the claims, or parties and the order or other form of decision is subject to revision at any time before the entry of judgment adjudicating all the claims and the rights and liabilities of all the parties.

(c) Demand for Judgment. A judgment by default shall not be different in kind from that prayed for in the demand for judgment. Except as to a party against whom a judgment is entered by default, every final judgment shall grant the relief to which the party in whose favor it is rendered is entitled, even if the party has not demanded such relief in his pleadings.

(d) Costs. Except when express provision therefor is made either in a statute of this state or in these rules, reasonable costs shall be allowed as of course to the prevailing party considering any relevant factors which may include the needs and complexity of the case and the amount in controversy. But costs against the state of Colorado, its officers or agencies, shall be imposed only to the extent permitted by law.

(e) Against Partnership. Any judgment obtained against a partnership or unincorporated association shall bind only the joint property of the partners or associates, and the separate property of the parties personally served.

(f) After Death, How Payable. If a party dies after a verdict or decision upon any issue of fact, and before judgment, the court may, nevertheless, render judgment thereon. Such judgment shall not be a lien on the real property of the deceased party, but shall be paid as a claim against his estate.

(g) Against Unknown Defendants. The judgment in an action in rem shall apply to and conclude the unknown defendants whose interests are described in the complaint.

(h) Revival of Judgments. A judgment may be revived against any one or more judgment debtors whether they are jointly or severally liable under the judgment. To revive a judgment a motion shall be filed alleging the date of the judgment and the amount thereof which remains unsatisfied. Thereupon the clerk shall issue a notice requiring the judgment debtor to show cause within 14 days after service thereof why the judgment should not be revived. The notice shall be served on the judgment debtor in conformity with Rule 4. If the judgment debtor answer, any issue so presented shall be tried and determined by the court. A revived judgment must be entered within twenty years after the entry of the judgment which it revives, and may be enforced and made a lien in the same manner and for like period as an original judgment. If a judgment is revived before the expiration of any lien created by the original judgment, the filing of the transcript of the entry of revivor in the register of actions with the clerk and recorder of the appropriate county before the expiration of such lien shall continue that lien for the same period from the entry of the revived judgment as is provided for original judgments. Revived judgments may themselves be revived in the manner herein provided.

COMMENTS

1989

[1] The amendment to C.R.C.P. 54(c) is to eliminate what has been perceived as a possible conflict between that section and the recent change to C.R.C.P. 8(a) which prohibits statement of amount in that ad damnum. The amendment simply strikes the words ''or exceed in amount'' to make the section consistent with C.R.C.P. 8(a). Relief sought in the prayer is now described rather than stated as an amount. It is, therefore, not necessary to have an amount limitation in C.R.C.P. 54(c).

2015

[2] Rule 54(d) is amended to require that cost awards be ''reasonable'' by directing courts to consider any relevant factors, which may include the needs and complexity of the case, and the amount in controversy.

[3] The reasonableness requirement is consistent with §13-16-122, C.R.S., which lists matters included in cost awards, because it can hardly have been the intent of the legislature to authorize unreasonable awards.

[4] Cost shifting must be addressed in the Case Management Order required by C.R.C.P. 16.

Section (b) of this rule is an exception to the rule that an appellate court has jurisdiction only over appeals from final judgments. But the exception is quite limited and must be construed consistently with the historical policy against allowing piecemeal appeals. A court correctly certifies a ruling that does not resolve all claims in a case as final under section (b) only if the ruling is on an entire claim for relief and ultimately disposes of the claim and if the court expressly determines that there is no just reason to delay an appeal on the ruling. Galindo v. Valley View Ass'n, 2017 COA 78, 399 P.3d 796.

Where the damages to which plaintiff is entitled can only be estimated at the pleading stage and the defendant is given notice of the various elements of the damages claim, then recovery is not to be limited to the amount listed in the complaint. DeCicco v. Trinidad Area Health Ass'n, 40 Colo. App. 63, 573 P.2d 559 (1977).

Rule inapplicable to C.R.C.P. 120 foreclosure sale. Because a statutory public trustee foreclosure does not involve foreclosure through the court, and because there is no appeal from the limited order of a C.R.C.P. 120, court on a motion authorizing the public trustee to conduct a foreclosure sale, this rule is inapplicable to such a foreclosure. Bakers Park Mining & Milling Co. v. District Court, 662 P.2d 483 (Colo. 1983).

II. DEFINITION; FORM.

Validity of a judgment depends on the court's jurisdiction of the person and the subject matter of the issue it decides. McLeod v. Provident Mut. Life Ins. Co., 186 Colo. 234, 526 P.2d 1318 (1974).

It is not approved practice for a trial court to make no independent conclusions of law, but rather make its conclusions by incorporating party's brief. Metro. Denver Sewage Disposal Dist. No. 1 v. Farmers Reservoir & Irrigation Co., 179 Colo. 36, 499 P.2d 1190 (1972).

Judgment rendered without jurisdiction is void and may be attacked directly or collaterally. McLeod v. Provident Mut. Life Ins. Co., 186 Colo. 234, 526 P.2d 1318 (1974).

III. MULTIPLE CLAIMS OR PARTIES.

Section (b) is identical to corresponding federal rule. Since section (b) of this rule is identical to the corresponding federal rule, the federal cases interpreting F.R.C.P. 54(b) are persuasive here. Moore & Co. v. Triangle Constr. & Dev. Co., 44 Colo. App. 499, 619 P.2d 80 (1980); Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982); Forbes v. Goldenhersh, 899 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1994); State ex rel. Salazar v. Gen. Steel Domestic Sales, LLC, 129 P.3d 1047 (Colo. App. 2005).

The proper function of a reviewing court in section (b) cases is for the court to fully review whether the trial court completely resolved a single claim for relief; however, some deference should be given where the trial court has made its reasoning clear. State ex rel. Salazar v. Gen. Steel Domestic Sales, LLC, 129 P.3d 1047 (Colo. App. 2005).

Section (b) creates an exception to the requirement that an entire case must be resolved by a final judgment before an appeal is brought. Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982); Nelson v. Elway, 971 P.2d 245 (Colo. App. 1998); Galindo v. Valley View Ass'n, 2017 COA 78, 399 P.3d 796 ; Cielo Vista Ranch I, LLC v. Alire, 2018 COA 160, 433 P.3d 596.

For the purposes of issue preclusion, a judgment that is still pending on appeal is not final. Rantz v. Kaufman, 109 P.3d 132 (Colo. 2005).

A judgment is not final for purposes of issue preclusion until certiorari has been resolved both in the Colorado supreme court and the United States supreme court. Certiorari can be resolved in any of three ways: (1) The parties fail to file a timely petition for certiorari; (2) the court denies the petition for certiorari; or (3) the court issues an opinion after granting certiorari. Barnett v. Elite Props. of Am., 252 P.3d 14 (Colo. App. 2010).

Jurisdiction to hear appeal depends on correctness of certification. An appellate court's jurisdiction to entertain an appeal of a trial court's section (b) certification depends upon the correctness of the certification itself. Alexander v. City of Colo. Springs, 655 P.2d 851 (Colo. App. 1982); Richmond Am. Homes of Colo., Inc. v. Steel Floors, LLC, 187 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2008).

A cost and fee order rendered after certification of a final judgment on the merits under section (b) is itself a final, appealable judgment and does not require separate certification as a final judgment on the merits under section (b). Reyher v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2012 COA 58, 280 P.3d 64.

A premature notice of appeal does not render void for lack of jurisdiction acts of the trial court taken during the interval between the filing of the invalid notice of appeal and the dismissal of the appeal by the court of appeals. Woznicki v. Musick, 94 P.3d 1243 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 136 P.3d 244 (Colo. 2006).

Where the trial court incorrectly entered a default judgment the certification of that judgment pursuant to section (b) was likewise improper. Although the court had jurisdiction to decide the legal sufficiency of the section (b) certification, the court lacked jurisdiction to consider the issues raised by the appellant regarding the adequacy of service on him and the denial of his motion to set aside the default judgment. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. v. Schroeder, 43 P.3d 715 (Colo. App. 2001).

Previously, a judgment disposing of less than the entire case could be final and subject to review only where it was a final determination of a distinct claim arising out of a different transaction or occurrence from the other claims involved. Brown v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 121 Colo. 502, 218 P.2d 1063 (1950).

Rule grants trial courts the authority to certify a ruling as a final judgment on less than an entire case, without altering the requirements of finality of judgment as to any other claim. Steven A. Gall, P.C. v. District Court, 965 P.2d 1268 (Colo. 1998).

An order dismissing an action as to two of the defendants and directing that plaintiffs should have a stated time within which to ''Prepare the record in order to apply to the supreme court for appeal'' is a final judgment to review. Ruhter v. Steele, 120 Colo. 367, 209 P.2d 771 (1949).

Where several items alleged in a complaint all resulted from a single transaction or occurrence, these items of damage still constituted a single claim, and the determination of one of the several asserted legal rights was not a final judgment. Brown v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 121 Colo. 502, 218 P.2d 1063 (1950).

In cases which have been consolidated for the purpose of trial, a judgment entered in one case only is not a final appealable judgment absent a specific certification that there is no just reason for delay by the court pursuant to section (b). Mission Viejo Co. v. Willows Water Dist., 818 P.2d 254 (Colo. 1991).

Section (b) of this rule prevents or imposes conditions on the entry of final judgment on less than all of the pending claims. Harvey v. Morris, 148 Colo. 489, 367 P.2d 352 (1961).

Trial court may direct entry of final judgment where more than one claim exists. Section (b) of this rule allows a trial court to direct entry of a final judgment upon one or more but less than all of the claims on certain conditions where more than one claim exists. Hamm v. Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co., 150 Colo. 447, 373 P.2d 525 (1962).

Final adjudication of a particular claim in a case involving multiple claims or multiple parties may be certified as a final judgment. Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 34 Colo. App. 235, 527 P.2d 910 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 64, 536 P.2d 1134 (1975).

This rule directs what must be done where multiple claims are involved and less than all of them decided. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. May, 142 Colo. 195, 350 P.2d 343 (1960).

This rule specifically provides that where multiple claims are involved and less than all of them are decided, in order to effect a final judgment or final disposition of the matters decided, the trial court must expressly determine that there is no just reason for delay and must expressly direct the entry of a judgment with respect to those claims which are decided. Blackburn v. Skinner, 156 Colo. 41, 396 P.2d 968 (1964).

In order for a trial court to enter a final judgment on less than all of the claims pending before it pursuant to this rule, the order certified as final must dispose of an "entire claim". Thus, if only a single claim is asserted, but multiple remedies are sought based upon that single claim, an order denying one remedy, but not disposing of the requests for other remedies, cannot be made a final judgment by the entry of a certification pursuant to this rule. Virdanco, Inc. v. MTS Intern., 791 P.2d 1236 (Colo. App. 1990).

In order for a judgment to be "final" with respect to a whole, single claim, that order must fix all damages stemming from that claim. Thus, if the court's order purports to award some damages, but reserves the right to award additional damages at a later date, that order does not dispose of an entire claim and cannot be made a final judgment under this rule. Virdanco, Inc. v. MTS Intern., 791 P.2d 1236 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where the express language required by this rule does not appear in the order of judgment, an appeal must be dismissed. Blackburn v. Skinner, 156 Colo. 41, 396 P.2d 968 (1964).

If an order does not constitute final adjudication of a claim, certification of it as such does not operate to make it so. Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 34 Colo. App. 235, 527 P.2d 910 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 64, 536 P.2d 1134 (1975).

Order awarding attorney fees as sanctions under C.R.C.P. 11 and § 13-17-102 held not to be a claim for relief; thus appeal of order was dismissed. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Bellino, 976 P.2d 342 (Colo. App. 1998); State ex rel. Suthers v. CB Servs. Corp., 252 P.3d 7 (Colo. App. 2010).

Colorado rules and decisions discourage the piecemeal review of a cause. Vandy's Inc. v. Nelson, 130 Colo. 51, 273 P.2d 633 (1954); Berry v. Westknit Originals, Inc., 145 Colo. 48, 357 P.2d 652 (1960); Hamm v. Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co., 150 Colo. 447, 373 P.2d 525 (1962).

Purpose of requiring that an entire claim for relief be finally adjudicated before certification is proper is to avoid the dissipation of judicial resources through piecemeal appeals. Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982).

Number of precautionary appeals cut. The change from the old version of the rule was made largely to reduce the number of precautionary appeals taken as a result of the difficulty of determining whether several claims arose from a single transaction or occurrence. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 206, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

This rule expressly provides that in the absence of an express direction by a trial court for the entry of final judgment, any order or other form of decision, however designated, which adjudicates less than all the claims shall not terminate the action as to any of the claims, and an order or other form of decision is subject to revision at any time before entry of judgment adjudicating all of the claims. Broadway Roofing & Supply, Inc. v. District Court, 140 Colo. 154, 342 P.2d 1022 (1959); Forbes v. Goldenhersh, 899 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1994).

By its terms, C.R.C.P. 56(d) involves an adjudication of less than the entire action, and consequently, a disposition pursuant to that rule does not purport to be a final judgment. Instead, a trial court remains free to reconsider an earlier partial summary judgment ruling absent the entry of judgment under section (b) of this rule. Forbes v. Goldenhersh, 899 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1994).

Except as provided in section (b) of this rule, a final judgment is one which ends the particular action in which it is entered, leaving nothing further to be done in determining the rights of the parties involved in the action. Berry v. Westknit Originals, Inc., 145 Colo. 48, 357 P.2d 652 (1960); Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982).

"Final judgment" defined. Only those orders which finally resolve a claim may be certified as final judgments pursuant to this section. Ball Corp. v. Loran, 42 Colo. App. 501, 596 P.2d 412 (1979).

A decision on the merits is a final judgment for appeal purposes despite any outstanding issue of attorney fees, and certification pursuant to this rule is not a prerequisite to appellate review of the merits of a case if a judgment has been entered and only the issue of attorney fees remains to be determined. Baldwin v. Bright Mortg. Co., 757 P.2d 1072 (Colo. 1988).

Determination of relief required for final judgment. A trial court's order determining that defendants are liable does not constitute the final resolution of a claim for purposes of this section unless and until the trial court determines what relief, if any, may be secured. Ball Corp. v. Loran, 42 Colo. App. 501, 596 P.2d 412 (1979).

A default judgment that completely disposes of petitioner's claim against defendant individually constitutes a final and appealable judgment for certification under this rule even though other plaintiffs' claims are unresolved. Kempter v. Hurd, 713 P.2d 1274 (Colo. 1986).

A judgment is not final which determines the action as to less than all of the defendants, except as provided in section (b) of this rule.

Berry v. Westknit Originals, Inc., 145 Colo. 48, 357 P.2d 652 (1960).

When a summary judgment disposes of less than the entire action, the judgment is not final unless the trial court expressly determines that there is no just reason for delay and directs the entry of a final judgment. Manka v. Martin, 200 Colo. 260, 614 P.2d 875 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 913, 101 S. Ct. 1354, 67 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1981).

However, all defendants are potentially jointly and severally liable and subject to judgment as to which finality rule applies unless there has been a specification of only joint liability. Corporon v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 708 P.2d 1385 (Colo. App. 1985).

Before an appeal can be brought, all claims for relief in a case must be resolved by final judgment unless section (b) or another rule or statutory section is applicable. Alexander v. City of Colo. Springs, 655 P.2d 851 (Colo. App. 1982).

Denial of a motion for summary judgment is not a final appealable order. Town of Grand Lake v. Lanzi, 937 P.2d 785 (Colo. App. 1996).

A final judgment can only enter when the trial court has nothing further to do to determine the rights of the parties involved, unless the judgment meets the requirements of section (b) of this rule. Hamm v. Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co., 150 Colo. 447, 373 P.2d 525 (1962).

Trial court erred in certifying summary judgment in third-party action as final since, at time of judgment, attorney fees, interest, and costs which were part of primary action had not yet been determined. Corinthian Hill Metro. Dist. v. Keen, 812 P.2d 721 (Colo. App. 1991).

This rule applies only to a final decision of one or more, but not all, claims for relief. Trans Cent. Airlines v. McBreen & Assocs., 31 Colo. App. 71, 497 P.2d 1033 (1972).

Because a certification pursuant to section (b) applies to a final decision of one or more but not all claims for relief, the trial court retains jurisdiction over those portions of the case not affected by the judgment certified as final for appeal. Nelson v. Elway, 971 P.2d 245 (Colo. App. 1998).

The effect of this rule is to permit the trial court to advance the time when such a final decision could be appealed. Trans Cent. Airlines v. McBreen & Assocs., 31 Colo. App. 71, 497 P.2d 1033 (1972).

Trial court makes determination of finality. Under this rule the trial court, not the parties or their counsel, may make the required determination of finality. Trans Cent. Airlines v. McBreen & Assocs., 31 Colo. App. 71, 497 P.2d 1033 (1972).

A trial court may, by the exercise of its discretion in the interest of sound judicial administration, release for appeal final decisions upon one or more, but less than all, claims in multiple claims actions. Trans Cent. Airlines v. McBreen & Assocs., 31 Colo. App. 71, 497 P.2d 1033 (1972).

The trial court had discretion to certify its adjudication of two allegations, in spite of pending counterclaims. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 206, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

The timing of such a release is vested by this rule in the discretion of the trial court as the one most likely to be familiar with the case and with any justifiable reasons for delay. Trans Cent. Airlines v. McBreen & Assocs., 31 Colo. App. 71, 497 P.2d 1033 (1972).

A substantial delay between the entry of a ruling and the filing of the section (b) motion caused by nonmovant's failure to prosecute the case does not prevent the court from certifying the ruling as final. LoPresti v. Brandenburg, 267 P.3d 1211 (Colo. 2011).

Certification of final judgment is appropriate only when more than one claim for relief is presented in an action, or when multiple parties are involved, and there are claims or counterclaims remaining to be resolved. San Miguel County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Roberts, 159 P.3d 800 (Colo. App. 2006).

In deciding whether to issue a section (b) certification with respect to a decision which does not dispose of the entire case in a multiple claims action, a trial court must engage in a three-step process. First, it must determine that the decision to be certified is a ruling upon an entire ''claim for relief''. Next, it must conclude that the decision is final in the sense of an ultimate disposition of an individual claim. Finally, the trial court must determine whether there is just reason for delay in entry of a final judgment on the claim. Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982); Troxel v. Town of Basalt, 682 P.2d 501 (Colo. App. 1984); Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo. v. Linnebur, 687 P.2d 506 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 716 P.2d 1120 (Colo. 1986); Lytle v. Kite, 728 P.2d 305 (Colo. 1986); Keith v. Kinney, 961 P.2d 516 (Colo. App. 1997); Carothers v. Archuleta County Sheriff, 159 P.3d 647 (Colo. App. 2006); Richmond Am. Homes of Colo., Inc. v. Steel Floors, LLC, 187 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2008).

Certification under section (b) of this rule is improper if the ruling sought to be appealed disposes of one or more claims against some, but not all, of the parties who may be jointly, but not severally, liable and there remains in the trial court a claim or claims against one or more of the remaining parties who, because of the certification, are not before the appellate court. Hall v. Bornschelgel, 740 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1987).

For certification under section (b) to be proper, a full adjudication of rights and liabilities regarding appealed claim is necessary. Corinthian Hill Metro. Dist. v. Keen, 812 P.2d 721 (Colo. App. 1991).

Certification under section (b) is not required before a judgment can be given preclusive effect for purposes of collateral estoppel. Carpenter v. Young, 773 P.2d 561 (Colo. 1989).

Absent certification by the trial court under this rule, a judgment that disposes of fewer than all of the claims in an action may not be appealed. Estate of Burford v. Burford, 935 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1997).

A decree of dissolution when entered by the district court is final to dissolve the marriage even when the district court refuses to certify the decree as a final judgment appealable under this rule. Estate of Burford v. Burford, 935 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1997).

The same rules of finality apply in probate cases as in other civil cases. An order of the probate court is final if it ends the particular action in which it is entered and leaves nothing further for the court pronouncing it to do in order to completely determine the rights of the parties as to that proceeding. In re Estate of Scott, 119 P.3d 511 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 136 P.3d 892 (Colo. 2006).

Section (b) governs the interlocutory appeal of a probate court order. In re Estate of Scott, 119 P.3d 511 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 136 P.3d 892 (Colo. 2006).

Court has discretion in determining "just reason for delay". The task of assessing whether there is just reason for delay is committed to the trial court's sound judicial discretion, and review of a trial court's ruling on that question is limited to an inquiry into whether that discretion has been abused. Hardin Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982); Georgian Health Center v. Colonial Paint, 738 P.2d 809 (Colo. App. 1987).

It is within the trial court's discretion to determine whether there is just reason for delay, and such determination will not be disturbed absent an abuse thereof. The trial court's assessment of equities will be disturbed only if its conclusion was clearly unreasonable. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128 (Colo. App. 1993).

The discretion accorded the trial court under this rule is limited, and does not permit the court to declare that which is not final under the rules to be final. Trans Cent. Airlines v. McBreen & Assocs., 31 Colo. App. 71, 497 P.2d 1033 (1972).

A trial court's determinations that a claim for relief is the subject of the decision sought to be certified and that the decision is final are not truly discretionary as the correctness of these two determinations is fully reviewable by an appellate court because the trial court cannot in the exercise of its discretion, treat as final that which is not final. Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982); Kelly v. Mid-Century Ins. Co., 695 P.2d 752 (Colo. App. 1984); Lytle v. Kite, 728 P.2d 305 (Colo. 1986).

Court abused its discretion in refusing to reconsider and vacate partial summary judgment in favor of one of several defendants where, following defendant's belated production of a key document, an issue as to a material fact was seen to arise. Halter v. Waco Scaffolding & Equip. Co., 797 P.2d 790 (Colo. App. 1990).

Discretion must be exercised with extreme care. Trial court's decision in certifying one of its orders must be exercised with extreme care where a pending counterclaim is involved, and this is particularly true where the counterclaim arguably arises from the same transaction or occurrence as the adjudicated claim. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 206, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

Order denying motion for summary judgment not final order. Since an order denying a motion for summary judgment is not a final order, a trial court is without power to declare it to be final and appealable. Trans Cent. Airlines v. McBreen & Assocs., 31 Colo. App. 71, 497 P.2d 1033 (1972).

Certification by a trial court is not binding upon the appellate courts. Trans Cent. Airlines v. McBreen & Assocs., 31 Colo. App. 71, 497 P.2d 1033 (1972).

Where a trial court issues a certificate, a reviewing court has no jurisdiction unless the trial court has power to do so, but the trial court's determination that it has such power is not binding upon the appellate court. Trans Cent. Airlines v. McBreen & Assocs., 31 Colo. App. 71, 497 P.2d 1033 (1972).

An appellate court thus will review de novo the legal sufficiency of a trial court's certification. Richmond Am. Homes of Colo., Inc. v. Steel Floors, LLC, 187 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2008).

In order to effect a final judgment, thus rendering it reviewable, a trial court should (1) expressly determine that there is no just reason for delay and (2) expressly direct the entry of a judgment. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. May, 142 Colo. 195, 350 P.2d 343 (1960).

Trial court properly concluded that there was no just reason for delay in entering final judgment for the defendant because it had granted summary judgment in favor of the defendant on all of plaintiffs' claims. The trial court made its order in favor of the defendant a final judgment for purposes of section (b). It was not necessary for the trial court to address the defendant's counterclaim once it had disposed of the plaintiffs' claims. Bickel v. City of Boulder, 885 P.2d 215 (Colo. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1155, 115 S. Ct. 1112, 130 L. Ed. 2d 1076 (1995).

Finality under this rule contemplates more than the rendition of a judgment. Fidelity &

Deposit Co. v. May, 142 Colo. 195, 350 P.2d 343 (1960).

A determination under this rule must be made in order to pave the way for the filing of an appeal. Allied Colo. Enters. Co. v. Grote, 156 Colo. 160, 397 P.2d 225 (1964).

Failure to procure an express finding by a trial court so that an appeal can be properly pursued is fatal. Smith v. City of Arvada, 163 Colo. 189, 429 P.2d 308 (1967).

Where, in granting a motion for summary judgment, a court expressly determines that there is no just reason for delay, directs that it be a final judgment, and dispenses with the necessity of filing a motion for new trial, there is created justifiable cause for review by an appellate court under section (b) of this rule. Hynes v. Donaldson, 155 Colo. 456, 395 P.2d 221 (1964).

District court did not give legally sufficient reasons for finding that there was no just reason for delay. Court's reasons did not show that any party would suffer hardship or injustice unless an immediate appeal of the default judgment on the single counterclaim was allowed. Therefore, the court abused its discretion in certifying the counterclaim under section (b). Allison v. Engel, 2017 COA 43, 395 P.3d 1217.

Where appealed claims are factually distinct from the retained claims — i.e., they arise from different transactions or occurrences — multiple ''claims for relief'' are present, and the current rule may be applied just like the old rule. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 206, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

Appealable unit is claim for relief. Under the present version of F.R.C.P. 54(b) and section (b) of this rule, the appealable judicial unit is a ''claim for relief'', and a ''claim, counterclaim, cross-claim or third-party claim'' may be a separate unit. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 206, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

Where dismissed claims and a retained counterclaim are not so inherently inseparable or intertwined, certification of dismissal of the claims was not an abuse of discretion. Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 206, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

The trial court may not certify an order as a final judgment pursuant to this rule after the notice of appeal has been filed. Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 34 Colo. App. 235, 527 P.2d 910 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 64, 536 P.2d 1134 (1975), overruled in Musick v. Woznicki, 136 P.3d 244 (Colo. 2006).

Trial court not authorized to enter judgment without assertion of claim for relief. This rule does not authorize the trial court to enter judgment against a party when no claim for relief has been asserted against that party by the party in whose favor the judgment is to be entered. A.R.A. Mfg. Co. v. Brady Auto Accessories, Inc., 622 P.2d 113 (Colo. App. 1980).

Order dismissing class action aspects of the case determined the legal insufficiency of the complaint as a class action, and therefore, in its legal effect, it is ''tantamount to a dismissal of the action as to all members of the class other than [petitioners]''. Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 192 Colo. 188, 557 P.2d 386 (1976).

Trial court's order granting class action certification is not an ultimate disposition of an individual claim. Soto v. Progressive Mtn. Ins. Co., 181 P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court's C.R.C.P. 54(b) certification of its order granting class action certification as a final judgment was improper. Soto v. Progressive Mtn. Ins. Co., 181 P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2007).

Decree of dissolution of marriage final. Section 14-10-105 provides that the Colorado rules of civil procedure apply to dissolution proceedings except as ''otherwise specifically provided'' in article 10 of title 14; and § 14-10-120 provides that a decree of dissolution of marriage is ''final'' when entered, subject to the right of appeal. The trial court is authorized to enter an order pursuant to section (b) of this rule, making the decree final for purposes of appeal. In re Baier, 39 Colo. App. 34, 561 P.2d 20 (1977).

Upon the entry of an order under section (b) of this rule, a decree of dissolution of marriage may be appealed prior to entry of permanent orders on the issues of child custody, support, and division of property. In re Baier, 39 Colo. App. 34, 561 P.2d 20 (1977).

Claims in a forcible entry and detainer action wherein damages as well as possession are sought are sufficiently severable that a final and appealable order may be issued as to possession while the claim for damages (rent owed) is reserved for future determination. Sun Valley Dev. Co. v. Paradise Valley Country Club, 663 P.2d 628 (Colo. App. 1983).

An asset sale order in the course of a receivership proceeding disposes of a claim for purposes of rule. The district court properly certified the sale orders under section (b). Colo. Cmty. Bank v. Hoffman, 2013 COA 146, 338 P.3d 390.

Complaint asserting single legal right states only single claim, even though multiple remedies may be sought for the alleged violation of that legal right. Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982); Messenger v. Main, 697 P.2d 420 (Colo. App. 1985).

Where the plaintiff requests different remedies for relief, injunction, and damages, but the multiple remedies sought are to redress the violation of one legal right, only one claim is asserted, which, by virtue of its singularity, is not certifiable under section (b). Alexander v. City of Colo. Springs, 655 P.2d 851 (Colo. App. 1982).

For purposes of applying section (b), a ''claim'' is the aggregate of operative facts which give rise to a right enforceable in the courts, and the ultimate determination of multiplicity of claims rests on whether the underlying factual bases for recovery state a number of different claims which could have been separately enforced. Corporon v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 708 P.2d 1385 (Colo. App. 1985).

More pragmatically stated, claims for relief are ''multiple claims'' for purposes of section (b) when a claimant pleads claims for which his possible recoveries are more than one and when a judgment rendered on one of his claims would not bar a judgment on his other claims. Corporon v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 708 P.2d 1385 (Colo. App. 1985).

An adverse ruling on a motion for determination of questions of law regarding the preclusive effect of a previous judgment and the burden of proof is not a final, appealable order when the only claim for relief was for the change of a water right and the ruling did not result in a denial or approval of the change application. Cherry Creek Valley v. Greeley Irr. Co., 2015 CO 30M, 348 P.3d 434.

Disposition of only one of several elements of damages sought does not constitute an appealable ruling, even when purportedly certified as final under section (b). Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982).

Order dismissing availability of treble damages under the Colorado Antitrust Act was not a final disposition and therefore not ripe for appeal where claims for misappropriation and unjust enrichment were undecided by the trial court. Smith v. TCI Commc'ns, Inc., 981 P.2d 690 (Colo. App. 1999).

Trial court's entry of certification under section (b) cannot transform an interlocutory decision into a final one absent dismissal of the arbitrable claims. Ferla v. Infinity Dev. Assocs., LLC, 107 P.3d 1006 (Colo. App. 2004).

Plaintiff does not waive right to appeal by requesting and obtaining a certification of final judgment pursuant to section (b) if plaintiff chooses not to file an interlocutory appeal of an order denying class certification pursuant to § 13-20-901. Devora v. Strodtman, 2012 COA 87, 282 P.3d 528.

Order preventing pursuit of claim for punitive damages is not final judgment. Partial summary judgment of the issue of punitive damages is an interlocutory rather than a final judgment for purposes of certification under section (b). Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982).

Summary judgment for portion of claim cannot be made final under rule. If the trial court enters a summary judgment for only a portion of a claim or counterclaim or any other order that falls short of fully adjudicating at least one claim or counterclaim, the order cannot be made final under this rule, despite an ''express determination'' and an ''express direction''. Moore & Co. v. Triangle Constr. & Dev. Co., 44 Colo. App. 499, 619 P.2d 80 (1980).

Barring extraordinary circumstances, a judgment subject to section (b) certification must be so certified in order to be considered final and sufficient to transfer jurisdiction to the court of appeals. Trial court retains jurisdiction to determine substantive matters when a party files a premature notice of appeal of a nonfinal judgment. Musick v. Woznicki, 136 P.3d 244 (Colo. 2006) (overruling Levine v. Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 34 Colo. App. 235, 527 P.2d 910 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 64, 536 P.2d 1134 (1975)).

Trial court's language held to sufficiently comply with the requirements of section (b). Chambliss/Jenkins Assocs. v. Forster, 650 P.2d 1315 (Colo. App. 1982).

Rule as basis for jurisdiction. Comstock v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 37 Colo. App. 468, 552 P.2d 514 (1976), modified on other grounds, 194 Colo. 28, 568 P.2d 1164 (1977); Crownover v. Gleichman, 38 Colo. App. 96, 554 P.2d 313 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 48, 574 P.2d 497 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 905, 98 S. Ct. 1450, 55 L. Ed. 2d 495 (1978); Silverstein v. Sisters of Charity, 38 Colo. App. 286, 559 P.2d 716 (1976); McIntire & Quiros of Colo., Inc. v. Westinghouse Credit Corp., 40 Colo. App. 398, 576 P.2d 1026 (1978).

Plaintiff's attempted removal to federal court, which was without the slightest color of right or merit, did not deprive state trial court of jurisdiction to certify partial summary judgment under section (b), nor did it deprive state court of appeals of jurisdiction to hear the appeal of the grant of partial summary judgment. As a general rule, removal of an action to federal court divests the state court of its jurisdiction over the dispute while the removal petition is pending in federal court. However, there is a narrow exception to the general rule that precludes state courts from proceeding further when removal has been effected. A state court is not deprived of jurisdiction where a party's notice of removal to a federal court indicates, on its face and as a matter of law, that the party's attempt at removal is without the slightest color of right or merit. McDonald v. Zions First Nat'l Bank, N.A., 2015 COA 29, 348 P.3d 957.

Trial court improperly certified rulings on two claims as appealable final judgments when it made only a conclusory ruling that there was no just reason for delay and neither the factual record nor the law supported that ruling. A trial court's failure to explain the reasoning underlying its ruling that there is no just reason for delay does not deprive an appellate court of jurisdiction, but does make it impossible for an appellate court to deferentially review the trial court's decision only for abuse of discretion, as would normally be the case, and requires the appellate court to instead carefully scrutinize the decision without according it deference. Galindo v. Valley View Ass'n, 2017 COA 78, 399 P.3d 796.

Applied in Hudler v. New Red Top Valley Ditch Co., 121 Colo. 489, 217 P.2d 613 (1950); Hoff v. Armbruster, 125 Colo. 324, 244 P.2d 1069 (1952); McGlasson v. Hilton, 155 Colo. 237, 393 P.2d 733 (1964); Perlman v. Great States Life Ins. Co., 164 Colo. 493, 436 P.2d 124 (1968); Cyr v. District Court, 685 P.2d 769 (Colo. 1984); Floyd v. Coors Brewing Co., 952 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1997); Daly v. Aspen Ctr. for Women's Health, Inc., 134 P.3d 450 (Colo. App. 2005); State ex rel. Salazar v. Gen. Steel Domestic Sales, LLC, 129 P.3d 1047 (Colo. App. 2005); Yadon v. Lowry, 126 P.3d 332 (Colo. App. 2005); Gunnison County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. BDS Int'l, LLC., 159 P.3d 773 (Colo. App. 2006); Richmond Am. Homes of Colo., Inc. v. Steel Floors, LLC, 187 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2008).

IV. DEMAND FOR JUDGMENT.

Annotator's note. Since section (c) of this rule is similar to § 187 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Section (c) is identical and modeled after F.C.R.P. 54(c). Dlug v. Wooldridge, 189 Colo. 164, 538 P.2d 883 (1975).

Under section (c) of this rule, a judgment by default may not be different in kind or exceed in amount that prayed for in the demand for judgment. Barnard v. Gaumer, 146 Colo. 409, 361 P.2d 778 (1961); Toplitsky v. Schilt, 146 Colo. 428, 361 P.2d 970 (1961); Burson v. Burson, 149 Colo. 566, 369 P.2d 979 (1962); Dept. of Welfare v. Schneider, 156 Colo. 189, 397 P.2d 752 (1964).

Section 5-12-102 contains no requirement that town request statutory interest in its pleadings for court to award interest pursuant to section (c). Town of Breckenridge v. Golforce, Inc., 851 P.2d 214 (Colo. App. 1992).

Both legal and equitable relief may be given in one action and in one judgment or decree. Foothills Holding Corp. v. Tulsa Rig, Reel & Mfg. Co., 155 Colo. 232, 393 P.2d 749 (1964).

Where a party has misconceived his remedy and is seeking relief to which he is not entitled under the law, this does not mean that his petition should be dismissed, for, if, under the allegations of the petition, he is entitled to any relief, a court upon a hearing may grant him the relief to which he is entitled regardless of the prayer in the petition. Regennitter v. Fowler, 132 Colo. 489, 290 P.2d 223 (1955).

The question, therefore, is not whether a party has asked for the proper remedy, but whether under his pleadings he is entitled to any remedy. Regennitter v. Fowler, 132 Colo. 489, 290 P.2d 223 (1955).

The rules of civil procedure were intended to deemphasize the theory of a "cause of action" and to place the emphasis upon the facts giving rise to the asserted claim. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

The substance of a claim rather than the appellation applied to the pleading by the litigant is what controls. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

If from the allegations of a complaint the plaintiff is entitled to relief under any "theory", it is sufficient to state a claim. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

Court will grant relief entitled. If a plaintiff has stated a cause of action for any relief, it is immaterial what he designates it or what he asked for in his prayer; the court will grant him the relief to which he is entitled under the facts pleaded. Berryman v. Berryman, 115 Colo. 281, 172 P.2d 446 (1946).

Court has duty to grant relief to which party entitled. Under this rule it is the duty of the court to grant relief to which a party is entitled, even though not specifically demanded in the prayer. Spears Free Clinic & Hosp. for Poor Children v. State Bd. of Health, 122 Colo. 147, 220 P.2d 872 (1950).

Should a court determine that the precise relief requested is not appropriate, other means may be formulated. Davidson v. Dill, 180 Colo. 123, 503 P.2d 157 (1972).

If a plaintiff declares his intention to seek a particular form of relief and to refuse all other relief, the legality or propriety of the relief sought might properly be determined on a motion to dismiss, though the complaint states facts entitling plaintiff to other relief than that he demands. Berryman v. Berryman, 115 Colo. 281, 172 P.2d 446 (1946).

Relief demanded as limiting relief granted. Snell v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 108 Colo. 162, 114 P.2d 563 (1941).

Equitable relief not precluded. Although the plaintiffs originally sought damages in an action at law, equitable relief was not precluded where a change in circumstances altered the posture of the case and rendered the original relief sought inappropriate. Rice v. Hilty, 38 Colo. App. 338, 559 P.2d 725 (1976); Booth v. Bd. of Educ., 950 P.2d 601 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 984 P.2d 639 (Colo. 1999).

If the evidence justifies an award, the particular theory pleaded will not prevent the award. Johnson v. Bovee, 40 Colo. App. 317, 574 P.2d 513 (1978); Nix v. Clary, 640 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1981).

Recovery is not limited to the amount specified in the complaint, and final judgment should be in the amount to which plaintiff is entitled where amount of damages can only be estimated at the pleading stage and defendant is provided with notice of the elements of the damage claim. Worthen Bank & Trust v. Silvercool Serv. Co., 687 P.2d 464 (Colo. App. 1984).

Applied in Bridges v. Ingram, 122 Colo. 501, 223 P.2d 1051 (1950); Morrissey v. Achziger, 147 Colo. 510, 364 P.2d 187 (1961); Colo. Ranch Estates, Inc. v. Halvorson, 163 Colo. 146, 428 P.2d 917 (1967).

V. COSTS.

Law reviews. For article, ''Obtaining Costs for Clients Part 1'', see 14 Colo. Law. 1974 (1985).

Section (d) violates neither the due process nor equal protection guarantees contained in the federal and state constitutions. The classification between governmental and non-governmental entities is rationally related to the goal of protecting the public treasury. County of Broomfield v. Farmers Reservoir, 239 P.3d 1270 (Colo. 2010).

Consistency with the principle of discretion in the assessment of costs is preserved by section (d) of this rule. Greenwald v. Molloy, 114 Colo. 529, 166 P.2d 983 (1946).

Generally, when costs are necessarily incurred in preparing for trial and because of litigation, reasonable costs may be awarded to the prevailing party, and trial courts may exercise their discretion in awarding such costs under this rule. Bainbridge, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 55 P.3d 271 (Colo. App. 2002).

No discretionary authority in clerk to determine amounts allowable as expert witness fees or attorney fees. Discretionary authority is judicial function not properly delegable to the clerk of court. Davis v. Bruton, 797 P.2d 830 (Colo. App. 1990).

To omit an award of costs in a judgment is a proper form for a trial judge to use in ''directing'' that no costs be allowed a prevailing party. Grange Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Golden Gas Co., 133 Colo. 537, 298 P.2d 950 (1956).

Although the omission of an award of costs is a proper form for denial of costs, the court must direct the denial. Coldwell Banker Com. Group v. Hegge, 770 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1988).

The specific limitation in the second sentence of § 13-16-113 (2) cannot reasonably be interpreted as a general prohibition extending to all motions for summary judgment brought under C.R.C.P. 56, and the defendant's entitlement to an award of costs was properly considered under section (d). Spencer v. United Mortg. Co., 857 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1993).

An award of costs is not prohibited by this rule even if a party is not entitled to costs under § 13-16-104. Weeks v. City of Colo. Springs, 928 P.2d 1346 (Colo. App. 1996).

Because express provision for the award of costs was made in § 13-16-104, this rule is inapplicable to the extent it makes the awarding of costs discretionary. Nat'l Canada Corp. v. Dikeou, 868 P.2d 1131 (Colo. App. 1993).

There is no indication that the provision in § 13-64-402 creating a mechanism for insurers to assert their subrogation rights for medical benefits paid to a plaintiff is meant to supplant a prevailing party's right to recover costs. Mullins v. Kessler, 83 P.3d 1203 (Colo. App. 2003).

A prevailing party is one that has succeeded upon a significant issue presented by the litigation and has achieved some of the benefits sought in the lawsuit. Nat'l Canada Corp. v. Dikeou, 868 P.2d 1131 (Colo. App. 1993).

The party in whose favor the decision or verdict on liability is rendered is the prevailing party, even where plaintiff received no monetary or other benefit from the jury's verdict. Weeks v. City of Colo. Springs, 928 P.2d 1346 (Colo. App. 1996).

The test for determining a prevailing party in a contract case does not apply to a tort case. Pastrana v. Hudock, 140 P.3d 188 (Colo. App. 2006).

Where party prevails on some but not all of multiple claims, the trial court has broad discretion to determine which, if any, party was ''the'' prevailing party. Archer v. Farmer Bros. Co., 70 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 90 P.3d 228 (Colo. 2004); Pastrana v. Hudock, 140 P.3d 188 (Colo. App. 2006).

''Prevailing party'' may include a defendant who does not assert counterclaims and, under certain circumstances, may include a defendant who is found partly liable. Archer v. Farmer Bros. Co., 90 P.3d 228 (Colo. 2004); Gonzales v. Windlan, 2014 COA 176, 411 P.3d 878.

A water court has the discretion to award costs to the prevailing party in a case to determine whether an application for water rights shall be granted. Once a case is before the water judge, it changes character. The application for water rights becomes litigation at the point it has moved from the jurisdiction of the water referee to the water court, and thus the water court is within its discretion to award costs. Fort Morgan v. GASP, 85 P.3d 536 (Colo. 2004).

"Prevailing party" status for award of costs must await the resolution of the claims pending in the water court. Matter of Application for Water Rights, 891 P.2d 981 (Colo. 1995).

Costs are not taxable against the sovereign unless the general assembly so directs. Shumate v. State Pers. Bd., 34 Colo. App. 393, 528 P.2d 404 (1974); McFarland v. Gunter, 829 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1992); Smith v. Furlong, 976 P.2d 889 (Colo. App. 1999).

Costs may not be awarded against state entities pursuant to section (d) in the absence of express legislative authority for such awards. Central Colo. Water v. Simpson, 877 P.2d 335 (Colo. 1994).

A water court has the discretion to award costs against a mutual ditch company because a mutual ditch company is not a subdivision of the state. County of Broomfield v. Farmers Reservoir, 239 P.3d 1270 (Colo. 2010).

School district is exempt from an award of costs. Trial court erred in awarding costs against school district, which is a political subdivision of the state, because there was no express provision allowing for the costs. Lombard v. Colo. Outdoor Ed. Center, Inc., 266 P.3d 412 (Colo. App. 2011).

Notwithstanding section (d) of this rule, § 13-16-111 allows a prevailing plaintiff in a C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4) action to recover costs against the state, its officers, or agencies. Branch v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 89 P.3d 496 (Colo. App. 2003).

Section 24-4-106 (7) does not take precedence over this rule. While § 24-4-106 (7) permits the court ''to afford such other relief as may be appropriate'', this provision cannot be construed to authorize assessment of costs against the state so as to take precedence over section (d). Shumate v. State Pers. Bd., 34 Colo. App. 393, 528 P.2d 404 (1974).

In state's action to recover costs for treatment in state institutions, the trial court was without jurisdiction to assess court costs against the executive branch of the state, or its officers. State ex rel. Fort Logan Mental Health Ctr. v. Harwood, 34 Colo. App. 213, 524 P.2d 614 (1974).

An award of costs is proper against a municipal corporation. Kussman v. City & County of Denver, 671 P.2d 1000 (Colo. App. 1983).

Costs in challenge of driver's license revocation not recoverable. The trial court has no power to award costs to the plaintiff in a case challenging revocation of a driver's license under § 42-4-1202 (3)(b), because there is no specific statutory provision allowing for such an award. Lucero v. Charnes, 44 Colo. App. 73, 607 P.2d 405 (1980).

Trial courts may exercise discretion to award costs to prevailing party unless there is a statute or rule specifically prohibiting the award of costs. Rossmiller v. Romero, 625 P.2d 1029 (Colo. 1981).

Trial court properly exercised its discretion by awarding costs to prevailing party under section (d) in case involving review of denial of motion to set aside order creating special district under title 32. Absent a prohibition in a statute or rule that specifically prohibits an award of costs, trial courts may exercise their discretion to award any reasonable costs to the prevailing party. The legislature did not provide for taxation of any costs against a property owner or other party who sought to invoke its rights under title 32. Thus, the trial court did not err in awarding reasonable costs to the prevailing party. Marin Metro. Dist. v. Landmark Towers Ass'n, 2014 COA 40, 412 P.3d 620.

Prevailing plaintiff properly charged with defendant's post-offer costs where jury awarded plaintiff less than the defendant's offer. Whitney v. Anderson, 784 P.2d 830 (Colo. App. 1989).

The prevailing party for the award of costs is the one in whose favor the decision or verdict on liability is rendered even if the other party also prevailed in part on some of the claims involved in the case. Mackall v. Jalisco Int'l, Inc., 28 P.3d 975 (Colo. App. 2001).

Even if each of the parties can arguably be viewed as having prevailed in part, the award of costs in such a situation is committed to the sole discretion of the trial court. Mackall v. Jalisco Int'l, Inc., 28 P.3d 975 (Colo. App. 2001).

When a party prevailed on only one fairly minor issue and lost on every other substantial issue, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that the party was not a prevailing party. Farmers Reservoir & Irrigation Co. v. City of Golden, 113 P.3d 119 (Colo. 2005).

The discretion of the trial court to award costs to a prevailing party is not limited to specific claims upon which the party prevailed, thus even if the prevailing party's expert witness fees were incurred solely in connection with a claim that was dismissed by the court, the award of those fees is proper. Mackall v. Jalisco Int'l, Inc., 28 P.3d 975 (Colo. App. 2001).

Costs of third-party defendant properly divided between plaintiff and defendant when both had claims against third-party defendant since dismissal of the claims made third-party defendant the prevailing party against both. Cobai v. Young, 679 P.2d 121 (Colo. App. 1984); Poole v. Estate of Collins, 728 P.2d 741 (Colo. App. 1986).

Costs attributable to expert witness fees for expert witnesses that did not testify at trial were properly awarded. These costs were valuation expenses necessarily incurred by reason of the litigation and were necessary for the proper preparation for trial. Fowler Irrevocable Trust 1992-1 v. City of Boulder, 992 P.2d 1188 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 17 P.3d 797 (Colo. 2001).

Costs may be awarded in tort action under the Governmental Immunity Act. Lee v. Colo. Dept. of Health, 718 P.2d 221 (Colo. 1986).

Trial court did not err in awarding plaintiff his costs pursuant to section (d) in his tort action under the Colorado Governmental Immunity Act. Nguyen v. Reg'l Transp. Dist., 987 P.2d 933 (Colo. App. 1999).

Trial court in a far better position to determine whether the challenged costs were reasonable and necessary. Trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding costs for: (1) Discovery deposition fees; (2) copies of discovery depositions; (3) copies of medical records for injuries not claimed at trial; (4) certain expert fees; (5) fees associated with photographs; and (6) non-itemized copy fees. Nguyen v. Reg'l Transp. Dist., 987 P.2d 933 (Colo. App. 1999).

Even if court of appeals were to agree with RTD that trial court erred in awarding $2.65 in costs on the basis of mathematical errors that originated in plaintiff's bill of costs, any error falls within the scope of the maxim de minimus non curat lex. Hence, court declines to expend judicial resources remanding for correction of this negligible error. Nguyen v. Reg'l Transp. Dist., 987 P.2d 933 (Colo. App. 1999).

Post-trial motion for the award of attorney fees is analagous to a request for taxing costs and should follow procedures established by section (d) of this rule and C.R.C.P 121, sec. 1-22. A trial court may address the issue of the award of attorney fees for services rendered in connection with the underlying litigation on a post-trial basis, whether or not counsel has previously sought to "reserve" the issue. Roa v. Miller, 784 P.2d 826 (Colo. App. 1989).

Attempt to have costs assessed pursuant to section (d) and C.R.C.P. 121, 1-22, was ineffective where court had previously reserved matter of costs for future hearing pursuant to C.R.C.P. 68. Seymour v. Travis, 755 P.2d 461 (Colo. App. 1988).

Costs may be assessed against the nonprevailing party where the purpose for imposing costs is to sanction counsel for improper conduct which led to a mistrial. Koehn v. R.D. Werner Co., Inc., 809 P.2d 1045 (Colo. App. 1990).

Section (d) of this rule and § 13-16-104 are modified by § 13-17-202 (1)(a)(II), which does not allow a party who rejects a settlement offer and recovers less at trial to recover his or her costs, even though that party is determined to be the prevailing party. Bennett v. Hickman, 992 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1999).

An offer of settlement as to "all claims" unambiguously includes attorney fees and costs if the only claim for attorney fees and costs appears in the complaint. The offer of settlement need not explicitly reference attorney fees and costs. Bumbal v. Smith, 165 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2007).

Court construed the Health Care Availability Act in harmony with § 13-16-105 and section (d) of this rule to allow a prevailing defendant to recover costs in a medical negligence action. Mullins v. Kessler, 83 P.3d 1203 (Colo. App. 2003).

Where a judgment has been successfully appealed, an award of costs previously entered on that judgment is no longer valid because, upon remand, that judgment no longer exists. Where a judgment has been successfully appealed, the identity of the prevailing party is still unknown, and only after the stage of the proceedings where a prevailing party can be identified will a court's order awarding costs be valid. Here, the judgment underlying the award of costs in the first action was reversed, and the case was remanded for further proceedings. As a result, the board of county commissioners was no longer the prevailing party, and the order awarding costs, which was dependent on and ancillary to that vacated judgment, was reversed. The parties returned to the same positions they were in before the filing of the first action. Bainbridge, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 55 P.3d 271 (Colo. App. 2002).

A trial court may award costs to a prevailing party for an expert witness who does not testify, but the court must find that such costs were reasonable. Because homebuilders concede that costs associated with two cost-accounting experts retained by board of county commissioners in the second action are reasonable, trial court's award of such costs is affirmed. Bainbridge, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 55 P.3d 271 (Colo. App. 2002).

In view of issue at trial of whether fees charged by board were reasonable in relation to direct and indirect costs of building department, and knowledge of board's uniform building code expert in this area, trial court's award of costs for this witness was reasonable. The expert witness offered advice that may have been relevant to the preparation for the second action, and the board limited the expert witness' involvement in this case. Bainbridge, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 55 P.3d 271 (Colo. App. 2002).

A ruling on a class certification is essentially a procedural one that does not ask whether the underlying claims are legally or factually meritorious, so such a ruling does not trigger the award of costs and fees under section (d). Reyher v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2012 COA 58, 280 P.3d 64.

VI. AGAINST PARTNERSHIP.

Law reviews. For note, ''Necessity of Resorting to Firm Assets Before Levying on the Assets of an Individual Partner'', see 8 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 134 (1936).

Annotator's note. Since section (e) of this rule is similar to § 14 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Judgment against a partnership binds the joint property of the associates and the separate property of members duly served with process. Denver Nat'l Bank v. Grimes, 97 Colo. 158, 47 P.2d 862 (1935).

A court has jurisdiction of partner who is served to proceed to final judgment against him. A judgment having been entered against a partnership and execution thereon having been returned unsatisfied, then, under the provisions of this rule a court has, and continues to have, jurisdiction of a partner who has been served with summons for the purpose of proceeding to final judgment against him. Denver Nat'l Bank v. Grimes, 97 Colo. 158, 47 P.2d 862 (1935).

Any member being served with summons has notice that he may appear in the case and set up any defense to the partnership liability or to his liability as a partner. Denver Nat'l Bank v. Grimes, 97 Colo. 158, 47 P.2d 862 (1935).

No personal judgment can be obtained against the partners not served, for, as to them, the judgment rendered could bind only their interests in the partnership property. Peabody v. Oleson, 15 Colo. App. 346, 62 P. 234 (1900); Ellsberry v. Block, 28 Colo. 477, 65 P. 629 (1901); Blythe v. Cordingly, 20 Colo. App. 508, 80 P. 495 (1905); Womack v. Grandbush, 134 Colo. 1, 298 P.2d 735 (1956).

Section 13-50-105 is permissive and not mandatory, as partnership or a limited partnership may sue or be sued either in its common name or by naming its partners. Frazier v. Carlin, 42 Colo. App. 226, 591 P.2d 1348 (1979).

Section 13-50-105 and section (e) of this rule contain clear requirements that an individual partner must be named, personally served, and subjected to the jurisdiction of the court to seek recovery from the individual. Plaintiffs actually knew the identity of some of the individual partners but made a conscious decision not to name and serve them. The plaintiffs' judgment was enforceable only against the assets of the partnership. Gutrich v. Cogswell & Wehrle, 961 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1998).

VII. REVIVAL OF JUDGMENTS.

Law reviews. For article, ''Executions and Levies on Tangible Property'', see 27 Dicta 143 (1950).

Revived judgments must be entered within 20 years after the entry of the judgment sought to be revived or the court will lose its jurisdiction to do so. Mark v. Mark, 697 P.2d 799 (Colo. App. 1984).

A creditor may obtain a judgment lien at any time during the twenty-year life of a judgment, but if more than six years have passed since the entry of judgment, the creditor must revive the judgment and record the transcript of the revived judgment. Sec. Credit Servs., LLC v. Hulterstrom, 2019 COA 7, 436 P.3d 593.

By its plain language section (h) requires notice to be served on the judgment debtor and provides the judgment debtor the opportunity to have issues tried and determined by the court. Hicks v. Joondeph, 232 P.3d 248 (Colo. App. 2009).

Where a judgment has been entered reducing child support arrears to a fixed sum, such judgment may be revived within 20 years after it was entered, regardless of the date that each child support payment became due. Santarelli v. Santarelli, 839 P.2d 525 (Colo. App. 1992).

Judgment lien, based on a domesticated out-of-state judgment, must be revived under Colorado procedural law for the lien to be extended. To extend a judgment lien beyond six years after the date of judgment, Colorado procedural law requires a judgment to be revived pursuant to section (h) and a transcript of the revival to be filed with the clerk and recorder. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. v. Kopfman, 205 P.3d 437 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 226 P.3d 1068 (Colo. 2010).

When a motion to revive a judgment is filed in sufficient time for the procedures of section (h) to be completed before the expiration of the original judgment, but court delays prevent a revived judgment from being entered before the judgment's expiration, then a revived judgment should be entered nunc pro tunc as of a date the motion could have been decided had there been no court delays. Robbins v. Goldberg, 185 P.3d 794 (Colo. 2008).

Rule 55. Default

(a) Entry. When a party against whom a judgment for affirmative relief is sought has failed to plead or otherwise defend as provided by these rules and that fact is made to appear by affidavit or otherwise, the clerk shall enter his default.

(b) Judgment. A party entitled to a judgment by default shall apply to the court therefor; but no judgment by default shall be entered against an infant or incompetent person unless represented in the action by a general guardian, guardian ad litem, conservator, or such other representative who has appeared in the action. If the party against whom judgment by default is sought has appeared in the action, the party (or, if appearing by representative, the party's representative) shall be served with written notice of the application for judgment at least 7 days prior to the hearing on such application. If, in order to enable the court to enter judgment or to carry it into effect, it is necessary to take an account or to determine the amount of damages or to establish the truth of any averment by evidence or to make an investigation of any other matter, the court may conduct such hearings or order such references as it deems necessary and proper. However, before judgment is entered, the court shall be satisfied that the venue of the action is proper under Rule 98.

(c) Setting Aside Default. For good cause shown the court may set aside an entry of default and, if a judgment by default has been entered, may likewise set it aside in accordance with Rule 60(b).

(d) Plaintiffs, Counterclaimants, Cross Claimants. The provisions of this Rule apply whether the party entitled to the judgment by default is a plaintiff, a third-party plaintiff, or a party who has pleaded a cross claim or counterclaim. In all cases a judgment by default is subject to the limitations of Rule 54(c).

(e) Judgment Against an Officer or Agency of the State of Colorado. No judgment by default shall be entered against an officer or agency of the State of Colorado unless the claimant establishes his claim or right to relief by evidence satisfactory to the court.

(f) Judgment on Substituted Service. In actions where the service of summons was by publication, mail, or personal service out of the state, the plaintiff, upon expiration of the time allowed for answer, may upon proof of service and of the failure to plead or otherwise defend, apply for judgment. The court shall thereupon require proof to be made of the claim and may render judgment subject to the limitations of Rule 54(c).

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to § 186 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Not being present at trial is not an act of default as contemplated under this rule. Kielsmier v. Foster, 669 P.2d 630 (Colo. App. 1983).

Judgment entered pursuant to stipulation not default judgment. Where parties deal at arm's length and are represented by counsel who agree to the entry of judgment and there is no fraud on the attorney's part or any professional dereliction of duty inimical to the best interests of the parties, a judgment entered pursuant to their stipulation is not a default judgment, but is a stipulated judgment. In re George, 650 P.2d 1353 (Colo. App. 1982).

Allegations in a motion for default judgment under this rule are sufficient to assert a basis for relief for judgment on the basis of fraud. Salvo v. De Simone, 727 P.2d 879 (Colo. App. 1986).

Defaulting codebtor allowed to participate in verdict and judgment against bank on bank's counterclaim against debtors since bank failed to apply for an entry of judgment by default against debtor. Pierson v. United Bank of Durango, 754 P.2d 431 (Colo. App. 1988).

Motion for default judgment should have been denied where defendant's answer, though filed late, was filed before default had been entered and before the trial court had ruled on the motion for default judgment. Colo. Compensation Ins. Auth. v. Raycomm Transworld Indus., Inc., 940 P.2d 1000 (Colo. App. 1996).

Motion to strike answer tantamount to default judgement. When trial court struck defendants' answer brief, it effectively denied them the opportunity to litigate their claim, and such motion was unwarranted by defendants' actions. Pinkstaff v. Black & Decker (U.S.), Inc., 211 P.3d 698 (Colo. 2009).

Trial court lacks jurisdiction to enter default judgment against a defendant while an appeal is pending. Anstine v. Churchman, 74 P.3d 451 (Colo. App. 2003).

Applied in Petrini v. Sidwell, 38 Colo. App. 454, 558 P.2d 447 (1976); Johnston v. District Court, 196 Colo. 1, 580 P.2d 798 (1978); City of Trinidad v. District Court, 196 Colo. 106, 581 P.2d 304 (1978); Norsworthy v. Colo. Dept. of Rev., 197 Colo. 527, 594 P.2d 1055 (1979); Security State Bank v. Weingardt, 42 Colo. App. 219, 597 P.2d 1045 (1979); People in Interest of C.A.W., 660 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1982); O'Brien v. Eubanks, 701 P.2d 614 (Colo. App. 1984), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 904, 106 S. Ct. 272, 88 L. Ed. 2d 233 (1985); Denman v. Burlington Northern R. Co., 761 P.2d 244 (Colo. App. 1988).

II. ENTRY.

Clerk to enter default. Section (a) of this rule provides that the clerk of the court in which an action is pending shall enter default when a party against whom a judgment for affirmative relief is sought has failed to plead or otherwise defend. Valdez v. Sams, 134 Colo. 488, 307 P.2d 189 (1957).

A trial court may not enter an order of default when a defendant answers and actively litigates but fails to appear for trial. Instead, a court may receive evidence in the defendant's absence and render judgment on the merits. Rombough v. Mitchell, 140 P.3d 202 (Colo. App. 2006).

III. JUDGMENT.

A. By the Clerk.

This rule provides that "judgment by default" may be entered by the clerk in those circumstances specifically mentioned. Valdez v. Sams, 134 Colo. 488, 307 P.2d 189 (1957).

This rule is not in conflict with the constitution as an invasion of the province of the judiciary, the theory being that the judgment is the sentence which the law itself pronounces as the sequence of statutory conditions, and the judgment, though in fact entered by the clerk, is, in the consideration of the law, what it purports on its face to be, namely, the act and determination of the court itself. The courts of many of the states have acted under similar statutory provisions for many years past, and the validity of such judgment has been upheld by repeated decisions of the highest courts of these states. Phelan v. Ganebin, 5 Colo. 14 (1894).

This rule was never intended to deprive the court of its power to render a judgment, but only to give the clerk authority to enter it. Griffing v. Smith, 26 Colo. App. 220, 142 P. 202 (1914); Plaza del Lago Townhomes Ass'n v. Highwood Builders, 148 P.3d 367 (Colo. App. 2006).

B. By the Court.

Default judgments are drastic. Default judgments — particularly in those actions where the defendant has answered and the case is at issue — are serious and drastic. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Doyle, 162 Colo. 1, 424 P.2d 368 (1967).

The ramifications which may ensue may cause loss of time and expense of courts and litigants, as well as, possibly, the denial of inherent rights. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Doyle, 162 Colo. 1, 424 P.2d 368 (1967).

Before a court enters a default judgment where a defendant has appeared, the requirements of this rule as well as the grounds urged for a default judgment, must be considered with utmost care. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Doyle, 162 Colo. 1, 424 P.2d 368 (1967).

Before a court enters judgment by default in a case in which the defendant has appeared, the plaintiff must provide the notice required. Bankers Union Life Ins. Co. v. Fiocca, 35 Colo. App. 306, 532 P.2d 57 (1975).

No party should be defaulted unless grounds authorizing it are authoritatively established and are so clear that litigants may know without question that they are subject to default if they do not act in a certain manner. Missouri ex rel. De Vault v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 107 F.2d 343 (8th Cir. 1939).

Court not representative of nonappearing party. Where the defendants fail to answer a complaint or to make any effort to appear before the trial court, the trial court is not obliged to, and indeed should not, assume a position adversarial to the plaintiffs and representative of the parties declining to appear. Homsher v. District Court, 198 Colo. 465, 602 P.2d 5 (1979).

Plaintiff's motion for default judgment is denied without a hearing where no cause of action is pleaded. Schenck v. Van Ningen, 719 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1986).

A judgment by default is not designed to be a device to catch the unwary or even the negligent. R.F. v. D.G.W., 192 Colo. 528, 560 P.2d 837 (1977).

A default judgment entered in violation of this rule is void. Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952).

Where the defendant's attorney has filed an appearance with the court, the defendant has appeared for purposes of the notice requirement of this rule, and if a defendant is not served with notice, a default judgment entered against him is void. Schaffer v. Martin, 623 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1980).

The failure to give required notice is error. The action of a trial court in entering default judgment on its own motion without the requisite three days' notice to defendant constitutes prejudicial reversible error. Emerick v. Emerick, 110 Colo. 52, 129 P.2d 908 (1942).

Although it is not specifically assigned as error, nevertheless it is cogent when considering the question of whether the court had the authority to enter the default judgment and also whether it exceeded its jurisdiction in doing so. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Doyle, 162 Colo. 1, 424 P.2d 368 (1967).

The requirements of this rule have been fastidiously adhered to by the supreme court. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Doyle, 162 Colo. 1, 424 P.2d 368 (1967).

The requirements of this rule, stating that a three-day written notice of application for default judgment shall be given, have been scrupulously adhered to by this court. R.F. v. D.G.W., 192 Colo. 528, 560 P.2d 837 (1977); Southerlin v. Automotive Elec. Corp., 773 P.2d 599 (Colo. App. 1988).

"Appeared in the action" as used in section (b) requires the defendant to communicate with the court in a manner that demonstrates defendant is aware of and intends to participate in the proceedings. Plaza del Lago Townhomes Ass'n v. Highwood Builders, 148 P.3d 367 (Colo. App. 2006).

The essence of an appearance as used in section (b)(2) (now (b)) is a cognitive submission of oneself to the jurisdiction of the court. People in Interest of J.M.W., 36 Colo. App. 398, 542 P.2d 392 (1975).

Ordinarily, a defendant enters a general appearance in a case by seeking relief which acknowledges jurisdiction or by other conduct manifesting consent to jurisdiction. People in Interest of J.M.W., 36 Colo. App. 398, 542 P.2d 392 (1975).

Presence requesting continuance to employ counsel does not constitute appearance. Presence in court without counsel resulting in a continuance to allow time to employ counsel did not constitute an appearance within the meaning of section (b)(2) (now (b)). People in Interest of J.M.W., 36 Colo. App. 398, 542 P.2d 392 (1975).

Purpose of the notice requirement of section (b)(2) (now (b)) of this rule is to protect those parties who, although delinquent in filing pleadings within the time periods specified, have indicated a clear purpose to defend by entry of their appearance. Bankers Union Life Ins. Co. v. Fiocca, 35 Colo. App. 306, 532 P.2d 57 (1975); Best v. Jones, 644 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1982); Sisneros v. First Nat. Bank of Denver, 689 P.2d 1178 (Colo. App. 1984).

Responsive pleading is timely when tendered to the clerk of the court following service of the three-day written notice required pursuant to section (b)(2) (now (b)) of this rule and prior to the entry of default judgment. Bankers Union Life Ins. Co. v. Fiocca, 35 Colo. App. 306, 532 P.2d 57 (1975).

Judgment obtained by default is entitled to complete legal effect. DeBoer v. District Court, 184 Colo. 112, 518 P.2d 942 (1974).

The notice provision in section (b) of this rule is applicable to divorce cases. The notice provision in section (b) of this rule as to serving party against whom default judgment is sought with notice of application therefor at least three days prior to hearing thereon applies in divorce cases, and if not followed it is ground for reversal. Holman v. Holman, 114 Colo. 437, 165 P.2d 1015 (1946).

The taking of evidence and entry of judgment in the absence of a party who knows his case is set for trial is not proceeding under the default provisions of this rule, but is instead a trial on the merits. Davis v. Klaes, 141 Colo. 19, 346 P.2d 1018 (1959); Sunshine v. Robinson, 168 Colo. 409, 451 P.2d 757 (1969).

If a party is absent, his failure to appear does not entitle him to additional notice. Davis v. Klaes, 141 Colo. 19, 346 P.2d 1018 (1959); Sunshine v. Robinson, 168 Colo. 409, 451 P.2d 757 (1969).

It is an abuse of discretion to enter a default judgment without notice to the parties themselves where their attorney has been discharged and has filed an application to withdraw. Colo. Ranch Estates, Inc. v. Halvorson, 163 Colo. 146, 428 P.2d 917 (1967).

Notice not necessary where defendants did not make any contact with the court before entry of judgment against them. Realty World-Range Realty, Ltd. v. Prochaska, 691 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1984).

The supreme court is disinclined to apply technical concepts in determining whether a party has entered an appearance for purposes of the notice requirement of section (b)(2) of this rule. R.F. v. D.G.W., 192 Colo. 528, 560 P.2d 837 (1977).

Colorado has taken a liberal approach in determining what constitutes an "appearance" under section (b)(2). Biella v. State Dept. of Hwys., 652 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982).

"Appearance" must be responsive to court action. To be entitled to notice of application for judgment under section (b)(2), a party's appearance must be responsive to the plaintiff's formal court action. The plaintiff's knowledge that the defendants plan to resist the suit is not enough. Biella v. State Dept. of Hwys., 652 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982); Sisneros v. First Nat. Bank of Denver, 689 P.2d 1178 (Colo. App. 1984).

Letter from defendant to court may be sufficient "appearance" under section (b)(2) to entitle the defendant to three days' notice and a hearing. Carls Constr., Inc. v. Gigliotti, 40 Colo. App. 535, 577 P.2d 1107 (1978).

Unsigned letter faxed to the court by defendant's son was sufficient "appearance" to trigger the notice requirement of section (b)(2). BS & C Enters., L.L.C. v. Barnett, 186 P.3d 128 (Colo. App. 2008).

Corporate officer's attempt to file documents is appearance. An attempt by an officer of a corporation to file documents with the court, while not technically an appearance on behalf of the corporation, is an ''appearance'' sufficient to trigger the notice requirement of section (b)(2). Best v. Jones, 644 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1982).

Appearance in small claims court is not appearance in county court. The defendant's appearance by attorney with regard to the same claim in the small claims court and the county court is not sufficient to trigger the requirement for notice under section (b)(2), because the the county court and the district court are separate and distinct courts, and actions in each court are separate and distinct lawsuits. An appearance in the former does not constitute an appearance in the latter. Yard v. Ambassador Bldr. Corp., 669 P.2d 1040 (Colo. App. 1983).

Payment of docket fee is not prerequisite to entry of appearance for the purpose of entitling a party to notice before entry of default judgment. Carls Constr., Inc. v. Gigliotti, 40 Colo. App. 535, 577 P.2d 1107 (1978).

Right to notice not extinguished by untimely answer. A party's right to notice under section (b)(2) is not extinguished by the fact that his appearance in the action was not made within the time required for an answer under C.R.C.P. 12(a) prior to entry of default. Carls Constr., Inc. v. Gigliotti, 40 Colo. App. 535, 577 P.2d 1107 (1978).

Where a party is not represented by a lawyer, a court should be reluctant to foreclose the opportunity of a litigant to present some defense. R.F. v. D.G.W., 192 Colo. 528, 560 P.2d 837 (1977).

Judgment of default vacated for failure to give notice required by this rule. R.F. v. D.G.W., 192 Colo. 528, 560 P.2d 837 (1977); Westbrook v. Burris, 757 P.2d 1142 (Colo. App. 1988).

Failure to comply with the notice provision of this rule mandates vacation of the entry of default as well as the default judgment, thus rendering further proceedings on the default issue unwarranted. Schaffer v. Martin, 623 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1980).

Express finding of proper venue not required. The requirement in section (b)(2) that the court ''be satisfied'' that venue is proper is not tantamount to a requirement that an express, written finding be made. Although it might be preferable to include such a finding in the order granting the default, it is not required by the rule. Wagner Equip. Co. v. Mountain States Mineral Enters., Inc., 669 P.2d 625 (Colo. App. 1983).

Improper venue is not a jurisdictional defect that renders a default judgment void. Swanson v. Precision Sales & Serv., 832 P.2d 1109 (Colo. App. 1992).

Hearing on motion for default not necessary where court has all materials required by rules and is satisfied as to sufficiency of service and that defendant is in default. Crow-Watson No. 8 v. Miranda, 736 P.2d 1260 (Colo. App. 1986).

No hearing on a motion for default judgment is necessary where only liquidated as opposed to unliquidated damages are involved and defendant, possessed with all of the information available to the court for rendering a judgment, fails to respond. Crow-Watson No. 8 v. Miranda, 736 P.2d 1260 (Colo. App. 1986).

Defaulting party has right to appear and present mitigating evidence at hearing on damages. Since, before a default judgment is entered, the court is required to conduct a hearing and take evidence on the amount of damages and section (b)(2) allows the defaulting party to receive notice of and attend such hearing, our adversary system requires that the defaulting party should be allowed to cross-examine witnesses and present mitigating evidence. Kwik Way Stores, Inc. v. Caldwell, 709 P.2d 36 (Colo. App. 1985), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 745 P.2d 672 (Colo. 1987).

A trial court is not required to take evidence before entering a default judgment, assuming that the court is satisfied as to sufficiency of service and the fact that defendant is actually in default. Orebaugh v. Doskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

A defendant who fails to answer within the required time thereby admits the allegations of the complaint, and allegations deemed admitted need not be proved. Orebaugh v. Doskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

A court under this rule has wide discretion as to whether a hearing is necessary prior to entry of a default judgment. Orebaugh v. Doskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

District court is without discretionary power to deny a motion for default judgment where the opposing party, not an agency of the state, fails to comply with a court order requiring that a certain act be done within a specified time and, after expiration of that time, fails to establish that such failure to act was a result of excusable neglect. Sauer v. Heckers, 34 Colo. App. 217, 524 P.2d 1387 (1974).

If the court decides to hold a hearing, it also has discretion as to the type of hearing and the degree of its formality. Orebaugh v. Doskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

While it may be better practice to have a reporter present when testimony is offered prior to the entry of a default judgment, section (b)(2) (now (b)) does not require it. Orebaugh v. Doskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

It is the duty of the trial court to make sufficient findings to enable the appellate court to clearly understand the basis of the trial court's decision and to enable it to determine the ground on which it rendered its decision granting a default judgment. Norton v. Raymond, 30 Colo. App. 338, 491 P.2d 1403 (1971).

There must be proof of cause for divorce. The interest of the public in divorce cases, including the possibility of collusive arrangements therein, is such that a divorce may not be granted on a judgment by default without proof of a cause for divorce. Holman v. Holman, 114 Colo. 437, 165 P.2d 1015 (1946).

In default cases where testimony is taken, it must be by the court or referee. Hotchkiss v. First Nat'l Bank, 37 Colo. 228, 85 P. 1007 (1906).

Default may be entered for failing to give deposition. Judgment by default may be entered against a party who wilfully fails to appear in response to a proper notice to have his deposition taken under this rule. Salter v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952).

Judgment by default is the penalty for failure to have desposition taken. Salter v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952).

Before this penalty is imposed, there must be given an opportunity to show cause for nonappearance. Salter v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952).

Contempt is not a penalty that goes along with default judgment. Salter v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 126 Colo. 39, 246 P.2d 890 (1952).

Neither the Colorado Children's Code nor C.R.C.P. 107 authorizes default judgment as a sanction against a parent for failing to appear at a dependency and neglect adjudicatory hearing. People in Interest of K.J.B., 2014 COA 168, 342 P.3d 597.

It is necessary to assess damages. Upon default in an action where the taking of an account, or the proof of any fact, is necessary to enable the court to assess damages or give judgment, final judgment need not be rendered, and ordinarily is not, until the amount of damages is assessed in some appropriate manner. Melville v. Weybrew, 108 Colo. 520, 120 P.2d 189 (1941), cert. denied, 315 U.S. 811, 62 S. Ct. 795, 86 L. Ed. 1210, reh'g denied, 315 U.S. 830, 62 S. Ct. 913, 86 L. Ed. 1224 (1942).

A court is required under this rule to take evidence and to determine the amount of damages. Valdez v. Sams, 134 Colo. 488, 307 P.2d 189 (1957).

Exemplary damages or execution against the body cannot be awarded in the absence of a specific finding, based upon evidence, that the special circumstances which warrant the extraordinary remedy are in fact present. Valdez v. Sams, 134 Colo. 488, 307 P.2d 189 (1957).

IV. SETTING ASIDE DEFAULT.

Law reviews. For comment on Self v. Watt appearing below, see 26 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 107 (1953). For comment on Coerber v. Rath appearing below, see 45 Den. L.J. 763 (1968).

Annotator's note. (1) Since section (c) of this rule is similar to §§ 50(e) and 81 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

(2) For specific grounds and time to vacate default judgments, see the annotations under C.R.C.P. 60.

Negligence of counsel generally constitutes "good cause shown" for setting aside a default under section (c). Trujillo v. Indus. Comm'n, 648 P.2d 1094 (Colo. App. 1982).

A motion to vacate a default judgment is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Koin v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n, 96 Colo. 163, 41 P.2d 306 (1935); Mountain v. Stewart, 112 Colo. 302, 149 P.2d 176 (1944); Self v. Watt, 128 Colo. 61, 259 P.2d 1074 (1953); Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957); White, Green & Addison Assocs. v. Monarch Oil & Uranium Corp., 141 Colo. 107, 347 P.2d 135 (1959); Walker v. Assocs. Loan Co., 153 Colo. 261, 385

P.2d 421 (1963); Coerber v. Rath, 164 Colo. 294, 435 P.2d 228 (1967); Gen. Aluminum Corp. v. District Court, 165 Colo. 445, 439 P.2d 340 (1968); Moskowitz v. Michaels Artists & Eng'r Supplies, Inc., 29 Colo. App. 44, 477 P.2d 465 (1970); Snow v. District Court, 194 Colo. 335, 572 P.2d 475 (1977).

The determination of whether to vacate or set aside a default judgment is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974).

The underlying goal in ruling on motions to set aside default judgments is to promote substantial justice. Whether substantial justice will be served by setting aside a default judgment on the ground of excusable neglect is to be determined by the trial court in the exercise of its sound discretion. Where that discretion is abused, an appellate court will set aside the trial court's order. Craig v. Rider, 651 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982); Plaisted v. Colo. Springs Sch. Dist. #11, 702 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1985).

A motion to vacate a default judgment is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Sumler v. District Ct., City & County of Denver, 889 P.2d 50 (Colo. 1995).

Section (c) of this rule and C.R.C.P. 60 (b) leave the matter of setting aside default judgments to the discretion of the trial judge. Ehrlinger v. Parker, 137 Colo. 514, 327 P.2d 267 (1958).

Same standards apply under section (c) of this rule and under C.R.C.P. 60(b). In considering either type of motion, the trial court should base its decision on (1) whether the neglect that resulted in the entry of judgment by default was excusable; (2) whether the moving party has alleged a meritorious defense; and (3) whether relief from the challenged order would be consistent with considerations of equity. Dunton v. Whitewater West Recreation, Ltd., 942 P.2d 1348 (Colo. App. 1997).

There is a presumption of regularity applicable to trial court ruling setting aside default. Credit Inv. & Loan Co. v. Guar. Bank & Trust Co., 166 Colo. 471, 444 P.2d 633 (1968).

The ruling on setting aside default will not be disturbed unless it appears that there has been an abuse of discretion. Koin v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n, 96 Colo. 163, 41 P.2d 306 (1935); Mountain v. Stewart, 112 Colo. 302, 149 P.2d 176 (1944); Self v. Watt, 128 Colo. 61, 259 P.2d 1074 (1953); Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957); White, Green & Addison Assocs. v. Monarch Oil & Uranium Corp., 141 Colo. 107, 347 P.2d 135 (1959); Moskowitz v. Michaels Artists & Eng'r Supplies, Inc., 29 Colo. App. 44, 477 P.2d 465 (1970).

The court must refrain from vacating a default judgment until after the opened judgment results in a new judgment on the merits. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

If a judgment results in favor of the defendant after a trial on the merits, then the original default judgment is vacated — the judgment and judgment lien are dissolved as though they never existed. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

When a judgment is opened the defendant is allowed to answer to the merits of the claim, but the original judgment and judgment lien remain in effect as security pending the resolution of the trial on the merits. Thus, if a judgment results in plaintiff's favor after the original judgment is opened for a trial on the merits, his judgment lien will remain in full force and effect as if the original default judgment had not been opened. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

To warrant reversal it must appear that there was an abuse of discretion. Walker v. Assocs. Loan Co., 153 Colo. 261, 385 P.2d 421 (1963).

An abuse of discretion in refusing to set aside a default judgment must be shown to warrant reversal. People in Interest of J.M.W., 36 Colo. App. 398, 542 P.2d 392 (1975).

Without a clear portrayal of an abuse of discretion, an appellate court will not reverse. Credit Inv. & Loan Co. v. Guar. Bank & Trust Co., 166 Colo. 471, 444 P.2d 633 (1968).

An appellate court has never hesitated to overrule a trial court where that discretion has been abused. Coerber v. Rath, 164 Colo. 294, 435 P.2d 228 (1967).

The discretion of the court in determining an application to vacate a default is not a capricious or arbitrary discretion, but is controlled by fixed legal principles, to be exercised in conformity with the spirit of the law, and in a manner to subserve, and not to impede or defeat, the ends of justice. Gumaer v. Bell, 51 Colo. 473, 119 P. 681 (1911); Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956).

The discretion of the court in considering any application to vacate a default is controlled by fixed legal principles, to be exercised in conformity with the spirit of the law, and in a manner to serve, and not to impede or defeat, the ends of justice. Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974).

A successor judge may vacate default judgment when the original judge would have had an adequate legal basis to do so. Sumler v. District Ct., City & County of Denver, 889 P. 2d 50 (Colo. 1995).

Where there is nothing to indicate that setting aside a default and ordering a trial on the merits would unwarrantedly prejudice plaintiffs, a trial court abuses its discretion in refusing to set aside a default judgment.

Coerber v. Rath, 164 Colo. 294, 435 P.2d 228 (1967).

Denial of a motion to set aside entry of default was an abuse of discretion where the motion provided a good faith explanation for defendant's behavior, was filed less than three weeks after entry of default, alleged a potentially meritorious defense, and plaintiff conceded that no prejudice would result from setting the default aside. Singh v. Mortensun, 30 P.3d 853 (Colo. App. 2001).

A reason for refusing to set aside a default is defendants' delay in making their motion. Ehrlinger v. Parker, 137 Colo. 514, 327 P.2d 267 (1958).

Where a defendant knows of the judgment against him and does not take prompt steps to vacate the same, but makes numerous efforts to satisfy or compromise such judgment, then these actions being contradictory and inconsistent, the refusal of the trial court to set aside the judgment is not an abuse of discretion. Ehrlinger v. Parker, 137 Colo. 514, 327 P.2d 267 (1958).

Parties cannot be permitted to disregard the process of the court and after a default judgment is rendered against them come in at their convenience and upon the mere allegation of the existence of a meritorious defense have judgment rendered against them vacated. Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957); White, Green & Addison Assocs. v. Monarch Oil & Uranium Corp., 141 Colo. 107, 347 P.2d 135 (1959).

Where an application to vacate a default judgment is made promptly, a defense on the merits should be permitted. Drinkard v. Spencer, 72 Colo. 396, 211 P. 379 (1922); Walker v. Assocs. Loan Co., 153 Colo. 261, 385 P.2d 421 (1963).

Where a stockholder of a corporation, acting promptly after the entry of a default judgment against the latter, presents to the trial court a petition to have the judgment set aside and for leave to file an answer — it appearing from the petition that he was not a party to the original proceeding, that he would be prejudiced by the judgment if it were permitted to stand, and that he has a good defense to the action — the petition should be granted, since a denial constitutes prejudicial, reversible error. Senne v. Conley, 110 Colo. 270, 133 P.2d 381 (1943); Brown v. Deerksen, 163 Colo. 194, 429 P.2d 302 (1967).

There must be evidence and justification for any delay. Where a trial court, after a lapse of many years from entry of judgment, sets it aside upon the application of the defendant without evidence or showing of justification for delay in moving to vacate such judgment, the plaintiff is entitled to have original judgment reinstated. Haskell v. Gross, 145 Colo. 365, 358 P.2d 1024 (1961).

The burden is upon the defendant to establish the grounds on which he relies to set aside a default entered against him by clear and convincing proof. Browning v. Potter, 129 Colo. 478, 271 P.2d 418 (1954); Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Ehrlinger v. Parker, 137 Colo. 514, 327 P.2d 267 (1958).

A motion to set aside a default judgment is a simple procedural motion taking place within the context of a substantive civil action; therefore, § 13-25-127, which governs the burden of proof for civil actions, is inapplicable to a motion to set aside a default judgment. Borer v. Lewis, 91 P.3d 375 (Colo. 2004).

In enacting § 13-25-127, the general assembly did not legislatively override the "clear and convincing" burden of proof that has been applied to proceedings to set aside default judgments. To decide otherwise would require the court to find § 13-25-127 unconstitutional as an impermissible infringement on the judiciary's authority to promulgate procedural rules. Borer v. Lewis, 91 P.3d 375 (Colo. 2004).

One must show facts that would produce a different judgment. One seeking to have a default judgment set aside must set forth facts which, if established, would produce a judgment other than the one entered. Ehrlinger v. Parker, 137 Colo. 514, 327 P.2d 267 (1958); Walker v. Assocs. Loan Co., 153 Colo. 261, 385 P.2d 421 (1963).

The court should vacate judgment. Where a default judgment has been entered and it is made to appear that in justice to a defendant he is entitled to be heard, and that the tendered defense, if established, would defeat the action, the trial court should vacate the judgment. Gumaer v. Bell, 51 Colo. 473, 119 P. 681 (1911); Walker v. Assocs. Loan Co., 153 Colo. 261, 385 P.2d 421 (1963).

Trial court erred in denying defendants' motion to vacate default judgment where defendants received no actual or constructive notice of court order authorizing plaintiffs to amend their complaint, where plaintiffs failed to serve defendants with a copy of the amended complaint after the court's order was issued, and where the allegations in the amended complaint against defendants were the same as in the original complaint and were specifically denied in defendant's answer to the original complaint. Roberts v. Novinger, 815 P.2d 996 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where a default judgment is set aside on jurisdictional grounds, it also must be vacated. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

Lack of notice of a default judgment supporting a judgment lien is not a jurisdictional defect that renders the judgment and lien void. First Nat. Bank of Telluride v. Fleisher, 2 P.3d 706 (Colo. 2000).

Excusable neglect and meritorious defense ground for setting aside default judgment. The judge was acting within his jurisdiction under this rule when he set aside a default judgment on the ground of ''excusable neglect'' supported by a specific statement of meritorious defense. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

A meritorious defense must be set forth. It is necessary in a proceeding to set aside a default judgment for the moving party to set forth a meritorious defense. Temple v. Miller, 30 Colo. App. 49, 488 P.2d 252 (1971).

Where a judgment is set aside on grounds other than those challenging the jurisdiction of the court, the judgment is opened and the moving party, after a showing of good cause and a meritorious defense, will be permitted to file an answer to the original complaint and participate in a trial on the merits. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

There is a failure to show good cause without meritorious defense. One against whom a default judgment has been entered must allege a meritorious defense to the plaintiff's claim, otherwise there is a failure to show good cause. Coerber v. Rath, 164 Colo. 294, 435 P.2d 228 (1967).

A meritorious defense does not have to be proven in the hearing to set aside the judgment, for what is necessary is that the defendant allege facts which, if proven true, would alter the judgment entered. Temple v. Miller, 30 Colo. App. 49, 488 P.2d 252 (1971).

A motion to set aside a default judgment should be considered in a manner calculated to promote substantial justice. Burlington Ditch, Reservoir & Land Co. v. Fort Morgan Reservoir & Irrigation Co., 59 Colo. 571, 151 P. 432 (1915); Walker v. Assocs. Loan Co., 153 Colo. 261, 385 P.2d 421 (1963); F. & S. Constr. Co. v. Christlieb, 166 Colo. 67, 441 P.2d 656 (1968); Norton v. Raymond, 30 Colo. App. 338, 491 P.2d 1403 (1971).

Where it is clear from the absence of evidence in the record that it is impossible to determine if substantial justice has been done, then, in the interest of substantial justice, the plaintiff should be required to prove his claim and the defendant should be given an opportunity to present his defense. Norton v. Raymond, 30 Colo. App. 338, 491 P.2d 1403 (1971).

Default must be first set aside in proper proceeding. Where a defendant has made default, and judgment has been entered against him, he is not entitled to file pleadings contesting the allegations of plaintiff until his default and the judgment entered thereon have been set aside in a proper proceeding; such a defendant has no standing in court to move for a new trial, either for cause or as a matter of right. Fraka v. Malernee, 129 Colo. 87, 267 P.2d 651 (1954).

Where defendants' motions do not attack the summons, but are directed instead to the default judgment, praying for an order authorizing the defendants to plead to the complaint, then, by this action, the defendants subject themselves to the jurisdiction of the court. Barra v. People, 18 Colo. App. 16, 69 P. 1074 (1902); Pierce v. Hamilton, 55 Colo. 448, 135 P. 796 (1913); Isham v. People, 82 Colo. 550, 262 P. 89 (1927); Brown v. Amen, 147 Colo. 468, 364 P.2d 735 (1961).

A party who seeks to set aside a default judgment and plead to the merits has thereby entered a general appearance and waived the right to question a summons. Wells Aircraft Parts Co. v. Allan J. Kayser Co., 118 Colo. 197, 194 P.2d 326 (1947).

Court acquires jurisdiction, but only to plead or answer, not to validate void default judgment. Since a general appearance has no retroactive force, then where a general appearance is made by defendants in seeking to set aside the default the court therefore acquires jurisdiction over them, but only to grant time to plead or answer to the complaint, and so the general appearance does not validate a void default judgment. Jones v. Colescott, 134 Colo. 552, 307 P.2d 464 (1957); Brown v. Amen, 147 Colo. 468, 364 P.2d 735 (1961).

Presumption of judgment's validity also includes required notices. The presumption of validity of a judgment entered by a court, which admittedly had jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter of the action, carries with it the presumption that notices required by this rule to be given in connection with the entry of judgment by default were complied with. Haskell v. Gross, 145 Colo. 365, 358 P.2d 1024 (1961).

Lack of notice is a serious procedural error that can, in some instances, violate the due process rights of the defaulting party and, therefore, require vacating the default judgment. First Nat. Bank of Telluride v. Fleisher, 2 P.3d 706 (Colo. 2000).

The burden is upon the party seeking to vacate a judgment to overcome the presumption of validity. Haskell v. Gross, 145 Colo. 365, 358 P.2d 1024 (1961).

Since the motion to set aside arose after the judgment was entered, the burden to prove a lack of jurisdiction because of inadequate service of process is on the party challenging the service of process and the resulting lack of jurisdiction. White Front Auto Sales, Inc. v. Mygatt, 810 P.2d 234 (Colo. App. 1990).

Overcoming the presumption of validity is not accomplished by presenting a record which fails to show that notice was served. Haskell v. Gross, 145 Colo. 365, 358 P.2d 1024 (1961).

Where the notice of trial is served upon an attorney who states that he intends to withdraw from the case, a trial court abuses its discretion in refusing to set aside a default judgment. Colo. Ranch Estates, Inc. v. Halvorson, 163 Colo. 146, 428 P.2d 917 (1967).

Review by writ of error is proper procedure. The only proper procedure to secure review of a trial court's order granting an application to set aside a default judgment is by writ of error after final judgment, not prohibition. Stiger v. District Court, 188 Colo. 403, 535 P.2d 508 (1975).

Verified answer in sufficient detail to be specifically informative is considered generally to amount to a meritorious defense for purposes of setting aside a default judgment. Coon v. Ginsberg, 32 Colo. App. 206, 509 P.2d 1293 (1973).

Gross negligence on the part of counsel resulting in a default judgment is considered excusable neglect on the part of the client entitling him to have the judgment set aside. Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974).

Gross negligence causing default judgment excusable where attorney's gross negligence could not be imputed to his client. Sumler v. District Ct., City & County of Denver, 889 P.2d 50 (Colo. 1995).

When no appeal was taken from an order denying a motion to set aside default judgment, all matters in controversy were finally adjudicated and a second motion to set aside the default judgment was a nullity and should be stricken. Federal Lumber Co. v. Hanley, 33 Colo. App. 18, 515 P.2d 480 (1973).

A default judgment may only be the subject of collateral attack when the trial court lacked jurisdiction over the parties or the subject matter. DeBoer v. District Court, 184 Colo. 112, 518 P.2d 942 (1974).

Where a default judgment has been entered and made final, it is not a proper subject of collateral attack particularly by strangers to the original action, although the rule prohibiting such attack applies to parties as well. DeBoer v. District Court, 184 Colo. 112, 518 P.2d 942 (1974).

Criteria to be utilized by court in ruling on motion to set aside a default judgment include whether the neglect that resulted in entry of judgment by default was excusable, whether the moving party has alleged a meritorious defense, and whether relief from the challenged order would be consistent with equitable considerations, such as the protection of action taken in reliance on the order and the prevention of prejudice by reason of evidence lost or impaired by the passage of time. A consideration of all these factors together in a single hearing would provide the most complete information upon which to base the exercise of informed discretion and would be the preferable procedure in most cases. Craig v. Rider, 651 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982).

The preferred procedure is to consider all three criteria in single hearing, as evidence relating to one factor might shed light on another and consideration of all three factors will provide the most complete information for an informed decision. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986).

Motion to set aside default judgment under section (c) of this rule on basis of failure to prosecute and motion to vacate judgment under C.R.C.P. 60(b) on basis of excusable neglect are sufficiently analogous to justify application of same standards to either motion; thus, same three criteria which are legal standard are applicable in both motions. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986).

Party must justify default before asserting meritorious defense. A party in default is not entitled to have an adverse judgment set aside simply because of a weakness in the other party's judgment; rather, the defaulting party must first stand upon the strength of his own justification for being in default and is not entitled to assert a meritorious defense until he successfully does so. Craig v. Rider, 628 P.2d 623 (Colo. App. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 651 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982).

Party's negligence is not "excusable". Negligence on the part of the one of the parties or its employees cannot be deemed ''excusable neglect''. Wagner Equip. Co. v. Mountain States Mineral Enters., Inc., 669 P.2d 625 (Colo. App. 1983).

A stockbroker's failure to file a timely answer was due to his own carelessness and does not constitute ''good cause shown'' or ''excusable neglect''. Johnston v. S.W. Devanney & Co., Inc., 719 P.2d 734 (Colo. App. 1986).

Default judgment was not void because process was adequately served and trial court therefore had personal jurisdiction over defendant. In case where process was properly served upon defendant's registered agent pursuant to C.R.C.P. 4, agent's failure to timely respond because of his own carelessness and negligence did not constitute excusable neglect. Therefore, trial court erred in setting aside the default judgment pursuant to C.R.C.P. 60(b)(1) and (b)(3). Goodman Assocs., LLC v. WP Mtn. Props., LLC, 222 P.3d 310 (Colo. 2010).

Excusable neglect means more than ordinary negligence or carelessness; it occurs where there is a failure to take proper steps at the proper time as a result of some unavoidable occurrence. Plaisted v. Colo. Springs Sch. Dist. #11, 702 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1985).

Lack of prejudice to the plaintiff, absent other factors indicating good cause, is insufficient to show an abuse of discretion in denying a motion to set aside a default. Snow v. District Court, 194 Colo. 335, 572 P.2d 475 (1977); Johnston v. S.W. Devanney & Co., Inc., 719 P.2d 734 (Colo. App. 1986).

Even though motion of defaulting party contains allegations which, if proven, would constitute a meritorious defense, the trial court is not required to set aside the default judgment when it affords that party a full and fair opportunity to present and argue the alleged meritorious defense and concludes that the defense is not proven. Michael Shinn & Assocs., Inc. v. Dertina, 697 P.2d 422 (Colo. App. 1985).

Abuse of discretion found where trial court refused to set aside the damages portion of a judgment. Johnston v. S.W. Devanney & Co., Inc., 719 P.2d 734 (Colo. App. 1986).

Rule as basis for jurisdiction. Kopel v. Davie, 163 Colo. 57, 428 P.2d 712 (1967).

V. OFFICER OR AGENCY OF STATE.

The department of corrections' mere failure to respond timely is insufficient grounds for a default judgment. Since the department is a state agency, the plaintiff must establish his claims with sufficient evidence before a default judgment may enter. Reeves v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 155 P.3d 648 (Colo. App. 2007).

Section (e) does not require an adversary hearing after notice to the state. Biella v. State Dept. of Hwys., 652 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982).

Evidence held sufficiently "satisfactory to the court" to meet the requirements of section (e). Biella v. State Dept. of Hwys., 652 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982).

VI. JUDGMENT ON SUBSTITUTED SERVICE.

A plaintiff fails to follow this rule where he does not apply for the judgment by written motion setting forth with particularity the grounds in support of the motion and the relief sought as required by C.R.C.P. 7(b). Norton v. Raymond, 30 Colo. App. 338, 491 P.2d 1403 (1971).

Where a plaintiff contends that an affidavit, filed when an oral motion for default is made, constitutes the required proof, such is not the case when the affidavit is basically a form statement and has only one phrase relating to the plaintiff's claim for relief, for even if otherwise acceptable, such an affidavit offers nothing as to the nature of the grounds of proof of plaintiff's claim. Norton v. Raymond, 30 Colo. App. 338, 491 P.2d 1403 (1971).

A default judgment cannot be entered in plaintiff's favor without plaintiff making some showing of the right to such. Osborne v. Holford, 40 Colo. App. 365, 575 P.2d 866 (1978).

Rule 56. Summary Judgment and Rulings on Questions of Law

(a) For Claimant. A party seeking to recover upon a claim, counterclaim, or cross-claim or to obtain a declaratory judgment may, after the expiration of 21 days from the commencement of the action or after filing of a motion for summary judgment by the adverse party, move with or without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in the claiming party's favor upon all or any part thereof.

(b) For Defending Party. A party against whom a claim, counterclaim, or cross-claim is asserted or a declaratory judgment is sought may, move with or without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in the defending party's favor as to all or any part thereof.

(c) Motion and Proceedings Thereon. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, any motion for summary judgment shall be filed no later than 91 days (13 weeks) prior to trial. A cross-motion for summary judgment shall be filed no later than 70 days (10 weeks) prior to trial. The motion may be determined without oral argument. The opposing party may file and serve opposing affidavits within the time allowed for the responsive brief, unless the court orders some lesser or greater time. The judgment sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. A summary judgment, interlocutory in character, may be rendered on the issue of liability alone although there is a genuine issue as to the amount of damages.

(d) Case Not Fully Adjudicated on Motion. If on motion under this Rule judgment is not rendered upon the whole case or for all the relief asked and a trial is necessary, the court at the hearing of the motion, by examining the pleadings and the evidence before it and by interrogating counsel, shall if practicable ascertain what material facts exist without substantial controversy and what material facts are actually in good faith controverted. It shall thereupon make an order specifying the facts that appear without substantial controversy, including the extent to which the amount of damages or other relief is not in controversy, and directing such further proceedings in the action as are just. Upon the trial of the action the facts so specified shall be deemed established, and the trial shall be conducted accordingly.

(e) Form of Affidavits; Further Testimony; Defense Required. Supporting and opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein. Sworn or certified copies of all papers or parts thereof referred to in an affidavit shall be attached thereto or served therewith. The court may permit affidavits to be supplemented or opposed by depositions, answers to interrogatories, or by further affidavits. When a motion for summary judgment is made and supported as provided in this Rule, an adverse party may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of the opposing party's pleadings, but the opposing party's response by affidavits or otherwise provided in this Rule, must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. If there is no response, summary judgment, if appropriate, shall be entered.

(f) When Affidavits are Unavailable. Should it appear from the affidavits of a party opposing the motion that the opposing party cannot for reasons stated present by affidavit facts essential to justify its opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or may order a continuance to permit affidavits to be obtained or depositions to be taken or discovery to be had or may make such other order as is just.

(g) Affidavits Made in Bad Faith. Should it appear to the satisfaction of the court at any time that any of the affidavits presented pursuant to this Rule are presented in bad faith or solely for the purpose of delay, the court shall forthwith order the party employing them to pay to the other party the amount of the reasonable expenses which the filing of the affidavits caused the other party to incur, including reasonable attorney's fees, and any offending party or attorney may be adjudged guilty of contempt.

(h) Determination of a Question of Law. At any time after the last required pleading, with or without supporting affidavits, a party may move for determination of a question of law. If there is no genuine issue of any material fact necessary for the determination of the question of law, the court may enter an order deciding the question.

The obvious purpose to be served by this rule is to further the prompt administration of justice, expedite litigation by avoiding needless trials, and enable one speedily to obtain a judgment by preventing the interposition of unmeritorious defenses for purpose of delay. Blaine v. Yockey, 117 Colo. 29, 184 P.2d 1015 (1947).

The summary judgment rule is designed to pierce through the allegations of fact in the pleadings. Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972).

This rule is designed to avoid an unnecessary trial. This rule allowing summary judgment is designed to pierce through the allegations of fact in pleadings and to avoid an unnecessary trial where the matter submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment shows that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law under section (c). Terrell v. Walter E. Heller Co., 165 Colo. 463, 439 P.2d 989 (1968); Ruscitti v. Sackheim, 817 P.2d 1046 (Colo. App. 1991).

The function of this rule authorizing summary judgments is to avoid the expense and delay of trials when all facts are admitted or when a party is unable to support by any competent evidence a contention of fact. Norton v. Dartmouth Skis, Inc., 147 Colo. 436, 364 P.2d 866 (1961).

This rule provides a method whereby it is possible to determine whether a genuine cause of action or defense thereto exists and whether there is a genuine issue of fact warranting the submission of the case to a jury. Blaine v. Yockey, 117 Colo. 29, 184 P.2d 1015 (1947).

Violation of section (c) of this rule, providing the opportunity for a response from the opposing party, found to be harmless error under the circumstances. Union Ins. Co. v. Hottenstein, 83 P.3d 1196 (Colo. App. 2003).

Issue of sovereign immunity properly decided under C.R.C.P. 12(b)(1) rather than this rule since sovereign immunity issue is one of subject matter jurisdiction. DiPaolo v. Boulder Valley Sch. Dist., 902 P.2d 439 (Colo. App. 1995).

Judgments by confession on notes are not affected. Cross v. Moffat, 11 Colo. 210, 17 P. 771 (1888).

Judgment of dismissal for failure to state claim upon which relief can be granted may be entered upon motion for summary judgment. Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976).

C.R.C.P. 56 is applicable in a termination of parental rights proceeding under the Children's Code. Because termination of the parent-child relationship is a drastic remedy that affects a parent's liberty interest, a court deciding a summary judgment motion seeking to terminate parental rights must apply the standard of clear and convincing evidence to the applicable statutory criteria. People in Interest of A.E., 914 P.2d 534 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court's ruling that the issue of paternity could not be raised in the child support proceeding because it had been previously litigated was based on undisputed facts, and was tantamount to a partial judgment on the pleadings, or a partial summary judgment. As such, no findings of fact and conclusions of law were required. McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977).

This rule applies to dependency and neglect. No genuine issue of material fact existed on date of adjudication of dependency and neglect case and, therefore, trial court properly adjudicated child dependent and neglected pursuant to summary judgment rule. In Interest of S.B., 742 P.2d 935 (Colo. App. 1987), cert. denied, 754 P.2d 1177 (Colo. 1988).

This rule applies to eminent domain proceedings. Allowing summary judgment in appropriate eminent domain cases does not abridge a landowner's constitutional right to demand a jury. City of Steamboat Springs v. Johnson, 252 P.3d 1142 (Colo. App. 2010).

Party wishing to file a motion for summary judgment in dependency and neglect proceeding cannot comply with both § 19-3-505 (3) and section (c) of this rule. Pursuant to C.R.C.P. 81, the timing of § 19-3-505 (3) controls. People ex rel. A.C., 170 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2007).

Under the doctrine of res judicata, a final judgment on the merits is considered conclusive in any subsequent litigation involving either the same parties or those in privity with them, the same subject matter, and same claims for relief. Foley Custom Homes, Inc. v. Flater, 888 P.2d 363 (Colo. App. 1994).

The preclusive effect of the doctrine of res judicata applies not only to the claims and issues that were actually decided, but also to any claims or issues that could have been raised in the first proceeding. Foley Custom Homes, Inc. v. Flater, 888 P.2d 363 (Colo. App. 1994).

The function of the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel is to avoid relitigation of the same claims or issues because of the cost imposed upon the parties by multiple lawsuits, the burden upon the judicial system, and need for finality in the judicial process; however, the requirement that the same parties or their privies must have appeared in the first proceeding is intended to avoid penalizing one who did not appear. Foley Custom Homes, Inc. v. Flater, 888 P.2d 363 (Colo. App. 1994).

Res judicata does not apply to bar state action where state and federal claims were based on different claims for relief, and state claims were not truly ''available to the parties'' in the prior federal action because state claims could only have been asserted in federal court as pendent to federal claims for relief, and federal claim was dismissed on motion for summary judgment, requiring dismissal of pendent state claims. City & County of Denver v. Block 173, 814 P.2d 824 (Colo. 1991).

Claim to quiet title in certain usufructuary rights was absolutely barred by the doctrine of res judicata where there was a prior judgment involving the same subject matter and cause of action and the plaintiffs were in privity with the parties to the previous action. Rael v. Taylor, 832 P.2d 1011 (Colo. App. 1991).

Res judicata did not apply where corporate plaintiff seeking to enforce agreement in second case was not identical to the individual shareholder who relied upon the agreement in the first case and was not in privity with shareholder since the corporation was asserting its own claim and there was nothing in the record to suggest that the corporation's claim was adjudicated in the first case. Foley Custom Homes, Inc. v. Flater, 888 P.2d 363 (Colo. App. 1994).

Collateral estoppel. Findings of federal district court insufficient to support summary judgment on state claims where identity of issues necessary to invoke collateral estoppel was absent between issues actually and necessarily decided by the federal district court and those necessary to preclude summary judgment on landowner's ''bad faith'' claims in state court. City & County of Denver v. Block 173, 814 P.2d 824 (Colo. 1991).

Water court's ruling granting summary judgment to defendants on grounds of collateral estoppel was error because the issue raised in the current litigation was neither actually determined in prior litigation between the parties nor necessarily implied in the final judgment issued in prior litigation between the parties. Reynolds v. Cotten, 2012 CO 27, 274 P.3d 540.

Collateral estoppel and res judicata may apply to give preclusive effect to an arbitration award. Union Ins. Co. v. Hottenstein, 83 P.3d 1196 (Colo. App. 2003).

Collateral estoppel or ''issue preclusion'' should be argued as part of a motion for summary judgment under this rule, not a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under C.R.C.P. 12(b). Bristol Bay Prod., LLC v. Lampack, 2013 CO 60, 312 P.3d 1155.

A motion for summary judgment based upon an assertion of the lack of existence of a duty of due care is to be subjected to the same standard as is any other motion for summary judgment. Sewell v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 832 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1991).

Applied in Eklund v. Safeco Ins. Co. of Am., 41 Colo. App. 96, 579 P.2d 1185 (1978); Posey v. Intermountain Rural Elec. Ass'n, 41 Colo. App. 7, 583 P.2d 303 (1978); Martin v. County of Weld, 43 Colo. II. FOR CLAIMANT.

Law reviews. For article, ''Plaintiff's Advantageous Use of Discovery, Pre-Trial and Summary Judgment'', see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 192 (1963).

Summary judgment is proper where adverse party fail to respond by affidavit or otherwise to moving party's affidavit. GTM Invs. v. Depot, Inc., 694 P.2d 379 (Colo. App. 1984).

Applied in People ex rel. Flanders v. Neary, 113 Colo. 12, 154 P.2d 48 (1944).

III. FOR DEFENDING PARTY.

Section (b) of this rule, does not require that a defendant plead before he files a motion for summary judgment. Welp v. Crews, 149 Colo. 109, 368 P.2d 426 (1962).

Since this rule authorizes a motion for summary judgment by the defendant "at any time" and since the theory of the motion is that the defending party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, there is normally no necessity to serve an answer, whose function is to develop issues, until the motion for summary judgment is disposed of. Welp v. Crews, 149 Colo. 109, 368 P.2d 426 (1962).

This rule authorizes a defending party to file a motion for summary judgment prior to answering the complaint. Guerrero v. City of Colo. Springs, 507 P.2d 881 (Colo. App. 1972).

Where a defendant files only a motion for summary judgment, he neither files an answer nor does he ask the trial court for leave to plead a defense, and, if no request is made for an evidentiary hearing, he cannot complain that the trial court denied him the opportunity of presenting a defense when he in fact made no effort to present one. Mercantile Bank & Trust Co. v. Hunter, 31 Colo. App. 200, 501 P.2d 486 (1972).

A motion to dismiss based on an affirmative defense should be converted to a motion for summary judgment if the court considers matters outside the complaint when ruling on the motion. If the bare allegations of the complaint reveal that the affirmative defense applies, the court need not convert the motion. Prospect Dev. v. Holland & Knight, 2018 COA 107, 433 P.3d 146.

Where a defendant raises several defenses in the trial court which are not ruled upon there, when the trial court grants a motion for summary judgment, they cannot be considered as sources of error on appeal of the granted motion. McKinley Constr. Co. v. Dozier, 175 Colo. 397, 487 P.2d 1335 (1971).

By arguing the merits of defendant's motions for summary judgment without raising an objection in the trial court as to the manner in which an affirmative defense thereby is asserted, plaintiffs effectively waive any objection they may have to this procedure. Cox v. Pearl Inv. Co., 168 Colo. 67, 450 P.2d 60 (1969).

A motion for summary judgment goes to merits of action and is inconsistent with special appearance for motion to quash service of process for lack of in personam jurisdiction. Texair Flyers, Inc. v. District Court, 180 Colo. 432, 506 P.2d 367 (1973).

A case is properly determined on a motion for summary judgment where the pleadings, the affidavits, and the deposition filed in the matter show that no genuine issue of material fact exists, the court properly determines as a matter of law that a statute bars plaintiff's action, and defendant is entitled to judgment. Nicks v. Electron Corp., 29 Colo. App. 114, 478 P.2d 683 (1970); Phelps v. Gates, 40 Colo. App. 504, 580 P.2d 1268 (1978).

When a defendant's motion for summary judgment becomes untenable in view of his conduct in the matter at issue, a trial court commits error in granting the motion. W. R. Hall Transp. & Storage Co. v. Gunnison Mining Co., 154 Colo. 72, 388 P.2d 768 (1964).

Summary judgment may be based on expiration of statute of limitations. Maes v. Tuttolimondo, 31 Colo. App. 248, 502 P.2d 427 (1972).

Plaintiff's failure to allege facts will support summary judgment. The absence of specific factual allegations will support a summary judgment for the defendant on the issue that plaintiff's claim was barred by the statute of limitations, even though plaintiff contends that there are issues of material fact because there might possibly be facts which would toll the statute of limitations and avoid the plea, if he alleges no such facts and raises no such issues. Norton v. Dartmouth Skis, Inc., 147 Colo. 436, 364 P.2d 866 (1961).

Section (b) of this rule does not require affidavits in support of the motion for summary judgment, and judgment can be rendered on the pleadings where there is no dispute as to the facts. Torbit v. Griffith, 37 Colo. App. 460, 550 P.2d 350 (1976).

The defense of res judicata may, in a proper case, be raised and disposed of by a summary judgment proceeding. Kaminsky v.

Kaminsky, 145 Colo. 492, 359 P.2d 675, 95 A.L.R.2d 643 (1961); Brennan v. City & County of Denver, 156 Colo. 215, 397 P.2d 876 (1964).

To sustain the defense of res judicata, facts in support of it must be affirmatively shown either by the evidence adduced at the trial or by way of uncontroverted facts properly presented either in a motion for summary judgment or by a motion to dismiss under C.R.C.P. 12(b) where the court, on the basis of facts properly presented outside of the pleadings, is enabled to treat the same as a motion for summary judgment under this rule 56. Ruth v. Dept. of Hwys., 153 Colo. 226, 385 P.2d 410 (1963).

The fact that plaintiffs' Jefferson county action for rescission of their partnership agreement with defendants was pending resolution on appeal did not mean that it was not a final judgment for purposes of res judicata in their Adams county action for breach of contract. Miller v. Lunnon, 703 P.2d 640 (Colo. App. 1985), overruled in Rantz v. Kaufman, 109 P.3d 132 (Colo. 2005).

For the purposes of issue preclusion, a judgment that is still pending on appeal is not final. Rantz v. Kaufman, 109 P.3d 132 (Colo. 2005) (overruling Miller v. Lunnon, 703 P.2d 640 (Colo. App. 1985)).

C.R.C.P. 12(b), provides that, if, on a motion asserting the defense to dismiss for failure of the pleading to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, matters outside the pleading are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in this rule. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

A judgment of dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted may be entered upon a motion for summary judgment. Smith v. Mills, 123 Colo. 11, 225 P.2d 483 (1950); Enger v. Walker Field, Colo. Pub. Airport Auth., 181 Colo. 253, 508 P.2d 1245 (1973).

It is wholly immaterial whether the trial court considers the judgment of dismissal proper under the provisions of C.R.C.P. 12 or this rule, if the defendant was entitled to judgment under either rule. Haigler v. Ingle, 119 Colo. 145, 200 P.2d 913 (1948).

The judgment must specifically disclose the inadequacy of the complaint. Smith v. Mills, 123 Colo. 11, 225 P.2d 483 (1950).

Permission to amend should be given where there is a possibility by amendment of an adequate statement of claim. Smith v. Mills, 123 Colo. 11, 225 P.2d 483 (1950).

A trial court does not err in granting a motion for summary judgment on the ground that the claim made is a compulsory counterclaim which should have been raised in an earlier case and is therefore barred. Visual Factor, Inc. v. Sinclair, 166 Colo. 22, 441 P.2d 643 (1968).

Where no material issue of fact was before the trial court in regard to a specific determination, summary judgment in favor of the defendant was proper. Valenzuela v. Mercy Hosp., 34 Colo. App. 5, 521 P.2d 1287 (1974).

Because the department of health care policy and financing's claim was not time barred and a corrected notice was sent to the estate in time to allow the affected parties a full opportunity to be heard, the estate was not entitled to dismissal of the department's claim on summary judgment. In re Estate of Kochevar, 94 P.3d 1253 (Colo. App. 2004).

Applied in People ex rel. Knott v. City of Montrose, 109 Colo. 487, 126 P.2d 1040 (1942); Klancher v. Anderson, 113 Colo. 478, 158 P.2d 923 (1945); Mitchell v. Town of Eaton, 176 Colo. 473, 491 P.2d 587 (1971); Dominguez v. Babcock, 696 P.2d 338 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 727 P.2d 362 (Colo. 1986); Cain v. Guzman, 761 P.2d 295 (Colo. App. 1988).

IV. MOTION AND PROCEEDINGS.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For comment on Norton v. Dartmouth Skis appearing below, see 34 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 259 (1962). For note, "The Use of Summary Judgment in Colorado", see 34 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 490 (1962).

Provisions inapplicable to summary judgment motions. Because of the drastic nature of summary judgment, provisions under C.R.C.P. 121 § 1-15, concerning confession of motions are inapplicable to motions, for summary judgment under this rule. Seal v. Hart, 755 P.2d 462 (Colo. App. 1988).

When the record is not adequate to permit a conclusion that no material fact dispute exists, the entry of summary judgment is inappropriate. Kral v. Am. Hardware Mut. Ins. Co., 784 P.2d 759 (Colo. 1989).

For conflict between this rule and second judicial district rule 24, which provides that in filing a motion for summary judgment the moving party shall file a memorandum brief in support of the motion and that the adverse party may serve an answer brief within 10 days after service of the movant's brief, but failure to so do is not to be considered as a confession of the motion and which allows for oral argument if a request therefor is endorsed upon the briefs, see Loup-Miller Constr. Co. v. City & County of Denver, 38 Colo. App. 405, 560 P.2d 480 (1976).

Failure to give an opportunity to respond to authority cited in support of or in opposition to a motion is harmless unless prejudice is shown. Benson v. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth., 870 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1994).

Ten-day period is essential. It is essential that in order to avoid surprise and to allow for a full and considered response, the party against whom the motion for summary judgment is directed be allowed the full period in which to serve his affidavits. Jardon v. Meadowbrook-Fairview Metro. Dist., 190 Colo. 528, 549 P.2d 762 (1976) (decided prior to the 1983 amendment).

The 10-day provision in section (c) was inserted in the rule to avoid surprise and to allow for a full and considered response. Cherry v. A-P-A Sports, Inc., 662 P.2d 200 (Colo. App. 1983).

On a motion for summary judgment where no factual issue is present, no motion for new trial is necessary. Brooks v. Zabka, 168 Colo. 265, 450 P.2d 653 (1969).

A motion to reconsider a summary judgment order is properly characterized as a motion for new trial under C.R.C.P. 59(d)(4). Zolman v. Pinnacol Assurance, 261 P.3d 490 (Colo. App. 2011).

A motion under C.R.C.P. 59 is not a prerequisite to appeal from a summary judgment. Valenzuela v. Mercy Hosp., 34 Colo. App. 5, 521 P.2d 1287 (1974).

Nonmovant is entitled to notice of issue regarding which evidence must be introduced to avoid granting of summary judgment; lacking such notice, summary judgment cannot be granted. Wallman v. Kelley, 976 P.2d 330 (Colo. App. 1998); Antelope Co. v. Mobil Rocky Mountain, Inc., 51 P.3d 995 (Colo. App. 2001).

B. Purpose and Effect.

The purpose of a motion for summary judgment is to save litigants the expense and time connected with a trial when, as a matter of law based upon admitted facts, one of the parties cannot prevail. O. C. Kinney, Inc. v. Paul Hardeman, Inc., 151 Colo. 571, 379 P.2d 628 (1963); Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972); People in Interest of F.L.G., 39 Colo. App. 194, 563 P.2d 379 (1977); Ginter v. Palmer & Co., 196 Colo. 203, 585 P.2d 583 (1978); Wright v. Bayly Corp., 41 Colo. App. 313, 587 P.2d 799 (1978).

This rule was designed to enable parties and courts to expedite litigation by avoiding needless trials. In re Bunger v. Uncompahgre Valley Water Users Ass'n, 192 Colo. 159, 557 P.2d 389 (1976); DuBois v. Myers, 684 P.2d 940 (Colo. App. 1984).

The intent and purpose of this rule is that, where the facts are undisputed or so certain as not to be subject to dispute, a court is in position to determine the issue strictly as a matter of law. Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952); Central Bank & Trust Co. v. Robinson, 137 Colo. 409, 326 P.2d 82 (1958); Rogerson v. Rudd, 140 Colo. 548, 345 P.2d 1083 (1959).

Where there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, the issues are properly resolved as matters of law. Enger v. Walker Field, Colo. Pub. Airport Auth., 181 Colo. 253, 508 P.2d 1245 (1973).

The purpose of summary judgment is to permit the parties to pierce the formal allegations of the pleadings and save the time and expense connected with trial when, as a matter of law, based on undisputed facts, one party could not prevail. Peterson v. Halsted, 829 P.2d 373 (Colo. 1992); Graven v. Vail Assocs., Inc., 888 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1994).

No matter how enticing in an area of congested dockets is a device to dispose of cases without the delay and expense of traditional trials with their sometime cumbersome and time consuming characteristics, summary judgment was not devised for, and must not be used as, a substitute for trial. Sullivan v. Davis, 172 Colo. 490, 474 P.2d 218 (1970).

Its wholesome utility is, in advance of trial, to test, not as formerly on bare contentions found in the legal jargon of pleadings, but on the intrinsic merits, whether there is in actuality a real basis for relief or defense. Sullivan v. Davis, 172 Colo. 490, 474 P.2d 218 (1970); Shaw v. Gen. Motors Corp., 727 P.2d 387 (Colo. App. 1986).

A summary judgment denies a litigant the right to trial of his case and should therefore not be granted where there appears any controversy concerning material facts. McCormick v. Diamond Shamrock Corp., 175 Colo. 406, 487 P.2d 1333 (1971); McKinley Constr. Co. v. Dozier, 175 Colo. 397, 487 P.2d 1335 (1971); Mt. Emmons Mining Co. v. Town of Crested Butte, 690 P.2d 231 (Colo. 1984); Smith v. Cutty's Inc., 742 P.2d 347 (Colo. App. 1987).

The summary judgment procedure is not intended to deprive a litigant of the right to trial on the merits of the case. Tamblyn v. City & County of Denver, 118 Colo. 191, 194 P.2d 299 (1948).

When defendants file their motion for summary judgment they admit thereby all facts properly pleaded by plaintiff, as they appeared in the record at that time, but such admissions imputed by law are confined to consideration of such motion only and within the limits of movants' theory of the law of the case. Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952).

C. Evidence and Burden of Proof.

In considering motion for summary judgment, trial court must accept plaintiffs' pleadings as true unless the depositions and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, clearly disclose there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, with any doubts being resolved in plaintiffs' favor. Norton v. Leadville Corp., 43 Colo. App. 527, 610 P.2d 1348 (1979).

On the hearing of a motion for summary judgment the material allegations of the nonmoving party's pleadings must be accepted as true, even in the face of denial by the moving party's pleadings. Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972).

The material allegations of a complaint must be accepted as true even in the face of denials in the answer. Parrish v. De Remer, 117 Colo. 256, 187 P.2d 597 (1947); Tamblyn v. City & County of Denver, 118 Colo. 191, 194 P.2d 299 (1948); Carter v. Thompkins, 133 Colo. 279, 294 P.2d 265 (1956).

There shall be no assessment of credibility of proposed evidence. Neither the trial court nor an appellate court may attempt any assessment of the credibility of proposed evidence in conjunction with a motion for summary judgment. Discovery Land & Dev. Co. v. Colo.-Aspen Dev. Corp., 40 Colo. App. 292, 577 P.2d 1101 (1977).

This rule is properly to be exercised only where the facts are clear and undisputed, leaving as the sole duty of the court the determination of the correct legal principles applicable thereto. Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952); Central Bank & Trust Co. v. Robinson, 137 Colo. 409, 326 P.2d 82 (1958); Rogerson v. Rudd, 140 Colo. 548, 345 P.2d 1083 (1959).

Summary judgment is appropriate only in the clearest of cases, where no doubt exists concerning the facts. Roderick v. City of Colo. Springs, 193 Colo. 104, 563 P.2d 3 (1977).

Summary judgment is appropriate where the admitted facts demonstrate that a party cannot prevail. Kuehn v. Kuehn, 642 P.2d 524 (Colo. App. 1981).

Summary judgment is proper only when there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and when the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Backus v. Apishapa Land & Cattle Co., 44 Colo. App. 59, 615 P.2d 42 (1980); Camacho v. Honda Motor Co., Ltd., 741 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1987), cert. dismissed, 485 U.S. 901, 108 S. Ct. 1067, 99 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1988); W. Am. Ins. Co. v. Baumgartner, 812 P.2d 696 (Colo. App. 1990), cert. granted, judgment vacated, and case remanded to the Colorado court of appeals for reconsideration in light of Hecla Min. Co. v. New Hampshire Ins. Co., 811 P.2d 1083 (Colo. 1991), 812 P.2d 654 (Colo. 1991); Kenna v. Huber, 179 P.3d 189 (Colo. App. 2007), rev'd on other grounds, 205 P.3d 1158 (Colo. 2009); Suss Pontiac-GMC, Inc. v. Boddicker, 208 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2008).

Summary judgment is appropriate in cases where a public official or public figure seeks to recover damages resulting from a defamatory statement. DiLeo v. Koltnow, 200 Colo. 119, 613 P.2d 318 (1980).

Summary judgment is appropriate only when there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. Norton v. Leadville Corp., 43 Colo. App. 527, 610 P.2d 1348 (1979).

Summary judgment is a drastic remedy and is never warranted except on a clear showing that there exists no genuine issue as to any material fact. All doubts as to the existence of such an issue must be resolved against the moving party. Ridgeway v. Kiowa Sch. Dist. C-2, 794 P. 2d 1020 (Colo. App. 1989); Aspen Wilderness Workshop, Inc. v. Colo. Water Conservation Bd., 901 P.2d 1251 (Colo. 1995); Christoph v. Colo. Comm. Corp., 946 P.2d 519 (Colo. App. 1997); Brawner-Ahlstrom v. Husson, 969 P.2d 738 (Colo. App. 1998).

Absence of genuine issue of fact must be apparent. To authorize the granting of summary judgment the complete absence of any genuine issue of fact must be apparent. Hatfield v. Barnes, 115 Colo. 30, 168 P.2d 552 (1946); Koon v. Steffes, 124 Colo. 531, 239 P.2d 310 (1951); Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952); Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972); Halsted v. Peterson, 797 P.2d 801 (Colo. App. 1990), rev'd on other grounds, 829 P.2d 373 (Colo. 1992).

Summary judgment is proper only when the pleadings, affidavits, depositions, or admissions show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Pinder, 812 P.2d 645 (Colo. 1991); Travers v. Rainey, 888 P.2d 372 (Colo. App. 1994); Merkley v. Pittsburgh Corning Corp., 910 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1995); Schultz v. Wells, 13 P.3d 846 (Colo. App. 2000); Vigil v. Franklin, 81 P.3d 1084 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 103 P.3d 322 (Colo. 2004); A.C. Excavating v. Yacht Club II Homeowners Ass'n, 114 P.3d 862 (Colo. 2005).

Summary judgment is proper when the nonmoving party points to unsworn expert reports, C.R.C.P. 26 disclosures, allegations in the pleadings, and arguments of counsel made in its prior motion for summary judgment because these items lack verification and are not competent to dispel the argument that there were no facts to support the allegations. In contrast, the moving party supported their motion with sworn testimony of experts and sworn testimony of the nonmoving party's C.R.C.P. 30(b)(6) designee that had no evidence to support the nonmoving party's claims. D.R.

Horton, Inc. v. D&S Landscaping, LLC, 215 P.3d 1163 (Colo. App. 2008).

"Clear and convincing" standard of proof applies in determining a motion for summary judgment in a libel action brought by a public official or public figure. Pietrafeso v. D.P.I., Inc., 757 P.2d 1113 (Colo. App. 1988).

Where the undisputed evidence permits off-setting inferences, the party against whom a motion for summary judgment is made is entitled to all favorable inferences which may be reasonably drawn from the evidence. O'Herron v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 156 Colo. 164, 397 P.2d 227 (1964).

A motion for summary judgment should be denied if under the evidence reasonable men might reach different conclusions. Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952); O'Herron v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 156 Colo. 164, 397 P.2d 227 (1964); Hasegawa v. Day, 684 P.2d 936 (Colo. App. 1983), overruled on other grounds in Casebolt v. Cowan, 829 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1992); Graven v. Vail Assocs., Inc., 888 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1994).

A summary judgment should never be entered, save in those cases where the movant is entitled to such beyond all doubt, and the facts conceded should show with such clarity the right to a judgment as to leave no room for controversy or debate; they must show affirmatively that plaintiff would not be entitled to recover under any and all circumstances. Smith v. Mills, 123 Colo. 11, 225 P.2d 483 (1946); Discovery Land & Dev. Co. v. Colo.-Aspen Dev. Corp., 40 Colo. App. 292, 577 P.2d 1101 (1977).

In assessing a summary judgment motion a court must view all facts in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, give the nonmoving party the benefit of all favorable inferences that may reasonably be drawn from the evidence, and resolve all doubts as to the existence of a material fact against the moving party. Vigil v. Franklin, 81 P.3d 1084 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 103 P.3d 322 (Colo. 2004).

Summary judgment is proper when movant's direct, positive, and uncontradicted evidence is opposed only by an unsupported contention that a contrary inference from the evidence might be possible. Iowa Nat'l Mut. Ins. Co. v. Boatright, 33 Colo. App. 124, 516 P.2d 439 (1973).

It is error for trial court to treat moving party's factual allegations as true when granting summary judgment. Han Ye Lee v. Colo. Times, Inc., 222 P.3d 957 (Colo. App. 2009).

Determination of propriety of summary judgment. Summary judgment is appropriate only if there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. In determining whether summary judgment is proper, the nonmoving party is entitled to the benefit of all favorable inferences that may reasonably be drawn from the undisputed facts, and all doubts must be resolved against the moving party. Casebolt v. Cowan, 829 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1992); Clementi v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 16 P.3d 223 (Colo. 2000); A.C. Excavating v. Yacht Club II Homeowners Ass'n, 114 P.3d 862 (Colo. 2005); Suss Pontiac-GMC, Inc. v. Boddicker, 208 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2008).

Summary judgment was proper when deeds in question conveyed easements of specified width and set forth legal descriptions of their exact locations. Trial court properly refused to consider extraneous circumstances to vary the explicit terms. Pickens v. Kemper, 847 P.2d 648 (Colo. App. 1993).

Ultimate burden of persuasion in connection with motion for summary judgment always rests on moving party. Continental Air Lines, Inc. v. Keenan, 731 P.2d 708 (Colo. 1987); Kelly v. Central Bank & Trust Co., 794 P.2d 1037 (Colo. App. 1989); Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Pinder, 812 P.2d 645 (Colo. 1991); Boyett v. Smith, 888 P.2d 294 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd, 908 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1995); Aspen Wilderness Workshop, Inc. v. Colo. Water Conservation Bd., 901 P.2d 1251 (Colo. 1995).

The party moving for a summary judgment has the burden of demonstrating clearly the absence of a genuine issue of fact in order to prevail. O'Herron v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 156 Colo. 164, 397 P.2d 227 (1964); Primock v. Hamilton, 168 Colo. 524, 452 P.2d 375 (1969); Ginter v. Palmer & Co., 196 Colo. 203, 585 P.2d 583 (1978); Chambliss/Jenkins Assocs. v. Forster, 650 P.2d 1315 (Colo. App. 1982); Camacho v. Honda Motor Co., Ltd., 741 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1987), cert. dismissed, 485 U.S. 901, 108 S. Ct. 1067, 99 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1988); Murphy v. Dairyland Ins. Co., 747 P.2d 691 (Colo. App. 1987); Brawner-Ahlstrom v. Husson, 969 P.2d 738 (Colo. App. 1998); Schultz v. Wells, 13 P.3d 846 (Colo. App. 2000).

Moving party has initial burden of producing and identifying those portions of record and affidavits that demonstrate the absence of any genuine issue of material fact. Continental Air Lines, Inc. v. Keenan, 731 P.2d 708 (Colo. 1987); Boyett v. Smith, 888 P.2d 294 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd, 908 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1995); Johnston v. Cigna Corp., 916 P.2d 643 (Colo. App. 1996); Brannan Sand & Gravel v. F.D.I.C., 928 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1996), rev'd on other ground, 940 P.2d 393 (Colo. 1997).

Party moving for summary judgment may satisfy initial burden of production by demonstrating that there is absence of evidence in record to support nonmoving party's case, where party moves for summary judgment on issue on which he would not bear ultimate burden of persuasion at trial. Continental Air Lines, Inc. v. Keenan, 731 P.2d 708 (Colo. 1987).

Absent any significant probative evidence to defeat a properly supported motion for summary judgment, discrediting testimony is normally not sufficient to defeat the motion. Kelly v. Central Bank & Trust Co., 794 P.2d 1037 (Colo. App. 1989).

All doubts thereon must be resolved against the moving party. Hatfield v. Barnes, 115 Colo. 30, 168 P.2d 552 (1946); Koon v. Steffes, 124 Colo. 531, 239 P.2d 310 (1951); Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98, 36 A.L.R.2d 874 (1952); Credit Inv. & Loan Co. v. Guaranty Bank & Trust Co., 143 Colo. 393, 353 P.2d 1098 (1960); Primock v. Hamilton, 168 Colo. 524, 452 P.2d 375 (1969); Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972); Roderick v. City of Colo. Springs, 193 Colo. 104, 563 P.2d 3 (1977); Chambliss/Jenkins Assocs. v. Forster, 650 P.2d 1315 (Colo. App. 1982); Tapley v. Golden Big O Tires, 676 P.2d 676 (Colo. 1983); Dominguez v. Babcock, 727 P.2d 362 (Colo. 1986); Banyai v. Arruda, 799 P.2d 441 (Colo. App. 1990); Hauser v. Rose Health Care Sys., 857 P.2d 524 (Colo. App. 1993).

In determining whether summary judgment is proper, the trial court must resolve all doubts as to whether an issue of fact exists against the moving party. Jones v. Dressel, 623 P.2d 370 (Colo. 1981); Ruscitti v. Sackheim, 817 P.2d 1046 (Colo. App. 1991); Johnston v. Cigna Corp., 916 P.2d 643 (Colo. App. 1996); AviComm, Inc. v. Colo. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 955 P.2d 1023 (Colo. 1998); Van Alstyne v. Housing Auth. of City of Pueblo, 985 P.2d 97 (Colo. App. 1999).

Party against whom a motion is made is entitled to all favorable inferences which may reasonably be drawn from the evidence. Halsted v. Peterson, 797 P.2d 801 (Colo. App. 1990), rev'd on other grounds, 829 P.2d 373 (Colo. 1992); Aspen Wilderness Workshop, Inc. v. Colo. Water Conservation Bd., 901 P.2d 1251 (Colo. 1995); Merkley v. Pittsburgh Corning Corp., 910 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1995); Brannan Sand & Gravel v. F.D.I.C., 928 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1996), rev'd on other ground, 940 P.2d 393 (Colo. 1997); AviComm, Inc. v. Colo. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 955 P.2d 1023 (Colo. 1998); Brawner-Ahlstrom v. Husson, 969 P.2d 738 (Colo. App. 1998); Van Alstyne v. Housing Auth. of City of Pueblo, 985 P.2d 97 (Colo. App. 1999).

It is the burden of the moving party to demonstrate the absence of a triable factual issue, and any doubts as to the existence of such an issue must be resolved against that party. Although the party resisting summary judgment is entitled to the benefit of all favorable inferences that may be drawn from the facts presented, the moving party's request must be granted where the facts are undisputed and the opposing party cannot prevail as a matter of law. Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

Once the moving party affirmatively shows specific facts probative of its right to judgment, it becomes necessary for the nonmoving party to set forth facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Durnford v. City of Thornton, 29 Colo. App. 349, 483 P.2d 977 (1971); Fort Collins Motor Homes, Inc. v. City of Ft. Collins, 30 Colo. App. 445, 496 P.2d 1074 (1972); Meyer v. Schwartz, 638 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1981); Buttermore v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 721 P.2d 701 (Colo. App. 1986); Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Pinder, 812 P.2d 645 (Colo. 1991); Ruscitti v. Sackheim, 817 P.2d 1046 (Colo. App. 1991); Snook v. Joyce Homes, Inc., 215 P.3d 1210 (Colo. App. 2009).

Once the movant shows that genuine issues are absent, the burden shifts, and unless the opposing party demonstrates true factual controversy, summary judgment is proper. Heller v. First Nat'l Bank, 657 P.2d 992 (Colo. App. 1982); Pearson v. Sublette, 730 P. 2d 909 (Colo. App. 1986); Snook v. Joyce Homes, Inc., 215 P.3d 1210 (Colo. App. 2009).

Once party moving for summary judgment has met initial burden of production, burden shifts to nonmoving party to establish that there is triable issue of fact. Continental Air Lines, Inc. v. Keenan, 731 P.2d 708 (Colo. 1987); Churchey v. Adolph Coors Co., 759 P.2d 1336 (Colo. 1988); Hauser v. Rose Health Care Sys., 857 P.2d 524 (Colo. App. 1993); Merkley v. Pittsburgh Corning Corp., 910 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1995); Schultz v. Wells, 13 P.3d 846 (Colo. App. 2000).

Burden is on opposing party. Once a movant makes a convincing showing that genuine issues are lacking, this rule requires that the opposing party adequately demonstrate by relevant and specific facts that a real controversy exists. Ginter v. Palmer & Co., 196 Colo. 203, 585 P.2d 583 (1978); Webster v. Mauz, 702 P.2d 297 (Colo. App. 1985); Knittle v. Miller, 709 P.2d 32 (Colo. App. 1985); Closed Basin Landowners' Ass'n v. Rio Grande, 734 P.2d 627 (Colo. 1987).

Only if the moving party meets his burden of establishing that no genuine issue of any material fact exists is a case appropriate for summary judgment, and if the moving party meets his burden, the opposing party may, but is not required to, submit an opposing affidavit; obviously, it is perilous for the opposing party to neither proffer an evidentiary explanation nor file a responsive affidavit. Ginter v. Palmer & Co., 196 Colo. 203, 585 P.2d 583 (1978).

Burden showing that material issue of fact existed was met in an action for principal and interest due on promissory notes where record contained an affidavit of the borrower stating that the bank made representations that the proceeds from second loan made to the borrower would be used to repay the initial loan made to such borrower. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Cassidy, 779 P.2d 1382 (Colo. App. 1989).

In response to a motion for summary judgment, an adverse party must by affidavit or otherwise set forth specific facts showing there is a genuine issue for trial. Brown v. Teitelbaum, 831 P.2d 1081 (Colo. App. 1991); Snook v. Joyce Homes, Inc., 215 P.3d 1210 (Colo. App. 2009).

Sham affidavit doctrine permits a court under certain circumstances to disregard an affidavit submitted by a party in response to a summary judgment motion where that affidavit contradicts the party's previous sworn deposition testimony. Luttgen v. Fischer, 107 P.3d 1152 (Colo. App. 2005).

The sham affidavit doctrine is based on the premise that, had prior deposition testimony been incorrect, the affiant should have corrected the deposition under C.R.C.P. 30(e) and, having not utilized that opportunity, should ordinarily not be allowed to later contradict that testimony simply to survive summary judgment. Luttgen v. Fischer, 107 P.3d 1152 (Colo. App. 2005).

Contradictory affidavits should be considered in light of totality of the circumstances test. Affidavit that directly contradicts affiant's own earlier deposition testimony can be rejected as sham affidavit only if it fails to include an explanation for the contradiction that could be found credible by a reasonable jury. This determination cannot be limited to any set of factors, but must be considered in light of the totality of the circumstances, and such determination is a matter of law to be reviewed de novo. Andersen v. Lindenbaum, 160 P.3d 237 (Colo. 2007).

In determining whether an affidavit presents a sham issue of fact, the court should consider (1) whether the affiant was cross-examined during his or her earlier testimony, (2) whether the affiant had access to the pertinent evidence at the time of his or her earlier testimony or whether the affidavit was based on newly discovered evidence, and (3) whether the earlier testimony reflected confusion which the affidavit attempted to explain. Luttgen v. Fischer, 107 P.3d 1152 (Colo. App. 2005).

Affidavit containing specific factual allegations of widespread practice of systematic denial without justification of worker's compensation claims raises a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the worker's due process rights have been violated. Walter v. City & County of Denver, 983 P.2d 88 (Colo. App. 1998).

Plaintiff's speculation that further discovery may uncover specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial is insufficient. An affirmative showing of specific facts, uncontradicted by any counter affidavits, requires a trial court to conclude that no genuine issue of material fact exists. WRWC, LLC v. City of Arvada, 107 P.3d 1002 (Colo. App. 2004).

Summary judgment inappropriate when burden not met. While a party against whom a summary judgment is sought may take some risk by not submitting controverting affidavits or other evidence, nevertheless, if the moving party's proof does not itself demonstrate the lack of a genuine factual issue, summary judgment is inappropriate. Wolther v. Schaarschmidt, 738 P.2d 25 (Colo. App. 1986).

An affirmative showing of specific facts probative of right to judgment uncontradicted by any counter affidavits submitted leaves a trial court with no alternative but to conclude that no genuine issue of material fact exists. Terrell v. Walter E. Heller & Co., 165 Colo. 463, 439 P.2d 989 (1968); Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Pinder, 812 P.2d 645 (Colo. 1991).

Where no counter affidavit is filed to indicate any genuine issue as to a material fact when the affidavit and depositions clearly disclose that plaintiff's complaint cannot be sustained, then as a matter of law a summary judgment is proper. O. C. Kinney, Inc. v. Paul Hardeman, Inc., 151 Colo. 571, 379 P.2d 628 (1963); Reisig v. Resolution Trust Corp., 806 P.2d 397 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where plaintiff's counter affidavit filed does not touch the facts determinative of the issue of presence for the purpose of service and on this issue as framed by the pleading his reply to defendant's answer and affirmative defenses state the mere legal conclusion that the defendant is outside of the state and not subject to service, no facts are alleged, and summary judgment is proper. Norton v. Dartmouth Skis, Inc., 147 Colo. 436, 364 P.2d 866 (1961).

There is not any material issue of fact to be resolved, where the answer states that the motion to vacate the judgment or for a new trial has not been ruled upon, when subsequent to this statement, there is filed in support of the motion for summary judgment an attorney's affidavit to the effect that the motion had been ruled upon, to which is attached a copy of the order denying said motion, certified by the clerk of the court under the seal of the court to be a true copy of the order as it appears in the records of that court, although had defendant filed a counter affidavit there might remain a real issue. Carter v. Carter, 148 Colo. 495, 366 P.2d 586 (1961).

Failure of party opposing summary judgment to file responsive affidavit does not relieve moving party of burden to establish that summary judgment is appropriate. People v. Hernandez & Assocs., Inc., 736 P.2d 1238 (Colo. App. 1986).

Oral argument not necessary. Trial court did not err in resolving the question on the basis of submitted written arguments. United Bank of Denver v. Ferris, 847 P.2d 146 (Colo. App. 1992).

To prevail on a summary judgment motion on the basis that the statute of limitations had run, the defendant must establish a lack of disputed facts as to when the plaintiff knew or should have known of the alleged fraud. First Interstate Bank v. Berenbaum, 872 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1993).

D. When Motion may be Granted.

A summary judgment may be granted only where there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. Credit Inv. & Loan Co. v. Guaranty Bank & Trust Co., 143 Colo. 393, 353 P.2d 1098 (1960); Lutz v. Miller, 144 Colo. 351, 356 P.2d 242 (1960); City of Westminster v. Church, 167 Colo. 1, 445 P.2d 52 (1968); Pritchard v. Temple, 168 Colo. 555, 452 P.2d 381 (1969); First Nat. Bank v. Lohman, 827 P.2d 583 (Colo. App. 1992); Harless v. Geyer, 849 P.2d 904 (Colo. App. 1992).

To warrant the granting of summary judgment, the situation must be such that no material factual issue remains in the case. Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952); Central Bank & Trust Co. v. Robinson, 137 Colo. 409, 326 P.2d 82 (1958); Rogerson v. Rudd, 140 Colo. 548, 345 P.2d 1083 (1959); Huydts v. Dixon, 199 Colo. 260, 606 P.2d 1303 (1980); Dominguez v. Babcock, 727 P.2d 362 (Colo. 1986); Crouse v. City of Colo. Springs, 766 P.2d 655 (Colo. 1988).

Generally, when presented with a summary judgment issue, a court must decline to enter such a judgment if there exists a genuine dispute over any material fact. Sewell v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 832 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1991).

A summary judgment is a drastic remedy and is never warranted except on a clear showing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. Hatfield v. Barnes, 115 Colo. 30, 168 P.2d 552 (1946); Morland v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952); Credit Inv. & Loan Co. v. Guaranty Bank & Trust Co., 143 Colo. 393, 353 P.2d 1098 (1960); Primock v. Hamilton, 168 Colo. 524, 452 P.2d 375 (1969); Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972); Ginter v. Palmer & Co., 196 Colo. 203, 585 P.2d 583 (1978); Wright v. Bayly Corp., 41 Colo. App. 313, 587 P.2d 799 (1978); Ams. United for Separation of Church & State Fund, Inc. v. State, 648 P.2d 1072 (Colo. 1982); Hasegawa v. Day, 684 P.2d 936 (Colo. App. 1983), overruled on other grounds in Casebolt v. Cowan, 829 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1992); Closed Basin Landowners' Ass'n v. Rio Grande, 734 P.2d 627 (Colo. 1987); Wayda v. Comet Intern. Corp., 738 P.2d 391 (Colo. App. 1987); Kral v. Am. Hardware Mut. Ins. Co., 784 P.2d 759 (1989); Moore & Assocs. Realty, Inc. v. Arrowhead at Vail, 892 P.2d 367 (Colo. App. 1994); Crystal Homes, Inc. v. Radetsky, 895 P.2d 1179 (Colo. App. 1995); Brannan Sand & Gravel v. F.D.I.C., 928 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1996), rev'd on other ground, 940 P.2d 393 (Colo. 1997); Lazy Dog Ranch v. Telluray Ranch Corp., 948 P.2d 74 (Colo. App. 1997); Terrones v. Tapia, 967 P.2d 216 (Colo. App. 1998); Clementi v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 16 P.3d 223 (Colo. 2000); Lewis v. Emil Clayton Plumbing Co., 25 P.3d 1254 (Colo. App. 2000).

Summary judgment is a drastic remedy and is only warranted upon a clear showing that no genuine issue of material fact exists and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Bailey v. Clausen, 557 P.2d 1207 (Colo. 1976); Pueblo West Metro. Dist. v. Southeastern Colo. Water Conservancy Dist., 689 P.2d 594 (Colo. 1984); Churchey v. Adolph Coors Co., 759 P.2d 1336 (Colo. 1988); Greenwood Trust Co. v. Conley, 938 P.2d 1141 (Colo. 1997); Van Alstyne v. Housing Auth. of City of Pueblo, 985 P.2d 97 (Colo. App. 1999); Waskel v. Guar. Nat'l Corp., 23 P.3d 1214 (Colo. App. 2000); Goodwin v. Thieman, 74 P.3d 526 (Colo. App. 2003).

Summary judgment is a drastic remedy and should be granted only where the evidential and legal prerequisites are clearly established. Gleason v. Guzman, 623 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1981).

Where a factual issue has been raised as to a material fact, the matter should not have been disposed of by summary judgment. Brodie v. Mastro, 638 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1981).

A "genuine issue" cannot be raised by counsel simply by means of argument, be it before the trial court or on appeal; certainly the spirit of this rule suggests that if a party really contends that the area in question has in fact been roped off by proper authorities he has the duty to inform the trial court in the manner provided by this rule concerning summary judgments, and not to merely attempt to present the issue by hypothetical argument. Sullivan v. Davis, 172 Colo. 490, 474 P.2d 218 (1970); Schultz v. Wells, 13 P.3d 846 (Colo. App. 2000).

Trial court has discretion to enter summary judgment simultaneously with denying nonmovant's request for discovery. Section (f) neither requires nor prohibits collapsing the rulings; therefore, the trial court has discretion. The ruling may be reviewed under the abuse of discretion standard. Bailey v. Airgas-Intermtn., Inc., 250 P.3d 746 (Colo. App. 2010).

Where there is no disputed material issue of fact regarding insurance company's duty to defend individual in a civil action because the claims are cast entirely within the insurance policy exclusions, summary judgment is appropriate. Nikolai v. Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins., 830 P.2d 1070 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where the proceedings have indicated that a genuine issue exists, the supreme court has consistently rejected appealing shortcuts, even though it is likely that on a trial the trier will resolve the disputed issues as one of fact in the same manner as when thought to have been one of law alone, and the supreme court just as consistently rejected any notions that pretense or apparent formal controversy can thwart applications of this rule or hamstring the court in determining whether it is a proper case for it. Sullivan v. Davis, 172 Colo. 490, 474 P.2d 218 (1970).

Moving party must be entitled to summary judgment as matter of law. A party is entitled to a summary judgment when there are pleadings, affidavits, depositions, or admissions on file showing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. O. C. Kinney, Inc. v. Paul Hardeman, Inc., 151 Colo. 571, 379 P.2d 628 (1963); Durnford v. City of Thornton, 29 Colo. App. 349, 483 P.2d 977 (1971); In re Estate of Mall v. Father Flanagan's Boys' Home, 30 Colo. App. 296, 491 P.2d 614 (1971); Fort Collins Motor Homes, Inc. v. City of Ft. Collins, 30 Colo. App. 445, 496 P.2d 1074 (1972); Van Schaack v. Phipps, 38 Colo. App. 140, 558 P.2d 581 (1976)); Chambliss/Jenkins Assocs. v. Forster, 650 P.2d 1315 (Colo. App. 1982).

Entry of summary judgment under this rule is proper where there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. In re Bunger v. Uncompahgre Valley Ass'n, 192 Colo. 159, 557 P.2d 389 (1976); Koch v. Sadler, 759 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 1988); Cung La v. State Farm Auto Ins. Co., 830 P.2d 1007 (Colo. 1992); Suss Pontiac-GMC, Inc. v. Boddicker, 208 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2008).

When a party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law, summary judgment is proper. Happy Canyon Inv. Co. v. Title Ins. Co., 38 Colo. App. 385, 560 P.2d 839 (1976).

A summary judgment is proper only where there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, which may be indicated by the pleadings, affidavits, depositions, and/or admissions, and where the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Bailey v. Clausen, 192 Colo. 297, 557 P.2d 1207 (1976); Pearson v. Sublette, 730 P.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1986); Krane v. Saint Anthony Hosp. Sys., 738 P.2d 75 (Colo. App. 1987).

The phrase "as a matter of law", as used in section (c), contains no distinction between legal and equitable principles, so, if there is no question concerning material facts, and the only contention arises over the application of a rule of law, whether ''legal'' or ''equitable'' in nature, a summary judgment may be entered. Linch v. Game & Fish Comm'n, 124 Colo. 79, 234 P.2d 611 (1951).

Material fact defined. In the context of a summary judgment proceeding, an issue of material fact is one, the resolution of which will affect the outcome of the case. Krane v. Saint Anthony Hosp. Sys., 738 P.2d 75 (Colo. App. 1987).

Where there is no genuine issue of material fact in dispute, summary judgment is proper. Varela v. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co., 31 Colo. App. 49, 499 P.2d 1206 (1972); Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972).

A summary judgment is proper, even when factual matters are involved, if the record indicates that the factual matters are not in dispute. Edwards v. Price, 191 Colo. 46, 550 P.2d 856 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1056, 97 S. Ct. 778, 50 L. Ed. 2d 773 (1977).

Where there is no genuine issue of any material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, summary judgment is warranted. Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

Where the pleadings and the deposition clearly show that as a matter of law one is not entitled to the relief he seeks, then, under such circumstances, it was proper for the court to grant summary judgment. Goeddel v. Aircraft Fin., Inc., 152 Colo. 419, 382 P.2d 812 (1963).

Unless the depositions and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, clearly disclose that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, as a matter of law, the summary judgment should be entered. Parrish v. De Remer, 117 Colo. 256, 187 P.2d 597 (1947); Carter v. Thompkins, 133 Colo. 279, 294 P.2d 265 (1956); Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972).

Summary judgment was properly issued where briefs contained sufficient information upon which the judge could base his decision, even though the hearing did not address all of the issues before the court. Lane v. Arkansas Valley Publ'g Co., 675 P.2d 747 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1252, 104 S. Ct. 3534, 82 L. Ed. 2d 840 (1984).

Issuance of summary judgment after a hearing that was held within eight days of filing of motion and after parent's offer of proof as to what he would state in opposing affidavits comported with the rule that permits a party to file opposing affidavits within fifteen days. People in Interest of B.M., 738 P.2d 45 (Colo. App. 1987).

It is also proper where plaintiff failed to file a responsive brief or obtain additional time to file and never acted to postpone ruling or to indicate that he intended to challenge the facts submitted by the defendant prior to the court's ruling on the motion. Ceconi v. Geosurveys, Inc., 682 P.2d 68 (Colo. App. 1984); Buttermore v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 721 P.2d 701 (Colo. App. 1986).

Proximate cause deemed "matter of law" only in clearest cases. Proximate cause is a "matter of law" for the court only in the clearest cases when the facts are undisputed and it is plain that all intelligent persons can draw but one inference from them. Moon v. Platte Valley Bank, 634 P.2d 1036 (Colo. App. 1981).

If scope and interpretation of insurance policy language, which is question of law, is dispositive of claim, summary judgment of dismissal is justified. W. Am. Ins. Co. v. Baumgartner, 812 P.2d 696 (Colo. App. 1990), cert. granted, judgment vacated, and case remanded to the Colorado court of appeals for reconsideration in light of Hecla Min. Co. v. New Hampshire Ins. Co., 811 P.2d 1083 (Colo. 1991), 812 P.2d 654 (Colo. 1991).

Summary judgment on claim of negligent infliction of emotional distress proper where no proof of physical injury and plaintiff not in zone of danger. Card v. Blakeslee, 937 P.2d 846 (Colo. App. 1996).

E. When Motion Should be Denied.

Trial courts should not grant motions or deny a trial where there is the slightest doubt. Trial courts should exercise great care in granting motions for summary judgment, and should not deny a litigant a trial where there is the slightest doubt as to the facts. Smith v. Mills, 123 Colo. 11, 225 P.2d 483 (1950).

Factual question raised by expert precludes summary judgment. Where a plaintiff in an automobile product liability action presents an expert who raises a factual question about the reasonableness of the defendant manufacturer's design strategies, the drastic remedy of summary judgment is improper, and the issue of whether the design of the car involved in the accident unreasonably increased the risks of injury by collision should be presented to the jury. Roberts v. May, 41 Colo. App. 82, 583 P.2d 305 (1978); Camacho v. Honda Motor Co., Ltd., 741 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1987), cert. dismissed, 485 U.S. 901, 108 S. Ct. 1067, 99 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1988).

Where a plaintiff in a medical malpractice action presents an expert who raises a factual question about the probability of a heart attack, the issue should be presented to the jury. Sharp v. Kaiser Found. Health Plan, 710 P.2d 1153 (Colo. App. 1985), aff'd, 741 P.2d 714 (Colo. 1987).

A litigant is entitled to have disputed facts determined by trial, and it is only in the clearest of cases, where no doubt exists concerning the facts, that a summary judgment is warranted. Moses v. Moses, 180 Colo. 397, 505 P.2d 1302 (1973).

It was error for trial court to grant summary judgment when a material question of fact existed with respect to whether petitioner was denied the opportunity to call a witness with information relevant to his defense. People v. Diaz, 862 P.2d 1031 (Colo. App. 1993).

Potential existence of conspiracy to defraud bankrupt company's judgment creditor should have precluded issuance of summary judgment. Magin v. DVCO Fuel Sys. Inc., 981 P.2d 673 (Colo. App. 1999).

If any doubt resides in the mind of the court after a consideration of the motion, its resolution must be against the motion. O'Herron v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 156 Colo. 164, 397 P.2d 227 (1964).

If reasonable persons might reach different conclusions or might draw different inferences from uncontroverted facts, summary judgment should be denied. Halsted v. Peterson, 797 P.2d 801 (Colo. App. 1990), rev'd on other grounds, 829 P.2d 373 (Colo. 1992).

Because reasonable persons could disagree as to whether any reasonable use exists for property rezoned from light industrial to agricultural use, summary judgment is not appropriate. Jafay v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Boulder County, 848 P.2d 892 (Colo. 1993).

Summary judgment should not be granted in case of doubt. Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972).

Even where it is extremely doubtful that a genuine issue of fact exists, summary judgment is not appropriate. Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972).

The question of foreseeability in the context of the legal issue of duty remains a disputed factual issue, if differing factual inferences may be drawn from the evidence, making the entry of summary judgment improper. Sewell v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 832 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where there exists a genuine issue as to a very material fact which must be determined, a motion for summary judgment should be denied. Tamblyn v. City & County of Denver, 118 Colo. 191, 194 P.2d 299 (1948).

Where there is an issue as to whether a doctor, who admittedly knew of the high risk of scarring to a particular patient, knowingly concealed that information from the patient, a material issue of fact remains such that summary judgment is inappropriate. Brodie v. Mastro, 638 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1981).

Summary judgment may not be entered if genuine issues of material fact remain for resolution. Smith v. Hoffman, 656 P.2d 1327 (Colo. App. 1982).

It is elementary that summary judgment may not be granted where unresolved genuine issues of material facts remain for determination. Rogerson v. Rudd, 140 Colo. 548, 345 P.2d 1083 (1959).

A trial court acts precipitously in granting a motion for summary judgment where there are genuine issues as to several material facts. Pritchard v. Temple, 168 Colo. 555, 452 P.2d 381 (1969).

Where issues remain to be adjudicated, it is error to enter a summary judgment. Harvey v. Morris, 148 Colo. 489, 367 P.2d 352 (1961).

Where it is perfectly clear from the pleadings and interrogatories and the answers thereto that there is a genuine issue, it is error to enter summary judgment. McCormick v. Diamond Shamrock Corp., 175 Colo. 406, 487 P.2d 1333 (1971).

Where evidence showed that management fired whistle blower in retaliation for whistle blowing, grant of summary judgment dismissing wrongful discharge claim reversed and remanded despite employer's conflicting evidence. Webster v. Konczak Corp., 976 P.2d 317 (Colo. App. 1998).

Where an issue of fact is raised which is not determinable on affidavits and answers to interrogatories propounded, a motion for summary judgment should be denied. Hatfield v. Barnes, 115 Colo. 30, 168 P.2d 552 (1946).

Summary judgment is usually inappropriate in cases dealing with potentially unconstitutional motivations. Because evidence concerning motive is almost always subject to a variety of conflicting interpretations, a full trial on the merits is normally the only way to separate permissible motivations from those that merely mask unconstitutional actions. Ridgeway v. Kiowa Sch. Dist. C-2, 794 P. 2d 1020 (Colo. App. 1989).

In light of the various defenses in defendants' answer which raise genuine issues of material fact, a trial court is correct in denying the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment against the defendants. Credit Inv. & Loan Co. v. Guaranty Bank & Trust Co., 166 Colo. 471, 444 P.2d 633 (1968).

Defenses based on business judgment rule and denial of harm to corporation precluded summary judgment in case involving unlawful distribution of corporate assets. Such assertions only emphasize that there are disputed issues of material fact. Polk v. Hergert Land & Cattle Co., 5 P.3d 402 (Colo. App. 2000).

When defendants' motion for summary judgment is overruled, their admission of facts under their legal theory terminates, and it is error for a trial court to give any consideration thereto in connection with its determination of plaintiff's motion. This leaves plaintiff's motion for summary judgment completely unsupported by anything except such as it had itself placed in the record, and which definitely discloses uncertainty of fact and disputable issues for trial. Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952).

It does not follow that, merely because each side moves for a summary judgment, there is no issue of material fact, for, although a defendant may, on his own motion, assert that, accepting his legal theory, the facts are undisputed, he may be able and should always be allowed to show that, if plaintiff's legal theory be adopted, a genuine dispute as to a material fact exists. Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952).

The fact that each side in moving for summary judgment in his or its favor, respectively, asserts that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact does not necessarily make it so, and does not bar the court from determining otherwise. Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952).

An arbitration clause providing arbitration of certain issues only does not mean that the parties cannot agree to submit to arbitration other matters in dispute between them, even though the contract does not require it, and so, where it is impossible to tell whether the defenses were actually submitted for arbitration, a trial court is in error in summarily striking these defenses from the answer filed in the arbitration proceeding and on such basis improvidently granting summary judgment. Int'l Serv. Ins. Co. v. Ross, 169 Colo. 451, 457 P.2d 917 (1969).

Summary judgment improper if record inadequate. Where the record has not been adequately developed on a material factual issue, summary judgment is not proper. Moore v. 1600 Downing St., Ltd., 668 P.2d 16 (Colo. App. 1983); Mt. Emmons Mining Co. v. Town of Crested Butte, 690 P.2d 231 (Colo. 1984).

Where it could not be said as a matter of law that plaintiffs' remedy at law would be adequate to compensate them for the loss suffered, the granting of summary judgment was improper. Benson v. Nelson, 725 P.2d 71 (Colo. App. 1986).

Where the moving party filed only a general denial to plaintiff's complaint, summary judgment was improper. Shaw v. Gen. Motors Corp., 727 P.2d 387 (Colo. App. 1986).

Summary judgment in an action for principal and interest due on promissory notes was improper where the determination as to the appropriate primary interest rate could not be made on the face of promissory notes, the motion lacked supporting documentation regarding such rate, and the moving party's supporting brief stating the amount claimed as interest was not verified. Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Cassidy, 779 P.2d 1382 (Colo. App. 1989).

Summary judgment was improperly granted when ambiguity in preemptive clause in contract could be resolved by extrinsic evidence showing the intent of the parties and that parties understood their rights and obligations under said clause. Polemi v. Wells, 759 P.2d 796 (Colo. App. 1988).

Reinsurers were not entitled to summary judgment based only on interinsurance exchange's inability to produce actual reinsurance certificates, where affidavit and computer printout indicating serial number of each reinsurance certificate, name of subscriber, period of insurance, and premium charged were based on admissible facts. Benham v. Pryke, 703 P.2d 644 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 744 P.2d 67 (Colo. 1987).

A question of fact remained on claim to quiet title where § 38-41-116 allowed purchaser to bring an action to enforce any right or title he may have under a contract within ten years from the date of delivery of general warranty deed and parties intent concerning when delivery of the deed was to take place required determination. Bent v. Ferguson, 791 P.2d 1241 (Colo. App. 1990).

A question of fact remained on claim concerning entitlement to royalty payments from the production and sale of natural gas. Westerman v. Rogers, 1 P.3d 228 (Colo. App. 1999).

F. Responsibility of Court.

In passing upon a motion for summary judgment, it is no part of the court's function to decide issues of fact but solely to determine whether there is an issue of fact to be tried. Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952).

Any issue of fact must be determined by the court or jury at a trial and should not be determined by the court on a motion for summary judgment. Primock v. Hamilton, 168 Colo. 524, 452 P.2d 375 (1969); Meyer v. Schwartz, 638 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1981).

The fact that both parties make motions for summary judgment, and each contends in support of his respective motion that no genuine issue of fact exists, does not require the court to rule that no fact issue exists. Each, in support of his own motion, may be willing to concede certain contentions of his opponent, which concession, however, is only for the purpose of the pending motion. If the motion is overruled, the concession is no longer effective. Appellants' concession that no genuine issue of fact existed was made in support of their own motion for summary judgment. The concession does not continue over into the supreme court's separate consideration of appellee's motion for summary judgment in his behalf after appellants' motion was overruled. Morlan v. Durland Trust Co., 127 Colo. 5, 252 P.2d 98 (1952).

It was an abuse of discretion for trial court to fail to rule on the defendants' motion for extension of time until the date summary judgment motion in favor of plaintiff was granted, at which time, the court denied defendants' motion for extension of time. Pursell v. Hull, 708 P.2d 490 (Colo. App. 1985).

Trial court did not abuse discretion by ruling on summary judgment motion when motion to compel was pending. Card v. Blakeslee, 937 P.2d 846 (Colo. App. 1996).

G. Review.

On appeal of a grant of summary judgment, where there was no testimony taken in the case, the reviewing court must determine the posture of the case as it went before the trial judge on the basis of the pleadings, the affidavits, interrogatories, and answers thereto, and the depositions which are in the record. McKinley Constr. Co. v. Dozier, 175 Colo. 397, 487 P.2d 1335 (1971).

Following denial of motion for summary judgment, failure to renew motion at the close of the evidence operates as a waiver of the summary judgment motion and precludes appellate review. Feiger, Collison & Killmer v. Jones, 926 P.2d 1244 (Colo. 1996).

A stipulation that, if review is sought by any party, the procedure of considering and determining the legal issue upon a motion for summary judgment will not be assigned as a ground of error does not preclude plaintiffs in error from urging that the contents of a deposition could not be used on review as a basis for determining legality of a trust agreement. Denver Nat'l Bank v. Brecht, 137 Colo. 88, 322 P.2d 667 (1958).

Review of judgment granting a motion for summary judgment is de novo. Aspen Wilderness Workshop, Inc. v. Colo. Water Conservation Bd., 901 P.2d 1251 (Colo. 1995); Brawner-Ahlstrom v. Husson, 969 P.2d 738 (Colo. App. 1998); Van Alstyne v. Housing Auth. of City of Pueblo, 985 P.2d 97 (Colo. App. 1999); A.C. Excavating v. Yacht Club II Homeowners Ass'n, 114 P.3d 862 (Colo. 2005); Meyerstein v. City of Aspen, 282 P.3d 456 (Colo. App. 2011).

An order denying motion for summary judgment is interlocutory and not subject to review. Trans Cent. Airlines v. McBreen & Assocs., 31 Colo. App. 71, 497 P.2d 1033 (1972); Manuel v. Ft. Collins Newspapers, Inc., 631 P.2d 1114 (Colo. 1981); Banyai v. Arruda, 799 P.2d 441, (Colo. App. 1990); Feiger, Collison & Killmer v. Jones, 926 P.2d 1244 (Colo. 1996).

No review of summary judgment denial after trial on merits. A trial court's denial of a motion for summary judgment may not be considered on appeal from a final judgment entered after a trial on the merits. Manuel v. Fort Collins Newspapers, Inc., 631 P.2d 1114 (Colo. 1981).

In order to preserve an issue raised by summary judgment for appeal, the party asserting the argument must make a motion for directed verdict or for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Failure to do so operates as an abandonment, and therefore a waiver, and the issue cannot then be reviewed on appeal. Feiger, Collison & Killmer v. Jones, 926 P.2d 1244 (Colo. 1996); Karg v. Mitchek, 983 P.2d 21 (Colo. App. 1998); Davis v. GuideOne Mut. Ins. Co., 2012 COA 70M, 297 P.3d 950.

In reviewing the propriety of a summary judgment, an appellate court must apply the principle that the moving party has the burden of establishing the lack of a triable factual issue, and all doubts as to the existence of such an issue must be resolved against the moving party. Churchey v. Adolph Coors Co., 759 P.2d 1336 (Colo. 1988); Peterson v. Halsted, 829 P.2d 373 (Colo. 1992); Graven v. Vail Assocs., Inc., 888 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1994).

Section (c) is the applicable standard of review to be applied by an administrative law judge when ruling upon a motion for summary judgment in a workers' compensation claim. Fera v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 169 P.3d 231 (Colo. App. 2007).

Standard of review is de novo for motion for a determination of law. A determination is proper if there is no genuine issue of material fact necessary to determine the question. Patterson v. BP Am. Prod. Co., 2015 COA 28, 360 P.3d 211.

H. Illustrations.

If differing factual inferences may be drawn from the evidence, the question of foreseeability remains a disputed factual issue, and the entry of summary judgment in such circumstances is improper. Sewell v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 832 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1991).

Section (c) authorizes a trial court to enter a decree for specific performance of a contract upon motion for a summary judgment over the objection that a summary judgment can only be granted in an action at law, as technically distinguished from an equitable proceeding. Linch v. Game & Fish Comm'n, 124 Colo. 79, 234 P.2d 611 (1951).

Court erred in granting summary judgment in negligence case where evidence presented material issue of fact as to whether a defendant water district assumed a duty to have water available for the plaintiff's lumberyard located outside of said district's boundaries; the water district placed a fire hydrant at the said lumberyard upon the fire district's request specifically for the protection of the lumber company. Wheatridge Lumber Co. v. Valley Water Dist., 790 P.2d 874 (Colo. App. 1989).

Generally, the issue of a party's intent is a question of fact, and is not an appropriate issue for summary disposition. Wolther v. Schaarschmidt, 738 P.2d 25 (Colo. App. 1986).

Whether an actor owes a duty of due care to another is a question of law for resolution by the court. Sewell v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 832 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1991).

A motion for summary judgment based upon an assertion of the lack of existence of a duty of due care is to be subjected to the same standard as is any other motion for summary judgment; hence, if the record evidence is insufficient to allow the court to determine the question of foreseeability as a matter of law, such motion must be denied. Sewell v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 832 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1991).

Material question of fact whether employee hired for indefinite term could be terminated at will precluded entry of summary judgment for employee in wrongful discharge action, where employee manual outlined termination procedures that employer proposed to follow, and employee allegedly received copy of manual either at start or during course of employment. Continental Air Lines, Inc. v. Keenan, 731 P.2d 708 (Colo. 1987).

Summary judgment was properly denied where plaintiff's evidence failed to show the existence of a right of employment or protected contractual rights that were violated by the defendant's action and the evidence was insufficient to overcome the defendants' claim of qualified immunity. Wilkerson v. State, 830 P.2d 1121 (Colo. App. 1992).

Defendant entitled to summary judgment on claim of negligent hiring since evidence was insufficient to satisfy the test set forth in Connes v. Molalla Transport Sys., Inc. Spencer v. United Mortg. Co., 857 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1993).

A living trust is valid and binding as against a motion for summary judgment where such does not disclose within its four corners that it is sham or an abortive attempt on the part of a settlor to evade the statute of wills. Denver Nat'l Bank v. Brecht, 137 Colo. 88, 322 P.2d 667 (1958).

Where trial court found that failure to pay entire bonus as specified in top lease of mineral estate defeated the entire agreement, there was no genuine issue of material fact and the trial court properly quieted title to mineral interest in plaintiffs. Sohio Petroleum Co. v. Grynberg, 757 P.2d 1125 (Colo. App. 1988).

Issue of whether contract is adhesion contract does not preclude entry of summary judgment in the absence of any genuine issue of material fact. Jones v. Dressel, 623 P.2d 370 (Colo. App. 1981).

Summary judgment was appropriate in case involving dismissal, for academic reasons, of student from university clinical program where the evidence submitted detailed the grounds for discharge and no evidence was submitted that the procedure applied departed from accepted academic norms. Dillingham v. Univ. of Colo., Bd. of Regents, 790 P.2d 851 (Colo. App. 1989).

Summary judgment was appropriate in case involving failing grade of student in pediatrics course necessary to complete junior year where student failed to demonstrate that failing grade was given for any reason other than his unsatisfactory academic performance. Davis v. Regis Coll., Inc., 830 P.2d 1098 (Colo. App. 1991).

Civil service commission was entitled to judgment as a matter of law restricting access to examination results where person requesting access presented no evidence disputing the factual issue of whether substantial injury to the public interest would result if the information were not restricted under § 24-72-204 (6). Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Pinder, 812 P.2d 645 (Colo. 1991).

Where there is no disputed material issue of fact regarding insurance company's duty to defend individual in a civil action because the claims are cast entirely within the insurance policy exclusions, summary judgment is appropriate. Nikolai v. Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins., 830 P.2d 1070 (Colo. App. 1991).

Summary judgment is appropriate where insurance company met its burden by submitting affidavits establishing that it did not engage in intentional conduct probative of waiver and insured failed to raise a genuine issue of disputed fact by refuting the showing. Nikolai v. Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co., 830 P.2d 1070 (Colo. App. 1991).

Summary judgment improperly granted when there existed a material question of fact as to whether petitioner's use of or presence in vehicle was causally related to injuries incurred and therefore covered under automobile insurance policy. Cung La v. State Farm Auto. Ins. Co., 830 P.2d 1007 (Colo. 1992).

Summary judgment improperly granted when the doctrine of collateral estoppel improperly applied. Bebo Constr. Co. v. Mattox & O'Brien, 990 P.2d 78 (Colo. 1999).

Record established defendant's entitlement to summary judgment on claims of trespass and breach of deed of trust and plaintiff not entitled to compensation for items allegedly stolen by defendant's agent since agent was not acting within the scope of his employment at the time of the theft. Spencer v. United Mortg. Co., 857 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1993).

Defendant entitled to summary judgment on claim for outrageous conduct where plaintiff failed to establish a sufficient basis for such claim. Spencer v. United Mortg. Co., 857 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1993).

Summary judgment based on qualified immunity was properly denied where plaintiff children pled facts necessary to establish a violation of a clearly established constitutional right in support of a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim against county department of social services employees regarding the employees' placement and adoption decisions. Shirk v. Forsmark, 2012 COA 3, 272 P.3d 1118.

I. Continuance for Discovery.

Under section (f), an abuse of discretion may result when the court refuses to grant a party a reasonable continuance to permit use of discovery procedures as provided by the rules of civil procedure and when it is premature to grant a motion for summary judgment. Miller v. First Nat. Bank, 156 Colo. 358, 399 P.2d 99 (1965); Holland v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 883 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where plaintiff had a reasonable period within which to conduct discovery and was given reasonable notice that no further extensions of time would be granted, summary judgment was proper. Holland v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 883 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1994).

It is not an abuse of discretion to deny a section (f) request where movant has failed to demonstrate that the proposed discovery is necessary and could produce facts that would preclude summary judgment. Henisse v. First Transit, Inc., 220 P.3d 980 (Colo. App. 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 247 P.3d 577 (Colo. 2011).

V. CASE NOT FULLY ADJUDICATED.

Under section (d) of this rule, a court may grant a partial summary judgment as to material facts existing without substantial controversy and reserve disputed facts for subsequent proceedings. City of Westminster v. Church, 167 Colo. 1, 445 P.2d 52 (1968); Hauser v. Rose Health Care Sys., 857 P.2d 524 (Colo. App. 1993).

By its terms, section (d) involves an adjudication of less than the entire action, and consequently, a disposition pursuant to this rule does not purport to be a final judgment. Instead, a trial court remains free to reconsider an earlier partial summary judgment ruling absent the entry of judgment under C.R.C.P. 54(b). Forbes v. Goldenhersh, 899 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where summary judgment order reserved until trial on all issues other than the amount of admitted liability, and one of these issues would be the amount of interest to be awarded, plaintiff properly raised the question of interest in its motion to amend the judgment. Kwal Paints, Inc. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 34 Colo. App. 74, 525 P.2d 471 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 66, 536 P.2d 1136 (1975).

Partial summary judgment affirmed. Certified Indem. Co. v. Thompson, 180 Colo. 341, 505 P.2d 962 (1973); Werkmeister v. Robinson Dairy, Inc., 669 P.2d 1042 (Colo. App. 1983).

Court abused its discretion in refusing to reconsider and vacate partial summary judgment in favor of one of several defendants where, following defendant's belated production of a key document, an issue as to a material fact was seen to arise. Halter v. Waco Scaffolding & Equip. Co., 797 P.2d 790 (Colo. App. 1990).

VI. FORM OF AFFIDAVITS.

This rule permits a motion for a summary judgment with or without supporting affidavits. O. C. Kinney, Inc. v. Paul Hardeman, Inc., 151 Colo. 571, 379 P.2d 628 (1963); Johnson v. Mountain Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 162 Colo. 474, 426 P.2d 962 (1967).

Although the party moving for a summary judgment has the burden of showing that he is entitled to judgment, still, it has always been perilous for an opposing party neither to proffer any evidentiary explanatory material nor file a section (f) affidavit. Sullivan v. Davis, 172 Colo. 490, 474 P.2d 218 (1970).

Although it may be risky for a party not to respond to a motion for summary judgment, the absence of a response does not relieve the moving party of its burden to establish that summary judgment is appropriate. USA Leasing, Inc. v. Montelongo, 25 P.3d 1277 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where an affidavit is filed by plaintiff's attorney rather than a witness and does not affirmatively show that the attorney has personal knowledge of the relevant facts, the requirements of section (e) are not met. USA Leasing, Inc. v. Montelongo, 25 P.3d 1277 (Colo. App. 2001).

An affidavit that sets forth only a conclusory assertion without factual allegations to support it does not meet the requirements of section (e). USA Leasing, Inc. v. Montelongo, 25 P.3d 1277 (Colo. App. 2001); Burton v. Colo. Access, 2015 COA 111, __ P.3d __, aff'd on other grounds, 2018 CO 11, 428 P.3d 208, cert. denied sub nom. Olivar v. Pub. Serv. Emple. Credit Union, __ U.S. __, 139 S. Ct. 87, 202 L. Ed. 2d 26 (2018).

A litigant by merely asserting a fact, without any evidence to support it, cannot avoid a summary disposition of his case. Norton v. Dartmouth Skis, Inc., 147 Colo. 436, 364 P.2d 866 (1961).

Particularly on such issues as good faith, intent, and purpose, the bald declaration of a party by affidavit is not sufficient to resolve the issue in the face of a pleaded denial, and a motion for summary judgment should be denied. Hatfield v. Barnes, 115 Colo. 30, 168 P.2d 552 (1946).

A "genuine issue" cannot be raised by counsel simply by means of argument, be it before the trial court or on appeal; certainly the spirit of this rule suggests that if a party really contends that the area in question has in fact been roped off by proper authorities he has the duty to inform the trial court in the manner provided by this rule concerning summary judgments, and not to merely attempt to present the issue by hypothetical argument. Sullivan v. Davis, 172 Colo. 490, 474 P.2d 218 (1970).

A "genuine issue" cannot be raised by counsel simply by means of argument. People in Interest of F.L.G., 39 Colo. App. 194, 563 P.2d 379 (1977).

Argument of counsel alone cannot create a factual issue. Ginter v. Palmer & Co., 39 Colo. App. 221, 566 P.2d 1358 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 196 Colo. 203, 585 P.2d 583 (1978).

The purpose of a motion for summary judgment would be defeated if at a hearing on such motion oral argument and the taking of testimony were allowed as a matter of right. People in Interest of F.L.G., 39 Colo. App. 194, 563 P.2d 379 (1977).

In a breach of contract proceeding, a party seeking damages for future lost profits must establish with reasonable, but not necessarily mathematical, certainty both the fact of the injury and the amount of the loss. Terrones v. Tapia, 967 P.2d 216 (Colo. App. 1998).

In summary judgment proceeding in a breach of contract action, a party seeking damages for future lost profits must present sufficient evidence to compute a fair approximation of future loss. Terrones v. Tapia, 967 P.2d 216 (Colo. App. 1998).

A court may enter summary judgment precluding recovery for lost profits if a plaintiff offers only speculation or conjecture to establish damages. Terrones v. Tapia, 967 P.2d 216 (Colo. App. 1998).

When a movant makes out a convincing showing that genuine issues of fact are lacking, it is required that the adversary adequately demonstrate by receivable facts that a real, not formal, controversy exists, and, of course, he does not do that by mere denial or holding back evidence. Sullivan v. Davis, 172 Colo. 490, 474 P.2d 218 (1970); Guerrero v. City of Colo. Springs, 507 P.2d 881 (Colo. App. 1972).

Once a movant makes a convincing showing that genuine issues are lacking, section (e) requires that the opposing party adequately demonstrate by relevant and specific facts that a real controversy exists. Hadley v. Moffat County Sch. Dist. Re-1, 641 P.2d 284 (Colo. App. 1981); McLaughlin v. Allen, 689 P.2d 1169 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where plaintiffs' affidavits failed to reveal that any discovery relating to plaintiffs' allegations would have resulted in any facts that would preclude summary judgment, trial court did not abuse its discretion in suspending discovery under section (f). Sundheim v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Douglas County, 904 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 926 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1996).

Where a plaintiff offers no evidence to contradict an affirmative showing of nonliability made by defendants in support of their motion for summary judgment, nor did the plaintiff show that any other evidence he might have produced at trial would contradict the evidence, a trial court has no alternative but to conclude that there is no genuine issue of fact upon which the defendants could be found liable, and it properly grants their motions for summary judgment. Guerrero v. City of Colo. Springs, 507 P.2d 881 (Colo. App. 1972).

Where a defendant asserts a counterclaim and plaintiff denies the allegation in a reply, but does not file an affidavit denying such, the plaintiff is not entitled to summary judgment. McKinley Constr. Co. v. Dozier, 175 Colo. 395, 487 P.2d 1335 (1971).

A party is not compelled to try his case on affidavits with no opportunity to cross-examine affiants. Hatfield v. Barnes, 115 Colo. 30, 168 P.2d 552 (1946); Parrish v. De Remer, 117 Colo. 256, 187 P.2d 597 (1946); Primock v. Hamilton, 168 Colo. 524, 452 P.2d 375 (1969).

Where affidavits show conflict, there is a genuine issue of material fact which should be determined by a fact-finding body after both parties have presented evidence in support of their respective positions. McKinley Constr. Co. v. Dozier, 175 Colo. 397, 487 P.2d 1335 (1971).

This rule provides for sworn or certified copies of all pertinent papers which are referred to in the affidavits to accompany the motion. Johnson v. Mountain Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 162 Colo. 474, 426 P.2d 962 (1967).

While technically it is an error not to have certified the papers attached to such motion, one waives any objection to the lack of certification by their reliance upon some of these exhibits as bases for their position and for their appeal. Johnson v. Mountain Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 162 Colo. 474, 426 P.2d 962 (1967).

An affidavit of counsel which only recites that the attached documents are certified copies of a court judgment does comply with the provisions of C.R.C.P. 59(e) (now 59(a)(4)). Kaminsky v. Kaminsky, 145 Colo. 492, 359 P.2d 675 (1961).

Single purpose affidavit does not violate rule of "personal knowledge". An affidavit of counsel which serves the single purpose of placing before the court certified copies of relevant documents does not violate the requirements of the rule that affidavits be made on "personal knowledge". Kaminsky v. Kaminsky, 145 Colo. 492, 359 P.2d 675 (1961).

Certified court records in and of themselves constitute a sufficient affidavit in support of a motion for summary judgment. Kaminsky v. Kaminsky, 145 Colo. 492, 359 P.2d 675 (1961).

Court cannot consider files, records, and other documents in prior case involving another party in the same manner. Parrish v. De Remer, 117 Colo. 256, 187 P.2d 597 (1947).

Mere allegations of fraudulent concealment insufficient to establish genuine issue of fact. Where the plaintiff had neither pleaded nor proved that the defendant was connected with or responsible for the non-availability to her of her hospital records, in the context of the defendant's motion for summary judgment, therefore, the plaintiff's "mere allegations" of fraudulent concealment by the defendant were insufficient to set up a genuine issue of fact as to the defendant's asserted fraudulent acts and, accordingly, as to the equitable estoppel urged by the plaintiff. Mishek v. Stanton, 200 Colo. 514, 616 P.2d 135 (1980).

Affidavit containing hearsay meets requirements of this rule since hearsay would be admissible in court under exception to hearsay rule. K.H.R. by and through D.S.J. v. R.L.S., 807 P.2d 1201 (Colo. App. 1990).

Amendment of complaint by argument and affidavit. When there are allegations in a complaint and facts appearing in an affidavit which may be construed as supporting the theories of estoppel and waiver, and these theories are argued to the trial court, although the theories were not specifically alleged in the complaint, the trial court must treat the complaint as amended for purposes of considering a motion for summary judgment. Discovery Land & Dev. Co. v. Colo.-Aspen Dev. Corp., 40 Colo. App. 292, 577 P.2d 1101 (1977).

Failure to state admissible facts in affidavit may justify summary judgment. A failure to state admissible facts in the affidavit, based on the affiant's personal knowledge, may justify the court in entering summary judgment for the opposing party. In re Estate of Abbott, 39 Colo. App. 536, 571 P.2d 311 (1977).

Thus, summary judgment was proper where discrepancies were inadmissible to create a disputed issue of fact. Affidavits based on inadmissible hearsay are insufficient for purposes of summary judgment determination. Henderson v. Master Klean Janitorial, Inc., 70 P.3d 612 (Colo. App. 2003).

Depositions held insufficient basis for summary judgment. Where none of the depositions offered in support of a motion for summary judgment show that any of the persons deposed had personal knowledge of actions being sued on or of the amount or details of the claimed losses, the testimony in the depositions is not admissible and the depositions cannot stand as the basis for the summary judgment. Nat'l Sur.

Corp. v. Citizens State Bank, 651 P.2d 460 (Colo. App. 1982).

Court's ruling without oral argument not denial of due process. Defendant was not denied due process of law by the fact that the court ruled on the motion for summary judgment without oral argument. People in Interest of F.L.G., 39 Colo. App. 194, 563 P.2d 379 (1977).

Due process does not include the right to oral argument on a motion for summary judgment, especially where the party against whom the motion is directed had ample opportunity to file any affidavits or legal arguments he might have had during the time between the filing of the motion and the date for hearing. People in Interest of F.L.G., 39 Colo. App. 194, 563 P.2d 379 (1977).

Neither the law of the case doctrine nor collateral estoppel precluded plaintiffs from contesting an issue addressed in first motion for summary judgment from submitting affidavits in opposition to same issue in a subsequent motion for summary judgment. Stotler v. Geibank Indus. Bank, 827 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in Commercial Indus. Const., Inc. v. Anderson, 683 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1984); Wasalco, Inc. v. El Paso County, 689 P.2d 730 (Colo. App. 1984); Conrad v. Imatani, 724 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Hernandez and Assocs., Inc., 736 P.2d 1238 (Colo. App. 1986); McDaniels v. Laub, 186 P.3d 86 (Colo. App. 2008); McDonald v. Zions First Nat'l Bank, N.A., 2015 COA 29, 348 P.3d 957.

VII. WHEN AFFIDAVITS UNAVAILABLE.

A trial court abuses its discretion in refusing to grant one a reasonable continuance to permit utilization of the discovery procedures provided by the rules of civil procedure, and it is precipitous and premature in granting a motion for summary judgment. Miller v. First Nat'l Bank, 156 Colo. 358, 399 P.2d 99 (1965).

Where responses to discovery, although not timely filed, demonstrate a disputed issue concerning material fact, a motion for summary judgment is improper. Moses v. Moses, 180 Colo. 398, 505 P.2d 1302 (1973).

By not answering requests for admissions in a summary judgment motion, the relevant subject matters of the requests for admissions are deemed admitted under C.R.C.P. 36. Cox v. Pearl Inv. Co., 168 Colo. 67, 450 P.2d 60 (1969).

Trial court does not err when it rules on motion ex parte unless a party requests oral argument or a continuance. People ex rel. Garrison v. Lamm, 622 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1980).

Whether to grant a request for discovery pursuant to section (f) lies within the discretion of the trial court. It is not an abuse of discretion to deny a section (f) discovery request if the movant has failed to demonstrate that the proposed discovery is necessary and could produce facts that would preclude summary judgment. A-1 Auto Repair & Detail v. Bilunas-Hardy, 93 P.3d 598 (Colo. App. 2004).

VIII. FORM OF JUDGMENT.

Findings of fact and conclusions of law are not required when ruling on a motion under this rule or under C.R.C.P. 12. United Bank of Denver v. Ferris, 847 P.2d 146 (Colo. App. 1992).

Absent circumstances not present in the case, the denial of a motion for summary judgment may not be considered on appeal from a final judgment after trial on the merits. Manuel v. Fort Collins Newspapers, Inc., 631 P.2d 1114 (Colo. 1981); Grogan v. Taylor, 877 P.2d 1374 (Colo. App. 1993); Fire Ins. Exch. v. Rael by Rael, 895 P.2d 1139 (Colo. App. 1995).

Rule 57. Declaratory Judgments

(a) Power to Declare Rights, etc.; Force of Declaration. District and superior courts within their respective jurisdictions shall have power to declare rights, status, and other legal relations whether or not further relief is or could be claimed. No action or proceedings shall be open to objection on the ground that a declaratory judgment or decree is prayed for. The declaration may be either affirmative or negative in form and effect; and such declarations shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree.

(b) Who May Obtain Declaration of Rights. Any person interested under a deed, will, written contract, or other writings constituting a contract, or whose rights, status, or other legal relations are affected by a statute, municipal ordinance, contract, or franchise, may have determined any question of construction or validity arising under the instrument, statute, ordinance, contract, or franchise and obtain a declaration of rights, status, or other legal relations thereunder.

(c) Contract Construed Before Breach. A contract may be construed either before or after there has been a breach thereof.

(d) For What Purposes Interested Person May Have Rights Declared. Any person interested as or through an executor, administrator, trustee, guardian or other fiduciary, creditor, devisee, legatee, heir, next of kin, or cestui que trust, in the administration of a trust, or of the estate of a decedent, an infant, lunatic, or insolvent, may have a declaration of rights or legal relations in respect thereto:

(1) To ascertain any class of creditors, devisees, legatees, heirs, next of kin or other; or

(2) To direct the executors, administrators, or trustees to do or abstain from doing any particular act in their fiduciary capacity; or

(3) To determine any question arising in the administration of the estate or trust, including questions of construction of wills and other writings.

(e) Not a Limitation. The enumeration in sections (b), (c), and (d) of this Rule does not limit or restrict the exercise of the general powers conferred in section (a) of this Rule, in any proceeding where declaratory relief is sought, in which a judgment or decree will terminate the controversy or remove an uncertainty.

(f) When Court May Refuse to Declare Right. The court may refuse to render or enter a declaratory judgment or decree where such judgment or decree if rendered or entered, would not terminate the uncertainty or controversy giving rise to the proceeding.

(g) Review. All orders, judgments, and decrees under this Rule may be reviewed as other orders, judgments, and decrees.

(h) Further Relief. Further relief based on a declaratory judgment or decree may be granted whenever necessary or proper. The application therefor shall be by petition to a court having jurisdiction to grant the relief. If the application is deemed sufficient, the court shall, on reasonable notice, require any adverse party whose rights have been adjudicated by the declaratory judgment or decree, to show cause why further relief should not be granted forthwith.

(i) Issues of Fact. When a proceeding under this Rule involves the determination of an issue of fact, such issues may be tried and determined in the same manner as issues of facts are tried and determined in other actions in the court in which the proceeding is pending.

(j) Parties; Notice to State or Municipality. When declaratory relief is sought, all persons shall be made parties who have or claim any interest which would be affected by the declaration, and no declaration shall prejudice the rights of persons not parties to the proceeding. In any proceeding which involves a challenge to the validity of a municipal ordinance or franchise, the party challenging the ordinance or franchise shall serve the municipality with a copy of the relevant motion or pleading and such municipality shall be made a party, and is entitled to be heard. If a party files a motion or other pleading asserting that a state statute, ordinance, or franchise is unconstitutional, that party shall serve the state attorney general with a copy of the motion or pleading, and the state is entitled to be heard. Notice to the state or municipality required by this subsection (j) shall be made pursuant to Rule 5(b) within 21 days of the date when the motion or pleading challenging validity or constitutionality was filed.

(k) Rule is Remedial; Purpose. This Rule is declared to be remedial; its purpose is to settle and to afford relief from uncertainty and insecurity with respect to rights, status, and other legal relations; and is to be liberally construed and administered.

(l) Interpretation and Construction. This Rule shall be so interpreted and construed as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law of those states which enact it, and to harmonize, as far as possible, with federal laws and regulations on the subject of declaratory judgment and decrees.

(m) Trial by Jury; Remedies; Speedy Hearing. Trial by jury may be demanded under the circumstances and in the manner provided in Rules 38 and 39. The existence of another adequate remedy does not preclude a judgment for declaratory relief in cases where it is appropriate. The court may order a speedy hearing of an action for a declaratory judgment and may advance it on the calendar.

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to CSA, C. 93, §§ 78 to 92, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The declaratory judgment act is constitutional. San Luis Power & Water Co. v. Trujillo, 93 Colo. 385, 26 P.2d 537 (1933).

The Colorado declaratory judgment act is incorporated in this rule. People ex rel. Inter-Church Temperance Movement v. Baker, 133 Colo. 398, 297 P.2d 273 (1956); State Bd. of Control for State Homes for Aged v. Hays, 149 Colo. 400, 369 P.2d 431 (1962).

Review pursuant to this rule is appropriate where C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4) relief is unavailable because the challenged action is legislative or because review of the record is an insufficient remedy. Grant v. District Court, 635 P.2d 201 (Colo. 1981).

Declaratory relief under this rule is an appropriate means of challenging administrative governmental actions that are not subject to review under C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4). Chellsen v. Pena, 857 P.2d 472 (Colo. App. 1992).

Review pursuant to this rule is appropriate even in the context of a quasi-judicial proceeding where a declaratory judgment is requested and C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4) does not provide an adequate remedy. Constitutional questions and challenges to the overall validity of a statute or ordinance are more properly reviewed under this rule. Native Am. Rights Fund, Inc. v. City of Boulder, 97 P.3d 283 (Colo. App. 2004).

Review under this rule is not available where sufficient review has already been provided under C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4). Denver Ctr. for Performing Arts v. Briggs, 696 P.2d 299 (Colo. 1985); Carney v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 30 P.3d 861 (Colo. App. 2001).

Plaintiffs' claim for declaratory relief asserting that planning commission did not provide sufficient notice to them of a permit review meeting was properly dismissed under C.R.C.P. 106(b). Because C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4) is the exclusive remedy for reviewing quasi-judicial decisions, all claims that effectively seek such review (whether framed as claims under section (a)(4) of this rule or not) are subject to the 30-day deadline under C.R.C.P. 106(b). Thus, claims for declaratory relief under this rule that seek review of quasi-judicial decisions must be filed within 30 days. JJR 1, LLC v. Mt. Crested Butte, 160 P.3d 365 (Colo. App. 2007).

The granting of declaratory relief is a matter resting in the sound discretion of the trial court and is not precluded even when there is another adequate remedy. Troelstrup v. District Court, 712 P.2d 1010 (Colo. 1986).

Ordinances legislative in nature are reviewable under this rule. Ordinances establishing general policies, such as a zoning ordinance, even though accompanied by procedures for notice and public hearing, are, when determining the proper procedure for review, legislative in nature and reviewable under this rule when the constitutional application of the ordinance is involved. Margolis v. District Court, 638 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1981).

A zoning ordinance amendment is subject to review pursuant to this rule and is not reviewable pursuant to C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4) where it is an amendment of general application, may be enacted by initiative, and is subject to referendum. Russell v. City of Central, 892 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1995).

Although a master plan is ordinarily not reviewable under this rule, the plan is reviewable when it is no longer advisory. Since the plan at issue was adopted as a zoning resolution by the board of county commissioners acting in a legislative capacity, it is no longer advisory. Condiotti v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 983 P.2d 184 (Colo. App. 1999).

It is permissible to join § 24-4-106 action and action under this rule for purposes of review. Utah Int'l, Inc. v. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 41 Colo. App. 72, 579 P.2d 96 (1978).

Action under rule attacking constitutionality of administrative regulation not barred as untimely. While agency rules and regulations are indeed reviewable under § 24-4-106 (4), expiration of that section's filing period does not invariably bar as untimely an action under this rule attacking the constitutionality of an administrative regulation promulgated by § 24-4-103 rule-making. Collopy v. Wildlife Comm'n, 625 P.2d 994 (Colo. 1981).

Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction in action for declaratory judgment when plaintiff has not exhausted administrative remedies. Leete v. Bd. of Med. Exam'rs, 807 P.2d 1249 (Colo. App. 1991).

Declaratory judgment is proper procedure for preenforcement challenge to regulation. Declaratory judgment is a proper procedure by which to make a preenforcement challenge to a regulation promulgated by a state agency. CF&I Steel Corp. v. Colo. Air Pollution Control Comm'n, 199 Colo. 270, 610 P.2d 85 (1980).

Action for declaratory judgment is appropriate method for challenging governmental action that is not quasi-judicial and therefore not subject to C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4) review. Russell v. City of Central, 892 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1995).

The supreme court will not render an advisory opinion in declaratory judgment actions. Associated Master Barbers, Local 115 v. Journeyman Barbers, Local 205, 132 Colo. 52, 285 P.2d 599 (1955).

There can be no coercive judgment in a proceeding under the declaratory judgment rule. Taylor v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 182, 330 P.2d 954 (1958).

Declaratory judgment is not the proper remedy to determine status of a person confined in the state penitentiary, the proper remedy being habeas corpus where if warranted a coercive order could be entered. Taylor v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 182, 330 P.2d 954 (1958).

Court may treat improper petition for a habeas corpus as a petition for declaratory relief to serve the interests of finality and judicial economy. Collins v. Gunter, 834 P.2d 1283 (Colo. 1992).

The only new remedy afforded by the declaratory judgment law is to provide an adequate remedy in cases where no cause of action has arisen authorizing an executory judgment and where no relief is or could be claimed, and, while relief under this statute cannot be had where another established remedy is available, it is not intended to abolish the well-known causes of action, nor does it afford an additional remedy where an adequate one existed before, and it should not be resorted to where there is no necessity for a declaratory judgment. Taylor v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 182, 330 P.2d 954 (1958).

This act is not intended to repeal the statute prohibiting judges from giving legal advice nor to impose the duties of the profession upon the courts, nor to provide advance judgments as the basis of commercial enterprises, nor to settle mere academical questions. Taylor v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 182, 330 P.2d 954 (1958).

Where, under the pleadings in an action for a declaratory judgment, no question is presented which is properly cognizable under the uniform declaratory judgments act, the suit should be dismissed. Fairall v. Frisbee, 104 Colo. 553, 92 P.2d 748 (1939).

In a declaratory judgment action in which the court rules against the position of the plaintiff, it should enter a declaratory judgment and not sustain a motion to dismiss. Karsh v. City & County of Denver, 176 Colo. 406, 490 P.2d 936 (1971).

The uniform declaratory judgments act was never intended to be a substitute for, or a short cut to, proper pleading and specifically provides that all issues of fact shall be tried and determined as in other cases. Home Owners' Loan Corp. v. Meyer, 110 Colo. 501, 136 P.2d 282 (1943).

Actions for declaratory judgment were not intended as a substitute for statutory procedure. Shotkin v. Perkins, 118 Colo. 584, 199 P.2d 295, cert. denied, 335 U.S. 888, 69 S. Ct. 230, 93 L. Ed. 426 (1948), reh'g denied, 335 U.S. 909, 69 S. Ct. 409, 93 L. Ed. 442, cert. denied, 338 U.S. 907, 70 S. Ct. 303, 94 L. Ed. 558 (1949), reh'g denied, 338 U.S. 952, 70 S. Ct. 479, 94 L. Ed. 588 (1950); Hays v. City & County of Denver, 127 Colo. 154, 254 P.2d 860 (1953).

Termination of a dissolution proceeding as a result of the death of one of the parties did not render the controversy over the antenuptial agreement moot. Even though the death of one spouse mooted the dissolution proceeding, because the antenuptial agreement had a practical legal effect on an ongoing probate proceeding, the trial court was in error when it ruled the agreement invalid. Schwartz v. Schwartz, 183 P.3d 552 (Colo. 2008).

Claim seeking a declaration that, as a matter of law, the word "firearm" in § 30-15-301 includes bows and arrows does not present a nonjusticiable political question. District court erred, therefore, in dismissing plaintiff's declaratory judgment claim based on the political question doctrine. Moss v. Bd. of County Comm'rs for Boulder County, 2015 COA 35, 411 P.3d 918.

This case is a classic case appropriate for resolution by entry of a declaratory judgment. A declaratory judgment would resolve the controversy between the parties regarding whether bow-and-arrow discharges are prohibited under the existing county resolution in the area where plaintiffs reside. At a minimum, there is controversy about whether bow-and-arrow discharges are prohibited under the applicable county resolution. A declaratory judgment would resolve the dispute about what conduct is prohibited under the current legal framework. Thus, a declaratory judgment will terminate the controversy or uncertainty regarding the scope of the resolution. As such, plaintiffs' claim is appropriate for resolution by entry of a declaratory judgment. Moss v. Bd. of County Comm'rs for Boulder County, 2015 COA 35, 411 P.3d 918.

Applied in State Bd. of Cosmetology v. District Court, 187 Colo. 175, 530 P.2d 1278 (1974); Cline v. City of Boulder, 35 Colo. App. 349, 532 P.2d 770 (1975); City of Arvada v. City & County of Denver, 36 Colo. App. 146, 539 P.2d 1294 (1975); City & County of Denver v. City of Arvada, 192 Colo. 88, 556 P.2d 76 (1976); Mohler v. Buena Vista Bank & Trust Co., 42 Colo. App. 4, 588 P.2d 894 (1978); Newton v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 197 Colo. 462, 594 P.2d 1042 (1979); Hide-A-Way Massage Parlor, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 198 Colo. 175, 597 P.2d 564 (1979); Jeffrey v. Colo. State Dept. of Soc. Servs., 198 Colo. 265, 599 P.2d 874 (1979); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Fifty-First Gen. Ass'y, 198 Colo. 302, 599 P.2d 887 (1979); DuHamel v. People ex rel. City of Arvada, 42 Colo. App. 491, 601 P.2d 639 (1979); Spiker v. City of Lakewood, 198 Colo. 528, 603 P.2d 130 (1979); CF & I Steel Corp. v. Colo. Air Pollution Control Comm'n, 44 Colo. App. 111, 606 P.2d 1306 (1978); Estate of Daigle, 634 P.2d 71 (Colo. 1981); Stone Envtl. Eng'r Servs., Inc. v. Colo. Dept. of Health, 631 P.2d 1185 (Colo. App. 1981); Empire Sav., Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Otero Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 640 P.2d 1151 (Colo. 1982); Tri-State Generation & Transmission Co. v. City of Thornton, 647 P.2d 670 (Colo. 1982); Citizens for Free Inter. v. Dept. of Rev., 649 P.2d 1054 (Colo. 1982); Two G's, Inc. v. Kalbin, 666 P.2d 129 (Colo. 1983); DuPuis v. Charnes, 668 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1983); Denver & R.G.W.R.R. v. City & County of Denver, 673 P.2d 354 (Colo. 1983); Martynes & Assocs. v. Devonshire Square Apts., 680 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1984); Lakewood Fire Protect. v. City of Lakewood, 710 P.2d 1124 (Colo. App. 1985).

II. POWER TO DECLARE RIGHTS; FORCE OF DECLARATION.

Since the adoption of the uniform declaratory judgments act, the supreme court is permitted to declare and adjudge rights and liabilities under a given state of facts irrespective of whether it directly supplies remedies to enforce them. Employers Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 102 Colo. 177, 78 P.2d 380 (1938).

A declaratory judgment can only be taken to be a determination as to the rights of the parties before the court. Farmers Elevator Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Colo. 168, 489 P.2d 318 (1971).

For a declaratory judgment to be binding, the necessary parties must be before the court. Beacom v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 657 P.2d 440 (Colo. 1983).

A declaratory judgment is conclusive as to questions raised by parties and passed upon by court. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 180 Colo. 407, 506 P.2d 140 (1973); City & County of Denver v. Chuck Ruwart Chevrolet, Inc., 32 Colo. App. 191, 508 P.2d 789 (1973).

The equitable jurisdiction of a court may be invoked to meet the ends of justice in order that a multiplicity of suits may be prevented. Hamilton v. City & County of Denver, 176 Colo. 6, 490 P.2d 1289 (1971).

The plaintiff in requesting a declaratory judgment should not be required to risk violation of the statute in order to obtain a declaration of its validity. Colo. State Bd. of Optometric Exam'rs v. Dixon, 165 Colo. 488, 440 P.2d 287 (1968).

A case was clearly within the contemplation of this provision where certain beneficiaries of a life insurance policy brought an action against an insurance company to establish the applicability of a double indemnity clause to the death of the insured whose death was caused by an overdose of luminal: A contract was involved, persons were interested, and there was a controversy concerning the construction of the policy. Equitable Life Assur. Soc'y v. Hemenover, 100 Colo. 231, 67 P.2d 80 (1937).

Trial court abused its discretion in dismissing due process claim based on ripeness where professors already worked under an employment contract, they entered into the contract in reliance on the terms stated in the contract, and they faced uncertainty as to the terms of the contract because it was later modified with the intent to apply it retroactively. Saxe v. Bd. of Trs. of Metro. State Coll., 179 P.3d 67 (Colo. App. 2007).

III. WHO MAY OBTAIN DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

The general assembly is without power to require courts to exercise nonjudicial functions; but it is not without the power to impose upon courts jurisdiction over certain enumerated actions seeking declaratory judgments on matters that lend themselves to and receive judicial determination in otherwise litigated cases, as it at once appears, such would not be nonjudicial in their nature. San Luis Power & Water Co. v. Trujillo, 93 Colo. 385, 26 P.2d 537 (1933).

Declaratory judgment act neither expands nor contracts the jurisdiction of Colorado's courts. In creating a new remedy the general assembly did not by implication grant political subdivisions of the state the right to sue the state. Romer v. Fountain Sanitation Dist., 898 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1995).

One whose rights are affected by statute may have its construction or validity determined by a declaratory judgment. Toncray v. Dolan, 197 Colo. 382, 593 P.2d 956 (1979).

One whose rights are favorably affected by a statute is entitled to seek a judicial determination thereof so long as the court is provided with a properly adverse context. Silverstein v. Sisters of Charity, 38 Colo. App. 286, 559 P.2d 716 (1976).

One whose rights or status may be affected by statute is entitled to have any question of construction determined provided that a substantial controversy between adverse parties of sufficient immediacy to warrant the issuance of a declaratory judgment exists. Silverstein v. Sisters of Charity, 38 Colo. App. 286, 559 P.2d 716 (1976).

Proper forum for challenge to constitutionality of statute or ordinance under which an administrative agency acts is district court where declaratory judgment can be sought. Arapahoe Roofing & Sheet Metal v. Denver, 831 P.2d 451 (Colo. 1992).

A liberal construction of the statute and the rule rejects the proposition that a person adversely affected by a statute and seeking relief from uncertainty and insecurity with respect to his rights by reason of a statute or a rule of a board or commission must take the risk of prosecutions, fines, imprisonment, loss of property, or loss of profession in order to secure adjudication of his rights. Colo. State Bd. of Optometric Exam'rs v. Dixon, 165 Colo. 488, 440 P.2d 287 (1968).

This rule establishes the procedural mechanism for implementation of the declaratory judgment act. Romer v. Fountain Sanitation Dist., 898 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1995).

A proceeding for declaratory judgment must be based upon an actual controversy. Farmers Elevator Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Colo. 168, 489 P.2d 318 (1971); Beacom v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 657 P.2d 440 (Colo. 1983).

When the questions presented are not uncertain or hypothetical, and they are presented in an action seeking a declaratory judgment, they are no less justiciable than if presented by injunction or otherwise. San Luis Power & Water Co. v. Trujillo, 93 Colo. 385, 26 P.2d 537 (1933).

Although a declaratory judgment action must be based on an actual controversy, a party need not violate the challenged statute or regulation in order to obtain a declaration of its invalidity. It is sufficient that a party will be adversely affected by the challenged regulation. Bowen/Edwards v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 812 P.2d 656 (Colo. App. 1990), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 830 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1992).

The right to a declaratory judgment extends to a party who claims to be adversely affected by a regulation. Plaintiff contended that he was an interested party under a written agreement between the social security administration and the department of human services. Thus, even if the authorization signed by the plaintiff allowing the social security administration to send his federal benefits check directly to the department of human services itself were not deemed a contract, plaintiff stated a claim for declaratory relief and was entitled to have a determination on the merits rather than dismissal. Martinez v. Dept. of Human Servs., 97 P.3d 152 (Colo. App. 2003).

A justiciable controversy existed, and so the dismissal of a declaratory judgment claim was an abuse of discretion, where a town's ordinance limited a developer's rights under an existing contract with the town, notwithstanding the fact that the developer had not applied for a permit from the town. Lot Thirty-Four Venture, L.L.C. v. Town of Telluride, 976 P.2d 303 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 3 P.3d 30 (Colo. 2000).

Court is not required to reply to mere speculative inquiries. Gabriel v. Bd. of Regents, 83 Colo. 582, 267 P. 407 (1928).

Specific threat of enforcement of a rent control statute created a sufficient actual controversy for purposes of this rule. Meyerstein v. City of Aspen, 282 P.3d 456 (Colo. App. 2011).

A declaratory judgment may not issue under the provisions of section (b) of this rule on the validity of a city ordinance to create a storm sewer district, where the proposed ordinance is in contemplation only and has not been passed by the city council. City & County of Denver v. Denver Land Co., 85 Colo. 198, 274 P. 743 (1929).

As desirable as it might be to have an announcement of the court upon a question, it would be improper for it to decide in the absence of the necessary parties. City & County of Denver v. Denver Land Co., 85 Colo. 198, 274 P. 743 (1929); Continental Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cochrane, 89 Colo. 462, 4 P.2d 308 (1931).

No proceeding lies under our declaratory judgment act to obtain merely an advisory opinion. Farmers Elevator Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Colo. 168, 489 P.2d 318 (1971).

The declaratory judgment leaves the parties to pursue the remedies which the law provides, after performing its office of declaring the existence of a certain liability. San Luis Power & Water Co. v. Trujillo, 93 Colo. 385, 26 P.2d 537 (1933).

Preventative relief in some instances is just as properly a matter of judicial function as remedial relief and if given by a declaratory order in the construction of a statute, it is res judicata as to the questions of construction raised between the parties and passed upon. San Luis Power & Water Co. v. Trujillo, 93 Colo. 385, 26 P.2d 537 (1933).

Plaintiff had standing to pursue declaratory judgment action where the complaint demonstrated that the regulations threatened to cause it injury by alleging it would be adversely affected by compliance with the regulations, that if it complied with the regulations, it would suffer economic injury because the Board's permit fees and bond requirements are greater than those of the state, and that if it proceeded with oil and gas development without a county permit it would be subject to criminal sanctions. Bowen/Edwards v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 812 P.2d 656 (Colo. App. 1990), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 830 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1992).

The fact that a party confesses judgment in part or in whole does not automatically lead to a declaratory judgment as prayed for by the plaintiffs. Bennett v. City of Fort Collins, 190 Colo. 198, 544 P.2d 982 (1975).

The declaratory judgment is applicable to a dispute over the right to the use of spring waters not tributary to any natural stream. Colo. & Utah Coal Co. v. Walter, 75 Colo. 489, 226 P. 864 (1924).

For determination of rights under the teachers' salary law, see Washington County High Sch. Dist. v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 85 Colo. 72, 273 P. 879 (1928).

In an action under the declaratory judgments act to determine whether or not a municipality has the power to issue bonds and levy taxes for the payment thereof, the city auditor, being a person whose legal relations are affected by the proposal, is the proper person to initiate the proceedings. McNichols v. City & County of Denver, 101 Colo. 316, 74 P.2d 99 (1937).

Where results to occur from the enforcement of a statutory provision can be predicted with certainty or where the basic right of the state to enter legislative fields said to be the domain of the federal government is questioned, a court properly may declare with respect to the validity of a statute. Am. Fed'n of Labor v. Reilly, 113 Colo. 90, 155 P.2d 145 (1944).

A court should not enter into a speculative inquiry for the purpose of upholding or condemning statutory provisions, the effect of which, in concrete situations not yet developed, could not be definitely perceived. Am. Fed'n of Labor v. Reilly, 113 Colo. 90, 155 P.2d 145 (1944).

The validity of zoning ordinances has been challenged by certiorari review under C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4) and declaratory relief under this rule, and on occasion, these forms of relief have been pursued simultaneously. Snyder v. City of Lakewood, 189 Colo. 421, 542 P.2d 371 (1975).

Judicial review remedy for rezoning challenge. As a general rule, judicial review by way of C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4) is the exclusive remedy for one challenging a rezoning determination on a parcel of property. However, where persons have not had prior notice of a rezoning hearing and have not participated in it, certiorari review is not always an effective remedy, and a hearing de novo under a declaratory judgment is a proper and effective remedy. Norby v. City of Boulder, 195 Colo. 231, 577 P.2d 277 (1978).

Income tax statute and regulations may be determined by declaratory judgment. Where a taxpayer's liability for income taxes turns on the construction of a statute and the validity, or invalidity, of regulations purporting to interpret that statute, the case is well within the purpose of a declaratory judgment. Toncray v. Dolan, 197 Colo. 382, 593 P.2d 956 (1979).

Relief may be afforded to persons uncertain about rights under penal statute. Relief in the nature of a declaratory judgment will be afforded in appropriate circumstances to those persons who claim uncertainty and insecurity with respect to their rights under a penal statute or law. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982).

An action for declaratory judgment may be properly maintained by an insurance company to determine if it will be liable to its insured for a defense and for payment of a possible judgment arising from a specified occurrence. Beeson v. State Auto. & Cas. Underwriters, 32 Colo. App. 62, 508 P.2d 402, aff'd, 183 Colo. 284, 516 P.2d 623 (1973).

Insurance coverage may be declared. When a reasonable likelihood is established that alleged tortious conduct of an insured is excluded from coverage under his homeowner's policy, a trial judge may appropriately exercise discretion in affording insurer opportunity to obtain declaration of its obligations under the policy prior to the personal injury trial. Troelstrup v. District Court, 712 P.2d 1010 (Colo. 1986).

Physicians who were denied staff privileges at private hospital were not entitled to relief in form of declaratory judgment that hospital's board violated state law by not following hospital's bylaws. Green v. Lutheran Med. Ctr. Bd. of Dirs., 739 P.2d 872 (Colo. App. 1987).

Declaratory judgment actions may be filed to determine the existence of, or rights under, an oral contract. Berenergy Corp. v. Zab, Inc., 94 P.3d 1232 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 136 P.3d 252 (Colo. 2006).

A licensee of the owner of real estate is entitled to declaratory judgment regarding a proposed modification to an easement on the owner's property, particularly where both the owner and its licensee are parties to the proceeding. City of Boulder v. Farmer's Reservoir & Irrig. Co., 214 P.3d 563 (Colo. App. 2009).

Although section (b) of this rule details situations in which declaratory judgment actions may be brought, it does not restrict the court's ability to grant declaratory relief in other situations when appropriate. Berenergy Corp. v. Zab, Inc., 94 P.3d 1232 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 136 P.3d 252 (Colo. 2006).

IV. CONTRACT CONSTRUED BEFORE BREACH.

The purpose of this rule is for a judicial declaration of rights under a contract. Associated Master Barbers, Local 115 v. Journeyman Barbers, Local 205, 132 Colo. 52, 285 P.2d 599 (1955).

A proposed contract affords plaintiff no right to have it construed. Associated Master Barbers, Local 115 v. Journeyman Barbers, Local 205, 132 Colo. 52, 285 P.2d 599 (1955).

One who is not a party to a contract is without standing to obtain a declaratory judgment determining the validity of such contract. Associated Master Barbers, Local 115 v. Journeyman Barbers, Local 205, 132 Colo. 52, 285 P.2d 599 (1955).

In an action under the declaratory judgments act to determine the validity of a contract, the complaint failing to allege that the validity of the contract had been questioned, or that a question had arisen under it, no cause of action was stated. Gabriel v. Bd. of Regents, 83 Colo. 582, 267 P. 407 (1928).

Section (c) inapplicable where undetermined, extrinsic facts. Although § 13-51-107 and section (c) of this rule provide that a contract may be interpreted prior to breach, these provisions are inapplicable where the dispute requires an interpretation in light of extrinsic facts which are not yet determinable. McDonald's Corp. v. Rocky Mt. McDonald's, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 143, 590 P.2d 519 (1979).

V. FOR WHAT PURPOSES INTERESTED PERSONS MAY HAVE RIGHTS DECLARED.

Section (d) of this rule confers no new authority concerning wills and trusts, because district courts had full and complete jurisdiction before the passage of the declaratory judgments act to construe wills and trusts and to control executors and trustees in the administration of estates. Mulcahy v. Johnson, 80 Colo. 499, 252 P. 816 (1927).

A declaratory judgment is a proper proceeding when the amounts involved are substantial and there is a threat of multiplicity of suits, particularly when the plaintiffs are public employees. Hamilton v. City & County of Denver, 176 Colo. 6, 490 P.2d 1289 (1971).

VI. WHEN COURT MAY REFUSE TO DECLARE RIGHT.

Declaratory judgment actions should be considered only in cases where "the judgment will serve a useful purpose in clarifying and settling the legal relations in issue, and when it will terminate and afford relief from the uncertainty, insecurity, and controversy giving rise to the proceeding, and it follows that when neither of these results can be accomplished, the court should decline to render the declaration prayed". People ex rel. Inter-Church Temperance Movement v. Baker, 133 Colo. 398, 297 P.2d 273 (1956).

A declaratory judgment is appropriate when it will terminate a controversy. Heron v. City & County of Denver, 159 Colo. 314, 411 P.2d 314 (1966).

The district court properly dismissed a declaratory judgment complaint for lack of a justiciable controversy concerning the plaintiff's alleged right to select the location of the defendant's proposed oil and gas wells where the defendant had not yet submitted an application for a permit to drill wells at specific locations. Burkett v. Amoco Prod. Co., 85 P.3d 576 (Colo. App. 2003).

Where parties whose interests would be affected by the action were not made parties thereto, and declaratory judgment would not terminate litigation, a holding that necessary and indispensable parties were not before the trial court was not error. Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

It is not the function of the courts, even by way of declaration, to adjudicate with respect to administrative orders in the absence of a showing that a judgment, if entered, would afford a plaintiff present relief. Taylor v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 182, 330 P.2d 954 (1958).

A judicial tribunal is not required to render a judicial opinion on a matter which has become moot. Crowe v. Wheeler, 165 Colo. 289, 439 P.2d 50 (1968).

A case is moot when a judgment, if rendered, will have no practical legal effect upon an existing controversy. Crowe v. Wheeler, 165 Colo. 289, 439 P.2d 50 (1968).

An action is considered moot when it no longer presents a justiciable controversy because the issues involved have become academic or dead, and in a declaratory judgment action there is a tendency to construe the mootness doctrine more narrowly. Sigma Chi Fraternity v. Regents of Univ. of Colo., 258 F. Supp. 515 (D. Colo. 1966).

Declaratory judgment proceedings may not be invoked to resolve a question which is nonexistent, even though it can be assumed that at some future time such question may arise. Taylor v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 182, 330 P.2d 954 (1958); Heron v. City & County of Denver, 159 Colo. 314, 411 P.2d 314 (1966).

The jurisdiction of the court to enter declaratory judgments does not properly extend to entering advisory judgments as to hypothetical issues which may never arise. Heron v. City & County of Denver, 159 Colo. 314, 411 P.2d 314 (1966).

In action for declaratory judgment under this rule, the complaint must state a question which is existent and not one which is academic or nonexistent; there must be a justiciable issue or legal controversy extant, and not a mere possibility that at some future time such question may arise. Heron v. City & County of Denver, 159 Colo. 314, 411 P.2d 314 (1966).

In a suit to procure a declaratory judgment fixing the applicability of the sales tax to certain merchandising transactions, where it appears from the record that matters other than those shown by the pleadings must be presented to disclose the real controversy, the actual dispute can only be resolved by a consideration of proven or stipulated facts, and in such a situation the trial court, although properly holding that a demurrer to the complaint should have been overruled, should have, notwithstanding defendant elected to stand upon his demurrer, refused to render judgment granting the relief asked until evidence was produced affording a basis for conclusions with respect to proper declarations to be made and the relief to be granted. Armstrong v. Carman Distrib. Co., 108 Colo. 223, 115 P.2d 386 (1941).

Applied in City & County of Denver v. Denver Land Co., 85 Colo. 198, 274 P. 743 (1929).

VII. REVIEW.

When an administrative remedy has not been sought in a timely manner, this rule does not provide jurisdiction for judicial review. Jefferson Sch. D. R-1 v. Div. of Labor, 791 P.2d 1217 (Colo. App. 1990).

Since judicial review would not be significantly aided by an additional administrative decision, petitioner's failure to appeal should not bar his only defense to a criminal prosecution. Hamilton v. City & County of Denver, 176 Colo. 6, 490 P.2d 1289 (1971).

Applied in McNichols v. City & County of Denver, 101 Colo. 316, 74 P.2d 99 (1937); Young v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 102 Colo. 342, 79 P.2d 654 (1938).

VIII. FURTHER RELIEF.

This rule provides for further relief based on a declaratory judgment, but unless such relief is asked in the same action wherein the declaratory judgment is sought, and in connection therewith, it can be obtained only as to damages accruing subsequent to the date of the declaratory judgment. Lane v. Page, 126 Colo. 560, 251 P.2d 1078 (1952).

Because a declaratory judgment should not be sought in order to try a controversy by piecemeal, or to try particular issues without settling the entire controversy, where the damages were antecedent and might with propriety have been determined in the same proceeding in which declaratory judgment alone was sought, such judgment should operate as a bar to any subsequent claim therefor. This is in accord with the general rule. Lane v. Page, 126 Colo. 560, 251 P.2d 1078 (1952).

A declaratory judgment does not constitute absolute bar to subsequent proceedings where parties are seeking other remedies, even though based upon claims which could have been asserted in original action. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 180 Colo. 407, 506 P.2d 140 (1973); City & County of Denver v. Chuck Ruwart Chevrolet, Inc., 32 Colo. App. 191, 508 P.2d 789 (1973); Eason v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of County of Boulder, 961 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1997).

Subsequent relief sought by party to prior declaratory judgment action need not be sought by amendment of complaint in original action, but may be sought by separate action. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 180 Colo. 407, 506 P.2d 140 (1973).

Relief is not limited by language of statute or rule to prevailing party in declaratory judgment action. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 180 Colo. 407, 506 P.2d 140 (1973).

Reversal of an underlying declaratory judgment is not the "further relief" contemplated by § 13-51-112 and section (h) of this rule but is, instead, ordinary postjudgment relief. While "further relief" is not limited to the original prevailing party, nevertheless, such relief must seek remedies different from those granted in the declaratory judgment. Spencer v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 39 P.3d 1272 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where plaintiff received no personal direct benefit from prosecuting declaratory judgment action, but the subject matter of the judgment was enhanced or preserved by the litigation, plaintiff's attorney is permitted a reasonable fee which should be awarded by the trial court. Agee v. Trustees of Pension Bd., 33 Colo. App. 268, 518 P.2d 301 (1974).

IX. ISSUES OF FACT.

The majority rule is that whether a party is entitled to have disputed issues of fact decided by a jury is not determined by the fact that a declaratory judgment is sought, but whether the right to a jury trial existed prior to the passage of the declaratory judgment act in the type of action involved, if so, there is a right to trial by jury in such action. Baumgartner v. Schey, 143 Colo. 373, 353 P.2d 375 (1960).

The right to jury trial must be determined by the real, meritorious controversy between parties, as shown by the whole case, and in determining the essential character of a suit or remedy within this rule, the entire pleadings and all issues raised are to be examined and not merely the plaintiff's declaration, complaint, petition, or evidence, but a plaintiff may not defeat a defendant's right to a jury trial by framing his complaint so that his action would be cognizable only in equity under the old procedure, by the blending of a claim cognizable at law with a demand for equitable relief, by an allegation of an equitable cause of action which does not exist, or by joining a legal with an equitable cause of action; and at least, a joinder of legal and equitable causes of actions in a complaint does not deprive the defendant of a right to trial by jury of the purely legal issues. Baumgartner v. Schey, 143 Colo. 373, 353 P.2d 375 (1960).

If the action in which declaratory relief is sought would have been an action at law had it been permitted to mature without intervention of declaratory procedure, the right to trial by jury of disputed questions of fact is not affected. Baumgartner v. Schey, 143 Colo. 373, 353 P.2d 375 (1960).

That pleadings, depositions, admissions or affidavits contain undisputed matter and can be taken as true is not decisive of the question of whether there is a genuine issue of any material fact, because an issue of fact may arise from countervailing inferences which are permissible from evidence accepted as true. O'Herron v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 156 Colo. 164, 397 P.2d 227 (1964).

In an action for declaratory judgment, where the evidence was in conflict as to whether a tenant was entitled to remain in possession under the farm lease for the succeeding crop year, and trial to a jury resulted in a verdict favorable to the tenant, it was error to set the verdict aside and give judgment for plaintiff, defendant being entitled to a jury trial. Baumgartner v. Schey, 143 Colo. 373, 353 P.2d 375 (1960).

Factual determinations may be necessary in order to declare rights, status, or legal relations, and an action for declaratory judgment may be properly maintained by an insurance company to fix liability vel non, notwithstanding that factual determinations are necessary to make a declaration on the controlling issue. O'Herron v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 156 Colo. 164, 397 P.2d 227 (1964); Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bowser, 779 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1989).

X. PARTIES — MUNICIPAL ORDINANCES.

A case for a declaratory judgment, under a statute providing for declaratory judgments in cases of actual controversies only, which shall have the effect of final judgments, must be formally presented with proper parties. People ex rel. Inter-Church Temperance Movement v. Baker, 133 Colo. 398, 297 P.2d 273 (1956).

A plaintiff, seeking a determination of any cause by means of a judgment declaring rights, liabilities, and jural relations, must comply with the provisions of the declaratory judgment statute by naming all of the persons as parties who have a right to defend the action, or who are interested therein, or who will be affected by the making of a declaration of rights. People ex rel. Inter-Church Temperance Movement v. Baker, 133 Colo. 398, 297 P.2d 273 (1956).

The indispensable and necessary parties in any declaratory judgment action are those who have conflicting legal interests in the controversy to be adjudicated and whose rights will be affected thereby, and the trial court should insist that jurisdiction be obtained of all such parties either personally or in an appropriate class action under the provisions of C.R.C.P. 23; otherwise the court should dismiss the action, for a declaratory judgment action is intended to completely terminate the controversy, and if the court does not have jurisdiction of such interested parties, its judgment would not settle the questions presented and thus lead to multifarious litigation. People ex rel. Inter-Church Temperance Movement v. Baker, 133 Colo. 398, 297 P.2d 273 (1956).

All "parties who have or claim any interest which would be affected by the declaration" must be made parties to the proceeding, for neither in the declaratory judgment action nor in any other judicial proceeding may the rights of persons not parties to a judicial proceeding be bound by the action of a court in that proceeding. People ex rel. Inter-Church Temperance Movement v. Baker, 133 Colo. 398, 297 P.2d 273 (1956).

Only persons who have a legally cognizable interest must be made parties to an action, and no real controversy is presented until a judgment is entered. Connecticut Gen. Life Ins. Co. v. A.A.A. Waterproofing, Inc., 911 P.2d 684 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Constitution Assoc. v. N.H. Ins. Co., 930 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1996).

The interest which a party must have in the subject matter in order to make him a necessary party defendant must be a present substantial interest, as distinguished from a mere expectancy or future contingent interest. Game & Fish Comm'n v. Feast, 157 Colo. 303, 402 P.2d 169 (1965).

It is not necessary to make the state of Colorado a party defendant when two agencies of the state government are parties defendant and are represented by the state attorney general, because when suit is brought against an agency or department of the state government, it is in effect against the state itself. Game & Fish Comm'n v. Feast, 157 Colo. 303, 402 P.2d 169 (1965).

Attorney general must be served with a copy of the declaratory judgment proceeding and afforded the opportunity to be heard, but it is within his discretion whether he elects to be heard. Lakewood Pawnbrokers, Inc. v. City of Lakewood, 182 Colo. 315, 512 P.2d 1241 (1973).

Notice to attorney general not necessary where constitutional question arises during trial. Section 13-51-115 and this rule, mandating notice to the attorney general when allegations of unconstitutionality are made, do not address the situation where the question of constitutionality arises for the first time during the course of trial. Howell v. Woodlin Sch. Dist. R-104, 198 Colo. 40, 596 P.2d 56 (1979).

It is error to deny petitions of intervention of junior colleges whose rights would be directly affected by a declaration of unconstitutionality depriving them of funds. Mesa County Junior College Dist. v. Donner, 150 Colo. 156, 371 P.2d 442 (1962).

Where by stipulation all persons having any interest regarding the interpretation of liability insurance policies place themselves before the court, all the possible tort-feasors, in essence, challenge the respective insurance companies to defend the various named insureds pursuant to the terms of their contracts, and the insurance companies deny any liability, a controversy of sufficient immediacy and reality to warrant the issue of a declaratory judgment is raised. Beeson v. State Auto. & Cas. Underwriters, 32 Colo. App. 62, 508 P.2d 402, aff'd, 183 Colo. 284, 516 P.2d 623 (1973).

Where the city was not made a party, and the attorney general of the state of Colorado has not been served with a copy of the proceeding and has had no opportunity to be heard, the essential conditions required by the rule are not present, and under such circumstances a determination of the questions argued by counsel cannot be had in this proceeding. Meier v. Schooley, 147 Colo. 244, 363 P.2d 653 (1961).

For discussion of member municipalities in sewage disposal district being found to be indispensable parties, see Bancroft-Clover Water & San. Dist. v. Metro. Denver Sewage Disposal Dist. No. 1, 670 P.2d 428 (Colo. App. 1983).

Membership policyholders of a mutual insurance company had a substantial interest in the declaratory judgment sought by the company and should have been made parties thereto, because in their absence the declaratory judgment would not have terminated the uncertainty or controversy. Continental Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cochrane, 89 Colo. 462, 4 P.2d 308 (1931).

Where plaintiffs seek a judicial declaration not as to their own rights and status but attempt to have others not named or served declared to be in some ''unlawful'' status, no error was committed by the trial court in holding that declaratory judgment was not a proper remedy. Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

A litigant may properly bring a declaratory judgment action challenging a municipal ordinance for violating a city's charter. A city's charter is like its constitution, and all ordinances that a city passes must comply with the terms of its charter. City of Boulder v. Public Serv. Co. of Colo., 2018 CO 59, 420 P.3d 289.

XI. RULE IS REMEDIAL — PURPOSE.

The general or primary purpose of a declaratory judgments statute and rule is to provide a ready and speedy remedy, in cases of actual controversy, for determining issues and adjudicating the legal rights, duties, or status of the respective parties, before controversies with regard thereto lead to the repudiation of obligations, the invasion of rights, and the commission of wrongs. People ex rel. Inter-Church Temperance Movement v. Baker, 133 Colo. 398, 297 P.2d 273 (1956); Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

Primary purpose of declaratory judgment procedure is to provide a speedy, inexpensive, and readily accessible means of determining actual controversies which depend on the validity or interpretation of some written instrument of law. Toncray v. Dolan, 197 Colo. 382, 593 P.2d 956 (1979).

The purpose of the statute and the rule is to be remedial and to afford relief from uncertainty and insecurity, and the statute and rule expressly provide that they be liberally construed and administered. Colo. State Bd. of Optometric Exam'rs v. Dixon, 165 Colo. 488, 440 P.2d 287 (1968).

A liberal construction of the statute and the rule rejects the proposition that a person adversely affected by a statute and seeking relief from uncertainty and insecurity with respect to his rights by reason of a statute or a rule of a board or commission must take the risk of prosecutions, fines, imprisonment, loss of property, or loss of profession in order to secure adjudication of his rights. Colo. State Bd. of Optometric Exam'rs v. Dixon, 165 Colo. 488, 440 P.2d 287 (1968).

XII. TRIAL BY JURY.

It is clear that in a proper case a jury trial may be had in an action brought under a declaratory judgments rule. Baumgartner v. Schey, 143 Colo. 373, 353 P.2d 375 (1960).

The fact that an action is for a declaratory judgment is not, in and of itself, determinative of the type of action brought for purposes of determining whether there is a right to trial by jury. Zick v. Krob, 872 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1993).

The historical test to be applied to determine whether a right to a jury trial exists in a declaratory judgments action is that if any of the parties would have a constitutional right to a jury trial on any issue involved prior to the adoption of the declaratory judgments rule, such right remains. Baumgartner v. Schey, 143 Colo. 373, 353 P.2d 375 (1960).

If the action in which declaratory relief is sought would have been an action at law had it been permitted to mature without the intervention of declaratory procedure, the right to trial by jury of disputed questions of fact is not affected, and this has the salutary effect of permitting the defendant a trial by jury whether the action is brought under the common law or under the declaratory judgments rule. Baumgartner v. Schey, 143 Colo. 373, 353 P.2d 375 (1960).

Rule 58. Entry of Judgment

(a) Entry. Subject to the provisions of C.R.C.P. 54(b), upon a general or special verdict of a jury, or upon a decision by the court, the court shall promptly prepare, date, and sign a written judgment and the clerk shall enter it on the register of actions as provided in C.R.C.P. 79(a). The term ''judgment'' includes an appealable decree or order as set forth in C.R.C.P. 54(a). The effective date of entry of judgment shall be the actual date of the signing of the written judgment. The notation in the register of actions shall show the effective date of the judgment. Entry of the judgment shall not be delayed for the taxing of costs. Whenever the court signs a judgment and a party is not present when it is signed, a copy of the signed judgment shall be immediately mailed or e-served by the court, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 5, to each absent party who has previously appeared.

(b) Satisfaction. Satisfaction in whole or in part of a money judgment may be entered in the judgment record (Rule 79(d)) upon an execution returned satisfied in whole or in part, or upon the filing of a satisfaction with the clerk, signed by the judgment creditor's attorney of record unless a revocation of authority is previously filed, or by the signing of such satisfaction by the judgment creditor, attested by the clerk, or notary public, or by the signing of the judgment record (Rule 79(d)) by one herein authorized to execute satisfaction. Whenever a judgment shall be so satisfied in fact otherwise than upon execution, it shall be the duty of the judgment creditor or the judgment creditor's attorney to give such satisfaction, and upon motion the court may compel it or may order the entry of such satisfaction to be made without it.

II. ENTRY.

The entry of judgment is a purely ministerial act. Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 35 Colo. App. 252, 539 P.2d 137 (1975); Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 541 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1975).

Relief sought, and therefore time limitations, for judgment entered pursuant to this rule is pursuant to C.R.C.P. 59(a)(4) even though relief sought was from costs taxed by clerk pursuant to C.R.C.P. 54. Davis v. Bruton, 797 P.2d 830 (Colo. App. 1990).

Section (a) indicates a sequence of events in which the entry of judgment follows, in point of time, the preparation of the written form of judgment. Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 35 Colo. App. 252, 539 P.2d 137 (1975); Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 541 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1975).

This rule provides that upon a special verdict the court shall direct the appropriate judgment, and other provisions indicate that the court shall direct the entry of a judgment. City of Aurora v. Powell, 153 Colo. 4, 383 P.2d 798 (1963).

This rule requires that a court's preparation of the written form of the judgment precede the clerk's entry of judgment. Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 35 Colo. App. 252, 539 P.2d 137 (1975); Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 541 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1975).

The clerk's entries are administrative, not judicial. City of Aurora v. Powell, 153 Colo. 4, 383 P.2d 798 (1963).

Court's ''findings, conclusions, and order'' is sufficient to function as the written form of the judgment required by section (a). Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 35 Colo. App. 252, 539 P.2d 137 (1975); Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 541 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1975).

Where the record does not contain any document executed before the clerk's notation of judgment in the register of actions, the notation cannot function as an entry of judgment. Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 35 Colo. App. 252, 539 P.2d 137 (1975); Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 541 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1975).

Lack of a proper order determining a C.R.C.P. 59 motion was not fatal to appeal where party appealed from underlying order of dissolution of marriage, not from denial of the rule 59 motion. In re Christen, 899 P.2d 339 (Colo. App. 1995).

Section (a) of this rule applies in dissolution of marriage cases with multiple issues. Poor v. District Court, 190 Colo. 433, 549 P.2d 756 (1976).

Until the written form of a dissolution decree, together with the written permanent orders were prepared, signed by the judge, and then entered on the register of actions, there was no entry of judgment. Poor v. District Court, 190 Colo. 433, 549 P.2d 756 (1976).

Likewise, a magistrate's order shall be signed and in writing in accordance with section (a). A magistrate's order modifying child support decree becomes effective, for the purposes of appeal, when the magistrate's order is signed. A nunc pro tunc order shall not affect a party's right to review. In re Spector, 867 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1993).

Written decree terminating a parental relationship constitutes ''a written form of the judgment'' within the intent of section (a). People in Interest of A.M.D., 648 P.2d 625 (Colo. 1982).

In dissolution proceeding, where trial court incorporated partial separation agreement as well as oral supplemental agreement into the degree of dissolution, there was a final, appealable order notwithstanding the fact that wife's counsel failed to prepare and file a written form of the supplemental agreement. The decree was dated and signed by the trial court and, by expressly incorporating both the partial separation agreement and the supplemental agreement, it left nothing further for the court to do in order to completely determine the rights of the parties. In re Sorensen, 166 P.3d 254 (Colo. App. 2007).

Judgment is not entered until there is a signed written order. Sayat Nova, Inc. v. District Court, 619 P.2d 764 (Colo. 1980); Neoplan USA Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 721 P.2d 157 (Colo. App. 1986); Church v. Amer. Standard Ins. Co. of Wis., 742 P.2d 971 (Colo. App. 1987); In re Estate of Royal, 813 P.2d 790 (Colo. App. 1991); Hall v. Am. Standard Ins. Co. of Wis., 2012 COA 201, 292 P.3d 1196.

Where court entered its ''Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law and Judgment'' and ordered separate decree quieting title to be prepared, there was no final judgment until the quiet title decree was signed. Reser v. Aspen Park Ass'n, 727 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1986).

Judgment may be entered without the court's signature when that judgment is not prepared by counsel. Moore & Co. v. Williams, 672 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1983).

For purposes of timely filing of a motion for new trial under C.R.C.P. 59(a)(1), a judgment is "entered" only upon notation in the judgment docket pursuant to section (a) of this rule and C.R.C.P. 79(d). City & County of Denver v. Just, 175 Colo. 260, 487 P.2d 367 (1971).

The timeliness of a civil appeal is governed by C.A.R. 4(a) (appeals as of right), not section (a) of this rule. Section (a) of this rule, however, does control the date of entry of judgment for the purposes of a C.R.C.P. 59, new trial motion. Moore & Co. v. Williams, 672 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1983); Luna v. Fisher, 690 P.2d 264 (Colo. App. 1984).

Final entry of judgment for purposes of timely notice of appeal under C.A.R. 4(a) based on denial of new trial motion is date on which court filed written judgment in fixed amount on special verdict since this written ruling adjudicated all claims, rights, and liabilities of parties. Vallejo v. Eldridge, 764 P.2d 417 (Colo. App. 1988).

Order entered on minutes is effective as "written order" under section (a) of this rule. Wesson v. Bowling, 199 Colo. 30, 604 P.2d 23 (1979).

A minute order was sufficiently clear and precise and may be entered on the register pursuant to section (a) of this rule where the order detailed the amount of the judgment and setoffs and assessed costs, gave the plaintiff the right to possession, provided that the plaintiff apply the defendant's security deposit to the judgment, allowed the plaintiff interest to the date of the judgment on the amount due on a note, and, finally, gave both parties 20 days to file motions. Hebron v. District Court, 192 Colo. 346, 558 P.2d 997 (1977).

Entry of judgment effective upon notation in register. Both section (a) of this rule and C.R.C.P. 79(a) clearly state that entry of a judgment is effective upon notation in the register of actions. Hebron v. District Court, 192 Colo. 346, 558 P.2d 997 (1977).

Written order denying motion for reconsideration of dismissal without prejudice complied with section (a) of this rule. The prior order dismissing the case without prejudice was not reduced to writing and did not comply with the requirements of this rule. SMLL, L.L.C. v. Daly, 128 P.3d 266 (Colo. App. 2005).

Judgment becomes final upon notation, though not recorded in judgment record. Hebron v. District Court, 192 Colo. 346, 558 P.2d 997 (1977).

A judgment is final when it disposes of the entire litigation on the merits and a motion for costs does not stay the finality of that judgment. Driscoll v. District Court, 870 P.2d 1250 (Colo. 1994).

The court has the authority to supplement and modify the opinions it expresses in its oral remarks until the judgment has been reduced to writing, dated, and signed. In re West, 94 P.3d 1248 (Colo. App. 2004).

Conclusion of juvenile hearing does not occur until filing in clerk's office. For purposes of § 19-1-110 (now § 19-1-108) (5), the ''conclusion of the [juvenile] hearing'' does not occur until the juvenile commissioner signs the written findings and recommendations and transmits them to the juvenile judge by filing in the office of the clerk. The five-day period within which to file a request for review does not commence running until the filing date. People in Interest of M.C.L., 671 P.2d 1339 (Colo. App. 1983).

C.R.C.P. 6(e) does apply to extend time under this rule. Bonanza Corp. v. Durbin, 696 P.2d 818 (Colo. 1985).

No reviewable judgment presented. An appellate court must see that the actual judgment has been pronounced by the court and then entered by the clerk and that it appears in the record; otherwise no reviewable judgment is presented. Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 35 Colo. App. 252, 539 P.2d 137 (1975); Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 541 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1975).

Relation back of judgment so as to extinguish appeal right unconstitutional. Trial court's action in relating back matters decided on May 28 to the May 15 entry on the judgment docket had the effect of extinguishing the petitioner's right to appeal from the determination made on May 28. Under these circumstances, the 10-day period of C.R.C.P. 59(b), expired before the remaining issues in the case had even been determined by the trial court. This result contravenes the right of appeal granted by the Colorado constitution. In re Gardella, 190 Colo. 402, 547 P.2d 928 (1976) (decided prior to amendments made in 1977, 1984, and 1987).

Read together, the rules provide that a motion for a new trial must be filed not later than 10 days following the notation of judgment in the trial court's register of actions (or judgment docket). In re Gardella, 190 Colo. 402, 547 P.2d 928 (1976) (decided prior to amendments made in 1977, 1984, and 1987).

Time for motion after entry of order not issuance. Where the trial court issued its order nunc pro tunc on April 22, 1974, but the order was not noted in the registry of actions until May 31, 1974, the motion for new trial filed within 10 days from that date was timely filed. In re Talarico, 36 Colo. App. 389, 540 P.2d 1147 (1975) (decided prior to amendments made in 1977, 1984, and 1987).

Even though a nunc pro tunc order generally is fully operative on the litigants' rights as of the prescribed effective date, a nunc pro tunc order cannot be used to reduce the time nor to defeat the right to take an appeal. Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 35 Colo. App. 252, 539 P.2d 137 (1975); Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 541 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1975).

The filing on September 26 of an order nunc pro tunc as of September 25 cannot give effect to a clerk's September 25 entry of judgment, especially where the record does not indicate that the September 26 order was subsequently entered in the register of actions. Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 35 Colo. App. 252, 539 P.2d 137 (1975); Joslin Dry Goods Co. v. Villa Italia, Ltd., 541 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1975).

Where notice of entry of judgment is mailed to only one party in contravention of section (a) of this rule, the time provided by C.R.C.P. 59(a) for filing a post-trial motion commences from the date that the notice is mailed by that party to the party subsequently moving for post-trial relief. Padilla v. D.E. Frey & Co., Inc., 939 P.2d 475 (Colo. App. 1997).

Trial judge's failure to sign minute order does not prevent the court of appeals from considering the appeal. Furlong v. Gardner, 956 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1998).

Applied in Lewis v. Buckskin Joe's, Inc., 156 Colo. 46, 396 P.2d 933 (1964).

III. SATISFACTION.

Court has authority to order satisfaction apart from acknowledgment. A court has the authority to order a satisfaction of judgment even though there had not been an acknowledgment by the judgment creditor and without the filing of a motion by the debtor to compel such an acknowledgment. Osborn Hdwe. Co. v. Colo. Corp., 32 Colo. App. 254, 510 P.2d 461 (1973).

Execution sale constitutes satisfaction to extent of proceeds. In the absence of a defect justifying setting an execution sale aside, a levy and sale under an execution constitutes a satisfaction only to the extent of the proceeds of the sale. Gale v. Rice, 636 P.2d 1280 (Colo. App. 1981).

Rule authorizes a court to enter satisfaction of judgment on behalf of a judgment debtor, even though a judgment creditor refuses to acknowledge payment, so long as the judgment debtor has paid the judgment amount into the court registry. Vento v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 985 P.2d 48 (Colo. App. 1999).

Applied in Chateau Chaumont Condo. v. Aspen Title Co., 676 P.2d 1246 (Colo. App. 1983).

Rule 59. Motions for Post-Trial Relief

(a) Post-Trial Motions. Within 14 days of entry of judgment as provided in C.R.C.P. 58 or such greater time as the court may allow pursuant to a request for an extension of time made within that 14-day period, a party may move for post-trial relief including:

(1) A new trial of all or part of the issues;
(2) Judgment notwithstanding the verdict;
(3) Amendment of findings; or
(4) Amendment of judgment.

Motions for post-trial relief may be combined or asserted in the alternative. The motion shall state the ground asserted and the relief sought.

(b) No Post-Trial Motion Required. Filing of a motion for post-trial relief shall not be a condition precedent to appeal or cross-appeal, nor shall filing of such motion limit the issues that may be raised on appeal.

(c) On Initiative of Court. Within the time allowed the parties and upon any ground available to a party, the court on its own initiative, may:

(1) Order a new trial of all or part of the issues;
(2) Order judgment notwithstanding the verdict;
(3) Order an amendment of its findings; or
(4) Order an amendment of its judgment.

The court's order shall specify the grounds for such action.

(d) Grounds for New Trial. Subject to provisions of Rule 61, a new trial may be granted for any of the following causes:

(1) Any irregularity in the proceedings by which any party was prevented from having a fair trial;

(2) Misconduct of the jury;

(3) Accident or surprise, which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against;

(4) Newly discovered evidence, material for the party making the application which that party could not, with reasonable diligence, have discovered and produced at the trial;

(5) Excessive or inadequate damages; or

(6) Error in law.

When application is made under grounds (1), (2), (3), or (4), it shall be supported by affidavit filed with the motion. The opposing party shall have 21 days after service of an affidavit within which to file opposing affidavits, which period may be extended by the court or by written stipulation between the parties. The court may permit reply affidavits.

(e) Grounds for Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict. A judgment notwithstanding verdict may be granted for either of the following grounds:

(1) Insufficiency of evidence as a matter of law; or

(2) No genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party being entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

A motion for directed verdict shall not be a prerequisite to any form of post-trial relief, including judgment notwithstanding verdict.

(f) Scope of Relief in Trials to Court. On motion for post-trial relief in an action tried without a jury, the court may, if a ground exists, open the judgment if one has been entered, take additional testimony, amend findings of fact and conclusions of law or make new findings and conclusions, and direct entry of a new judgment.

(g) Scope of Relief in Trials to a Jury. On motion for post-trial relief in a jury trial, the court may, if a ground exists, order a new trial or direct entry of judgment. If no verdict was returned, the court may, if a ground exists, direct entry of judgment or order a new trial.

(h) Effect of Granting New Trial. The granting of a new trial shall not be an appealable order, but a party by participating in the new trial shall not be deemed to have waived any objection to the granting of the new trial, and the validity of the order granting new trial may be raised by appeal after final judgment has been entered in the case.

(i) Effect of Granting Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict, Amendment of Findings or Amendment of Judgment. Subject to C.R.C.P. 54(b), granting of judgment notwithstanding the verdict, amendment of findings or amendment of judgment shall be an appealable order.

(j) Time for Determination of Post-Trial Motions. The court shall determine any post-trial motion within 63 days (9 weeks) of the date of the filing of the motion. Where there are multiple motions for post-trial relief, the time for determination shall commence on the date of filing of the last of such motions. Any post-trial motion that has not been decided within the 63-day determination period shall, without further action by the court, be deemed denied for all purposes including Rule 4(a) of the Colorado Appellate Rules and time for appeal shall commence as of that date.

(k) When Judgment Becomes Final. For purposes of this Rule 59, judgment shall be final and time for filing of notice of appeal shall commence as set forth in Rule 4(a) of the Colorado Appellate Rules.

Source: (a) amended March 17, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire rule amended and effective October 11, 2001; IP(a), (a) last paragraph, (d) last paragraph, and (j) amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b); (a) amended and effective January 10, 2019.

Annotator's note. Since this rule, as it existed prior to January 1, 1985, was similar to §§ 237 and 238 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, and, since present provisions of sections (e) and (i) of this rule are similar to C.R.C.P. 50(b) and (c), as they existed prior to January 1, 1985, relevant cases construing §§ 237 and 238 of the former code and former C.R.C.P. 50(b) and (c) have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Purpose of a motion for a new trial is to give the trial court an opportunity to correct alleged errors. Danielson v. Kerbs AG., Inc., 646 P.2d 363 (Colo. 1982).

The primary purpose of a motion to amend judgment or for new trial is to give the court an opportunity to correct any errors that it may have made. In re Jones, 668 P.2d 980 (Colo. App. 1983); Harriman v. Cabela's Inc., 2016 COA 43, 371 P.3d 758.

Relief sought, and therefore time limitations, for judgment entered pursuant to C.R.C.P. 58 is pursuant to section (a)(4) of this rule even though relief sought was from costs taxed by clerk pursuant to C.R.C.P. 54. Davis v. Bruton, 797 P.2d 830 (Colo. App. 1990).

This rule authorizes the filing of a motion for new trial and empowers the court under certain conditions to grant a new trial on all or part of the issues. Dale v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 152 Colo. 581, 383 P.2d 795 (1963).

A motion for reconsideration of an order granting a new trial is not governed by this section because such order is not a final judgment. Bowman v. Songer, 820 P.2d 1110 (Colo. 1991).

A motion to reconsider is not specifically delineated in this rule, and no other rule or statute establishes a party's right to file such a motion, except under the State Administrative Procedure Act and the Colorado appellate rules. Stone v. People, 895 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1995).

A motion to reconsider in light of new circumstances or newly discovered evidence is not subject to the limitations in section (d) of this rule. UIH-SFCC Holdings, L.P. v. Brigato, 51 P.3d 1076 (Colo. App. 2002).

New trial is the only means for trial court to change judgment. Once a valid judgment is entered the only means by which the trial court may thereafter alter, amend, or vacate the judgment is by appropriate motion under either this rule or C.R.C.P. 60. Cortvriendt v. Cortvriendt, 146 Colo. 387, 361 P.2d 767 (1961); In re Warner, 719 P.2d 363 (Colo. App. 1986).

Plaintiff's motion to reconsider the summary judgment determination must be characterized as a motion for new trial under section (d)(4). The primary purpose of a motion for a new trial is to give the trial court an opportunity to correct any errors it may have made. Graven v. Vail Assocs., Inc., 888 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1994); Zolman v. Pinnacol Assurance, 261 P.3d 490 (Colo. App. 2011).

Retired judge may not entertain a motion for a new trial. After the expiration of his term of office, a judge may not entertain a motion under this rule, even though such motion is filed in a proceeding wherein the ''former'' judge had himself entered the final judgment at a time when he was actually serving as a judge. Olmstead v. District Court, 157 Colo. 326, 403 P.2d 442 (1965).

An appellate court does not grant or deny motions filed subsequent to entry of judgment under this rule since this is a function of the trial court; once a trial court has acted, however, an appellate court may in appropriate proceedings be called upon to review the propriety of the action thus taken by it. Olmstead v. District Court, 157 Colo. 326, 403 P.2d 442 (1965).

Court of appeals had subject matter jurisdiction to rule on issue to setoff two judgments and to enter single judgment despite fact that second notice of appeal to amended judgment was untimely where plaintiff raised issue of lack of setoff in trial court. Husband v. Colo. Mountain Cellars, 867 P.2d 57 (Colo. App. 1993).

Motion for new trial is analogous to motion for reconsideration, reargument, or rehearing in a proceeding before the public utilities commission. Peoples Natural Gas Div. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1981).

An order denying a motion for a new trial does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to reconsider. Zehnder v. Thirteenth Judicial Dist. Court, 193 Colo. 502, 568 P.2d 457 (1977).

Lack of a proper order, entered in accordance with C.R.C.P. 58, determining a motion under this rule was not fatal to appeal where party appealed from underlying order of dissolution of marriage, not from denial of the motion. In re Christen, 899 P.2d 339 (Colo. App. 1995).

After reconsideration of the motion to set aside, the court can adhere to its order which has the effect of striking the motion for a new trial. Zehnder v. Thirteenth Judicial Dist. Court, 193 Colo. 502, 568 P.2d 457 (1977).

Court has duties upon timely filing of motion. Where a timely motion for a new trial is filed, it is then incumbent upon the district court to either set the motion for hearing or to dispense with oral argument and decide the motion on the basis of the written briefs alone. Danielson v. Kerbs AG., Inc., 646 P.2d 363 (Colo. 1982).

A trial court has great discretion in granting of motions for new trials. DeMott v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 531, 486 P.2d 451 (1971).

In determining whether a new trial should be granted, the trial court has broad discretionary powers. Park Stations, Inc., v. Hamilton, 38 Colo. App. 216, 554 P.2d 311 (1976).

Whether or not a new trial is granted is usually a matter for the sound discretion of the trial judge whose presence and observation at the trial better equip him for making this decision. First Nat'l Bank v. Campbell, 198 Colo. 344, 599 P.2d 915 (1979).

The trial court properly exercised discretion when granting a motion for reconsideration in order to correct a previous erroneous ruling on a motion to reconsider if done within 60 days of the prior ruling. In re Nixon, 785 P.2d 151 (Colo. App. 1989).

Where the record indicated that no further issues of material fact remained to be addressed, summary judgment was a final judgment despite trial court order indicating that genuine issues of material fact remained to be addressed, and district court lacked jurisdiction for further orders. Driscoll v. District Court, 870 P.2d 1250 (Colo. 1994).

Order reversed where court substitutes opinion on disputed facts. Orders granting new trials are subject to reversal where it appears from the record that the trial court has merely substituted its opinion on disputed questions of fact for that of the jury. DeMott v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 531, 486 P.2d 451 (1971); Roth v. Stark Lumber Co., 31 Colo. App. 121, 500 P.2d 145 (1972).

Where the court failed to rule on a motion for reconsideration within 60 days, the court effectively denied the motion, the judgment became final, and the court lost jurisdiction for any further action. Driscoll v. District Court, 870 P.2d 1250 (Colo. 1994).

Automatic denial after the 60-day determination period described in section (j) of this rule is mandatory. Actions taken by the court under this rule after the 60-day period are outside the court's jurisdiction and void. De Avila v. Estate of DeHerrera, 75 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2003).

But divestiture of jurisdiction under this rule does not preclude the court from considering proper motions made under C.R.C.P. 60. De Avila v. Estate of DeHerrera, 75 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2003).

A trial judge may not change the substance of a jury's verdict upon his own motion. Leo Payne Pontiac, Inc. v. Ratliff, 178 Colo. 361, 497 P.2d 997 (1972).

The granting of a new trial by the trial court should be reversed if the reasons for granting a new trial do not constitute legal grounds, or do not in fact exist. DeMott v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 531, 486 P.2d 451 (1971).

In trial by court, judge retains jurisdiction after motion filed. Upon the filing of the motion for new trial within the time provided by rule, the trial court retained full power to correct any and all errors theretofore committed in the trial to the court. Goodwin v. Eller, 127 Colo. 529, 258 P.2d 493 (1953).

Filing of motion operates to continue jurisdiction of court. Where a trial was to the court, and its findings were announced, and counsel gave notice of a motion for a new trial, and subsequently at the same term filed his motion, but the motion was not disposed of until the subsequent term, held that the proceedings at the first term, subsequent to the findings, operated to reserve the case and to continue the jurisdiction beyond that term, for the purpose of disposing of the motion and the settling of the bill of exceptions. Gomer v. Chaffe, 5 Colo. 383 (1880).

The trial court may reverse judgment. Where an action has been tried to the court without a jury, and a motion for new trial has been filed after entry of findings and judgment, the trial court has the power, upon consideration of such motion, to vacate the original findings and judgment, reverse itself, and enter a judgment in favor of the opposite party. Goodwin v. Eller, 127 Colo. 529, 258 P.2d 493 (1953); Smith v. Whitlow, 129 Colo. 239, 268 P.2d 1031 (1954).

Trial court properly refused to consider the issues raised in affidavits and did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff's motion to reconsider since affidavits filed after the granting of a motion for summary judgment cannot be considered on a motion to reconsider and a court need not entertain new theories on a motion to reconsider following the grant of summary judgment. Graven v. Vail Assocs., Inc., 888 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1994).

The court will not address issues raised for the first time in a reply brief on a post-trial motion for the same reason that issues will not be considered when raised for the first time in reply briefs on appeal. Flagstaff Enters. Constr. Inc. v. Snow, 908 P.2d 1183 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court may limit issues to be retried. When error exists as to only one or more issues and the judgment is in other respects free from error, a reviewing court may, when remanding the cause for a new trial, whether by the court or a jury, limit the new trial to the issues affected by the error whenever these issues are entirely distant and separable from the matters involved in other issues and the trial can be had without danger of complication with other matters. Murrow v. Whitely, 125 Colo. 392, 244 P.2d 657 (1952).

Where the practice permits a partial new trial, it may not properly be resorted to unless it clearly appears that the issue to be retried is so distinct and separable from the others that a trial of it alone may be had without injustice to either party. Murrow v. Whiteley, 125 Colo. 392, 244 P.2d 657 (1952).

Where the issues of damages and of liability in the action are closely intertwined, it would be error to confine the new trial solely to the liability issue. Where the issues at trial are interrelated and depend upon one another for determination, then error which requires a new trial on one issue will, of necessity, require a new trial as to all issues. Bassett v. O'Dell, 30 Colo. App. 215, 491 P.2d 604 (1971), aff'd, 178 Colo. 425, 498 P.2d 1134 (1972).

Under this rule, the court may, on review, subject dependency proceedings to a complete review, in furtherance of which he is empowered, inter alia, to reconsider the petition, take additional testimony, amend findings of fact and conclusions of law, or make new findings and conclusions, and direct the entry of a new order. People in Interest of S.S.T., 38 Colo. App. 110, 553 P.2d 418 (1976).

The motion for a new trial set forth numerous alleged errors of the trial court relating to the admission of evidence, exhibits, the giving and refusal of instructions, and other matters bearing directly upon the issue of liability and which, if overruled, defendants would be entitled to have reviewed upon writ of error. To limit the retrial to the issue of damages alone would deprive them of the full review covering all elements of the case to which they are unquestionably entitled. The trial court acted within its discretion and authority in declining to limit the issues upon retrial. Piper v. District Court, 147 Colo. 87, 364 P.2d 213 (1961).

Original judgment retains force until modified. Irregular and erroneous judgments necessarily retain their force and have effect until modified by a trial court in consequence of its authority in certain circumstances, or until vacated pursuant to new trial procedures under this rule, or until reversed by an appellate court in review proceedings. Such judgments are subject only to direct attack; they are not vulnerable to collateral assault. Davidson Chevrolet, Inc. v. City & County of Denver, 138 Colo. 171, 330 P.2d 1116 (1958), cert. denied, 359 U.S. 926, 79 S. Ct. 609, 3 L. Ed. 2d 629 (1959).

Interest runs from original judgment when motion for new trial is denied. Where a motion for a new trial is overruled and thereafter a trial court computes interest on the verdict and orders judgment in the amount of the verdict and interest, this concludes the trial court's action relative to the judgment and becomes the final judgment. Green v. Jones, 134 Colo. 208, 304 P.2d 901 (1956).

A memorandum in support of a motion for new trial is not mandatory but it is within the discretion of the trial judge to consider a motion for new trial without a memorandum. West-Fir Studs, Inc. v. Anlauf Lumber Co., 190 Colo. 298, 546 P.2d 487 (1976).

Memorandum brief is for benefit of trial court. Although section (a) (now section (d)) formerly required a memorandum brief and it was within the discretion of the trial court to strike a motion for new trial unaccompanied by such a brief, this requirement was for the benefit of the trial court in its own review and evaluation of its determination of the case, and where the trial court ruled on a motion for new trial without requiring a brief, the brief requirement was waived. L.C. Fulenwider, Inc. v. Ginsberg, 36 Colo. App. 246, 539 P.2d 1320 (1975) (decided prior to 1985 amendment).

The requirement of a memorandum brief in support of a motion for new trial is for the benefit of the trial court in its review of its determination of the case. Where the trial court considers the brief to be sufficient and considers the brief in its ruling on the motion, the brief has fulfilled its purpose as intended by the rules of procedure. In re Flohr, 672 P.2d 1024 (Colo. App. 1983).

Counsel is not entitled to free transcript to aid in preparation of motion. In absence of statute authorizing furnishing of free transcript of proceedings to aid in preparation of motion for new trial, counsel is not entitled to copy for preparation of such motion. People in Interest of A.R.S., 31 Colo. App. 268, 502 P.2d 92 (1972).

A motion for new trial filed in apt time suspends the judgment so that it becomes final only when the motion is overruled. Bates v. Woodward, 66 Colo. 555, 185 P. 351 (1919); Kinney v. Yoelin Bros. Mercantile Co., 74 Colo. 295, 220 P. 998 (1923).

This rule does not apply to appeals in a district court from judgments of a county court. Such appeals are pure creatures of statute, and no motion for a new trial is provided for in such cases. Erbaugh v. Jacobson, 140 Colo. 182, 342 P.2d 1026 (1959).

After an appeal of a final judgment has been perfected, the trial court is without jurisdiction to entertain any motion or any order affecting the judgment. People in Interest of J.L.P., 870 P.2d 1252 (Colo. App. 1994).

Requirement of supporting affidavit serves to demonstrate that one, who moves for a new trial alleging irregularities in prior proceedings that denied him a fair trial, is acting upon a basis of knowledge, not upon a suspicion or mere hope. Peoples Natural Gas Div. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1981).

Affidavit of losing counsel allowed to support motion for new trial where the affidavit contains factual allegations and a basis of knowledge upon which the motion for a new trial rests. Aldrich v. District Court, 714 P.2d 1321 (Colo. 1986).

Successor judge has discretion to rule on a motion for a new trial which challenges the sufficiency of the evidence. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982).

There is nothing in the rules prohibiting early filing of a motion for new trial; they only proscribe motions filed too late. Haynes v. Troxel, 670 P.2d 812 (Colo. App. 1983).

A judgment is final when it disposes of the entire litigation on the merits and a motion for costs does not stay the finality of that judgment. Driscoll v. District Court, 870 P.2d 1250 (Colo. 1994).

The provisions of C.R.C.P. 6(e) authorize the addition of three days to the prescribed period for taking certain actions following service by mail. However, the time for filing a rule 59 motion is specifically triggered either by entry of judgment in the presence of the parties or by mailing of notice of the court's entry of judgment if all parties were not present when judgment was entered. As a result, C.R.C.P. 6(e) is not applicable to the filing of rule 59 motions. Wilson v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 931 P.2d 523 (Colo. App. 1996).

Attorney fee issues. Trial court retains jurisdiction to determine motions on attorney fee issues even though the merits of the judgment are pending appeal. Koontz v. Rosener, 787 P.2d 192 (Colo. App. 1989).

Where each party prevails in part an award of costs is committed to sole discretion of trial court and court's discretion remains unaffected by fact that judgment awarded to one party is larger than judgment awarded to the other. Husband v. Colo. Mountain Cellars, 867 P.2d 57 (Colo. App. 1993).

A request for costs is outside the purview of this section because a decision concerning a request for costs does not amend or otherwise affect the finality of the judgment on the merits. Because a request for costs is not subject to the 60-day limitation, the trial court had jurisdiction to consider the defendant's bill of costs following the expiration of that period. Hierath-Prout v. Bradley, 982 P.2d 329 (Colo. App. 1999).

Rule not applicable. Motions filed following a jury trial that pertained to unresolved, substantive claims raised in the complaint are not directed at post-judgment relief and, therefore, this rule is not applicable. Church v. Amer. Standard Ins. Co. of Wis., 742 P.2d 971 (Colo. App. 1987).

No error by trial court in denying appellant's motion for leave to file a motion for reconsideration of motion to dismiss and in rejecting arguments to clarify trial court's original order. Failure to file motion within time allowed by section (a), absent extension, deprives court of jurisdiction to act under rule.

Here, time to file motion for post-trial relief ended before appellant filed motion for leave to file motion for reconsideration of motion to dismiss. As such, motion for leave was untimely, and trial court did not err in denying it. Titan Indem. Co. v. Travelers Prop. Cas. Co. of Am., 181 P.3d 303 (Colo. App. 2007).

Applied in Miller v. Carnation Co., 33 Colo. App. 62, 516 P.2d 661 (1973); City of Englewood v. Reffel, 34 Colo. App. 103, 522 P.2d 1241 (1974); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Evergreen, Inc., 35 Colo. II. POST-TRIAL MOTIONS.

A. New Trial.

The purpose of filing a post-trial motion is to give a trial court an opportunity to correct any errors. Walter v. Walter, 136 Colo. 405, 318 P.2d 221 (1957); Minshall v. Pettit, 151 Colo. 501, 379 P.2d 394 (1963); Rowe v. Watered Down Farms, 195 Colo. 152, 576 P.2d 172 (1978).

A motion for a new trial is not to be regarded as a routine or perfunctory matter. Its obvious purpose is to direct the attention of the trial court with at least some degree of specificity to that which the losing litigant asserts to be error, all to the end that the trial court will be afforded a last look, and an intelligent last look, at the controversy still before it. General allegations of error do not comply. Martin v. Opdyke Agency, Inc., 156 Colo. 316, 398 P.2d 971 (1965); Hamilton v. Gravinsky, 28 Colo. App. 408, 474 P.2d 185 (1970).

Order granting new trial is an interlocutory order, and the trial court retains jurisdiction to modify or rescind the order prior to the entry of any final judgment thereafter. A motion for reconsideration of such an order does not challenge the entry of the judgment and is not subject to the limitations of this rule. Songer v. Bowman, 804 P.2d 261 (Colo. App. 1990).

Section (f) of this rule, through the language "if a ground exists", incorporates the six specific grounds upon which post-trial relief may be granted, which are found in section (d) of the rule. Kincaid v. Western Oper. Co., 890 P.2d 249 (Colo. App. 1994).

Section (b) (now (a)) permits a motion for new trial to be filed within 10 (now 15) days after entry of judgment, which means after entry of an adverse judgment. Bushner v. Bushner, 141 Colo. 283, 348 P.2d 153 (1959).

Where the trial court issued its order nunc pro tunc on April 22, 1974, but the order was not noted in the registry of actions until May 31, 1974, the motion for new trial filed within 10 (now 15) days from that date was timely filed. In re Talarico, 36 Colo. App. 389, 540 P.2d 1147 (1975).

When 10-day rule not applicable. Where the court was granting plaintiff's motion for a new trial and not acting on its own motion, the 10-day rule set forth in section (b) (now (a)) of this rule was not applicable. Park Stations, Inc. v. Hamilton, 38 Colo. App. 216, 554 P.2d 311 (1976) (decided prior to 1977 and 1985 amendments).

Provision of section (b) (now (a)) is mandatory. Austin v. Coll./Univ. Ins. Co. of Am., 30 Colo. App. 502, 495 P.2d 1162 (1972).

Section (b) (now (a)) is mandatory, and failure to comply with it requires a dismissal of the appeal. SCA Servs., Inc. v. Gerlach, 37 Colo. App. 20, 543 P.2d 538 (1975); Henley v. Wendt, 640 P.2d 271 (Colo. App. 1982).

Timely filing is jurisdictional. Timely filing of a motion for a new trial is jurisdictional. SCA Servs., Inc. v. Gerlach, 37 Colo. App. 20, 543 P.2d 538 (1975).

The failure to file a motion for a new trial within the time prescribed by section (b) (now (a)), as extended by any orders of court pursuant to motions timely made, deprives the court of jurisdiction and requires dismissal of the appeal. Nat'l Account Sys. v. District Court, 634 P.2d 48 (Colo. 1981); Schuster v. Zwicker, 659 P.2d 687 (Colo. 1983); Liberty Mutual Ins. Co. v. Safeco Ins. Co., 679 P.2d 1115 (Colo. App. 1984); In re McSoud, 131 P.3d 1208 (Colo. App. 2006).

A timely motion for a new trial, or to alter or amend the judgment, is a jurisdictional prerequisite to appellate review of such judgment. Watered Down Farms v. Rowe, 39 Colo. App. 169, 566 P.2d 710 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 195 Colo. 152, 576 P.2d 172 (1978).

Period for filing a motion for a new trial begins when notice of entry of judgment is mailed to the parties, but C.R.C.P. 6(e) extends that period when a judgment is mailed. Because C.R.C.P. 6(e) does not specifically exclude C.R.C.P. 59 motions from its provisions, C.R.C.P. 6(e) extends the time for filing a C.R.C.P. 59 motion when the parties were not present when the judgment was signed and the notice of entry of judgment was mailed to the parties. Littlefield v. Bamberger, 10 P.3d 710 (Colo. App. 2000).

Extension of time is discretionary. Trial judge's extension of the time for filing the motion for new trial, from 10 (now 15) to 20 days, is within his discretion. City & County of Denver v. Bd. of Adjustment, 31 Colo. App. 324, 505 P.2d 44 (1972).

Discretion to grant or deny belated request. Where party did not file motion for fees until 24 days after expiration of 15-day period and did not request extension of time nor offer excuse for delay, court did not abuse its discretion by denying the motion. Major v. Chons Bros., Inc., 53 P.3d 781 (Colo. App. 2002).

Extension of time for filing post-trial motions. Where the trial court, following judgment, grants a ''stay'' in order for counsel to have an ''opportunity to pursue the matter further'', it intends to extend the permissible time for filing post-trial motions. Blecker v. Kofoed, 672 P.2d 526 (Colo. 1983).

Court of review will assume extension was properly made. Where the time for filing a motion for new trial was extended to 15 (now regular time limit) days after the entry of judgment, the court of review will assume that the extension was properly made, in the absence of proper objections to the order of the county court. Niles v. Shinkle, 119 Colo. 458, 204 P.2d 1077 (1949).

Failure to file motion in time is fatal. The failure to file a motion for a new trial within the time provided by this rule, or within the extended period fixed by the court for so doing, is fatal to the right of review. Therefore, the county court was without jurisdiction to entertain a motion for a new trial after the time allowed by the court; and such motion should have been stricken from the files. Niles v. Shinkle, 119 Colo. 458, 204 P.2d 1077 (1949); City & County of Denver v. Just, 175 Colo. 260, 487 P.2d 367 (1971).

Trial court proceeded in excess of its jurisdiction when it vacated the jury verdict and ordered a new trial outside of the time limits provided by this rule. The trial court had jurisdiction to order a new trial within the time limit only. Beavers v. Archstone Comtys. Ltd., 64 P.3d 855 (Colo. 2003).

For permissibility of filing motion with judge or clerk, see Sprott v. Roberts, 154 Colo. 252, 390 P.2d 465 (1964).

Defendant must file for new trial after his case is dismissed, not after conclusion of entire case. Where a complaint is dismissed as to certain defendants and judgment of dismissal entered under C.R.C.P. 41(b)(1), a court has no power after the time to file a motion for a new trial has expired as to such defendants, to grant a motion for a new trial as to all defendants, such dismissal constituting a judgment on the merits under C.R.C.P. 41. Graham v. District Court, 137 Colo. 233, 323 P.2d 635 (1958).

A judgment is entered only when noted in judgment docket. For purposes of timely filing of a motion for new trial under section (b) (now (a)) of this rule, a judgment is ''entered'' only upon notation in the judgment docket pursuant to C.R.C.P. 58(a)(3) (now (a)) and C.R.C.P.

79(d). City & County of Denver v. Just, 175 Colo. 260, 487 P.2d 367 (1971).

If this section is not complied with, supreme court cannot review. Where a record on error fails to show compliance with this section requiring the filing of a motion for a new trial, or that a trial court otherwise ordered under section (f), the supreme court will not consider the merits on review. Sullivan v. Modern Music Co., 137 Colo. 292, 324 P.2d 374 (1958) (decided prior to 1985 amendment).

C.R.C.P. 6(a) does apply to extend time under this rule. Bonanza Corp. v. Durbin, 696 P.2d 818 (Colo. 1985).

Court did not forestall 60-day deadline by taking inconclusive action within said period, i.e. scheduling hearing on motion. Canton Oil v. District Court, 731 P.2d 687 (Colo. 1987).

Motion may be filed prior to entry of judgment. A motion for new trial may properly be filed prior to the execution of the written order entering the judgment. In re Jones, 668 P.2d 980 (Colo. App. 1983).

Date of entry of judgment on jury verdict is effective date. The date that judgment on a jury verdict is entered in open court is the effective date of entry of judgment which governs the filing of a motion for new trial under section (b) (now (a)). Henley v. Wendt, 640 P.2d 271 (Colo. App. 1982).

C.R.C.P. 58(a) controls date of entry of judgment. The timeliness of a civil appeal is governed by C.A.R. 4(a) (appeal as of right), not C.R.C.P. 58(a); C.R.C.P. 58(a), however, does control the date of entry of judgment for the purposes of this rule. Moore & Co. v. Williams, 672 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1983).

When post-trial motion is filed prior to entry of judgment, it is deemed to have been filed on the date of entry of judgment, and the 60-day period within which to rule on motion commences to run from said date. People in Interest of T.R.W., 759 P.2d 768 (Colo. App. 1988).

Post-trial motions for attorney fees are subject to the provisions of this rule, and the effect of such motions upon the time limitations of C.A.R. 4(a) are as specified in this rule. Torrez v. Day, 725 P.2d 1184 (Colo. App. 1986).

Evidence was not "newly discovered" when the party seeking a new trial had the evidence in its possession two months prior to the trial court's judgment, but did not file the evidence with the trial court. Mortgage Invs. Corp. v. Battle Mountain Corp., 70 P.3d 1176 (Colo. App. 2003).

Where there has never been a trial, this section cannot be violated. In a proceeding under the Colorado Children's Code, title 19, where it was argued that the petition for new trial and demand for jury trial were filed too late, and thus were not in accordance with section (b) (now (a)) of this rule, this argument was rejected since according to the record there had never been any trial held or evidence presented in support of the dependency petition and, hence, no violation of said section could have occurred. C. B. v. People in Interest of J. T. B., 30 Colo. App. 269, 493 P.2d 691 (1971).

The running of the time for filing a notice of appeal is terminated upon the timely filing of a motion for new trial, and the time begins to run anew when that motion is denied. A subsequent motion for new trial that raises issues that either were or could have been raised in the movant's prior motion does not affect the running of the time for filing the notice of appeal. Wright Farms, Inc. v. Weninger, 669 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1983).

Trial court erred in failing to consider a motion for new trial and motion to amend judgment which were filed after court entered judgment from bench but before judgment was signed as written order and filed. Haynes v. Troxel, 670 P.2d 812 (Colo. App. 1983).

For distinction between considerations governing determination of effect of time limitations in criminal cases and in civil cases, see People v. Moore, 193 Colo. 81, 562 P.2d 749 (1977).

Where defendant did not seek to reopen the divorce proceeding until approximately five years after entry of judgment, none of the grounds of this rule or C.R.C.P. 60 were available to him to reopen the divorce proceeding. McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977).

Extinguishing right of appeal by relating action back to date of judgment. Trial court's action in relating back matters decided on May 28 to the May 15 entry on the judgment docket had the effect of extinguishing the petitioner's right to appeal from the determinations made on May 28. Under these circumstances, the 10-day period of section (b) (now (a)) of this rule expired before the remaining issues in the case had even been determined by the trial court. This result contravenes the right of appeal granted by the Colorado constitution. In re Gardella, 190 Colo. 402, 547 P.2d 928 (1976) (decided prior to the 1977 and 1985 amendments).

Motion for judgment non abstante is wholly separate and distinct from motion for new trial and does not take the place of one. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

A motion for a new trial may be joined with a motion for judgment non abstante or a new trial may be prayed in the alternative. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

Granting a motion for judgment notwithstanding verdict (n.o.v.) does not effect an automatic denial of an alternative motion for a new trial. Grange Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Golden Gas Co., 133 Colo. 537, 298 P.2d 950 (1956).

Ruling on both should be made at same time. Where a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or in the alternative for a new trial is filed under this rule, a trial court should make a ruling on both phases of the motion at the same time. Grange Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Golden Gas Co., 133 Colo. 537, 298 P.2d 950 (1956).

This rule contemplates that either party to an action is entitled to the trial judge's decision on both motions, if both are presented. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

If a trial court errs in granting the motion n.o.v., the party against whom the verdict goes is entitled to have his motion for a new trial considered in respect of asserted substantial trial errors and matters appealing to the discretion of the judge. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

The cause will be remanded for a ruling on such motion. Where a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or in the alternative for a new trial is filed, and the court erroneously grants the motion for judgment, leaving the motion for a new trial undecided, the cause will be remanded for a ruling on such motion. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

A decision in favor of the moving party upon the motion for judgment ends the litigation and often makes it possible for an appellate court to dispose of the case without remanding it for a new trial. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

Trial court may grant a motion for a new trial on all or part of the issues. Trione v. Mike Wallen Standard, Inc., 902 P.2d 454 (Colo. App. 1995).

Before granting a partial new trial, it should clearly appear that the issue to be retried is entirely distinct and separable from the other issues involved in the case and that a partial retrial can be had without injustice to any party. Bassett v. O'Dell, 178 Colo. 425, 498 P.2d 1134 (1972); Trione v. Mike Wallen Standard, Inc., 902 P.2d 454 (Colo. App. 1995).

If a trial court, in reviewing and examining the facts, is dissatisfied with the verdict because it is against the weight, sufficiency, or preponderance of the evidence, it may, under certain limitations, set the same aside and grant a new trial so that the issues of fact may ultimately be determined. Burenheide v. Wall, 131 Colo. 371, 281 P.2d 1000 (1955).

In passing upon such motions, a trial judge is necessarily required to weigh the evidence, so that he may determine whether the verdict was one which might reasonably have been reached. Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952).

The trial judge has discretion to grant a new trial before another jury if he thinks the verdict is wrong, though there be some evidence to support it, and his action is generally not subject to review on appeal. Burenheide v. Wall, 131 Colo. 371, 281 P.2d 1000 (1955).

Applied in Thorpe v. Durango Sch. Dist. No. 9-R, 41 Colo. App. 473, 591 P.2d 1329 (1978); Luna v. Fisher, 690 P.2d 264 (Colo. App. 1984); Acierno by & through Acierno v. Garyfallou, 2016 COA 91, 409 P.3d 464.

B. Judgment Notwithstanding the Verdict.

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Criminal Procedure — Does It Meet Minimum Standards?", see 28 Dicta 14 (1951).

This rule provides the method for securing a judgment "non obstante veredicto" when a motion for a directed verdict has been properly requested. Grange Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Golden Gas Co., 133 Colo. 537, 298 P.2d 950 (1956).

This rule adds nothing of substance to the rights of litigants previously available through a more cumbersome procedure. Burenheide v. Wall, 131 Colo. 371, 281 P.2d 1000 (1955).

The reason underlying this rule is that an opportunity should be given a trial court to reexamine, as a matter of law, the facts which have been considered and resolved by a jury. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

Motion for directed verdict must be made at conclusion of evidence. In actions where the issues are submitted to a jury for determination, it is an essential prerequisite to the right of either party to file a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict that a motion for directed verdict shall have been made at the conclusion of all the evidence. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

This rule does not compel a party against whom a verdict is directed to make a motion for a directed verdict in his favor as a condition to the right to file a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, since a verdict having been directed by the court, the reason for the requirement no longer exists. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

Where a motion to dismiss is interposed at the conclusion of all the evidence and after verdict and judgment a motion for a new trial is filed, one of the grounds thereof being that a court erred in denying the motion to dismiss made at the conclusion of all the evidence, such motion is sufficient to authorize a trial court to enter judgment for a defendant notwithstanding the verdict. Mountain States Mixed Feed Co. v. Ford, 140 Colo. 224, 343 P.2d 828 (1959).

For a court to set aside a verdict as against the weight of evidence, the evidence may be merely insufficient in fact and it may be either insufficient in law or it may have more weight and not enough to justify the court in exercising the control which the law gives it to prevent unjust verdicts to allow a verdict to stand. Gossard v. Watson, 122 Colo. 271, 221 P.2d 353 (1950); Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952).

This rule does not allow for a belated disturbance of a jury's finding on the facts when a reservation has been made to determine law questions only. Wallower v. Elder, 126 Colo. 109, 247 P.2d 682 (1952).

Filing a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict within 10 days after receipt of the verdict is mandatory. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

Unless such motion is filed within that time, a court has no power to pass on it. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957); Arrow Mfg. Co. v. Ross, 141 Colo. 1, 346 P.2d 305 (1959).

Appellate court forbidden to enter judgment. In the absence of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict made in the trial court within 10 days after reception of a verdict, the rule forbids the trial judge or an appellate court to enter such a judgment. Mero v. Holly Hudson Motor Co., 129 Colo. 282, 269 P.2d 698 (1954).

Standard for granting judgment n.o.v. A jury's verdict can be set aside and judgment notwithstanding the verdict entered only if the evidence is such that reasonable men could not reach the same conclusion as the jury. Thorpe v. Durango Sch. Dist. No. 9-R, 41 Colo. App. 473, 591 P.2d 1329 (1978), aff'd, 200 Colo. 268, 614 P.2d 880 (1980); Wesley v. United Servs. Auto Ass'n, 694 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1984); Smith v. Denver, 726 P.2d 1125 (Colo. 1986); Alzado v. Blinder, Robinson & Co., Inc., 752 P.2d 544 (Colo. 1988); Nelson v. Hammond, 802 P.2d 452 (Colo. 1990); McCafferty v. Musat, 817 P.2d 1039 (Colo. App. 1990).

When order enlarging time to file motion for judgment n.o.v. permissible. Although C.R.C.P. 6(b) expressly limits a trial court's ability to extend a time for acting under section (b) of this rule, there is an exception to that limitation where a party reasonably relies and acts upon an erroneous or misleading statement of ruling by a trial court regarding the time for filing post-trial motions. Converse v. Zinke, 635 P.2d 882 (Colo. 1981).

Motion for judgment non abstante is wholly separate and distinct from motion for new trial and does not take the place of one. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

A motion for a new trial may be joined with a motion for judgment non abstante or a new trial may be prayed in the alternative. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

Granting a motion for judgment n.o.v. does not effect an automatic denial of an alternative motion for a new trial. Grange Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Golden Gas Co., 133 Colo. 537, 298 P.2d 950 (1956).

The standard for granting a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is complicated when statutory presumptions exist. Such presumptions may be rebutted only by clear and convincing evidence that persuades the finder of fact that the truth of the contention is highly probable and free from serious and substantial doubt. People in Interest of M.C., 844 P.2d 1313 (Colo. App. 1992).

This rule contemplates that either party to an action is entitled to the trial judge's decision on both motions, if both are presented. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

Ruling on both should be made at same time. Where a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or in the alternative for a new trial is filed under this rule, a trial court should make a ruling on both phases of the motion at the same time. Grange Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Golden Gas Co., 133 Colo. 537, 298 P.2d 950 (1956).

If a trial court errs in granting the motion n.o.v., the party against whom the verdict goes is entitled to have his motion for a new trial considered in respect of asserted substantial trial errors and matters appealing to the discretion of the judge. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

The cause will be remanded for a ruling on such motion. Where a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or in the alternative for a new trial is filed, and the court erroneously grants the motion for judgment, leaving the motion for a new trial undecided, the cause will be remanded for a ruling on such motion. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

A decision in favor of the moving party upon the motion for judgment ends the litigation and often makes it possible for an appellate court to dispose of the case without remanding it for a new trial. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

If a trial court, in reviewing and examining the facts, is dissatisfied with the verdict because it is against the weight, sufficiency, or preponderance of the evidence, it may, under certain limitations, set the same aside and grant a new trial so that the issues of fact may ultimately be determined. Burenheide v. Wall, 131 Colo. 371, 281 P.2d 1000 (1955).

In ruling on motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, the court must determine whether a reasonable person could not have reached the same conclusion as did the jury and, in making such determination, the court cannot consider the weight of the evidence or the credibility of the witnesses and must consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the verdict. People in Interest of T.R.W., 759 P.2d 768 (Colo. App. 1988); Tuttle v. ANR Freight Sys., Inc., 797 P.2d 825 (Colo. App. 1990); Durdin v. Cheyenne Mountain Bank, 98 P.3d 899 (Colo. App. 2004).

A judgment notwithstanding the verdict may be entered only if a reasonable person could not reach the same conclusion as the jury, when viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the party against whom the motion is directed. Every reasonable inference that may be drawn from the evidence must be drawn in favor of the non-moving party. Boulder Valley Sch. Dist. R-2 v. Price, 805 P.2d 1085 (Colo. 1991).

In passing upon such motions, a trial judge is necessarily required to weigh the evidence, so that he may determine whether the verdict was one which might reasonably have been reached. Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952).

The trial judge has discretion to grant a new trial before another jury if he thinks the verdict is wrong, though there be some evidence to support it, and his action is generally not subject to review on appeal. Burenheide v. Wall, 131 Colo. 371, 281 P.2d 1000 (1955).

The trial court did not view the evidence presented in appellant's favor and thereby misapplied the standard for granting a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. People in Interest of M.C., 844 P.2d 1313 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in Alden Sign Co. v. Roblee, 121 Colo. 432, 217 P.2d 867 (1950); Farmer v. Norm "Fair Trade" Stamp, Inc., 164 Colo. 156, 433 P.2d 490, 36 A.L.R.3d 232 (1967); DeCaire v. Pub. Serv. Co., 173 Colo. 402, 479 P.2d 964 (1971); Wheller & Lewis v. Slifer, 195 Colo. 291, 577 P.2d 1092 (1978); Thorpe v. Durango Sch. Dist. No. 9-R, 41 Colo. App. 473, 591 P.2d 1329 (1978); Rogers v. Forest City Stapleton, Inc., 2015 COA 167M, 441 P.3d 969.

C. Amendment of Judgment.

Former section (e) required that a motion to alter or amend must be filed within 10 days after entry of judgment. Vanadium Corp. of Am. v. Wesco Stores Co., 135 Colo. 77, 308 P.2d 1011 (1957).

Former section (e) of this rule provided for the filing of a motion to alter or amend a judgment, which is the motion that is referred to in former section (f) of this rule, and it is not to be confused with a motion under former C.R.C.P. 52(b) to amend the findings. Austin v. Coll./Univ. Ins. Co. of Am., 30 Colo. App. 502, 495 P.2d 1162 (1972).

When trial court amends pursuant to a motion, original judgment is not final. Former section (e) of this rule specified that a party may move to alter or amend a judgment by a motion filed not later than 10 days after entry of judgment. Appellee filed such a motion within the allotted time, and the trial court subsequently did amend its judgment pursuant to such motion and the supplemental motion. Under these circumstances, the original trial court's judgment never became final. It was not enforceable by either divorced party with respect to his or her property rights. It did not create an enforceable right either in the husband or in his estate to take a divided share of the joint tenancy property. Sarno v. Sarno, 28 Colo. App. 598, 478 P.2d 711 (1970).

A judgment amended to comply with a motion therefor is the only judgment to which a writ of error will lie. Green v. Jones, 134 Colo. 208, 304 P.2d 901 (1956).

C.R.C.P. 6(b) divests the court of jurisdiction to extend the time for taking action under former section (e) of this rule. Vanadium Corp. of Am. v. Wesco Stores Co., 135 Colo. 77, 308 P.2d 1011 (1957).

C.R.C.P. 6(b) gives trial court wide latitude in extending 10-day period of former section (e). Farmer v. Norm "Fair Trade" Stamp, Inc., 164 Colo. 156, 433 P.2d 490 (1967).

Memorandum brief must be filed with motion. The rule requiring a short memorandum brief to be filed with a motion for new trial applies equally to a motion to alter or amend the judgment. Zehnder v. Thirteenth Judicial Dist. Court, 193 Colo. 502, 568 P.2d 457 (1977) (decided before 1985 amendment).

Court loses jurisdiction to hear plaintiff's application for attorney's fees if the plaintiff fails to file a motion to amend the judgment within 15 days. Wesson v. Johnson, 622 P.2d 104 (Colo. App. 1980).

Omission of order for costs indicates no allowance of costs. As determined by the court entering judgment, the omission of an order relating to costs constitutes a direction by it that no costs, including attorney fees, are allowed. Wesson v. Johnson, 622 P.2d 104 (Colo. App. 1980).

Appellants barred on appeal from asserting error by trial court. Where, after two cases were tried and the parties' rights and obligations were determined by partial summary judgments which were not made final judgments under C.R.C.P. 54(b), appellants could have, and indeed should have, moved for a new trial or an altered or amended judgment under this rule and where they did not timely file such motions and allow the trial court an opportunity to review its possible errors, appellants were barred on appeal from asserting error by the trial court. Manka v. Martin, 200 Colo. 260, 614 P.2d 875 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 913, 101 S. Ct. 1354, 67 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1981).

Issue of amendment of judgment due to nonjoinder of indispensable parties was preserved for appellate review, despite appellee's assertion to the contrary, due to the court's ability to act after judgment to protect absent indispensable parties. Francis v. Aspen Mtn. Condo. Ass'n, 2017 COA 19, 401 P.3d 125.

Beneficiaries of a trust are not indispensable parties where the trust is a party to the action and is represented by the trustee. In such a case the beneficiaries' absence does not "impair or impede" a complete adjudication of the parties' rights. Francis v. Aspen Mtn. Condo. Ass'n, 2017 COA 19, 401 P.3d 125.

Repeated assurances by the court clerk that the defendant's motion to alter and amend the judgment had been forwarded to the presiding judge when, in fact, no notification of said motion had been given to the judge did not constitute an "extreme situation" allowing relief under C.R.C.P. 60(b)(5). Sandoval v. Trinidad Area Health Ass'n, 752 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1988).

Court properly denied motion to amend judgment in malpractice claim against attorney as defendant is not entitled to set-off fees which would otherwise have been collected from original action. McCafferty v. Musat, 817 P.2d 1039 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where notice of entry of judgment is mailed to only one party in contravention of C.R.C.P. 58(a), the time provided by section (a) of this rule for filing a post-trial motion commences from the date that the notice is mailed by that party to the party subsequently moving for post-trial relief. Padilla v. D.E. Frey & Co., Inc., 939 P.2d 475 (Colo. App. 1997).

Trial court's property division in dissolution of marriage action reflects no abuse of discretion based on husband's economic circumstances, the characterization of property as marital or separate, or wife's depletion of marital property, where trial court did its best in dividing marital property based only on wife's evidence since husband elected not to participate in the action. In re Eisenhuth, 976 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1999).

Applied in Hughes v. Worth, 162 Colo. 429, 427 P.2d 327 (1967); Bittle v. CAM-Colo., LLC, 2012 COA 93, 318 P.3d 65.

III. ON INITIATIVE OF COURT.

The trial court has an immemorial right to grant a new trial whenever, in its opinion, the justice of the particular case so requires. Brncic v. Metz, 28 Colo. App. 204, 471 P.2d 618 (1970).

New trials are not abridged or disfavored by the new rules. The judge may even grant one on his own initiative without a motion. Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952).

Judge may grant new trial even if party's motion is insufficient. Where plaintiffs filed a motion for new trial in apt time on the ground of an erroneous instruction to the jury, the fact that the court granted a new trial on a portion of motion which correctly stated the law and hence was insufficient to justify granting the new trial did not support claim that the court erroneously acted upon its own initiative under this rule where the instruction was patently erroneous in other respects. Callaham v. Slavsky, 153 Colo. 291, 385 P.2d 674 (1963).

C.R.C.P. 51, does not apply to trial court when it sua sponte grants new trial. The purposes of the contemporaneous objection requirement of C.R.C.P. 51 are not violated when the trial court acts on its own initiative to order a new trial under this rule. First Nat'l Bank v. Campbell, 198 Colo. 344, 599 P.2d 915 (1979).

Where status of minor children at stake, court remanded for findings. While a motion may fail to comply strictly with the requirements of this rule when the status of minor children is at stake, a court of appeals will notice error in the trial court proceedings and remand for findings. In re Brown, 626 P.2d 755 (Colo. App. 1981).

An order enlarging the time within which to file a motion for judgment n.o.v. is without effect in view of the provisions of C.R.C.P. 6(b). Mumm v. Adam, 134 Colo. 493, 307 P.2d 797 (1957).

C.R.C.P. 6(b) provides that a court may not extend the time for taking any action under this rule. Ross v. Arrow Mfg. Co., 134 Colo. 530, 307 P.2d 196 (1957).

District court exceeded its jurisdiction by ordering, sua sponte, a new trial on all the issues of marriage dissolution proceeding because the district court acted outside its time limits mandated by section (c) of this rule to initiate such post-trial relief and failed to state adequate grounds for a new trial as required by said rule. Koch v. District Court, Jefferson County, 948 P.2d 4 (Colo. 1997).

IV. GROUNDS FOR NEW TRIAL.

A. In General.

Annotator's note. Since former section (a)(1) (now (d)(1)) of this rule is similar to § 237 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

A trial court may not grant a new trial for reasons other than those enumerated in section (d). This rule limits the grounds to those specified in the rule, and there is no catch-all or discretionary ground available. Rains v. Barber, 2018 CO 61, 420 P.3d 969.

A miscarriage of justice is not one of the grounds specified in section (d). Trial court abused its discretion in granting a new trial on that ground. Rains v. Barber, 2018 CO 61, 420 P.3d 969.

Use of "shall" in section (a). Prior to 1985, former section (a) of this rule specified that the memorandum brief "shall be filed with the motion". There is a presumption that the word "shall" when used in a statute or rule is mandatory. Anlauf Lumber Co. v. West-Fir Studs, Inc., 35 Colo. App. 119, 531 P.2d 980 (1974), aff'd, 190 Colo. 298, 546 P.2d 487 (1976) (decided prior to the 1985 amendment).

This rule specifies that an application for new trial, under certain circumstances, "shall be supported by affidavit", and there is a presumption that the word "shall" when used in a statute or rule is mandatory. Park Stations, Inc., v. Hamilton, 38 Colo. App. 216, 554 P.2d 311 (1976); In re Fleet, 701 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1985).

Notwithstanding the affidavit requirement in section (d) of this rule, C.R.E. 606(b) acts to preclude juror affidavits as a basis for seeking post-trial relief, unless the exceptions in that rule apply. Stewart v. Rice, 47 P.3d 316 (Colo. 2002).

Issues must be preserved for consideration on appeal. Where a party fails to preserve issues for review in his motion for a new trial or in his motion to amend judgment, the court will not consider them on appeal. Hawkins v. Powers, 635 P.2d 915 (Colo. App. 1981).

Court not required to act in absence of affidavit. Upon receipt of a motion for a new trial on those grounds which, according to the rules, must be supported by affidavit, the court is not required to act in the absence of such affidavit. Park Stations, Inc., v. Hamilton, 38 Colo. App. 216, 554 P.2d 311 (1976).

A motion to alter or amend judgment, or for new trial, does not in itself amount to a memorandum brief. Zehnder v. Thirteenth Judicial Dist. Court, 193 Colo. 502, 568 P.2d 457 (1977) (decided prior to the 1985 amendment).

Where events forming the basis for the granting of a new trial occurred in the presence of the court and during the trial, the trial judge obviously had sufficient first hand knowledge to determine whether there was adequate ground for a new trial under this rule, and, under such circumstances, the absence of an affidavit does not deprive the court of the power to grant relief. Park Stations, Inc. v. Hamilton, 38 Colo. App. 216, 554 P.2d 311 (1976).

Where a motion for a new trial is based on misconduct of counsel which occurred in the presence of the court, the court may act upon and grant such motion even if no affidavit is submitted. Park Stations, Inc. v. Hamilton, 38 Colo. App. 216, 554 P.2d 311 (1976).

New trial may be granted upon misconduct of counsel. The granting of a new trial may be founded upon counsel's misstatements of fact, or on his statements of fact which have not been introduced in or established by evidence, or on a finding that counsel has made a statement or argument appealing to the emotions and prejudices of the jury. Park Stations, Inc. v. Hamilton, 38 Colo. App. 216, 554 P.2d 311 (1976).

A new trial is not granted for misconduct of counsel as a disciplinary measure, but to prevent a miscarriage of justice. Park Stations, Inc. v. Hamilton, 38 Colo. App. 216, 554 P.2d 311 (1976).

Fact that the court found defendant's counsel to be guilty of misconduct during the course of the trial for more reasons than those alleged by plaintiff does not put the court in the position of acting on its own initiative in granting motion for new trial. Park Stations, Inc. v. Hamilton, 38 Colo. App. 216, 554 P.2d 311 (1976).

Filing of motion tolls time for filing notice of appeal. The filing of a motion to alter or amend a judgment tolls the running of the time for filing notice of appeal. Valenzuela v. Mercy Hosp., 34 Colo. App. 5, 521 P.2d 1287 (1974).

Affidavit filed after time allowed is not to be considered. An affidavit filed in support of a motion for a new trial without leave of the court, and after the time limited by a previous order, is not to be considered. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Heckman, 45 Colo. 470, 101 P. 976 (1909).

Sufficiency of affidavit required. An affidavit merely stating what the opposing counsel had directed his client to do, but not showing that in fact anything was done pursuant to the direction, is insufficient to convict the party of misconduct. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Heckman, 45 Colo. 470, 101 P. 976 (1909).

The requirement of an affidavit presupposes that the affiant has firsthand information rather than possessing only hearsay. Hansen v. Dillon, 156 Colo. 396, 400 P.2d 201 (1965).

The reception of oral testimony at the time the motion for new trial is under consideration is a matter within the discretion of the trial court. The record in the instant case does not suggest an abuse of this discretion. Burnham v. Grant, 24 Colo. App. 131, 134 P. 254 (1913).

Hearsay and conclusory allegations are insufficient under rule. Peoples Natural Gas Div. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1981).

B. Irregularity in Proceedings.

Ruling on motion for new trial on ground of misconduct of witness is within discretion of trial court. Hicks v. Cramer, 85 Colo. 409, 277 P. 299 (1929); Simon v. Williams, 123 Colo. 505, 232 P.2d 181 (1951).

Ruling will not be disturbed in absence of showing that the court's discretion was abused. Hicks v. Cramer, 85 Colo. 409, 277 P. 299 (1929).

For when discretion is allowed, see Simon v. Williams, 123 Colo. 505, 232 P.2d 181 (1951).

An irregularity warranting a new trial is an improper occurrence during the trial that affected or likely affected the outcome. Rains v. Barber, 2018 CO 61, 420 P.3d 969.

The finding of the court cannot be disturbed unless it was manifestly against the weight of the testimony. Liutz v. Denver City Tramway Co., 54 Colo. 371, 131 P. 258 (1913).

Objection on ground of misconduct of witness must be made before verdict. A party to a trial who, although knowing of apparent misconduct on the part of a witness, remains silent until after the verdict has gone against him, may not then assign such misconduct as a ground for a new trial. Hicks v. Cramer, 85 Colo. 409, 277 P. 299 (1929).

Conduct of witness held insufficient to warrant reversal. The fact that a witness was seen in conversation with a juror during a recess of the court, is insufficient to warrant a reversal of the judgment, where there was nothing to indicate any attempt to influence the juror. Hicks v. Cramer, 85 Colo. 409, 277 P. 299 (1929).

Giving cigars to jurors after verdict is not grounds for new trial. The fact that the attorney of the successful party treated four of the jurors to cigars, after the verdict, merely in a way of civility, and without any design or forethought, held no ground to vacate the verdict, though the court suggested that, upon ethical grounds the act of the attorney was indiscreet. Liutz v. Denver City Tramway Co., 54 Colo. 371, 131 P. 258 (1913).

Improper remarks by employees of a party to jury may be grounds for new trial. If persons employed by a suitor hang about the purlieus of the court, mingle with those summoned as jurors, converse with them touching causes in which the suitor is concerned, and by flattery, ridicule, and like insidious means, endeavor to improperly influence them, a verdict shown to have been influenced by such practices should be unhesitatingly vacated. Liutz v. Denver City Tramway Co., 54 Colo. 371, 131 P. 258 (1913).

Improper remarks to jurors which manifestly had no effect upon their deliberations are not ground for a new trial. Liutz v. Denver City Tramway Co., 54 Colo. 371, 131 P. 258 (1913).

Seeing of excluded exhibit by jury may be grounds for new trial. A mistake or inadvertence whereby the jury was permitted to have access to an exhibit which had been excluded from consideration was an irregularity in the proceedings, and under the provisions of this rule, the proper method of presenting it in a motion for a new trial is to support and file an affidavit with the motion. Maloy v. Griffith, 125 Colo. 85, 240 P.2d 923 (1952).

If trial court instructs jury on improper closing remarks, there are no grounds for new trial. Where remarks in closing argument are improper but the trial court immediately and subsequently properly instructs, the reviewing court must presume that the jury followed the trial court's instructions, such not constituting grounds for new trial. Candelaria v. People, 177 Colo. 136, 493 P.2d 355 (1972).

Denial of a motion for a continuance because of the unavoidable absence of a party during litigation is grounds for the granting of a new trial because the attendance of a litigant is necessary for a fair presentation of his case. Gonzales v. Harris, 189 Colo. 518, 542 P.2d 842 (1975).

For deficiency in trial record which requires reversal of judgment but not new trial, see Moore v. Fischer, 31 Colo. App. 425, 505 P.2d 383 (1972), aff'd, 183 Colo. 392, 517 P.2d 458 (1973).

No relief under this rule for malpractice of party's own attorney. In re Jaeger, 883 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1994).

Sustained objection to expert testimony not an irregularity warranting a new trial. There was no evidence in the record of juror confusion and the jury had ample knowledge of its role, and therefore did not need to hear expert's apportionment of fault to perform its role. Rains v. Barber, 2018 CO 61, 420 P.3d 969.

An improper jury verdict may stem from an irregularity in the proceedings, but the verdict itself cannot be an irregularity justifying a new trial. Rains v. Barber, 2018 CO 61, 420 P.3d 969.

Untimely filing of motion contending irregularity in proceedings fails because the court was deprived of jurisdiction after the time allowed by section (a) had run. When plaintiff did not argue that the trial court erred in ruling her motion under this rule was untimely, she was considered to have abandoned the issue of timeliness. In re McSoud, 131 P.3d 1208 (Colo. App. 2006).

C. Misconduct of Jury.

Annotator's note. Since section (a)(2) (now (d)(2)) of this rule is similar to § 237 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Disposition of motion is within discretion of trial court. Disposition of a motion for a new trial based on the ground of misconduct of jurors is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Denver Alfalfa Milling & Prods. Co. v. Erickson, 77 Colo. 583, 239 P. 17 (1925).

Verdict set aside where misconduct revealed. Jury verdict will be set aside when juror's affidavit revealed certain misconduct on the part of one or more of the jurors. Santilli v. Pueblo, 184 Colo. 432, 521 P.2d 170 (1974).

Ruling on motion will not be disturbed on review, unless the discretion has been abused or the ruling is manifestly against the weight of the evidence. Denver Alfalfa Milling & Prods. Co. v. Erickson, 77 Colo. 583, 239 P. 17 (1925).

Test of misconduct is capacity of influencing result. The test for determining whether a new trial will be granted because of the misconduct of jurors or the intrusion of irregular influences is whether such matters could have a tendency to influence the jury in arriving at its verdict in a manner inconsistent with the legal proofs and the court's charge. If the irregular matter has that tendency on the face of it, a new trial should be granted without further inquiry as to its actual effect. The test is not whether the irregular matter actually influenced the result, but whether it had the capacity of doing so. Butters v. Wann, 147 Colo. 352, 363 P.2d 494 (1961); T.S. v. G.G., 679 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Wadle, 77 P.3d 764 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd, 97 P.3d 932 (Colo. 2004).

Sympathy for a plaintiff's injured condition is not tantamount to the passion or prejudice necessary to overturn a jury verdict. Whitlock v. Univ. of Denver, 712 P.2d 1072 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 744 P.2d 54 (Colo. 1987).

Test is determined as a matter of law. It is not the province of the court to speculate, conjecture or determine what or how much effect upon a verdict the gross misconduct of a juror or jurors may in fact have in a particular case. While a correct determination might be possible in some cases, the inquiry would be impractical and fruitless in many cases and in all cases contain an element of speculation. The proper function of the court is to hear the facts of the alleged misconduct and to determine as a matter of law the effect reasonably calculated to be produced upon the minds of the jury by such misconduct. Butters v. Wann, 147 Colo. 352, 363 P.2d 494 (1961); People v. Wadle, 77 P.3d 764 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd, 97 P.3d 932 (Colo. 2004).

A new trial on all issues, not the granting of remittitur of the verdict, must be ordered when a trial court makes a finding that an excessive jury verdict resulted from bias, prejudice, or passion. Whitlock v. Univ. of Denver, 712 P.2d 1072 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 744 P.2d 54 (Colo. 1987).

Movant seeking to set aside verdict based upon jury misconduct must establish fact of improper communication and as a result thereof the movant was prejudiced. Ravin v. Gambrell by and through Eddy, 788 P.2d 817 (Colo. 1990).

A party seeking a new trial on the basis of a jury's improper exposure to extraneous information must establish that the information was revealed to the jury and that it had the capacity to influence the verdict. Destination Travel, Inc. v. McElhanon, 799 P.2d 454 (Colo. App. 1992); Stevens v. Humana of Delaware, Inc., 832 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1992).

Misconduct of a juror, if known to counsel, should be made the ground of objection at the time, and before the cause is submitted. If first suggested in the motion for a new trial it is within the discretion of the court to disregard it. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Armstrong, 21 Colo. App. 640, 123 P. 136 (1912).

The reason for a supporting affidavit where there is an accusation of juror misconduct is to require the movant to prove his good faith and, by particularizing, demonstrate that his serious allegation of juror misconduct is based on knowledge, not suspicion or mere hope. Cawthra v. City of Greeley, 154 Colo. 483, 391 P.2d 876 (1964).

Motion unsupported by affidavit denied summarily. A motion for new trial based on alleged juror misconduct unsupported by affidavit, and lacking any indication that the movant had a legal excuse for its failure to do so, should be summarily denied. Cawthra v. City of Greeley, 154 Colo. 485, 391 P.2d 876 (1964); Hansen v. Dillon, 156 Colo. 396, 400 P.2d 201 (1965).

Juror affidavit revealing that some jury members had stated that they had learned of codefendant's plea of guilty was insufficient to impeach jury verdict when it was determined from questioning jurors that they learned of plea only after completion of their deliberations. People v. Thornton, 712 P.2d 1095 (Colo. App. 1985).

Only the affidavit of losing counsel, and itself largely hearsay and conclusionary, is insufficient. Hansen v. Dillon, 156 Colo. 396, 400 P.2d 201 (1965).

A quotient verdict as such is invalid. A quotient verdict, as such, is invalid, but where there is no antecedent agreement, or if after the quotient is ascertained, the jury proceeds to discuss and consider the propriety of the rendition of a verdict for an amount equal to the quotient, the verdict is good. City of Colo. Springs v. Duff, 15 Colo. App. 437, 62 P. 959 (1900); City & County of Denver v. Talarico, 99 Colo. 178, 61 P.2d 1 (1936).

Quotient verdict will be permitted to stand if it is an expression of deliberation. Quotient verdict, shown to have been afterwards voted upon and accepted by the jury as a legitimate expression of their deliberations, will be permitted to stand upon a showing of very little proof in this direction. Pawnee Ditch & Imp. Co. v. Adams, 1 Colo. App. 250, 28 P. 662 (1891); Greeley Irrigation Co. v. Von Trotha, 48 Colo. 12, 108 P. 985 (1910).

Impeachment of a verdict on grounds which delve into the mental processes of the jury deliberation is not permitted. Santilli v. Pueblo, 184 Colo. 432, 521 P.2d 170 (1974); Rome v. Gaffrey, 654 P.2d 333 (Colo. App. 1982).

Extrajudicial investigation on inadmissible matters was manifestly improper. The question of the deceased's contributory negligence and his intoxication at the time of the accident was material. The extrajudicial investigation made during the course of the trial by the juror of the deceased's drinking habits, intoxication on other occasions, and the revocation of his driver's license, matters which had been specifically declared incompetent and inadmissible by the court, is misconduct as a matter of law the tendency of which is to influence the mind of the juror and for which a new trial should have been granted. In such cases the court should not consider whether the verdict was or was not influenced by the petitioner. The conduct complained of is so manifestly improper that there is but one course open. Butters v. Wann, 147 Colo. 352, 363 P.2d 494 (1961).

A new trial is not automatically required whenever a jury is exposed to extraneous information during trial or deliberations. Stevens v. Humana of Delaware, Inc., 832 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1992).

Extraneous information concerning the symptoms of a disease listed on a grocery bag obtained by a juror did not require a new trial. Stevens v. Humana of Delaware, Inc., 832 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1992).

D. Accident or Surprise.

Annotator's note. Since section (a)(3) (now (d)(3)) of this rule is similar to § 237 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Surprise must be called to attention of court at trial. A party cannot avail himself of a motion for a new trial on the ground of surprise unless he calls the attention of the court to the matter at the time when it occurs and asks for proper relief. It is too late for him to manifest his surprise for the first time after the cause has been submitted to the jury and a verdict rendered against him. Outcalt v. Johnston, 9 Colo. App. 519, 49 P. 1058 (1897); Agnew v. Mathieson, 26 Colo. App. 59, 140 P. 484 (1914).

Untimely filing of motion contending "accident or surprise" fails because the court was deprived of jurisdiction after the time allowed by section (a) had run. When plaintiff did not argue that the trial court erred in ruling her motion under this rule was untimely, she was considered to have abandoned the issue of timeliness. In re McSoud, 131 P.3d 1208 (Colo. App. 2006).

E. Newly Discovered Evidence.

Annotator's note. Since section (a)(4) (now (d)(4)) of this rule is similar to § 237 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Motions for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence are viewed with suspicion. Sebold v. Rieger, 26 Colo. App. 209, 142 P. 201 (1914); Eachus v. People, 77 Colo. 445, 236 P. 1009 (1925); Gasper v. People, 83 Colo. 341, 265 P. 97 (1928).

Granting of new trial is a matter of trial court's discretion. Whether to grant a new trial because of newly discovered evidence is a matter that lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Christensen, 28 Colo. App. 501, 476 P.2d 281 (1970); Meyer v. Schwartz, 638 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1981).

In the absence of abuse of discretion the judge's decision on the merits of a motion for new trial will not be disturbed. Bushner v. Bushner, 141 Colo. 283, 348 P.2d 153 (1959); Hudson v. Am. Founders Life Ins. Co., 151 Colo. 54, 377 P.2d 391 (1962).

New trial is to be granted only if the newly discovered evidence, if received, would probably change the result. Crespin v. Largo Corp., 698 P.2d 826 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 727 P.2d 1098 (Colo. 1986).

The following requirements are essential to sustain a motion for new trial on the grounds of newly discovered evidence: (1) The evidence could not have been discovered in the exercise of reasonable diligence and produced at the trial; (2) the evidence is material to some issue before the court under the pleadings; (3) if received, the evidence would probably change the result. Kennedy v. Bailey, 169 Colo. 43, 453 P.2d 808 (1969); Am. Nat'l Bank v. Christensen, 28 Colo. App. 501, 476 P.2d 281 (1970); C.K.A. v. M.S., 695 P.2d 785 (Colo. App. 1984), cert. denied, 705 P.2d 1391 (Colo. 1985); Durbin v. Bonanza Corp., 716 P.2d 1124 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Distel, 759 P.2d 654 (Colo. 1988).

Three factors affecting decision under section (d)(4), as adopted in cases interpreting this rule, are not discrete items that lend themselves to mechanistic application, but rather are closely interrelated and require the exercise of a prudential judgment informed by considerations of fundamental fairness. Aspen Skiing Co. v. Peer, 804 P.2d 166 (Colo. 1991).

For necessity of evidence being sufficient to change result, see Colo. Springs & Interurban Ry. v. Fogelsong, 42 Colo. 341, 94 P. 356 (1908); Specie Payment Gold Mining Co. v. Kirk, 56 Colo. 275, 139 P. 21 (1914); Lanham v. Copeland, 66 Colo. 27, 178 P. 562 (1919); Wiley v. People, 71 Colo. 449, 207 P. 478 (1922); Eachus v. People, 77 Colo. 445, 236 P. 1009 (1925); Heishman v. Hope, 79 Colo. 1, 242 P. 782 (1925); Warshauer Sheep & Wool Co. v. Rio Grande State Bank, 81 Colo. 463, 256 P. 21 (1927); Trinidad Creamery Co. v. McDonald, 82 Colo. 328, 259 P. 1028 (1927); City of Ft. Collins v. Smith, 84 Colo. 511, 272 P. 6 (1928); Schlessman v. Brainard, 104 Colo. 514, 92 P.2d 749 (1939).

Party cannot reframe issues where facts were known at time of trial. No issue of mental competency was raised in the probate court during the trial of this action, despite the fact that counsel for plaintiffs were aware of the fact that an issue of competency had been raised in the federal court and could have been made in the probate court. In legal effect, the motions for new trial were insufficient and made no showing of the discovery of any new evidence which was pertinent to any issue tried in the probate court. Actually, the plaintiffs attempt to reframe the issues and inject into the proceedings a complete new theory upon which they elected not to rely at the time of the trial. Kennedy v. Bailey, 169 Colo. 43, 453 P.2d 808 (1969).

A motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence will not be granted where counsel seeks to advance at a second trial a new theory based on different evidence which was available during the first trial. People in Interest of P.N., 663 P.2d 253 (Colo. 1983).

A new trial is not to be awarded for the discovery of evidence merely cumulative. Griffin v. Carrig, 23 Colo. App. 313, 128 P. 1126 (1913); Hudson v. Am. Founders Life Ins. Co., 151 Colo. 54, 377 P.2d 391 (1962).

It is error to grant a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, when such evidence would be immaterial. Warshauer Sheep & Wool Co. v. Rio Grande State Bank, 81 Colo. 463, 256 P. 21 (1927).

Newly discovered evidence to justify the granting of a new trial must be relevant and material. Barton v. Laws, 4 Colo. App. 212, 35 P. 284 (1894).

New trial will not be granted for new evidence which is merely impeaching or discrediting. The general rule is that a new trial will not be granted for new evidence which is merely impeaching or discrediting. Hence, impeaching evidence which is merely cumulative of what might have been produced at the trial is not a sufficient ground for a new trial. Trinidad Creamery Co. v. McDonald, 82 Colo. 328, 259 P. 1028 (1927).

Denial of motion for new trial upheld where newly discovered evidence allegedly demonstrating that plaintiff perjured himself at trial could have been obtained through reasonable diligence more than two years prior to trial. Aspen Skiing Co. v. Peer, 804 P.2d 166 (Colo. 1991).

Denial of motion for new trial was proper where defendant was not denied access to her bank balance and account activity and could, therefore, have discovered the canceled checks showing payment of the disputed insurance premiums. CNA Ins. Co. v. Berndt, 839 P.2d 492 (Colo. App. 1992).

Application for new trial should be supported by affidavit. In an application for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, the application should be supported by an affidavit of the newly discovered witness, stating the facts to which he will testify, and if such affidavit is not attached to the application, there should be a showing that it was impossible or impracticable to secure the same. Wiley v. People, 71 Colo. 449, 207 P. 478 (1922).

Affidavit must show that by exercise of reasonable diligence such evidence could not have been produced. If it does not appear from the affidavits in support of a motion for new trial, on the ground of newly discovered evidence, that by the exercise of reasonable diligence such evidence could not have been produced at the trial, the showing is insufficient. Outcalt v. Johnston, 9 Colo. App. 519, 49 P. 1058 (1897).

The affidavits for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence must show the efforts made by the applicant to locate the additional witnesses proposed to be examined, and must exclude all inference of delay or neglect on the part of the applicant. Evidence as to matters not controverted on the trial will not suffice. Sebold v. Rieger, 26 Colo. App. 209, 142 P. 201 (1914).

For denial of new trial because party made no effort to present evidence, see Sall v. Sall, 173 Colo. 464, 480 P.2d 576 (1971).

Where application is based upon the recent discovery of a document, a copy thereof should be set forth, or at least the substance of it shown; otherwise its pertinency as evidence does not appear. Colo. & S. Ry. v. Breniman, 22 Colo. App. 1, 125 P. 855 (1912).

The affidavit of counsel, based upon information and belief, of what a witness will testify is insufficient to secure a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence. Cole

v. Thornburg, 4 Colo. App. 95, 34 P. 1013 (1893).

After reversal, initially successful party may move for new trial. After reversal by the supreme court the party originally successful in the trial court can file a motion for new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, and only on that ground. To hold otherwise would deprive a party of an absolute right he would have had if the trial judge had made no error. Bushner v. Bushner, 141 Colo. 283, 348 P.2d 153 (1959).

Where the contention is that perjury has been committed, the motion for a new trial must be grounded upon newly discovered evidence. Buchanan v. Burgess, 99 Colo. 307, 62 P.2d 465 (1936); Schlessman v. Brainard, 104 Colo. 514, 92 P.2d 749 (1939).

Motion for new trial held properly overruled. In an action for damages resulting from an automobile accident, the contention of defendant that a new trial should have been granted on the ground of newly discovered evidence was considered and overruled. Morgan v. Gore, 96 Colo. 508, 44 P.2d 918 (1935).

Newly discovered evidence must be credible. In order for newly discovered evidence to serve as a basis for granting a new trial, it must be credible. Crespin v. Largo Corp., 698 P.2d 826 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 727 P.2d 1098 (Colo. 1986).

Although determining the credibility of a witness is normally the function of the trier of fact, when dealing with a motion for new trial based on newly discovered evidence, the trial court necessarily must include a determination of credibility in its evaluation of whether the new evidence would, if received, change the result already reached. Crespin v. Largo Corp., 698 P.2d 826 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 727 P.2d 1098 (Colo. 1986).

Denial of motion for new trial upheld. Phillips v. Monarch Recreation Corp., 668 P.2d 982 (Colo. App. 1983); Gilmore v. Rubeck, 708 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1985).

Standards set forth in section (a)(4) (now (d)(4)) are not unduly rigorous when applied to evidence discovered after an order for summary judgment has been entered. DuBois v. Myers, 684 P.2d 940 (Colo. App. 1984).

F. Excessive or Inadequate Damages.

Annotator's note. Since section (a)(5) (now (d)(5)) of this rule is similar to § 237 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Excessive damages are legitimate grounds for granting a motion for new trial. Leo Payne Pontiac, Inc. v. Ratliff, 29 Colo. App. 386, 486 P.2d 477 (1971), modified, 178 Colo. 361, 497 P.2d 997 (1972).

Award of inadequate damages is a proper ground for the granting of a new trial. Roth v. Stark Lumber Co., 31 Colo. App. 121, 500 P.2d 145 (1972).

New trial may be had as to single issue of damages. Where damages assessed by verdict were grossly inadequate and there was no need of another trial on other issues raised in a negligence action, new trial would be granted as to damages only. Whiteside v. Harvey, 124 Colo. 561, 239 P.2d 989 (1951).

When an award of damages is excessive but liability is clear, it may be permissible to order a new trial limited to the issue of damages only. Marks v. District Court, 643 P.2d 741 (Colo.), cert. denied, 458 U.S. 1107, 102 S. Ct. 3486, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1368 (1982).

Excessive verdict based on bias requires new trial. Where the trial judge makes a finding that the excessive jury verdict resulted from bias, prejudice, and passion, firmly established precedent requires that a new trial on all issues be granted. Marks v. District Court, 643 P.2d 741 (Colo.), cert. denied, 458 U.S. 1107, 102 S. Ct. 3486, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1368 (1982).

Where the issue of liability is properly determined, but the jury has failed in its function adequately to assess the compensation required, it is mandatory that the court order a new trial on the issue of damages alone. Brncic v. Metz, 28 Colo. App. 204, 471 P.2d 618 (1970).

Court may order new trial on all issues where motion limited to damages. A party by moving for a new trial on the question of damages only cannot restrict the judge so as to prevent the exercise of sound judicial discretion. Dale v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 152 Colo. 581, 383 P.2d 795 (1963).

Where jury refuses to award compensatory damages, new trial on damages alone is warranted. Where the jury failed in its function in rendering a verdict by refusing to recognize the undisputed facts concerning plaintiff's injuries and to award him compensatory damages to which he was entitled, a new trial on the issue of damages only is warranted. Kistler v. Halsey, 173 Colo. 540, 481 P.2d 722 (1971).

New trial on the issue of damages only is warranted when there are undisputed facts as to injuries. In an action by a bicyclist seeking damages for injuries suffered as a result of an intersection pickup truck-bicycle collision, where the verdict, considering the undisputed evidence of severe multiple physical injuries sustained by plaintiff, was manifestly inadequate, indicating that the jury disregarded the trial court's instructions on damages, held a new trial on issue of damages only is warranted since the jury failed in its function to render a true verdict by refusing to recognize the undisputed facts concerning plaintiff's injuries and to award him compensatory damages to which he was entitled. Kistler v. Halsey, 173 Colo. 540, 481 P.2d 722 (1971).

Plaintiff's participation in new trial on damages alone waives other objections. Where plaintiffs, dissatisfied with verdict on first trial, file a motion for additur or a new trial on the question of damages only and the trial court grants a new trial on all issues, the plaintiffs by voluntarily participating in the second trial as ordered by the trial court waive any other error occurring in first trial. Dale v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 152 Colo. 581, 383 P.2d 795 (1963).

Verdict must be manifestly inadequate to be set aside. It is an abuse of discretion on the part of the court to set aside the verdict of the jury and grant a new trial solely on the ground of inadequacy of the verdict unless, under the evidence, it can be definitely said that the verdict is grossly and manifestly inadequate, or unless the amount thereof is so small as to clearly and definitely indicate that the jury neglected to take into consideration evidence of pecuniary loss or were influenced either by prejudice, passion or other improper considerations. Lehrer v. Lorenzen, 124 Colo. 17, 233 P.2d 382 (1951); King v. Avila, 127 Colo. 538, 259 P.2d 268 (1953); DeMott v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 531, 486 P.2d 451 (1971).

Where plaintiff's evidence showed damages considerably in excess of the original jury award and the trial court could properly determine that the jury disregarded the instructions or ignored the evidence, there is no error in granting a new trial on the issue of damages. Thorpe v. City & County of Denver, 30 Colo. App. 284, 494 P.2d 129 (1971).

Jury damage award set aside on basis of inadequacy when evidence was undisputed with respect to the existence and nature of the injuries sustained, and the jury failed to award any damages for noneconomic losses. Martinez v. Shapland, 833 P.2d 837 (Colo. App. 1992).

Retrial on damages only was ordered because of the inconsistency in the damage award of the jury. The award of $3,000 for economic losses for the treatment and alleviation of pain is inconsistent with the award of zero dollars for noneconomic damages. Kepley v. Kim, 843 P.2d 133 (Colo. App. 1992).

When a new trial will be granted for excessive or inadequate damages rests in the discretion of the trial court, in cases where there is no legal measure of damages, or where the correctness of the result is not determinable by any definite and precise rule. Clark v. Aldenhoven, 26 Colo. App. 501, 143 P. 267 (1914).

The court of review will not interfere where there is evidence to support the verdict. Clark v. Aldenhoven, 26 Colo. App. 501, 143 P. 267 (1914).

Neither the Colorado supreme court nor any other appellate tribunal stands in as good a position as the trial court to review the relationship between an award of exemplary damages and the purposes these damages are to serve and, absent a clear abuse of discretion, the trial court's determination in this regard will not be disturbed on review. Leo Payne Pontiac, Inc. v. Ratliff, 178 Colo. 361, 497 P.2d 997 (1972).

Trial court may give prevailing party option to remit excessive damages. Following a motion for a new trial based on excessive damage, the trial judge may grant the motion for a new trial, but at the same time give the prevailing party the option of remitting that portion of the jury's award which is deemed to be excessive, or facing a new trial on damages. If the prevailing party thereafter remits this portion of the award, the trial court would thereupon deny the motion for a new trial and enter a final judgment. Leo Payne Pontiac, Inc. v. Ratliff, 178 Colo. 361, 497 P.2d 997 (1972); McCrea & Co. Auctioneers, Inc. v. Dwyer Auto Body, 799 P.2d 394 (Colo. App. 1989).

A trial court has the power to grant a new trial under this rule or, in the alternative, to deny the new trial on the condition that the plaintiff will agree to a remittitur of the amount of the damages found by the court to be excessive. Marks v. District Court, 643 P.2d 741 (Colo.), cert. denied, 458 U.S. 1107, 102 S. Ct. 3486, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1368 (1982).

Option of remittitur or new trial permissible where damages manifestly excessive. The option of remittitur or new trial is permissible in cases where the trial court considers the damages manifestly excessive, section (a)(5) (now (d)(5)), but cannot conclude that the damages were a product of bias, prejudice, or passion. Burns v. McGraw-Hill Broadcasting Co., 659 P.2d 1351 (Colo. 1983); E-470 Pub. Hwy. Auth. v. Jagow, 30 P.3d 798 (Colo. App. 2001), aff'd, 49 P.3d 1151 (Colo. 2002).

Remittitur appropriate where evidence did not show that damages for fraud and those for breach of contract were separate and distinct, nor that damages for business interference were greater than or different from lost profits resulting from the breach. McCrea & Co. Auctioneers, Inc. v. Dwyer Auto Body, 799 P.2d 394 (Colo. App. 1989).

Remittitur is not sustainable where the amount of damages awarded is supported by the court's instruction and the evidence presented or, alternatively, where the plaintiff is not offered an opportunity to refuse the modified amount and request a new trial. Belfor USA Group v. Rocky Mtn. Caulking & Waterproofing, 159 P.3d 672 (Colo. App. 2006).

Trial court must enter findings to support order of remittitur. Belfor USA Group v.

Rocky Mtn. Caulking & Waterproofing, 159 P.3d 672 (Colo. App. 2006).

New trial granted where trial court erred in damages instruction. Walton v. Kolb, 31 Colo. App. 95, 500 P.2d 149 (1972).

G. Error in Law.

A judicial admission can be made in closing argument. Counsel's statements that plaintiff had incurred some physical injury in the accident must be considered a binding judicial admission and a new trial ordered on the issue of damages. Larson v. A.T.S.I., 859 P.2d 273 (Colo. App. 1993).

V. GROUNDS FOR JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING VERDICT.

Annotator's note. Since section (a)(6) (now (e)(1)) of this rule is similar to § 237 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The weight of evidence does not depend upon its volume or the number of witnesses. Jurors exercise a large discretion in judging of the credibility of witnesses, and separating the true from the false. Their conclusions will not be disturbed, unless the verdict manifests bias, prejudice, or a wanton disregard of their duties and obligation by the jurors. Clark v. Aldenhoven, 26 Colo. App. 501, 143 P. 267 (1914).

As a general rule, when the evidence is conflicting the trial court will refuse a new trial even though there may be a slight preponderance against the verdict. Clark v. Aldenhoven, 26 Colo. App. 501, 143 P. 267 (1914).

The trial court's action will not be reviewed unless a manifest abuse of discretion appears. Clark v. Aldenhoven, 26 Colo. App. 501, 143 P. 267 (1914).

Where the verdict of a jury is manifestly against the weight of the evidence, it will be set aside by the appellate court. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Peterson, 30 Colo. 77, 69 P. 578 (1902); McGraw v. Kerr, 23 Colo. App. 163, 128 P. 870 (1912).

Where the record fails to disclose any satisfactory evidence as to the real merits of the controversy, the judgment will be reversed and the cause remanded for a new trial. Scott v. Conrad, 24 Colo. App. 452, 135 P. 135 (1913).

In actions for tort a verdict will not so readily be vacated as against the weight of evidence, as in actions ex contractu. A verdict will not be set aside either in the trial court or the court of review unless it is so manifestly against the weight of evidence as to warrant a presumption that the jury misunderstood the evidence or misconstrued its effect, or were influenced by improper motives. Clark v. Aldenhoven, 26 Colo. App. 501, 143 P. 267 (1914).

VI. EFFECT OF GRANTING NEW TRIAL.

To grant a new trial decides no one's rights finally, but only submits them to another jury, with an opportunity to each party to bring forward better evidence if he can, and with opportunity to the judge to correct his own errors if any. Singer v. Chitwood, 126 Colo. 173, 247 P.2d 905 (1952).

A litigant may elect not to participate in trial and still seek review. In Colorado a litigant against whom a new trial has been ordered may elect to stand on such order, obtain a dismissal of the action, and thereupon seek review by appeal. Chartier v. Winslow Crane Serv. Co., 142 Colo. 294, 350 P.2d 1044 (1960).

New trial participation does not waive other objections. Prior to the amendment in 1964, a party against whom an order granting a new trial had been entered waived any error in the order by participating in the new trial. The amendment merely removed this waiver. It did not change the rule of Chartier in Chartier v. Winslow (142 Colo. 294, 350 P.2d 1044 (1960)) that a party may decline to participate in a new trial, permit judgment to be entered against him and sue out appeal for a determination of the correctness of the order granting the new trial. Rice v. Groat, 167 Colo. 554, 449 P.2d 355 (1969).

Proceeding to terminate parental rights. The granting of a new trial in a proceeding to terminate parental rights placed the parties in the positions they occupied prior to the vacated hearing. People in Interest of M.B., 188 Colo. 370, 535 P.2d 192 (1975).

VII. EFFECT OF GRANTING JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING VERDICT, AMENDMENT OF FINDINGS, OR AMENDMENT OF JUDGMENT.

The effect of this rule is merely to render unnecessary a request for a formal reservation of the question of law raised by the motion for a directed verdict and, in addition, to regulate the time and manner of moving for direction and of moving for judgment on the basis of the refusal to direct. Burenheide v. Wall, 131 Colo. 371, 281 P.2d 1000 (1955).

VIII. TIME FOR DETERMINATION OF POST-TRIAL MOTIONS.

Section (j) is applicable only to motions filed on or after January 1, 1985, and does not apply to motions which were pending upon that date. Stientjes v. Olde-Cumberlin Auctioneers, Inc. 754 P.2d 1384 (Colo. App. 1988).

Motion for costs is not a motion for post-trial relief governed by this section and, therefore, need not be determined within 60 days under section (j). Meier v. McCoy, 119 P.3d 519 (Colo. App. 2004).

Construction of "determine" within context of section (j) for purposes of resolving timeliness of notices of appeal. Trial court made a ''determination'' on post-trial motions upon oral ruling from bench within 60 days from date of filing of last of such motions even though written order was not signed and entered until after expiration of 60-day period. In re Forsberg, 783 P.2d 283 (Colo. 1989).

Motion for amendment of findings and judgment was ''determined'' when trial court came to a decision on the merits of such motion and directed movant's counsel to prepare order reflecting such decision, which order was not signed and entered until after 60-day period. In re Forsberg, 783 P.2d 283 (Colo. 1989).

A motion made pursuant to C.R.C.P. 60 cannot be used to circumvent the operation of section (j) unless the facts of the case constitute an ''extreme situation'' justifying relief from a judgment pursuant to C.R.C.P. 60(b)(5). Sandoval v. Trinidad Area Health Ass'n, 752 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1988).

The "unique circumstances" doctrine is not available to a party seeking to modify the time for determination of a post-trial motion pursuant to section (j). Sandoval v. Trinidad Area Health Ass'n, 752 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1988).

Time limits for filing notice of appeal under C.A.R. 4 must be met for appeals of judgments for attorney fees. The award of attorney fees in a case is sufficiently separate from an underlying judgment on the merits to require that a notice of appeal of the judgment awarding attorney fees be filed within the time limits of C.A.R. 4 independently of the judgment entered on the merits of the underlying case. If this is not done, the court of appeals is not vested with subject matter jurisdiction to determine issues related to the award of attorney fees. Dawes Agency v. Am. Prop. Mortg., 804 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1990).

Timely filing of motion for reconsideration of a completed post-trial ruling on an attorney fees issue tolls the time for filing a notice of appeal until the court determines the motion or the motion is deemed denied after 60 days pursuant to section (j). Jensen v. Runta, 80 P.3d 906 (Colo. App. 2003).

Time limits for filing notice of appeal under C.A.R. 4 are terminated as to all parties by timely filing of a motion under this rule. Thereafter, time begins to run upon determination of the motion or the date the motion is deemed denied, whichever is earlier. United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992); Stone v. People, 895 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1995).

Section (j) is designed to encourage expeditious determination of post-trial motions and to provide certainty in the calculation of the time within which a party must file a notice of appeal. Campbell v. McGill, 810 P.2d 199 (Colo. 1991).

Section (j) does not apply to issues concerning recovery of attorney fees not sought as damages. Tallitsch v. Child Support Servs., Inc., 926 P.2d 143 (Colo. App. 1996).

Section (j) satisfied where the court acted on motion within 60 days following the filing of the last multiple motions and where the court orally ruled upon the motions within 60 days, even though the written order was signed and entered after the period. Fenton v. Fibreboard Corp., 827 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1991).

Section (j) satisfied where plaintiff's motion for reconsideration was entered within 60 days of the date trial court granted plaintiff's motion to represent himself. Campbell v. McGill, 810 P.2d 199 (Colo. 1991).

The provisions of C.R.C.P. 54(b) regarding a trial court's jurisdiction to revise its initial judgment are expressly incorporated in C.R.C.P. 58 and, therefore, are applicable to motions filed pursuant to this rule. The 60-day limit specified in section (j) did not bar trial court's determination of a motion for new trial in case involving multiple claims and multiple parties when trial court did not make an express direction for entry of final judgment under C.R.C.P. 54(b) and there could be no entry of final judgment under C.R.C.P. 58(a). Smeal v. Oldenettel, 814 P.2d 904 (Colo. 1991).

Reading section (a) of this rule, C.R.C.P. 58, and C.R.C.P. 54(a) together, a motion under this rule may be filed only to challenge a final order or judgment, not a non-final or interlocutory order or judgment. Przekurat v. Torres, 2016 COA 177, __ P.3d __, aff'd on other grounds, 2018 CO 69, 428 P.3d 512.

Ruling on post-trial motion must be entered within 60-day time limit specified in section (j) and any order entered after such 60-day limitation is null and void. In re Micaletti, 796 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1990); Spencer v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 39 P.3d 1272 (Colo. App. 2001).

A court loses jurisdiction when it fails to rule on a post-judgment motion within 60 days. The language of section (j) is mandatory and provides that the district court shall rule within 60 days or the motion shall be automatically denied. Arguelles v. Ridgeway, 827 P.2d 553 (Colo. App. 1991).

A motion under section (j) is automatically deemed denied after 60 days, however the court had authority under C.R.C.P. 60(a) to vacate such denial and rule on the motion because the court was unaware that defendant's motion was pending at the time it entered judgment in favor of plaintiff. Farmers Ins. Exchange v. Am. Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co., 897 P.2d 880 (Colo. App. 1995).

The time period for responding to motions is not extended when a court grants a party additional time to respond to the opposing party's briefs. Arguelles v. Ridgeway, 827 P.2d 553 (Colo. App. 1991).

Failure to obtain an extension of time within which to file motion under this rule deprived the district court of jurisdiction to hear any motion filed after the 15-day period had expired and the untimely filing of that motion did not toll the running of the 45 days for the filing of a notice of appeal under C.A.R. 4. Stone v. People, 895 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1995).

While section (a) provides that motions for amendment of judgment shall be filed within 15 days or such greater time as the court may allow, a court may only allow greater time during the 15 days following the entry of judgment. Once that period expires, the court loses jurisdiction to grant additional time. Spencer v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 39 P.3d 1272 (Colo. App. 2001).

Plaintiff abandons timeliness issue if he or she does not argue that the trial court erred in rejecting her motion under this rule as untimely. In re McSoud, 131 P.3d 1208 (Colo. App. 2006).

Rule 60. Relief from Judgment or Order

(a) Clerical Mistakes. Clerical mistakes in judgments, orders, or other parts of the record and errors therein arising from oversight or omission may be corrected by the court at any time of its own initiative or on the motion of any party and after such notice, if any, as the court orders. During the pendency of an appeal such mistakes may be so corrected before the case is docketed in the appellate court, and thereafter while the appeal is pending may be so corrected with leave of the appellate court.

(b) Mistakes; Inadvertence; Surprise; Excusable Neglect; Fraud; etc. On motion and upon such terms as are just, the court may relieve a party or his legal representative from a final judgment, order, or proceeding for the following reasons: (1) Mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect; (2) fraud (whether heretofore denominated intrinsic or extrinsic), misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party; (3) the judgment is void; (4) the judgment has been satisfied, released, or discharged, or a prior judgment upon which it is based has been reversed or otherwise vacated, or it is no longer equitable that the judgment should have prospective application; or (5) any other reason justifying relief from the operation of the judgment. The motion shall be made within a reasonable time, and for reasons (1) and (2) not more than 182 days after the judgment, order, or proceeding was entered or taken. A motion under this section (b) does not affect the finality of a judgment or suspend its operation. This Rule does not limit the power of a court: (1) To entertain an independent action to relieve a party from a judgment, order, or proceeding, or (2) to set aside a judgment for fraud upon the court; or (3) when, for any cause, the summons in an action has not been personally served within or without the state on the defendant, to allow, on such terms as may be just, such defendant, or his legal representatives, at any time within 182 days after the rendition of any judgment in such action, to answer to the merits of the original action. Writs of coram nobis, audita querela, and bills of review and bills in the nature of a bill of review, are abolished, and the procedure for obtaining any relief from a judgment shall be by motion as prescribed in these rules or by an independent action.

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to §§ 50(e) and 81 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Once a valid judgment is entered, the only means by which the trial court may thereafter alter, amend, or vacate the judgment is by appropriate motion under either C.R.C.P. 59 or this rule. Cortvriendt v. Cortvriendt, 146 Colo. 387, 361 P.2d 767 (1961).

This rule prescribes the conditions upon which the court may relieve a party from a final judgment. Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957).

Court may relieve only a party or a party's legal representative from a final judgment; therefore, garnishor of judgment debtor could not seek to modify or set aside an order in the principal case since it was not a party to that case. Law Offices of Quiat v. Ellithorpe, 917 P.2d 300 (Colo. App. 1995).

A motion under this rule may not be used to circumvent the operation of C.R.C.P. 59(j), absent extraordinary circumstances involving extreme situations. Anderson v. Molitor, 770 P.2d 1305 (Colo. App. 1988).

A motion for relief from judgment under section (b) of this rule may not be construed to avoid C.R.C.P. 59(j) and its 60-day requirement. Diamond Back Servs., Inc. v. Willowbrook Water, 961 P.2d 1134 (Colo. App. 1998).

This rule is not a substitute for appeal, but instead is meant to provide relief in the interest of justice in extraordinary circumstances. Thus, a motion under this rule generally cannot be used to circumvent the operation of C.R.C.P. 59(j). De Avila v. Estate of DeHerrera, 75 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2003); Harriman v. Cabela's Inc., 2016 COA 43, 371 P.3d 758.

Section (b)(5) of this rule cannot be used to raise issues that should normally be raised in C.R.C.P. 59 motions or that should be appealed in due course after a court enters judgment. Harriman v. Cabela's Inc., 2016 COA 43, 371 P.3d 758.

After the expiration of his term of office, a judge may not entertain a motion under this rule, even though such motion is filed in a proceeding wherein the ''former'' judge had himself entered the final judgment at a time when he was actually serving as a judge. Olmstead v. District Court, 157 Colo. 326, 403 P.2d 442 (1965).

A court's error in interpreting a statutory grant of jurisdiction is not equivalent to acting with a total lack of jurisdiction. King v. Everett, 775 P.2d 65 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, Everett v. King, 786 P.2d 411 (Colo. 1989).

Trial court could not amend judgment to include prejudgment interest when omission was intentional. Jennings v. Ibarra, 921 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1996).

A judgment creditor is not required to get an amended judgment showing trial court intended to award post-judgment interest where court inadvertently failed to do so. Bainbridge, Inc., v. Douglas County Sch. Dist., 973 P.2d 684 (Colo. App. 1998) (declining to follow Jennings v. Ibarra, 921 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1996)).

An appellate court does not grant or deny motions filed subsequent to entry of judgment under this rule, since this is a function of the trial court; once a trial court has acted, however, an appellate court may in appropriate proceedings be called upon to review the propriety of the action thus taken by it. Olmstead v. District Court, 157 Colo. 326, 403 P.2d 442 (1965).

Default judgment entered after a hearing on damages was a final judgment because it left the court with nothing to do but execute upon the judgment. Therefore, motion to set aside the default judgment filed within six months was timely filed. Sumler v. District Ct., City & County of Denver, 889 P.2d 50 (Colo. 1995).

There were no grounds for vacating the default judgment where plaintiff failed to show a reason for not amending the original complaint during the three months before default judgment was entered. Since the judgment was not vacated, it was within the court's discretion to deny the motion to amend the original complaint after entry of the default judgment. Wilcox v. Reconditioned Office Sys., 881 P.2d 398 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where none of the grounds prescribed by this rule, upon which a party may be relieved from a final judgment or order is urged in a motion to vacate, no abuse of discretion in denying such motion can be shown. Cortvriendt v. Cortvriendt, 146 Colo. 387, 361 P.2d 767 (1961).

There were no grounds for vacating the default judgement where the federal district court entered an order denying defendant's attempt to remove the case to federal court and remanded the case to state court prior to the trial date. Plaintiff's request for reconsideration of the federal court's order did not cut off the state court's jurisdiction since, under federal law, remand orders are not reviewable on appeal or otherwise. Blazer Elec. Supply Co. v. Bertrand, 952 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1998).

Meritorious defense not grounds for vacation of judgment. A party may not have a judgment vacated solely upon an allegation of the existence of a meritorious defense. Craig v. Rider, 628 P.2d 623 (Colo. App. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 651 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982).

The mere existence of a meritorious defense is not sufficient alone to justify vacating the judgment. Biella v. State Dept. of Hwys., 652 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982).

Appellate review limited to whether trial court abused its discretion. Appellate review of the grant or denial of a motion under section (b) is normally limited to determining whether the district court abused its discretion. In re Stroud, 631 P.2d 168 (Colo. 1981).

It is within the discretion of the trial court to determine whether a party's conduct justifies relief from a judgment, and such determination will be upheld unless the court abused its discretion. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128 (Colo. App. 1993).

Appellate review of the denial of a motion under section (b) of this rule is limited to whether the trial court abused its discretion. A trial court abuses its discretion if its decision is manifestly arbitrary, unreasonable, or unfair. Guevara v. Foxhoven, 928 P.2d 793 (Colo. App. 1996).

A motion pursuant to section (b) must meet the requirements of the rule in order to be subject to exercise of the court's discretion. Especially with respect to the residuary provision of section (b)(5), which has been narrowed to include only extreme situations and extraordinary circumstances, a trial court's ruling must be reviewed in light of the purposes of the rule and the importance to be accorded the principle of finality. Davidson v. McClellan, 16 P.3d 233 (Colo. 2001).

Where defendant failed to object to plaintiff's motion for substitution of parties and also failed to object to trial court's order permitting the substitution, the right to appeal on those issues is waived. Thomason v. McAlister, 748 P.2d 798 (Colo. App. 1987).

Where there has been a hearing on a motion pursuant to this rule involving controverted issues of fact, a motion for new trial is a jurisdictional prerequisite for appellate review. Canady v. Dept. of Admin., 678 P.2d 1056 (Colo. App. 1983).

Order granting relief on insufficient grounds not void. Failure to allege sufficient grounds for relief from a prior judgment does not make the subsequent order granting that motion void; rather, the court's action is legal error, vulnerable to reversal upon appeal. In re Stroud, 631 P.2d 168 (Colo. 1981).

Trial court has jurisdiction to consider a request for relief from an award of attorney fees and costs under section (b)(4) if the award was based on an underlying judgment that was reversed or vacated on appeal. Party did not waive her right to challenge the award by failing to separately appeal the award. Oster v. Baack, 2015 COA 39, 351 P.3d 546.

Judgment must be final before time limitations apply. Where order of default was entered against one of two defendants but action remained pending and no C.R.C.P. 54(b) certification was obtained, timeliness of motion would be gauged in relation to date of dismissal of action against second defendant. United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

Time limit inapplicable where judgment exceeded jurisdiction. Where a claim is made that the district court's judgment exceeded its jurisdiction, the time limit of section (b) does not apply. Mathews v. Urban, 645 P.2d 290 (Colo. App. 1982); United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

Even though a motion under C.R.C.P. 59(j) is automatically denied after 60 days, the court had authority under section (a) to vacate the judgment on its own motion because the court was unaware that defendant's motion was pending at the time it entered judgment in favor of plaintiff. Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Am. Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co., 897 P.2d 880 (Colo. App. 1995).

Successor judge may consider challenges to rulings of law presented in a motion for a new trial. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982).

Appeal from denial of motion. Denial of a motion under this rule is appealable independently of an underlying judgment. United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

An order denying a motion under section (b) of this rule is appealable independently of an underlying judgment and requires a separate notice of appeal. Sender v. Powell, 902 P.2d 947 (Colo. App. 1995); Guevara v. Foxhoven, 928 P.2d 793 (Colo. App. 1996).

District court has jurisdiction to review a section (b)(2) motion where a magistrate has authority under § 13-5-301 to hear the motion without the consent of the parties. In re Malewicz, 60 P.3d 772 (Colo. App. 2002).

A section (b)(2) motion filed within six months of the district court's order is timely filed under this rule. In re Malewicz, 60 P.3d 772 (Colo. App. 2002).

Court's order discharging a receiver appointed under predecessor to § 38-38-601 is a final judgment subject to appellate review, and any claim based on misfeasance or malfeasance of the receiver must be presented prior to discharge, if at all, unless grounds exist for relief from judgment under this rule. Four Strong Winds, Inc. v. Lyngholm, 826 P.2d 414 (Colo. App. 1992).

Relief from foreign judgments available under this rule is limited by full faith and credit clause of federal constitution to: (1) Judgments based upon fraud; (2) void judgments; and (3) judgments which have been satisfied, released, or discharged, or a prior judgment upon which it was based has been reversed or vacated, or it is no longer equitable that judgment should have prospective application. Marworth, Inc. v. McGuire, 810 P.2d 653 (Colo. 1991).

A trial court's ruling in resolving a motion for relief from judgment predicated on newly discovered evidence under section (b) will not be disturbed absent a clear showing of an abuse of discretion. Sender v. Powell, 902 P.2d 947 (Colo. App. 1995).

Failure to submit financial information to the trial court and the failure of the trial court to review the modified child support agreement between the parties rendered the resulting trial court order subject to being set aside under section (b)(5). In re Smith, 928 P.2d 828 (Colo. App. 1996).

The provisions for vacating, modifying, or correcting an arbitration award are set forth in §§ 13-22-223 and 13-22-224 and are the exclusive means for challenging an award. Therefore, this rule is not the appropriate vehicle to challenge the award. Superior Constr. Co. v. Bentley, 104 P.3d 331 (Colo. App. 2004).

Applied in Valenzuela v. Mercy Hosp., 34 Colo. App. 5, 521 P.2d 1287 (1974); Janicek v. Hinnen, 34 Colo. App. 68, 522 P.2d 113 (1974); Bankers Union Life Ins. Co. v. Fiocca, 35 Colo. App. 306, 532 P.2d 57 (1975); In re Estate of Bonfils, 190 Colo. 70, 543 P.2d 701 (1975); Duran v. District Court, 190 Colo. 272, 545 P.2d 1365 (1976); Johnston v. District Court, 196 Colo. 261, 580 P.2d 798 (1978); In re Gallegos, 41 Colo. App. 116, 580 P.2d 838 (1978); O'Hara Group Denver, Ltd. v. Marcor Hous. Sys., 197 Colo. 530, 595 P.2d 679 (1979); Sec. State Bank v. Weingardt, 42 Colo. App. 219, 597 P.2d 1045 (1979); In re Stroud, 657 P.2d 960 (Colo. App. 1979); Collection Agency, Inc. v. Golding, 44 Colo. App. 421, 616 P.2d 988 (1980); Town of Breckenridge v. City & County of Denver, 620 P.2d 1048 (Colo. 1980); People in Interest of T.A.F. v. B.F., 624 P.2d 349 (Colo. App. 1980); In re Van Camp, 632 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1981); Soehner v. Soehner, 642 P.2d 27 (Colo. App. 1981); Cross v. District Court, 643 P.2d 39 (Colo. 1982); Best v. Jones, 644 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1982); Moore & Co. v. Williams, 657 P.2d 984 (Colo. App. 1982); Kendall v. Costa, 659 P.2d 715 (Colo. App. 1982); Falzon v. Home Ins. Co., 661 P.2d 696 (Colo. App. 1982); Ground Water Comm'n v. Shanks, 658 P.2d 847 (Colo. 1983); In re Hiner, 669 P.2d 135 (Colo. App. 1983); Yard v. Ambassador Bldr. Corp., 669 P.2d 1040 (Colo. App. 1983); Wright Farms, Inc. v. Weninger, 669 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1983); In re Ward, 670 P.2d 1260 (Colo. App. 1983); Turchick & Kempter v. Hurd & Titan Constr., 674 P.2d 969 (Colo. App. 1983); Realty World-Range Realty, Ltd. v. Prochaska, 691 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1984); E.B. Jones Constr. Co. v. Denver, 717 P.2d 1009 (Colo. App. 1986); In re Allen, 724 P.2d 651 (Colo. 1986); People v. Caro, 753 P.2d 196 (Colo. 1988); Blesch v. Denver Publ'g Co., 62 P.3d 1060 (Colo. App. 2002).

II. CLERICAL MISTAKES.

The failure to include interest is an oversight or omission and falls squarely within this rule. Crosby v. Kroeger, 138 Colo. 55, 330 P.2d 958 (1958); Reasoner v. District Court, 197 Colo. 516, 594 P.2d 1060 (1979).

Since the statute required an award of prejudgment interest and failure to include such interest was merely a ministerial oversight, passage of five years since entry of the award would not prevent the addition of prejudgment interest, even though the original amount of the award had been satisfied. Brooks v. Jackson, 813 P.2d 847 (Colo. App. 1991).

It is not error for a court to correct a judgment by including interest when the omission is called to its attention. Crosby v. Kroeger, 138 Colo. 55, 330 P.2d 958 (1958).

An error in the calculation of interest is merely clerical and does not require court intervention and stay of execution. Schaffer v. District Court, 172 Colo. 43, 470 P.2d 18 (1970).

Where the written, final decree does not reflect the oral findings of fact and an earlier order of the court, the decree is not in accord with the expectations and understanding of the court and the parties and that is the type of error section (a) of this rule is designed to remedy. Reasoner v. District Court, 197 Colo. 516, 594 P.2d 1060 (1979).

This rule provides that a trial court may correct an oversight while the case is pending on appeal, provided leave of the appellate court is obtained. Callaham v. Slavsky, 153 Colo. 291, 385 P.2d 674 (1963).

Language of the order of remand was sufficiently broad to authorize the trial court's amendment of its order. Flatiron Paving Co. v. Wilkin, 725 P.2d 103 (Colo. App. 1986).

Under section (a), a district court may correct a misnamed party in a judgment. Reisbeck, LLC v. Levis, 2014 COA 167, 342 P.3d 603.

Where the failure is not that of a judge in entering an incorrect judgment or decree, or that of a clerk in incorrectly recording the proceedings had in a case, but rather, it is the attorney's failure to prosecute with due diligence the proceedings which he has commenced on behalf of a plaintiff, then, under these circumstances, relief is properly denied under section (a) of this rule. Hatcher v. Hatcher, 169 Colo. 174, 454 P.2d 812 (1969).

Attorney's failure to proceed diligently not clerical error. Unexcused attorney failure to diligently proceed on behalf of his client does not constitute clerical error justifying relief under section (a). Cavanaugh v. State Dept. of Soc. Servs., 644 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1982), appeal dismissed for want of substantial federal question, 459 U.S. 1011, 103 S. Ct. 367, 74 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1982), reh'g denied, 460 U.S. 1104, 103 S. Ct. 1806, 76 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1983).

Where the record reflects the court's intent to include amounts owing under a contract, the amount due under the contract was virtually undisputed, and the court made extensive findings that the contract was wrongfully terminated, it was judicial error and correctable under section (a) when the court omitted such amounts from its final order. Diamond Back Servs., Inc. v. Willowbrook Water, 961 P.2d 1134 (Colo. App. 1998).

Where plaintiff filed a motion under C.R.C.P. 59 for post-judgment relief for a clerical error made by the court for failure to include the amount unpaid in a wrongfully terminated contract, the court's failure to rule on the C.R.C.P. 59 motion did not bar the plaintiff from seeking relief under section (a) of this rule. Diamond Back Servs., Inc. v. Willowbrook Water, 961 P.2d 1134 (Colo. App. 1998).

A motion under section (a) is limited to making a judgment speak the truth as originally intended, and not intended to relitigate the matter before the court. Diamond Back Servs., Inc. v. Willowbrook Water, 961 P.2d 1134 (Colo. App. 1998).

A motion or order under section (a) does not extend the time for filing a notice of appeal of the underlying judgment. An order clarifying the original judgment relates back to the time of the filing of the initial judgment and does not extend the time for appeal of that judgment. In re Buck, 60 P.3d 788 (Colo. App. 2002).

Clerical error in a verdict form does not include an alleged error that either alters the legal effect of the jury's verdict or addresses the jury's misunderstanding or misapplication of the court's instructions. Clerical error corrections to a jury's verdict are disfavored. Stewart v. Rice, 47 P.3d 316 (Colo. 2002).

Use of Larimer county as the venue defendant had erroneously identified on the caption of the proposed order authorizing foreclosure sale was a clerical error that did not affect its validity. Colorado law looks to the substance of a pleading and not to the form of its caption. Moreover, under section (a), courts have the power to correct a clerical error in an order. Upon defendant's motion brought under section (a), district court magistrate corrected the clerical error by issuing an amended order, nunc pro tunc. Estates in Eagle Ridge, LLLP v. Valley Bank & Trust, 141 P.3d 838 (Colo. App. 2005).

Equipment failure resulting in the lack of a complete transcript is not a clerical error. Correction of clerical errors under section (a) is a matter within the discretion of the trial court, and the court here did not abuse its discretion in ruling that plaintiff's motion for a new trial based on equipment failure was not a clerical error as contemplated by section (a). In re McSoud, 131 P.3d 1208 (Colo. App. 2006).

III. MISTAKES; INADVERTENCE; SURPRISE; EXCUSABLE NEGLECT; FRAUD; ETC.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, ''Appellate Procedure and the New Supreme Court Rules'', see 30 Dicta 1 (1953). For article, ''One Year Review of Appeals and Agency'', see 33 Dicta 13 (1956). For article, ''One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals'', see 36 Dicta 5 (1959). For note, ''Res Judicata — Should It Apply to a Judgment Which is Being Appealed?'', see 33 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 95 (1960). For note, ''Batton v. Massar: The Finality of Colorado Adoptions'', see 35 U. Colo. L. Rev. 314 (1963).

Authority for relief from a judgment order or proceeding is conferred in an appropriate proceeding by section (b) of this rule. Peercy v. Peercy, 154 Colo. 575, 392 P.2d 609 (1964).

It is incumbent upon one to prove mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, or fraud or that a judgment is void because no service was had upon him. Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957).

In order to be entitled to relief under this rule, a defendant has to demonstrate to the trial court either mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct on the part of plaintiff. Eisenson v. Eisenson, 158 Colo. 394, 407 P.2d 20 (1965).

Party seeking relief from judgment must demonstrate by clear, strong, and satisfactory proof that such relief is warranted. Domenico v. Sw. Props. Venture, 914 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1995).

A motion to vacate a judgment must allege a defense which is "prima facie" meritorious. Henritze v. Borden Co., 163 Colo. 589, 432 P.2d 2 (1967).

A meritorious defense must be stated with such particularity that the court can see that it is a substantial and meritorious defense, and not merely a technical or frivolous one. Henritze v. Borden Co., 163 Colo. 589, 432 P.2d 2 (1967).

This rule prescribes the conditions upon which a court may relieve a party from a final judgment. Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957).

Motions for relief from a final order are governed by this rule under which the time for filing such motions is expressly limited to six months. Love v. Rocky Mt. Kennel Club, 33 Colo. App. 4, 514 P.2d 336 (1973).

To be entitled to have a judgment vacated or set aside, a disadvantaged party must bring himself within the terms and conditions of this rule. Peercy v. Peercy, 154 Colo. 575, 392 P.2d 609 (1964).

Surety bond not required. Section (b) of this rule, providing that a court may set aside a judgment upon such terms as may be just, does not warrant an order of court requiring defendants to post a surety bond in the full amount of a plaintiffs' claim as a condition to having their defense heard. Prather v. District Court, 137 Colo. 584, 328 P.2d 111 (1958); Rencher v. District Court, 160 Colo. 523, 418 P.2d 289 (1966).

This rule provides for the granting of relief from judgments entered by mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, fraud, etc. Prather v. District Court, 137 Colo. 584, 328 P.2d 111 (1958).

Section (b) of this rule permits a court to relieve a party from a final judgment or order for ''mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect''. Burson v. Burson, 149 Colo. 566, 369 P.2d 979 (1962); Dept. of Welfare v. Schneider, 156 Colo. 189, 397 P.2d 752 (1964); Domenico v. Sw. Props. Venture, 914 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1995).

A court may set aside a judgment in favor of a debtor if the judgement was entered into in violation of the automatic stay provision of the federal bankruptcy code. McGuire v. Champion Fence & Contstr., Inc., 104 P.3d 327 (Colo. App. 2004).

Relief under section (b) is limited to setting aside an order or judgment. It is beyond the authority of a court to grant additional affirmative relief, such as reformation of a settlement agreement, in instances of fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct. Affordable Country Homes, LLC v. Smith, 194 P.3d 511 (Colo. App. 2008).

Father's motion for relief not time-barred because judgment was void. Where notice through publication was inadequate because birth mother made fraudulent misrepresentations to the court, birth father was deprived of his constitutional right to due process, thus making the judgment terminating his parental rights void by default. The requirements of due process take precedence over statutory enactments. In re C.L.S., 252 P.3d 556 (Colo. App. 2011).

C.R.C.P. 11 imposes sanctions upon those who violate its provisions, it does not preclude relief under section (b)(1) of this rule. Domenico v. Sw. Props. Venture, 914 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1995).

Relief under section (b) is available for judgments entered pursuant to § 13-17-202. Domenico v. Sw. Props. Venture, 914 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1995).

Responsibility for reasons under clause (1) in the first sentence of section (b) shall be of party. The mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect subject to correction under this rule must be by a party to the action or his legal representative. Columbia Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. District Court, 186 Colo. 212, 526 P.2d 661 (1974).

Acceptance under judgment waives right to review. A party who accepts an award or legal advantage under a judgment normally waives his right to any review of the adjudication which may again put in issue his right to the benefit which he has accepted. Farmers Elevator Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 181 Colo. 231, 508 P.2d 1261 (1973).

A motion to vacate upon any of the grounds must be made within a "reasonable time". Sunshine v. Robinson, 168 Colo. 409, 451 P.2d 757 (1969).

A motion to vacate judgment must be filed within a "reasonable time" under this rule. Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 133 Colo. 138, 292 P.2d 345, cert. denied, 352 U.S. 829, 77 S. Ct. 37, 1 L. Ed. 2d 48 (1956).

For purposes of motion based on evidence of perjury, there is a critical difference between perjury and the mere presence of factual conflicts or deficiencies in the evidence; proponent must show that discrepancies or inaccuracies in testimony were not the result of the usual shortcomings inherent in human perception and memory but rather were the result of a willful fabrication of evidence bearing on a material issue. Aspen Skiing Co. v. Peer, 804 P.2d 166 (Colo. 1991); In re Eisenhuth, 976 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1999).

In dissolution of marriage case trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying husband's motion under section (b)(2) even though husband contended wife undervalued, omitted, or otherwise hid marital assets at dissolution of marriage hearings where husband did not show that such alleged discrepancies or inaccuracies in wife's testimony resulted from a willful fabrication of evidence. In re Eisenhuth, 976 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1999).

Denial of motion for new trial upheld where newly discovered evidence allegedly demonstrating that plaintiff perjured himself at trial was equally consistent with theory that plaintiff's perceptions and recollections of accident honestly differed from those of certain other witnesses. Aspen Skiing Co. v. Peer, 804 P.2d 166 (Colo. 1991).

Denial of motion for new trial upheld where intentional misconduct was ameliorated before and during trial. Court held that there was no reason to presume that defendant's misconduct substantially impaired plaintiff's ability to prepare for and proceed at trial. Antolovich v. Brown Group Retail, Inc., 183 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2007).

Relief from the operation of a judgment alleged to have resulted from mistake must be pursued by motion, to be made within a ''reasonable time''. Peercy v. Peercy, 154 Colo. 575, 392 P.2d 609 (1964).

"Any other reason justifying relief" language of section (b)(5) encompasses newly discovered evidence. A motion for relief from a judgment pursuant to this rule on the ground of newly discovered evidence should be resolved by the same criteria applicable to a C.R.C.P. 59 (d)(4) motion: Applicant must establish that the evidence could not have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence and produced at the first trial; the evidence was material to an issue in the first trial; and the evidence, if admitted, would probably change the result of the first trial. S.E. Colorado Water Conservancy Dist. v. O'Neill, 817 P.2d 500 (Colo. 1991), aff'd, 854 P.2d 167 (Colo. 1993).

Section (b)(5) is a residuary clause for application only in situations not covered by other sections in this rule. McElvaney v. Batley, 824 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1991); Domenico v. Sw. Props. Venture, 914 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1995).

Section (b)(5) does not apply where motion is based on "fraudulent acts and misrepresentations". Instead, such a motion is subject to section (b)(2) and the corresponding six-month time limit. In re Adoption of P.H.A., 899 P.2d 345 (Colo. App. 1995).

This rule may be used as a mechanism for obtaining relief from a final judgment due to a change in case law precedent. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. McMillan, 925 P.2d 785 (Colo. 1996).

However, while C.R.C.P. 59 gives a trial court "full power to correct any and all errors committed," under section (b)(5) of this rule, the erroneous application of the law is simply not a sufficient basis for relief. Spencer v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 39 P.3d 1272 (Colo. App. 2001); SR Condos., LLC v. K.C. Constr., Inc., 176 P. 3d 866 (Colo. App. 2007).

Section (b) of this rule requires any motion for relief of judgment on the grounds of mistake or fraud to be made within six months after judgment. Schaffer v. District Court, 172 Colo. 43, 470 P.2d 18 (1970).

Less than five weeks is not unreasonable. A delay of less than five weeks, if the allegation of when they learned of the judgment be true, cannot be said to be unreasonable. Sunshine v. Robinson, 168 Colo. 409, 451 P.2d 757 (1969).

Relief must be sought not more than six months after the judgment by section (b) of this rule. Burson v. Burson, 149 Colo. 566, 369 P.2d 979 (1962); Peercy v. Peercy, 154 Colo. 575, 392 P.2d 609 (1964); Dept. of Welfare v. Schneider, 156 Colo. 189, 397 P.2d 752 (1964).

Under section (b)(1) a motion to vacate must be filed within six months, or it is barred. Atlas Constr. Co. v. District Court, 197 Colo. 66, 589 P.2d 953 (1979).

Where a judgment resulted from a mistaken belief in the existence of a terminated order, this constitutes grounds for relief under section (b)(1), and the ''reasonable time'' limitation of this rule for avoiding the effects of the judgment upon such grounds cannot exceed six months. Sauls v. Sauls, 40 Colo. App. 275, 577 P.2d 771 (1977).

Where one seeks to be relieved from the judgment more than six months after its entry, such attempt is too late. Peercy v. Peercy, 154 Colo. 575, 392 P.2d 609 (1964).

A motion filed seven months after entry of judgment is filed too late. Fiant v. Town of Naturita, 127 Colo. 571, 259 P.2d 278 (1953); Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 133 Colo. 138, 292 P.2d 345, cert. denied, 352 U.S. 829, 77 S. Ct. 37, 1 L. Ed. 2d 48 (1956).

Since each of the installments for support becomes a judgment when it accrues, the only relief from judgment on the grounds of fraud or mistake would pertain to those installments which became due six months or less before the final judgment. Schaffer v. District Court, 172 Colo. 43, 470 P.2d 18 (1970).

Section (b) of this rule cannot be applied to bar a motion brought under § 14-10-122 (1)(c) for retroactive modification of child support based on a mutually agreed upon change of physical custody. Section (b) of the rule imposes a time limit for the motion and is inconsistent with the procedure contemplated in the statute. In re Green, 93 P.3d 614 (Colo. App. 2004).

A court has no authority to grant relief. Where a motion is filed after the six-month deadline required by this rule, a court would have had no authority to grant relief. AA Constr. Co. v. Gould, 28 Colo. App. 161, 470 P.2d 916 (1970).

Where plaintiff's motion for reinstatement of the case was not timely filed within the specified six-month period following entry of the order of dismissal, the trial court was without authority to reinstate the case or to provide further relief. Love v. Rocky Mt. Kennel Club, 33 Colo. App. 4, 514 P.2d 336 (1973).

When the limiting period has passed, an order vacating judgment is absolutely void for lack of jurisdiction. Elder v. Richmond Gold & Mining Co., 58 F. 536 (8th Cir. 1893); Empire Const. Co. v. Crawford, 57 Colo. 281, 141 P. 474 (1914); Bd. of Control v. Mulertz, 60 Colo. 468, 154 P. 742 (1916).

Claim preclusion (otherwise known as res judicata) bars independent damages actions for wrongs committed in dissolution proceedings. After the six-month period following entry of judgment provided by section (b)(2), independent damages action for wrongs allegedly committed in the dissolution proceeding are barred. Gavrilis v. Gavrilis, 116 P.3d 1272 (Colo. App. 2005).

There was no fraud upon the court in dissolution of marriage action where husband's fraudulent nondisclosure of assets and income was purely between the parties. In re Gance, 36 P.3d 114 (Colo. App. 2001).

Void judgment may be vacated at any time regardless of time limits established by rules of civil procedure. Don J. Best Trust v. Cherry Creek Nat. Bank, 792 P.2d 302 (Colo. App. 1990).

Independent equitable action permitted. The propriety of an independent equitable action to afford relief from a prior judgment is expressly permitted under the provisions of section (b) of this rule. Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974).

Six-month limitation has no application to independent equitable action. An independent action to obtain equitable relief from a prior judgment is not brought under section (b) of this rule, and, hence, the six months' time limitation contained in this rule has no application. Terry v. Terry, 154 Colo. 41, 387 P.2d 902 (1963); Caldwell v. District Court, 644 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1982).

An independent equitable action to afford relief from a prior judgment is not restricted by the six-month time limitation upon motions made under clauses (1) to (5) in the first sentence of this rule. Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974).

Because an independent equitable action is not brought under this rule, the six-month time limit of clauses (1) and (2) in the first sentence of section (b) do not apply; rather, an independent equitable action must only be brought within a ''reasonable time''. Atlas Constr. Co. v. District Court, 197 Colo. 66, 589 P.2d 953 (1979).

An independent equitable action may provide additional remedies. An independent equitable action to afford relief from a prior judgment may provide remedies in addition to those afforded under section (b) of this rule. Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974).

Essential criteria upon which relief may be granted in an equitable action to afford relief from a prior judgment contemplated by section (b) are as follows: (1) That the judgment ought not, in equity and good conscience, be enforced; (2) that there can be asserted a meritorious defense to the cause of action on which the judgment is founded; (3) that fraud, accident, or mistake prevented the defendant in the action from obtaining the benefit of his defense; (4) that there is an absence of fault or negligence on the part of defendant; (5) and that there exists no adequate remedy at law. Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974); In re Gance, 36 P.3d 114 (Colo. App. 2001).

Independent action to obtain equitable relief from prior judgment not brought under rule; rather, it is a new action, commenced in the same manner as any other civil action. Atlas Constr. Co. v. District Court, 197 Colo. 66, 589 P.2d 953 (1979).

Dismissal of judgment debtor's motion for relief under section (b)(4) on the basis of settlement agreement between judgment debtor and judgment creditor was proper where such motion was not timely filed and the court lacked jurisdiction since judgment debtor elected to litigate settlement agreement in a separate action. Tripp v. Parga, 764 P.2d 367 (Colo. App. 1988).

A party may not use an independent equitable action to accomplish what it could have accomplished by appeal. In case where plaintiff argued that second complaint was an independent equitable action seeking relief from order dismissing his first complaint, plaintiff's proper remedy was to seek timely appellate relief. Therefore, district court properly dismissed plaintiff's second complaint. Kelso v. Rickenbaugh Cadillac Co., 262 P.3d 1001 (Colo. App. 2011).

This rule does not limit the power of a court to entertain an independent action to relieve a party from a judgment, order, or proceeding. Terry v. Terry, 154 Colo. 41, 387 P.2d 902 (1963).

Claimant seeking relief through an independent equitable action based on fraud must establish extrinsic fraud as opposed to mere intrinsic fraud. A mere showing of intrinsic fraud, such as perjury or nondisclosure between the litigants concerning the subject matter of the original action, is insufficient. In re Gance, 36 P.3d 114 (Colo. App. 2001).

Husband's concealment of income and assets in dissolution of marriage action pertained to the substance and merits of the litigation and involved the parties themselves; it therefore did not rise to the level of fraud necessary to support an independent equitable action to vacate the underlying permanent orders. In re Gance, 36 P.3d 114 (Colo. App. 2001).

"Excusable neglect" sufficient to vacate an order results from circumstances which would cause a reasonably careful person to neglect a duty, and the issue of negligence is determined by the trier of fact. Craig v. Rider, 628 P.2d 623 (Colo. App. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 651 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982).

Party's own negligence not excusable neglect. Where a party's own carelessness resulted in its failure to file a responsive pleading, this carelessness does not constitute excusable neglect. Biella v. State Dept. of Hwys., 652 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982); Johnston v. S.W. Devanney & Co., Inc., 719 P.2d 734 (Colo. App. 1986).

In general, excusable neglect involves unforeseen occurrences that would cause a reasonably prudent person to overlook a required act in the performance of some responsibility. Failure to act because of carelessness and negligence is not excusable neglect. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128 (Colo. App. 1993).

Reliance on opposing party's pleadings held to be excusable neglect. A defendant's reliance upon the plaintiff's verified statement and pleadings appearing to drop the defendant from the action, coupled with the advice of an attorney that he need not be concerned about the proceedings, constitutes ''excusable neglect'' as a matter of law. People in Interest of C.A.W., 660 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1982).

Reliance on district court's statements held to be excusable neglect. A defendant's failure to move for a new trial, based on the district court's assurance that such a motion was unnecessary in order for the defendant to appeal, constitutes excusable neglect under this rule. Tyler v. Adams County Dept. of Soc. Servs., 697 P.2d 29 (Colo. 1985).

Excusable neglect not found. Pro se plaintiff's failure to comply with notice provisions of § 24-10-109 does not constitute excusable neglect. Deason v. Lewis, 706 P.2d 1283 (Colo. App. 1985).

The rule that negligence on the part of an attorney may constitute excusable neglect on the part of the client has no application if the client itself is also negligent. Johnson v. Capitol Funding, LTD., 725 P.2d 1179 (Colo. App. 1986).

Common carelessness and negligence do not amount to excusable neglect and a party's conduct constitutes excusable neglect when the surrounding circumstances would cause a reasonably careful person similarly to neglect a duty. Guynn v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co., 725 P.2d 1162 (Colo. App. 1986).

Defendant's assertion that its agent was without authority to enter into a contract with plaintiff was not excusable neglect. Merrill Chadwick Co. v. October Oil Co., 725 P.2d 17 (Colo. App. 1986).

Conduct of a party's legal representative constitutes excusable neglect when surrounding circumstances would cause a reasonably prudent person to overlook a required act in the performance of some responsibility; however, common carelessness and negligence by the party's attorney does not amount to excusable neglect. Guevara v. Foxhoven, 928 P.2d 793 (Colo. App. 1996).

Failure of settlement offer made by defendant's insurance attorney to specify whether offer addressed fewer than all of the claims between the parties, did not constitute excusable neglect. Guevara v. Foxhoven, 928 P.2d 793 (Colo. App. 1996).

Excusable neglect does not constitute grounds for relief from the operation of C.R.C.P. 59(j). Sandoval v. Trinidad Area Health Ass'n, 752 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1988).

Relief from a judgment may be granted on equitable grounds. Continental Nat'l Bank v. Dolan, 39 Colo. App. 16, 564 P.2d 955 (1977).

A motion under this rule cannot be overturned on appeal in the absence of an abuse of discretion by the district court. Front Range Partners v. Hyland Hills Metro., 706 P.2d 1279 (Colo. 1985); Domenico v. Sw. Props. Venture, 914 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1995).

Abuse of discretion will warrant reversal. While the grant or denial of relief from a judgment on equitable grounds is within the discretion of the trial court, an abuse of this discretion will warrant reversal. Continental Nat'l Bank v. Dolan, 39 Colo. App. 16, 564 P.2d 955 (1977); S.E. Colo. Water Conservancy Dist. v. O'Neill, 817 P.2d 500 (Colo. 1991), aff'd, 854 P.2d 167 (Colo. 1993); Blesch v. Denver Publ'g Co., 62 P.3d 1060 (Colo. App. 2002).

It is error to deny relief where dismissal erroneously ordered on court's own motion. Where court on own motion dismissed action for failure to prosecute without complying with notice requirements of C.R.C.P. 41(b) and C.R.C.P. 121 § 1-10(2), erroneous dismissal constituted sufficient reason to justify relief. Maxwell v. W.K.A. Inc., 728 P.2d 321 (Colo. App. 1986).

Abuse of discretion found where trial court refused to set aside the damages portion of a judgment. Johnston v. S.W. Devanney & Co., Inc., 719 P.2d 734 (Colo. App. 1986).

Abuse of discretion not found. Luna v. Fisher, 690 P.2d 264 (Colo. App. 1984); Merrill

Chadwick Co. v. October Oil Co., 725 P.2d 17 (Colo. App. 1986).

Existence of meritorious defense and lack of prejudice to the plaintiff are insufficient to show an abuse of discretion in denying a motion to set aside a default. Johnston v. S.W. Devanney & Co., Inc., 719 P.2d 734 (Colo. App. 1986).

Even without tainted expert's testimony, trial court found that other evidence in the case supported the judgment. People ex rel. S.G., 91 P.3d 443 (Colo. App. 2004).

This rule is not applicable to a motion to reform a property settlement agreement incorporated into a divorce decree, since C.R.C.P. 81(b) provides that the Rules of Civil Procedure shall not govern procedure and practice in divorce actions if in conflict with applicable statutes. Ingels v. Ingels, 29 Colo. App. 585, 487 P.2d 812 (1971).

This rule is not applicable to a juvenile court's entry of an order terminating probation by mistake. The Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure apply only to juvenile matters that are not governed by the Colorado Children's Code. People in Interest of M.T., 950 P.2d 669 (Colo. App. 1997).

District court erred in denying husband relief from provision of dissolution of marriage decree requiring him to pay part of his future social security benefits to wife. State law equitable estoppel principles cannot be applied to bar a party from challenging a judgment rendered void by the supremacy clause of the U.S. constitution. In re Anderson, 252 P.3d 490 (Colo. App. 2010).

A decree determining property rights in a divorce matter is final and cannot be subsequently modified by reason of a change of circumstances. Ferguson v. Olmsted, 168 Colo. 374, 451 P.2d 746 (1969).

Where a court may provide for custody of children by orders made "before or after" the entry of a final decree, the trial court may provide for the custody of the child even though the subject was not mentioned in the original decree. Kelley v. Kelley, 161 Colo. 486, 423 P.2d 315 (1967).

Six-month limit applicable in child support action. Where defendant in a child support action alleged there was fraud, extrinsic to the record, perpetrated by plaintiff, unless the fraud alleged was such as to defeat the jurisdiction of the court, defendant was subject to the six-month limit of this rule. McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977).

Where defendant did not seek to reopen the divorce proceeding until approximately five years after entry of judgment, none of the grounds of C.R.C.P. 59 or this rule were available to him to reopen the divorce proceeding. McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977).

Clause (5) of section (b) is residuary clause, covering extreme situations not covered by the preceding clauses in section (b). Atlas Constr. Co. v. District Court, 197 Colo. 66, 589 P.2d 953 (1979); Sisneros v. First Nat. Bank of Denver, 689 P.2d 1178 (Colo. App. 1984); Canton Oil v. District Court, 731 P.2d 687 (Colo. 1987).

A motion under this rule cannot be used to circumvent the operation of C.R.C.P. 59(j) unless the facts of the case constitute an "extreme situation" justifying relief from a judgment pursuant to clause (5) of section (b). Sandoval v. Trinidad Area Health Ass'n, 752 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1988).

Total lack of judicial review of property division provisions of a separation agreement constitutes an omission falling within the ambit of clause (5) of section (b). In re Seely, 689 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1984).

Reason alleged by a movant under clause (5) of section (b) must justify relief. Atlas Constr. Co. v. District Court, 197 Colo. 66, 589 P.2d 953 (1979); Sisneros v. First Nat. Bank of Denver, 689 P.2d 1178 (Colo. App. 1984).

Grievous jury misconduct raising sensitive issues of religion presents grounds for relief under clause (5) ("other reason") of section (b). Canton Oil v. District Court, 731 P.2d 687 (Colo. 1987).

Where there is misconduct of jurors or the intrusion of irregular influences in the course of a trial, the test for determining whether a new trial will be granted is whether such matters had capacity of influencing result. Butters v. Dee Wann, 363 P.2d 494 (1961); Canton Oil v. District Court, 731 P.2d 687 (Colo. 1987).

While trial court personally expressed belief that verdict would have been same with a "decent" jury, trial court made necessary finding, in setting aside judgment, that jurors' conduct had capacity of influencing verdict. Canton Oil v. District Court, 731 P.2d 687 (Colo. 1987).

Untimely assertion of federal statutory venue right is not an extreme situation justifying relief under clause (5) of section (b). Sisneros v. First Nat. Bank of Denver, 689 P.2d 1178 (Colo. App. 1984).

Repeated assurances by the court clerk that the defendant's motion to alter and amend the judgment had been forwarded to the presiding judge when, in fact, no notification of said motion had been given to the judge did not constitute an "extreme situation" allowing relief under clause (5) of section (b). Sandoval v. Trinidad Area Health Ass'n, 752 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1988).

Defense not timely raised. The existence of a defense not timely raised does not constitute an extreme situation justifying relief from a default judgment under clause (5) of section (b). Sisneros v. First Nat. Bank of Denver, 689 P.2d 1178 (Colo. App. 1984).

Changes in decisional law, even by the United States supreme court and even involving constitutionality, do not necessarily amount to the extraordinary circumstances required for relief pursuant to section (b)(5). Davidson v. McClellan, 16 P.3d 233 (Colo. 2001); SR Condos., LLC v. K.C. Constr., Inc., 176 P. 3d 866 (Colo. App. 2007).

Jurisdictional prerequisite for review of action on section (b) motion. A motion for a new trial is a jurisdictional prerequisite for appellate review of a grant or denial of a section (b) motion when there has been a hearing involving controverted issues of fact. Rowe v. Watered Down Farms, 195 Colo. 152, 576 P.2d 172 (1978).

Erroneous in personam decision may be vacated. A trial court may properly vacate its order of dismissal against a defendant where the original decision of the trial court to dismiss under the theory that the action was in personam and not in rem was erroneous. Linker v. Linker, 28 Colo. App. 136, 470 P.2d 882 (1970).

When a defendant voluntarily pays a judgment, he is barred from questioning any technicalities, either of pleading or form, incident to the entry of the judgment. Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 133 Colo. 138, 292 P.2d 345, cert. denied, 352 U.S. 829, 77 S. Ct. 37, 1 L. Ed. 2d 48 (1956).

Misplaced reliance on the advice of counsel is not in itself sufficient grounds for granting of relief under section (b) of this rule. BB v. SS, 171 Colo. 534, 468 P.2d 859 (1970); Luna v. Fisher, 690 P.2d 264 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where a party commits a cause to the agency of an attorney, the neglect, omission, or mistake of such attorney resulting in the rendition of a judgment against the party is available to authorize the vacation of the judgment. Fidelity Fin. Co. v. Groff, 124 Colo. 223, 235 P.2d 994 (1951); Domenico v. Sw. Props. Venture, 914 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1995).

When a trial court permits counsel to withdraw from a case without notice to his client and then adjudicated his rights "ex parte", a judgment entered is void for lack of due process. Dalton v. People in Interest of Moors, 146 Colo. 15, 360 P.2d 113 (1961); Sunshine v. Robinson, 168 Colo. 409, 451 P.2d 757 (1969).

Malfeasance by attorney, consisting of failure to notify clients of motion for summary judgment or to respond to motion while under suspension from the practice of law, furnished grounds for relief from judgment where clients were unaware of the motion or of their attorney's suspension. Valley Bank of Frederick v. Rowe, 851 P.2d 267 (Colo. App. 1993).

Action of trial court renders judgment void if defendants had no notice. The action of the trial judge in permitting the withdrawal of counsel and proceeding to judgment "ex parte" constituted a failure to protect the constitutional right of defendants to their day in court and renders judgment void if defendants had no notice that their counsel intended to seek permission to withdraw. Calkins v. Smalley, 88 Colo. 227, 294 P. 534 (1930); Blackwell v. Midland Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 132 Colo. 45, 284 P.2d 1060 (1955); Sunshine v. Robinson, 168 Colo. 409, 451 P.2d 757 (1969).

Where a judgment is entered upon a cognovit note without notice to the defendant, a motion in apt time is thereafter filed to set aside the same, and a meritorious defense is tendered by answer, it is the duty of a court to vacate the judgment and try the case on the merits. Richards v. First Nat'l Bank, 59 Colo. 403, 148 P. 912 (1915); Commercial Credit Co. v. Calkins, 78 Colo. 257, 241 P. 529 (1925); Mitchell v. Miller, 81 Colo. 1, 252 P. 886 (1927); Denver Indus. Corp. v. Kesselring, 90 Colo. 295, 8 P.2d 767 (1932); Lucero v. Smith, 110 Colo. 165, 132 P.2d 791 (1943); Prather v. District Court, 137 Colo. 584, 328 P.2d 111 (1958); Rencher v. District Court, 160 Colo. 523, 418 P.2d 289 (1966).

If a judgment of dismissal has terminated and put an end to, a case remains final for all purposes and is unaffected by a motion to grant relief therefrom. Johnson v. Johnson, 132 Colo. 236, 287 P.2d 49 (1955); Robles v. People in Interest of Robles, 150 Colo. 462, 373 P.2d 701 (1962).

A motion under section (b) does not affect the finality of a judgment or suspend its operation. Robles v. People in Interest of Robles, 150 Colo. 462, 373 P.2d 701 (1962).

A motion, in any event, is directed to the discretion of a trial court. Johnson v. Johnson, 132 Colo. 236, 287 P.2d 49 (1955); Robles v. People in Interest of Robles, 150 Colo. 462, 373 P.2d 701 (1962).

When one files such a motion, he admits for all practical purposes that the judgment is in all respects regular on the face of the record, but asserts that the record would show differently except for mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect on behalf of counsel or client. Johnson v. Johnson, 132 Colo. 236, 287 P.2d 49 (1955); Robles v. People in Interest of Robles, 150 Colo. 462, 373 P.2d 701 (1962).

The ruling on a motion to "dismiss and vacate" is not a final judgment from which an appeal will lie. Fiant v. Town of Naturita, 127 Colo. 571, 259 P.2d 278 (1953); Salter v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 133 Colo. 138, 292 P.2d 345, cert. denied, 352 U.S. 829, 77 S. Ct. 37, 1 L. Ed. 2d 48 (1956).

Where defendant in prior action sought and obtained dismissal for failure to prosecute but did not specifically request dismissal with prejudice, order of dismissal did not so specify, and no good cause was shown for defendant's failure to request dismissal with prejudice, subsequent ''clarification'' of order to specify dismissal with prejudice was ineffective. McElvaney v. Batley, 824 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where a judgment is set aside on jurisdictional grounds, it is vacated and of no force and effect. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

Party who lets judgment become final without objection to the court's jurisdiction is precluded from attacking the subject matter jurisdiction through a motion under this rule. In re Mallon, 956 P.2d 642 (Colo. App. 1998).

Original judgment opened. Where a judgment is set aside on grounds other than those challenging the jurisdiction of the court, the judgment is opened and the moving party, after a showing of good cause and a meritorious defense, will be permitted to file an answer to the original complaint and participate in a trial on the merits. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

If an issue is not res judicata, the district court's judgment may be challenged as void through a motion pursuant to section (b) of this rule to vacate the judgment or through an independent action. Moore & Co. v. Williams, 672 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1983).

A void judgment is a judgment entered where jurisdictional defects exist and is a nullity, whereas an erroneous judgment is one rendered in accordance with method of procedure and practice allowed by law but is contrary to law; if a trial court has jurisdiction, it may correct an erroneous judgment. In re Pierce, 720 P.2d 591 (Colo. App. 1985).

Judgment rendered without jurisdiction is void and may be attacked directly or collaterally. In re Stroud, 631 P.2d 168 (Colo. 1981).

Judgment entered on legal holiday not void and becomes effective next business day. Section 13-1-118 (1) does not provide that any judicial business transacted in violation of its provisions is void. Rather, the statute is silent as to the effect of any order entered or other judicial business transacted in violation of its prohibitions. Section 13-1-118 (2) provides that the effect of having a day fixed for the opening of a court that falls on a prohibited day is that ''the court shall stand adjourned until the next succeeding day.'' Thus, the effect of the trial court's entry of an order reviving judgment on a legal holiday was not to invalidate the order but, rather, merely to postpone its effective date until the next day the courts were open. Because the challenged judgment is not void, section (b)(3) of this rule provides no basis for relief. Arvada 1st Indus. Bank v. Hutchison, 15 P.3d 292 (Colo. App. 2000).

Government agencies treated same as other litigants. Absent an express statutory mandate to the contrary, government agencies are to be treated as would be any other litigant while before the court. Biella v. State Dept. of Hwys., 652 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982).

C.R.C.P. 6(b)(2) is controlling over this rule as to whether a trial court may extend the period of time for filing a motion for new trial under C.R.C.P. 59(b) (now (a)(1)) after the original filing period has expired. Liberty Mutual Ins. Co. v. Safeco Ins. Co., 679 P.2d 1115 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where court had lost jurisdiction under C.R.C.P. 59(b) (now (a)(1)), court had jurisdiction to set aside judgment under clause (5) of section (b) of this rule without unduly expanding the contours of the rule or undercutting C.R.C.P. 59(b) (now (a)(1)). Canton Oil v. District Court, 731 P.2d 687 (Colo. 1987).

Only issues contained in a motion under this rule are properly before the appellate court for review; constitutional objections not appearing in the motion will not be reviewed. Front Range Partners v. Hyland Hills Metro., 706 P.2d 1279 (Colo. 1985).

No evidentiary hearing need be conducted by the trial court considering a motion under this rule nor is there an abuse of discretion when a trial court determines such a motion without conducting such a hearing. Front Range Partners v. Hyland Hills Metro., 706 P.2d 1279 (Colo. 1985).

But nothing in this rule prevents a trial court from holding an evidentiary hearing on a motion under this rule if such a hearing would assist in reaching a just determination of the issues raised by the motion. Sharma v. Vigil, 967 P.2d 197 (Colo. App. 1998).

Reversal of conviction in criminal case grounds for relief from monetary forfeiture judgment. While a conviction is not required in every civil forfeiture case, the reversal of the conviction was relevant here because the court relied on that conviction in its forfeiture judgment. The physical evidence upon which the trial court had based its forfeiture judgment had been determined to be unconstitutionally seized, making it relevant. People v. $11,200.00 U.S. Currency, 316 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2011), rev'd on other grounds, 2013 CO 64, 313 P.3d 554.

Section (b) permits a trial court to rectify or reverse a prior judgment that, in light of new facts, is now erroneous. However, a holding that the forfeiture against a defendant's property was void does not equate to a ruling that defendant is entitled to a return of the property or monetary relief from the government because a motion under section (b) is not a claim for the return of property. To the extent that the trial court's order set aside the forfeiture judgment, the order was consistent with the power expressly granted the court under section (b). Section (b) does not empower the trial court to go further and order return of the property. People

v. $11,200.00 U.S. Currency, 2013 CO 64, 313 P.3d 554.

Father's section (b) request to vacate prior orders in a dependency and neglect proceeding not rendered moot following child's death. Denying his request for relief would have a collateral consequence in the dependency and neglect orders in father's federal action, thus the request cannot be considered moot. People in Interest of C.G., 2015 COA 106, 410 P.3d 596.

Law reviews. For comment on Self v. Watt, appearing below, see 26 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 107 (1953). For comment on Coerber v. Rath appearing below, see 45 Den. L.J. 763 (1968).

Annotator's note. For annotations relating to motions to vacate default judgments, see the annotations under the analysis title "IV. Setting Aside Default" under C.R.C.P. 55.

Review by writ of error is proper procedure. The only proper procedure to secure review of a trial court's order granting an application to set aside a default judgment is by writ of error after final judgment, not prohibition. Stiger v. District Court, 188 Colo. 403, 535 P.2d 508 (1975).

Section (b) of this rule sets forth the procedure to be followed where one seeks to set aside a judgment entered by default. Fraka v. Malernee, 129 Colo. 87, 267 P.2d 651 (1954).

Section (b)(3) is the proper basis for vacating a default judgment if the defaulting party's due process rights were violated by failure to receive notice of a default judgment. First Nat. Bank of Telluride v. Fleisher, 2 P.3d 706 (Colo. 2000); Burton v. Colo. Access, 2018 CO 11, 428 P.3d 208, cert. denied sub nom. Olivar v. Pub. Serv. Emple. Credit Union, __ U.S. __, 139 S. Ct. 87, 202 L. Ed. 2d 26 (2018).

If a judgment is void, the court must set it aside regardless of when the party seeking to set aside the judgment moves to set it aside. No time limit applies to a motion under section (b)(3). Burton v. Colo. Access, 2015 COA 111, 410 P.3d 1255, aff'd, 2018 CO 11, 428 P.3d 208, cert. denied sub nom. Olivar v. Pub. Serv. Emple. Credit Union, __ U.S. __, 139 S. Ct. 87, 202 L. Ed. 2d 26 (2018).

Section (b) of this rule and C.R.C.P. 55(c) leave the matter of setting aside defaults and judgments entered thereon to the discretion of a trial judge. Ehrlinger v. Parker, 137 Colo. 514, 327 P.2d 267 (1958).

Allegations in a C.R.C.P. 55 motion for default are sufficient to assert a basis for relief from judgment on the basis of fraud. Salvo v. De Simone, 727 P.2d 879 (Colo. App. 1986).

Motion for a new trial is a jurisdictional prerequisite for appellate review of denial of a motion to vacate a default judgment, unless the hearing on the motion to vacate does not involve "controverted issues of fact". Rowe v. Watered Down Farms, 195 Colo. 152, 576 P.2d 172 (1978).

The granting or denial of an application to vacate a default based on excusable neglect rests in the sound judicial discretion of a trial court. Browning v. Potter, 129 Colo. 448, 271 P.2d 418 (1954); Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Ehrlinger v. Parker, 137 Colo. 514, 327 P.2d 267 (1958).

The determination of granting or denying relief under this rule rests in the sound discretion of the trial court on the particular facts of the case. Weeks v. Sigala, 32 Colo. App. 121, 509 P.2d 320 (1973).

The determination of whether to vacate or set aside a default judgment is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974).

A trial court's determination of a motion to vacate a judgment under this rule will not be disturbed on appellate review in the absence of a clear abuse of discretion. Columbine Valley Constr. Co. v. Bd. of Dirs., 626 P.2d 686 (Colo. 1981).

The underlying goal in ruling on motions to set aside default judgments is to promote substantial justice. Whether substantial justice will be served by setting aside a default judgment on the ground of excusable neglect is to be determined by the trial court in the exercise of its sound discretion. Craig v. Rider, 651 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982).

Where the moving party has delayed substantially in seeking to set aside a default judgment, relief is disfavored by the courts. Martinez v. Dixon, 710 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1985).

The trial court's order on a motion for relief, based on a residuary clause covering extreme situations, may not be reversed absent an abuse of discretion. Fukutomi v. Siegel, 785 P.2d 147 (Colo. App. 1989).

To warrant a reversal, it must appear that there is an abuse of the court's discretion. Browning v. Potter, 129 Colo. 448, 271 P.2d 418 (1954); Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Ehrlinger v. Parker, 137 Colo. 514, 327 P.2d 267 (1958).

The determination of granting or denying relief under this rule will not be disturbed on review unless it clearly appears that there has been abuse of that discretion. Weeks v. Sigala, 32 Colo. App. 121, 509 P.2d 320 (1973).

Where service is not proper, judgment is void and may be challenged at any time. United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

Presumption of regularity applied to district court order granting default judgment. Because the court record had been destroyed and the return of service was unavailable, the presumption of regularity applied and the default judgment was presumed valid and properly entered. Defendant's unsworn statements that he had never been served were insufficient to make the affirmative showing of error necessary to overcome the presumption. Tallman v. Aune, 2019 COA 12, __ P.3d __.

Discretion of the court in considering any application to vacate a default is controlled by fixed legal principles, to be exercised in conformity with the spirit of the law, and in a manner to serve, and not to impede or defeat, the ends of justice. Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974).

A default judgment as to a party was properly set aside by the judge on the ground that he was not subjected to the personal jurisdiction of the court at the time of the judgment due to a lack of service of process because service had been served on his behalf on his alleged wife, but at the time of service, the couple had been divorced for over a month. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

Default judgment was not void because process was adequately served and trial court therefore had personal jurisdiction over defendant. In case where process was properly served upon defendant's registered agent pursuant to C.R.C.P. 4, agent's failure to timely respond because of his own carelessness and negligence did not constitute excusable neglect. Therefore, trial court erred in setting aside the default judgment pursuant to sections (b)(1) and (b)(3) of this rule. Goodman Assocs., LLC v. WP Mtn. Props., LLC, 222 P.3d 310 (Colo. 2010).

Judgment must be final before time limitations apply. Where order of default was entered against one of two defendants but action remained pending and no C.R.C.P. 54(b) certification was obtained, timeliness of motion would be gauged in relation to date of dismissal of action against second defendant. United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where a motion is not filed within six months after the default was entered, then, under section (b) of this rule, a trial court is correct in denying the motion to vacate the default. Browning v. Potter, 129 Colo. 448, 271 P.2d 418 (1954).

The trial court had no jurisdiction to hear, much less grant, a motion for relief from judgment filed more than six months after entry of judgment. Wesson v. Johnson, 622 P.2d 104 (Colo. App. 1980).

Seventeen years is not a "reasonable time". Where for a period of more than 17 years one took no action to vacate or otherwise attack the validity of a default judgment, it can hardly be said that under such circumstances 17 years is a ''reasonable time''. Haskell v. Gross, 145 Colo. 365, 358 P.2d 1024 (1961).

Petition to vacate such a judgment held filed in apt time. Senne v. Conley, 110 Colo. 270, 133 P.2d 381 (1943).

In cases such as this, a defendant must establish his grounds for relief by clear, strong, and satisfactory proof. Browning v. Potter, 129 Colo. 448, 271 P.2d 418 (1954); Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957); Moskowitz v. Michaels Artists & Eng'r Supplies, Inc., 29 Colo. App. 44, 477 P.2d 465 (1970).

It is not sufficient to show that the neglect which brought about the default is excusable. Gumaer v. Bell, 51 Colo. 473, 119 P. 681 (1911); Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957); Moskowitz v. Michaels Artists & Eng'r Supplies, Inc., 29 Colo. App. 44, 477 P.2d 465 (1970).

To vacate a default, a mere showing of excusable neglect is not sufficient. Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Orebaugh v. Doskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

A defendant must show a meritorious defense to the action. Gumaer v. Bell, 51 Colo. 473, 119 P. 681 (1911); Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957); Moskowitz v. Michaels Artists & Eng'r Supplies, Inc., 29 Colo. App. 44, 477 P.2d 465 (1970); Weeks v. Sigala, 32 Colo. App. 121, 509 P.2d 320 (1973).

The judge was acting within his jurisdiction under this rule when he set aside a default judgment on the ground of ''excusable neglect'' supported by a specific statement of meritorious defense. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

A defense to the action "prima facie" meritorious must also appear. Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Orebaugh v. Doskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

It must be stated with such fullness and particularity that the court can see it is substantial, not technical, meritorious, and not frivolous. Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Orebaugh v. Doskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

Where there were no reasons proffered to the trial court as grounds for relief under section (b) other than youth and indifference, the trial court's denial of motion to set aside default judgment was not an abuse of discretion. People in Interest of J.M.W., 36 Colo. App. 398, 542 P.2d 392 (1975).

It is not the duty of the trial court to relieve one of the consequences incident to the mistakes of his counsel. Self v. Watt, 128 Colo. 61, 259 P.2d 1074 (1953).

Where it is clear that defendants' counsel was negligent and that such neglect was the primary cause for their failure, counsel's neglect is inexcusable, but this neglect should not be imputed to the defendants. Coerber v. Rath, 164 Colo. 294, 435 P.2d 228 (1967).

Gross negligence on the part of counsel resulting in a default judgment is considered excusable neglect on the part of the client entitling him to have the judgment set aside. Temple v. Miller, 30 Colo. App. 49, 488 P.2d 252 (1971); Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974).

Gross negligence on the part of counsel, under certain circumstances, should be considered excusable neglect on the part of a client sufficient to permit the client to set aside a default judgment. Weeks v. Sigala, 32 Colo. App. 121, 509 P.2d 320 (1973).

Although a court recognizes the gross neglect of counsel, yet enters a default, it unwarrantly punishes defendants whose only dereliction is the misplacing of confidence in their attorney. Coerber v. Rath, 164 Colo. 294, 435 P.2d 228 (1967).

To hold that such reasons are inapplicable because a defendant failed to check the progress of the litigation is to make the client erroneously totally responsible for the attorney's negligent failure to comply with the rules of civil procedure. Temple v. Miller, 30 Colo. App. 49, 488 P.2d 252 (1971).

Where one was, or should have been, aware that his interest in the action was adverse to another, his reliance on such individual does not constitute excusable neglect so as to justify vacating entry of default judgment. Moskowitz v. Michaels Artists & Eng'r Supplies, Inc., 29 Colo. App. 44, 477 P.2d 465 (1970).

Where the record discloses that the defendant himself was guilty of negligence separate and apart from that of his counsel, the alleged negligence of counsel would not be considered as excusable neglect for purpose of setting aside default judgment. Weeks v. Sigala, 32 Colo. App. 121, 509 P.2d 320 (1973).

The entry of a default judgment does not apply to a stipulated judgment. Where parties dealing at arm's length have stipulated for the entry of a judgment, it is not a default judgment in the true sense of the word, but a stipulated judgment; consequently, there is no mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect. Kopel v. Davie, 163 Colo. 57, 428 P.2d 712 (1967).

Where the parties to litigation, dealing at arm's length, stipulate for the entry of a judgment of dismissal, and they do not claim mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, nor are any of the parties to the action seeking to have the order set aside, that judgment is final. Columbia Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. District Court, 186 Colo. 212, 526 P.2d 661 (1974).

A default judgment may only be the subject of collateral attack when the trial court lacked jurisdiction over the parties or the subject matter. DeBoer v. District Court, 184 Colo. 112, 518 P.2d 942 (1974).

Where a default judgment has been entered and made final, it is not a proper subject of collateral attack particularly by strangers to the original action, although the rule prohibiting such attack applies to parties as well. DeBoer v. District Court, 184 Colo. 112, 518 P.2d 942 (1974).

Criteria to be utilized by court in ruling on a motion to vacate a judgment include whether the neglect that resulted in entry of judgment by default was excusable, whether the moving party has alleged a meritorious defense, and whether relief from the challenged order would be consistent with considerations of equity. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986); Dunton v. Whitewater West Recreation, Ltd., 942 P.2d 1348 (Colo. App. 1997); Goodman Assocs., LLC v. WP Mtn. Props., LLC, 222 P.3d 310 (Colo. 2010).

The preferred procedure is to consider all three criteria in a single hearing, as evidence relating to one factor might shed light on another and consideration of all three factors will provide the most complete information for an informed decision. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986); Dunton v. Whitewater West Recreation, Ltd., 942 P.2d 1348 (Colo. App. 1997).

Motion to vacate judgment under this rule on basis of excusable neglect and motion to set aside default judgment under C.R.C.P. 55(c) on the basis of failure to prosecute are sufficiently analogous to justify application of the same standards to either motion; thus, the same three criteria which are legal standard are applicable in both motions. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986).

In determining whether a party has established excusable neglect to obtain relief, the court should not impute gross negligence of an attorney to his client for the purpose of foreclosing the client from relief. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986).

Moving party must establish by factual averments, and not simply by legal conclusions, that claim previously dismissed was indeed meritorious and substantial. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986); Burton v. Colo. Access, 2015 COA 111, __ P.3d __, aff'd on other grounds, 2018 CO 11, 428 P.3d 208, cert. denied sub nom. Olivar v. Pub. Serv. Emple. Credit Union, __ U.S. __, 139 S. Ct. 87, 202 L. Ed. 2d 26 (2018).

In determining whether relief would be consistent with equitable considerations, court should take into account promptness of moving party in filing motion, fact of any detrimental reliance by opposing party on order or judgment of dismissal, and any prejudice to opposing party if motion were to be granted, including impairment of party's ability to adduce proof at trial in defense of claim. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986).

Trial court abused its discretion in denying defendant's motion to set aside judgment based on excusable neglect without applying the test established by Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986), cited above. Taylor v. HCA-Healthone LLC, 2018 COA 29, 417 P.3d 943.

The mere existence of some negligence by client does not serve as per se basis to automatically deny relief, where motion was made based upon excusable neglect. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986).

Defendant failed to show excusable neglect where he failed to seek a continuance or communicate with the trial court in any manner while seeking to remove the case to federal court and failed to appear and participate at trial even though he knew the federal court had remanded the case back to state court. Blazer Elec. Supply Co. v. Bertrand, 952 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1998).

Rule as basis for jurisdiction. Welborn v. Hartman, 28 Colo. App. 11, 470 P.2d 82 (1970); Morehart v. Nat'l Tea Co., 29 Colo. App. 465, 485 P.2d 907 (1971).

Applied in Finegold v. Clarke, 713 P.2d 401 (Colo. App. 1985).

Rule 61. Harmless Error

No error in either the admission or the exclusion of evidence and no error or defect in any ruling or order or in anything done or omitted by the court or by any of the parties is ground for granting a new trial or for setting aside a verdict or for vacating, modifying or otherwise disturbing a judgment or order, unless refusal to take such action appears to the court inconsistent with substantial justice. The court at every stage of the proceeding must disregard any error or defect in the proceeding which does not affect the substantial rights of the parties.

A substantial right is one which relates to the subject matter and not to a matter of procedure and form. Sowder v. Inhelder, 119 Colo. 196, 201 P.2d 533 (1948); Corbin by Corbin v. City & County of Denver, 735 P.2d 214 (Colo. App. 1987).

Lack of adherence to formalities which do not result in prejudice should not interfere with the determination of the issues on the merits. Swan v. Zwahlen, 131 Colo. 184, 280 P.2d 439 (1955).

Allowing fewer peremptory challenges than authorized, or than available to and exercised by the opposing party, is reviewed in accordance with this rule. Laura A. Newman, LLC v. Roberts, 2016 CO 9, 365 P.3d 972 (overruling Denver City Tramway Co. v. Kennedy, 50 Colo. 418, 117 P. 167 (1911); Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Langden, 532 P.2d 337 (Colo. 1975); and Blades v. DaFoe, 704 P.2d 317 (Colo. 1985)).

A new trial will not be granted for error which did not prejudice or harm the party seeking a new trial, or where the trial resulted in substantial justice. Francis v. O'Neal, 127 Colo. 432, 257 P.2d 973 (1953); Tincombe v. Colo. Const. & Supply Corp., 681 P.2d 533 (Colo. App. 1984).

To the extent there was any error in judge's comments that defendant was "playing games" by filing motions for recusal, such error was harmless where defendant filed a subsequent motion for recusal which included the arguments made in the previous recusal motions and the subsequent motion was decided. Moody v. Corsentino, 843 P.2d 1355 (Colo. 1993).

Error in admission of immaterial evidence is not prejudicial where the findings are not based on, nor related to, any of the immaterial matter. Lloyd A. Fry Roofing Co. v. State, 179 Colo. 223, 499 P.2d 1176 (1972).

Violation of rule provisions allowing for a response from the party opposing a motion for summary judgment found to be harmless error under the circumstances. Union Ins. Co. v. Hottenstein, 83 P.3d 1196 (Colo. App. 2003).

It was harmless error for the court to enter summary judgment on an issue which was not raised by the parties when the party against whom judgment is entered has the opportunity to respond to the new issue raised by the trial court. Ferrera v. Nielsen, 799 P.2d 458 (Colo. App. 1990); Davis v. Lira, 817 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where testimony is hearsay, its admission is harmless when the essential and operative facts upon which an award rests are established by competent evidence in the record. San Isabel Elec. Ass'n v. Bramer, 31 Colo. App. 134, 500 P.2d 821 (1972), aff'd, 182 Colo. 15, 510 P.2d 438 (1973).

The admission of part of the deposition of a party in court and able to testify is harmless error where the evidence contained therein is merely cumulative to the evidence already before the court. Its admission neither adds to nor detracts from evidence previously admitted. Therefore, the admission of the deposition is not reversible error. Sentinel Petroleum Corp. v. Bernat, 29 Colo. App. 109, 478 P.2d 688 (1970).

It was harmless error to admit evidence that deposition was taken at Texas state penitentiary, since defendants failed to prove that its admission affected substantial rights. Cheney v. Hailey, 686 P.2d 808 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where a trial judge drives past the premises in question in a zoning case to gain familiarity with its location and topography so he could better understand references in the record to the property, he does not commit reversible error so long as there is no indication that when the trial judge viewed the property it was not in substantially the same condition as when the ordinance in question was passed nor is there any indication that the trial court was influenced by or based its decision upon any evidence not a part of the record. Trans-Robles Corp. v. City of Cherry Hills Village, 30 Colo. 511, 497 P.2d 335 (1972), aff'd, 181 Colo. 356, 509 P.2d 797 (1973).

Where the stated reason for a transcript record's use is to show the scope of a previous judgment, which it fails to include, its admission is error, but harmless error. Wasinger v. Miller, 154 Colo. 61, 388 P.2d 250 (1964).

Errors and deficiencies of counsel will be disregarded where not to do so would result in palpable injury. Griffith v. Anderson, 109 Colo. 265, 124 P.2d 599 (1942).

Although a trial court applies the wrong test, the failure to dismiss does not result in reversible error, where had the trial court applied the right rule, the result would have been the same. Am. Nat'l Bank v. First Nat'l Bank, 28 Colo. App. 486, 476 P.2d 304 (1970).

Error held harmless. Where the record is clear that adequate funds were in fact remitted on behalf of the judgment debtor, and at all times subsequent to the inaccurate change refund by the clerk, the judgment debtor was willing and able to pay the interest to the judgment creditor, and payment was obstructed solely by the latter, substantial justice would not be served by penalizing the defendant for the minor mathematical error of the clerk of the trial court, and thus the error is harmless. Osborn Hdwe. Co. v. Colo. Corp., 32 Colo. App. 254, 510 P.2d 461 (1973).

Even if the trial court erred in issuing a protective order precluding discovery by plaintiff, such error was harmless because it would not alter the court's conclusion that summary judgment was proper. Pierce v. St. Vrain Valley Sch. Dist., 944 P.2d 646 (Colo. App. 1997); rev'd on other grounds, 981 P.2d 600 (Colo. 1999).

Failure to include a citation of legal authorities in trial data certificate and late filing of authorities in trial memorandum held to be harmless error. Yoder v. Hooper, 695 P.2d 1182 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 732 P.2d 852 (Colo. 1987).

Presentation of factual requirements for entry of default judgment by means of testimony and other evidence, rather than by affidavit as required by C.R.C.P. 121 § 1-14, held to be harmless error. Dunton v. Whitewater West Recreation, Ltd., 942 P.2d 1348 (Colo. App. 1997).

Applied in Jones v. Gates Serv. Station, Inc., 108 Colo. 201, 115 P.2d 396 (1941); Odell v. Pub. Serv. Co., 158 Colo. 404, 407 P.2d 330 (1965); McQueen v. Robbins, 28 Colo. App. 436, 476 P.2d 57 (1970); Kerby v. Flamingo Club, Inc., 35 Colo. App. 127, 532 P.2d 975 (1974); Lopez v. Motor Vehicle Div., Dept. of Rev., 189 Colo. 133, 538 P.2d 446 (1975); Osborne v. Holford, 40 Colo. App. 365, 575 P.2d 866 (1978); Kaltenbach v. Julesburg Sch. Dist. Re-1, 43 Colo. App. 150, 603 P.2d 955 (1979); Baum v. S.S. Kresge Co., 646 P.2d 400 (Colo. App. 1982); In re Tatum, 653 P.2d 74 (Colo. App. 1982); Jackson v. Harsco Corp., 653 P.2d 407 (Colo. App. 1982); Banek v. Thomas, 697 P.2d 743 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 733 P.2d 1171 (Colo. 1986); Kedar v. Pub. Serv. Co., 709 P.2d 15 (Colo. App. 1985); Greenemeier by Redington v. Spencer, 719 P.2d 710 (Colo. 1986); Denman v. Burlington Northern R. Co., 761 P.2d 244 (Colo. App. 1988); Clark v. Buhring, 761 P.2d 266 (Colo. App. 1988); Southerland v. Argonaut Ins. Co., 794 P.2d 1102 (Colo. App. 1990); States v. R.D. Werner Co., 799 P.2d 427 (Colo. App. 1990); Cook Inv. v. Seven-Eleven Coffee Shop, 841 P.2d 333 (Colo. App. 1992); Cherry Creek Sch. Dist. v. Voelker, 859 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993); Radcliff Props. v. City of Sheridan, 2012 COA 82, 296 P.3d 310.

Rule 62. Stay of Proceedings to Enforce a Judgment

(a) Automatic Stay; Exceptions; Injunctions; Receiverships. Except as stated herein, no execution shall issue upon a judgment nor shall proceedings be taken for its enforcement until the expiration of 14 days after its entry; provided that an interlocutory or final judgment in an action for an injunction or in a receivership action shall not be stayed during the period after its entry and until an appeal is taken or during the pendency of an appeal. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the provisions of section (c) of this Rule govern the suspending, modifying, restoring, or granting of an injunction during the pendency of an appeal.

(b) Discretionary stay. In its discretion and on such conditions for the security of the adverse party as are proper, the court may stay the execution of, or any proceedings to enforce, a judgment: (1) pending the disposition of a motion for post-trial relief made pursuant to C.R.C.P. 59; (2) pending a motion for relief from a judgment or order made pursuant to C.R.C.P. 60; (3) during the time permitted for filing of a notice of appeal; or (4) during the pendency of a motion for approval of a supersedeas bond.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The 1988 amendment to C.R.C.P. 62(b) is a change to make that section fully consistent with the changes made to C.R.C.P. 59. The post-trial relief features of C.R.C.P. 50 and 52(b) were brought into C.R.C.P. 59. As a result, those Rules (50) and (52) no longer bear on post-trial relief and need not be referenced in C.R.C.P. 62.

(c) Injunction Pending Appeal. When an appeal is taken from an interlocutory or final judgment granting, dissolving, or denying an injunction, the trial court in its discretion may suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction during the pendency of the appeal upon such terms as to bond or otherwise as it considers proper for the security of the rights of the adverse party.

(d) Stay upon Appeal. When an appeal is taken the appellant by giving a supersedeas bond may obtain a stay from the trial court subject to the exceptions contained in section (a) of this Rule. The bond may be given at or after the time of filing the notice of appeal or of procuring the order allowing the appeal, as the case may be. The stay is effective when the supersedeas bond is approved by the court.

(e) Stay in Favor of the State of Colorado or Municipalities Thereof. When an appeal is taken by the State of Colorado, or by any county or municipal corporation of this state, or of any officer or agency thereof acting in official capacity and the operation or enforcement of the judgment is stayed, no bond, obligation, or other security shall be required from the appellant unless otherwise ordered by the court.

(f) [There is no section (f).]

(g) Power of Appellate Court Not Limited. The provisions in this Rule do not limit any power of the appellate courts or of a justice or judge thereof to stay proceedings during the pendency of an appeal or to suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction during the pendency of an appeal or to make any order appropriate to preserve the status quo or the effectiveness of the judgment subsequently to be entered. (See Rule 8, Colorado Appellate Rules.)

(h) Stay of Judgment as to Multiple Claims or Multiple Parties. When a court has ordered a final judgment under the conditions stated in Rule 54 (b), the court may stay enforcement of that judgment until the entering of a subsequent judgment or judgments and may prescribe such conditions as are necessary to secure the benefit thereof to the party in whose favor the judgment is entered.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, ''Amendments to the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure'', see 28 Dicta 242 (1951). For article, ''Judgment: Rules 54-63'', see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 581 (1951). For article, ''Obtaining a Supersedeas Bond'', see 23 Colo. Law. 607 (1994). For article, ''Bonds in Colorado Courts: A Primer for Practitioners'', see 34 Colo. Law. 59 (March 2005).

No power is lodged in any court to stay an order of discharge in a habeas corpus proceeding, as such action would defeat the very purpose of habeas corpus. Geer v. Alaniz, 137 Colo. 432, 326 P.2d 71 (1958).

Generally, court may not impair creditor's right to enforce judgment. As a general rule, a court may not stay execution and thereby impair or destroy the statutory right of a judgment creditor to enforce collection of its judgment against nonexempt property of the judgment debtor. First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 652 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1982).

Right to enforce may be statutorily limited. The substantive right of a judgment creditor to enforce collection of the judgment may be statutorily limited, as by § 7-60-128. First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 652 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1982).

Effect of stay on certain statutory requirements. The stay of execution provided for in this rule has no effect on the requirement that a transcript of judgment be issued on payment of the fee pursuant to § 13-32-104 (1)(g). Rocky Mt. Ass'n of Credit Mgt. v. District Court, 193 Colo. 344, 565 P.2d 1345 (1977).

Applied in Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 206, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

II. AUTOMATIC STAY.

Under section (a) of this rule, a judgment order dividing property is automatically stayed and unenforceable for a period of 10 (now 15) days following its entry. Sarno v. Sarno, 28 Colo. App. 598, 478 P.2d 711 (1970).

Section (a) is inapplicable to temporary custody order the mother was found to have violated. Order was not subject to 15-day automatic stay. In re Adams, 778 P.2d 294 (Colo. App. 1989).

A forcible medication administration order is not the type of action contemplated by section (a) and is thus not automatically stayed for 14 days after entry. People ex rel. Strodtman, 293 P.3d 123 (Colo. App. 2011).

III. STAY ON MOTION.

Unless stayed by the court, a judgment may be executed upon before a new trial motion is decided. Oman v. Morris, 28 Colo. App. 124, 471 P.2d 430 (1970).

IV. INJUNCTION.

Effect of section (c) is to protect rights of parties. Section (c) of this rule authorizes the trial court to enter orders which preserve the status quo, or otherwise protect the rights of the parties pending appeal, but does not give the trial court authority to enter an order which alters the rights granted, or created by the original order. Rivera v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 152, 529 P.2d 1347 (1974).

By virtue of this rule, a trial court can, in its discretion, suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction, so long as an appellate court has not granted a supersedeas. Woitchek v. Isenberg, 151 Colo. 544, 379 P.2d 392 (1963).

Injunctive power of the court has been long recognized. At least since 1887, it has been recognized statutorily that trial courts can more speedily, economically, and satisfactorily consider applications for injunctive relief in actions which are pending in an appellate court. Woitchek v. Isenberg, 151 Colo. 544, 379 P.2d 392 (1963).

An obvious reason for recognizing the court's injunctive power is that trial courts are equipped to conduct the trial process. Woitchek v. Isenberg, 151 Colo. 544, 379 P.2d 392 (1963).

But injunctive proceedings may not be invoked to bring about a forfeiture of a property right. Injunction and forfeiture cannot be equated; they are separate and distinct concepts. Woitchek v. Isenberg, 151 Colo. 544, 379 P.2d 392 (1963).

V. STAY UPON APPEAL.

Annotator's note. Since section (d) of this rule is similar to § 428 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing § 428 have been included in the annotations to this rule.

A trial court retains jurisdiction in order to enforce a judgment it has rendered where defendant does not move for stay of execution or file a supersedeas bond. Oman v. Morris, 28 Colo. App. 124, 471 P.2d 430 (1970).

Where a defendant fails to take these affirmative steps necessary in order to prevent the trial court from making a final disposition of the case in accordance with its findings, no error is committed by a trial court in entering a final decree confirming a title after an appeal has issued. Failure of defendant to stay the execution means that the trial court retains jurisdiction, and its actions subsequent to the issuance of the notice of appeal are fully within its powers. Oman v. Morris, 28 Colo. App. 124, 471 P.2d 430 (1970).

Effect of trial court's failure to rule on motion. In foreclosure action, where motion for stay under section (d) of this rule and for waiver of the supersedeas bond requirement had been filed in the trial court but not determined at time of appeal, and where a request for stay under C.A.R. 8 had not been filed in the court of appeals, title to secured property vested in certificate holder and appeal was moot. Mount Carbon Metro. Dist. v. Lake George Co., 847 P.2d 254 (Colo. App. 1993).

Stay may be issued before or after appeal filed. The trial court may issue a stay either before or after a notice of appeal is filed. Odd Fellows Bldg. & Inv. Co. v. City of Englewood, 667 P.2d 1358 (Colo. 1983).

The filing of a supersedeas bond is a prerequisite for obtaining an order staying execution of judgment pending appeal under section (d) of this rule. Muck v. District Ct., 814 P.2d 869 (Colo. 1991).

The issuance of a writ of supersedeas is the consideration for the giving of a supersedeas bond. Buchhalter v. Solomon, 78 Colo. 227, 241 P. 718 (1925).

There can be no supersedeas where one cannot furnish bond therefor. Riant Amusement Co. v. Bailey, 80 Colo. 65, 249 P. 7 (1926).

A supersedeas writ may not be granted on an invalid bond. Buchhalter v. Solomon, 78 Colo. 227, 241 P. 718 (1925).

Trial court erred in entering an order staying all proceedings relative to enforcement of family support order without requiring appellant to file supersedeas bond. Muck v. District Ct., 814 P.2d 869 (Colo. 1991).

Rule 63. Disability of a Judge

If by reason of death, sickness, or other disability, a judge before whom an action has been tried is unable to perform the duties to be performed by the court under these rules after a verdict is returned or findings of fact and conclusions of law are filed, then any other judge sitting in or assigned to the court in which the action was tried may perform those duties; but if such other judge is satisfied that he cannot perform those duties because he did not preside at the trial or for any other reason, he may in his discretion grant a new trial.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, ''Judgment: Rules 54-63'', see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 581 (1951).

"Disability" construed. Disability includes anything that renders a judge incapable of performing his legal duties. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982).

Disability, under this rule, includes resignation. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982); Friedman v. Colo. Nat. Bank, 825 P.2d 1033 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 846 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1993).

This rule specifically provides that a successor judge may complete a case providing a verdict is returned or findings of fact and conclusions of law are filed. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

This rule does not give a successor judge authority to determine the credibility of witnesses or compare and weigh testimony. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971); Friedman v. Colo. Nat. Bank, 825 P.2d 1033 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 846 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1993).

Successor judge has discretion to rule on a motion for new trial which challenges the sufficiency of the evidence. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982); Murphy v. Glenn, 964 P.2d 581 (Colo. App. 1998).

A successor judge may consider challenges to rulings of law presented in a motion for a new trial. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982).

A successor judge may grant a new trial upon a determination that he or she is unable to rule on post-trial matters as a result of not having been at the original trial. Murphy v. Glenn, 964 P.2d 581 (Colo. App. 1998).

Successor judge may pass on original judge's award of attorney fees. Friedman v. Colo. Nat. Bank, 825 P.2d 1033 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 846 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1993).

Rule inapplicable where findings and conclusions are void. This rule does not apply to a situation where the findings of fact and conclusions of law which have been filed are void.

Merchants Mtg. & Trust Corp. v. Jenkins, 659 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983).

Interpretation of federal cases persuasive. Because F.R.C.P. 63 is identical to this rule, federal cases and authorities interpreting the federal rule are highly persuasive. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982).

CHAPTER 7

Injunctions, Receivers, Deposits in Court, Offer of Judgment

ANALYSIS BY RULE

CHAPTER 7

INJUNCTIONS, RECEIVERS, DEPOSITS IN COURT, OFFER OF JUDGMENT

Rule 65. Injunction

(a) Preliminary Injunction.

(1) Notice. No preliminary injunction shall be issued without notice to the adverse party.

(2) Consolidation of Hearing with Trial on Merits. Before or after the commencement of the hearing on an application for a preliminary injunction, the court may order the trial of the action on the merits to be advanced and consolidated with the hearing of the application. Even when this consolidation is not ordered, any evidence received upon an application for a preliminary injunction which would be admissible upon a trial on the merits becomes part of the record on the trial and need not be repeated upon the trial, this subsection (a)(2) shall be so construed and applied as to save the parties any rights they may have to trial by jury.

(b) Temporary Restraining Order; Notice; Hearing; Duration. A temporary restraining order may be granted without written or oral notice to the adverse party or his attorney only if: (1) It clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or by the verified complaint or by testimony that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage will result to the applicant before the adverse party or his attorney can be heard in opposition, and (2) the applicant's attorney certifies to the court in writing or on the record the efforts, if any, which have been made to give the notice and the reasons supporting his claim that notice should not be required. Every temporary restraining order granted without notice shall be endorsed with the date and hour of issuance; shall be filed forthwith in the clerk's office and entered of record; shall define the injury and state why it is irreparable and why the order was granted without notice; and shall expire by its terms within such time after entry not to exceed 14 days, as the court fixes, unless within the time so fixed, the order, for good cause shown, is extended for a like period or unless the party against whom the order is directed consents that it may be extended for a longer period. The reasons for the extension shall be entered of record. In case a temporary restraining order is granted without notice, the motion for a preliminary injunction shall be set down for hearing at the earliest possible time and take precedence of all matters except older matters of the same character; and when the motion comes on for hearing the party who obtained the temporary restraining order shall proceed with the application for a preliminary injunction and, if he does not do so, the court shall dissolve the temporary restraining order. On two (2) business days' notice to the party who obtained the temporary restraining order without notice or on such shorter notice to that party as the court may prescribe, the adverse party may appear and move its dissolution or modification and in that event the court shall proceed to hear and determine such motion as expeditiously as the ends of justice require.

(c) Security. No restraining order or preliminary injunction shall issue except upon the giving of security by the applicant, in such sum as the court deems proper, for the payment of such costs and damages as may be incurred or suffered by any party who is found to have been wrongfully enjoined or restrained. No such security shall be required of the state or of any county or municipal corporation of this state or of any officer or agency thereof acting in official capacity. If at any time it shall appear to the court that security given under this Rule has become impaired or is insufficient, the court may vacate the restraining order or preliminary injunction unless within such time as the court may fix the security be made sufficient.

(d) Form and Scope of Injunction or Restraining Order. Every order granting an injunction and every restraining order shall set forth the reasons for its issuance; shall be specific in terms; shall describe in reasonable detail, and not by reference to the complaint or other document, the act or acts sought to be restrained; and is binding only upon the parties to the action, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, and upon those persons in active concert or participation with them who receive actual notice of the order by personal service or otherwise.

(e) [There is no section (e).]

(f) Mandatory. If merely restraining the doing of an act or acts will not effectuate the relief to which the moving party is entitled, an injunction may be made mandatory. Such relief may include an injunction restoring to any person any property from which he may have been ousted or deprived of possession by fraud, force, or violence, or from which he may have been kept out of possession by threats or words or actions which have a natural tendency to excite fear or apprehension of danger.

(g) When Relief Granted. Relief under this Rule may also be granted on the motion of any party at any time after an action is commenced and before or in connection with final judgment.

(h) When Inapplicable. This Rule shall not apply to suits for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, maintenance, child support, or custody of minors. In such suits, the court may make prohibitive or mandatory orders, without notice or bond, as may be just.

(i) State Court's Jurisdiction When Suit Commenced in Federal Court; Stay of Proceedings; Notice; Appeal. Whenever a suit praying for an interlocutory injunction shall have been begun in a federal district court to restrain any official or officials of this state from enforcing or administering any statute or administrative order of this state, or to set aside such statute or administrative order, any defendant in such suit or the attorney general of the state may bring a suit to enforce such statute or order in the district court of the state at any time before the hearing on the application for an interlocutory injunction in the suit in the federal court; and the district courts of this state may entertain such suits and the state appellate courts may entertain appeals from judgments therein. When such suit is brought, the district court shall grant a stay of proceedings by any state officer or officers under such statute or order pending the determination of such suit in the courts of this state. Upon the bringing of such suit, the district court shall at once cause a notice thereof together with a copy of the stay order by it granted, to be sent to the federal district court in which the action was originally begun. An appeal may be taken within 14 days after the termination of the suit in the state district court to the appropriate state appellate court and such appeal shall be in every way expedited and set for an early hearing.

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to § 159 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Equity will not intervene where one has a plain and adequate remedy at law. Am. Investors Life Ins. Co. v. Green Shield Plan, Inc., 145 Colo. 188, 358 P.2d 473 (1960).

Such is the case where everything that a plaintiff asserts is measurable and compensable in money and the evidence shows that defendant is amply able to respond to a money judgment and is subject to the jurisdiction of the Colorado courts. Am. Investors Life Ins. Co. v. Green Shield Plan, Inc., 145 Colo. 188, 358 P.2d 473 (1960).

Where there is an adequate legal remedy which provides for the orderly termination of a nonconforming use, an injunction which is unduly harsh in its application will not be allowed to be used as a substitute for those legal means of phasing out the nonconforming use. Hobbs v. Smith, 177 Colo. 299, 493 P.2d 1352 (1972).

Injunction may not be obtained to restrain commission of a crime. Am. Television & Communications Corp. v. Manning, 651 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1982).

The power to issue injunction should be exercised with great discretion. The writ of injunction is the strong arm of the court and, to render its operation benign and useful, the power to issue it should be exercised with great discretion and when necessity requires it. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co., 44 Colo. 184, 98 P. 16 (1908).

Trial courts have considerable latitude in injunction cases. Brennan v. Monson, 97 Colo. 448, 50 P.2d 534 (1935).

If convinced that a plaintiff should comply with certain conditions in order that equity might be done between the parties, such conditions may be prescribed, and compliance therewith required as a prerequisite to the granting of injunctive relief. Brennan v. Monson, 97 Colo. 448, 50 P.2d 534 (1935).

Prohibition for failure to comply with this rule. When an inferior court exceeds its jurisdiction by issuing injunctive orders without complying with the provisions of this rule, relief in the nature of prohibition does lie to prevent manifest injustice. Stull v. District Court, 135 Colo. 86, 308 P.2d 1006 (1957).

A plaintiff who has sued out a writ of attachment upon personal property before judgment cannot secure an injunction without complying with this rule where there are no special requirements or procedure provided under statute by which an injunction or other relief shall be granted. Stull v. District Court, 135 Colo. 86, 308 P.2d 1006 (1957).

If an injunction is void it can be collaterally attacked. Resler v. North E. Motor Freight, Inc., 154 Colo. 52, 388 P.2d 255 (1964).

A collateral attack on a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction, contained in a motion for a new trial directed to contempt orders issued for disobedience of the restraining order or injunction, is proper only if the orders granting the temporary restraining order or the preliminary injunction are void for some jurisdictional defect. Bd. of Water Works v. Pueblo Water Works Employees Local 1045, 196 Colo. 308, 586 P.2d 18 (1978).

In a proper case where there will not be a double recovery, a court may issue an injunction to open a blocked easement, and, if necessary to grant an injured party complete relief for past interference with his easement, the court may also award monetary damages. Proper v. Greager, 827 P.2d 591 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 206, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975); Sanderson v. District Court, 190 Colo. 431, 548 P.2d 921 (1976); Jeffrey v. Colo. State Dept. of Soc. Servs., 198 Colo. 265, 599 P.2d 874 (1979); Jack Kent Cadillac, Inc. v. District Court, 198 Colo. 403, 601 P.2d 626 (1979); In re Davis, 44 Colo. App. 355, 618 P.2d 692 (1980); State Pers. Bd. v. Wunder, 2016 COA 46, 371 P.3d 785.

II. PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

The purpose of the preliminary injunction is to preserve the "status quo" or protect rights pending the final determination of a cause. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co., 44 Colo. 184, 98 P. 16 (1908) (decided under § 167 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

Preliminary injunctive relief is an extraordinary remedy designed to protect a plaintiff from sustaining irreparable injury and to preserve the power of the district court to render a meaningful decision following a trial on the merits. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982); Zoning Bd. of Adjustment v. DeVilbiss, 729 P.2d 353 (Colo. 1986).

A preliminary injunction is to maintain the status quo. Combined Communications Corp. v. City & County of Denver, 186 Colo. 443, 528 P.2d 249 (1974).

The granting of a preliminary injunction pursuant to section (a) of this rule is to preserve the status quo or otherwise to grant emergency relief. Macleod v. Miller, 44 Colo. App. 313, 612 P.2d 1158 (1980).

The matter of a preliminary injunction is to prevent further harm where harm is alleged, or otherwise to grant emergency relief, and a hearing on the merits is contemplated at a later date.

Graham v. Hoyl, 157 Colo. 338, 402 P.2d 604 (1965).

A court errs and is precipitous in its action by making an injunction permanent where issues remain to be tried upon which parties are entitled to be heard before any orders could be made final. Graham v. Hoyl, 157 Colo. 338, 402 P.2d 604 (1965).

Grant or denial of preliminary injunction not an adjudication of ultimate rights in controversy. The trial court erred when it determined, on a motion for a preliminary injunction, the title to the property at issue in the underlying transaction. Litinsky v. Querard, 683 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1984).

Different considerations govern issues relating to preliminary injunctions and requests for permanent injunctions, with the standards applicable to permanent injunctions less demanding. Henson v. Hoth, 258 F. Supp. 33 (D. Colo. 1966).

A trial court has broad discretion to formulate the terms of injunctive relief when equity so requires. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors v. State, 780 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1989).

Decision within court's discretion. The grant or denial of a preliminary injunction is a decision which lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982); Litinsky v. Querard, 683 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1984); Zuments v. Colo. H.S. Activities Ass'n, 737 P.2d 1113 (Colo. App. 1987); Baseline Farms Two, LLP v. Hennings, 26 P.3d 1209 (Colo. App. 2000).

Threshold requirement that relief necessary to protect rights. Before a trial court may enjoin the enforcement of a criminal statute in a preliminary injunction proceeding, the moving party must establish, as a threshold requirement, a clear showing that injunctive relief is necessary to protect existing legitimate property rights or fundamental constitutional rights. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982).

As a prerequisite to the issuance of a preliminary injunction, there must be a showing of real, immediate, and irreparable injury which will occur pending a final hearing, and that the injunction is necessary to prevent such injury or damage. Am. Investors Life Ins. Co. v. Green Shield Plan, Inc., 145 Colo. 188, 358 P.2d 473 (1960).

The prerequisites to the issuance of a preliminary injunction are: A showing of real, immediate and irreparable injury which will occur pending a final hearing, and that the injunction is necessary to prevent such injury or damage; and a showing of the reasonable probability of success on the merits on the part of the plaintiff. Macleod v. Miller, 44 Colo. App. 313, 612 P.2d 1158 (1980).

In exercising its discretion, the trial court must find that the moving party has demonstrated: (1) A reasonable probability of success on the merits; (2) a danger of real, immediate, and irreparable injury which may be prevented by injunctive relief; (3) that there is no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy at law; (4) that the granting of a preliminary injunction will not disserve the public interest; (5) that the balance of equities favors the injunction; and (6) that the injunction will preserve the status quo pending a trial on the merits. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982); Wakabayashi v. Tooley, 648 P.2d 655 (Colo. 1982); Am. Television & Communications Corp. v. Manning, 651 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1982); Iowa Nat. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cent. Mortg. & Inv., 708 P.2d 480 (Colo. App. 1985); Bloom v. NCAA, 93 P.3d 621 (Colo. App. 2004); Gitlitz v. Bellock, 171 P.3d 1274 (Colo. App. 2007).

Each prerequisite must be established by the moving party before a preliminary injunction will issue to prevent the enforcement of a criminal statute. Wakabayashi v. Tooley, 648 P.2d 655 (Colo. 1982).

A loss of a contractual right to manage and control a business may constitute irreparable harm. Monetary damages are an inadequate remedy for such a loss. A contractual right to participate in the management and control of a business has intrinsic value in and of itself that may not be adequately compensated by monetary damages. Gitlitz v. Bellock, 171 P.3d 1274 (Colo. App. 2007).

One of the issues before a court on a preliminary injunction is the reasonable probability of success on the part of the plaintiff. Combined Communications Corp. v. City & County of Denver, 186 Colo. 443, 528 P.2d 249 (1974).

Where a trial court issues a preliminary injunction without making any findings of fact as to the likelihood of plaintiff's success on the merits, the order must be set aside and the matter remanded for a hearing. O'Connell v. Colo. State Bank, 633 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1981).

Decision to issue preliminary injunction is binding upon review. Absent a showing of an abuse of discretion, trial court's decision to issue a preliminary injunction is binding upon review. Macleod v. Miller, 44 Colo. App. 313, 612 P.2d 1158 (1980).

Telephone company is not entitled to preliminary injunction preventing maintenance of rates and allowing higher charges during judicial review of P.U.C. rates. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. P. U. C., 176 Colo. 457, 491 P.2d 582 (1971).

Relief seldom granted to enjoin governmental actions. Because equitable relief in the nature of an injunction constitutes a form of judicial interference with continuing activities, the courts have generally been reluctant to grant such relief where the actions complained of are those of departments of the executive and legislative branches of government, in the exercise of their authority. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982).

Preliminary injunction enjoining enforcement of criminal statute held abuse of discretion. Wakabayashi v. Tooley, 648 P.2d 655 (Colo. 1982).

Preliminary injunction should not be enforced when a period of less than two months remains after enforcement commences until trial on the merits. Combined Communications Corp. v. City & County of Denver, 186 Colo. 443, 528 P.2d 249 (1974).

When order deemed preliminary injunction. Where an order is issued after notice and an evidentiary hearing and for a period beyond 10 days, it is a preliminary injunction. O'Connell v. Colo. State Bank, 633 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1981).

Effect of denial of preliminary injunction on remaining proceedings. The pending appeal of a denial of a motion for preliminary injunction does not deprive the trial court of jurisdiction to proceed in a timely and orderly fashion with the declaratory judgment and permanent injunction proceedings. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982).

Existence of liquidated damages does not automatically preclude imposition of an injunction. Boulder Medical Center v. Moore, 651 P.2d 464 (Colo. App. 1982).

Conditions of this rule inapplicable to C.R.C.P. 106. While this rule provides that no restraining order or preliminary injunction shall issue except upon giving security by the applicant, that no order or injunction shall issue without notice, except under certain situations, and that an early hearing shall be provided, no such conditions appear in C.R.C.P. 106. PII of Colo., Inc. v. District Court, 197 Colo. 239, 591 P.2d 1316 (1979).

Contempt is proper where preliminary injunction is lawful and is not complied with, even where eventually found to be wrongfully entered. Charles Milne Associates v. Toponce, 770 P.2d 1313 (Colo. App. 1988).

The prerequisites of this rule apply to § 7-74-103 actions for preliminary injunction to prevent or restrain actual or threatened misappropriations of a trade secret. Bishop & Co. v. Cuomo, 799 P.2d 444 (Colo. App. 1990).

Consolidation of trial and preliminary injunction. Parties should normally receive notice of the court's intent to consolidate the trial and the preliminary injunction either before the hearing or when the parties will still have an opportunity to present their cases. Taxpayers were not denied due process and if any error occurred, it was harmless, when the trial court announced it would consolidate the injunction hearing with the trial on the merits after commencement of the preliminary injunction hearing, both parties submitted offers of proof and had a full opportunity to present their cases, and no specific harm was alleged. Leek v. City of Golden, 870 P.2d 580 (Colo. App. 1993).

III. TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER.

Law reviews. For article, "In the Matter of Ex Parte Restraining Orders, Injunctions and Writs of Ne Exeat in Divorce Cases", see 9 Dicta 190 (1932). For article, "Expediting Court Procedure", see 10 Dicta 113 (1933). For article on restraining orders and injunctions without notice to defendant in divorce cases, see 20 Dicta 46 (1943).

This rule relates to the issuance of restraining orders without notice to the person to be restrained, and adequate protections are afforded in the matter of a bond and prompt hearing on the question of whether the "ex parte" order should be continued. Simpson v. Simpson, 151 Colo. 88, 376 P.2d 55 (1962).

A court has no authority to grant a restraining order to prevent an administrative board from holding hearings as scheduled by it. Such court action is a direct and unjustified judicial interference with a function properly delegated to the executive branch of government. Banking Bd. v. District Court, 177 Colo. 77, 492 P.2d 837 (1972).

A restraining order which fails to comply with this rule is void. Renner v. Williams, 140 Colo. 432, 344 P.2d 966 (1959); Intermountain Rural Elec. Ass'n v. District Court, 160 Colo. 128, 414 P.2d 911 (1966).

Where a restraining order is completely devoid of virtually all of the requirements of this rule, any one of the deficiencies is sufficient to render the order a nullity. Renner v. Williams, 140 Colo. 432, 344 P.2d 966 (1959).

Requirements under sections (b) and (d) of this rule are mandatory and must be complied with before a temporary restraining order issued without notice is valid. Mile High Kennel Club v. Colo. Greyhound Breeders Ass'n, 38 Colo. App. 519, 559 P.2d 1120 (1977).

Hearing required for determination that order wrongfully issued. Absent a hearing on the merits, no determination can be made that a temporary restraining order has been wrongfully issued. Cross v. Bd. of Dirs. of Plains Coop. Tel. Ass'n, 39 Colo. App. 569, 570 P.2d 1307 (1977).

Only after the enjoined party has been vindicated by successfully defending against the suit on the merits can it be held that he was wrongfully restrained and entitled to damages. Cross v. Bd. of Dirs. of Plains Coop. Tel. Ass'n, 39 Colo. App. 569, 570 P.2d 1307 (1977).

Orders held deficient. Orders merely stating that the defendants were engaged in a boycott, and concluding that the plaintiffs would be ir-reparably damaged if the boycott was not restrained, do not specifically define the injury and do not state why the injury is irreparable. Either one of these deficiencies is sufficient to render the orders a nullity. Mile High Kennel Club v. Colo. Greyhound Breeders Ass'n, 38 Colo. App. 519, 559 P.2d 1120 (1977).

In a contempt proceeding, it is proper as a defense to raise the validity of a restraining order. Renner v. Williams, 140 Colo. 432, 344 P.2d 966 (1959).

Upon hearing on a citation for contempt for violation of a temporary restraining order where the issues have not been joined in the action and only the validity of a temporary order has been challenged, it is error for a trial court to rule on the issue of a permanent injunction. Renner v. Williams, 140 Colo. 432, 344 P.2d 966 (1959).

A temporary restraining order issued under this rule is not an appealable order under C.A.R. 1(a). Freshpict Foods, Inc. v. Campos, 30 Colo. App. 354, 492 P.2d 867 (1971); O'Connell v. Colo. State Bank, 633 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1981).

Rationale behind nonappealability of temporary restraining orders is that they are of short duration and terminate with the ruling of the preliminary injunction so that an immediate appeal is not necessary to protect the rights of the parties. O'Connell v. Colo. State Bank, 633 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1981).

IV. SECURITY.

Law reviews. For article, ''In the Matter of Ex Parte Restraining Orders, Injunctions and Writs of Ne Exeat in Divorce Cases'', see 9 Dicta 190 (1932). For article, ''Expediting Court Procedure'', see 10 Dicta 113 (1933).

Action on bond where injunction suit dismissed at instance of plaintiff. In an action on the bond to secure a temporary injunction, the fact that the injunction, suit is dismissed at the instance of the plaintiff is not to be taken as an admission that an emergency requiring the issuance of an injunction did not exist, if the dismissal is for matters done or arising subsequent to the issuance of the injunction and the original issuance was proper. Hammaker v. Behm, 116 Colo. 523, 182 P.2d 141 (1947).

An injunction was issued without compliance with this rule where trial court determined that it would not require defendants to post any bond or other security and made no mention of potential costs and losses that might be sustained by plaintiff. Apache Village, Inc. v. Coleman Co., 776 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1989).

The amount of security required by this rule is discretionary with the court so long as it bears a reasonable relationship to the potential costs and losses occasioned by a preliminary injunction which is later determined to have been improperly granted. Apache Village, Inc. v. Coleman Co., 776 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1989).

Injunction, including TRO, not void or invalid for failure to post a bond, unless the court's order provides otherwise and injunction remains in effect until vacated by subsequent order or terminates by own terms. Kaiser v. Market Square Discount Liquors, Inc., 992 P.2d 636 (Colo. App. 1999).

Bond was properly ordered paid to defendant to reimburse the costs of an improvidently issued injunction even when the plaintiff's failure to prevail was based solely on a question of law. Wick v. Pueblo West Metro., 789 P.2d 457 (Colo. App. 1989).

Section (c) of this rule imposes two conditions on an enjoined defendant seeking to recover damages on a bond: First, the injunction must have been ''wrongful'', and second, the defendant must have suffered damages as a result of the issuance of the injunction. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992); Lazy Dog Ranch v. Telluray Ranch Corp., 948 P.2d 74 (Colo. App. 1997).

The judicial discretion standard, under which the trial court has discretion in deciding whether to award damages on the bond, is the most consistent with the plain language of section (c) of this rule. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

Section (c) of this rule requires that an applicant give a bond, but it does not expressly order the court to pay that bond to a prevailing defendant. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

Under the good reason rule principle of preference, which limits the judicial discretion standard, a trial court presumes that a prevailing defendant is entitled to damages on the injunction bond, unless there is good reason for not requiring such payment in the particular case. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992); Lazy Dog Ranch v. Telluray Ranch Corp., 948 P.2d 74 (Colo. App. 1997).

When an appellate court reviews a trial court's determination of good reason, the standard of review regarding which factors the trial court has used is akin to review by the standard of simple error used in reviewing decisions of questions of law. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court considered and balanced appropriate factors in determining that good reason existed to deny damages, where it considered the outcome of the underlying suit, the fact that the claims were brought in good faith, the financial status of the parties, and the fact that the action was brought solely in the public interest. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

V. FORM AND SCOPE.

An injunction must be specific to be valid. Resler v. North E. Motor Freight, Inc., 154 Colo. 52, 388 P.2d 255 (1964).

Injunctions may be issued without being reviewed "as to form only" by counsel. Such notice is not required under C.R.C.P. 6 since that rule concerns notice of written motions as to enlargements of time and has no relevance to the issue of injunctions. Shoenberg Farms, Inc. v. People ex rel. Swisher, 166 Colo. 199, 444 P.2d 277 (1968).

An injunction prohibiting conduct must be sufficiently precise to enable the party subject to the equitable decree to conform its conduct to the requirements thereof. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors v. State, 780 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1989).

There is no requirement in this rule that an injunction must be included in a written judgment granting injunctive relief, as this rule contains no requirements with respect to judgments; it merely sets forth what must be contained in an injunction which followed the judgment at a later date. Shoenberg Farms, Inc. v. People ex rel. Swisher, 166 Colo. 199, 444 P.2d 277 (1968).

Inconsistencies between this rule and § 25-7-102 resolved in section's favor. Where the proceeding is a special statutory proceeding under the air pollution control act, any inconsistency between this rule and § 25-7-102 regarding the form and scope of an injunction is resolved in favor of the statutory section. Fry Roofing Co. v. Dept. of Health, 191 Colo. 463, 553 P.2d 800 (1976).

If the statute does not create a special statutory procedure for obtaining a preliminary injunction, the normal requisites of this rule apply. Because neither § 25-8-611 nor § 25-8-612 authorizes injunctions or creates a private cause of action or right to proceed in the public interest, this rule, including the requirement of a showing of real, immediate, and irreparable injury, applies to a suit to seek a preliminary injunction to enforce Colorado's Water Quality Control Act. Baseline Farms Two, LLP v. Hennings, 26 P.3d 1209 (Colo. App. 2000).

Specific oral pronouncement followed by minute order was sufficient to satisfy rule that injunctions be specific in terms and described in detail. Charles Milne Associates v. Toponce, 770 P.2d 1313 (Colo. App. 1988).

VI. MANDATORY DECREE.

This section is a correct statement of the general law, and provides for restoration of property where proper. This section affords a complete answer to the problem of whether property obtained by force and violence, and perhaps by fraud, which prior thereto had been used by plaintiffs in the conduct of a legitimate business, may, in the administration of equitable relief, be restored to plaintiffs. Cuddigan v. San Juan Fed'n of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, 110 Colo. 97, 130 P.2d 923 (1942).

In an action founded on a complaint for injunction and affirmative relief wherein it is alleged that the plaintiffs were ousted by the defendants by force and violence from the possession of property and its possession ever since withheld from them by threats of violence, a decree ordering restitution of the property to the plaintiffs is a final judgment from which an appeal will lie. Sprague v. Locke, 1 Colo. App. 171, 28 P. 142 (1891).

Plaintiff seeking injunctive relief is obligated to obtain a preliminary injunction or temporary restraining order to maintain the status quo pending trial, because, if the defendant completes the act sought to be restrained pending trial, the plaintiff's action becomes moot and should properly be dismissed. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment v. DeVilbiss, 729 P.2d 353 (Colo. 1986).

Injunction not available under § 30-28-110 (4). Although section (f) provides for the issuance of a mandatory injunction, the strict construction of § 30-28-110 (4) precludes the availability of such relief to a county. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Pfeifer, 190 Colo. 275, 546 P.2d 946 (1976).

Denial of mandatory injunction held correct. Eugene Cervi & Co. v. Russell, 31 Colo. App. 525, 506 P.2d 748 (1972), aff'd, 184 Colo. 282, 519 P.2d 1189 (1974).

VII. WHEN RELIEF GRANTED.

Section (g) clearly contemplates that an injunction may be provided for in a separate document, rather than in a judgment. Shoenberg Farms, Inc. v. People ex rel. Swisher, 166 Colo. 199, 444 P.2d 277 (1968).

Probate court had authority under section (h) to enter no-contact order between father and children after a full hearing on motions related to parenting time and child support. People ex rel. A.R.D., 43 P.3d 632 (Colo. App. 2001).

VIII. WHEN INAPPLICABLE.

This rule does not apply to suits for divorce. Where, in a divorce action, a temporary restraining order was issued against the husband preventing him from disposing of his property, ''pending the further order of the court'', such order is not controlled by the provisions of this rule which specifically provide in section (h) that this rule shall not apply to suits for divorce, alimony, separate maintenance or custody of infants. Gillespie v. District Court, 119 Colo. 242, 202 P.2d 151 (1949).
