NEWSLETTER

January/February 1991

Published by the City of Takoma Park

1990

The City got a new mayor, a new county councilman, a new newsletter editor and a new director of housing and community development. It lost public works and recreation directors.

The city celebrated its 100th birthday with a rained out picnic and time capsule, expanded the recycling program to include plastics, and adopted an anti-smoking policy. Delegations of Takoma Park residents made two visits to the "sister city" in Santa Marta, El Salvador.

In an unprecedented last-minute write-in campaign, Mayor Steve Del Giudice was elected to the Prince Georges County Council.

Edward Sharp, Mayor Pro Tempore, was appointed by the council to serve as mayor. After 30 years of community service, Belle Ziegler retired as Director of the Recreation Department.

A house was condemned on Poplar Avenue. A storm in late spring destroyed some others. And then there was the historic redistricting debate.

Crime increased and sign posters joined the criminals.

The NFZ was waived for some Fords, but by the time the Fords arrived, they were nuclear free.

And...the city lost two important voices, Sammie Abbott's and Brint Dillingham's.

Crime Stats 1990

Preliminary figures for 1990 show a nearly overall increase in serious reported crimes in Takoma Park. There were two murders reported in 1990 and none reported in 1989. There were 10 rapes in 1990, 6 in 1989; 84 robberies in 1990, 54 in 1989; 36 aggravated assaults in 1990, 54 in 1989; 235 burglaries in 1990, 209 in 1989; 532 thefts in 1990, 506 in 1989; and 122 motor vehicle thefts in 1990, 138 in 1989. These figures do not include weapons or drug violations, arson, embezzlement, and other crimes.

Recycling Review of 1990

In June, the City added tin and bi-metal cans, corrugated cardboard, scrap metal (appliances, etc.), and leaf and yard waste to its curbside collection of recyclables.

In October, a plastics recycling drop-off program was launched, collecting plastic milk, water, juice

Sammie Abbott Memorial

Dear Editor:

While we are creating an atmosphere for a new year echoing peaceful hopes, this year we have special remembrances of the life of Sammie Abbott who gave our community many unique and difficult turnings. Sammie changed Takoma Park. Through his insights, actions, and politics, the conscience of a quiet city expanded into the active conscience of the greater community.

We, the board of the Friends of the Peace Park/Sculpture Garden [a garden proposed for the Municipal Building grounds], would like to ask the City of Takoma Park to consider dedicating this garden to Sammie Abbott. We suggest that the garden could be named The Sammie Abbott Memorial Peace Park and Sculpture Garden. Other possible ways of including Sammie within the heart of the City would be to dedicate a specific area of the overall garden to him, or to create a drinking fountain in his memory, or to dedicate a double row of trees to line the lane between the Municipal Building and the library to him. These suggestions are offered as an alternative to the traditionally dedicated tree memorial.

More on those Rubber Bands

Dear Editor:

On November 5, I wrote to the Postmaster to complain about the careless littering of rubber bands by the postal carriers. I sent you a copy of my letter with the hope that you would print it, thereby raising the level of awareness of our fellow citizens in Takoma Park. Instead, you presented my letter as a letter to the editor and rewrote it to imply that I was blaming The Newsletter carriers for rubber band littering. It is ridiculous to consider Newsletter carriers as the cause of this problem, since heavy duty rubber bands are hardly needed to deliver a flimsy 12-page flyer. Consequently, you have made me look like a fool for suggesting that Newsletter carriers are the cause of this problem. Further, your editorial footnote advised me to contact the Takoma Park post office, which is who I wrote to in the first place.

Your handling of my letter makes me wonder how many other items in The Newsletter have been misrepresented. If you want to retain credibility with the citizens of our community, you will need to pursue a greater accuracy in your reporting.

—John B. Carson

Ed. Note: A flimsy 12-page flyer? A Flimsy 12-Page Flyer? A FLIMSY 12-PAGE FLYER!

The Newsletter was saddened to learn over Christmas that Anthony Barile, former City public works director, had died of cancer in October. Mr. Barile had served the City from 1970 to 1980. His survivors include his wife, Ethel, and his daughter, Patricia, both still residing in Takoma Park.

Alexis Robinson

A Letter of Thanks

On December 10, seven-year old Alexis Robinson was hit by a car as she crossed Carroll Avenue to catch her school bus. The following letter from her family expresses their thanks for the community's support.

Dear Editor:

Often when a tragedy occurs, people come together to help each other. Our family experienced an outpouring of this town's tremendous caring when our seven-year-old daughter was struck by a car while crossing Carroll Avenue to get on her school bus. The incredible amount of support that was shown by our neighbors and by others in this community was very reassuring during this crisis.

We would like to thank all of our neighbors—particularly the community immediately surrounding Carroll and Sherman Avenues—the two police officers, the driver of Bus #805, the ambulance drivers, the Takoma Park Fire Department, the nurses, doctors, and technicians at the Washington Adventist Hospital, and the teachers and students at Takoma Park Elementary School. Everyone reached out and gave our family a feeling of safety and security during a time of unbelievable stress.

We would like to inform everyone who was involved that our daughter, miraculously, is fine and returned to school within three days after the accident. It's amazing how a visit, a card, or a phone call can lessen that horrible sense of trauma and powerlessness.

Thank you so much for all of your warmth, concern, and support. It was deeply felt and greatly appreciated.

Letter From the Editor

Dear Readers:

By the time most items make it into The Newsletter, they're really more of a remembrance than news. It's the unavoidable nature of a monthly publication. When Sammie Abbott died last month—albeit, he did so after our deadline, which some might say was typical of the man who never made anything easy—his death wasn't just news. It was a chance for this town to begin remembering a person who gave his heart to us. The Newsletter is embarrassed to have to thank him in memorium for doing so.

For nearly six years, Sammie Abbott was our mayor, as well the editor who turned this paper from a mimeograph sheet to a public forum tabloid. During his terms, those of us who lived here took a kind of sassy pride in Takoma Park. Telling people our address back then was almost an act of defiance because Sammie Abbott made Takoma Park into a town that simply didn't know its place in the scheme of things. It was a time when living in Takoma Park was a dare and not a real estate investment.

Sam Abbott was the last mayor we had who thought that being mayor was a full time job. As mayor, he was fierce, often rude, judgmental, self-righteous, but everpresent and totally involved. He ran this town like a man with a conscience and not much time. He was compelled to act, more often than not, impatiently, as if he knew exactly how much time he didn't have.

As it does, his time did run out... just as it did for us who never found the time to thank him while he was alive.

OPINION VOICED by Julie Matthews

Begging to Differ

In the City of Takoma Park, I am a true anomaly; I am the only private citizen who attended all City Council meetings where the Council discussed and planned the mayoral selection process. This surprised me because lots of people lobby city hall about lots of issues: NFZ, Santa Marta, rent control, recycling, you name it.

But I am a witness—not a single citizen came forward. The people of Takoma Park were deathly silent concerning the appointment of an interim mayor.

That is...until Nina Gilden Seavey and Barbara Beelar's "Takoma Park or Tammany Park?" opinion piece in the last issue. In their editorial, the writers complained that the City Council "failed miserably" in understanding the intent of the revised charter. If the writers believe this is true, why didn't they attend the December 3 council worksession? Or the December 10 council meeting? Why didn't the writers present their views to the City Council before the mayor was selected?

It seems to me that the writers are mostly angry because the council-members made endorsements prior to the filing date. In my mind, there's nothing unethical about this; it was just politically unwise. The councilmembers would have been more prudent to hold their political endorsement cards closer to their chests.

Seavey and Beelar further protested that, "If Mr. Sharp chooses to run for re-election a year from now, he will have done so without any of the political accountability to the whole city which such an honor demands." Yeah, but who wouldn't? Are the writers suggesting that the Charter Review Committee, on which they served, should have instituted special elections for mayoral and council vacancies?

Finally, Seavey and Beelar make a rather lukewarm endorsement of Edward Sharp's appointment as mayor. The council's selection of Sharp truly makes a great deal of sense to me. He was the senior member on the council, and therefore he possesses a vast knowledge of City issues and problems, as well as the council's current agenda. He also served for a year as mayor pro tempore and is, therefore, intimately aware of the mayor's responsibilities. To top it off, he has eight years of experience serving the people of Takoma Park. With this expertise, Sharp will provide quality leadership for the following year.

I am sorry that Seavey and Beelar did not attend the council meetings and worksessions; I would have liked to have heard their views. We live in a participatory democracy, and our City Council meets almost every Monday night of the year. In the words of a terrible game show, "Nina and Barbara, come on down!"—Julie Matthews is a member of the election task force.

Medicines for Santa Marta Delivered in San Salvador

by Nancy Chisholm

Takoma Park's four-woman delegation to El Salvador returned home just before Christmas, after spending 12 exhausting days in San Salvador, trying to get safe conduct passes to visit Takoma Park's companion city, Santa Marta. Their passes were denied by the military because of heightened war activity. The military had declared, at the last minute, most of the country as off-limits to foreign nationals.

Dr. Rebecca Elon, Jan Walker, Nancy Chisholm, and Joan Hall, however, were successful in meeting with Santa Marta's representatives in San Salvador and handing over to them $6,000 in medical supplies that had been purchased with help from the Sligo Adventist Church, Social Services of the Seventh-Day Adventists, and Interchurch Medical Assistance.

The senior health promoter from Santa Marta and one of his staff explained the operation of their medical clinic, which deals with diseases ranging from fever and diarrhea to meningitis. Malnutrition contributes to a 10 percent infant mortality rate in Santa Marta. While Elon and Walker explained the medical equipment and medicines, the Takoma Park delegation was very impressed with the Santa Martians' medical sophistication. Another official from Santa Marta explained that their community also looks to Takoma Park to provide them with help for purchasing cows and crops that might give adequate nutrition for young children and mothers.

The Companion Cities Project will participate in a national campaign to have U.S. Representatives send a letter to the El Salvadorean government protesting the military harassment of civilian settlements. Anyone wishing to support this projects can call 891-3691.

Chief Lobbies for Reintroduced Brady Bill

by Barbara Young

Police Chief Tony Fisher was interviewed live by Fox TV News and joined Jim and Sarah Brady, Rep. Edward Feighan (D-OH) and other law enforcement representatives at a Jan. 3rd news conference in the Rayburn House Office Building to reintroduce the Brady Bill in Congress. The bill requires a national, 7-day cooling-off period before purchase of a handgun, to give police time to conduct a background check of the purchaser.

Fisher said state laws are a patchwork at present and permit criminals to purchase handguns in states without waiting periods or background checks and then transport them illegally across state lines to use or sell in areas with tough laws. He noted that Maryland does have a 7-day waiting period, and that in 1989, its waiting period allowed police to catch more than 1,500 people trying to buy handguns illegally.

Citizens are invited to a town hall meeting on Wed., Feb. 5 at 7:30 in the Municipal Bldg. on the Persian Gulf Crisis.

Council Meets Berlage

An hour before the Council met for its last public meeting in 1990, they met with Montgomery County Councilmember Derek Berlage. The meeting with Berlage was the first time a county councilmember had sat down with Takoma Park's council to discuss what it is we want, need, and deserve.

Takoma Park's councilmembers told Berlage that the City is not receiving its fair share of rebates from the county for services that the City performs. They were particularly concerned about the rebate from Montgomery County for the recycling services. Berlage agreed that the City "should get reimbursed by the county. In the past, Takoma Park has done the county a big favor by taking the lead on several things like

Ellis is Rec Director

As irreplaceable as Belle Ziegler seemed to be, someone has been found to replace her as recreation director. F. Sharon Welsh-Ward Ellis began her new job on January 14, and "We're all really looking forward to working with her," said Carol Claytor of the recreation department.

Sharon Ellis not only grew up in Takoma Park, but she has already worked in Takoma Park's recreation department. In the early '60s, while earning her B.S. in parks and recreation recycling." However, Berlage was very concerned that, with "the toughest budget season that any council has ever faced," human services to low and moderate income households in Takoma Park would be affected. He promised "to fight very hard to make sure that when we cut the county budget that we cut as little as possible in the human services area."

Berlage left the meeting, promising to follow-up on our council's concerns at the county level, and saying "I certainly intend to come back."

at the University of Maryland, she was an intern at the City's recreation department. After earning her B.S., she went to work for Montgomery County's Department of Recreation.

Since 1974, Ellis has worked with municipal park and recreation departments throughout Florida. She has worked in progressively responsible positions in Fort Lauderdale, Coral Springs, Tamarac, Casselberry, and most recently as the recreation manager in Ormond Beach. In her last job, she not only organized numerous sports teams for youth and oversaw volunteer workers and boards but helped design playground facilities for handicapped children. In 1985, she received a commendation from the then Florida governor for her work in fitness and sports.

For all of her success in Florida, however, Ms. Ellis has wanted to come back to Takoma Park. According to City Administrator Jim Wilson, the City is glad she has: "Ms. Ellis' extensive background and experience in recreation and related fields—especially her work with volunteers, youth, and senior citizens—will be quite useful to the City and its citizens in the years ahead."

Channel 54's New Year's Party

Two New Year's Eve celebrants at Channel 54's Party.

It was probably inevitable, if only because the City staff had new desk calendars, but on December 31, 1990, for the first time, the City celebrated the New Year in the Municipal Building. At midnight, the second floor was roaring, confetti, flashing, dancing, and embracing in 1991. Councilmember Greg Hamilton spun the disks as Channel 54's New Year's Eve party with nearly 200 guests was broadcast live.

"There were people here," said Karen Mitchell, the party's coordinator, "who said 'I wasn't going to come until I turned it on and saw what a good time you were having.'" All of the work for the party was done by the community volunteers at Cable 54. A. J. Mitchell did the interviews, Mary Jacobs prepared the food, Denise Jacobs worked the switchers, and volunteers in high-heels ran the cameras. For five hours, city hall boogied. "The most important thing to us," said Karen Mitchell, "was

by Arna Lane

Tucked away in a hard-to-find corner on the first floor of the Takoma Metro Building—directly behind Arise—Natural Reflections is a children's booklover's haven. The 400-plus titles that line the walls contain tales by and about people of color, particularly African Americans, Latin Americans, and Native Americans.

that this was family oriented. There were people here who wouldn't have gone out anywhere if this hadn't happened." "Will they do it again? "Oh, definitely," said Mitchell.

For those who missed this year's party—or missed seeing themselves on television—the show will be rebroadcast January 26 and 27 at 6 p.m.

"No one can tell your story like you can," said owner Rabiah Al Nur. "It is important that children, particularly African American children and children of other ethnic groups be exposed to and possess books that have positive images of them."

To emphasize this point and to honor Martin Luther King's birthday, Natural Reflections will launch a reading club for children ages six to 12. The children will read four paperback books to be selected by the group over the next few months. Later in January, local storyteller and author Jamal Koran will visit the store and talk to club readers.

"Reading [in the community] is not a priority anymore. Certainly parents and educators have more serious concerns such as drugs and violence, but we," said Al Nur, "must move reading closer to the top of the list."

*Sammie Abbott, born 4/25/08 in
Ithaca, NY, died
12/15/90 in
Takoma Park, MD*

Sammie Abbott had more friends than enemies and more of each than anybody else I know. He loved his wife, to whom he was married for 53 years, his children, grandchildren, and cats. He hated all that is wrong with the world. He said of himself, "I'm a perpetually mad person. I hate injustice. I'm living to fight the goddamned thing. I'm too mad to sleep."

Sam taught that political theory focused on the long term and abstract—world peace, participatory democracy and justice for all—he also taught that political action had to be immediate, inclusive, and decisive. Make your position clear and simple. Know who your allies are and support them. Know who your enemies are and discredit them. Be clever. Be persistent. Be relentless. Trust your instincts before experts. Fight to win. Attack. Attack. Attack.

He knew what he wanted. He knew how to go about getting it. He was not deterred by fear or failure. After losing re-election by seven votes to a fourth term as Takoma Park's mayor in 1985, he went on, at age 77, to become the founding chair of the Montgomery County Rainbow Coalition. At 80, he got himself arrested with eight other citizens during H.O.M.E.'s protest against the mayor and city council's failure to decisively defend tenants who were being ousted from their apartments. It did not matter to Sam that some people would condemn his tactics or oppose his goals, that he might be arrested or defamed or dismissed as irrelevant or "too old"—all of which, in fact, happened. It did not matter to Sam that he would neither be paid nor praised nor thanked.

He supported the dreamers, the artists, the gadflies, the neglected, the disregarded because he believed they were each in their own way contributing to the creation of a better world.

He hated mumbblers, those who put style over substance, the self-interested, the self-important. He respected power, but had no regard for those who exercised their power without regard for its effect on people.

He believed "citizen" was a more honorable title than "mayor." He disdained the backroom and deal making, dependence on studies and reports, which he said too often led to paralysis by analysis, and restraints on free expression. When a former mayor of Takoma Park insisted that speakers be limited to three minutes each, Sam decried that move as "democracy by egg timer."

During his first campaign for mayor in 1978 (which he lost by eight votes), he promised to throw away the mayor's gavel. When he was elected in 1980, he did. Two weeks later, he may have regretted it when he had to shout at me to pipe down after I heckled the mayor and council during their debate. After that, I heard him argue with hundreds of citizens during his five and one-half years as mayor. He would, in no uncertain terms, tell scores of them they were wrong and how so, but I never heard him tell anyone they couldn't have the floor, make a point, or ask a question—no matter how much he disagreed with them.

"I deal with people as individuals. We won't be unanimous on things, but that's okay. When everybody is unanimous, it's time to get worried," he said.

Frederick Douglass said that those who love freedom while deprecating agitation were like those who would have the ocean without the terrible roar of its waves. So too are those who would praise Sam Abbott because he was feisty (a term he despised), lived a long life, was a character, and fought for what he believed in while deprecating his tactics, his attitudes and even his goals. Anyone who knew Sam knows, you can't have one without the other.

—Tom Gagliardo

In the mid-1970s, I was putting together a coalition of community organizations in Takoma Park and Silver Spring. One of our ad hoc groups was C.R.I.S.I.S., Committee to Renovate our Integrated School Immediately If not Sooner, which was trying to keep the Montgomery County schoolboard from shutting down Takoma Elementary because of a new racial imbalance policy that made any school with over 50% minority enrollment vulnerable.

The evening came for our big showdown with the schoolboard. Our phone tree had done a good job and about 200 of our people were in the audience. Our goal was simple and clear—we wanted only five minutes of the schoolboard's time to present our case. The schoolboard denied it. We protested. And the schoolboard walked out.

The crowd got quiet. We had no contingency plan. Then...Sam walked up to the board chairman's seat. He turned around and, in that raspy voice of his, started talking about justice. I looked at Princess Chapman, one of the group's leaders, she looked at me, and then she rose and went up next to Sam. Soon everyone was moving. For the next two hours, 200 Takoma Park people stood on stage and lectured the 100 others left in the audience. Sam did a real good part of the talking.

The schoolboard called the police. We called the press. The police threatened to arrest us, and we refused to move. The late Congresswoman Gladys Spellman arrived and eventually led the schoolboard back into the room, and we got our five minutes.

We never did get the old Takoma Elementary renovated...but we did get a new Takoma Elementary School built.

—Rino Aldrighetti

Sammie was called many things, often under the catchall "colorful." He called himself "angry," but he was living proof that a dead serious mission requires an incredible sense of humor. His anger kept him fighting injustice all of his life and his humor kept him sane. "Colorful" doesn't begin to describe Sammie.

—Rosemarie Dillingham

photos by Wayne Bots

Sammie A. Abbott was an iconoclast. He would break what he felt wasn't working and work at fixing it, no matter what it was. As an artist he knew the value of signs and symbols. As a politician he knew how to use them to influence public policy. Sam was a master at establishing issue limits. He had little patience with the mechanics of "how-to." His interest was "what" and "when." He would object strenuously to being called a do-gooder. But he did do good for people, for groups of people, for individuals who were on the short end of the stick, any stick.

There was one thing he always did consistently. Fight. Fight what he believed was abuse of power, no matter who had it—the government (all levels), the business/economic community, you name it. Some say, including himself, that anger motivated him. I don't think so. I believe that it was principle...the principle of justice.

—James Wilson, City Administrator

The current direction of the Takoma Park Police Department was really set by Sam Abbott, who believed that every person with a problem deserved a hearing. As Mayor, he made sure I gave everybody a hearing, but never did he interfere, once a decision was made. I am personally grateful to him for pointing us in the direction we should go.

I will never forget how Mayor Abbott would come out to the scene of any significant incident—a fire, a shooting or a flood—and would offer whatever he personally could do to help the people and families involved. It was heartwarming to have him there with us, even though this was only a small part of his lifetime work to alleviate human suffering.

All

—Police Chief Tony Fisher

No other mayor, before or since, has had more impact and accomplished more dramatic change in recent memory than Sam Abbott. Whether mayor or citizen—it didn't matter—Sam spoke his mind, kept to his principles in what he knew and what he reminded us all everyday....

He once wrote about some of the specific things he wanted to accomplish as mayor, "I think it's the new spirit of Takoma Park that is the most important goal to pursue. We're finally making progress here. We're building a real, solid, active, and involved community, in the shadow of the nation's Capital. That is living proof that democratic government works—a government centering not on elected officials, but on the PEOPLE. That's what I want—to continue on the course of citizen involvement." I'd like to think that we can grasp that spirit again in Takoma Park.
—Lynne Bradley

Sammie, at 80 years of age, you put most other people to shame. Standing in a courtroom after being arrested for trying to save affordable housing for tenants in multi-family houses, for trying to save the heart of Takoma Park, always able to perceive clearly what was right, you were the conscience of Takoma Park.

At 80, when you were arrested for the last time in the H.O.M.E. demonstration in the City Council chambers in 1988 and you went to court, the charges were dropped. When the judge asked if any of the defendants had anything to say, you were the only one to speak. You stated with conviction, "I did it. I'm proud of it, and I would do it again." Everyone in the courtroom started cheering. Those words are a wonderful description of your entire life. You did it right. We are all very proud of you, Sammie.

—Kay Dellinger

The fondest memory I have of Sammie Abbott was of one Fourth of July parade when he invited our daughter Risa to ride with him and his grandson Nathaniel in the front of the parade.

I drove them to the Municipal Center where they were to board the shiny antique car that would lead the parade. Sammie wanted me to drop them off in the street, three blocks away, but I knew they were VIPs and drove right up to the patrolman who first glowered and then seeing Sammie said, "Oh, good morning, Mr. Mayor. I hope you enjoy the parade!" Sammie grumbled something about this being a good way to go. He was humble that morning in a way that surprised me. When he was away from the politics and with children, Sammie revealed a part of himself which few people got to see. I'll always carry a cherished memory in my heart of those three happy kids riding in that big shiny car—Risa, Nathaniel, and wide-grinning Sammie.
—Susan Stevens

Sammie was a founding member of the Montgomery County chapter of the Rainbow Coalition and was instrumental in assisting the state to get its charter from the national Rainbow.

One of the fun things for me, being a newcomer to all of this, was watching the way Sammie would make some of the politicians squirm by playing good cop/bad cop. Sammie was an excellent foil.... We went into this one meeting in Rockville where the group already knew Sammie, but not me. More often than not, Sammie had worn these guys down, but this time we only wanted to let it be known we were representing a constituency in this county. This particular club did not believe that there was poverty and unemployment in this county, nor that there was any issue of affordable housing. I got loud, did the slamming of my fist on the table and told this one fellow to cast his wealth aside and seek a new start in El Salvador. In the delegate race that year, Sammie and I came in 9th and 10th out of a field of 77 delegates where only the top 8 won seats to the convention....

Sammie never gave up hope. He was like the tree that's standing by the water. We shall not be moved.
—Daryl Stevens

Sam put art and ecology together. He was a recycler before the rest of us. I remember how much pleasure he took in showing me the various treasures he had rescued from D.C. curbsides—statuary and gargoyles that found a new home in the beautiful terraced garden in the Abbott's house on Birch Street. He obviously got much joy from being a scavenger, and he correctly took my teasing as the highest compliment.
—Joan Jacobs (Prosten)

I met Sam in 1977, when the tenants at Winchester Apartments were fighting for better living conditions. We had rats and roaches. We did not have heat and hot water. Sam led the fight at City Hall. Week after week, year after year, Sam never lost strength or vigor fighting for the rights of others. To know Sam is to know you are going to fight for someone's rights.
—Herman Williams

Sometime during the mid-70's at a Planning Board hearing—Royce Hanson chaired the board at the time—Sammie heatedly disputed traffic count figures developed by Park and Planning staff which "clearly supported" the "necessity" for widening Philadelphia Avenue. Oh, it was masterful as Sammie deftly refuted the published figures with correct, specific traffic count figures which were about 2/3 less than those claimed by the staff. The discussion was suddenly in complete disarray, and the issue was tabled until further studies could be undertaken.

On the way home, I asked him, "How in the world did you know such obscure statistics as those?" Sammie sheepishly replied, "Hell, Bob, I don't know what the damn figures are, but I had to say something!"
—Robert H. Moore

Sam liked and appreciated simple things, and he also liked to help people. Once in the fall, he knocked on our door to say he had six "extra" dogwoods and wouldn't we like them in the yard. Phil and I explained we had too many things to do to get them planted. So, Sam said he would plant the trees himself, and he did, digging extra large holes and putting in good stuff. All the trees lived, naturally, and many's the spring I have stolen a look at "my" old backyard on Maple Avenue, to see the 20-foot tall white lacy hedge that Sam created.

Property Taxes, Rabbit Ears and Hippies

by Ellen Marsh

"My memories only go back to 1963, when my husband and I moved here with our two babies. But I can remember when the municipal payroll consisted primarily of one city administrator, one housing inspector, one town clerk, a few police officers, a secretary, and Belle Ziegler. City Hall was at 8 Columbia Avenue, and there was plenty of room in it.

"I can remember when Takoma Park was conservative. The Seventh-Day Adventists set the tone. I can remember when our city taxes were less than $200 a year.

"I can remember when only two lawyers made their home here. Eventually a third moved to Takoma Park in the early 1970s—he had very nice, shoulder-length hair.

"By the mid-1960s, the Appalachian poor in the rental units were being replaced by counter-culture types. My husband was amused by a conversation he overheard in a store in White Oak at that time. One extremely scruffy young man was telling another, 'If you're looking for a pad, why don't you move to Takoma Park, where I live? S—man, that's where it's at!'

"I can remember the macrobiotic restaurant on Carroll Avenue near Philadelphia. A sign above the door promised a grand opening that never actually occurred. One of the largest illegal drug manufacturers on the East Coast was operating out of that building, a city official told me. The big plush bunny that adorned the window signified by the position of its ears when drugs were available.

"Ah...the good old days."

"Takoma Past" gives current and former residents of Takoma Park a place to put their memories about things and people who were once a part of our city.
