Woodbridge Will Have Two Polls For February 14

Promise of another poll in Woodbridge for the Board of Education elections to be held February 14, was made by the Board of Education to James J. Dunne, who represented the Woodbridge Lion's Club at a meeting held last Monday night.

Mr. Dunne told the members of the Board that the matter was taken up at the last meeting of the Lions club.

"Last year," declared Mr. Dunne, "over fifty people went away without voting because they would have had to stand in line too long. The Lion's Club hopes that you will designate another polling place in Woodbridge proper for the convenience of the voters."

Mr. Dunne was assured that another poll would be established and that the place would be published in the local newspapers as soon as a suitable spot is chosen.

After a short business session at which reports were received from the School nurses, attendance officer and Supervising Principal, John H. Love, an executive session was held at which further consideration was given to the budget for 1933-34 to be presented to the voters at the election in February.

Rotary Welcomes 2 New Members At Regular Meet

Robert Hatfield, past president of the Newark Rotary club in an informal talk before the members of the Woodbridge Rotary Club yesterday, declared that people should look to the foundation of their lives and not, as in the case of a house, at the roof and doors.

We have to deal with human forces, physical things and people, he said and human relations are really the most important. Mr. Hatfield said our general education teaches us about physical things but little or nothing about our relations with humans and human forces. Without the ability to contact with the individual there is little use of living.

Dr. Joseph Mark of Woodbridge and Kenneth Thornton of the Shell Oil Company were welcomed as new members. It was decided to draw up a resolution on the death of James J. Livingood, who was a member of the Rotary.

G. C. Mellon, of Bloomfield, owner and trainer of the famous dog, Miss Pluffy Duffy, entertained the club by putting the dog through a number of tricks.

MRS. MARY MAYER ELECTED HEAD OF AUXILIARY UNIT

ANTICIPATE LIVELY SCHOOL ELECTION AS INTEREST IS BEING SHOWN IN BUDGET

Taxpayers Seek Substantial Cut in School Appropriations as Budget is Discussed—Eight candidates enter race—Marked Attention Shown Candidacies of J. Lester Neary and John Turk—McClain, Filer and Ensign Seek Re-election.

ELECTION FEBRUARY FOURTEEN

"Every effort is being made to cut the 1933 budget as much as possible," declared a member of the Board of Education to a LEADER reporter yesterday. Budget meetings are being held and it is expected that the budget will be ready for presentation to the public in about a week.

"We have a difficult problem to solve," continued the Board member, "when you consider that 75 percent of our budget is for teachers' salaries and 25 percent is for standardized items such as coal, telephone, electricity, doctors, nurses, and library, in addition to all this we expect increased enrollment next September with at least 250 more students in the high school. We are also bound by the 'Tenure of Office' act which binds us as far as the teachers are concerned."

The Board member intimated that there would be a size in the budget but that he did not think it would amount to 20 percent, which is being urged in some quarters. Much interest is being shown in the town talk in the Board of Education budget. Recently the Taxpayer's association urged the Board of Education to make a substantial cut in the budget. They point out that other school boards in neighboring municipalities have effected great savings in their budget this year over last year. Carteret has decreased its budget, $50,000.11; Rahway Township, decreased $50,000.00; and the Woodbridge budget, Jamesburg has decreased its budget, $8,663. The Woodbridge school appropriations for 1932-1933 was $561,459.58.

Interest in Election In the meantime much interest is being shown in the Board of Education election which will be held Tuesday, February 14. Eight candidates have entered the race and a lively election is anticipated.

Running for re-election are: E. C. Ensign, district clerk, who has been a member of the board for 38 years; James Filer who has served three terms and Mark McClain who has completed his first term of three years.

MOCK TRIAL TO BE HELD TONIGHT AT WHITE CHURCH

An evening of unusual merit is promised tonight at the First Presbyterian Church (The Old White Church) when the "Mock Trial" is heard. Howard A. Tappan, with the aid of Leon E. McElroy as his defense attorney will defend himself against the charges brought against him by the complainant and his witnesses under the direction of Middlesex County's Assistant Prosecutor, J. B. Wight. A large number of prominent local persons will appear in the case either as witnesses, jurors, or court attendants.

Such an event is a unique form of entertainment, in which court procedure and human nature get badly tangled. Humorous speeches, wit, humor, quick repartee, and rich satire will be the characteristics of the evening. The Young Men's Brotherhood is putting on this event through its committee, John Donnelly, Milton A. Green, and William Heller.

LOCAL YOUTH WINS SCHOLASTIC HONORS

Dairy Building for Chicago's World's Fair

Her majesty, the cow, is to be paid impressive tribute at Chicago's Century of Progress exposition in 1933, according to plans just announced by Dr. H. E. Van Norman, president of Century Dairy Exhibit, Inc., a committee functioning on behalf of America's three billion dollar dairy industry. The tribute is to be in the form of a special dairy building on Northern Island to house a collective exhibit representing the entire dairy industry and portraying all the ways in which the products of the cow are utilized in the daily menu of American homes. Contract for the building has been let and the structure and exhibits will be ready for the opening of the exposition, June 1, 1933.

Re-Open Ex-Kaiser's Famous Old Chapel

Last Divine Service Was Marriage of Princess.

Berlin.—The ex-kaiser's former chapel atop the imperial castle in Berlin, after being closed for almost 20 years, has been opened to the public. The last divine service held in the chapel was in May, 1913, on the occasion of the marriage of Princess Victoria Luise, the kaiser's only daughter, to the duke of Brunswick, descendant of the dukes of Cumberland, archenemies of the Hohenzollern dynasty.

The chapel is located beneath the fine cupola crowning the imperial castle on Unter den Linden, a familiar sight to every American tourist who visited the German capital. The chapel and cupola rest on the giant portal on the west side of the castle modeled after the famous Constantinian arch in Rome. To give the massive portal the necessary foundation, 3,000 bulky wooden piles were rammed into the swampy earth. The castle as well as the greater part of the German capital is built on marshy land formed by the rivers Spree and Havel.

The octagonal chapel measures 65 feet in diameter, soaring 100 feet from the floor to the inner top of the cupola. The altar, a present of the Egyptian viceroi, Mehmet Ali, is made of a brownish yellow alabaster. The massive altar roof, resting on six pillars, is carved out of one piece. The altar crucifix is inlaid with numerous semi-precious stones. Ten costly candelabras are supported by antique Roman pillars excavated in Pompeii. More than a hundred pictures, representing Biblical scenes and Prussian rulers, decorate the walls.

The history of the chapel is comparatively new. While the older parts of the castle go back to the days of the renaissance, the chapel and cupola were added in the years 1845-1853 according to the designs of the Prussian King Frederick William IV and the famous German architect Schinkel.
 All the kaiser's children were confirmed in the chapel. The confirmation of Prince Joachim of Prussia cost the job of Julius Pruwer, one of Germany's leading orchestra conductors. At that time he was organ player in the cathedral and in this capacity he conducted the choir singing ceremony. After the prince had been confirmed the emperor and his family wanted to remain alone in the chapel to partake of the holy communion. The onlookers in the gallery did not budge, keeping their opera glasses glued on the imperial family. The emperor ordered Pruwer to have the choir sing a chorale till the last onlookers had left the chapel. The choir was sung three times in succession; the audience did not stir. The conductor instead of obeying the orders of his imperial master, gave up the fight with his majesty's subjects because of the sore throats of his singers. The onlookers were finally pushed out of the chapel by a host of imperial funkies. Pruwer was summarily dismissed.

The last time the chapel showed unwonted splendor was for the wedding of the kaiser's only daughter, Princess Victoria Luise, to the duke of Brunswick. The wedding put an end to a feud of long standing between the houses of Hohenzollern and Cumberland.

That was in May, 1913. Then came the World war and nobody set foot in the chapel except the charwomen and an occasional flunky until in December, 1918, a number of grimy, hungry sailors, rifles slung over shoulders and red badges fixed to their arms, stealthily climbed through one of the windows of the chapel. They grabbed a valuable embroidered altar cover and disappeared by way of the castle roof.

That was in the days of the German revolution when the walls of

Declares Bald Eagle Is Unjustly Given Bad Name

Audubon Head Comes to Bat for National Emblem.

New York.—Condemning a recent widely circulated press release which in effect defamed the bald eagle, emblem of our national independence, Dr. T. Gilbert Pearson, president of the National Association of Audubon Societies, stated:

"It is unfortunate that recent publicity concerning the bald eagle has been calculated to detract from the character and reputation of this stately and picturesque bird which long has been the emblem of our country. While the story in question indulges in no deliberate misstatement of facts, yet the emphasis placed upon some of these is both unfair and misleading. The fact that Benjamin Franklin and John James Audubon questioned the wisdom of this choice of the bald eagle to be our country's emblem should in no wise create any misgivings in the minds of patriotic, bird-loving citizens. Even though we are reminded by them that the bald eagle's diet is not at all times admirable, and that he will rob the fish hawk on occasion, we would, on these same grounds be led to malign the character of many of our wild birds and mammals whose lives, for the most part, are ruled by the law of the jungle.

"When a beautiful and accomplished actress captures her audience with the grace and power of her performance, they are not curious to know what she has had for dinner: it may have been corned beef and cabbage in like manner we admire the bald eagle when, in the beauty and majesty of his noble form and powerful flight, he soars aloft into the blue empyrean; or from his aerial or beetling crag or towering pine he surveys the world beneath, or sallies forth in quest of daily food. At such times he seems to rise above the mental things of earth and thus becomes a symbol of valor and of power which constitutes him no mean emblem of our country."

Golfer Responsible for Ball He Drives

New York.—A golfer is legally responsible when a ball he has driven injures another person, the appellate division in Brooklyn decided in upholding a Supreme court justice.

The defendant in the case was Arthur S. Fiero, who was sued on behalf of John Clifford Simpson, eleven, a caddy. While playing at the Pocatiello Country Club at Middletown, N. Y., last August 16, Fiero's drive struck young Simpson.

Man Who "Died" Tells How It Felt

Los Angeles.—How does it feel to die—then come back to life?

In the opinion of fifty-nine-year-old William Lindsey who, so far as a physician could tell, was "dead," there isn't much to it.

"Just going away and coming back; that's all," mused the pioneer resident in county jail. Lindsey was in jail, hooked on a technical charge of having been intoxicated.

"To tell the truth, I don't believe I was 'under the weather,'" he explained.

"You see, I had been working 15 to 16 hours a day out in a restaurant. I'd just had a birthday and I drank a little moonshine—just a couple drinks."

"Well, I remember being all right and feeling fine on the corner of First and Rowan streets.

"I must have had a stroke—one that 'killed' me, the doctors said.

"If that stroke 'killed' me it isn't so bad to die.

The imperial castle shook with the discharge of the guns and the crackle of machine guns and rifles continued all day long. The Red marine division had taken possession of the castle and imperial stables, which they made their headquarters.

After the Red mutiny was quelled and peace was restored parts of the imperial castle became a museum for tourists. Big, well lighted rooms were turned into regular offices, only from time to time the administrators of the former imperial castles would surprise the public by opening up old chapels or halls rich in defunct or in historical glamor for those who enjoy the romance of bygone days.

American Heroines

Hannah Dustin

A WHITE woman who beat the Indians at their own game—that was Hannah Dustin. In 1697 the little outpost of the earth, Mass., was still a frontier settlement, exposed to the dangers of privation and isolation. Here lived the hardy pioneer, farmer Thomas Dustin with his wife, his wife, and their eight children, the youngest a babe in arms. One night in March, when the seven older children were absent from home, a host of marauding red men broke into the home, captured his wife, Mary and Mrs. Mary Neff, a nurse. A tiny baby is a nuisance in a hard, arduous march through the wilderness. So the baby was killed before its mother's eyes before they left the village. The next day the Indians marched on their journey through the forest to their camp. They were placed together with little Samuel Lee, an English boy captured some weeks before at Worcester. In the care of an Indian family consisting of two men, three women and seven children.

During the long days that followed, while she dutifully performed the tasks assigned her by her captors, and endured their taunts and abuse with seeming patience, Hannah carefully hid her plans. The boy Samuel was her tool. Under her instruction Samuel feigned great admiration for one of the Indian men. Surely it took great strength and skill to wield that tomahawk with such deadly effect! How was it done? The savage, with due pride in his prowess showed him.

Eagerly Hannah received the relayed instructions. Then she picked four of the Indians as her own victims, assigned four to Mrs. Neff and three to the boy. Thus prepared she bided her time. And one dark night, when the Indian family slept soundly, the three arose, helped themselves to the Indians' weapons, and quietly and systematically went about the business of killing ten of them.

Under cover of the darkness they fled the camp, making their way to the river, where they seized one of the Indians' canoes. Then, aided by the current, they made their way down the Merrimack to the English settlement near its mouth. And shortly after Hannah Dustin was reunited with her husband and her remaining children in their home at Haverhill.

"Mad Anne" Bailey

"MAD" she was, this lucky woman eccentric, who lived to be eighty-two with a lust for revenge in her stout heart and donned a man's clothes to right her wrong in a man's way. For even in the lusty days of the late eighteenth century, when the mountains of Virginia were still frontier and harbored hostile Indians, no sane woman deserted her infant to beg alone a man's life and start her own private collection of Indian scalps.

The "madness" first descended upon Anne Bailey, then Anne Trotter, when her young husband fell victim to Indian cruelty at the Battle of Point Pleasant. She was but twenty-three at the time, and only ten years before her was the safe, city life of Liverpool, England, where she was born. When the news reached her, she was the one possessed. She turned her baby boy over to a kindly neighbor, secured her soft woman's clothes or trousers and a hunting shirt, shouldered a gun fired with her horse, Liverpool turned her back upon her home in Staunton. Thereafter, as "Mad Anne," she lived alone in a hut built with her own hands on the ridge of Covington mountain in Allegheny county. From this vantage spot she watched the movements of the Indians in the surrounding countryside.

Her most famous deed occurred at Fort Lee near Charleston, W. Va., in 1792, when Anne was forty-nine years old. Here, for safety during an Indian attack, had gathered the settlers from the surrounding territory. The siege was a long one, and the powder supply had given out. "Mad Anne" volunteered aid. Mounting Liverpool she rode out, in full view of the attacking Indians; then spurring the horse into headlong speed, she flew past their lines onto Fort Union, now Lewisburg, where she secured powder and an extra horse. She returned, savior of the fort.

In middle age Anne married John Bailey, a frontiersman. But she remained the "mad" of the household, and in her latter years, a hard-drinking, swearing woman, whose the local Indians stood in awe. As an old woman she moved to a cottage on the property of her son, grown to manhood and affluence. She refused to share his house. Today a bronze marker on the highway between Hot Springs and Covington signifies the regard of the Daughters of the American Revolution for "Mad Anne" Bailey. © 1932, Western Newspaper Union.

Jacket suit worn by the young woman playing ice-hockey in the picture could be seen in the original it would certainly qualify as being plenty colorful. The trimly buttoned and belted jacket is of bright red corduroy. It is lined with natural chamois. The skirt is of rich green suede leather. Its buttoned-down-the-front fastening is the last word for sportswear.

Included among timely suggestions for conservatively smart snow suits are types such as the model shown to the right in the picture. It is made of navy gabardine which is so generally worn, it has become almost a tradition in the sports realm. Variety is afforded by the plaid lining which is woven in flaming colors.

The commendable thing about modern winter sports togs is that no matter how pictorial they may be they never sacrifice the practical.

The sportswoman who knows her fashions never thinks of wearing a jacket or blouse which does not fasten with a metal slide or some such arrangement. That is, if she be not intrigued with some other equally as dependable a gadget such as, for instance, the new fastening created by Schlapprell which slips small wooden knobs through leather thongs. A row of 'em is warranted to "doll up" any ski or skate suit to the snow queen's taste. Howso- ever to do the trick without ostenta- tion you will please to note the pullover blouse pictured above in the group, which fastens with a metal slide at the back of the neck. The collar and gloves are striped in pale blue and brown.

The Fable of the Feeble Squawk

By GEORGE ADE

(© Bell Syndicate)—WNU Service.

ONCE there was a Parent who was so heated under the Neck-Band that he laid back his Ears and lifted his Bristles and vowed that he wouldn't stand for any more Rough Comedy. He had been the Angora long enough. Papa was fed up. Old Reliable was ready to put on his War Paint and Feathers and lift a few Scapls.

Of course you have guessed the Plot. It deals with the Younger Generation. Once it was known as the Rising Generation, but that was before it Rose to such an Eminence of Cussedness that it hit all the High-Spots and could not be expected to establish any more Altitude Records without completely blowing the Lid off.

All of us know that any old-fashioned Dad who hops into the Arena and engages in a Battle with a handsome and well-groomed Hound about 10 years old or a night-blooming Deb is licked before the Gong sounds. The Old Folks have not a single Decision in the Western Hemisphere during the last Five Years. Every time a Verbal Champion goes against a bewildered Has-Been, the result is a Foregone Conclusion.

Notwithstanding which, Mr. Grivets, still nursing the Delusion that there was such a Thing left in the world as Parental Authority, got Wallie and Edna on the Carpet and proceeded to lay down the Law.

Barking Words That Don't Bite.

He tried to win his Argument by making a lot of Noise. This is Faded Material. The more he vociferated the more helpless he felt, in the Presence of the titled Noses and the scornful Eye-Brow. He started out as Caesar and finished up as a mere Splutter.

He pulled a lot of new Regula- tions on the Offspring. For in- stance:

- No More Late Hours.
- No More Using the Car Without Permission.
- No more Charge Accounts.
- Severance of Diplomatic Rela- tions with all of the Calculated Cuties and desperate Hip-Toters who frequent Hoofing-Emporiums.
- No more Attacks on the Ice Box at 4 A. M.
- No more Inviting up to the House those Jovial Acquaintances who look as if they were wanted by the Police.
- No more Breakfasts served at 1 P. M.
- No more setting fire to the Bed Clothes with Cigarettes.

In brief, the Program which Mr. Grivets outlined with scathing Dic- tion contemplated a Return to San- ity, Sobriety and Simple Living, with an incidental Endorsement of the Coolidge Doctrine of Economy.

After he had just about talked himself hoarse without getting any Results except a few pained Looks, Edna took a long Pull at her Cork Tip, and said: "Well, Pop, you are barking very well this Morning, but you haven't spilled anything except a Lot of Words. You must have been brought up back of a Barn or Some Place like that. I never saw such a Doodle Heck. The Jaws keep moving and it sounds like somebody saying Something, but the Whole Thing is just Gooseberry Marmalade. As an Orator you are a total Bust. Just a Wibbles, that's all. I advise you to wash up and get off the Lot."

Hot Zizzer Obtains New Coat.

"And if this Pickle Juice you are serving is meant for your perfectly wonderful Son, you can deliver my Share of it to some Poor Family," spoke up Wallie. "What a Fibgrot- tle you turned out to be! Stand- ing there, right on top of a Rug, and trying to tell me how to loosen a Parachute and make a Jump. Boy, I've got Medals and Speed Records that you never read about, You're just a Man that lives up at our House. You're what we have to explain to our Friends. You are just the Scale on our Family Tree. We have a right to be annoyed by you, but we're not because you are the unfortunate Victim of Flannel Pajamas and too much Cereal Food. You have the Boobitis, which means that there is no Circulation above the Adam's Apple."

"For the first time in the History of the World, the Grivets Family is making the First Page," suggested Edna. "Wallie and I are putting it over, in spite of you and the other Handicaps. We are crashing into Swell Dumps where You and Ma couldn't break in with a Jimmy. We are a couple of hot little Zizzers and you ought to be rooting for us in- stead of trying to check in before Midnight. Why, the Bambinos we travel with don't get their Eyes wide open until about 11 P. M."

"What's more," chimed in Wallie, "we've got you about using that broken-down Fiat is just a Cripple. If you wasn't such an Oaf, you wouldn't expect two Headliners to travel around in an old 1931 Model. Why don't you come out of your Dose and buy each one of us a Race—something Snappy with real Lines to it?"

"You want something that goes with a Raccoon Coat," suggested Pa- per, trying to be Sarcastic.

"The Raccoon Coat is about six weeks out of Date," replied Son, with a wary shake of the Head, suggesting that Dad was an incurable Yap. "I have just ordered one made of Manchurian Spotted Fox. It will make all the other Laddies burst into Tears and I am getting it for Four Hundred Bucks."

"Europe will have all of the War Debts paid before you earn that much Money," said Mr. Grivets. "You talk about Four Hundred Dollars as if it were Something to be picked off a Bush. If you don't mind, I should like to have you two Birds of Paradise remember that I do not get my Money at a Pump. I am just an old Frazzle, brought up under the Prehistoric Conditions of the Mid-Victorian Era, but if I didn't get out and rustle a new Bank Account every week, you would starve to Death before Spring. Having attended all of the Movies, read all of the Books, and seen all of the Plays, you are now making a Frantic Attempt to make all of the other Shelks and Shebas look like Second-Raters from Pokeville. The only reason I am so in- terested in your Criminal Ambitions is that I am supposed to finance all your delightful little Expeditions into the Underworld. Sometimes I wonder what the Finish will be. Probably your Mother and I won't live to see it."

Fooling the Slickers.

"Oh, many Fishes and a couple of Tubees!" exclaimed Edna. "Any poor Gillie who expects his Daugh- ter to braid her Hair down the Back and play the Cottage Organ in these hoopla Days, doesn't de- serve to have one. What would you Rheumatic Relics do these Days if you didn't have the Young People to talk about? And did you ever stop to think that if we stayed home Evenings and played Authors, Crokinole, Jack Straws, and Tid- dledy-Winks, all the Saxophone Players would be out of Work, and there would be a lot of Suffering?"

"We are the busy little Life- Savers of this transitional Period. If it wasn't for us, the Earth would have a Crust on it. A lot of you doddering Dummies who are stick- ing around after your licenses have expired ought to be tickled to Death to pay the Expenses. We are giv- ing you real Entertainment, but the Trouble is you are not keyed up to it. It is too bad that we find in our Cities so many small-town Rubes who get in by mistake. We'd love to take you and Ma with us if you could keep up and main- tain the Pace and exhibit some Class, but it's no use trying to show you any Touches of High Life, be- cause neither one of you is gaited to be a Stepper."

"The Situation is clearing up somewhat," said Mr. Grivets. "I can begin to see that your Mother and I are wholly to blame. Either that, or we should have sent both of you to the Reform School about Ten Years ago."

"You old Wickles and Dilladads make me plumb tired," said Wallie. "Whenever several of our typical Parents get together these Days, they sit in a Back Room licking up Scotch guaranteed to be a Week or Ten Days' old, and worrying for fear that the Young People are not getting a good quality of Gin. Those who have't Fallen Arches still try to Dance, and most of those not running for Office seem to be mak- ing a Joke of some Good Law. And yet they are always roasting us Kids. You are a lot of Jabber- nows."

"What's a Jabbernow?"

"I don't know. I'm simply trying to protect the Author. He writes his Stuff at least a Month before it is printed, and of course, any Ju- venile Slang that he put in would be out of date, cold and discredited before the time of Publication. So the only Safe Plan is to coin a few Words which mean Nothing and put them in and then the Slickers may think that he has dug up some New Ones which they have not heard."

This unexpected Reply put Fa- ther on the Ropes. By the time he recovered, the two Moderns had picked his Pockets, cranked up the Bus, and started for a Nice Place known as The Purple Bulldog.

MORAL—As long as it does not really interfere with any arrange- ments made by the Children, why not let the Old Fogies rave?

Howard Hughes Buys Another Sky Liner

Shown here beside the new Sikorsky amphibian plane which he recently purchased is Howard Hughes, millionaire film producer. Hughes purchased the ship in the East and flew it to Burbank, Calif., his home port. It is powered with two Wasp motors, cruises at 110 mph, has two-way radio and a cruising range of 1,200 miles. When not flying the skyways in this ship Hughes may be seen gadding about in his little custom-built flying pursuit ship which has a top speed of 210 mph and for which he is reported to have paid $43,000. The cost of the amphibian was $50,000.

Roosevelt Inspects Muscle Shoals

THE LIVING BUDDHA

DINNER JACKETS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

One sleeveless decollete gown with a flock of cunning dinner jack- ets equals a whole wardrobe of eve- ning clothes. Which goes to show how practical fashion is growing during these days when economy is the correct form wherever we may go. The model pictured is in black and white velvet. Gold or silver-spang- led velvet would make up very prettily after this fashion. The list of interesting dinner jackets includes some very dainty fantasies made of tulle or lace or in crepe or fresh tints. Worn over black vel- vet or crepe dresses they transform the formal gown into a costume suited to the semi-formal dine or dance hour. The flair for sparkle is reflected in the dazzling little caplets and jackets which are sequin covered.

Along Broadway

By JUDITH CHAMBERLAIN

New York City, January 18th—

"BIG NIGHT"

By Dawn Powell, is being produced by The Group Theatre at the Maxine Elliott Theatre. They are opening Tuesday night, with the following members of the Stella Adler, Lewis Leverett, Group Theatre's acting company; Ward Bomberg, Phoebe Brand, Eunice Stoddard, Roman Bohner, and Russell Collins and a brilliant cast.

"AS HUSBANDS GO"

Will definitely open at the Forest Theatre on Thursday Jan. 19, following the closing of "The Good Fairy". Robert Hurton, formerly with John Golden and Rachel Crothers, is directing. Prominent in the cast are Stu Keller, Leslie Denison, Joe King and Margerite Lytel.

BRIAN DONLEVY, last seen here in "The Boy Friend" has been added to the cast of "Honeymoon", at the Vanderbilt Theatre. Mr. Donlevy is also remembered as being prominent in "Society Girl", "Inside Story", "Up Pops the Devil", "What Price Glory", and "Hit The Deck".

JOHN GOLDEN, gathered together a choice collection of suckers over the recent week-end, the gullibles including such wide-eyed youths as M. H. Aylesworth, David Sarnoff, Max Gordon and George Atwell. The producer of "When Ladies Meet" lured these naive lads into a crap game, using the house dice kept on hand for such emergencies in the Golden home in Bayside. The victims were taken for the sum of one hundred dollars, which was promptly turned over by Mr. Golden to the Stage Relief Fund.

FRANCIS LEDERER, who is co-starring with Dorothy Glah in "Autumn Crocus", current at the Morosco Theatre, is responsible for a chapter unique in the annals of the theatre. While under contract to the German producer Saltenburg, he was called on to play "Roméo" for Max Reinhardt. Saltenburg refused to release him even though he was not engaged at the time. Then a group of prominent stage people, headed by Alexander Mossel declared that Saltenburg owed it to the German Theatre to release Lederer, and such insistence was shown by the public and the newspapers that Saltenburg had to consent, or it was likely that his theatre would have been boycotted.

"FOOLSCAP"

"FIVE STAR FINAL" the splendid picturization of Louis Weitzenborn's bitter play about yellow journalism and the suffering brought about upon an entire family is being given a return play at the Warner Theatre. Max Marsh, H. B. Warner, George Stone, Boris Karloff, Aline MacMahon and Oscar Apfel are featured in support of Robinson.

"HYPNOTIZED" is the new comedy at the Winter Garden Theatre. Moran and Mack make their return to the screen in "Hypnotized", which is directed by Mack Sennett and concerns the adventures of an animal trainer and his colored assistant who are hypnotized and shanghaied aboard an ocean-bound liner for sinister purposes.

EDDIE CANTOR, in "The Kid From Spain" will begin an engagement at the Rivoli Theatre on Wednesday, Jan. 18th. This will be the first presentation of the Cantor film at popular prices, and its initial showing on Broadway since the memorable run of eight weeks at the Palace Theatre at $2.00 top. "The Kid From Spain" follows the present engagement of Ronald Colman "Cynara" which has occupied the Rivoli screen for three weeks.

R. K. O. ROXY is continuing to show "The Animal Kingdom" at the request of the motion picture fans of New York. No finer co-starring team than the ever popular Ann Harding and Leslie Howard, new film idol, could have been chosen to play the leading roles in this scintillating story of tangled domesticity. Myra Loy, who plays the third angle of this sparkling cinematic triangle, gives the finest performance of her film career. The stage presentation keeps pace with the high merit of the picture. "Opening Night" a Tom and Jerry Cartoon Comedy, and the RKO ROXY News are the short film features of the program.

THE BLACK BOX OF SILENCE

By Francis Lynde Illustrations By Olwin Myers

Having demonstrated the power of an extraordinary silence, the "Black Box" which he has perfected, Owen Landis, young inventor, in the little town of Carthage, confides to his chum, Wally Markham, that he fears the device, if exploited, might be used for evil purposes.

BEGINNING THE STORY

The attempt to trace three newcomers—or at most six—in a city the size of Denver is much like looking for a needle in a haystack; and though they went short on sleep and were up early the next morning, eight o'clock found them still driving from one hotel to another, drawing blanks and losing time.

"There is simply no end to this, Wally," Landis protested. "We might keep on all day in a city with as many hotels as there are here. Our best chance is the open road. We know where Canby is headed for. If we trail him, maybe we'll find the Fleetwing in the same gallery."

"You didn't beat me to it by more than half a minute," Markham returned, spreading the well-used road map on his knees. "Here's the nearest cut to the 'Timonyon,'" he pointed out. "We'll get the grips and try our luck in the open, as you say."

For a short run over the highway the trail refused to reveal itself. But later they came to a filling station whose keeper told them he had helped change an inner tube on a Fleetwing Eight between six and seven o'clock that morning. He said there were three men in the car, and he also recalled that the one he had helped with the tire had said they were from Louisville.

Questioned, he said he had no recollection of seeing a Nordyke limousine, but that it might easily have gone by without his noticing it.

Markham glanced at the clock on the dash as he flung the new roadster at the mountain grades. "Three hours ahead of us; we're gaining on them, in spite of the Denver delay. Where do you suppose this chase is going to wind up, Owen?"

"I'm not so much concerned about the 'where' as the 'how.' I may as well confess that I'm on the fence again. There haven't been any bank blastings this side of the Missouri river."

"No; but there was a perfectly good roadster wrecked back there in Kansas," Markham put in pointedly.

"Yes, but nothing in the wide world to connect the wrecking with these men we're chasing. Why would a trio of bank burglars, if that's what they are, pass up all the chances in six or seven hundred miles and go streaking off up here in these mountains?"

"Just so," said Markham with a short laugh. "It isn't decent. But there is something else I'd like to know. What has become of Canby and the Lawsons?"

This question was answered late in the afternoon, as they were running down the valley of the Pannikin toward Copah—still gaining upon the Fleetwing, as they learned by inquiry as they had come along. It was at a water tank station on the Pacific Southwestern that they first heard of the Nordyke limousine. It was ahead of them; had apparently been ahead all day. They had stopped at a filling station to get gas, and to ask about the Fleetwing, and the gas man grinned.

It was while they were sliding silently down the steep grades that they passed a large closed car stopped midway on one of the tangents, as if its occupants had halted to view the sunset glories. "Sightseers," said Markham; and then, suddenly, "Say, Owen; wasn't that the Nordyke—Canby's car?"

What Landis might have answered was lost in the limbo of things unsaid. As they rounded a "hairpin" curve and shot away down the succeeding tangent they could see the stopped car high above standing behind a row of great stones set up by the road builders to guard the down-mountain side of the highway. All at once one of the huge guard rocks heaved itself from its place to come tumbling over and down the declivity, tilted as if by some enigmatical agency to reach the lower tangent coincidentally with the racing roadster.

Fortunately, Markham was one of those drivers whose reactions in an emergency are so instantaneous as to seem purely automatic. He did the only thing there was to do—released the brakes and jammed the foot throttle open to its limit.

It was all over in a moment. With only a fraction of a second to spare at the point of intersection, but that fraction on the side of safety, the flying car shot fairly under the hurtling menace and went racing on to the next doubling curve.

It was not until the car shot out upon the valley level that Landis relaxed, drawing a long breath and saying, "I'm handing it to you, Wally. You've a lot better nerve than I have. I should have tried to stop if I'd been at the wheel. How do you suppose it happened?"

"One guess is no good as another. Mine is that whoever was driving that stopped car had cramped his front wheel against the rock for safety. Natural thing to do on such a stiff grade."

Silence for a speeding mile, and then Landis fairly shouted. "Say, Wally! We've been asleep at the switch—both of us! Think back a minute; didn't you notice that the rock didn't make any noise coming down?"

"What's that?" snapped Markham, braking the car to an abrupt stop. Then, "I knew there was something queer about the thing, but I was too busy just then to figure out what it was. But you've put your finger on it. That tumbling rock ought to have made racket enough to wake the dead—and there wasn't a sound!"

"Well, you know there is only one way to account for that, don't you?"

"You bet your life I do! That stopped car had your infernal machine in it—that's what. We're in luck at last." And he began to back the car for a turn.

"Hold on," Landis broke in. "What are you going to do?" "Go back up the hill and have it out with that bunch, whoever they are!"

"Listen to reason a minute, Wally," Landis said quietly. "If they are the men we've been trying for three days to run down, how much chance would we have in a road scrap with a carload of yeggs most likely armed to the teeth? Besides, we haven't lost 'em. They can't go on to wherever they're going without passing us, and when they come along we can swing in and sit on their tail, can't we?"

"Um! You're too d-d sensible for any use!" Markham grunted. "It gets me on the raw. I'm not used to being stood up as a mark for a bunch of murderers to throw stones at. Just before the thing came off I was asking you if the car wasn't a Nordyke. Was it? Or was it the Fleetwing?"

"I couldn't say. All I noticed was that it was a closed car." "No matter; we'll find out in a few minutes what it was—or is."

They were entering Copah. Markham steered into the shadows and turned off the car lights.

They had not long to wait before the headlights of a following car appeared on the rearward road. "Spot it as it passes!" Markham rapped out; and so they did, both of them. What they saw was a mere thickening of the mysteries. For the passing car, slowing to town speed as it entered the town street, was no other than Canby's limousine, with Canby himself at the wheel.

"If I wasn't reasonably certain that I were both fairly sane and in our right minds," Markham began. Then, "You saw them, didn't you?" "I saw Canby, yes."

"But he wasn't alone." "No; there were two people in the back seat." "Exactly. Betty and her father. 'I suppose so; though I couldn't make them out very well.'"

"But, see here; Canby was an hour ahead of us at the last place we inquired, which was only a few miles back. The car couldn't have been the one we saw stopped up there on the mountain grade." "Of course not. The people who were in that car pushed a rock over on the bank, and they hid in a black box."

Ancient American Race Keen on Conservation The red paint people, a prehistoric race that lived in the northeastern part of the United States and so called because of the great quantities of red ochre, or powdered hematite, found in all their burial places, were conservationists of a high order if we are to judge from skeletal material found in their shell heaps.

Barrons Suffer Second Defeat Of Court Season

Whipped by St. Mary's last Friday night, 25-19.

Woodbridge again went down to defeat Friday night when they bowed their ancient rivals, St. Mary's of Perth Amboy to the tune of 25 to 19.

Woodbridge fought valiantly throughout the contest but St. Mary's superiority in size and weight was a great advantage and the blues were quick to recognize that fact.

The Barrons staged a fierce up hill struggle in the waning minutes of the game and for the better part of the last period had the blues on the run. It was only in the last period that the forces from the township outscored the Blue warriors.

The Barrons outplayed the victors 4 to 3 in the final period.

The Blues took the offensive as soon as the game got under way and with the aid of their center rolled up a 10 to 4 lead over the Barrons by the time the first period was over.

In the preliminary the Saint Jayvees conquered the Woodbridge Seconds, 20 to 18. Jim Auburn, physical director of the Y. M. C. A. officiated.

Good Word for Starling

The starling's habit of flying in great flocks has been subject to comment by writers even as far back as Pliny. The extraordinary precision with which the flock of hundreds, or even thousands, wheels, closes, opens up, rises and descends, as if the whole body were a single living thing, all these movements being executed without a note or cry being uttered, must be seen to be appreciated, and may be seen repeatedly with pleasure.

This same flocking habit, which gives starlings much blame, may also be an asset, in the case of extreme insect plagues, when the huge flocks may descend upon a stricken area and "clean up" the insects in short order.

Ruby Held in Veneration

Almost from the dawn of history, through the Middle Ages, and as late as the Seventeenth century, men of all stations—prince and peasant, scholar and fool—have believed in the talismanic and therapeutic virtues of precious stones.

The ruby, costliest among them when found in its purest form, has always been prized as the symbol of affection, power, and majesty. Ask any Hindu and he will tell you that the jewel is reputed to attract and retain maternal love, to remove obstacles, give victory, and reveal the hiding place of stolen treasure. But only, he will add, when it is a true stone that has never changed its color, and only, too, when it is worn on the left hand. Otherwise, he will warn, misfortune is in store!
