Widely regarded as America's greatest architect, Frank Lloyd Wright was a Wisconsin native whose work was shaped by his surroundings. Born in the state's Driftless Area, his organic architecture and famous Prairie School style was inspired by the region's landscape. The Frank Lloyd Wright Trail traces the steps of this world-renowned architect across nine stops in southern Wisconsin. Learn more at TravelWisconsin.com/frank-lloyd-wright.

1 and 2. SC Johnson Administration Building and Research Tower – Racine

Serving as the worldwide headquarters for SC Johnson, the SC Johnson Administration Building has been called one of the top 25 buildings of the 20th century. Perhaps most impressive is the Great Workroom's massive tree-inspired columns. The Research Tower features windows made of thousands of Pyrex tubes, but the most renowned exhibit is a replicated 1950s laboratory.

3. Wingspread – Wind Point

SC Johnson's third-generation leader, H.F. Johnson Jr., also commissioned the architect to build his family estate. With four wings jutting out across 14,000 square feet, Wright named the sprawling creation "Wingspread." The estate stays true to the architect's organic roots, blending into the surrounding 30 acres with the use of natural materials.

4. Burnham – Milwaukee

Wright didn't just build custom mansions and towering workspaces – he had a dream of building affordable homes for the typical American family. His American System-Built Homes were short-lived, and only 16 models have been identified throughout the Midwest, including this one. Tours of the home are given on select weekends, no reservations required.

5. Monona Terrace – Madison

Popping out of the Madison skyline, Monona Terrace frames the lake for which it was named. Though Wright first proposed this "dream civic center" in the 1930s, the terrace wasn't completed until 1997, nearly 60 years after the inception of the project. Today, Monona Terrace is a popular spot for conventions, community programs and weddings, with an on-site café and Wright-themed gift shop.

6. First Unitarian Society Meeting House – Madison

As a member of the church's congregation, the commission of the First Unitarian Society Meeting House was one of the closest to his heart. It was completed in 1951, just a few years before Wright's death, and has been hailed as one of the world's most innovative examples of church architecture.

7. Taliesin & Frank Lloyd Wright Visitor Center – Spring Green

For the Frank Lloyd Wright fan, nothing tops the 700-acre estate and studio he built in Spring Green. Taliesin, which means "shining bow" is a nod to Wright's Welsh grandparents. Today, the Taliesin Preservation manages the grounds and offers five touring options, along with other arts and cultural educational programs and special events like a farm dinner series and biking tour.

8. Wyoming Valley School Cultural Arts Center – Spring Green

Wyoming Valley School is a nonprofit organization promoting the arts and culture of the surrounding region. Designed and donated by Wright in honor of his mother, the school provides spaces for workshops, performances, lectures and exhibits for all ages.

9. AD German Warehouse – Richland Center

Completed in 1921, this four-story warehouse is probably the most notable commission Wright took on in his hometown. Once a storage place for sugar, flour, coffee, tobacco and other commodities, today it houses a gift shop, small theater and exhibit of large murals illustrating Wright's architectural work.
