All-American racer had success in almost every aspect of motorsport

From AutoWeek, 14 January 2018, by Mark Vaughn:

Dan Gurney, the tall, handsome, all-American driver from California, who had success in almost every kind of road racing there is, and who drove in the golden age of Grand Prix and sports car racing in Europe and America, passed away today of complications from pneumonia at the age of 87.

“With one last smile on his handsome face, Dan drove off into the unknown just before noon today,” read an email signed Evi Gurney, the Gurney family and AAR teammates. “In deepest sorrow, with gratitude in our hearts for the love and joy you have given us during your time on this earth, we say, ‘Godspeed.’”

Applicants and their vehicles will be brought to Southern California to appear on the show.

 Please read this application in its entirety before completing. There are questions at the END asking you to provide photos and a short video if possible. You will not be able to add these later so please be ready to provide when you complete the application.*

December 2017 Trivia Question Winner

Bob Walker won a Porsche Drivers' Selection T-Shirt by answering:

Question:

Porsche dallied with 4 door sedans before the Panamera. For instance, they designed the 4-door Type 542 Studebaker (air cooled V-6)

Between 1990 and 1995, Porsche did design work, modified, and assembled a high performance 4 door sedan for another marque at the Rössle-Bau facility near Stuttgart that built 959s until 1989. What was that marque?

Hint:

Porsche got bodies in the white, stiffened them, then shipped them back to that marque's nearby factory for painting. The painted bodies came back to Porsche for final assembly.

Dan Gurney: 1931 - 2018

All-American racer had success in almost every aspect of motorsport

From AutoWeek, 14 January 2018, by Mark Vaughn:

Dan Gurney, the tall, handsome, all-American driver from California, who had success in almost every kind of road racing there is, and who drove in the golden age of Grand Prix and sports car competition in Europe and America, passed away today of complications from pneumonia at the age of 86.

"With one last smile on his handsome face, Dan drove off into the unknown just before noon today," read an email signed Evi Gurney, the Gurney family and AAR teammates. "In deepest sorrow, with gratitude in our hearts for the love and joy you have given us during your time on this earth, we say, 'Godspeed.'"

Gurney began racing in 1955 and drove competitively for 15 years. He competed in and won in just about every form of racing he tried. In Formula 1 he drove for Ferrari, BRM, Porsche and Brabham before forming his own team and designing and engineering his own cars. He won the Belgian Grand Prix in 1967 in his own car, the first and only time an American has won an F1 race in a car of his own design, and a feat matched by only a small handful of other driver/designers. In that same year, 1967, he co-drove with AJ Foyt to win the 24 Hours of Le Mans in a Ford GT40, immediately afterwards inventing the now-regular tradition of spraying champagne from the podium. He also saw success in IndyCars, sports cars, Trans-Am, Can-Am and NASCAR.

Gurney was born in Long Island, New York on April 13, 1931. His dad was a star in the Metropolitan Opera and his grandfather was a manufacturer who invented something called the Gurney ball bearing. The Gurney family moved from Long Island to Riverside when Dan graduated high school and from there the young future-racer got going. There's a famous photo of the teenaged Dan Gurney waving to a camera as he works on a car with the words, "Bonneville or Bust" scrawled on it. He drove his first road race in a triumph TR2 in 1955 and from there never stopped winning, both as a driver, constructor and team owner.

In all he won seven times in Formula 1, seven times in IndyCar, five times in NASCAR – all at Riverside – and took two second-place finishes at the Indy 500. In sports cars he won at Nurburgring, Daytona,

Zone 8 2014 Region of the Year

Sebring and, of course, Le Mans, among many other iconic tracks. His career included 42 pole positions and 58 front rows. He was the first driver to post wins in Formula 1, IndyCar, NASCAR and sports cars. Only three drivers have done that since: Mario Andretti and Juan Pablo Montoya.

He retired from driving in 1970, having won 51 races, but remained in the sport as owner of All-American Racers, having bought out co-founder Carroll Shelby. As a constructor his Eagle race cars won Indy twice, with Bobby Unser in 1968 and Gordon Johncock in 1973. When he entered IMSA GTP class with his Toyota-powered Eagles in the 1992 and '93 seasons, Gurney's cars won 17 consecutive races. AAR built 157 race cars total, which won 78 races.

Along the way he invented the Gurney Flap, a right-angle extension on the upper trailing edge of the rear wing that increases down force. It is used today on just about every race car that has wings. He was also the first big-time driver to wear a full-face helmet.

AAR is still a thriving business, too, now run by Gurney's sons Alex and Justin, the company having branched out to a number of other engineering endeavors, including aerospace.

Three years ago, at a celebration for his 85th birthday, Gurney's son Justin praised his famous dad.

"You don't realize how cool this guy is," he said.

Justin Gurney started off by pointing out that on that very day, Dan Gurney's birthday 2015, SpaceX was scheduled to launch a heavy rocket to the space station that would have on it a number of critical parts made by AAR, including the big, long carbon-fiber legs the rocket would land on when it came back to Earth.

"Over the course of 19 days in 1967, he set motorsports history," Justin Gurney said. "On May 30, he ran in the Indy 500, leading two laps before retiring with mechanical difficulties. Five days later, he raced in the Dutch Grand Prix. Seven days later, he won the 24 Hours of Le Mans. Seven days after that he won the Belgian Grand Prix at Spa."

He was, indeed, a very cool guy.

Gurney is survived by his wife Evi, sons Alex, Justin, Jimmy, Danny and Dan Jr. At last count there were eight grandchildren. Funeral arrangements are to be private but the family suggests donations be made to the Hoag Hospital Foundation in Newport Beach, Calif.

There Are 7 Generations of the 911. Here's How Many Porsche Produced of Each!

Weekly Update 16 January 2018

Last week Porsche announced that the 911 hit a significant milestone when the one-millionth example rolled off the production line. That's a fairly significant number given how humble the beginnings were for Porsche. Today, the 911 has evolved through seven main generations*:

- 1963: The original 911
- 1973: G Series
- 1988: Typ 964 Series
- 1993: Typ 993 Series
- 1997: Typ 996 Series
- 2004: Typ 997 Series
- 2011: Typ 991 Series

Through each generation, and the various iterations of each, the 911 design DNA has remained as true to the original as possible.

If you've ever wondered how many 911s of each generation Porsche produced, they put together this handy little video to guide us:

San Gabriel Valley Region PCA

Zone 8 2014 Region of the Year

Weekly Update 16 January 2018

- The original 911: 111,995 units produced
- G Series: 198,496 units produced
- Typ 964 Series: 63,762 units produced
- Typ 993 Series: 68,881 units produced
- Typ 996 Series: 175,262 units produced
- Typ 997 Series: 213,004 units produced
- Typ 991 Series: 168,600 units produced so far

Not surprisingly, despite the ever growing popularity of air-cooled Porsches, there are now more water-cooled 911s (556,866) than there are air-cooled 911s (443,134).

Rare Porsche for Sale at Bring a Trailer

From Bring a Trailer, 11 January 2018:

1958 Porsche AP18 Tractor

This 1958 Porsche AP18 tractor was produced after Porsche's tractor division and German tractor manufacturer Allgaier were purchased by Mannesmann AG. The AP18 is based on Allgaier's earlier AP16 tractor, albeit with a more powerful air-cooled diesel two-cylinder taken from the larger AP22 tractor. The transmission is a 5-speed manual with a dogleg first gear built by ZF. The previous owner was a Porsche tractor collector who reportedly never used this example, and the selling dealer estimates that the current owner has added approximately 20 hours during his two years of ownership. This AP18 was last serviced four months ago and is now being offered on a bill of sale.

The seller believes that the tractor was partially restored in the 1980s and notes that some non-standard pinstriping is present. Tires are said to appear newer front and rear, and the rear wheels can be braked individually⁸. The rear axle is the portal type for increased ground clearance, and is equipped with a locking differential.

The tractor does not have a hydraulic system, though it is equipped with dual PTO outputs for running implements.

The lighting works intermittently, and the left headlight lens is cracked. The "1" in AP18 on the right side of the hood is incorrect, and the letter "C" in Porsche on the right side has been repaired.

A cylinder head temperature gauge is the only instrument. The seller estimates that the current owner has added about 20 hours over two years of ownership, though the true total is unknown as no hour meter is present. The seat has been repaired, and per the seller the repair is older and appears very strong.

The AP18 is based on the preceding AP16 tractor, but with the larger air-cooled 1.5-liter two-cylinder diesel from the AP22. The engine is restricted slightly compared to the AP22 and produces 18 horsepower rather than 22. The engine is coupled to a ZF 5-speed manual transmission with a dogleg first gear. The clutch adjuster has been shimmed, and the shim can be seen in the gallery.

The auction ends Tomorrow, Wednesday, January 17 at 12:10 PM PST bringatrailer.com/listing/1956-porsche-ap18-tractor Bring a Trailer extends the auction 2 minutes from each bid to prevent sniping.

The seller is a dealer in Monroe, Georgia.
