Tamashii

Tibet

Tibetan jewellery has a strong symbolic value and passes on ancient cultural and religious traditions. In the Buddhist tradition, gems and precious stones serve as metaphors for ideals of faith and convey enigmatic spiritual conditions and our hidden personal characteristics.

Made with natural stones, Tamashii jewellery is used by Tibetan monks as a talisman and as part of their religious practices.

In fact, Tamashii means "soul" - the word comes from "tama" that means "jewel", making "jewel of the soul".

People who wear these bracelets pursue an ideal of peace and love for themselves and for the world. These bracelets help to protect the soul, enable it to grow and to find a purpose - and a meaning to life.

... a story that began in far off lands

We discovered Tamashii bracelets during a trip to Tibet in 2006. And we brought them back to Italy because they are so charming. This charm is the combination of their beauty, their meaning and the many qualities they possess. We also hoped to spread the message of peace and fellowship from the Tibetan people.

Today's Tamashii bracelet retains the original's shape, production and calabash. Simple beads made from stone, wood or metal are always linked to the number nine and have been replaced by natural, hard, semi-precious, and precious stones.

Unique jewellery overflowing with meaning

Every Tamashii bracelet, ring or pendant carries its own story, because they are still made with the same traditional ancient methods. Their meaning is not just linked to the stone that embellishes it. More importantly, it's about the people who make them and endow them with inestimable value.

Tamashii products are made in Tibet and are blessed by Buddhist monks

The Calabash

Each Tamashii bracelet is characterised by a wooden element, that represents a pumpkin full of seeds, called the Kamawatchi Calabash or simply Calabash. It represents the continuity of life in a distinctive way.

Inhabitants of Zang (Xizang, Tibet) believe this amulet signifies happiness because it reminds us of the certainty of life's continuity.

The Mantra collection represents a special range of Tamashii bracelets.

Stones are interspaced with genuine oriental wooden grains, hua qi-nanmu, which have been engraved and hand painted with mantra symbols. A mantra is a word in Sanskrit, the language of the ancient Vedic culture.

The engraved symbols are two Sanskrit syllables: "man", that means thought, breathe, living soul, and "tra", meaning what is free and what does, acts or protects. From this explanation, the word Man-tra can be defined as "the way to free, modify the mind".

EARRINGS

Earrings to match your Tamashii bracelet
- they have the same basic principles such as traditional design and natural stones.

They have no connection with Tibetan culture, but the stone's colours reflect the same meanings that can be found in bracelets.

ZVA Rings

All of our rings are in 925 Sterling Silver and have natural stones

Lamaism is divided into different schools in Tibet. Among the more ancient and distinctive is that of the rNin ma pa, meaning “the ancients”, or the second school.

Their monks wear different headwear, each of which identifies the hierarchical and spiritual role within the school. This then relates to their importance in the instruction of mystic experiences.

Each ring is engraved with the mantra
“Om Mani Padme Hūm”

RIG ZVA PENDANT

This pendant's shape is inspired by the RIG ZVA (Rig Adsin Spyi Zva) hat, worn by students of the rNin Ma Pa, meaning "of ancients", school. Anyone who wears this symbol is interested in the instruction of the mystical experience that develops a deeper spirituality.

The stone is 10mm in diameter and the pendant is provided with a cotton cord (65cm/25in) with an original Tamashii fastener.

DETAILS ON THE ORIGIN OF THE PRODUCT

“Tamashii” are produced in the Middle East (Himalaya region) following ancient traditions, using inspected products, techniques and processes by Aria Preziosa. The “Tamashii” brand is owned by Aria Preziosa Srl.

CONSUMER HEALTH PROTECTION

All Tamashii Jewellery is handcrafted with natural stones and materials in compliance with rules related to the protection of people. All the metals we use have a nickel content in compliance with the regulation, EN 1811:2011.

USE AND MAINTENANCE

Each Tamashii product is made to last, if all the basic use and maintenance advice is followed. All the materials have natural origins, so their lifetime and characteristics are variable and unpredictable. Chemicals can alter and affect their appearance and durability, meaning that over time they may show variations in colours and finishes. Some stones are naturally matt, and they are polished through mechanical treatment. In the long term, they may return to their natural state. Avoid contact with make-up, creams, perfumes and chemicals. Do not expose products to chlorine, soaps or salt water. Consequently, we recommend removing your Tamashii jewellery before having a bath or shower, or when using the swimming pool or during housecleaning.
