3 Ways to Do Good on a Summer Road Trip

(StatePoint) This sum-mer, many Americans are rethinking typical vacation goals of relax-ing and having fun by Property street address for informa-tional purposes. 7326 Whitey Dr., Pinson, AL 35126 This property will be sold on an "as is, where is "basis, subject to any cases bit less conventional: doing something good for the world.

Away from school, work and daily responsibilities, a road trip can be a perfect opportunity for giving back to the community. Motoring for a Cause

Look for organizations or brands hosting fun fundraising or volunteer events for a good cause. For example, hunger affects families and communities nationwide, but some road trippers are helping in the fight to defy hunger. Every other year, a rally takes place in July called "MINI Takes the States," whereby MINI owners explore the backroads, curves and hidden gems of America. This year's event starts in Atlanta, Georgia and finishes in Palm Springs, California. The rally, occurring July 9-23 this year, supports Feeding America, the nation's lead-ing domestic hunger-relief organization and its network of 200 food banks and 60,000 local food pantries and meal programs.

A portion of each registration fee is donated to Feeding America and a food collection takes place each morning of the rally. Participants are also encouraged to start fundraising pages online and spread the word to friends and family to contribute to the cause. Each dollar raised will provide 11 meals to the 48 million people in the U.S. struggling with hunger. To learn more about the rally and Feeding America, visit MiniTakesTheStates.com

How You Can Give Back

You too can turn your summer road trip into an opportunity to do good.

Whether the great outdoors is your ultimate destination, or you're passing parks on your route to another adventure, consider taking some time for a park clean-up. Hit the trail in a national, state or local park. Bring along some gloves and plastic bags. As you enjoy your hike, stop and pick up litter -- which is not only an eyesore, but a hazard to wildlife and the ecosystem. You can time your visit with a scheduled volunteer opportunity or just do it yourself.

Walking tours are one way to explore a destination. A perhaps more valuable way is to engage with its residents meaningfully. At your destination, consider volunteer-ing with Feeding America or with a local food pantry. The mark of a great summer vacation can come in many forms. Consider a different kind of summer road trip this year.

Stay safe from mosquito-borne illnesses with these simple tips

(BPT) - Despite recent news that Aedes aegypti, the mosquito that can carry Zika, chikungunya and other viruses has spread to 30 states, the majority of Americans have yet to embrace basic recommendations to help reduce the mosquito population at their own homes

That's the result of a new survey fielded by TNS Global detailing homeowners' knowledge of steps to reduce mosquitoes in their yards. According to The Mosquito Squad Fight the Bite Report, nearly three quarters of Americans (74 percent) do not plan to modify their time outside this year, yet less than half (49 percent) follow the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommendation to use mosquito repellent and just a third (36 percent) remove standing water, a simple task also recommended by the CDC, to reduce mosquito breeding. "Unlike chikungunya and West Nile virus, Zika has been identified as a world health crisis and we must work together on personal, local and global levels to fight mosquitoes," says Scott Zide, a founder and president of Mosquito Squad, the largest and most experienced home and commercial mosquito control firm in the country. "Removal of standing water is the most essential tac-tic in mosquito elimination, yet homeowners aren't actively removing it, which is surprising given that mosquito concerns are so high."

According to Zide, just as surprising was the finding that 46 percent of homeowners surveyed said they did not plan to do anything different in their yards, despite recent news of Zika virus. Findings from the survey show:

• Only 36 percent of Americans turn over toys or items in their yards that contain water. • Less than half (44 percent) throw out lawn debris, under which mosquitoes can breed. Just a quarter of Americans (25 percent) shake out tarps, including barbecue and fire pit covers, to remove water that accumulates.

Less than 27 percent make sure their gutters are clean.
More than a quarter (27 percent) walk their yard regularly to remove items that can harbor mosquitoes.

To help homeowners take control of their yard, Mosquito Squad experts urge cus-

The next state and active role in mosquito control with the following tips: Tip over anything that holds or collects water. A bottle cap filled with water holds ough water for mosquitoes to breed. Since mosquitoes breed in standing water, the elimination of standing water decreases a mosquito's breeding ground. Mosquito Squad technicians report that yards with bird baths, play sets with tire swings, tree houses, portable fireplaces and pits and catch basins are the biggest offenders. Toss any yard trash including clippings, leaves and twigs. Even the smallest items can provide a haven for mosquitoes and increase the population. Turn over items that could hold water and trash. Look for children's portable sandboxes, slides or plastic toys; underneath and around downspouts; in plant saucers, empty pots, light fixtures and dog water bowls. Eliminate these items or keep them turned over until used.

Remove tarps that can catch water. Many homeowners have tarps or covers on items

Remove tarps that can catch water. Many homeowners have tarps or covers on items residing in their outdoor spaces. If not stretched taut, they are holding water. Check tarps over firewood piles, portable fire places, recycling cans, boats, sports equipment and grills. Mosquito Squad suggests using bungee cords to secure tarps in the yard. Take care of your home. Proper maintenance can be a deciding factor in property val-etatached properly. Mosquito Squad recommends re-grading areas where water stands more than a few hours, and to regularly check irrigation systems to ensure that they area leaking and causing a breeding haven. Be Prepared Whenever you hit the road for an outdoor adventure in warm temperatures, it's important to be prepared for whatever might come your way. For example, keep certain safety items in your car all the time, such as a first aid kit and rain gear. It's also a good idea to bring along more water than you think you need. You may be relying on your device to listen to music, take photos, use GPS, check the weather and of course to text and make calls, so always carry extra backup batteries to stay charged. Charge external batteries before leaving the house so they are ready to go if you need them.

Keep an Eye on the Weather

Whether you're going for a swim, having a picnic or heading into the wilderness for a long hike, the weather can be your best friend or your worst enemy. Luckily, these days, it's easier than ever to know what's in store for you. No more checking the weather report in the morning and hoping for the best. New tools can provide trusted weather data while you are out and about.

Before your next journey, consider downloading an app that can get you the most up-to-date local weather forecasts wherever you go, such as AccuWeather (the app is available free on iOS and Android and additional smartphones, plus AccuWeather.com mobile and desktop sites).

Recognized for its superior accuracy leadership in a new global report from ForecastWatch, Accuweather's app features include the unique AccuWeather MinuteCast, which provides patented minuteby-minute precipitation forecasts for the next two hours that are hyper-localized to each user's exact street address or GPS location. Animated weather radar and maps, severe weather alert warnings and extended forecasts including AccuWeather's exclusive Day by Day 90-Day Forecast can help you plan activities, road trips, and more. And its unique RealFeel Temperature feature analyzes the local temperature to let you know how it actually feels outside to help you plan what clothes to pack! With UV and Allergy Forecasts, the AccuWeather apps can help you be completely prepared for all possibilities on your outings.

Protect Yourself

Hopefully your plans coincide with a beautiful sunny day. Remember to wear sunglasses that offer UV protection. Both adults and kids should be protected from harmful rays. And, of course, reapply sunscreen as often as the bottle suggests.

If you're headed out somewhere near water, make sure everyone knows how to swim and that kids are under supervision. For natural bodies of water, check signage for conditions for hazards like riptides and local wildlife. On boats, lifejackets are a must!

This summer, a little preparation and real-time knowledge at your fingertips can help you head out the door with confidence.

5 ways Americans unite to help one another

(BPT) - It seems as though there's a lot of disagreement in our country these days. Political parties not only argue with each other, but they also fight within their ranks. Turn on the news and bickering is everywhere. Click on any internet story and you'll read through pages of angry comments. Despite all the noise, however, Americans truly are more united than divided. And one of the issues that unites all kinds of Americans is supporting our veterans. In fact, it's part of a long tradition that goes back to the founding fathers, and there are plenty of ways you can reach out and show your appreciation as well.

A tradition of honoring heroism. In 1782, George Washington issued orders to honor soldiers who showed exceptional distinction by awarding them the Badge of Military Merit. Now called the Purple Heart, it's given to men and women in uniform who have been injured or killed in combat or captivity. As the oldest medal currently in use, over 1.7 million have received the honor.Ordinary people giving. Millions of Americans have shown their support for veterans by donating their time and financial support to organizations such as the Purple Heart ndation. This organization supports veterans and their families with many nationwide programs. They rely or ordinary Americans to volunteer and provide financial assistance to continue these important services. Investing in veterans. After the unemployment rate for veterans peaked at over 15 percent in 2011, Americans responded. Major companies like Walmart, Amazon and Uber have all pledged to hire thousands of veterans. Voters put pressure on their representatives to enact The Returning Hero's Tax Credit, which gives companies incentives to hire vets. As a result, the unemployment rate among veterans has been halved. Helping vets tell their story. A highly effective way to help vets reconnect with people and get a hold of the confusing emotions they experience when coming home is to allow them to tell their story. Many organizations, colleges and community groups have set up programs that teach veterans the skills they need to find their voice and tell their story. Professionals volunteering their time. All wondering how they can help, thousands of professionals such as lawyers, accountants and career coaches have reached out to volunteer their time. Because free legal and financial advice is invaluable to help veterans navigate the world they return to, this kind of assistance is incredibly important.Inspired by the outpouring of support, many Americans wonder what they can do to help. Veterans organizations like the Purple Heart Foundation provide emotional, physical, educational and financial support for veterans and their families. In addition, the Purple Heart Foundation gives people the opportunity to volunteer, donate their vehicles or household items, or make cash contributions as a way of thanking veterans for the sacrifice they made. To learn more, visit purpleheartfoundation.org.
