HONORING
CELEBRATING
KAMEHAMEHA DAY

A message from
Ron Hansen, CEO of Mokulele Airlines

E komo mai!

Whether you're traveling for business or pleasure today, we're glad that you've chosen to fly on Mokulele! We've been very gratified by the demand for our interisland flights and we are excited to announce our newest route. On July 1, we will become the first airline to offer daily service between Kona and Kapalua. Our eight daily flights between the two cities will offer a new level of convenience for those traveling between the Big Island and West Maui.

We're also expanding our fleet to better serve you. We acquired two new Cessna Caravans in the spring, and we're awaiting the arrival of two more new aircraft in June. We're happy to say that this also means adding more jobs for pilots, maintenance mechanics and customer service agents.

In this issue of Island Hopper, you'll learn about how the community of North Kohala celebrates Kamehameha Day in the King's birthplace and about how the wonderful folks at Maui Animal Rescue and Sanctuary have given us one of our most unique frequent flyers. We also share the story of Mokulele Captain Chris Bryant and how he inspired his son, Captain Jordan Bryant, to choose a career in aviation. And don't miss the story about Maui Girl bikinis, designed right here in the tiny beach town of Paia, to find out why they're drawing so much attention around the world.

Enjoy your flight! You have our assurance that we will continue to look for new ways to make traveling between our beautiful islands both convenient and affordable.

Sincerely,

Ron Hansen

Ron Hansen, CEO
Mokulele Airlines

Introducing our newest route: Kona-Kapalua!

We're very pleased to announce that effective July 1, 2013, Mokulele will become the first airline to offer daily service between Kona and Kapalua. This new route will offer another convenient option for those traveling between the Big Island and Maui. "Many passengers who are traveling to Maui are going to Kapalua, the Ka'anapali resort area, Lahaina or other destinations on the west side of the island," explains Mokulele President and CEO Ron Hansen. "Now, with our new Kona-Kapalua route, they won't have to make the drive to and from Kahului Airport to West Maui, which can take 40 or more minutes."

Beginning on July 1, Mokulele will operate eight daily flights between Kona International Airport and Kapalua Airport. Make your reservations now online at www.mokuleleairlines.com to take advantage of our introductory rate of just $59 one way including taxes and fees.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER

ONE OF MOKULELE'S FREQUENT FLYERS HAS WINGS OF HER OWN
BY KAREN BROST

As an animal care manager for the Maui Animal Rescue and Sanctuary in Ha'ikū, Patrick Boyd is responsible for a menagerie that sounds like something straight out of Noah's Ark. "At the moment," he says, "our 'ohana includes 98 rabbits, 67 parrots, seven cats, six goats, four pigs, three chickens, two finches, two turtles, one mynah bird, one tortoise and a dog named Mr. Pickles. Oh, and the 12 humans that care for them."

Patrick has been with the sanctuary for over 13 years. A graphic designer by profession, he was living in Santa Cruz, California and looking for a way to return to Hawai'i, having lived on O'ahu for three years when his father was in the military. "I love Hawai'i," he says. "I always wanted to come back." He has owned birds most of his life and was using the same veterinarian as the sanctuary, so she recommended him for the job. "So I went from being a graphic designer in 1998 to becoming a bird wrangler in 1999," he explains.

Maui Animal Rescue and Sanctuary is a non-profit foundation that is privately funded by a man Patrick describes as "generous to a fault." "He helped start the organization and continues to fund us. We're very fortunate. He prefers to remain anonymous." The operation occupies nearly four acres in Maui's scenic upcountry.

Since there are other organizations devoted to rescuing cats and dogs, Maui Animal Rescue tends to get animals that are harder to adopt out like goats and pigs. Many of the animals came from owners who simply couldn't care for them anymore. "We have birds from people who are battling cancer and couldn't handle their birds anymore," Patrick explains. "Family situations change. We've had people give birth to twins, and as much as they love their birds, something has to give. We maintain a good relationship with our owners, too. We have people who wrap their vacations around visiting their birds because a lot of them do come from the mainland."

We have people who wrap their vacations around visiting their birds because a lot of them do come from the mainland."

- Patrick Boyd

Patrick lives in Kona, so he takes a Mokulele flight to Kahului every Sunday night and returns to Kona each Friday. "I don't mind my commute at all," he says. "I think it's shorter than for many people who drive." His constant traveling companion is a cockatoo named Nanea who, rumor has it, was abandoned when her owner was arrested. "She's completely bald. She had plucked out all of her feathers," Patrick explains. "Everyone loved her at the Maui Humane Society and she lived there for months as the office mascot, but then they decided she'd be happier in a home and she came to us."

Patrick doesn't ever want Nanea to think she's being abandoned again, so he takes her home with him every weekend. "She's a good traveler," he says. "Everyone at Mokulele has been very sweet. A lot of the ticket agents know her by name now. If I don't have her with me for any reason, they ask about her. Mokulele has been the perfect avenue for me to do this. They've made it very easy and pleasant to travel with her. She just rides on my lap in the carrier, and off we go! She enjoys a little piece of our complimentary cookie every time we fly."

During the week, Patrick stays in housing provided by the sanctuary. "They give me my own cage, so to speak," he says. "I live there Monday through Friday and it's worked out. It's a labor of love. We try really hard to make this a good place for our animals." If Nanea could talk, we're sure she would agree.

MAUI GIRL BIKINIS MAKE A BIG SPLASH ON THE PAGES OF *SPORTS ILLUSTRATED

BY KAREN BROST

When clothing designer Debbie Wilson opened a boutique named “The Clothes Addict” in the North Shore beach town of Paia in the 70s, this Maui girl probably never dreamed where it would take her. In the early 80s she made the switch from creating vintage remix fashions to designing bikinis and renamed her shop “Maui Girl & Co.” The rest, as they say, is history.

“We’ve been in the same location for 30 years,” says Tami Snodgrass, who handles social media, ecommerce and marketing for the company. “It’s a funky little shop with wood floors, thatched grass trim and hand-built bamboo racks. Our bread and butter are our coveted, ever-popular mix-and-match separates. A few people have tried to make their own version, but our fit and quality tops them all! We also have what we call our ‘Boutique Collection’ which we design and the suits are hand-sewn up in Makawao by our long-time seamstress, Pam.

As any woman who has ever shopped for a swimsuit knows, fit is critical. “Our sales girls have worked there long enough that we can take a look at someone and we can fit them in a suit within three tries,” Tami explains.

A big break for Maui Girl occurred about five years ago when Debbie reached out to Darcie Baum, associate editor of the Sports Illustrated swimsuit edition. She agreed to take a look at some of Maui Girl’s bikinis, and has included them in her photo shoots ever since. “We just went wild with it,” Tami says. “They loved our stuff, because we get really creative.” A record number of 14 Maui Girl suits were featured in the magazine this year. Tami says that some of the designs are sold on the store’s website. “But for some of them, we just go one-of-a-kind crazy. I just saw the designs Debbie is submitting for the 2014 issue and they’re really cool.”

Tami says that customers are so happy with their Maui Girl bikinis that they often write and say, "I have to get more!" That's about to get easier. Currently, the bikinis and cover-ups are only sold in the Paia shop and online, but the company has plans to expand. "I have a folder with a list a mile long of people who want our suits," Tami says. "So in 2014, we will be offering our line to the cutest swim boutiques across the United States."

Maui Girl's separates are made of high-quality Lycra and are prized for their durability. "We're supposed to tell the customers, 'rinse your suits with fresh water after you get out of the water and don't fry them in the sun.' But I take my suit off, throw it on the dash of my truck and it's just fine. They're built to last, for sure."

Small Towns, BIG Celebration

North Kohala gears up for Kamehameha Day at the King's birthplace

BY KAREN BROST

Kamehameha Day, June 11, was established in 1871 to honor King Kamehameha I for his great achievement of uniting all of the Hawaiian islands. While this historic day is celebrated statewide, the Big Island community of North Kohala takes special pride in its own celebration since King Kamehameha was born in this area, at Kokoiki, in the mid-1700s.

This year's North Kohala Kamehameha Day Celebration will take place on Tuesday, June 11 in and near the towns of Hawi and Kapa'au on the northern tip of the Big Island. According to Event Coordinator Cecily Ho'opai, this grassroots, Hawaiian culture-based celebration is a family-friendly event that will attract 2-3,000 participants, spectators and visitors of all ages.

The celebration will begin at 8:00 a.m. when the statue of King Kamehameha I, located on the lawn of the Kohala Senior Civic Center in Kapa'au, will be draped with a 25-foot floral lei. The statue has an interesting history of its own. Commissioned by the Hawaiian legislature in 1878, the 9-foot bronze statue was created in Paris but was lost at sea as it was being shipped around the Cape to Hawai'i. It was later recovered off the coast of Argentina and restored, and in 1912 it was installed in its present location near the King's birthplace.

The lei draping ceremony, which will also include an opening blessing, hula, chant, history and music, will be followed by a traditional floral parade with pa'u riders beautifully adorned in flowers and colors to represent each Hawaiian island. The floral parade will begin at the intersection of Ho'ea Road and Akoni Pule Highway at 9:00 a.m. and proceed down the highway to Kapa'au and past the statue of Kamehameha I, then it will travel around the Kohala Hospital loop and end at Kamehameha Park where a Ho'olaule'a (music festival) will take place. All day, from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., festival-goers will be able to enjoy local food, see master artisans create traditional arts and crafts, watch beautiful hula performances and listen to award-winning Hawaiian musicians.

For the best viewing, the organizers of the North Kohala Kamehameha Day Celebration recommend parking at Kamehameha Park, then taking a short walk to watch the parade and ceremonies at the King's statue in front of the civic center.

"It's all about families getting together, honoring our mo'i (royalty)," Cecily explains. "What better place could there be to celebrate than in Kohala at his birthplace?"

Captain Chris Bryant proudly watches his son Jordan's aviation career take off

As boys are growing up, it's not unusual for them to want to follow in their father's footsteps. But for Jordan Bryant, it has been more like following in his father's flight path. Both Jordan and his Dad, Captain Chris Bryant, fly for Mokulele.

Chris, a former contractor from Redmond, Oregon, discovered his passion for flying in 1991. "The more I did it, the more I wanted to do it, so I continued with my ratings and hours," he explains. In 2006, he decided to pursue his dream of an aviation career, so he purchased a Beech Sundowner and spent the next two and a half years as a flight instructor.

"That's when Jordan started to fly," he continues. "When we purchased the airplane, he was going to go up with me one day. Rather than just put him in the plane for a tour, I put him in the left seat. It was his first lesson and he was 14 at the time."

Jordan remembers that day very well. "I was thinking we were just going for a sightseeing tour, and he started teaching me as we were taxiing out. That was my first flight lesson and I loved it. It was so much fun. After that first lesson, I thought maybe I'd get my private pilot's license and just do flying as a sideline, but two or three lessons in, I decided there's nothing I'd rather do than fly." He made his first solo flight on his 16th birthday and took his private pilot check ride (to get his pilot's license) on his 17th birthday.

Almost two years ago, Chris accepted a position as a pilot at Mokulele. "The timing was right," he says. In February 2012, Jordan also joined Mokulele and served as his Dad's co-pilot before he was promoted to captain. "When I was co-pilot, flying with him was great," Jordan recalls. "Flying for Mokulele barely feels like work as it is, but flying with him is more just like going and hanging out for the day. The only bummer of upgrading (to captain) a few months ago is that I don't get to fly with him much anymore, but I get to say 'Hi' throughout the day and I see him whenever our layovers match up."

Jordan is currently based in Honolulu and flies the Kapalua, Moloka'i and Lana'i routes. When asked about his favorite view, he says, "That's a tough one, but I think the north shore of Moloka'i wins." Chris, who is based on Maui, agrees. He says, "It's quite spectacular. They have a waterfall there called Papalaua, and the sea cliffs are just so dramatic. Just as beautiful but not quite as dramatic is the south shore of Moloka'i. There's a beautiful reef that basically runs the length of the island. There are a lot of shallow spots and deep pools so you have a lot of color contrast. It goes from a whitish blue to a dark blue and everything in between. Because the north shore is so amazing, the south shore is overlooked. It's kind of underrated." When he's flying over Maui, some of his favorite views are those he and his passengers enjoy when passing over Haleakala Crater or the scenic Road to Hana.

Not surprisingly, Jordan's accomplishments as a pilot are a huge source of pride for Chris, who says they've always had an easy relationship as father and son. "I couldn't be happier for him," he says. "I've always had a lot of pride in seeing my son accomplish what he does and handle himself as well as he does. He performs his job well and people think highly of him. It's just all been a positive experience. He has a bright career in front of him."

Jordan summed up what he enjoys about flying for Mokulele. "The people, the company, the planes, all the views . . . It's all great."

"...two or three lessons in, I decided there's nothing I'd rather do than fly."

on his Mokulele Team Member Award!

You may not see the members of our maintenance team when you travel on one of our flights, but they're always there behind the scenes, working hard to keep our fleet in top operating condition. "They are out there getting their hands dirty (literally!) ensuring that our planes are safe to fly," says Administrative Assistant Marian Neth. This dedication led her to nominate A&P Mechanic Kawika Thomas-Kaholoaa to receive a Mokulele Team Member Award.

"He has been with our company for five years, working in our maintenance department. After our assistant director of maintenance left, Kawika stepped in and helped out our Director of Maintenance, Conrad Moreno, with a lot of the responsibilities that an assistant DOM would do. Kawika is the most senior member of our maintenance team, and we can rely on him to follow through with anything that is asked of him."

Congratulations, Kawika, on receiving this well-deserved award!
