Family of Dontre Hamilton lead march on second anniversary of his death

A reported 75 community residents marched from 27th and Center streets to Red Arrow Park downtown to commemorate and remember the life and tragic death of Dontre Hamilton, who was fatally shot by a Milwaukee Police officer in the park two years ago last month. The Hamilton family was joined by friends and supporters for the march.

Before the start of the march, the participants paused for 14 seconds of silence, one second for each time Hamilton was shot.

A candle light vigil was held at the park that evening.

Nate Hamilton, Dontre's brother who has been at the forefront of several marches held since his brother's death, and the families spokesperson, said the march was about honoring Dontre, unity, justice, and a call to stop the violence in the Black community. Last week, the Hamilton family filed a lawsuit against the city and former Milwaukee Police Officer Christopher Manney, who repeatedly shot Dontre during a struggle as Manney was conducting a pat-down of Hamilton--who suffered from mental illness. He was reportedly sleeping in the park.--Compiled by MCJ Staff. Source used: WISN.com--Photos by Y. Kemp

Plan for new low-income housing project in Bronzeville unveiled!

One of nine city projects and 28 projects state wide to be awarded $14 million in low-income housing tax credits to fund affordable housing developments

Lt. Gov. Kleefisch announces the awarding of funds for the construction of affordable housing throughout the state, including Milwaukee, which will get funds for nine local construction projects, which includes the Historic Garfield Redevelopment Phase 1.

Ald. Congs and Goins pose next to a second artist rendering of the project. The apartments will be called, "The Griot Apartments."

Department of City Development Commissioner Rocky Marcoux addresses the gathering, praising the state for providing funds earmarked for city housing projects. The project has the support of his office and the Bronzeville Advisory Committee.

The Bronzeville neighborhood got another major boost this week with the announcement of new low-income apartments to be built in the area of fourth Street and North Avenue near the headquarters of the Milwaukee Urban League.

The project is called the Historic Garfield Redevelopment Phase 1, which includes a proposed 60 apartments in a renovated school at 2215 N. 4th St., and a newly constructed building nearby, along with cultural and commercial space.

That new cultural space will reportedly house America's Black Holocaust Museum, which closed its doors in 2008 due to financial difficulties.

Funds for the project will come from the Wisconsin Housing and Economic Development Authority (WHEDA), which is overseeing the distribution of $14 million that will move forward 27 other housing developments around the state, creating 1,307 units of affordable rental housing.

The announcement was made at the MUL offices Monday. Lt. Gov. Rebecca Kleefisch made the announcement. WHEDA Executive Director Wyman Winston, Rocky Marcoux, commissioner of the Department of City Development; Ald. Milele Coggs, whose first aldermanic district encompasses the development project, and Melissa Goins, founder and president of Maures Development Group, LLC, which is the primary contractor on the project, spoke during the news conference, touting the benefits of the Historic Garfield Redevelopment Phase 1 to the surrounding neighborhood.

Last month, a new full-service grocery store, Pete's Fruit Market, was announced. It will be constructed at the corner of North Avenue and King Drive in the Beechie Brooks Plaza. It will be in the space once occupied by Walgreens.

Mastering Two Faces; Navigating Two Worlds

In a recent episode of the new series, "Underground," one of the lead characters—a "house slave"—told her son that he must always have two faces: one for us (Black people—fellow slaves) and another for White people.

That scene resonated with most Black folks, but probably went over the heads of the current generation of Whites.

During slavery, their ancestors were gullible enough to fall for our submissive, tap dancing, shuckin' and jivin' act. More than a few slaves could have won Academy Awards for their Uncle Tom/Aunt Jemima portrayals.

But it wasn't a statute that was at stake, it was Black lives that depended on fooling the bigots who had what they considered their God ordained authority to rape, mutilate and murder their "property."

Any infraction of the slavery code—including looking into the eyes of the owner, not saying, "suh or mai'm," not picking enough cotton, speaking back—could result in a severe whipping or other inhumanely cruel punishment, including death.

Learning the intricacies of the dual face scheme wasn't just a tactic to avoid cruel and inhumane punishment, but also a survival mechanism for proud and cultured descendants of African kings and queens, who under different circumstances would have responded to violence with justifiable ferocity.

Following Dr. Martin Luther King's philosophy of "turning the other cheek" with a bunch of bigots only meant you would lose two cheeks instead of one.

Thus, survival meant using the only other weapons available to them—biting your lip, cussing under you breath, and showing the "master" a different face.

Our ancestors were but an "ocean cruise" (the Maafa—look that up) removed from being scientists, craftsmen, agriculturists and entrepreneurs.

But they were also warriors—proud men who answered only to their community, and the One God, which we were the first to reveal to the world.

Pride and self-worth are traits of human nature, but during slavery, and for the century following it, African Americans—particularly men—faced untold atrocities if they displayed those virtues.

The civil rights movement changed much of that paradigm; at least in the North, but following our "legal and social victories," we seem to be back to square one...with several caveats.

Today, you can stand up against a White man, look him in the eye (as long as he's not wearing a badge, wearing blue, carrying a gun, pepper spray, or a baton...or wearing a black robe and holding a gavel) and defend yourself if necessary. You can even whistle at a White woman across the way if that's your speed.

"We don't teach our sons to be submissive, or to bow down to authority, but instead to rise above it, to withhold natural instincts, to swallow their ego and to remain civil even in the face of adversity. It's about survival, just as it was 200 years ago, updated by time and circumstance."

But you need to have two faces if you want to climb the corporate and larger world social ladder, visit the suburbs or survive the streets. (The exception being if you're a millionaire rapper or professional athlete.)

In today's society, being a bilingual, multicultural actor is as necessary today as it was 200 years ago.

Whether we admit it or not, Corporate America is still guided by a Eurocentric culture that is not void of racial prejudices and has its own set of cultural nuisances.

Much of corporate America continues to operate on the paradigm that we are not as "intelligent" as our White counterparts, even if we attend the same schools and drink the same foreign beers. That makes it a necessity to show a profile that is as culturally attuned to their social mores as possible.

None of that "yo-brother," double negatives or slang. Even African coiffures and attire are unacceptable in the Eurocentric boardroom.

Tattoos must be hidden, as well as piercings, and use of the "n" word is a sin (even if you're singing the lyrics to a gangsta rap song, or calling the president of the United States yo, my "nig...")

A recent study revealed sisters with Afros or braids were less likely to climb the corporate ladder than those with straight hair. The study also showed "creative" Black names limit advancement.

For either sex, acceptable diction and enunciation are essential, at the boardroom level and for most professional positions—generally for good reason.

A lot of White folks don't understand Ebonics, and thus making a telephone sales call becomes awkward, unless you're selling chitterlin' s or old Tarzan DVDs.

Similarly, drafting a memo with words that White folks (and most African Americans) can't spell, casts a shadow over the originator.

Of course, there is another side of that coin, one that is sometimes needed for survival in our increasingly complex community.

Being multicultural—another form of developing two faces—allows you to have one foot in the business or professional world, and the other two firmly in the 'hood (don't add those up, I'm poor at arithmetic; but you get my point).

Since our dialects of Black English differ based on which area of the community we spend most of our time in, and other cultural norms that uniquely identify us, it is far easier to navigate throughout our community if you act "Basically Black."

Just like Scott Walker would look and act out of place if he showed up at your family reunion at Washington Park, so would Clarence Thomas.

But Ralph Holman, who navigates corporate America every day, can slam down the winning trump card in a bid whist game and talk the stuff that only good Black players can get away with with the best of us.

And let's not even discuss the queen, Thelma Sias. The highest ranking Black executive at WeEnergies talks with presidents (real ones), but her central city neighbors think of her as the sister with all the African art and beautiful gowns, who talks and walks like the Soul Sister she is.

Both epitomize the duality of cultures, and mastery of both worlds.

The linguistics change, as does the attitude and comfort level, but those who can operate in both worlds while maintaining their Africentered foundation are at a distinct advantage.

One obvious reason for developing two faces today is to prepare our children, particularly our sons, to survive an interaction with police, the criminal justice and educational systems.

We don't teach our sons to be submissive, or to bow down to authority, but instead to rise above it, to withhold natural instincts, to swallow their ego and to remain civil even in the face of adversity.

It's about survival, just as it was 200 years ago, updated by time and circumstance.

Historically, it was the father's responsibility to take their male children through a cultural rights of passage, as well as to teach him the tricks of survival in a racist society, where they would be judged not only by the color of their skin, but by their attire, vocabulary and the music that blares from their headphones.

Unfortunately, today seven out of 10 Black boys do not have a regular male role model, much less a full-time father, in their lives—to teach them the need to master the two faces.

For centuries, African and African American boys were channeled through a Rites of Passage. The methodology has changed over the generations, but the essence has remained the same—men providing their boys with a foundation for manhood.

(In case you didn't know, the Boy Scouts is a European adaption of the Zulu Rites of Passage as observed by an English officer.)

"God, Mammon, Mad Men – and Race" By Arthur I. Cyr

The extremely successful series Mad Men, about 1960's era ad agency Sterling Cooper, finally concluded last spring, at least for now. In Hollywood, resurrection is always possible, especially when potential big profits are involved.

Predictably, the media has erupted in vast applause, analysis, postmortems, and sheer psychobabble. The series is celebrated for allegedly accurate representations of post-World War II America, in particular the disruptive 1960s.

The long-running series has portrayed crude discrimination toward women and gays. The villains, drawn almost in Victorian terms, are the usual suspects in today's media melodramas: white males.

Related to this, the roles of African-Americans are distorted and diminished.

Related to these simplifications, there is no serious depiction or discussion of religion, personal or institutional, until Don Draper's ambiguous move into meditation at the climax of the concluding episode.

Even then, a faith commitment was only implied, quickly followed by playing the legendary musical Coca Cola ad celebrating world peace and harmony, fueled by the soft drink.

This is extremely noteworthy, because the real world of professional advertising in earlier eras was notable for commitment of influential executives to religion. That is far different from the rampant faithless materialism handed to us by Mad Men.

Bruce Barton, co-founder of the agency which became Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn (BBD&O) was a believing Christian. The firm was phenomenally successful, and grew from an initial force of fourteen employees to two thousand by the end of his tenure.

Following World War II, the unprecedented growth in production and prosperity in the United States transformed consumer advertising into a major national and increasingly worldwide enterprise.

on this industry in the U.S. The comparable totals were $18 in Britain and $6 in France. Today, BBD&O Worldwide employs over 15,000 and has nearly 300 offices around the globe.

Barton's book The Man Nobody Knows, published in 1925, describes the life of Jesus from the perspective of a business professional. Jesus is portrayed as a savvy, effective entrepreneur who took twelve low-income individuals and built a team with enormous positive impact on the world.

The book became a phenomenal bestseller.

Even if you are religious, the approach may seem pretty corny, reminiscent of Sinclair Lewis' novel Babbitt, published at about the same time. The title character is a successful small town businessman who nevertheless remains remarkably inept and limited in the wider world.

Barton however worked on a great national canvas, with great success. One factor in that success was an earned reputation for integrity, particularly important in a business widely regarded as populated by charlatans and hustlers. His successor Charles H. Brower began the era dramatized in Mad Men with a widely quoted speech, 'The Packaged People.' This influential address is a warning about the dangers of conformity and materialism.

Mad Men creator Matthew Weiner regards BBD&O as an inspiration. Sterling Cooper senior partner Bertram Cooper may reflect Barton, but his faith seems demonstrated mainly in aesthetics of Asian office furnishings.

Ignoring religion reflects other distortions. Sterling Cooper executives are anti-Semites. Barton was publicly honored for opposing anti-Semitism.

African-Americans are present only in menial positions, a gross distortion of reality. In reply, filmmaker Xavier Ruffin of Milwaukee created Mad Black Men to combat the slap in the face.

Mad Men has distorted our history, and by implication current realities. As an antidote, explore Mr. Ruffin's work.

HOW A PRIEST MADE KOBE BRYANT'S LIFE BETTER

KOBE BRYANT'S CATHOLIC FAITH HELPED HIM THROUGH DARK DAYS IN THE EARLY 2000S

Article courtesy of Worldreligionnews.com

Kobe Bryant, the son of former National Basketball Association player Joe Bryant, was born and raised a Catholic.

He found success very early in his life. NBA drafted him directly from high school. He was only 18. At the age of 19, he won the Slam Dunk Contest. It made him a fan favorite and earned him the reputation of a high-flyer.

At the age of 30, he was awarded the regular season's MVP (Most Valuable Player) award. 2008 and 2012 saw him earning gold medals in the Summer Olympics.

Following a very successful NBA career, he retired last month, citing physical decline. Bryant's physical decline actually started at the age of 34 when he suffered a torn Achilles tendon.

Kobe Bryant holds the distinction as the all-time leading scorer in Lakers franchise history. In 2003, the then 25-year old Kobe Bryant was accused of rape by a woman. Bryant admitted having intercourse with the woman but denied rape.

The Court dropped the charges against him. The woman then filed a civil lawsuit against Bryant. The suit was settled outside the court. Bryant's career, as well as his personal life suffered.

The advertisers distanced themselves from him. Vanessa Laine Bryant, Bryant's wife, filed for divorce. Kobe Bryant, to cope with his personal and career issues, did not turn to drugs and/or alcohol. He turned to God.

He went to his church and talked to his priest. The priest advised Bryant to move on with his life. He said Bryant's life is in God's hands, and He will not give Bryan some-

The handful of Black fathers who make up the Black nuclear family paradigm today have restructured the "Rites" paradigm to fit today's society, but their template is just as important: arming their sons to converse the cultures, to excel academically and athletically, to become bilingual and bi-cultural.

Good fathers understand that while it might be an option to live in their world, it is a necessity to learn to survive in ours, where manhood is constantly challenged, and obstacles, including gang violence, and a subculture defines that defines "who is and who ain't."

I remember once asking my late son, Malik, to consider not playing basketball at 24th Street playground. Gang members ruled the area, violence was spontaneous and frequent, and ghetto ball—where you get under the skin and in the face of opponents by calling them out—was the norm.

Malik was at home on that court, just as he was in the classroom of Messmer High School, where proper English was the norm, and academic excellence was the expectation.

He walked the tightrope, but nobody messed with him; in fact, he was a playground legend, who never backed down from anyone or anything.

I learned much later that he was adopted by gang leaders because they saw his academic and athletic potential (he earned a college basketball scholarship), and let it be known that if they caught him doing drugs or committing crimes, they would bum rush him. (A strange code of honor, but one that is replicated throughout the community.)

Malik became a respected teacher, who passed on our cultural traditions to his charges, many of whom are today successfully navigating the two worlds.

Needless to say, it speaks volumes that Black Americans, a century and a half after the Emancipation Proclamation, must continue to hone our skills of duality—two faces as W.E.B. Dubois once described it. But that's the world we live in.

Dubois' words of a century ago remain true today: "After the Egyptian and Indian, the Greek and Roman, the Teuton and Mongolian, the Negro is a sort of seventh son, born with a veil, and gifted with second-sight in this American world, — a world which yields him no true self-consciousness, but only lets him see himself through the revelation of the other world.

"It is a peculiar sensation, this double-consciousness, this sense of always looking at one's self through the eyes of others, of measuring one's soul by the tape of a world that looks on in amused contempt and pity. One ever feels his twoness, — an American, a Negro; two warring souls, two thoughts, two unreconciled strivings; two warring ideals in one dark body, whose dogged strength alone keeps it from being torn asunder."

verely damaged properties in the city that have served as hiding places for criminal behavior, and we plan to get our community out of harm's way from threats like vandalism, theft and intimidation," President Hamilton said.

Milwaukee County Executive Chris Abele is expected to attend Wednesday's news conference.

"Rebuilding communities and making our neighborhoods safer and more prosperous should always be a team effort," County Executive Abele said.

"I applaud Council President Ashanti Hamilton's leadership in addressing blighted properties around the City of Milwaukee.

"While I've known and admired Ashanti's work for years, even I was impressed with how quickly he sought to work with partners, like the County, in tackling issues that matter to us all. This is a great sign that real change can happen when everyone works together," County Executive Abele said.

The property where President Hamilton will speak on Wednesday is a prime example of his effort to partner with the private sector to eliminate blighted properties located in the city's Promise Zones. President Hamilton joined forces with Phoenix Investors last fall when the Milwaukee-based industrial real estate firm's property next door was being targeted by criminal activity coming directly from the Citation property.

Phoenix now owns the Citation property, after teaming up with President Hamilton and the city to take ownership. Their intent is to demolish its multiple vacant buildings, which were shielding criminal behavior.

President Hamilton said the site was unsafe and was a staging area for criminals looking to commit criminal acts on neighboring businesses and properties.

"We observed evidence of criminal activity, drug use, and even some burn areas used to melt stolen copper," President Hamilton said.

Phoenix Investors is working on plans to redevelop the property now that it has taken sole ownership. Demolition on its abandoned industrial buildings began in April, and the entire property will be razed by the end of this month.

In the meantime, Phoenix just inked a deal with Briggs & Stratton to occupy a majority of its newly redeveloped property next door.

Hamilton to launch effort to raze blighted properties in Milwaukee's central city

Common Council President Ashanti Hamilton hosted a Wednesday morning news conference to launch his new effort to eliminate severely blighted properties in Milwaukee's central city.

The news conference took place at 4051 N. 27th Street at the site of the old Citation plant buildings (located just north of Capitol Drive and south of W. Hope Ave.).

The new blight-fighting endeavor -- dubbed "Out of Harm's Way" -- will advocate public/private partnerships that will demolish abandoned, dangerous and unsanitary properties in the city's Promise Zones and make way for new growth, opportunity, and a renewed sense of safety in the city.

Promise Zones are areas throughout the city which have been identified by President Hamilton and other elected officials. It has been determined that these zones are more likely to be targeted by criminal behavior and overwhelmed by poverty, unemployment and homelessness. The Citation property is located in one of these zones.

Statement by Ald. Milele Coggs on funding for Bronzeville project and the return of America's Black Holocaust Museum

I am very pleased with the announcement yesterday (Monday, May 2) that the Historic Garfield Redevelopment Phase 1 is one of 28 projects statewide to receive low-income housing tax credits from the Wisconsin Housing and Economic Development Authority (WHEDA).

ALD. COGGS

Also known as the Griot, the Historic Garfield Redevelopment Phase 1 is planned by the Maures Development Group, and is located in the heart of Bronzeville at N. 4th Street and W. North Avenue.

Not only does this WHEDA funding provide the catalytic boost it needs, but it also means new life for America's Black Holocaust Museum, which will be housed on its ground floor.

The museum, founded by the late Dr. James Cameron, lost its physical location at 4th and North in 2008 and has existed online since.

It is the keeper of important historical and educational pieces and displays. Thanks to the continued efforts of the Black Holocaust Museum Board, community stakeholders and the City of Milwaukee, we are now a step closer to seeing this community asset reopen in Bronzeville, where it rightfully belongs.

I am also grateful to note that WHEDA's tax credits will benefit other transformative projects in the 6th Aldermanic District, including the Fifth Street School Apartments at 2770 N. 5th St. and CityPlace, at 1728-1734 N. 6th St., 504-518 W. Walnut St., 1715-1749 N. 5th St. and 513-535 W. Vine St."

Michelle Nettles, chief human resources officer with MillerCoors shared with students the important qualities for success during the "Bank Your Future" program at UW-Milwaukee. Over 75 professionals from more than 50 organizations volunteered their services for the event.

Associated Bank — in collaboration with Boys and Girls Clubs of Greater Milwaukee, YMCA of Metropolitan Milwaukee, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, Metro Milwaukee Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM), and National Association for African-Americans in Human Resources (NAAHR) — recently hosted the third annual Bank Your Future program.

The educational event focused on helping more than 250 Milwaukee-area youth (14-19 years old) develop interviewing, financial literacy, and college readiness skills.

Held at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, over 75 professionals from more than 50 organizations volunteered.

During the event, students were paired with working professionals for one-on-one mock interviews and resume reviews.

Students also attended financial education breakout sessions conducted by Make A Difference Wisconsin.

"Associated Bank is committed to the communities we serve, and this event offers a great opportunity to support our future leaders by sharing the importance of financial literacy, education and career planning," said John Utz, Milwaukee market president and head of corporate banking at Associated Bank.

"The biggest highlight for me was seeing the students excited about learning and preparing for their future."

The event kicked-off with keynote speaker Michelle Nettles, Chief Human Resources Officer, MillerCoors.

She shared important qualities for success including resiliency, agility, continuous learning, and excellence.

At the conclusion of the event, John Utz introduced Donald Driver, the former Green Bay Packers all-time leading receiver and Super Bowl champion.

L.K. Alexander-Bedford

Author Offers Advice to Motherless Daughters on Mother's Day

(Black PR Wire)— ATLANTA— As Mother's Day approaches, it can be a difficult time for women who have lost their mothers to death. Author L.K. Alexander-Bedford wrote Straight from the Heart and Spirit of a Mother to bring comfort, strength and faith to all women in need but especially to those like her, the motherless. During this Mother's Day weekend, she hopes to encourage young women who miss that very important bond.

Alexander-Bedford lost her mom at the tender age of 11. She relates to research confirming losing a mother as a child has a profound and altering effect on one's life trajectory.

She also understands that for the adult woman, that lost means losing a life line or best friend. In her early 70s, Alexander-Bedford finds the mourning and longing never ends but believes one can have a wonderful, fulfilled life.

"For women like me, special occasions, especially Mother's Day, can be difficult; particularly, if you had a positive mother-daughter relationship. The missing is hard. It gets better but it never goes away," Alexander-Bedford said.

"You must give yourself moments to grieve; but don't stay there. Your mother wouldn't want you to. She would want you to have peace, move on and focus on all the wonderful memories you shared and the positives in your life now."

For motherless daughters preparing for another Mother's Day, she offers the following advice based on how she has not only survived but thrived:

- Expect and accept. Expect for occasions like Mother's Day, birthdays, weddings and births to be hard. You want your mom to be there. Accept it's okay to cry and miss her. It's normal. Find ways to honor her in those moments.
- Talk to her like she is right there. If you have a favorite photo of your mom, talk to it. Always believe she is watching over you. Tell her how you feel, you miss her and all the wonderful things that you wish she could be a part of.
- Start your own tradition. Don't let the commercials and marketing get to you. Find a way to honor your mom on Mother's Day. What did she like to do? Do it in her honor. Have fun for her. She would want you to.
- Talk about her. Talking is therapeutic. Share all of the unforgettable moments you had with her with your siblings, spouse, children, friends or other loved ones. They will be happy to celebrate her with you.
- Pray and ask for comfort. Always seek God's comfort. He can bring you a peace that no one else can. Mother's Day is just one day. God is with you every day.

Straight from the Heart & Spirit of A Mother is an easy-to-read book of passages offering practical wisdom and insightful advice on timely topics such as faith, love relationships, friendships, societal pressures, marriage and motherhood – all supported by biblical scripture. It is available for $13.99 in paperback at www.tatepublishing.com/bookstore, amazon.com, barnesandnoble.com and may be ordered at retail bookstores across the country.

Will Allen, has been doing for the First Lady's "Let's Move" campaign, which is working to prevent childhood obesity by helping parents and children make healthy choices.

In the last decade childhood obesity has tripled in the United States, especially in areas where communities lack access to healthy and affordable food.

The walk/run will take place in one of Milwaukee's largest food deserts, with the racecourse running between Growing Power's headquarters and Westlawn Gardens on West Silver Spring Drive.

"The mission and vision of the Growing Power 5K Walk/Run is to show, in a concrete way, what we need to do as an organization, community and city, in order to end poverty and provide opportunities for all individuals to live a healthy and sustainable lifestyle," Will Allen stated. "This can and will be done by developing a new food system; one that produces good local food that helps to develop the healthy people and communities that we all want."

Meteorologist, Mark Baden of WISN Channel 12 News will be hosting the event as Growing Power's celebrity MC. Appearances will be made by Mayor Barrett, Senator Lena Taylor, Senator Chris Larson, State Representative Mandela Barnes, State Representative David Bowen, among other local dignitaries.

In addition, the Buck's Beats Drumline are helping to get the celebration started off on the right foot. Tours of Growing Power's urban farm will be available, free of charge, to participants after the race.

By participating, sponsors, runners and walkers will be showing their support for the community food system that Growing Power has been building for over the last 20 years; a community system that is desperately needed in this area of Milwaukee.

Tickets can be purchased online at www.eventbrite.com or by calling Growing Power at 414-527-1546.

"Old School: 'We Ain't Through Yet!'" to hold conference on Black Manhood May 7 at WAAWC

The initiative, "Old School: 'We Ain't Through Yet!'" will present a conference on "redefining Black Manhood" Saturday, May 7, at the Wisconsin African American Women's Center (WAAWC), 3020 W. Vliet St., starting at 2 p.m.

The event is for Black men only, ages 16 years old to 100 years old.

The conference will focus on a series of questions:

- What is your definition of a Black man?
- Who did you get your definition of being a Black man from--your mother, father, grandparents, other family members, friends, wife, girlfriend, television, movies, reality shows, gangs, etc.?
- Is your definition based on how much money or how little money you got?
- Is it based on how much education you got?
- Is it based on your sexual prowess?
- Is it based on you compare yourself to other Black men, or how you compare to men of other races?

Men who intend to attend the conference should RSVP by calling 414-374-2364. A donation of $5 is suggested. The event is being sponsored by Pastors United, The Wisconsin Black Chamber of Commerce, The Nation of Islam, "We Got This!," "I Will Not Die Young," For My Brothers, and The WAAWC.

HOW A PRIEST MADE KOBE BRYANT'S LIFE

thing that he could not handle. Later, Bryant in an interview with GQ Magazine said that for him, that was the turning point. He took the advice of the priest to his heart and started living a worthy life. He slowly found success again in his career and personal life. He and his wife got back together. Together, they started the Kobe and Vanessa Bryant Family Foundation (KVBFF). The foundation encourages young kids to develop their social and physical skills through charity work and sports. According to Bryant, he started KVBFF because he does not want his entire life to be defined by just the many points that he scored and the many championships that he won. He would like KVBFF to be part of his legacy as well. He also thinks that everybody makes mistakes in their life. You cannot tell a homeless person that the reason why he/she is homeless is because of a mistake that he/she made in his/her past life, it is their own fault. According to Bryant, that is not right.

Call goes out for economic boycott of Christmas!
 By Thomas E. Mitchell, Jr.
 In 1961 responding to the bombing of the 16th Street Church in Birmingham, Alabama, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King called for a "boycott of the South" campaign in response to the policies by which America is withholding Black dollars with an economic boycott.
 In the last two years of his life, Dr. King again inspired Black people to retaliate against racism and racist legislation by adopting a "power of economic withdrawal" by boycotting Christmas.
 At a Milwaukee City Hall news conference Tuesday, November 11, the local organizing committee for "Black is Beautiful" requested Dr. King call by striking a boycott of economic withdrawal—a boycott—starting November 21—"Black Friday"—and after New Year's Day.
 The Christmas season is a season of political brutality and killings, racist attacks and economic injustice in Milwaukee and around the nation.
 The coalition is reportedly urging Black residents to not spend money over the holidays unless it will go directly into the Black community.
 "The Black are in pain, the Brown are in pain, the white are in pain, so let's withdraw the pain and not spend our time to help the not make their babies live in pain."

Group's petition calls on Governor to oust Milwaukee County D.A. Chisholm
 Article courtesy of Wisconsin Watchdog.com
 Charging that Milwaukee County District Attorney John Chisholm is guilty of malfeasance, neglect of duty and official misconduct, a group of county taxpayers on Thursday filed a petition asking Gov. Scott Walker to begin the process of removing the DA from office.
 Interestingly, the citizens are suing the Republican governor to employ a state-wide statute to disqualify any Milwaukee County official who has been found guilty of malfeasance, neglect of duty or official misconduct, and politically driven letter One investigation into Walker.
 "Our law in Wisconsin allows you to remove John Chisholm for cause. Cause includes malfeasance, neglect of duty or official misconduct. We have provided a clear change to your review," states the petition signed by some of Chisholm's toughest critics, including Craig Hingley, father of Corey Hingley, the 18-year-old who died after being mistaken for someone in a "Black Hills" convenience store.
 He had attempted to grab alcoholic beverages from the register. His death was ruled a homicide by the Milwaukee County medical examiner's office.
 Chisholm could not be reached for comment Tuesday. His assistant said he was in a meeting. Chisholm has not returned dozens of calls from Watchdog seeking comment on repeated issues.
 Milwaukee community organizers say Walker, also one of the petition signers, on Thursday afternoon presented the governor's office with two draft letters of demand. Instantaneously, city activists walked out the door in Lake Street, near downtown Milwaukee. They called to Chisholm's residence.
 Walker was not in his office at the time the petition was delivered. He spoke to some of the petitioners at a small meeting on Wednesday.
 A small crowd of about 30 protesters, mostly Black residents, turned out on a Wednesday evening to make their case against Milwaukee County's top prosecutor.
 On the basis of the speaker's position, set up near the statue of King, was an illustration of Chisholm behind bars. The same image could be found in a bright orange folder in the hands of many of the crowd.
 Sherwin-Hughes, stated the organizers, is a prosecutor who has proven guilty of malfeasance. Just as the former Milwaukee DA, Hughes has among several speakers at the event calling for Chisholm's removal.
 "A governor can remove a district attorney when their behavior rises to certain threshold, by failing to do his job adequately," Hughes said. "He failed to do his job in several cases when he should have, instead he's one that One One to go after hypothetical rivals, including John Thomas, who can pay for corporate malfeasance."
 Chisholm brought charges of bribery and misconduct in office against Thomas, a former Milwaukee County Board supervisor. A jur took just 98
