Advice from Alumni

- “For those preparing their application forms, I think the key to at least arousing any interest from the first screeners is to tell your story (where do you come from, how have you reached the point where you are, what is your vision to the future, and most importantly, what makes you special). Remember everyone is special. The difference rests on how especially you tell your story.” - Manuel Mutimuciuo, 2013-14 Humphrey Fellow, Michigan State University
- “The application process for the JSD provides a thorough evaluation of applicants, not only academically and professionally, but it also provides an opportunity to stand out individuals whom possess an unparalleled wish to increase their skills with the ultimate objective to contribute to the development of Mozambique. Thus my advice to prospective applicants is to strongly believe that it is possible to participate in the program, and to direct all efforts to excel in all the stages of the application process, as the rewards of participating in JDSP are immeasurable.” - Celso Tamele, 2009-2011 Fulbright Fellow, MA Biosystems and Agricultural Engineering, Oklahoma State University

o Difference Between the Fulbright and Humphrey Programs

- “Hubert H. Humphrey is arguably the most prestigious of all US Department of State exchange programs. One can tell from the careful crafting of the program (access to federal and state agencies and leaders, participation at world leading universities, opportunity to work in different organizations from the World Bank to local non-profits, etc.), but especially from the ensemble of the program participants (young and adult proven leaders from all over the world). The program is not suited for persons pursuing post-graduate degrees. While the program includes some academic work (at the discretion of the host university), the primary focus is professional development. Humphrey fellows travel quite a lot within the states visiting government agencies, civil society and private organizations in their related field. Fellows are also invited to speak at public events to share their perspective about world challenges. University professors usually invite Humphrey fellows as guest lecturers. And at the end of the program, all fellows are required to complete at least 45 days of full time work at an organization of their choice. We have fellows being hosted by the World Bank, leading private companies and in my case a leading regional planning agency. All these activities and others (depending on how proactive the fellow is) will make hard any intention of completing a degree, which is not the objective of the program in the first place. For those seeking degrees, the best path is to apply to the sister Fulbright program.”- Manuel Mutimucuo, 2013-14
Humphrey Fellow, Michigan State University
