The Most Holy Body and Blood of Christ (Corpus Christi)

Today we celebrate one of the Solemnities of the Lord during Ordinary Time. The official title of the feast is, in the Latin Church, Festum Sanctissimi Corporis Christi (Feast of the Most Holy Body of Christ). In Greek it is called Tou Somatos Tou Kyriou Heorte (Feast of the Body of the Lord). From these ecclesiastical terms many Christian nations have adopted popular names for the feast, like the English and Spanish Corpus Christi.

The prayers in the liturgy today can teach us the reality of what we receive and remind us of who Jesus, the Son of God, is. In addition, what He has done for us. Without the use of worship aids, catching all of the words of the prayers might be difficult. In this article, I will include excerpts from the prayers with a short commentary for each. My intent is to help you focus on the prayers to appreciate their content and be mindful of the petitions the presider is making on our behalf.

These words from the Collect (prayer right after the Gloria) are a plea to help us maintain our proper attitude about the Eucharist we will receive so we may garner its full affect: “God, who in this wonderful Sacrament have left us a memorial of your Passion, grant us, we pray, so to revere the sacred mysteries of your Body and Blood that we may always experience in ourselves the fruits of your redemption.”

Today the Preface to the Eucharistic Prayer reminds us that Jesus, as Priest, offered Himself as sacrifice to redeem us and strengthen us on our journey: “For he is the true and eternal Priest, who instituted the pattern of an everlasting sacrifice and was the first to offer himself as the saving Victim, commanding us to make this offering as his memorial. As we eat his flesh that was sacrificed for us, we are made strong, and, as we drink his Blood that was poured out for us, we are washed clean.”

The prayer after Communion is a plea that we may join our God in His divine life through the Eucharist we receive now. And be in His presence for all eternity in the life to come: “Grant, O Lord, we pray, that we may delight for all eternity in that share in your divine life, which is foreshadowed in the present age by our reception of your precious Body and Blood.”

I hope you now have a better understanding of the prayers you have heard or will hear at the mass. They are a means to a deeper understanding of the reality of who it is we receive and what He continually does for us.

Deacon Kevin

Catholic priest, psychologist offer advice for stressful times

JUNE 5, 2020 BY PERRY WEST

DENVER NEWSROOM (CNA) -- With disturbing and frightening news dominating the headlines in recent weeks, a psychologist and a priest suggested that Catholics take care to guard their psychological and spiritual health. Just as much of the country has started easing quarantine restrictions intended to slow the spread of the novel coronavirus, many states are now seeing unrest following the death of George Floyd, an unarmed black man, in police custody.

A May 25 video that has circulated widely online shows an officer with the Minneapolis Police Department kneeling on Floyd's neck for several minutes after he was taken into custody. Floyd could be heard saying "I can't breathe" several times. He died soon after.

Cities across the U.S. have seen widespread protests against police brutality and racism in the wake of Floyd's death. Some protests have turned to nights of rioting, and conflicts with police. At least five people have died amid the protests.

Former Minneapolis police officer Derek Chauvin was arrested May 29, and has been charged with second-degree murder and manslaughter. The other officers present at the scene have been charged with aiding and abetting. In some cases, the death of George Floyd may affect people more deeply than the pandemic has, said Jennifer Madere, president of the Catholic Psychotherapy Association (CPA).

"The pandemic was perceived more as external, whereas experiences of injustice, and oppression bring up our own pain and trauma," she told CNA.

Several members of the CPA noted an increase in feelings of anxiety, confusion, distress, mourning, and anger in recent weeks. Some people may be retreating into themselves as they process the fear and trauma surrounding them.

Dr. Christina Lynch, a supervising psychologist for Denver's St. John Vianney Theological Seminary, said that Floyd's death, and the protests and riots that have followed, have added an additional sense of insecurity to the feeling of turbulence already present due to the coronavirus pandemic.

She stressed the value of staying connected to friends, family, and neighbors during this time, noting that isolation can be detrimental to mental health.

"Isolation leads to loneliness which can increase our stress levels. Constant stress and fear can lead to anger and sadness – which in the end can cause a spike in depression without the person being aware," she said. "It is important to talk about your concerns and feelings with a trusting person. Seek positive solutions to the current events rather than instilling further fear. Speak to others about what positive outcomes can come from bad situations." She also encouraged people to spend time focusing on gratitude, taking time every day to write down five blessings and sharing their appreciation with others.

"It is wise to watch a minimum of news, just enough to stay safe. It is important to exercise, eliminate alcohol (a depressant) and eat less sugar. Take deep breaths and breath out the anxiety physically. If possible, go for walks outside and get some vitamin D, smile at others, this can stimulate our internal joy," she added. cont. pg. 6

St. Anthony of Padua still inspirational model for today, pope says

BY CAROL GLATZ JUN 4, 2020

VATICAN CITY (CNS) -- Pope Francis asked that the world's Franciscans and devotees of St. Anthony of Padua be inspired by this 13th-century saint by being "restless" to hit the road and share God's love through word and deed.

"May his example of sharing in the difficulties of families, the poor and disadvantaged, as well as his passion for truth and justice, still arouse in us today a generous commitment to give of ourselves as a sign of fraternity," the pope said in a written message.

"I am thinking most of all about the young: This saint, so ancient and yet so modern and brilliant in his insights, can be a model for new generations to follow, so that their journey may be made fruitful," he said.

The pope's remarks came in a letter addressed to Friar Carlos Trovarelli, minister general of the Order of Friars Minor Conventual, marking the occasion of the 800th anniversary of St. Anthony entering into religious life.

In the letter, published June 3 on the order's website -- ofmconv.net, Pope Francis recalled how this young man, born in 1195 in Lisbon, Portugal, decided to turn his life around after learning about the martyrdom of five Franciscans killed because of their faith in Morocco.

A mosaic of St. Anthony of Padua, whose feast day is June 13, is seen on the grounds of the Franciscan Monastery of the Holy Land in America in Washington. On this physical and spiritual journey that began 800 years ago, the saint went to Morocco to "experience the Gospel in the footsteps of the Franciscan friars who had been martyred there," the pope wrote.

The saint then landed in Sicily after being shipwrecked on the Italian coast, "an event which happens to so many of our brothers and sisters today," he added.

From Sicily, he traveled with St. Francis of Assisi in Italy and France, then moved to Padua, where his body is preserved.

"I hope that this significant anniversary will arouse, especially in the Franciscan religious and the devotees of St. Anthony around the world, the desire to experience the same holy restlessness that prompted St. Anthony to travel the roads of the world bearing witness, through word and deed, to the love of God," the pope wrote.

Born Fernando Martins de Bulhoes, St. Anthony was renowned for his powerful preaching and devotion to the poor and ill. He was beatified and canonized just one year after his death in 1231. His feast day is June 13, and he is the patron saint of lost objects, animals, pregnant women, travelers and many others.

fm. pg. 4 “Neurologically one can change their negative thinking by writing down (pen and paper) positive thoughts at least 27 [times]. That can help build positive connections.”

Lynch also stressed the importance of a healthy spirituality. She encouraged Catholics to invite others to pray for peace in the local community and through social media. She also urged people to embrace greater acts of charity. “My advice would be to make our Catholic faith contagious and choose to positively come against fear and choose to be proactive in promoting hope,” she said. “Pray each morning for internal peace and most of all think positive. Remember thinking is believing. The more positive you think, the more you build positive neurological connections in the brain.”

“Do acts of kindness such as calling people in your church community to see how they are doing,” she added. “The more kind acts we do, the better we feel about ourselves, which will in turn help us to be more proactive in doing more acts of kindness.”

Father John Nepil, a theology professor for St. John Vianney Theological Seminary in Denver, told CNA that in times of anxiety and fear, it is particularly important to embrace the love of God. He said the world’s turmoil can be an opportunity for greater conversion.

“We have become convinced as Americans that as long as we’re comfortable and healthy, everything is fine. We’ve [now] realized that there’s no guarantee for that, nor is that always in our best interest,” he said.

“One of the great mistakes we make as Americans is to think that we’re the nice people and that this is just evil people who do these things. I think as Christians, we have to deeply understand ourselves as bound to the actions of our brothers and sisters and responsible for them.”

Nepil stressed that racism, like any form of violence, is an inherent violation of human dignity. He encouraged Catholics to offer prayers and penance in reparation for the sins of others, especially those motivated by racial hate. Above all, the priest said, the current time is one for conversion, and a recognition that we as a society cannot separate ourselves from God and build a perfect utopia.

“We pray for peace and for the end of hatred, but, as I mentioned before, the most important thing is rejecting the godlessness of our own self reliance and learning to depend more on Jesus alone as the salvation of man,” he said.

Words on the Word

June 14, 2020 – Bread From Heaven

As this odd pandemic time continues, it can seem like the world has been out of whack for several months, if not years or even longer.

It may seem like forever since we’ve been able to attend sports events, or go out to eat in a usual restaurant setting, or even browse the rack at a clothing store. And, to be sure, it has been a substantial amount of time.

But, hard as it may be to fathom, it has “only” been about three months since the world as we remember it turned upside down.

Time has a way of playing tricks with our sense of perspective.

To see things in better perspective, perhaps we can keep in mind the tribulations of our spiritual ancestors, as they learned how to rely on God.

“Remember how for forty years now the Lord, your God, has directed all of your journeying in the desert, so as to test you by affliction and find out whether or not it was your intention to keep his commandments,” Moses says to the Israelites in today’s first reading from the Book of Deuteronomy.

“He therefore let you be afflicted with hunger, and then fed you with manna, a food unknown to you and your fathers, in order to show you that not be bread alone does one live, but by every word that comes forth from the mouth of the Lord.”

In other words, God’s got this covered, in the large sense and down to each and every one of our individual needs.

“Do not forget the Lord your God,” the reading concludes, “...who brought forth water for you from the flinty rock and fed you in the desert with manna.” We will, eventually, get through this. And God, who will be there when that day comes, is with us just as surely even now.
