ABSTRACT

The research aims to improve the quality of English teaching and learning process of grade V students of SDN Mandapa II Dawuan Majalengka by using communicative games.

This is classroom action research. It was done collaboratively with the teacher of grade V of SDN Mandapa II. The research was done in 2 cycles. The steps of this research were planning, action and observation, and reflection. The data were qualitative in nature, gained in the form of field notes, interview transcripts, and documentation. The instruments used in collecting the data were a recorder, a camera, a notebook, interview guides and observation guides. The validity of the data was obtained by applying democratic validity, catalytic validity, outcome validity, process validity and dialogic validity. The reliability of the data was obtained by applying triangulation method.

The result shows that the communicative games have improved the quality of English teaching and learning process of grade V students in some aspects, in the aspects the students' involvement, techniques and media. During the implementation of the actions, the students were actively involved the English teaching and learning process.

Key words: Communicative games, the quality of English teaching and learning, English teaching and learning in the Primary School.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background of the Study

Since English is an international language, most of the countries in the world bring English as a subject that should be learned in the formal schools including in Indonesia. English use can be found in so many aspects of life such the technology, education and so on. Thus, the institution of education has a big responsibility to help the society to be able to communicate in English and starts from the students through teaching and learning.

Teaching and learning is the main activity of education process. It can determine what will happen to the education in the future. The quality of the teaching and learning process is one of the important things to achieve the goals of the teaching and learning. Thus the quality of teaching and learning always become the main focus that continuously be improved by the teacher, principals and government.

A good teaching and learning process will help the students to be successful learners and achieve the goals of teaching and learning. The goals of teaching and learning should be appropriate with the language teaching period. Language teaching period today is in the communicative language teaching period. According to Richard (2006:2), communicative language teaching can be understood as a set of principles about the goals of language teaching, how the learners learn a language, the kinds of classroom activities that best facilitate learning and the roles of teacher and learners in the classroom.

However according to Yamazumi (2007:20), “Traditional school curriculums, lessons, and learning have only concerned themselves with teaching as a means of transferring the contents of textbooks to children.”

Actually, a good language teaching and learning process is not only a process of transferring knowledge from the teacher to the students or transferring the contents of the textbook as found in so many schools but also the process of how the learners learn the language as a means of communication.

A good teaching and learning can be determined through three aspects of teaching and learning process. The three aspects are the input, the process and the output. The teacher as the creator of teaching and learning should be aware of those three aspects. The teacher should provide a comprehensible input for the students and choose the best strategies in the teaching and learning process that can help the students to understand easily what they learn. The teacher also should make sure that the output of the teaching and learning process is related to the objective of the teaching and learning.

Some elementary schools, for example SDN Mandapa II will be the first place for students learning English and building a foundation of learning English. It also will be the place for preparing the students to communicate in English and learning English in the secondary school.

Some elementary schools will be the place to introduce English. Thus the appropriate teaching and learning will make a good process for preparing the students to learn English in the next level.

SDN Mandapa II is located in Desa Mandapa, Dawuan, Majalengka, West Java. The students, especially the students of grade V, are mostly active and like playing very much. They prefer to do something with themselves and cannot pay attention in a long time to deal with something that to them is boring and difficult. Therefore, sometimes they will be bored with the lesson if the teacher just explains the lesson in front of the class, translates the words and asks to do a worksheet in the students' worksheet. There are only few students who pay attention to the teacher when the teacher teaches them. Thus, the creativity of the teacher in providing the technique of the teaching is very important to get students' attention and make them enjoy learning English. The students should be motivated to involve the teaching and learning process actively such by using the games. Games can attract students attention and make them involve the teaching and learning with the enjoyable activities.

B. Identification of the Problem

Teaching and learning process is a very complex situation because there are many people who come from different background with many characteristics. Naturally, there should be problems in teaching and learning process such as in the aspects of media, teacher, students, methods, techniques and the like. As the result of the observation, there were some problems found in SDN Mandapa II.

Firstly, in the aspect of students, most of the students could not stay in a long time without doing anything. They liked playing very much. Thus there was a difficulty to make them stayed in the class when the teacher taught them. They could not pay more attention to the teacher who explained the materials in front of the class. This condition gave the impact to the students' motivation in learning English. In addition the students seem to be anxious to use English. They could not use English and understand English utterances because the teacher rarely used English in the classroom. The students did not get good exposure and good model of speaking English so they did not get self-confidence in using English.

Secondly, the English teacher of SDN Mandapa II is the 6th semester student of University. Since, she is prepared as SMA teacher so sometimes she got difficulties in creating the activities that are appropriate with the young learner psychology such as she explained the grammar rules and patterns explicitly. The teacher rarely used English in the classroom. She used English only for greeting the students. Thus the students did not get many exposures of English.

The third problem was in the aspect of the techniques of the teaching. The teacher often used grammar translation method. In techniques, she introduced words by words with their meaning and wrote them in the whiteboard. She gave some sentences as the example and explained the pattern of the sentence then she asked the students to do students' worksheet. Furthermore the teacher also did not use any media such as cards, pictures and other visual aids to attract the students' attention.

The fourth problem was in the aspect of materials. The emphasis of teaching and learning at SDN Mandapa II was to the vocabulary teaching and learning. The teacher drilled vocabulary and did not too care about the four skills. The teacher introduced the vocabulary without paying attention to the pronunciation. The teacher often used students' worksheet as the source of teaching and learning.

C. Limitation of the Problem

Related to the finding of the problems that are mentioned in the identification of the problem above, there are some problems in some components of English teaching and learning that affect the quality of English teaching and learning process that need to be solved. This research is focused on implementing appropriate technique of teaching to improve the quality of English teaching and learning process of grade V students of SDN Mandapa II Majalengka in first semester of the academic year 3013-2014 through communicative games.

D. Formulation of the Problem

Related to delimitation of the problem above, there is a research question. The research question is "How can communicative games be used to improve the quality of English teaching and learning process of the grade V students of SDN Mandapa II Majalengka?”

E. Objective of the Research

Related to the formulation of the problem, the objective of the research is to improve the quality of English teaching and learning process by using communicative games.

F. The Significances of the Research

The significances of the research are defined as follows.

 - c. The teachers can help the students to improve their motivation in learning English by providing appropriate method.
2. The Elementary Schools
 - a. The schools can make efforts to improve the quality of English teaching and learning process.

5. Other researchers
 - a. Other researchers can design the similar research to improve the quality of English teaching and learning by using the different technique of teaching that appropriate with the students' characteristics.

CHAPTER II

LITERATURE REVIEW AND CONCEPTUAL FRAMEWORK

A. Literature Review

1. Teaching and Learning English in Elementary School

a. English in Elementary School

English become one of the important subjects that should be taught in school to help the students be able to communicate in English as a foreign language. The government gives a good interest in English by making English as one of the local subject in Elementary school. It is mentioned both in curriculum 2004 and curriculum 2006. The government supports this policy by making Law Number 22 of 2006 about standard of content and Low Number 23 of 2006 about standard competence of graduation. In addition, to make a high quality of education, the government also makes Law Number 19 of 2005 about national standard of education (Standar Nasional Pendidikan). It is one of the efforts of the government to facilitate the students to learn English early years (Departemen Pendidikan Nasional, 2008).

In learning English, there are 4 kinds of literacy levels, namely, performative, functional, informational and epistemic. The purpose of learning English in Elementary School is to help the students in achieving literacy competence of performative skill. It means that the students are able to understand the instructions in the classroom context or school.

They are able to interact with the environment, read and write simple words based on the children's environment. (Departemen Pendidikan Nasional, 2008).

b. Teaching and Learning English to Young Learners

Elementary school students are young learners. They are different from the adult. Young learners also are not the miniature of the adults, means that both of them have different ways of doing something, including the different ways of learning.

Krashen (1987) mentions two systems of second language performance: language learning and language acquisition. He distinguishes the difference between language learning and language acquisition. There are different processes of learning and acquiring the language. Language learning is learning consciously, in the more formal approach to language instructions. On the other hand, language acquisition is learning subconsciously. It is the natural process used to develop language skills, especially in a child's native language.

In addition, Vygotsky (1978) (from Linse 2005:14) explains:

Children's language learning is advanced through social interaction and experiences based on the context or situation. Vygotsky (1978) explains that adults provide children with the language (permanent meanings of words), not with the thinking itself. Nevertheless, adults can support children as learners by modifying interactions to foster both intellectual and language development.

According to Linse (2005:2) the job of the teacher of young learners do not only provide instructions but also care. She writes as follows.

By the nature of your job as a teacher of young learners, you must be aware of children's basic physical and psychological needs. Teachers of young learners should provide the care necessary to meet these needs so that they can thrive and focus on learning. In other words, teachers of young learners have two jobs: to provide care and to provide instruction.

c. The Characteristics of Young Learners

Teaching and learning should be appropriate to the learners. Thus, it is important to understand the characteristics of the learners before the teacher teaches them in order to be able to create a good teaching and learning process. According to Brewster and Ellis (1991:27-28), there are 11 characteristics of young learner, they write as follows.

- 1) Have a lot of physical energy and often need to be physically active
- 2) Have a wide range of emotional need.
- 3) Are emotionally excitable.
- 4) Are developing conceptually and at an early stage of their schooling.
- 5) Are still developing literacy in their first language.
- 6) Learn more slowly and forgot things quickly.
- 7) Tend to be self-oriented and preoccupied with their own world.
- 8) Get bored easily.
- 9) Are excellent mimics.
- 10) Can concentrate for a surprisingly only long time if they are interested.
- 11) Can be easily distracted but also very enthusiastic.

Furthermore, Brown (2001) mentions five characteristics of young learners. First, based on the stage of development of Piaget's theory, children are in the intellectual stage called as 'concrete operation'. In this intellectual stage the children start to know the time and space, they think about 'here and now' but they cannot understand the abstract things. "Rules, explanation, and other even slightly abstract talk about language must be approach with extreme caution. Children are centered on the here and now, on the function of language” (Brown, 2001:88).

Second, commonly children cannot give more attention in a long time especially if the activities are not interesting to children. However, it does not mean that the children have short attention span. Brown (2001) gives an illustration to put the children in front of the TV showing their favorite program and we can see that the children will stay in duration. “But short attention spans do come into play when children have to deal with material that to them is boring, useless or too difficult” (Brown, 2001:88). Thus it is important for the teacher to create the various activities in the classroom that appropriate with the children.

Third, the teacher should think of sensory input. According to Brown (2001), the children need five senses stimulated. The teacher can create the physical activity, hands-on activities, make sensory aids and use nonverbal language (gestures). Brewster and Ellis (1999:35) add that “the younger the learners, the more physical activity they need and the more they need to make use of all their senses.”

Fourth, the children are very sensitive, especially to peers. They think ‘what the other think of me’. Thus the teacher should be patient and help them to build self-confidence. The teacher should give the children opportunities to practice their language and participate in the classroom.

Fifth, authentic and meaningful language is very important for the children because “the children are focused on what this new language actually be used for here and now” (Brown, 2001:90).

2. The Quality of English Teaching and Learning Process

The quality of teaching and learning is affected by three aspects that involve in the teaching and learning. The three aspects will be explained as follows.

a. Input

Input will be in the form of text, dialogue, and the like that will help the students to get exposure and model of English. According to Hutchinson and Waters (1987), input should provide, at least six things, i.e. (1) stimulus materials for activities; (2) new language items; (3) the correct models of language use; (4) topics for communication; (5) the opportunities for the students to use their information processing skills and (6) the opportunities for the students to use their existing knowledge. All of these can be achieved by noticed the input components in teaching and learning. The components will provide the input and determine the quality of teaching and learning. The components are explained as follows.

1) Material

The input of teaching and learning will be found in the material of teaching and learning. Material becomes important thing that affects teaching and learning process. The teacher not only has a responsibility to teach the students but also has to select and develop the materials appropriate with the objective of the teaching and learning. “It is important that the teaching materials used should take the child forward as directly as possible towards your aims and objectives.” (Brewster and Ellis, 1991:151)

According to Hutchinson and Waters (1987:107-108) there are six principles that will guide the teacher to develop the material. The first principle is the materials that are developed have to provide stimulus of learning. It means that good materials do not only teach the learners but also encourage learners to learn. In addition, good materials contain at least interesting text, enjoyable activities which engage the learners' thinking capacity, opportunities for learners to use their existing knowledge and skills and the content can be coped both by the teacher and learners. The second is the materials help the teacher to organize the teaching and learning process. It can be by providing a path through complex mass of language to be learnt. In addition, good materials have to provide a clear and coherent structure which will guide both teacher and learners to various activities for maximizing the changes of learning. Third, principle is the materials embody a view of nature of the language and learning. It means that have to provide the contextual language. The fourth principle is the material the nature of learning task. The materials have to be appropriate with the task that will be done by the learners. The materials and the task is a unity. The fifth principle is good material can have a very useful function in broadening the basis of the teacher training. It can be by introducing the teachers to new techniques of teaching. The last principle is the materials provide models of correct and appropriate language use.

By following the principles of designing the material, the teacher will be able to provide comprehensible input for the students. Comprehensible input consists of good material and a good material will affect the quality of teaching and learning.

2) Media

Media are important things to make a comprehensible input of teaching and learning. They will make the material easily understood. Media will affect the quality of teaching and learning with their roles in the teaching and learning process. According to Heinich (2002) media have many roles in the teaching and learning. Those give the reasons why the teacher should use media in the teaching and learning process. One of the roles of the media is as instructor-directed instruction.

The most common use of media in an instructional situation is for supplemental support of the “live” instructor in the classroom. Certainly, properly designed instructional media can enhance and promote learning and support teacher-based instruction. But their effectiveness depends on the instructor. (Heinich, 2002:11-12)

Media support the teacher in the teaching and learning process. Media are very useful for teaching especially in teaching children. The teacher can use pictures, cards, videos and the like related to the objective of the teaching and learning. All of them will help the students to easily understand what they learned. Brewster and Ellis (1991:30) add by writing as follows.

Bruner thought that the child's learning is a process, not merely a product, which can be accelerated or enhanced by breaking learning into stages and providing the building blocks and systems which connect these together. He saws children's learning as moving through three modes of representation, knowing something through doing it, through working with a picture or image of it and through using some symbolic means, such as language.

Media are helpful for making comprehensible input of teaching and learning. Linse (2005) explains that media are very important component in the teaching and learning for making the comprehensible input text. The teacher can use props, realias, pictures, and posters, bulletin boards of a scene with pictures, cards and the like. Those kinds of media will help the materials understandable.

b. Process

There are some components that involve in the teaching and learning process. The components will affect the quality of teaching and learning.

1) Roles of Teacher

Teacher takes an important role in the teaching and learning process. Harmer (2001:56) describes teacher in some ways.

Teachers use many metaphors to describe what they do. Sometimes they say they are like actors because 'we are always on the stage'. Others think they are like orchestral conductors 'because I direct conversation and set the pace and tone'. Yet others feel like gardeners, 'because we plant the seeds and then watch them grow. The range of images-these and others- that teachers use about themselves indicate the range of views that they have about their profession.

The teacher can play so many roles in the classroom as described by Harmer. Furthermore Brown (2001) mentions five roles of the teacher in the classroom.

First, teacher as a controller means that the teacher becomes a 'master controller' who is always in charge of every moment in the classroom.

"Master controllers determine what the students do, when they should speak, and what language forms they should use. They can often predict many students' responses because everything is mapped out ahead of time, with no leeway for divergent paths" (Brown, 2001:167)

Second, teacher as a director which Brown (2001) emphasizes that the teacher is like to a director of a drama. The director has a responsibility to the process of the playing. Thus the teacher has a responsibility to manage the process of teaching and learning. The teacher should think of how to make the process run smoothly and effectively.

Third, teacher as manager means that the teacher plans lessons, modules, and courses, and structures the larger, longer segments of classroom time. However, the teacher then allows each individual player to be creative within those parameters. Thus as the manager the teacher does not only have a responsibility in the classroom but also a responsibility for planning what will happen in the classroom, what the objective of the lesson, creating what activity can support the objective and evaluating what happen in the classroom. For example as the manager the teacher keeps the students pointed toward goals reflected by the lesson plan. Then the teacher also takes care of students.

Fourth, teacher as facilitator means that teacher helps the students for learning. The teacher helps the students to solve their problem in the teaching and learning process and facilitate the students' need. "The facilitating role requires that you step away the managerial or directive role and allow students, with your guidance and gentle prodding, to find their own pathways to success." (Brown, 2001:186). For example the teacher helps the students to find their own learning strategies and also creates the activities based on the students' learning style.

Fifth, teacher is a resource who takes at least a directive role. "The implication of this role is that the students take the initiative to come to the teacher and the teacher is available for advice and counsel when the students seek." (Brown, 2001:168). Playing this role the teacher should also gives the students appropriate time to develop their language whereas you can take a back seat. "The teacher is like a walking encyclopedia who expects to be a walking mine of information and help the students learn how to locate the information they are seeking." (Jarolimek, 1982:57). Thus, the teacher has to be knowledgeable.

In the teaching and learning the teacher can play many roles related to the objective of the lesson and classroom activities. The teacher should really understand their roles for making a good teaching and learning. Besides understanding the roles, for making a good teaching and learning, the teacher should be supported by some requirements such as technical knowledge of the subject, pedagogical and interpersonal skills, and personal qualities (Brown, 2001). Furthermore Hamacehek (from Jarolemik, 1982) mentions that the teacher should has a sense of humor, fair, flexible, more democratic than autocratic, relate naturally and easily with students. The teacher also should be able to communicate effectively.

2) Roles of Learners

As the subject of learning the students take roles for affecting the quality of teaching and learning. According to Nunan (2004:65) there are some roles of learner that will affect the teaching and learning. He writes as follows.

- a) The learner is a passive recipient of outside stimuli.
- b) The learner is an interactor and negotiator who are capable of giving as well as taking.
- c) The learner is a listener and performer who have little control over the content of learning.
- d) The learner is involved in the process of personal growth.
- e) The learner is involved in a social activity, and the social and interpersonal roles of the learner cannot be divorced from psychological learning process.
- f) The learner must take responsibility for his or her own language learning, developing autonomy and skills in learning-how-to-learn.

By knowing the roles of learners, the teacher can help them to do their roles well by preparing and creating appropriate teaching and learning process. The appropriate teaching and learning will get students' interest. Students' interest is very important to motivate them to be a good language learner. Brown (2001:210) explains as follows.

The good language learner studies are of obvious interest to teachers. The more your classroom activity can model the behavior exhibited by successful language learner, the better and more efficient your studies will be, especially in developing their own autonomy as learners.

3) Method

Method is very important that will affect the quality of teaching and learning. Appropriate method will make the students are interested in teaching and learning. The students will totally involve the teaching and learning if the method is appropriate with them. According to Heinich (2002:16), “Methods are the procedures of instruction selected to help learners achieve the objective or to internalize the content or message.”

The method have to contribute to the aims and of the subject at that level. The activities have to make the students practice the language. What the students do in the classroom should be interesting and enjoyable. Brewster and Ellis (1991:252) explain as follows.

The general methodology associated with primary teaching must contribute to the general aim of all subjects taught at that level and it also an important criterion for the selection of materials. Learning activities must present and practice English in a systematic and comprehensive way so that new language items can be assimilated by the pupil

The things our pupils do in the class should be interesting and enjoyable, but they should also be carefully examined in terms of their language teaching and learning potential and how they relate to what has previously been learned and what is to be learned.

Graves (2000:152-155) mentions some requirements of good activities. All of these considerations are based on the teachers' experience in many places. He writes as follows.

- a) Activities should draw on what students know (their experience, their current situation) and be relevant to them.
- b) Activities should focus on students' outside of class needs, if appropriate.
- c) Activities should build students' confidence.
- d) Activities should allow students to problem solve, discover, analyze.
- e) Activities should help students develop specific skills and strategies.
- f) Activities should help students develop specific language and skills they need for authentic communication.
- g) Activities should integrate the four skills of speaking, listening, reading and writing.
- h) Activities should enable students to understand how a text is constructed.
- i) Activities should enable students to understand cultural context and cultural differences.
- j) Activities should enable students to develop social awareness.
- k) Activities should be as authentic as possible.
- l) Activities should vary the roles and grouping.
- m) Activities should be of various types and purpose.
- n) Activities should use authentic texts or realia when possible.
- o) Activities should employ a variety of materials.

The activities that provided will influence the students' response and motivation. Thus, it is important to provide appropriate activities with the students' characteristics to fulfill the objective of the lesson by fulfilling the principles of good learning activities that mentioned above. Furthermore Brewster and Ellis (1991:51) add by mentioning 8 characteristics of activities appropriate for the young learners. They write in the diagram as follows.

In addition, Hutchinson and Waters (1987) explain that enjoyment is an important thing in the lesson. The lesson should make the students enjoy because enjoyment can engage students' mind. "This is an aspect of pedagogy that is taken for granted with children, but is too often forgotten with adults. It doesn't matter how relevant a lesson may appear to be; if it bores the learners, it is a bad lesson." (Hutchinson and Waters, 1987: 141)

c. Output

A successful teaching and learning can be determined by the output of the teaching and learning. It is in the term of how the teaching and learning process can achieve the goals and objectives of teaching and learning. The teaching and learning is successful when the goals and objectives of the lesson are achieved. According to Graves (2000) goals are the main purpose of the lesson and what outcomes that the teacher want be achieved after the lesson. Whereas objectives are the way of how the goals will be achieved. Those are related each other. Thus, if the objectives are achieved so the goals will be reached. For example the goal of English language learning is to be able to communicate in English and the objectives are by mastering the language through four skills. The output should relate to the goal and objectives.

3. The Criteria of Good Teaching and Learning

A good teaching and learning will be determined by the effectiveness of teaching and learning. The effective of teaching and learning will determine the quality of teaching and learning process. In general, James and Pollard (2006) mention 10 criteria of effective teaching and learning. The 10 criteria of effective teaching and learning will be mentioned as follows.

- a. The effective teaching and learning equips learners for life in its broadest sense. It means that learning should help the learners to develop their intellectual and prepare them to participate as the citizen. The learners' capacity to learn and to use thinking are promoted and assessed. This criterion is related to the output of the teaching and learning.
- b. The effective teaching and learning engages with valued forms of knowledge. It is the process of both how the teacher have to have a good understanding of the subject that will be taught and what is the best way to teach the subjects.

- c. The effective teaching and learning recognizes the importance of prior experience and learning. It means that the teacher should aware what the learners have been known so that the teacher can plan the next steps of learning. The teacher needs to recognize the learning difficulties and helps the learners to improve their learning.
- d. The effective teaching and learning requires the teacher to scaffold learning. It means that the teacher should provide the activities, structure of intellectual, social and emotional support to help the learners to learn. The teacher has to teach steps by steps and scaffold through the activities and classroom dialogue.
- e. The effective teaching and learning needs assessment to be congruent with learning. It means that assessment should be designed and implemented to asses both the process and output of learning that related to the objective of the teaching and learning.
- f. The effective teaching and learning promotes the active engagement of the learner. It means that the goal of the teaching and learning process is to help the learners promote their independence and autonomy. It is importance for the teacher to develop the learning awareness of the learners, explicit learning practices and positive learning.

- g. The effective teaching and learning fosters both individual and social processes and outcomes. It means that teaching and learning process should encourage the learners to make a good relationship with other. The learners have to learn how to communicate with others.
- h. The effective teaching and learning recognizes the significance of informal learning. The teacher should help the learners to build their informal learning. The informal learning means that the learners learn out of school.
- i. The effective teaching and learning depends on teacher learning. This criterion requires the teacher to learn continuously in order to develop their skills and knowledge. The teacher also should develop his/her roles in the classroom.
- j. The effective teaching and learning demands consistent policy frameworks with support for teaching and learning as their primary focus. This last criterion of effective teaching and learning is in the term the coherence and consistency of the policy. Thus, the teacher can create the appropriate environment to support the objective of teaching and learning.

A good teaching and learning also should facilitate the learners to learn. There are essential aspects for successful language teaching. Farrel and Jacobs (2010) mention eight essentials for successful second language teaching. They draw the eight aspects in a diagram as follows.

The teacher should aware of those essentials aspects of successful language teaching. Form the eight essentials aspects above; there are some points that should be noticed by the teacher.

- a. Language teaching today should help the learners to be autonomous learners. The teacher should help the learners to move from the teacher-centered to learner-centered.
- b. The teacher should understand the social nature of learning that language learning is to help the learners to communicate with others. Thus the learners have to learn to be cooperative with others.
- c. The implication of curricular integrated that the teacher should provide meaningful teaching and learning. It can be done by teaching based on the context.

- d. The teacher should help the learners to understand the purpose of the learning. Understanding the language learning means that the learners involve and comprehend what they learn.
- e. The teacher should aware of diversity will affect the teaching and learning. The background knowledge, sex, social class, learning styles and the like should be considered for planning the lesson.
- f. Language teaching today focus on the process of leaning. Language teaching not only look at the end-product of learning but also how the learners learn and expand their thinking skills.
- g. The alternative assessment focus on what the learners can do rather than what the learners cannot do. It can be in the form of learners' reflection, peer assessments and the like.
- h. The teacher should learn together with the learners and along with the fellows' teachers.

4. Games

Related to Longman dictionary, game, (in language teaching) an organized activity that usually has the following properties; a particular task or objective, a set of rules, competition between players, communication between players by spoken or written language. Games are often used as a fluency activity in communicative language teaching and humanistic method.

Games, especially instructional games are designed for helping the students acquire the skills of the language. Brown and Lewis and Harcleroad (1975) define that “an instructional game is a structured activity with set roles for plays in which two or more students interact to reach clearly designated instructional objectives.”

a. The Advantages of The Games

Many research that observe the effect of the games as the activities of learning have found the advantages of the games. For example, Brown (1975:295), a few of the findings from the fairly extensive program of the Center for Social Organization of Schools at Johns Hopkins University, explains the result.

- 1) Students are much more positive about games when they understand the instructor’s purpose in using them.
- 2) Simulation games can teach facts, concepts, and relationships as effectively as conventional instruction which has the same objective.
- 3) Both simulation and non simulation games are better than conventional instruction in producing greater learning.
- 4) Generally, games increase students’ motivation to learn. And there are strong indications that in both games and simulation activities, the competition encourages students to help each other with their schoolwork, especially students of different races or different sexes.
- 5) The most conspicuous contribution of games appears to be in the affective area, since games provide motivational support of learning and contribute in some cases to attitudinal changes.

According to Brewster and Ellis (1991:173) there are 10 advantages of using games in the teaching and learning. They write as follows.

- 1) They add variety to the range of learning situations.

- 2) They change the place of a lesson and help to keep pupils' motivation.
- 3) They 'lighten' more formal teaching and can help to renew pupils' energy.
- 4) They provide 'hidden' practice of specific language patterns, vocabulary and pronunciation.
- 5) They can help to improve attention span, concentration, memory, listening skill and reading skill.
- 6) Pupils are encouraged to participate; shy learners can be motivated to speak.
- 7) They increase pupil-pupil communication which provides fluency practice and reduce the domination of the class by the teacher.
- 8) It helps create a fun atmosphere and reduce the distance between teacher and pupils.
- 9) They can help reveal areas of weakness and the need for further language.
- 10) They can help to motivate and improve writing skills by providing a real audience context and purpose.

Games are very useful for the innovation of teaching and learning.

They help the teacher to create interesting activities especially for young learners. Games provide enjoyable activities that appropriate with the nature of young learners.

b. Playing Games in the Classroom

Games can be brought to the classroom as learning activities with the functions. The games can be put to the lesson when the teacher designing the lesson. The use of games in the classroom should be appropriate with the objective of the lesson. According to Brewster and Ellis (1991) there are four steps that should be noticed by the teacher when using games in the teaching and learning. The four steps will be explained as follows.

1) Giving instruction

Giving instruction is a crucial stage of using games. The purpose of using games will be achieved when the player well understand the rules of the games and how they can play the games. The teacher should keep the instructions short, clear and simple so that the player will quickly understand what they should do. To make the instructions are easily understood, the teacher can break down the instructions into some stages, give the instruction, show the example and use gestures.

2) Organizing the class

Commonly games are played by three ways: the team, pairs or groups. Those way of playing games need to be organized quickly to make the games run well. The teacher can divide the player and give them clear roles.

3) Playing the games

In this stage, the player should be taught the language use when playing the games. Make sure that the players follow the rules of the games and use the target language based on the objective of the lesson.

4) The teacher's roles

While the students are playing the games, the teacher acts as a monitor. The teacher monitors the students' do and the language they used. The teacher observes the students and makes a note for giving feedback. The teacher also can give more explanation if it is necessary to be given. Furthermore, Granger (1993) adds that the teacher should give a follow up to the students when the games are over.

B. Related Study

There have been many research conducted that deal with the quality of teaching and learning process and also the use of game. One of them is the research that done by Henny Purwansari (2011). The researcher used interactive activities such games and songs in the teaching and teaching learning process. She also provides media such pictures and cards. There are some results of the research.

1. The use of games, pair work and group work are effective to motivate the students to get involved in the classroom activities.
2. The use of media success to draw the students' attention on learning.
3. The use of appreciation, reward and punishment are effective to motivate the students more active in the class and minimize the students' disruptive behavior.
4. The use of classroom English could make the students familiar with English.

In addition, Yen-Hui Wang (2010) did a research and used communicative language games in the teaching and learning process. The results of the research can be seen as follows.

1. Games motivate the students to learn in much lesson, all respondents with 99% agreeing and only 1% disagreeing. The respondents also believed that games help make the lesson more interesting with 73% strongly agreeing and 27% agreeing.

2. Games provided repetition, memorization and initiation which motivate students' incentive to learn.
3. Games can cheer up the class and make language learning more pleasurable and easier to learn.
4. Games motivate students to become effective communicators in target language and help them use the language in a more spontaneous and natural manner.
5. Games can offer practice in all stages of learning such as in Presentation, Practice and Production.
6. Games supply the same dense use of language are more conventional drills which mainly give repeated practice on a language form during a limited period of time.
7. The results of the research also conclude that learning through processing creative game activities help the learners experience language use for the purpose of truly meaningful communication.
8. Learning through natural exposure and meaningful use of the target language while conducting communicative activities motivate learners to take more interest in language learning and assist them to develop learner autonomy.

C. Conceptual Framework

The English teaching and learning in the elementary school will be a burden for the students if the teachers still only transfer the materials in the textbook, translate the words, and present the materials in front of the class without using the media and do not aware of the characteristics of the students. This condition makes the students bored with the teaching and learning process. Thus, the teacher needs to create more varieties of teaching and learning activities which can attract the students and get the students' interest. The teacher needs to create the activities of teaching and learning that will make the students enjoy learning and helps them to easily understand what they learn. Furthermore the teacher should provide the comprehensible input with the supporting media and make sure that the goals and the objectives of language teaching and learning are achieved.

Games can be used for academic purposes. They can be brought to the classroom and help to achieve the objective of the lesson. In language learning, games can help the teacher to train both the students' accuracy and fluency. Games also help the teacher to provide communicative atmosphere by the communicative activity. Games help the students to be more communicative in learning. Communicative games are design for training the students' communicative skills. The games can support teaching the four skills. Commonly, these kinds of games are played collaboratively. They are usually played in pairs or in a group. One of the examples of game that belongs communicative games is 'find someone who'.

The students of elementary school are young learners. This means that they have their own characteristics as young learners. Mostly young learners like playing games. Thus, the use of games, especially both communicative games not only will attract the students' interest in learning the language but also will be very useful for teacher to achieve the goals and objectives of language teaching and learning. By using the games, the teacher can drill the language function and the students will learn the language function subconsciously. These kinds of games also will let the students practice the correct language. Thus every student will have a chance to practice the language when they play the game. The games will motivate the students to be more active. They will totally responsive both mentally and physically.

Furthermore, the use of communicative games also will support the teacher to achieve the goals and the objectives of language teaching and learning. Communicative games will give a chance to the students to interact and cooperate with their friends by playing in the group or in pairs. These games help to build self-confidence of the students to practice their language with their friend. The games enable the students to give instruction and respond properly to the message.

Teaching and learning will be meaningful if the students feel fun and totally involve in the teaching and learning process. Language learning will be successful if the students have a good understanding of the language learning. In addition, the goals and objectives of language teaching and learning will be achieved through appropriate activities, for example by using games as learning activities.

The conceptual framework of this research is drawn in the diagram as follows.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHOD

A. Type of Research

This research is a classroom action research. In this kind of research, the researchers reflect systematically on their practice, implement action to bring improvement in practice. Kemmis and McTaggart (1986) (from Burn, 1999:30) define the action research as follows.

Action Research is a form of collective self-reflective inquiry undertaken by participants in social situations in order to improve the rationality and justice of their own social or educational practices, as well as their understanding of these practices and the situations in which the practices are carried out.

Thus the action research focuses on improving the concrete and practical issue in the particular group or social community. The action research can be both qualitative and quantitative approach. In this research, the researcher used qualitative approach that offers descriptions, interpretations and also clarification of naturalistic contexts.

B. Setting of The Research

This research was done at SDN Mandapa II, especially at the grade V students in the first semester of academic year 2013-2014. This school is located at Jl. Protokol, Mandapa, Dawuan, Majalengka, West Java. It has 6 classrooms for grade I until grade VI. The English class is provided from grade IV until grade VI and this research focused on the grade V. The grade V consists of 22 students and most of them are female students. English teaching and learning in this school focus on enriching the vocabulary.

C. Data Collection Technique

The data were collected through four techniques. The techniques that were be used are explained as follows.

1. Observation

Observation was done to observe the whole teaching and learning process and also the students' involvement in the teaching learning process. It was done to get the data of the condition of teaching and learning process such as the activities of the students, the activities of the teacher, the used of the games, the classroom condition and field note. The observation was done with the collaborator.

2. Interview

The students and the teacher were interviewed to find out the influence of the techniques to the teaching and learning process. The interview was done in two ways. The first was an informal interview the respondents were asked direct questions related to the condition of teaching and learning. The second was the interview which was guided by interview questions that made before.

3. Documentation

Documentation was done to get the data of the students in the teaching and learning process. It was in the form of the data of the students such as the result of students' worksheet and students' note. It was also done by taking photos in the process of teaching and learning.

D. Instrument of Data Collection

The instruments of this research were the researcher herself, observation guides, notebook, interview guide, recorder and camera.

E. Data Analysis Technique

The data were analyzed in the qualitative way. In this research, the researcher analyzed the field note of observation and also the interview transcripts during the research. The researcher used method triangulation for validating the data by comparing the data of observation and interviews.

In this research, the researcher took the field note of what happened in the class during the lesson and kept supporting documents such as lesson plan and students worksheet. After that, the researcher interviewed the students to get their opinions and feeling about the implementation of the action. The researcher also interviewed the English teacher and the home teacher of grade V students to get their comments, perceptions, ideas and suggestions. The researcher compared the data of observation and interviews transcripts and then made conclusion.

F. Validity and Reliability of The Data

According to Burn (1999:161-162) there are five types of validity in the action research. For validating the research, in this research the researcher used the five types of validity. The five types of validating were as follows.

1. Democratic validity.

Democratic validity relates to the extent to which the research is truly collaborative and allows for the inclusion of multiple voices. In this research, the researcher collaborated with the teacher, observer and also the students. All of them were asked about the research and they all could offer their suggestion and comment.

2. Outcome validity

Outcome validity relates to the notion of action leading to outcomes that are successful within the research context. The researcher looked at the result of the research and the improvement based on the objective of the research.

3. Process validity

Process validity raises question about the process of conducting research. Thus, the research should be believable. The research were supported through some data source and done in 2 cycles.

4. Catalytic validity

Catalytic validity relates to the extent to which the research allows participants to deepen their understanding of the social realities of the context and how they can make change within it. In this research, both the teacher and the students were asked for their responses of the research.

5. Dialogic validity

Dialogic validity parallels the processes of peer review which are commonly used in academic research. This research collaborated with the teacher.

For checking that the data were valid, in this research the researcher used triangulation technique. Triangulation aims to gather multiple perspectives on the situation. The researcher used three kinds of triangulation. The three kinds of triangulation were as follows.

1. Time Triangulation

The time triangulation used was longitudinal time triangulation. In longitudinal time triangulation the researcher collected the data in the same object but in the different time.

2. Investigator Triangulation

The research was done with the teacher as the collaborator.

3. Method Triangulation

Method triangulation was used for comparing the observation data with the interview.

G. Design of The Research

This research was a classroom action research. It used the research model of Kemmis and Mc. Taggart, which used cycles that consist of planning, action and observation, and reflection.

The cycle is drawn by the spiral model of classroom action research.

Figure 4: Research model of Classroom action research by Kemmis and Mc. Taggart (taken from tatangmanguny's blog on 2nd May, 2013, at 23:21)

Each cycle consists of three steps, those were planning, action and observation, and reflection. The cycle was done until there was an improvement of the quality of teaching and learning through process approach. These were the three steps:

1. Planning

The planning section includes four steps.

- a. Interviewing both teacher and students. Collecting the information by observing teaching and learning process, discussing the results with the teacher and sharing opinion.
- b. Making observation checklist of students' activities in the teaching and learning process.
- c. Designing the lesson plan include choosing the technique of teaching and learning, and creating the activities in the classroom.
- d. Making media of teaching and learning.

2. Action and Observation

In this step the research was done based on the lesson plan. In this step the researcher also observed the students' activity in the teaching and learning process.

3. Reflection

Reflection was a discussion between the researcher with the teacher as the collaborator and also the students. In this step the result of observation was analyzed and reflected to plan the next cycle.

H. Definition of Terms

There were two technical terms that were found in this research. The two technical terms were defined as follows.

1. Games

This research will use games for students learning activities. Brown and Lewis and Harcleroad (1975) define that "an instructional game is a structured activity with set roles for plays in which two or more students interact to reach clearly designated instructional objectives.” The games that will be used are communicative games. According to Brewster and Ellis (1991, communicative games use activity-based approach. These kinds of games build an atmosphere for the students to communicate with others. The games played in pairs or in a group and the player collaborated with others. The games played both in competitive and collaborative. There were, at least seven games that used in this research. The games were as follows.

a. Bandit and Sheriff.

It was a kind of movement game and need a large room or field. It was useful for helping the teacher to minimize the boredom of the students because the students had to think and move quickly and then respond correctly. The students work in group and played competitively with other group.

b. Food in the Middle

It was a kind of dice game. It was useful for helping the students to practice the language for asking and giving something. In this game, each student had a chance for asking for something. Thus, the students communicated each others.

c. Whisper Race

It was useful for correcting the vocabulary and trained the students' listening skill. It was played in the group.

d. Hangaroo

It was a kind of guessing game. It was useful for checking the students' spelling. The teacher drew some blank boxes in the board and gave simple clues. The teacher asked the alphabet and the students who had the alphabet might put the alphabet in the blank box that was pointed by the teacher. The game played from the simple instruction to the complex one.

e. Clock Race

It was a movement game in the team. Thus, this game was played in the group. It was useful for responding quickly to tell the time. It needed large room or field. Playing this game, the students not only cooperated in the group to respond the time but also they had a competition with other group to guess the time.

f. Monster waltz

It was a kind of drawing and coloring game. It was useful for training the students to describe something. The imagination of the students was stimulated because the students got a short description and they drew it. It was played in the group.

g. Survey.

Survey is commonly used for communicative purposes. The students did the survey and the teacher set the condition. It was done in pairs. The students moved for asking their friends and practice their language. Thus, it was useful for giving the students a chance for practicing their language without feeling that there was someone who supervises them. In this research, the survey game was played more than one time in the six meetings.

2. The Quality of Teaching and Learning

The quality of teaching and learning process is affected by three aspects of teaching and learning. The three aspects is input, process and output. There are some components in the three aspects of teaching and learning. The researcher determined the quality of English teaching and learning process through two ways. First, the researcher investigated the problems that affected by components of teaching and learning and then saw the effects to determine the quality of teaching and learning. Second, the researcher implemented the actions by improving some components of teaching and learning and then found out the effects to the students' learning to determine the quality of teaching and learning.

CHAPTER IV

RESEARCH FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

A. Reconnaissance

There were two steps done in reconnaissance. The first step was identification of the problem and the second one was determining the action to solve the problem. Those two steps will be explained as follows.

1. Identification of The Problem

Before doing the action, the researcher did the observation to find out the problem in the process of English teaching and learning of grade V. She interviewed the teacher who became the collaborator and also the students. The interviews were carried out two times, on April 29, 2013 and July 31, 2013. The classroom observation was conducted on July 31, 2013. To give a clear description of classroom observation, the vignette of teaching and learning process is presented below.

Ketika R dan T masuk kelas, siswa masih asyik bermain. T berkata pada para S "Ayeuna pelajaran Bahasa Inggris heluanya." S duduk dan menyiapkan buku catatan masing-masing. R duduk di kursi belakang dan T berdiri di depan kelas.

T menyapa S dengan ucapan "Good morning. How are you?" S menjawab, "Good morning, I'm fine." T bertanya, "Entos ngadoa teu acan?" S menjawab, "Entos". T memperkenalkan R pada siswa secara singkat. Setelah itu T menyiapkan S untuk belajar dengan berkata, "Sok ayeuna siapkeun buku catatan Bahasa Inggrisna." S yang sudah menyiapkan buku catatannya menjawab, "Entos, Bu." T membuka-buka LKS lalu menulis beberapa kosakata di papan tulis. Setelah selesai menulis di papan tulis T berkata, "Sok ditulis ya yang ada di papan tulis." S menulis di buku catatan masing-masing. Ketika S menulis, T berjalan mendekati R lalu meminta R untuk melanjutkan pembelajaran.

T berkata, "Teh, punten nya, ieu kelas mangga diisi ku teteh. Abi bade ka kelas VI sareng bade legalisir ka sakola." R menanyakan pada T rencana pembelajaran seperti apa dan apa saja yang harus diajarkan. T meminta agar R menanyakan arti kosakata yang ada di papan tulis pada S. Jika S tidak tahu maka S diminta untuk membuka kamus. T meminta R untuk mengikuti aktivitas yang sudah ada di LKS. Sebelum meninggalkan kelas T berkata pada S, "Sekarang belajar Bahasa Inggrisnya sama Bu Yesi ya." T meninggalkan ruang kelas V.

(The students were still playing when the teacher and the researcher entered the classroom. The teacher said, "Now, we are going to learn English first." The students sat and prepared their own notebook. The researcher sat on the student's seat in the back row of the class. The teacher stood in front of the class.

The teacher greeted the students by saying, "Good morning, how are you?" The students answered, "Good morning, I am fine." The teacher asked the students, "Have you prayed?" the students answered "Yes." The teacher introduced the researcher to the students. Then the teacher let the students for learning by saying, "Okay, now, please prepare your own notebook." The teacher opened the LKS and then wrote some words on the blackboard. After that, she said, "Write down what was written in the board." The students wrote in their own notebook while the teacher was walking forward to the researcher and asked the researcher to continue the teaching and learning. The researcher asked the teacher what should be taught. The teacher said that the researcher should ask the students to find the meaning of all the words on the board. Then the researcher had to follow the activity in the LKS. Before left the classroom, the teacher said, "You will learn English with Bu Yesi.")

(Field Note4, Appendix D)

Based on the vignette above, it can be concluded that English teaching and learning was not interesting. The teacher only followed the activities in the LKS and did not create other activities, such as games. The students were asked to write down the vocabulary and find the meaning in the dictionary. Then they had to follow the activities in the LKS. The learning activities were too monotonous on writing and doing exercises. These conditions made the students had low interest and motivation in learning. In addition, the condition of English teaching and learning also could be seen in the following interviews.

R	: Kumaha A, belajar Bahasa Inggris teh? (How about the English lesson?)
S1	: Nya kitu lah. (Just like that)

(Interview 1, appendix E)

The focus of English teaching and learning in SDN Mandapa II was the pronunciation and translation of the words only. The students never learned how to use their English for speaking. The teacher used English in the classroom only for greeting the students due to the reason that many of them did not understand English utterances. In addition, related to the interview transcript 3 in Appendix E, the English teaching and learning lack the used of media except the dictionary for guiding the students to find the meaning of the words. The condition is illustrated in the following interview transcript.

R	: Pami Pengajaran Bahasa Inggris di Kelas V itu biasanya juga kumaha sih, Bu, pami di dideu? (How about the English teaching and learning in the grade V?)
T	: Nya ari kelas V nu ayeuna mah da aktif nya, ter sapertos kelas VI nu ayeuna, janten nya paling permainan. Paliing materi heula nya materi. Ari sabenernya mah cuman misalna dikasih materi, dilafalkeun kitu dieja, cara nyebutkeuna kumaha, di eja na kumaha. Lebih fokus ka pengejahanna, pelafalan katana. (The students of grade V now are active, not the same as the students of grade VI, so the teaching and learning can be carried out by playing the games. In the field, the students had the materials, they had to pronounce and spell it. The English teaching and learning focused on the spelling and pronouncing the words)
R	: Pami kondisi siswa teh kumaha, nya Bu. Seuseurna teh siswa teh tipe na teh kumaha? Mayoritas anak itu nu kumaha. Tina type belajar. (How about the students, Bu? I mean the students characteristics and their learning styles.)
T	: Seuseramah sih emang aktif. Tapi aktif na teh benten-benten. Emang aktif leres misalana ehm bener memahami teh. Kadang aya nu sok sctif oge aktif pak celetuk bae. (Most of the students are active. But not all of the students are active for learning; they are active for playing and joking.)
R	: Hehe...aktif sakarep kitu nya. (Hehe...they are active for themselves)

Based on the condition that presented in the table above, there were some problems that influenced the quality of English teaching and learning. The problems were classified into some classification such as the problems on the students (S), teacher (T), teaching technique (TT), materials (Mt) and media (Md). This study aimed for improving the quality of English teaching and learning by using communicative game, consequently, there were some of the more urgent problems related to the influence to the quality of English teaching and learning that should be solved. They would be presented in the table below.

2. Determining The Action to Solve The Problems

After indentifying the problems, the researcher formulated the actions to overcome the problems and improve the quality of English teaching and learning process. There were three actions that were planned as the result of the discussion.

- a. Using communicative games during the practice stage as the main activities to maintain the students' participation in learning English.

- b. Using various media to gain the students' interest during the teaching and learning process and help them to easily understand the materials.
- c. Using songs to make the students more fun and familiar with English.

The use of communicative games was proposed. It would develop the positive atmospheres in learning. To avoid the students' boredom, the different communicative games with the different topic would be applied.

B. Reports of the Actions

1. Reports on Cycle 1

The teaching and learning process of Cycle 1 was conducted in the three meetings. In each meeting, the communicative games were applied in the practice stage of teaching and learning. The used of communicative games were accompanied with other supported actions to improve the quality of English teaching and learning.

a. Planning

After formulating the field problems and also designing the actions, the researcher made the course grid. The course grid can be seen in the appendix. It was consulted both to the consultant and also to the English teacher in SDN Mandapa II. The different skills were selected for Cycle 1. The listening and speaking skills were chosen. Then the standard competencies and also basic competencies of the first semester of the grade V were selected. The standard of competence and basic competence of 1.1, 1.2 and 2.2 for listening and speaking were chosen. Based on the basic competencies, the indicators and also the objectives of the teaching and learning were formulated.

After that, the learning activities that would be used in the classroom were selected. The communicative games were chosen related to the skills in the teaching and learning. The communicative games would be implemented in the practice stage in each meeting that supported with other activities during the teaching and learning process.

The activities in the teaching and learning process aimed at solving the problems that had been identified. Those are presented in the table below.

Table 3: The Solvable Field Problems and the Solution

No	Problems	Solution
1	The English teaching and learning were not interesting and monotonous.	Implementing communicative games.
2	The English teaching and learning lacked fun activities.
3	The teaching and learning lacked the use of media.	The use of pictures and realia.
4	The students had a low motivation in learning English.	Implanting the communicative games.
5	The students had difficulties in practicing their English.	The use of classroom English.
6	The students were anxious to use English.
7	The students had a lack of model of speaking English.

A communicative game would be used in each meeting related to the topic. There were three communicative games in Cycle 1, Bandits and Sheriffs, Clock Race and Food in the Middle. In addition, as the speaking activity, the students would do a survey game. The rules of the games could be seen in the appendix.

The lesson plans were made as the guidance for the researcher to teach in the process of teaching and learning. The technique used in the process of teaching and learning was PPP (presentation, practice, production). In the presentation stage, the students would be introduced to the vocabulary and the expression related to the topic by using media and a song. Then, in the practice stage, the students played the game. The last, in the production stage, the students did the follow up of the games related to the skills, such as work in group, work in pairs and did a survey.

The actions that would be implemented in each meeting of Cycle 1 were formulated as follows.

1) Meeting I

In the first meeting the researcher and the teacher planned to teach about 'things in the classroom'. The activities applied in the meeting 1 are presented below.

- a) Using 'Bandits and Sheriffs' game.
- b) Using realia in the presentation.
- c) Conducting listening activities to check the students' comprehension.
- d) Using classroom English to make the students familiar with English.

2) Meeting II

In the second meeting the researcher and the teacher planned to teach about 'Time'. The activities applied in the meeting II are presented below.

- a) Using 'Clock Race' game.
- b) Using realia in the presentation.
- c) Conducting listening activities to check the students' comprehension.
- d) Using classroom English to make the students familiar with English.

3) Meeting III

In the third meeting the researcher and the teacher planned to teach about 'Favorite food'. The activities applied in the meeting III are presented below.

- a) Using 'Food in the Middle' game.
- b) Using pictures and a song 'can I have' in the presentation.
- c) Conducting speaking activities by doing a survey and presenting the result of the survey to check the students' performance.
- d) Using classroom English to make the students familiar with English.

b. Implementing and Observing

Cycle 1 was conducted in three meetings. The researcher taught the materials during the implementation and the teacher become the observer. The students learned different topic in each meeting. The implementation was elaborated as follows.

1) Meeting I

The first meeting was held on August 21, 2013. It was started on 09.15 until 11.00. The students seemed ashamed when the researcher entered the classroom. They prepared their notebook and keep silent. There were only some students who were still talked with their friend. Then, after the researcher greeted them by singing a song, the students looked enthusiast although some students forgot how to sing the song. But they could follow their friends who remembered the song that was introduced last week. It can be seen in the field note as follows.

Pukul 09.15 R memasuki ruang kelas V. S sudah nampak siap belajar meskipun masih ada beberapa siswa yang masih mengobrol dengan temannya. R menggeser posisi meja T ke tengah dan S menjadi lebih tenang. S diam dan menyiapkan buku catatan mereka. R membuka kelas dengan mengucapkan salam dan juga menyapa S dengan bernyanyi. S antusias menanggapi.

(At 09.15 the researcher entered the classroom. The students seemed ready to learn although there were some students still talked with their friends. The researcher moved the position of teacher desk to the middle, in front of the class. The students kept silent and prepared their notebook. Then, the researcher opened the class by saying salam and greeted the students by singing a song. The students seemed enthusiastic.)

(Field note 5, Appendix D)

The class started by greeting and saying the pray. The researcher asked the student to lead the pray, but the students seemed confused how to lead the pray. The researcher gave them a chance to lead the pray but no one wanted to lead the pray. They seemed ashamed and anxious until the researcher motivated them and said that she would teach them how to lead the pray. Then one of the students was appointed to lead the pray and he wanted to try to lead the pray. After that, the researcher checked the attendance list. Some students still made mistake in pronounce 'present'. Then the researcher corrected their pronunciation. To get the students attention and check their concentration, the researcher let them play simple game 'Simon Says'. The students seemed happy with the simple game and they tried to focus. The field notes below show the opening parts of the first meeting.

R membuka kelas dengan mengucapkan salam dan juga menyapa S dengan bernyanyi. S antusias menanggapi. R meminta S untuk berdoa dan memberikan kesempatan pada S untuk memimpin doa. Mulanya S malu-malu dan tak berani memimpin doa dengan menggunakan bahasa Inggris namun setelah R memotivasi dan berkata akan mengajari S untuk memimpin doa dengan menggunakan Bahasa Inggris, salah satu S berani memimpin doa. R membisikkan S apa yang harus diucapkan. R mengecek presensi dan memberikan game ringan (simon says) untuk menarik perhatian S. S nampak senang dengan game ringan yang diberikan.

(The researcher opened the class by saying salam and greeted the students by singing a song. The students seemed enthusiastic. The researcher asked the students to lead the pray. For the first time, the students seemed ashamed and no one wanted to lead the pray by using English. Yet the researcher motivated the students and said that she would teach them to lead the pray by using English, one of the students wanted to lead the pray. The researcher whispered what should be said to lead the pray. After that the researcher checked the roll and gave a simple game (simon says) to get the students' attention. The students seemed happy with the game.)

(Field note 5, Appendix D)

The vocabulary related to the topic was introduced by using the realia to gain the students' involvement. The researcher asked the name of the stationeries by using, "What is this?" The students answered by using Indonesian. Then, she asked, "Great, what this is in English?" Some students guessed the name and others opened their dictionaries. Then, she introduced the vocabulary by using 'Take me...'. The students paid attention to her explanation. After that, the researcher pronounced the words with the expression while showing the realia and then asked the students to repeat after her. She drilled the students by showing the realia and the students said "Take me..." related to the realia.

Afterward, the students were divided into two groups. They were asked to count one and two in a series. Then, they did the researcher's instruction. They made a formation for playing 'Bandits and Sheriffs'. Some students still confused with the group and what should they do. There still also some students who wanted to change their group members. The researcher said, "Well, group one is bandits, make a line, here. And group two is sheriffs, make a line, here," and the like. She told the rules and gave them example of how to play the game. She also checked the students' understanding by saying, "Do you understand?" Then, the students played the game enthusiastically. It can be seen from the figure as follows.

After playing the game, the students were asked to sit down in their seat, but the students still made noisy. The researcher sing ‘sit down’ song. For the first time the students heard the song, they seemed confused what the meaning of the song, and then the researcher used gestures and the students understood what the researcher’s mean by singing the song. It was the effective way to make the students listened to the instruction. Then, the researcher asked the students “Are you happy?” The students did not respond the researcher’s question, they seemed confused. She repeated her questions followed by Indonesian and the students said ‘Yes’ enthusiastically. The researcher let the students sing ‘If You Happy’ song with gestures. The students could not sing the song because they did not know the song, but they followed the researcher’s gestures enthusiastically.

Afterward, the students worked in group of four. They would respond to the simple instruction from the other groups by taking the pictures. The group who had a chance to give instruction was free to make their own instruction by mentioning the stationery. Thus, the students could develop their initiation for making the instruction. After the students respond the instruction in the group, they had a worksheet for checking their comprehension of responding to the instruction. The worksheet distributed to the students. They had to listen to the instruction and then put the stationeries cards in their worksheet based on what they heard. The situation can be seen in the figures as follows.

After the students did all the activities, they were asked what the difficulties when they played the game and also did the exercise. The students said that they had not problems. Then the researcher reviewed the

2) Meeting II

The second meeting held on Wednesday, September 25, 2013. It was started on 07.20 until 09.00. The students seemed happy when the researcher entered the classroom. It can be seen as follows.

Begitu R memasuki ruang kelas beberapa S nampak bersorak, "Asyik Bahasa Inggris dulu sama Miss Yesi, nanti mainan lagi ya Miss." R menjawab, "Iya sok, nanti mainan lagi. Sekarang siap belajar? Are you ready?" S menjawab "yes" dan langsung menyiapkan diri untuk belajar. (When the researcher entered the classroom, the students shouted, "Hurray, The English lesson will be with Miss Yesi, we will play the game again, Will not we, Miss?" The researcher said, "Yes, we will play a game. Are you ready for learning English now? Are you ready?" The students replied, "Yes" and then they prepared themselves for learning English)

(Field note 6, Appendix D)

The class started by greeting and praying. There were only 13 students in the classroom because 8 of the students of grade V were going to Pramuka Camp. There also two students of grade VI who did not go to the Pramuka Camp. The researcher said salam and greeted the students by singing a song. The students replied the song enthusiastically except the students of grade VI. They seemed confused. The researcher motivated them to learn and said that they could follow the gestures. After the lesson started by singing a song then the researcher asked one of the students to lead the prayer. In the second meeting, the students were more courageous than in the first meeting. It could be seen that in the second meeting when the students were asked to lead the pray, they were two students raised their hand for trying to lead the pray although they still seemed worried while raising their hand. After the students said the pray, the researcher checked the roll to make them familiar practicing English. Then, the researcher reviewed the last materials by asking some questions to the students. The students remembered the last materials and they answered the questions about the last materials and the vocabulary used. After that, the researcher led the students to the next materials by asking the students for guessing something in the bag. The situation of getting started can be seen in the following field notes.

Kemudian R menuntun S untuk masuk pada materi yang akan dipelajari. "Do you know what this is?" tanya R sambil mengangkat tas. "Tas, miss," jawab S. "In English, please," pinta R. "case, Miss, hehe," jawab salah satu S. "No," tanggap R. "Bag. Miss," jawab S yang lain. "Yes, great. This is my magic bag. Tas ajaib," ucap R. S tertarik. R bertanya ada apa dalam magic bag dan S menjawab alat-alat tulis dalam bahasa Inggris. "No no no...it can tell us the time," jelas R. S nampak bingung memahami bahasa Inggris. "Time. Do you know time?" tanya R sambil menunjuk ke pergelangan tangan. "Jam," jawab salah satu S. "Yes, very good," tanggap R sambil mengeluarkan jam dinding. "Well, what is it?" tanya R. "Jam dinding," jawab S. "Yes, but in English?" tanya R. "Clock, Miss," jawab salah satu S dengan pelafalan 'clok'. "Okay great. But say clock, not klok apalagi cilok," ucap R yang membuat S tertawa.

(Then, the researcher led the students to the materials that would be learned. "Do you know what this is?" the researcher asked the students while showing her bag. "Tas, Miss," answered the students. "In English, please," said the researcher. "Case, Miss, hehe," answered one of the students. "No," replied her. "Bag, Miss," answered another student. "Yes, great. This is my bag, magic bag," said the researcher. The students seemed interested. The researcher asked the students for guessing what good was in the bag. The students guessed by mentioning the stationeries that they learned last meeting. "No no no...It can tell us the time," said the researcher. The students seemed confused for understanding the English utterances. "Time. Do you know time?" asked the researcher while pointing to her arm. "Jam," one of the students guessed. "Yes, very good," the researcher replied while taking the clock. "Well, what is this?" the researcher asked. "Jam dinding," the students said. "Yes, but in English?" said the researcher. "Clock, Miss," one of the students answered by pronouncing /clok/. "Okay, great. But say /klok/, not /clok/ or /cilok/ the researcher said and the students laughed.

(Field note 6, Appendix D)

The vocabulary items related to the topic were introduced. The materials were explained by using the realia and pictures to gain the students involvement. For checking the students' understanding, the researcher went around the class and asked the time to the students one by one by showing the clock. Some students still misunderstood about how to use 'a half' and 'a quarter' in telling the time. Some students also still could not tell the time in Indonesian. The materials were too difficult for the students. Thus, the researcher needed more time to drill them how to tell the time.

Afterward, the students were divided into two groups for playing 'Clock Race' game. They counted one and two in a series. But, as usual, there were some students who did not want to play in a group with several students. Then, the researcher made them sure that they could play collaboratively with all members of the group.

The function of this game was for responding the time. Since this movement game needs a large place for playing it, so the researcher let the students play in the school yard. The students were asked to make a line in the group and walked together to the yard. The researcher shouted, "Let's get in" by gestures. The students made a line and followed the researcher. Before the game was played, the rules were explained. For making sure that the students understood the rules, the researcher gave them example for playing the game. The researcher remembered and motivated them to focus and concentration. Then, the students played the game enthusiastically. They were competition each other for telling the time. It motivated the students for becoming the winner of the game. It can be seen in the following figure.

When the students played the game, some of them were still confused about how to tell the time because they had not really understood the concept of how to tell the time. Thus, the students played the game two series. In the second series the students played the game, most of them could tell the time well. The game ended by singing 'If You Happy'. After played the game, the researcher showed the time and asked the students, "Is it ten o'clock?" the students answered by yes or no.

After that, the students did the follow up activity. Each student had a picture of a clock and they had to mention the time based on the picture. It was an effective way for checking the students understanding in telling the time because they had worked individually for telling the time. The researcher went around the class and only helped the students who needed more explanation. They asked the researcher to check their worked of telling the time and most of them could tell the time correctly. After that, the students got worksheet of listening activity.

After the students did all learning activities, they were asked what the difficulties of the lesson. They said that the materials were too difficult. They were confused about how to tell the time. But, playing the game helped how to tell the time. It can be seen in the following interviews transcript.

R	:	Tadi gimana belajarna? (How was the lesson today?)
S11	:	Asyik (It was interesting)
R	:	Susah nggak memahami jam? (Was it difficult for understanding the time?)
S11	:	Muhun (Yes, it was)
R	:	Setelah main game, ngerti cara nyebutkeun jam? (After you played the game, did you understand how to tell the time?)
S11	:	Ngerti (Yes, I did)
R	:	Jadi, game tadi ngebanu jadi lebih ngerti ke materi? (So the game helped you to understand the materials?)
S11	:	Muhun (Yes, it was)
R	:	Kumaha game na tadi? (How was the game today?)
S12	:	Seru (It was interesting)
R	:	Ngartos teu belajarna? (Do you understand what have you learned?)
S12	:	Ngartos, ku permainan sareng ningali jam. (Yes, I do. I understand by playing the game and looking to the clock.)
		S11, S12 : Students R : Researcher (Interview 5, Appendix E)

From the interview transcript above, it can be concluded that the communicative game helped the students to comprehend the materials. In addition the communicative game that played competitively was effective for motivating the students to be more active.

3) Meeting III

The third meeting was held on Wednesday, September 4, 2013 from 07.30-09.00. The students were still playing when the bell rang. But after the researcher entered the class, the students directly prepared themselves for learning. They seemed enthusiastic for learning English. The situation can be seen in the following field notes.

R masuk kelas, S masih asyik bermian dengan teman-temannya. "Asyik Miss Yesi Bahasa Inggris," ucap salah satu S yang langsung duduk di tempat duduknya. "Miss nanti mainan lagi ya?" tanya S. "Yes," jawab R. "Are you ready for studying English. Siap belajar bahasa Inggris nggak nih?" tanya R menarik perhatian. "Yes," jawab S. "Okay, let's start, Assalamu'alaikum warrahmatullahi wabarakatuh," Sapa R.

(The researcher entered the classroom while the students were still playing. "Hurray, Miss Yesi," one of the student said while sitting in the seat. "Miss, We will play a game, right?" the student asked. "Yes," the researcher answered. "Are you ready for studying English? Siap belajar Bahasa Inggris nggak, nih?" the researcher asked the students for getting attention. "Yes," the students replied. "Okay, let's start, Assalamu'alaikum warrahmatullahi wabarakatuh," the researcher greeted the students)

(Field note 7, Appendix D)

The lesson started by salam and singing 'Good Morning' song and then added by singing 'Hallo Hallo How Are You'. Before the learning activities were started, one of the students lead the pray. In this meeting, there were more students who raised their hand for leading the pray than last meeting. The researcher gave a chance to the students who raised their hand firstly than others. Then the researcher called the students' name for checking the roll. After that, the students reviewed what they have learned last week by checking their worksheet. The researcher asked the students to write their work in the blackboard. Many of them wanted to wrote their work on the blackboard.

After reviewing the material, the students were introduced by the vocabulary related to the topic through 'Can I have' song. The students guessed the name of the food in Indonesian and English. Then they sang together based on the pictures. The pronunciation was checked by pointing the students to pronounce the word individually. After that the students were divided into three groups for playing the game. The students seemed happy when the researcher let them play the game. They shouted, "Hurray." They counted one, two, and three in a series.

The rules of the game were explained especially how to use the dice in the game. The example of how to play the game was also demonstrated. Three of the students were asked for playing the game to check their understanding for playing the game. The researcher also checked again the students' understanding of using the dice by asking to whom they might give the food if there was a star in the dice and the like. After all the rules were clear, the students started playing the game. They practiced asking for and giving something and the researcher observing them. The situation can be seen in the figure as follows.

Figure 9: The students are practicing the expression of asking for and giving things by playing 'Food in the middle' game.

The students played the game enthusiastically until they did not want to end the game. But, immediately the researcher sang 'Sit Down' song. Thus, the students sang the song too while going to their seat. They also asked their friends who were not in their seat by singing the 'Sit Down' song. It was the effective way for getting their attention.

After the students played the game, the researcher reviewed the game by giving the students some questions of what have they learned in the game. Then, the students made a group of three for doing role play 'in the restaurant'. Each student had own role and then they did role play. The students practiced their English and the researcher observed them. They loved for doing role play. Some students sang 'Hallo, How Are You' song before the researcher greeted them by the song. The students started to be familiar with how the researcher started the class. Then, the student lead the pray. Before starting the lesson, the researcher checked the roll. Alhamdulillah, the students were complete, there were no one absent.)

(Field Note 8, Appendix D)

In the first meeting of Cycle 2, before starting the new materials, the researcher explained the additional rules of English lesson. One of the rules that the researcher made was providing the students’ achievement board and English stars. The aimed was for motivating the students in learning English. The researcher told the students that she provided the stars as the reward for the certain students, who were active and could learn well. They should collect the stars and in the end of Cycle 2, they would get a prize from the researcher. The students seemed enthusiast and were motivated to get the stars. It can be seen in the following field note.

R menerangkan peraturan baru di kelas dengan adanya papan prestasi S untuk memotivasi S. S antusias ingin mendapat bintang. Salah satu S berkata, “Asyik ada bintang-bintangnya. Yang kemarin-kemarin berprestasi dapat bintang juga nggak, Miss?” R menanggapi, “Yang dapat bintangnya mulai hari ini ya.” “Aku mau dapat bintang, Miss,” ucap beberapa S sambil mengangkat tangan. “Okay, you have to be good learners. Jadi pembelajar yang baik ya...” Beberapa siswa bertanya kriteria yang akan mendapat bintang. R menjelaskan beberapa criteria siswa yang layak mendapat bintang.

(The researcher explained the new rule that there was students’ achievement board in the classroom for motivating the students. The students were enthusiastic to get the stars. “Hurray there are stars. Were the good students in the last three meeting get the stars too?” one of the students asked the researcher. Then the researcher replied, “The stars will be given starting from this meeting.” “I want to get the stars,” some of the students shouted while raising their hand. “Okay, you have to be good learners.” Then, some of the students asked the researcher the criteria of the students who would get the stars. The researcher explained some criteria of the students that would get the stars.)

(Field Note 8, Appendix D)

The researcher reviewed the materials by asking the students some questions related to the last materials. The students actively answered the researcher's questions. After reviewing the materials, the students were led to the new materials. They got some questions about job and then were shown some pictures. They mentioned the job based on the pictures in Indonesian, but the researcher asked them to mention the job in English. Some students guessed the name of the job in English. After that, they were introduced to the vocabulary by using the expression "Hi, I'm Susan. I'm a teacher. Look he is my father, he is a farmer." The researcher introduced the job while showing the pictures. Then the students were trained to pronounce the vocabulary with the expression by following the researcher's utterances. They studied the expression while drilling the pronunciation. After that they put the name of the job based on the picture in the blackboard.

Afterwards, the students were prepared for playing 'Whisper Race' game. They had to be divided into three groups. In Cycle 1, the students groups were made by counting in series but in Cycle 2 the students were free to make the groups by choosing the group members they wanted. It was done for encourage the students' involvement in the game and made them cooperate well in the group. Then, the students followed the researcher's instruction to make certain formation for playing the game. They moved their seat as the researcher's instruction. Three sets of job cards were put in front of the class. The rules of the game were explained.

The researcher made sure that the students understood the rules by giving them an example of how to play the game. The students in each group who sat in the back row would get a word and a sentence from the researcher. After the researcher shouted “Go!” the race began. The students whispered the message to their friend who sat in front of them until to the last students who sat in the front. But there was one group that still misunderstood of what they should do. He whispered to one of his friend and then his friend run to take the card. Because of this, the researcher stopped the game. She explained again what they should do and gave them example once more. After that, they repeated the game. The researcher whispered a new message and then shouted “Go”. The game ran well. The last students who got the message took the card based on what they heard and then shouted, “I got the card.” The researcher checked the students who got the card whether they took the correct card or not by asking what they heard. Mostly the students of each group took the correct cards but some of them still got the wrong message. For example the researcher whispered, “She is a doctor.” The students took the correct card but they said “He is a doctor” or “It is a doctor”. Thus, the winners of the game were the students who could mention the correct message and also took the correct cards. The students played the game enthusiastically. They also could correct their friends’ utterances in the second series of playing the game when they mention the different message as they got. The figure of the students when played the game can be seen as follows.

In addition, story helped the researcher for gaining the students interest. The students loved and enjoyed listening to the story.

c. Reflection

In Cycle 2, the communicative games played in two series with modification. In each meeting, the different communicative game was used followed by different follow up activities related to the language skills.

The implementation of communicative games in Cycle 2 was believed to be successful for improving the quality of English teaching and learning process in some aspects. There were no problems found when the students played the communicative game. The used of communicative games also did not make the students bored in learning. The pictures that used in the presentation and in the communicative games helped the students to easily memorize the vocabulary and the meaning. Moreover, the used of stars as reward were successful for motivating the students to be more active and totally involved in the learning activities.

In addition, the used of story in the teaching and learning process was useful for getting the students interests in learning English. And the used of song in learning helped the students familiar with English and made fun atmosphere in learning. The students did not feel bored to learning by using song. It can be seen in the following interview transcript.

(I could understand the materials because the repetition. Moreover, the games were played in two series. So the materials were often repeated, by and by I could remember the materials.
S26, S27 : Students R: Researcher (Interview 11, Appendix E)

From the interview transcript above, it can be concluded that the students were happy with the communicative game because it assisted them to learn English. The games helped the students to more understand the materials through repetitive activities. In addition, since they loved the game, they felt free to practice English in the game. They also did not feel bored for learning by using the games.

In conclusion, there were some improvements dealing with the students' participation, motivation as well as the students' understanding of English. Thus, both the researcher and the teacher decided to stop the Cycle as the improvements were considered sufficient.

C. General Finding

Both in Cycle 1 and 2, the implementation of communicative games and the supporting actions were successful to improve the quality of English teaching and learning process. As the result there were changes that occurred during the implementation of the actions. The summary of changes that happened before and after the actions can be seen in the table as follows.

All the factors led the students get difficulties in learning English. The problems influenced the quality of English teaching and learning process.

After the actions were implemented, the students tended to be active and enthusiastic in the process of English teaching and learning.

The communicative games created fun learning activities and good atmosphere of learning so the students felt happy and totally involved the lesson.

As the final reflection, both the researcher and the teacher discussed the result of this research. Both of them agreed that the implementation of actions were successful to improve the quality of English teaching and learning process in some aspects. In the other hand, the objective of the research was achieved. Therefore, after the result of Cycle 2 has shown a good improvement of the quality of English teaching and learning, they decided to stop the cycle.

D. Research Discussion

From the results of interview transcripts and observations in the reconnaissance stage, there were a lot of problems found in the process of English teaching and learning that influenced the quality of English teaching and learning. The students' had a lot of problems because of inappropriate teaching techniques. The students had a low motivation in learning. They got many difficulties in understanding English. They also could not communicative in English, except "Good morning" and "I'm fine". The English teaching and learning also lacked the use of media. In the other word, the quality of English teaching and learning was low.

To overcome the problems that influenced the quality of English teaching and learning process, the researcher implemented some actions.

The main actions were applying the communicative games in the practice stage. The communicative game was chosen because it provided the students with a lot of English practices. It also gave positive atmosphere in learning and effective learning environment.

The implementation of communicative games was combined with other supporting actions, such as using various media, using song, using story, giving the follow up activities of the games based on the learning skills. All of these solutions aimed for improving the quality of English teaching and learning process.

The reflection of Cycle 1 and Cycle 2 showed that the use of communicative games and the accompanying actions was successful for improving the quality of English teaching and learning in some aspects of teaching and learning. The following discussion shows how the communicative games improved the quality of English teaching and learning in some aspects.

1. Communicative games were useful for giving the students chances for practicing English. The games provided the students with a lot of practice and repetitive activities. In addition the games created both cooperative and competitive activities for the students so they could interact with each others. The students could practice English and interact with their friends and the teacher well.
2. From the findings, the communicative games were useful for improving the students' motivation in learning. The games created fun learning activities and fun atmosphere in the classroom. Thus, the students did not get bored in learning.

3. Communicative games were useful for helping the students to comprehend the materials easily. The games provided repetitive activities that drilled the students for learning. The games also provided pictures and realias that helped the students easily memorized the vocabulary items. The students interacted with their friends when they played the game, so they could learn from their friends when they forgot something. In addition, games guided the students to the materials, by the simple instruction to the complex one.
4. After the implementation of communicative games, the students' participations in learning English were improved. The games guided the students to be active. The students actively interacted with their friends, the teacher, and also the materials when they played the game.
5. The use of classroom English was effective to familiarize the students to English utterances. The researcher used classroom English in giving simple instruction, and sometimes was followed by Indonesian. The students never used English before except for greeting so they could not use and understand English. But, after implementing classroom English, the students were more challenge to use English.
6. From the findings, reward was effective for motivating the students in learning. The students were more active after the researcher provided the reward. The students who were very shy and did not want to try what they could not do before became actively trying what the researcher asked them to do.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS, IMPLICATIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

A. Conclusions

Based on the result of the findings, there are six conclusions that can be seen as follows.

1. Communicative games are useful for giving the students chances for practicing English. The games provide the students with a lot of practice and repetitive activities. Thus the students can practice English. In addition, repetitive activities in the games help the students to comprehend the materials easily. Games scaffold the students to comprehend the materials by the simple instruction to the complex one.
2. The games create both cooperative and competitive activities for the students so they can interact with each others. Before the implementation of the actions, the students often worked individually so they rarely interacted with their friend. After the implementation of communicative games, the students actively interact with their friends. Games help the students to practice English and interact with their friends and the teacher well.
3. Communicative games are helpful for improving the students' motivation to learn. The games create fun learning activities and fun atmosphere in the classroom. The games provide the variety of learning activities. Thus, the students do not get bored in learning.

4. The games also provide pictures and realias that help the students easily memorize the vocabulary items.
5. After the implementation of communicative games, the students' participations in learning English were improved. The games guide the students to be active. The students actively interact with their friends, the teacher, and also the materials through playing the game. In addition, the use of reward is helpful for motivating the students to be active learners.
6. The games provide English instructions that are effective to familiarize the students to English. Although the use of English instructions sometimes need to be followed by Indonesian, but by and by, the students get familiar with English. They give the simple instructions to their friends by saying "Sit down" to sing many songs.

B. Implications

The results of the implementation give some implications. There are four implications of the actions that can be seen as follows.

1. The use of communicative games is very useful for motivating the students to learn. Games provide a fun atmosphere in learning. Thus the students can totally involve to the learning activities. This implies that the English teachers need to create fun learning activities like in the games for motivating the students to learn.
2. The use of English instruction in the classroom helps the students to be familiar with English. It is the effective way for giving the students the model of using English. This implies that the English teachers need to use classroom English to make the students familiar and practice in using them. In the beginning of using classroom English, the teacher also can use Indonesian while using English instruction to anticipate that students do not understand the English utterances. In addition, the teachers need to use gestures to help the students comprehend the English utterances.

3. The use of media in teaching and learning is very useful for gaining the students' interest. Media also help the students to easily memorize the vocabulary items. This implies that the teachers need to provide media which can help the students learn easily. The media that can be used in teaching the young learners are pictures, cards, pup up books, realias, puppets and the like.
4. The use of reward motivates the students to be active in learning. Reward helps the students to actively involve in the leaning activities. In the implementation of the actions, the students were active to do what the researcher asked to do. This implies that the teacher needs to provide appreciate to students' efforts and achievement. The reward can be very simple for example by providing stickers of star, bullets and the like.

C. Suggestions

Based on the conclusions and implications above, there are three suggestions. The suggestions can be seen as follows.

1. To the English teacher

This research is expected to be additional reference for the teacher making improvement in the English teaching and learning. The teacher can create interesting learning activities based on the characteristics of the students. The teacher should provide fun learning atmosphere in the classroom. In addition, the teacher, especially the teacher of Elementary School should learn continuously and upgrade her/his creativity in order to help the students learn enjoyably.

2. To the Headmaster of Elementary School

This research is expected to be additional reference for the headmaster providing the environment that supports the teaching and learning. The headmaster should provide good environment for supporting English teaching and learning such as provide media, use English classroom and the like.

3. To other researchers

This research is not a perfect work. It still has weaknesses. It lacks variety of media. The limited time for preparing Cycle 2 made this research lack preparation. Thus, it can be the reference for other researchers to do such better research to make some improvements in the English teaching and learning process. Other researchers should be more prepared for doing the research. They also should provide the variety of media that support teaching and learning to young learner such as making pup up, making better puppets for storytelling, making better cards and pictures by designing waterproof cards and pictures, and the like. In addition the other researchers who want to do the similar research and deal with the young learners should be creative, patient and really understand the characteristics of young learners.
